GPSC postpones vote on football

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

To avoid taking a hasty stance on the elimination of Saluki football, the Graduate and Professional Student Council voted to table the issue at Wednesday night's meeting to await further information.

The issue was tabled until the Sept. 20 meeting, as Wednesday was GPSC's final spring meeting. Representatives decided not to make a decision on the matter during the GPSC summer meetings.

In other matters, the GPSC voted to approve a mandatory 50-cent per-semester fee to support the Obelisk II yearbook.

Mike Wells, GPSC representative, spoke to the council encouraging members to postpone a decision pending an in-depth investigation of several questions, including the possible economic outcomes of cutting the football program.

Wells said the University printing plant and the laundry service would financially suffer because both operations rely on income derived from the football program.

However a proxy at the meeting said football was being used as a focus to draw attention to a much broader issue.

"Football is being used as an issue to make people sit down and say what is a University supposed to do?" she said. "If we have this much money, should we give it to football or should we give it to students who can't afford to get a higher education?"

Much speculation followed as to the amount of money that would become available if the football program was cut, if any at all, and how the University would spend it.

On being adequately informed, several council members said that Jim Hart, athletics director, did not provide the council with any substantial information when he spoke at a previous meeting.

"Mr. Hart did not present us with a balanced picture to be able to make a knowledgeable decision if we're going to keep football," Mary Glisson, GPSC representative, said, "he didn't give us much to go on."

One member said Hart did not willingly provide financial information about the program and left GPSC members to obtain the information on their own.

In other business, the GPSC also voted to support an increase in the student activity fee by $1.30 to fund student organizations.

Profs debate issues surrounding abortion

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

There is no basis in the constitution for the right to privacy.

The question to be asked is whether or not women will have control of their reproductive lives.

Such were the arguments made in the SIU School of Law Federalist Society sponsored debate.

As the U.S. Supreme Court began hearing arguments on the abortion case, Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, University law professors held their own debate on the issue.

The Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services case involves the constitutionality of a Missouri state statute that bans public employees and facilities from performing or encouraging abortions.

The decision in the case may result in the modification or overturning of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision which legalized abortion. The court is expected to decide the case before the court's summer recess in June or July.

The debate, entitled "Abortion and the Constitution," was held to allow for the discussion of the legal issues surrounding the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision rather than the question concerning the morality of abortion. Timothy Capps, president of the SIU School of Law Federalist Society, said,

"Whether or not one agrees with abortion, the Roe decision has some serious problems," Capps said.

These problems, along with justifications, were presented in the debate between SIU law professors Patrick Kelley and Jill Adams in the Auditorium-Moot Courtroom of the Lesar Law Building.

Kelley, speaking first, took a stand in favor of overturning the Roe decision.

Kelley argued that the

A sailing course offered as general education credit for the summer semester has been canceled.

Ronald Knowlton, chairman of the Department of Physical Education, said the course has been canceled because of unresolved insurance problems for the SIU-C Sailing Club.

The sailboats used for the course are owned and insured by the club. The club also pays rent on the docks for the boats at Crab Orchard Lake.

Three new projects, including an addition to the Physical Plant, would allow the University to grow into the 1990s, University officials said Wednesday.

Other projects include a new $20 million biological science building and $2 million in renovations to Wheeler Hall.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said the projects are part of Gov. James R. Thompson's initiatives for science and technology for Illinois.

Ill. Gov. George Ryan had been slated to give the announcement about the projects on behalf of Thompson, but Ryan's plane, out of Midway Airport in Chicago, had been delayed.

John Mead, director of the Coal Research Center, said without the addition to the Physical Plant, which is operating at full capacity, no additional buildings can be built on campus.

"The campus has been operating under conditions sufficient for the '60s and '70s," Mead said. The Physical Plant is using equipment that is 25 years old and needs to be upgraded, he said.

The new addition would provide much needed steam to the campus, Mead said. Steam produced by the Physical Plant is used to provide heat and air conditioning to most campus buildings, he said.

The Physical Plant is providing 199,000 pounds of Hartigan: Students must buy carefully

By Jackie Spigner
Staff Writer

Student consumers should guard themselves against financial aid sources that sound too good to be true, Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan said.

The attorney general held a press conference Wednesday in his Carbondale regional office in conjunction with National Consumer Week.

"With rising tuition costs," Hartigan said, "students can become more vulnerable."

Hartigan advised students to request written documentation about a firm or product before paying any money. Students also should check with the attorney general's office to see if the company is a fraud, he said.

Consumers who think they have been swindled also should contact the attorney general's office, Hartigan said.

At the conference, Hartigan announced that his office had filed bait-and-switch charges against two Southern Illinois bulk meat distributors.

He accuses the Cattlemen's Beef Company of Walnut Hill and American Beef Company of Goreville of making telephone solicitations for low-price meat but then showing consumers low quality meat to lure them into buying higher-priced products.

Eleven complaints were filed from Williamson and Franklin counties charging American Beef with misrepresenting meat as being corn fed when it actually was grass fed, Hartigan said.

Other complaints charged that the "meat was fatty, discolored and rancid smelling," Hartigan said.

Officials report two people dead following earthquake

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The death toll rose to two Wednesday from a strong earthquake that damaged buildings and sparked widespread panic in an area devastated by a major temblor less than four years ago, officials said. Repair crews worked to patch up a damaged aqueduct and replace shattered windows throughout Mexico City and the Pacific city town of Acapulco, which were rattled Tuesday by a quake measuring between 6.8 and 7.0 on the Richter scale.

GNP shows strong gain in 1st quarter of '89

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An economy helped by a rebound from last summer's drought grew 5.5 percent in the first quarter as the nation's output of goods and services hit $5 trillion for the first time, the government said Wednesday. The return to normal crop and livestock production added 2.5 percentage points to the expansion after drought conditions reduced fourth-quarter real gross national product by about 1.1 percentage points, the Commerce Department said.

Soviets restrict coverage of nuclear accidents

MOSCOW (UPI) — Three years after Chernobyl exploded into global view, the government announced restrictions Wednesday on the publication and broadcast of information about accidents at nuclear power plants and other energy sites. The new regulations appear to be an attempt to control an upsurge of fear among the population that had its origin in the Chernobyl explosion April 26, 1986, and since was fanned by a series of nuclear mishaps and near accidents.

House sends spending bill back to committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, wary of a White House veto threat, sent a $4.7 billion fiscal 1989 supplemental spending bill back to committee Wednesday after rejecting an amendment to offset new spending by cuts in defense and other programs. On an unexpected 253-172 vote, the House killed an amendment by Democratic leader Thomas Foley of Washington.

$20 million more goes to anti-satellite weapon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush's scaled-back 1990 defense budget submitted to Congress Tuesday added $20 million to a controversial project to develop an anti-satellite weapon, officials said Wednesday. It also retains full funding for a new chemical weapons program that includes money for research and development of an agent that could break down the protection mechanism in gas masks, rendering them useless.

Fathers of 'fusion in a flask' ask for funding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Utah scientists who claim to have created nuclear fusion at room temperature asked Congress for $25 million Wednesday for a center to develop practical uses for the process and to explore its scientific underpinnings. Stanley Pons, chairman of the University of Utah's chemistry department, and Martin Fleischman, an electrochemist at England's Southampton University, eagerly explained their controversial and still-disputed work to the House Science, Space and Technology Committee.

Agreement clear way to Angola for guerrillas

WINDHOEK, Namibia (UPI) — South African-led security forces in northern Namibia freed captured nationalist guerrillas and withdrew to bases Wednesday so remaining bush fighters could return unhindered to neighboring Angola. The agreement for the 60-hour confinement to bases, which began at sunset, cleared the way for guerrillas of the South West Africa Peoples' Organization to pull out and was intended to set a United Nations independence plan for the country back on track.

3 dead, 30 wounded in occupied territories

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Two Palestinian teenagers and an 8-year-old boy were killed by army gunfire Wednesday and more than 30 people were wounded during violent clashes in the Israeli-occupied territories, Palestinian sources said. The military confirmed one killed by army gunfire and was investigating the two other reported deaths, an army spokesman said.

Comedian Lucille Ball dies at age 77 of cardiac arrest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Lucille Ball, the red-headed queen of television comedy, died Wednesday morning at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center of a ruptured aorta, eight days after emergency open-heart surgery. She was 77.

Ball, whose career spanned six decades, suffered a full cardiac arrest at about 5 a.m. and died, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

Her death came as a surprise because doctors had been optimistic about Ball's chances for recovery from the surgery, saying she would have certainly been able to resume performing.

Gary Morton, Ball's husband, and her two children, Lucie Arnaz and Desi Arnaz Jr., were in "deep grief and shock and not accepting any calls" at the couple's home Wednesday, a family spokesman said.

"LUCY" BECAME a household word when Ball and her then-husband Desi Arnaz started on the tube with the "I Love Lucy" show in 1951. She continued her weekly TV performance for 23 years.

After Ball and Arnaz divorced in 1960, "I Love Lucy" gave way to "The Lucy Show" and "Here's Lucy," neither of which was as successful.

Her last attempt at series television — an ABC venture in 1986 titled "Life With Lucy" — was canceled after less than one year on the air.

It was a far cry from the early 1950s, when she and Arnaz were credited with inventing the situation comedy on television.

Ball became a part of American with "I Love Lucy." She played the scatter-brained wife of bandleader Ricky Ricardo, portrayed by Arnaz, with a penchant for getting into trouble.

LUCY'S SLAPSTICK usually involved hilarious physical mayhem such as madly wrapping chocolates on an conveyor belt gone berserk or getting tipsy on a live TV commercial while sampling her sponsor's medicine.

The show debuted in 1951, and 38 years later the "Lucy" reruns continue to air all over the world in at least 73 countries.

Ball and Arnaz also were technical pioneers in their Desilu Productions company.

"Lucy" became a household word when Ball and her then-husband Desi Arnaz started on the tube with the "I Love Lucy" show in 1951.

They established a new production format, including three cameras for flexibility, highly theatrical sets, and a studio audience for instant feedback.

Ball's pregnancy was television's first in 1952 and when Desi, Jr. was born, he was worked into the show as Little Ricky.

OF HER long-running act, she once said:

"There is so much change in the world today and so little we can hang on to, that our show is safe and seems permanent. We're not just a flash-in-the-pan that's here today and canceled tomorrow. So viewers find some security in watching us."

Ball, along with "Mr. Television" Milton Berle, were among the first TV pioneers to earn induction into the Television Hall of Fame in 1984.

Ball's latest public appearance was at the Academy Awards presentation in Los Angeles last month, where she appeared with Bob Hope, a longtime friend.

On hearing of her death, Hope said, "God has her now, but thanks to TV we'll have her forever."

Ball was born in Jamestown, N.Y., on Aug. 6, 1911. Her mother was a concert pianist and her father a mining engineer who died when Lucy was 4.

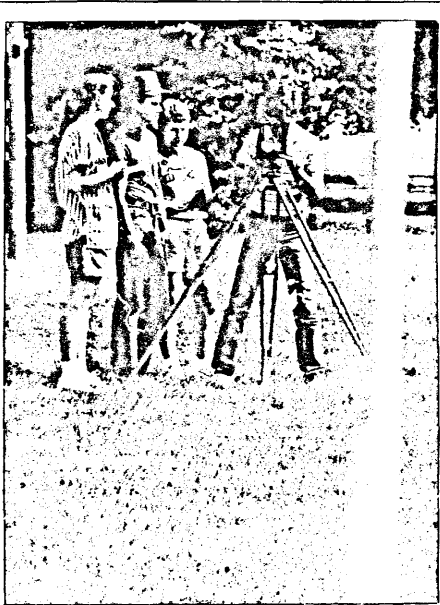

Ball also made 74 movies, beginning in 1933, when she had a bit part in a drama called "Broadway Thru a Keyhole."

AFTER APPEARING in "Three Little Pigskins" with The Three Stooges in 1934 Ball often noted the most important thing she learned from Moe, Larry and Curly was "how to duck."

Lucy and Desi met in New York after she had already gained a foothold in Hollywood, with parts in movies such as "Roman Scandals," starring Eddie Cantor, "Roberta," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, and "Stage Door," with Katherine Hepburn.

Arnaz, who died in 1986 at the age of 69, was a Cuban bandleader and conga player.

Balls' other film credits include "Yours, Mine and Ours" (1968), "Miss Grant Takes Richmond" (1949), "Fancy Pants" (1950), "Sorrowful Jones" (1949) and "The Facts of Life" (1960), the latter three with Bob Hope.

Alienation of blacks cause racial tension

RACIAL RELATIONS on campus are strained. That, at least, is the attitude many black students expressed in a recent Daily Egyptian Focus. And when it comes to racial relations, attitudes are everything.

The problems that black students listed ranged from a lack of cultural activity for blacks in Carbondale to the "culture shock" some white students might experience when thrown together with a black roommate.

Alienation from the University community was a common concern of the black students.

One student was surprised that only 52 percent of the black students polled in a 1987 survey said that they would not choose SIU-C if they could choose over again. Presumably, students would not choose SIU-C, because of the perceived negative racial atmosphere of the city and the University.

As for solutions, one administrator offered a solution that administrators tend to offer — another University program.

"SOME PEOPLE feel strongly that we should not have (a separate office for minority affairs), but the same people see no inconsistency with having special offices for disabled men and women." Seymour Bryson, special assistant to the president for affirmative action, said.

Bryson makes a valid point. Racial animosity is a social problem that can tear a university apart and is ignored at the University's own peril. But bureaucracy is a weak substitute for human interaction.

Roland Burriss a 1959 SIU graduate who is now state comptroller and preparing for a 1990 bid for governor, talked about the racism he was forced to battle while trying to move ahead in his career. The story was that of a bank officer excusing himself from discriminatory practices because racism existed in society and he, the bank officer, could do nothing to change that fact.

BURRIS EVENTUALLY was promoted in his job through persistence, but the bitter taste from the pronouncement by his superior must linger.

It is the nature of the campus, a campus that tends toward separatism, from which the spark to ignite the "racial time bomb," as one student put it, might come.

"We encourage whites to attend our programs and to join our membership. It would help communications," said the graduate student adviser to the Black Togetherness Organization.

This is a sentiment that we echo. The salvation from racism is communication. Separatism can only promote more separatism, while misunderstanding and conflict between the races follow in its wake.

Opinions from elsewhere

Kansas City Star

The publication of Fortune magazine's annual list of the 500 largest U.S. industrial companies provides a welcome respite from the gloom that surrounds recent discussions of the economy. This year's report is bracingly upbeat. It provides a timely reminder of the role played by overseas competition in maintaining our economic resilience.

Fortune reports that last year was one of the most prosperous ever for large companies. The process of restructuring and the shift to a global economy is making U.S. industry leaner and stronger. Companies have been through a period of ruthless cost-cutting, and many are holding their own against overseas competitors.

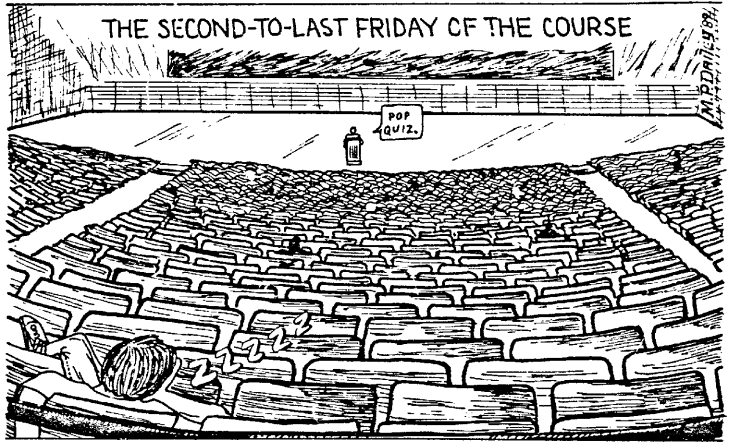

America is closing in on West Germany for the international lead in export volume. Japan (Congress please note) ranks No. 3. America still leads the world in per capita output, and still outspends Germany, and Japan in the ratio of investment to manufacturing workers.

Little of this will penetrate the psychological barrier of the Washington Beltway. Inside Washington, companies have a vested interest in presenting their prospects in the worst possible light. The U.S. steel industry, now streamlined and profitable, still clamors for trade protection. Even now, bureaucrats are engaged in the bizarre exercise of drawing up a blacklist that will soon designate several of our trading partners as "persistent unfair traders."

Washington is at least consistent. Regardless of events, we can count on the outlook from the capital to be more pessimistic than from any other vantage point in the nation. This is worth keeping in mind as an antidote for the predictions of cosmic disaster that will come inevitably with the next recession.

Chinese students can support demonstration on May holiday

About two years ago, when the last student demonstration for democracy in China was oppressed by the government, and students were forced to return to their classrooms, a student in Beijing University declared: "We will not say goodbye, for this is not the conclusion."

In the past ten days, Chinese students again poured into streets to hold a series of demonstrations for more rapid political reforms in China.

Ostensibly the demonstration was triggered by the sudden death of former Communist party chief Hu Yaobang, who has long earned a reputation of supporting radical reforms and was ousted from the top leadership two years ago for failing to treat the students harshly; in fact, the student unrest is a reflection of profound discontent of common Chinese people toward such phenomena as explosive inflation, wide-spread corruption, lack of civil liberty, and the declining social status of intellectuals.

Compared with the protests of two years ago, the students have a more specific program. Instead of appealing for democracy in general terms, they are now asking for free press, free election of people's political representatives, release of political prisoners, more respect for intellectuals, equal access to economic opportunities, and the establishment of a checking and balancing political system in China.

What is significant is that a large portion of university faculty, who used to keep silent in such circumstances, expressed in open ways their sympathy, or even support, to the students.

Meanwhile, many distinguished Chinese intellectuals signed petitions for more human rights in China. The student demonstrations are by no means an isolated event.

1989 is a very special year for China. It is not only the 40th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic, but also, and much more important, the 70th anniversary of the May Fourth Movement, which has been widely recognized as the turning point for China's struggle for democracy and modernization.

We have every reason to believe that Chinese students will try to use this occasion to push forward China's political reform. And it will be very difficult for the Chinese leadership to crack down the student unrest by violent means, unless they don't care that they will leave a notorious record in the very special year of 1989.

Many Chinese students here in Carbondale are concerned about what is now happening in China. We think the commemoration of the coming May Fourth will offer a very good opportunity for us to show our support to our fellow students at home.

We also hope anyone who is interested in Chinese affairs will join us. The emergence of a democratic China, in the final analysis, is not only in the interest of Chinese people, but in the interest of the whole world. — Jian Chen, graduate student, history, and Qin Wang, graduate student, political science.

Springfest needs more fun activities

I have been at Springfests for the past five years and never have I been so disappointed in what I saw and heard.

I am not just someone who comes and wanders around and then leaves when things get rowdy. Every year I have a face painting booth, so I am there from start to finish.

After seeing this year's disaster, two things became very clear to me. One is that although everyone is responsible for their own behavior, the rowdiness of the crowd at Springfest was not solely the fault of the people in the crowd.

Drinking and standing around seemed to be the only two things to do at Springfest this year.

The second thing is that lack of interest and lack of organization by the registered student organizations and the Student Programming Council seem to indicate that Springfest is a dying idea.

When I began going to Springfest it was great. The crowds were large, but everyone was having fun. The RSOs were encouraged to set up booths and a lot of them did.

There were Cockroach Races (whatever happened to them?), Ugly Gym Shoe contests, dart games, trivia, and even a Larry "Bud" Melman Laugh-a-like contest. The crowd had a lot more to do than just stand around getting drunk.

All the creativity and fun was completely gone this year. Most of the booths this year were poorly done and looked like they had been thrown together at the last minute.

SPC had a great theme to work with and from the looks of the advertising they seemed to be headed back to the old ways of fun and entertainment we had all been missing.

But that was not even close to what happened this year. From what I saw very few RSOs participated, and those that did hardly seemed enthusiastic. Also, the craft shop ran out of kites for their kite making contest by 2 p.m., leaving many disappointed kids.

Last was the choice of bands. The final group on the Main Stage was the worst I have ever heard. I enjoy a lot of different music, but as they say, this was not music.

The vulgar language and screaming were a shock, not just to me, but to many of the parents and children at my booth.

I hope that SPC gets their act together before Springfest '90. The point is student and non-students will always drink at parties and there will always be some who get out of hand. But it always helps to have a choice of things to do. This year there was no choice.

Let's bring back the old spirit of Springfest and not let it become another black mark against SIU like Halloween is. — Kathleen M. Harward, returning freshman, biological sciences.

This year, as a result of an increased costs, the club is unable to provide the funding for the insurance.

The physical education department's general education committee met Monday to make the final decision concerning the course's standing, Knowlton said.

"We will continue investigations to solve the problem," Knowlton said. "This is not a permanent cancellation," he said.

Pete Carroll, the course instructor, said the only immediate alternative to maintain the course for the summer session was to charge the students an extra insurance fee.

A poll of the students enrolled in the course showed that they didn't want to pay the additional fee, Carroll said.

Hartigan yet to announce governor bid

By Jackie Spinner

Attorney General Neil Hartigan said Wednesday that he would not yet make an announcement concerning his potential candidacy in the 1990 governor's race.

While the attorney general said he was looking forward to running in 1990, he would not indicate the race.

Hartigan was in Carbondale for a press conference in conjunction with National Consumers Week.

"If I do announce for governor," Hartigan said, "it will be in Southern Illinois."

He added that it was time for a change.

Exxon tanker stalls; spills no crude oil

NEAH BAY, Wash. (UPI) — A fully loaded Exxon tanker carrying 21 million gallons of crude oil lost power 9 miles off the Washington coast Wednesday but was met several hours later by Canadian vessels capable of preventing it from going aground. Coast Guard officials said.

The 810-foot Exxon Philadelphia lost power and reported it was adrift about 8:15 a.m. PDT, the Coast Guard said. Fearing the fully loaded tanker could reach the environmentally sensitive shoreline near Cape Flattery within as little as five hours, a small armada of ships and aircraft was quickly dispatched to the area.

The Coast Guard sent a HU-25 fixed-wing jet from Astoria, Ore., an HH-65 helicopter from Port Angeles, a 41-foot utility boat and the cutter Point Bennett to the stranded tanker. By noon, the first of three Canadian destroyers arrived on scene with enough power to control the movement of the tanker, a Coast Guard official said in Seattle.

"The Canadian destroyers are on scene in case they need any assistance," said Coast Guard Commander Mike Hauke. "They have the power and the ability to hook up if they have to to keep the tanker from doing anything that would cause danger or spill oil. "Everything is under control," Hauke said. "This is no big threat, but we're happy that someone is on scene and can take control if necessary."

Three large Canadian tugboats from the RCC Victoria rescue coordination center were due to rendezvous with the Exxon Philadelphia by mid-afternoon and planned to tow it to Port Angeles, Wash., if there was still no power, Hauke said.

Canadian Transport Minister Benoit Bouchard told reporters the tanker posed no danger to Canada's west coast. "There is no spill. There is a kind of breakdown in the propulsion system," Bouchard said.

Bouchard said he was uncertain what would be done with the 70,000 ton tanker. The tanker, owned by Exxon, is in U.S. waters.

Exxon spokesman Les Rogers in Houston said the Philadelphia experienced failure in a boiler tube, which shut down the propulsion plant.

He said efforts were under way to cool the boiler, plug the ruptured tube and restart the boiler.

"The vessel and the crew are not in any danger," Rogers said.

The mishap occurred northwest of Cape Flattery, the northwest tip of the Olympic Peninsula and the entrance to the relatively narrow shipping lanes of the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Last December, beaches along the Northwest coast from Oregon to British Columbia were fouled by the region's largest oil spill when a barge carrying 231,000 gallons of oil broke up on a sand bar near Gray's Harbor during a storm.

steam per hour, Mead said. With the addition, another 140,000 pounds per hour would be added, he said.

Some of the electricity the University uses also would be produced by the plant after the addition is built, Mead said.

University officials are confident funding for the projects would be appropriated by the state. Additional sources of revenue are being sought by federal and private sources as well.

Pettit said the state funding is subject to approval by the Illinois General Assembly and revenue from a new cigarette tax.

Mead said federal money is being sought through the Clear Coal Technology Program. Private sources for help in planning and engineering expertise as well as funding by coal producers also are being sought, he said.

Mead said the steam project could cost at least $23 million to $60 million when completed.

The project could begin as soon as the early '90s, Mead said. "This is not a long-term 'maybe we will, maybe we won't' project," he said.

University President John C.

Guyon said the new biology building, which would contain office and laboratory space, would be a welcome addition to the current science buildings on campus.

The new building will have a "ripple effect" on other scholastic departments, Guyon said. Once erected the building would take pressure away from the biochemists, chemists and physicists who are cramped in Neckers, Life Science II and the Technology Building, he said.

The cost of the new building will be in the low $20 million range, Guyon said.

Guyon said he was not able to give an exact location of where the new building will be located, but it would probably be somewhere near Life Science II on the west side of campus.

Other plans call for Wheeler Hall, which is used by the School of Medicine, to receive about $2 million in renovations. The building, which once housed the library before Morris Library was built, is located on the Old Main Mall between Davies Gymnasium and Quigley Hall.

decision is unconstitutional on the grounds that there is no basis in the constitution for his right to privacy.

Adams, defending the decision, argued that the question to be asked is whether or not women will control their reproductive lives.

Kelley made reference to other western European countries in which adaptations to similar statutes already have been made.

Adams spoke of the social and psychological consequences a woman would face if she were forced to have a child.

A woman faces losing her job if she has the baby, she said.

Adams said women can suffer psychological problems if they decide to give up their children for adoption.

Polish professor skeptical of Solidarity revival

University News Service

For former Solidarity organizer Maria D. Frankowska, April 17 was just another Monday.

She listened to "Good Morning, America" broadcasters talk about the rebirth of the union that once consumed her every waking moment. Then she calmly left for work.

"It's an important first step, but I don't have the childlike optimism of people who were never faced with real disasters in their lives — I am extremely cautious," Frankowska, University professor of international law, said.

FRANKOWSKA LEARNED such caution before she learned her letters. Born in Poland just months before the Nazis invaded her homeland, she grew up amid murder and mayhem. From her windows she saw people die each day, and the smoky air near her Lublin home reeked of burned flesh.

Although blond, blue-eyed and Christian, Frankowska very nearly did not survive the war. She was 4 when a tall "elegant" Nazi in shiny boots came to her house, took her aside and demanded to know where her father was hiding.

She was not much older when her father secretly rescued her at the last moment from a train bound for Auschwitz, the infamous concentration camp.

THE NAZIS left her with a fear of sirens, a loathing for German shepherd dogs and vehement hatred of tyranny.

"A totalitarian system is like a cancer on the body of a nation — it totally destroys the normal life of a nation," Frankowska said.

She saw little improvement in the post-war government imposed on Poland by its traditional Soviet enemy. Shunning political involvement, she studied law, graduating from the University of Warsaw School of Law in 1961.

Ten years later, she joined the Polish Academy of Sciences' Institute of State and Law in Warsaw as a law professor.

THEN, IN August 1980, shipbuilders in Gdansk organized the strike that led to the birth of Solidarity — a movement that caught the souls of a people with a centuries-old love of freedom. Suddenly farmers and factory workers, trade unionists and teachers found a common purpose.

The Solidarity spirit swept through the Warsaw institute. Like Frankowska, her colleagues had prided themselves on being "pure scholars." But like Poles everywhere, this bookish group of administrators and academicians believe that Solidarity offered the first real promise of genuine change. Late in September 1980, they decided to organize a Solidarity chapter.

POLITICALLY inexperienced, the new organizers had only a vague notion of where they were going and an even shakier concept of how to get there.

"We had to learn how to act instead of being bystanders, but from the very beginning, we knew we were not simply forming a trade union — we were part of a political opposition," Frankowska said.

By December, she and her fellows had enrolled some 6,000 members. Frankowska, elected by secret ballot to a 13-member executive committee, spent most of the next six months serving as the chapter's legal bureau chief and working with activists in other branches.

As Solidarity's influence grew, Poles had to decide where they stood. They could no longer pay lip service to democracy while following Communist Party policy.

"IN A FEW MONTHS, the whole nation was divided into two camps — those in power and the rest," Frankowska said.

But as the union dug in, the middle ground began to crumble away. Moderates found themselves with no place left to stand. Her instincts sharpened by her early years, Frankowska sensed a bloody confrontation in the wind. By April, she could hear tanks moving near Warsaw.

"My childhood was spent in bunkers and basements escaping from bombs," she said. "I had a deep resolution in my heart not to let my children go through the same experience."

She also feared that the government might harm her son and daughter, then 12 and 14, in order to punish her.

"I COULD PROBABLY face being put in jail, but I was unable to cope with the prospects of my children being tortured or killed," Frankowska said.

She lost her appetite. She could not sleep.

In June, her husband, Stanislaw, was invited to the University of Santa Clara School of Law as a visiting professor. They didn't even

Fred's Free on your Bridal week
FRED'S
NOW HAS A DRESS CODE!!!
Fred, always striving to be contemporary, read that a new trendy honkytonk in the area has instituted a dress code. This new bar believes that gym shoes, faded jeans, t-shirts and caps are detrimental to their ambiance.
Well heck! Fred's can't ban sneakers or we'll have to turn away David Letterman and Sybil Shepard when they come out to the bar. If we ban t-shirts, how can we sell our inventory of 127 dancing pig shirts. In Chicago it might be inappropriate to wear Durkey Fence Post or DEKALB feed but since when did Carbondale move to the 41st latitude, and Fred absolutely refuses to wear anything but faded blue jeans to the "grocery store".
So here it is...
-- THE FRED'S DRESS CODE--
YOU MUST WEAR UNDERWEAR!!!
Note: The EEA (Equal Entertainment Act) mandates that bras are optional. At Fred's we believe that it's what's underneath that counts. So be warned!!! Anyone found without underwear will be politely refused admittance. If underwear is removed while at Fred's the offender will be asked to leave.

discuss it. They packed their suitcases and fled.
Six months later, they government declared martial law, suspended the union and confined many Solidarity leaders — including some of Frankowska's colleagues.

TODAY, FRANKOWSKA lives quietly, dividing her time between Carbondale and St. Louis, where her husband teaches law. She follows events in Poland through the New York Times and her subscription to Polityka, a Polish weekly.

While she expected the government to re-legalize Solidarity, she said she distrusts its motives. She said she thinks the Communists may have allowed the rebirth in order to have a scapegoat should the country's economy collapse.

IF REFORM efforts now under way in the Soviet Union continue to stir up ethnic unrest, she believes Russia will indiscriminately crush all opposition, wherever it occurs.

So while Solidarity supporters in Warsaw wave tulips and daffodils to celebrate the union's revival, Frankowska waits and watches.

"It's like I tell my moot court students before we go to competitions — I never say for sure we're going to win," she said. "Until something is really achieved, I'm never sure of anything."

Dixon: Chanute closure won't pay

CHANUTE AIR FORCE BASE (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., toured Chanute Air Force Base in Rantoul Wednesday and said closing the military installation will cost far more than maintaining it.

Chanute is one of 86 bases on the government's closure list. The government has said closing Chanute will save $68.7 million a year. But Dixon, chairman of the Senate Armed Services subcommittee with jurisdiction over military base closings, says closing Chanute, and relocating equipment and personnel to other locations, will cost about $200 million dollars.

"This isn't going to save the government money," he said. "This will cost the taxpayers money. This base serves a necessary task and should be allowed to exist."

During his hour-long tour of the base, Dixon visited Chanute's $6.7 million weather training facility, which is scheduled to be completed this summer; the base hospital; a $4.6 million bachelor's barracks, expected to be completed in October; and Chanute's recreational areas.

The Defense Secretary's Commission on Base Realignment and Closure, in a report which was approved by the U.S. House by a vote of 381-

43 last Tuesday and is expected to pass the Senate, said Chanute's "assigned personnel is affected by a shortage of family housing units, bachelor housing, recreational amenities and medical and dental facilities."

But Dixon, saying no member of the Commission on Base Realignment and Closure has ever visited Chanute, called the report "100 percent flawed."

"This is a nice building," the senator said while standing in front of the frame of the bachelor's barracks.

But even Dixon did not hold out much hope for saving Chanute, the U.S. Air Force's oldest technical training center and third oldest air base. He said the base's only chances are a pair of lawsuits filed in an attempt to keep it open.

Handler to study slavery at Harvard

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Jerome S. Handler, anthropology professor, will spend the 1989-90 academic year as a resident fellow of Harvard University's W.E.B. DuBois Institute for Afro-American Research.

He will use Harvard's famous Widener Library to complete a book, which compiles 30 years of research on slavery in the Caribbean.

The book focuses on Barbados, Handler said, and how African-American cultures originated there. "Barbados is a natural laboratory for the anthropologist," he said.

This will mark the publication of Handler's fifth book on slavery. He also has published a monograph. All of his books have been printed by academic publishers.

Handler said he looks at old books, letters, pictures, maps, manuscripts and government correspondence to piece together the lives of the Caribbean slaves. He also has taken part in some archeological excavations.

"How people bury their dead tells you about the living," Handler said.

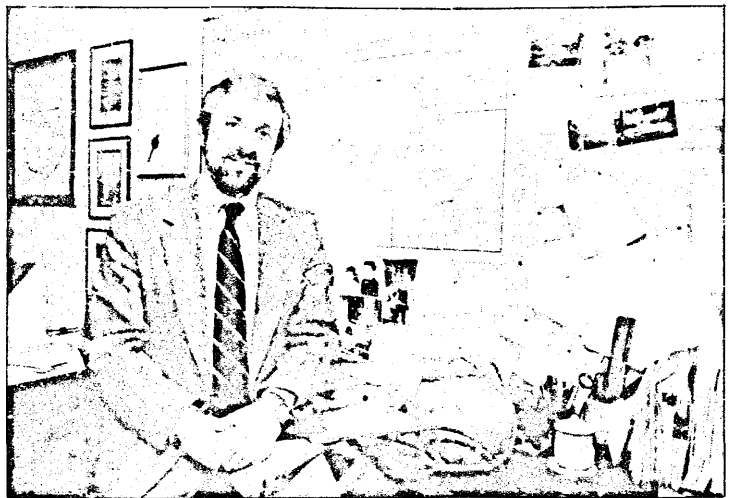

Deciding whether or not evidence found is common to all slaves or unique to just one becomes a matter of experience.

"After awhile it's just an intuitive feeling," he said. "These are frustrations that historians are trained to deal with — they know they'll never get the whole story."

Handler started his research almost 30 years ago with an interest in how sugar plantation workers lived and how their lifestyles affected their communities and households. Since then he has traveled to various Caribbean islands, doing research at many of the islands several times.

He said his first research trip to Barbados was a unique experience for himself as well as the inhabitants of the village in which he lived. He said he lived in a village of African-Americans who generally mistrusted whites, which the villagers knew only as members of the wealthy planter class.

Initially, the villagers were very suspicious of him, he said. But Handler lived among them for 15 months, in a shack with no running water or

Now he tries to go back to Barbados every few years to visit the people that became close friends.

Father pulls life support on infant

CHICAGO (UPI) — The father of a 15-month-old critically ill boy pulled a .357 Magnum Wednesday, ordered nurses from the child's hospital room, removed the child's life support system and held police at bay until the child died, police said.

Det. Gary Bulava said Rudy Linares, 23, Cicero, and his wife, Tamara, went to Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke Hospital around 1:20 a.m. after doctors told the family they had planned to place their child, Samuel, in a long term care unit.

Tamara Linares reportedly left the room around 1:19 a.m. at which time Mr. Linares pulled out the weapon and asked one of the doctors how quickly the child would die if removed from his life support.

The doctor responded that death could take anywhere from 15 minutes to two hours.

Bulava said Linares immediately unplugged the child's life support system and cradled the child while seated in a chair. He relinquished the weapon only after approximately 30 minutes when the infant was pronounced dead.

"I'm not here to hurt anyone," Linares told hospital staff during the incident. "I'll only hurt you if you try to plug my baby back in," he said as he held them back with the weapon while seated with the unconscious infant.

Around 2 a.m., Bulava said, Linares ordered doctors to examine the child and the doctors confirmed that the child had died.

Bulava said the child stopped breathing last Aug. 2 when a balloon blew up near his face and he inhaled pieces of the balloon, blocking his air passage.

Prof lectures on democracy

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Carol C. Gould's lecture on "Positive Freedom, Economic Justice and the Redefinition of Democracy" was met with mixed reactions by the University's philosophy faculty.

Gould, a professor of philosophy and head of the humanities department at Stephens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J., said democracy must extend not only to politics but to economic and social decisions.

Gould said workers should, in order to self-develop, be able to vote on production and sales strategies in their jobs and be able to elect their managers and corporate executives.

The majority of the 50 people in the audience were department faculty and seemed able to keep up with Gould's lecture, but questioned the practicality of Gould's ideas.

Gould said people should have the freedom to choose and pursue their own goals. During the question-and-answer session, a faculty member asked if people have the resources to achieve their goals.

Eugenie Gatens-Robinson, assistant professor of philosophy, said Gould was clearly opposed to any kind of interference with personal decisions. Gatens-Robinson said the audience was curious about how Gould would react to ideas of the majority that were not in the minority's best interests, such as business decisions that would cause bankruptcy.

Gatens-Robinson said she also was curious as to how those in the minority, who do not have their needs met, are supposed to self-develop. She said if people want to have enough money to buy a large tract of land or an airline, it was fair to deprive some people of their money so the other people can afford to meet their goals.

"That's still a bit of a puzzle to me," Gatens-Robinson said.

Mark Johnson, professor of philosophy, said the lecture addressed broad, questionable issues as he hoped it would.

"I applaud her for taking on the broad questions that were raised. She generated a lot of interesting discussion," Johnson said.

SIU's campus in Japan complete

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Dedication ceremonies to mark the completion of the University's campus in Nakajo, Japan are scheduled for May 18.

Students have been attending classes at the Japan campus in temporary buildings, James Quisenberry, acting director of international programs and services, said.

The construction of the permanent buildings will be completed before May 18, Beverly Walker, campus coordinator for the Japan branch of SIU, said.

Classes begin May 31 and will be held in the large academic complex, Walker said. The academic complex will include faculty and administrative offices, classrooms, the auditorium and the library.

Walker said the white academic complex built on the side of a mountain was beautiful.

Other buildings include 51 townhouses for faculty living and a dormitory for both men and women.

The city of Nakajo is paying for the expenses of the buildings through a city revenue fund, Quisenberry said.

The cost to attend the branch of the University is about $9,000 a year, Walker said.

The University is on a cost-recovery program, Walker said. The money made by the branch goes to the city and the city later pays money to the University.

The branch is completely staffed by SIU-C faculty and administrators, Walker said.

For the summer session, 583 students are enrolled, but the number is changing daily, Walker said.

A student attending the Japan campus must complete a semester of intensive English and two years of general studies to be admitted to an American university, Walker said. The student must obtain at least 60 semester hours.

After the studies are completed, a student may transfer to any branch of SIU or another state university in the United States, Walker said.

Food, frolic and free beads straight from the Mardi Gras will be just part of the Bayou festival 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday at the Student Center south patio.

The occasion, aptly named "Bayou Boogie Boil" will be presented by Student Center Special Programs.

"We wanted to do something that had never been done before," said Christina Varotsis, a graduate assistant for marketing and special programs at the Student Center.

"After visiting New Orleans for spring break, a few of us came up with the idea to have a Louisiana-style event for the students.

The festivities for the "Bayou Boogie Boil" include fresh crawfish and shrimp, boiled with special cajun spices and shrimp creole.

According to Varotsis, the food will be prepared by experienced Louisiana cooks.

Weather condition cause for mosquito increase

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Illinois residents got a break from biting mosquitoes during last summer's drought, but with wet conditions this spring the swarming pests could be back in full force by mid-summer.

While most mosquitoes simply are annoying during softball games and summer picnics, two particular types of mosquitoes in Illinois can cause severe illness.

The Culex pipiens have been known to infect victims with an inflammation of the brain, St. Louis encephalitis.

An Illinois Public Health information officer said the last major epidemic of encephalitis occurred in 1975 with 600 reported cases of the disease.

Of the reported cases, 47 Illinois victims died, Mary Huck said.

The disease first is transmitted by the Culex pipiens to migrating birds, who in return transfer the disease back to the mosquito.

When the mosquito bites a human in midsummer, the virus' cycle is carried out.

Most encephalitis symptoms are similar to a severe flu in addition to stiffness in the back and neck.

"Unless specific tests are conducted, encephalitis can be mistaken for the flu," Dr. Lawrence Frisch, University Health Service chief of staff said.

Frisch said he has never personally seen a case of encephalitis in Carbondale, but it does occur in this part of the country.

The Culex pipiens breed mostly in organic waters such as small puddles, tin cans and automobile tires.

Huck said people should check around their yards and eliminate the mosquito's breeding ground by emptying containers of water at least once a week.

Robert Novak, associate scientist at the Illinois Natural History Survey in Champaign, said the Culex pipiens or northern house mosquito like to sneak through screens at night as it is primarily a night biter.

"It's found in people's yards and swampy areas," the University of Illinois medical entomologist said. "This mosquito is associated closely with man."

With flooding rivers and streams this spring, Southern Illinois residents also can find the Aedes vexans mosquito in great numbers, Novak said.

Also known as the floodwater mosquito, the Aedes vexans require floodwater for their eggs to hatch and although they are not connected with disease, the floodwater mosquitoes still can be annoying.

People generally can tell the two types of mosquitoes apart by the Aedes vexans' more aggressive behavior.

The Aedes vexans also are darker in color than the Culex pipiens and have distinct white slashes on its legs.

However, Novak pointed out that the average person has a hard time identifying the mosquito "after you slap them."

The Asian tiger mosquito, Aedes albopictus, are increasing in numbers in Illinois and has the most significant potential for hatching now, Novak said.

The Aedes albopictus, unlike the Culex pipiens and Aedes vexans, bite all during the day not just at night.

It has been collected in Madison, Marion, St. Clair and Cook counties but could be widespread, he added.

The Aedes albopictus can carry up to 27 different viruses with LaCrosse encephalitis being the most dangerous.

Super 7 lottery sales still soaring

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Bettors thronged ticket outlets Wednesday, gobbling up chances for Pennsylvania's $100 million Super 7 jackpot at record-breaking rates that averaged 550 per second just hours before the drawing.

The frantic demand for tickets vaulted daily sales at 3,400 vending sites to $12.4 million at 1:39 p.m. Ticket sales for North America's largest jackpot ever will end at 6:56 p.m., four minutes before the drawing.

Buyers were undaunted by slim odds. Each ticket has a one in 9.6 million chance of matching seven of the 11 numbers to be drawn.

"In other words, you have a five times better chance of being struck by lightning this year," estimated Steve Hajjier, a statistician at Drexel University in Philadelphia.

The lure of Lady Luck was too attractive to pass up for state employee Jean Clouser, 55, who replaced a birthday card with one $1 ticket for her brother-in-law.

"Today is his birthday so I bought him a ticket," Clouser joked. "I'll give it to him even if he wins, though if he doesn't take care of me, I'll kill him."

An instant fortune beckoned three New Yorkers in a limousine to a newspaper stand across from Independence Mall, joining other gamblers who were lined up for tickets at about 4:30 a.m.

Passengers on a Center City bus in Philadelphia compared notes on office pools and swapped stories about out-of-towners with suitcases stuffed with greenbacks who arrived to buy chances.

Ticket vendors on Pennsylvania's borders expected to be inundated with customers as the clock ticks down.

for research, that's pathetic." "If they need the money for academics, then that is what the University is for. What really gets me is none of the students support football."

Members of the football team talk about the football elimination issue frequently, junior defensive lineman Shannon Ferbrache said.

"The only thing I have questioned myself is the guy (anthropology professor Jerome Handler) is going at it with such viciousness," Ferbrache said. "I wonder if it is just the money thing or if something happened with some players. I have never seen a guy go on a vendetta such as this."

Ferbrache said the coaching staff has not gone into the issue outside of mentioning that there is "nothing to worry about."

Head coach Bob Smith declined comment on the situation.

Ferbrache said Handler has some good points, but fails to deal with the entire picture.

"If you are talking just numbers it is extremely strong," Ferbrache said. "You have got to stick with some things before they turn around. The way football is set up now, it will never make money. They have got to change some things."

Junior linebacker Tyrunne Johnson said eliminating football is a tall mountain to climb.

"You would have to go a long way to get it cut," Johnson said. "You have to go through the students because they are the ones that pay for it and support it. Just because he has the faculty support leaves him with a long way to go."

Johnson said education has been stressed by all the football coaches, and race has never been a problem.

"You have to study no matter if you are black, white, hispanic or whatever," Johnson said. "I would just throw that (Handler's racial argument) out the window."

Sophomore quarterback Fred Gibson, who has been coached at SIU-C by Ray Dorr, Rick Rhoades and Smith, said the rewards of being involved with the program warrant keeping football.

"The rewards of being a student-athlete are immeasurable," Gibson said. "The experience makes you a more productive person down the road. It gives you intangibles which can't be taken away."

Rhoades, the Salukis' coach in 1988 and now an assistant at Alabama, said the only drawback to the football program is its perception by Southern Illinois.

"If there is any example of something negative it is that some don't understand what college football is," Rhoades said. "Football to that part of Illinois is just a little foreign."

"You could make a case to get rid of it, but you could make a case for just about anything. I hate to see this get the ink and the time it has. If it is cut I think the University would lose a great deal of alumni. I would be a lot more negative than people think."

Jim Livengood, athletics director from 1985-87, said football is an integral part of SIU-C.

"I think the football program is critical to Saluki athletics," said Livengood, now AD at Washington State. "I think football does something that basketball can't. It gives a positive attitude in the fall and there are a large number of student-athletes involved."

The athletics department conducted a door-to-door public relations campaign in 1986 to promote Saluki football. Livengood said the idea paid big dividends.

"You almost have to do that," Livengood said. "You need to create more than the game itself. If you focus on just the football game and lose, people have their chin down coming away.

"Get the coach and players very active in the University and community. They can become a positive force just by sheer numbers. We tend to push the panic button when something comes up instead of educating people all the way."

Dorr, coach at SIU-C from 1984-87, said the University has always had problems with getting support for football.

"The only way they (the fans) have to show if they appreciate your particular sport is by support, and that has been a real struggle, even in the championship year (1983)," said Dorr, now an assistant coach at Southern California. "I think fan support will pick up, and it definitely would help if the bottom line was winning."

"You need to develop some consistency in winning. I think it's there."

Amie Padgett, Michele Williams and Jamie Dashner, freshmen on the women's track team, have made considerable impact for coach Don DeNoon during their first season.

"I'm trying to be a student first," said Williams who boasts a 3.6 grade point average. "The coaches help by keeping an eye on you and helping get tutors, but the responsibility is your own."

Williams, an international business major, is also an asset on the track, running sprints and the long jump. She recently helped the winning 4 x 400 relay squad at the Eastern Relays.

"We had some injuries, so we tried Michelle in the relay," DeNoon said. "She came through for the team and herself. She will be a tremendous asset to the team."

The women's track team, which looks to be on course for another conference title behind the strength of its veteran athletes, has enough young talent to stock another trophy case with Gateway titles.

"I look at the girls that are graduating and feel bad," DeNoon said. "But when I see the potential of some of our freshmen, well, I can't wait until they are seniors."

admitted. "But Gene went out, said what he had to, and then went back to the dugout and forgot about it. That's the class part."

The Salukis have a .298 team batting average, which ranks fourth in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Salukis' 269 runs scored is fifth and the 234 runs batted is fourth.

The Salukis' top three pitchers — Shane Gooden, George Joseph and Sean Bergman — have combined for eight of the team's 22 victories.

Sharing the lead with Bergman (4-4) with most victories are Dale Meyer (4-5) and Chris Bend (4-4).

One more loss

The Salukis' 5-4 victory was the fourth extra-inning defeat that Missouri suffered this season. It was earlier reported that Missouri had lost all three of its extra-inning games.

Banding together

Jeff Nelson, who had the game-winning hit Tuesday, said the team's sub-500 record reflects the impotence of the team's offense.

"We've been splitting all year, and you can't blame the pitchers," Nelson said. "We can't win without offense. We have got to get together as a team."

for the Salukis.

Three weeks ago, the Salukis were 19-4 for the year and 8-0 in Gateway play. Since then, the short-handed squad has suffered league losses to Drake and Wichita State, two schools the team will have to get past this weekend.

"Drake certainly looks like the favorite, but a number of teams could do well," Auld said. "Wichita is always tough, same with Illinois State. Southwest Missouri is good, but has a couple injuries like us. Anyone could win it."

For the 20-6 Salukis to pull out the victory, the team will need a big weekend from No. 2 singles Dana Cherebitiu, who will maybe play at No. 1 depending on Boardman. Cherebitiu, SIU-C's No. 4 all-time singles winner (93-53), is 14-7 this spring and has a record of 6-1 against Gateway opponents.

The lineup after Cherebitiu will be as follows: Missy Jeffrey, Michele Toyé, freshman Lori Edwards and senior Julie Burgess. This spring, Jeffrey has gone 15-5 at No. 3 singles. Toyé is 13-7 at No. 5, and Edwards comes in with a 9-10 record at the No. 4 spot. Burgess has provided a lift at the No. 6 spot with a 6-2 record, 4-0 against the Gateway foes.

The doubles could be lacking if Coch cannot team up with Burgess. The pair sports a 15-1 record on the year and has been virtually unbeatable at the No. 3 spot. The Salukis' other hopes rest with the tandem of Cherebitiu and Jeffrey.

Athletes supporting football program

By David Gallianetti and Stephanie Wood
Staff Writers

Student-athletes at SIU-C seem to be in agreement — no University sport, including football, should ever be eliminated.

Marcus Mulholland, president of the Student Athletic Advisory Board and gymnast, said SAAB supports the football program.

"Most people feel that we don't want any sports cut," Mulholland said. "We felt the same way about gymnastics and field hockey. We want to find alternative ways of saving money or getting money."

In December, the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee voted 15-5 to eliminate men's gymnastics and field hockey. Mulholland said it is hard to compare that Fourth in a four-part series on the issue of eliminating Saluki football. The purpose of this series is to inform and present views from the University community.

situation with football's. "It's really kind of difficult," Mulholland said. "It is about the opposite of what they told us. They said the purpose of athletics was to make money. Now they are saying it's about people."

"A lot of this is hurting the people that got cut. We got cut, I guess we weren't people at that time."

Field hockey player Laura Duffy agreed with Mulholland, saying concern for people was not what she and her teammates heard when Hart met with them.

Hart defended football's economic loss by pointing out more was involved than money.

"I saw Jim Hart's quote in the paper about people being involved," Duffy said. "He has to realize we are people too. I don't feel we suffered at all because of football. It was a lack of organization in administration."

"When Jim Hart was hired they said he would bring all this money in. I guess his name is not worth as much as they thought it would be."

Duffy said eliminating football is not a solution to the athletics department's financial problems.

"I think the football budget could be trimmed a bit, then everyone would be able to keep their sport," Duffy said. "You live for football in the fall. We are kind of looking forward to going to a football game. We could never go to them before because we were always on the road."

"I don't want them (the football players) to go through what we did."

Rick Armstrong, a freshman gymnast who is transferring to Oklahoma, reflected Duffy's comments.

"I know what it feels like," Armstrong said. "All the guys on the football team have been really nice, asking us where we're (transferring)."

Cutting football would save money, but Armstrong said it would deprive the players of an education.

"If they do cut it, it will save money, but that's 75 kids who aren't going to be able to do what they do," Armstrong said. "If they take that away from you, where are they going to go to school? It's almost like a no-win situation."

Jeff Jones, a junior gymnast, said if it can be proven football is detracting from Morris Library, then some action should be taken.

"The only thing I see bad about football is what they're saying about the library," Jones said. "If you can't get a hold of up-to-date information

Tennis goes to conference minus 2 stars

A hobbled Saluki women's tennis team, which is possibly without two of its top players, will contest for the Gateway Conference title this weekend in Normal.

The Salukis, Gateway champs in 1983 and 1985 and last year's runner-up, will again be one of the favorites. But this time around the squad could be without the services of No. 1 singles player Beth Boardman and No. 6 singles Maria Coch.

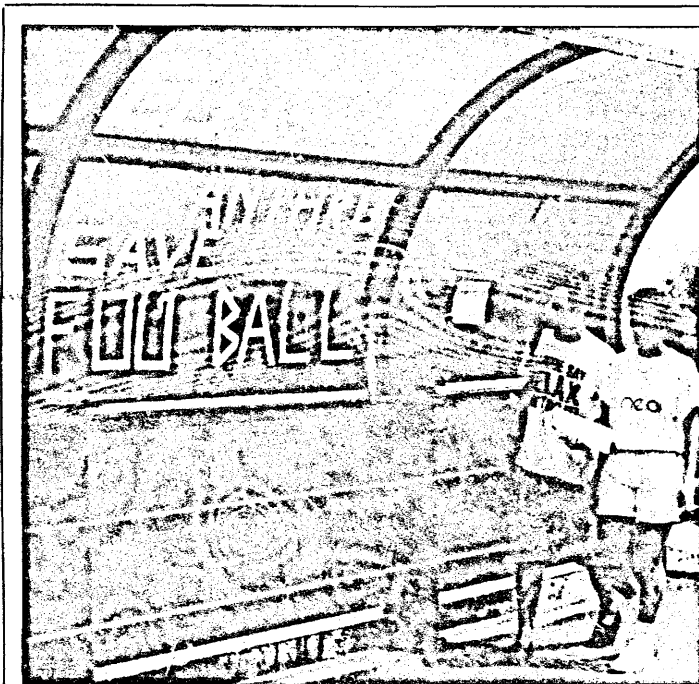

Boardman, who holds an 84-36 career record for SIU-C and ranks No. 6 on the all time singles win list, has missed her last three matches with torn ligaments in her right foot. According to SIU-C trainers she has a 50 percent chance of returning by Thursday.

Coch, who has a 12-3 record this spring in singles and a 12-0 doubles record with Julie Burgess, has been bothered by acute tendonitis in her left ankle and also appears doubtful for return.

"If we could get Beth and Maria back," coach Judy Auld said, "it would be a real psychological boost for the team even if they can't compete at full strength..."

Auld expects her squad to be competitive regardless of the lineup in Normal, but the injuries have been tough to take

Secret admirer

Gene Chaney, left, sophomore in pre-med and Younisa Rehana, senior in public relations, notice a sign making reference to the current issue of eliminating football presented by anthropology professor Jerome Handler on the overpass near Neely Hall Monday. Chaney is in favor of cutting the sport while Rehana feels it is an integral part of the University.

The baseoil team, which is 22-23 after splitting its last two doubleheaders, plays Murray State in a single game at 3 p.m. today in Murray, Ky.

This is the 20th meeting since the Saluki-Racers home-and-home series began in 1974. The Salukis lead 15-4, taking the last three meetings.

Last season the Salukis won 26-5 and 5-3. Cliff McIntosh was the winning pitcher in both games.

Big Mac

In a footnote to Tuesday's second game against Missouri, Saluki coach Icky Jones spoke of his friendship with Tigers' long-time coach Gene McArthur.

"I like Gene, we get along," said Jones, who has 700 plus victories, of McArthur, who has 500-plus victories. "Too often coaches are judged on wins and losses. But Gene's a class individual, even without the numbers."

In the 10th inning, McArthur charged out on to the field to protest a call. Jones admired the way McArthur reacted.

"What can you say, it was a questionable call," Jones

Freshmen making impact in first track season

DeNoon predicts bright future ahead for young athletes

The last time the women's track lost a conference championship, most of SIU-C's current students were still in high school.

Some of the squad's success can be attributed to talent or coaching, but the ability to score points comes from depth.

For the team to continue to Page 20, Daily Egyptian, April 27, 1989 succeed in the future, it will need increased productivity from some of its younger athletes.

A few of these newcomers are already making their presence felt, including Amie Padgett, Jamie Dashner, and Michelle Williams.

Padgett, from St. Francisville, is the youngest star in the Salukis' corps of distance runners. She handles the 1,500-meter, 5,000, and her speciality, the 3,000.

Padgett said the adjustment to the world of collegiate running has been eased by some of the team veterans.

"The older girls are always there for me when I need it, especially Lisa Judisack who helps me a lot," Padgett said. "The team is like a big family. I hope to be one of the leaders in a few years. It will take hard work to get to their level."

Coach Don DeNoon said that Padgett, an exercise physiology major, has the kind of attitude that coaches look for in an athlete.

"She is dedicated, talented, and has a good work ethic," DeNoon said. "And she's a good student. Amie is the kind of runner you would like to build your program around."

Dashner, an administration and justice major from Waterloo, can perform a number of events for the Salukis. She throws the javelin, runs the 400-meter hurdles, and is also a heptathlete.

She has thrown the javelin 129 feet 9 inches at the Eastern Relays, among the best distances in the Gateway Conference this season. Her potential is unlimited, DeNoon said.

"Jamie has the potential to win the conference championships in the javelin this year," DeNoon said. "She is intense and talented. She should be a consistent point scorer for us in the future."

Dashner said that her decision to attend SIU-C was one she doesn't regret.

"SIU has a great track program and has my major," Dashner said. "I'm very happy I came here. The practicing, traveling, and having to miss some classes makes it hard to be a consistent student. We have to work twice as hard to do well."

Williams, who came to SIU-C on an academic scholarship from Moline, is another newcomer who takes the classroom to be just as important as the track.
