Evaluating our faculties: PQP enters second phase

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

As SIUC heads into the second phase of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's streamlining program with a focus on faculty performance, a University official says evaluating faculty in a broad group may be a difficult project.

Steven Kraft, graduate council chairman, said while the first phase put University programs in the spotlight, the second phase focuses on studying and evaluating faculty.

"The board is trying to come up with criteria to measure how well faculty is performing," Kraft said. "All across the country, there is a concern what faculty is doing. I think IBHE has the impression that faculty aren't doing what the public perceives they ought to be doing."

IBHE plan to focus efforts on instructors, research

Kraft said the criteria is designed to cover all universities, and it is difficult to have one set of guidelines when each university is very different.

"Faculty varies across universities, within universities — even within departments," he said.

Workshops began this month to outline changes that could be made to enhance faculty performance.

James Orr, faculty senate president, said the board wants faculty to switch their emphasis from research to undergraduate education.

The Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative is the board's statewide effort to cut excess spending at state universities and colleges that was implemented in 1992.

John Haller, SIUC vice chancellor for academic affairs, said the second phase involves faculty's roles in enhancing quality education as well as affordability.

"Affordability tries to look at the cost of education from the perspective of the students and parents," he said.

The workshops were planned to help fine-tune state universities' PQP efforts of streamlining and to introduce the second phase, Haller said.

The workshop outlined five steps for universities to follow as part of PQP's second phase. The steps must be approved at the board's May 3 meeting before state institutions will receive the guidelines, Haller said.

The guidelines will ask universities to increase faculty contributions and involvement, reexamine faculty personnel policies, launch programs in faculty

Animal liberation week prompts protest

Student activists capture both sides of issue during Tuesday's demonstration

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Signs reading "End the Pain" and "Painful Experiments Paid For With Our Tax Dollars and Tuition," accompanied by a six-foot pink rabbit attracted passers-by outside Life Science II, Tuesday, as a student group protested animal testing.

The group also captured the attention of students in favor of animal testing, who joined the demonstration by protesting the protesters.

The controversial and emotional issue of animal testing was the focus of SIUC's Animal Rights Action Team's demonstration as part of World Laboratory Animal Liberation Week.

Team member Christy Maxedon said protesters met animosity from those in favor of animal testing, Tuesday.

"People were asking us if we put animal's lives in front of human lives — that's not the case," Maxedon said. "The people just don't want to read anything different, they want to continue believing what they believe. I try to understand their views, they could try to understand mine."

Matt Fain, a junior in microbiology from Casey, held a sign that read "E. Coli Have Feelings Too," dressed in his lab coat, standing next to the team, in support of animal research.

E. Coli is a bacteria sometimes found in bad meat which can be fatal to humans if ingested.

Fain said he believes in animal research and decided to come out to demonstrate with Dana Meents, a sophomore in microbiology from New Lenox, when they saw the protesters.

"We're doing this as a parody to what they (animal rights activists) are protesting," Fain said. "I think it's better to kill an animal and

The longer you keep it to yourself, the harder it is to make it go away.

Often when a woman is raped, she tries to push it out of her mind, thinking it will just go away. Except, that only makes all the bad feelings worse.

What does help is talking about it. To a friend or family member. Or a counselor from a rape treatment center. You can find one in the Yellow Pages under "rape".

There is a way out of the silence.

EX-AIDE OF RABIN CHALLENGES FEDERATION — JERUSALEM—Years before the state of Israel was created, the early Zionist pioneers laid the foundations for what they envisioned as a socialist economy by creating the Jewish labor federation in Palestine known as the Histadrut. David Ben Gurion, the Histadrut secretary general who later became Israel's first prime minister, once envisioned the union as "a kind of workers' state." In the decades that followed, the Histadrut became an economic, social and political empire in Israel, representing thousands of workers as well as controlling banks, factories, stores and farms.

DIPLOMAT'S OPPOSITION ANGERS NATO — UNITED NATIONS—NATO was ready last Saturday to blast the Bosnian Serbs assaulting the town of Gorazde with an aggressive air campaign, but Yasushi Akashi, a soft-spoken, gun-shy Japanese diplomat who heads the U.N. mission in Bosnia, got in the way. Akashi not only convinced NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner that the Serbs should be given more time to hold their fire and pull back their artillery from around the shattered Muslim enclave, but also stood his ground against his own boss, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

YELTSIN ORDERS MILITARY TO RECONSIDER — MOSCOW—President Boris Yeltsin Tuesday ordered his Defense Ministry to reconsider a planned joint exercise with U.S. troops this summer, a move that cast doubt on yet another element of Russia's promised cooperation with the West. Yeltsin spokesman Anatoly Krasikov said the exercises had been canceled, and added, "Exercises should and will definitely take place," but he declined to speculate when. "We're definitely not going to lower our cooperation with the United States in this field," he said.

UPGRADE OF AIR TRAFFIC IN HOLDING PATTERN — After an Aeromexico jetliner collided with a light plane over Cerritos, Calif., in 1986, government safety investigators pinpointed an unlikely cause: the U.S. air traffic control system. The crash came as the government was in the early stages of developing a state-of-the-art computer system that was supposed to let controllers better handle air traffic in the nation's increasingly crowded skies. Today, that computer project is itself a disaster—a case of bureaucratic bumbling, corporate failings, repeated delays that have set back the project's completion at least two years and one of the biggest potential cost overruns in U.S. government history: $2 billion and counting.

SAY GOODBYE 'L.A. LAW', 'ARSENIO HALL' — Though reruns might make you think otherwise, all good things do eventually come to an end in television. Unfortunately, viewers are too often forced to watch them go bad for too long before they disappear. Take NBC's "L.A. Law." On May 19, Steven Bochco's once peerless drama about legal eagles in Los Angeles will begin its final hour. Say goodbye, too, to Arsenio Hall, who brings his syndicated party-hearty talk show to a close May 27. Unlike the "L.A. Law" faithful, followers of "The Arsenio Hall Show" won't have to suffer through a protracted and painful death. Though the program has been running for nearly six years, its demise came quickly—this year, in fact, when David Letterman decisively seized the late-night crown. (Many of Hall's key stations were CBS affiliates that dropped him in favor of Letterman.)

USG to address RSO allocations

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

Undergraduate Student Government leaders say students should be aware about the most important senate meeting of the year tonight when they will decide on funding for all registered student organizations.

USG vice president Lorenzo Henderson said the senate will determine which registered student organizations will receive USG funding and how much they will receive.

Henderson said groups dissatisfied with the initial funding allocations organizations received from the USG Finance Committee recently also can lobby their senators to appeal for more funding or appeal for more money before the entire senate.

"This meeting is key for smaller organizations because it determines how much money they will receive to promote their goals as an organization," Henderson said. "This is where USG performs one of its most important functions to the students — allocating the money so organizations can fulfill their needs."

Henderson said it is important for senators to attend the meeting because without significant attendance, none of the organizations will receive funding.

According to the USG Constitution, legislation cannot be passed at senate meetings without a quorum, which is the minimum number of senators required to pass legislation.

In order to have a quorum there must be 16 senators present, Henderson said.

Henderson said he is concerned that the senate may not have a quorum because of poor attendance at recent senate meetings.

The senate did not have a quorum at its April 13 meeting and no legislation was passed.

The USG election results that have been questioned are up for approval by the senate.

Edwin Sawyer, former Unity Party presidential candidate, won the election last Wednesday by nine votes, defeating John Shull of the Progressive Party.

Shull appealed the election on grounds of unethical conduct by Unity Party members during the campaign process, but USG election commissioner Craig Leech said the commission did not find sufficient evidence in Shull's

Merrill-Fink keeps reaching out to aid students

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

The new director of performance studies faces budget cuts, student burnout and curriculum problems.

So why did Lori Merrill-Fink, associate professor in the theater department, accept the job?

"Teaching goes much beyond the classroom—my fundamental purpose (at the university) is to be involved, accessible, and influential," she said.

She said one of the biggest challenges for the theater department is equipping students with the needed performance classes, while satisfying graduation requirements.

SIUC offers theater students a bachelor of arts degree, while many other universities offer their theater students a bachelor of fine arts degree, she said.

Students at SIUC take four acting and three voice classes, as opposed to eight acting and six voice classes at schools that offer a bachelor of fine arts degree, she said.

"I am going through the curriculum and course offering to ensure we are giving (students) the most training and to discover how we can strengthen what we offer," she said.

Merrill-Fink said she would also like to address a problem that affects almost all college students.

"Another goal is to do what we can to prevent student burnout," she said. "It is not unique (to theater students) but because of practical applications (required of actors), when everyone else is studying or partying — the actors are performing," she said.

Every department faces budget cuts, but those with classes that are popular with students who are not departmental majors face additional problems.

"We don't want to limit the number of sections," she said. "There are a huge number of theater minors, and theater courses are popular with (many non-theater majors.)"

Being a theater professor comes naturally to Merrill-Fink. She said although she did not plan to be a professor, she was always acting in high school.

"When I got into the classroom, I found that it really fit and that I was good at it," she said.

She said teaching an acting class is much different from teaching a lecture class because it demands additional skills.

Encouraging students to hone their craft can be a fragile step. Instructors must have a discerning eye, and also learn how to blend patience and tact in dealing with their students.

"It's more participatory, the expression is very personal — (students must develop) a real sense of trust," she said.

Merrill-Fink also has been trying to balance her personal life with her profession. She and her husband have a 10-month-old baby, which changed her perception about how much time she commits to theater.

Unemployment rate decreasing, attributed to rising temperatures

By Paul Eisenberg
Business Reporter

Figures released by the Illinois Department of Employment Security indicate a drop in unemployment between February and March 1994 in most Southern Illinois counties, and labor analysts attribute the falling rate to hirings of companies that operate over the warmer months.

Unemployment rates have also dropped nationwide over the last year, which analysts credit to the nationwide boost in the economy.

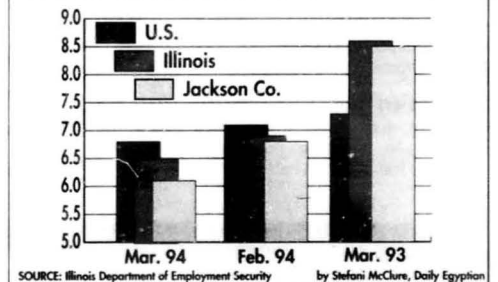

Jackson County's unemployment figures fell from 8.6 percent in March, 1993 to 6.1 percent in March, 1994. This year's March figures dropped from 6.8 percent in February, 1994.

Jackson County fared a little better than the state average, which was listed at 6.5 percent in March. Illinois came in under the latest national average of 6.8 percent last month.

National figures fell at a slower rate, dropping from 7.3 percent in March 1993 to 7.1 percent in

SIUC Peace Corps helping; volunteers reaping rewards

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

When SIUC student Myrle Wasko joined the Peace Corps in 1988, he had no idea his efforts would lead him to the woman of his dreams.

Wasko, a graduate student in sociology, met his wife Dawn McCusker while serving in Sierra Leone as an agricultural extension agent helping communities get farming supplies such as seeds and fertilizer.

McCusker, an SIUC graduate student in community development, was teaching math and science at a secondary school with the Peace Corps when the couple met.

SIUC Peace Corps recruiter Louis Renner said although everyone does not bring back such tangible benefits as a spouse, the experience of serving in the organization can be rewarding.

Renner said many students who join the Peace Corps after graduation gain valuable hands-on experience in their fields and learn responsibility by living and working abroad.

"Recent graduates are able to take and apply their degree in a hands-on position," Renner said. "Peace Corps is not a two-year holiday. It allows you to gain competence in your own field — to grow and mature as an individual because of the environment that volunteers live in."

Assault weapon ban should pass House

ACCORDING TO THE NATIONAL VICTIM Center, in the United States approximately one violent crime is committed every 17 seconds and one person is murdered every 21 minutes.

The impersonal nature of these figures does little to convey the tragedy of those who become part of the statistics.

TWO DAYS AGO PRESIDENT CLINTON LISTENED to testimony from eleven victims of gun violence. Some of the victims were family to someone who had been shot to death, others had themselves been shot but survived.

The testimony came before a House Judiciary subcommittee on crime which is deliberating a bill that would ban 19 types of assault-style weapons and limit the number of rounds in ammunition clips to only five.

President Clinton has said he supports the bill. The proposal does not unnecessarily limit the freedoms of U.S. citizens and should be passed.

THE BILL, H.R. 3527, WHICH WAS ALREADY passed by the Senate last fall, lists by name the assault weapons it proposes to ban.

Some of the more common weapons on the list are: the AR-14, the civilian version of the U.S. armed force's primary infantry weapon; the UZI, an Israeli manufactured sub-machine gun; and the AK-47, the most widely-used assault weapon in the world developed by the Soviet Union.

Features that maximize a weapon's lethal effects and make them more suitable for combat than for self-defense or sport were taken into account to determine which ones would be placed on the list. The bill also lists 670 rifles which would be legally protected.

THE BILL COMES ON THE HEELS OF THE February implementation of the Brady Bill which imposed a five-day waiting period on the purchasing of handguns.

The waiting period is intended to serve a twofold purpose. It allows authorities to run background checks for criminal records on everyone who wishes to purchase a weapon and it discourages people from buying a weapon and immediately shooting someone in the rush of passion.

OPponents of GUN CONTROL CITE THE BILL of Rights, which states "the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed," as their primary constitutional backing. H.R. 3527 does not seek to remove all guns from the hands of U.S. citizens, only those which pose an excessive risk.

Opponents also claim the weapons should remain legal because of their "sporting" value. Assault weapons though, were developed to kill large numbers of people, quickly, and serve no practical purpose.

ASSAULT WEAPONS WERE BUILT FOR THE battlefield, and are an unwarranted risk to the American populous. No "sporting" person needs a weapon capable of firing a 50 round clip in half as many seconds.

Letters to the Editor

Compassion needed in politics

I still pay attention to politics and elections. Too often it's a power game, especially for business, law, and journalism majors. Also it is the times. As a graduated old geezer let me explain about when it was different.

Once the left and the right were not just contestants trying to destroy the opposition. Once there were two methodologies to the left and two to the right. Both once built ideas constructively as one method and both also criticized their opponent as another method. It's as if each had a creative side and a destructive side. The constructive side built, the other side attacked the opposition.

Recently, both the left and right have changed the priorities of these two methodologies. Once the creative building side dominated, now the name-calling and destructive side dominates. Dogma, and propaganda, have grown. Radicalism on the left and the right has resulted. Also notice the destructive side rather than the creative side of each political wing is what's operating. Can either side win if destructive forces dominate creative forces? If we create a situation where winning is only by use of destructive measures, then destruction rather than creation becomes the winner. There is an absurdity to believing your opponent is always 100 percent wrong. To consider only that he must be totally oppressed and destroyed is radically insensitive to humans as individuals.

We are supposed to be building society and solving problems. Negativity should only be an antithesis, subordinating destructive forces to creative forces. Power alone destroys, only creativity can build. Destructive-ness is a tactic for the weak, only strength creates.

Rather than trying to defeat and humiliate see what you can build for us all. With creativity dominating destructive-ness, all win. Power grabbing is not winning. Reason and sensitivity translate into bigger victories. Remember your opponent is a human being.

If you evaluate him to the status of a scum bag there is something wrong with you.

— Scott Stromberg, alumni, social work

Destruction should stop

Here in the Shawnee National Forest we often hear of environmentalists protesting timber sales. What we don't hear about are all the accounts of this kind of dissatisfaction elsewhere, and how it all ties together to show just how dissatisfied the American public is with the Forest Service's careless management of our national forests. One extreme example of this mismanagement is in the Nez Perce National Forest of Idaho.

The area known as Cove/Mallard is a biological link in the Greater Salmon/Selway Ecosystem, and the largest roadless area left in the lower 48 states. The Forest Service plans to decimate this significant native forest corridor with 145 miles of logging roads and 200 clearcuts. This is the biggest timber sale ever offered in the history of the Northern Rockies, home of our last remaining sizable tracts of original forest.

Since 1992, activists have come to Cove/Mallard to defend these intact forests with a variety of tactics ranging anywhere from demonstrations to equipment lockdowns. But the greatest hope for this area is a Congressional Bill H.P. 2638, the Northern Rockies Ecosystem Protection Act. It offers long term protection and restoration to the forest and human communities of the Northern Rockies.

There are many things you can do to help stop this senseless destruction. You can write in support of NREPA to our government officials. You can go to Idaho and see this pristine wilderness for yourself before it's too late.

Or you can spend the night of May 1st at Booby's listening to good music, and supporting the Cove/Mallard Coalition. A three dollar cover charge will go directly to the Coalition, the festivities will begin at eight, with three local bands performing until two. Come spend this spring evening contributing to a great cause.

— Angie Hampton, Carbondale, IL

SINGAPORE—Women should not have been given equal education and employment rights here years ago because now they have a harder time finding husbands.

In many places, a statement to that effect would get a man hounded from public office, run out of town on a rail, or worse. But this is Singapore, and the speaker was Lee Kuan Yew, the long-serving, former prime minister whose ruling People's Action Party has run this city-state continuously since 1959.

Expounding on a theme that he first broached in the 1980s, Lee said during a visit to Australia last week that his government had been "young, ignorant and idealistic" when it promoted equal employment and educational opportunities for men and women after taking office.

As a result, he said, it is many university graduates remain unmarried and many male graduates marry women with lower education.

development, scope of faculty involvement and begin a system of rewards and incentives for outstanding teachers, support conferences about faculty roles and responsibilities and provide reliable assessments of faculty work.

The first phase of the board's PQP initiative is winding down as SIUC prepares to give a final report on its efforts on Aug. 15.

Board representative Ross Hodel said the board will review each university's PQP efforts in October, and will make further program recommendations to the University in November.

Haller said the first phase involved streamlining and consolidating campus programs and degrees.

Haller said the final report to the board will outline all of the University's efforts since the beginning of PQP in 1992, including suggestions as to the outcomes of doctoral programs in political science, sociology, physical education; a bachelor's degree in consumer economics, a master's in administration of justice, the College of Technical Careers, intercollegiate athletics and administrative costs and research.

Haller said he would like to see the board agree with the University's recommendations.

"I hope IBHE will accept the recommendations and be done with it," he said.

"But I have learned not to have great expectations when it comes to IBHE."

get results than to kill a human."

Bob Thukral, a graduate student in microbiology from India, said his SIUC lab where students work with rabbits had been canceled for the day, because of the protest.

Andrea Bauch, team president, said she did not believe Fain realized that the results of non-human testing do not correlate to humans.

The results found from animal testing did not necessarily produce the same results in humans.

"These tests are done repetitively and they (Fain and Meents) are not willing to look at alternatives, which do save time and money," Bauch said. "If they (those for animal testing) did they would say (agree) we don't need to test on animals."

Lisa Eversgerd, team member, said the purpose of the rally was to educate others on the issue of animal testing and to try to show alternatives to the use of non-humans.

"We just want to make people aware," Eversgerd said. "A lot of people don't know there's a vivarium on campus, but it's in the basement (of Life Science II). No one's allowed in there and that makes us curious to what's happening in there."

Team member Bill Landgraf volunteered to dress up as a rabbit to help raise awareness on campus.

The group passed out literature on the cruel treatment of animals in some research laboratories and provided alternatives to the use of animals.

Team member Christina Smith said she considered the demonstration a success.

"I think a lot of people have opened their eyes," Smith said. "We need to consider that animals are being tortured and there are alternatives."

As a part of the events for the week, a box will be set up from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today in the Free Forum Area so people can return consumer products that have been tested on animals.

Targeted manufacturers include: Proctor & Gamble, Gillette, Bausch & Lomb, Colgate-Palmolive, Clorox, and Johnson & Johnson. The team will accept products from other companies that still test on animals, Bauch said.

representing a person who has died from AIDS. It began in 1987 as a response to the devastation of AIDS by people from around the world to the loss of friends, family and community.

Since its beginning, $1,377,707 has been raised for direct services for people with AIDS. The quilt represents 13 percent of all U.S. AIDS deaths.

Wally Paynter, president of Justice, an Indiana civil rights organization for gay, lesbian and HIV issues, spoke at the center Monday night and said the quilt personalizes the problem that is often bogged down with statistics and numbers.

"The quilt gives the perspective of the mother, father and different people involved with the individual remembered in the panel," Paynter said.

Steve Edfors, a member of the Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS said he is happy the quilt is here.

"This is the fifth time I've seen it. It didn't have quite the impact as the big one, but it was still moving," he said.

Paynter said he hopes to spread a message of tolerance and acceptance, he has experienced as a gay man, and as a case worker for the Shawnee Alliance for Seniors where he first met people with AIDS.

Paynter said people can help others with tolerance through HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, education and working individually with people to help them better understand AIDS.

"We need to look at people who aren't tolerant as a challenge," he grievances to overturn the election.

Shull said Tuesday he is unsure if he will appeal the election results to a judicial board of review.

A resolution recommending the University eliminate a bad-standing list that exists for student workers who are fired from University job positions also will be introduced.

The list is a way to penalize student workers who make mistakes while on the job. A student on this list cannot seek employment anywhere in the University for six months after having been placed on it.

Bill Hall, Graduate and Professional Student Council Representative, said he wrote the resolution because he knows of students who have been unfairly placed on the bad-standing list.

"I personally know of a student who was a very hard worker who lost his job for moving fans around in a hot room that he was mopping up a part of his job," Hall said. "His supervisor had told him not to move the fans around, but the air conditioning was not working; he only changed the position of the fans because his working conditions were uncomfortable."

Hall said the bad standing list is excessive punishment for student workers and allows University supervisors to use it as a weapon to keep workers in poor job positions without filing complaints.

profession if you're afraid of hard work," she said.

"My life does not revolve around theater, but it does revolve around this job."

Merrill-Fink, who received tenure this year, said if she did not teach she would still be acting, directing and choreographing.

"They are not mutually exclusive," she said.

"There are professional (actors) who teach to sustain (themselves), but you have to be in it because you can't be any place else."

countries need, Renner said.

There is a large demand for volunteers with experience in agriculture, health education or skilled trades, but people with other backgrounds also are accepted, Renner said.

"As a learning experience, it allows an individual to grow and mature," he said. "The Peace Corps certainly allows recent graduates all kinds of opportunities that a typical first-time job would not — international experience, which is becoming more and more important in business," he said. "Volunteers can often assume far more responsibility than a typical first-time job assignment here will (demand)."

Foreign-language skills, especially French and Spanish, and previous volunteer work also help increase a person's chances of being accepted, he said.

In addition to educational benefits and opportunities for personal growth, Peace Corps gives volunteers a monthly living stipend, federal health insurance and better access to government jobs when they return to the United States, Renner said.

When Renner served as a technical teacher in a Swaziland high school, officials were so impressed with his abilities they asked him to transfer to a teacher-training college.

Returned volunteers have one year of non-competitive eligibility for federal jobs, which means they have an automatic advantage if several equally-qualified people apply for the same position, Renner said.

Jonathan Taylor, an SIUC graduate student in wetlands ecology who spent three years in Gabon, Africa, said volunteers also can gain new insight into cultural and political situations in other countries.

Renner said married couples can volunteer together in a country, but it usually takes longer to place them, especially if their skills are different.

Students interested in volunteering should contact the SIUC office or the Chicago headquarters one year before they want to serve because Peace Corps has a lengthy application process, Renner said.

"You learn a lot about people and places — geography," he said. "You learn a lot about international relations — the effects of foreign policy. You perceive things differently, (such as) whether we should intervene in other countries, like Bosnia (or) Somalia or Rwanda."

Renner said signing up does not automatically guarantee students a place in the Peace Corps, but anyone who is interested in volunteering should apply.

He said people are under no obligation to the Peace Corps when they apply.

The Peace Corps accepts U.S. citizens who are at least 18 years old and have a degree or skills affiliated

"A lot of us may not be sure what we want to do when we graduate," Renner said. "If (you) are interested in the Peace Corps, submit an application. The worst that can happen is that the Peace Corps will say, 'Thanks, but you don't qualify at this time.'"

Labor market analyst Dennis Hoffman said the seasonal upturn was most significant in construction and transportation industries, but many retail trade companies and manufacturers also added workers to their payrolls.

He attributed the rate drop from last year to moderate declines in the number of unemployed and a moderate increase in companies employing people.

Massac County had the lowest figures in March, with only 5.4 percent unemployed. Pope County suffered the highest figures in March with a whopping 16.9 percent unemployment rate. The top 10 counties in unemployment rates in the state were all located in Southern Illinois.

The Southern Illinois county that had the biggest drop in the unemployment rate since March, 1993 was Union county, which fell 6.2 percent.

personnel) do," Girtman said. "They have such a direct impact on the students."

SIUC offers about 6,000 student workers a year the opportunity to gain experience and skills in a field with a paycheck to boot.

His work at the Research Glassblowing Facility allows him to gain experience within his specialty, artistic glass-blowing.

Girtman is given the task of handling complaints from students and parents in the office.

Pam Britton, director of the financial aid office, said SIUC has a long history of promoting and encouraging excellence in student work.

"Some of the skills that I learned in one area can be transferred to another," Thomson said.

"I want to help people as much as possible," Girtman said. "A lot of students get the run around. I want to make sure they get transferred to the right office."

"We have one of the largest on-campus student employment populations in the nation," Britton said.

William Curtis, supervising glassblower, said within a few years, Thomson will be able to produce many of the department requests.

Williams said the student work program encompasses the whole institution, offering positions in every single department.

In addition, over 2,000 students received $2.6 million on federal work study, a program that provides money to financially qualified students who work on campus.

Curtis served as an apprentice during his undergraduate years at SIUC until he was hired in 1976 for a full-time position.

David Shinn, Student Affairs assessment coordinator, said on an average yearly basis University Housing employs the most student workers, 680, out of about 80 to 100 areas on campus.

Britton said SIUC has a national prominence in student work, branching from the 1960s and 1970s, when the University's Financial Aid Director Frank Adams was influential in establishing federal work study.

"I became very interested in this area as a student worker and stayed here," Curtis said.

Morris Library currently employs about 245 student workers in positions ranging from shelving books to cataloging to serving as technical assistants.

An SIUC student has received the state Student Employee of the Year award three out of the last five years, she said.

Williams said many student workers grow academically while earning a paycheck and gaining job experience.

Thyra Russell, personnel librarian, said the student workers are an integral part of the library. "The library could not operate without its student workers," Russell said.

Donna Williams, supervisor of Student Employment, said the student work program at SIUC caters to exceptional students who seem to thrive on the responsibility of getting to do different tasks.

"Studies have shown that students who work 10 to 15 hours a week are more successful in budgeting their time and tend to experience better academic growth," Williams said.

In many cases, these student workers are given responsibilities that reap success and interest.

"We (SIUC) have allowed students to do a lot and live up to their potential," Williams said.

Crystal Girtman, a senior in psychology from Carbondale, said she decided to pursue a graduate degree in college student personnel from the Department of Educational Administration and Higher Education after she worked in the vice-president of student affairs office.

For hire: Teachers go on job hunt

By Doug Durso
General Assignment Reporter

Students who enjoyed school so much they decided to make education their career were able to interview with their mentors from several different states.

Representatives from about 30 school districts gathered at the Student Center Ballrooms to interview students on Teacher Career Day '94.

Schools from Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Indiana, and Tennessee including the Peace Corps screened potential employees for various teaching positions.

Louis Renner, Peace Corps coordinator for SIUC, said teachers make up 40 percent of the volunteer Peace Corps staff.

He said the fair is an opportunity for students to learn about the benefits of joining the Peace Corps including teaching in other cultures.

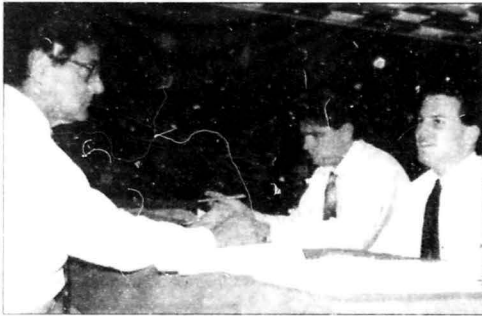

"By joining Peace Corps, teachers can become internationally diversified, which is important because of the multi-cultural movement in the United States today," Renner said.

In addition to international diversity, Renner said the corps allow perspective teachers to gain professional teaching experience in formal school setting.

Brian Boroski, a graduate student in secondary education from Carbondale, said the fair is a good opportunity to apply for a teaching position.

"People in the field say the time is right to find a job, because a lot of teachers are retiring," Boroski said.

"The fair is a good way to meet school officials from places I normally would not be able to go because of time, distance and money," Boroski said. Leo

Robert Mathes (left) of the Memphis City Schools meets with Barry Banks, a senior in mathematics education from Mt. Carmel, and Michael Gillies, a senior in art education from Murray State University in Kentucky, as part of Teacher Career Day '94 at the Student Center Ballrooms Tuesday.

Hefner, superintendent for Belleville High School District #201, agrees that the SIUC teaching program is productive.

"Our school is working with SIUC's student teacher program, so I know how prepared these students are, and SIUC's teaching program is excellent," Hefner said.

He said this event gives him a chance to interview teaching prospects for future employment.

"The fair allows employers to meet face to face with potential employees, which helps me to learn a little about their personality instead of just receiving a resume," Hefner said.

Jennifer Abate, a senior in elementary education from Vienna, said she is looking for a job, and the fair will improve her interviewing skills on a professional level.

"The fair is very important because you learn a lot about the interview process," Abate said. "Being interviewed by school officials here will help me improve in later interviews."

Joan Shea-Rogers, principal of Hope School near Springfield, is making their first appearance at the fair and are looking for teachers in the special education.

Rogers said Hope School is a private school serving children with disabilities, so it is important to seek out teachers who have an interest in working in special education.

"We are in strong competition with public schools in the area, so we need to come to fairs and recruit," Rogers said.

Other programs in conjunction with the fair include workshops about job searching tips and interview skills for teachers. The College of Education and University Careers Services sponsored the event.

Prevention prescribed for combating illnesses

By Sharon Hull, M.D.
Student Health Programs

With all the recent discussions regarding health care reform, more is being heard about preventative medicine and "health maintenance." There are many things that can be done inexpensively to reduce the frequency and severity of illness through regular intervention.

For women, the most frequently recommended "check-up" is a Papanicolaou Smear ("Pap" test). This is a test in which the health care worker (it can be a nurse or a physician) obtains a small sample of cells from the cervix to look for cancer cells. Routinely, this should be done once a year. If an abnormal result is obtained or for those people who have had genital warts, more frequent pap test are recommended.

Another issue for women is regular self-examination of the breasts. This should be done monthly. Usually, the technique for performing this exam is reviewed when the pap test is done.

For men, the testicular self-exam is very important. In this exam, the testicles are examined for any tenderness or lumps. Health care providers are able to provide information on this examination. It should also be performed monthly. There are other preventive measures that can be undertaken by both men and women. Some of these include:

- Evaluation for colon cancer with a simple screening test for blood in the stool will help detect cancerous and pre-cancerous lesions early. This test should be done annually over the age of 50.
- regular evaluation of moles;

any change need to be evaluated by a physician.

- baseline evaluation of cholesterol and blood sugar; for those with abnormalities, or a strong family history of heart disease or diabetes, regular follow-up with a physician is very important.

- use of sunscreens and avoidance of tanning beds reduces the risk of some skin cancers.

avoidance of tobacco products will help decrease the risk of cervical cancer in women, as well as the risk of heart disease and many other types of cancer in both men and women. It will also decrease the frequency of respiratory illnesses, such as bronchitis and ear infections, in adults and children.

- avoidance of driving a motor vehicle after drinking alcohol or after using any drugs that cause sedation will decrease the chances of serious accidents.

For more information regarding all of these "preventive measures" may be obtained at the Student Health Programs or by calling 453-3311.

Hot bands warm up at Sidetracks

By Kyle J. Chapman
Entertainment Reporter

Summer is going to be a little hotter and a lot more fun, thanks to Sidetracks bar.

Sidetracks, at 101 W. College, is looking to get into the swing of bringing quality bands to Carbondale on a consistent basis. It has plans to build an outdoor stage geared to attract increased business and improve the quality of the bar.

"Stage Relief '94" will feature bands beginning April 30.

This is the first series of Sidetrack's outdoor music concerts that they hope will continue next semester.

Rebecca Baril, day manager at Sidetracks, said the bands will be helpful in raising funds for the new stage and it will bring more pronounced entertainment.

"This weekend seven bands are donating their time so we can have a good stage for the summertime," Baril said.

"In the past we've had bands play out front and we got in trouble, but when we move the bands to the back they go almost unnoticed."

The bands will play free of charge in an effort to raise money to help Sidetracks build its outdoor stage.

The seven artists that will play "Stage Relief '94" include Art of War, Eric Anthony, Soldog, Crank, Rusty Sunshine, Meat 'n' Onions and Crices.

Manager Gary Cline said the stage will enable bands to play consistently, which has not happened in the past.

"It's going to be a Saturday drink special going on with reggae bands, blues bands and bands of all kinds," Cline said. "This is going to help the business out a lot, and depending on the bands that we have, we won't have a cover charge on beer."

Baril said the stage is expected to increase the crowds at Sidetracks.

"The stage will allow more room and we plan to really pick up on the band scene for the future semesters," she said.

"Stage Relief '94" will begin 12:30 p.m. Saturday in the volleyball pit. Entry fee is $2.

Global computer web entangled in ethics of electronic advertising

By John Burgess
The Washington Post

Traveling over the global computer web called the Internet, the Phoenix law firm's ad flew across continents and oceans. It reached as far as Germany, Australia, South Africa and Denmark to deliver a query: Do you want to get a green card for permanent residence in the United States? THE TIME TO START IS NOW!!

Responses came flooding in by electronic mail—they numbered 35,000 within days. Some were polite requests for more information. But many were hate mail, sent by internet users furious that the network's near-sacred restrictions on advertising were being trampled.

One angry soul made the point by sending 8 million characters of gibberish—a "mail bomb" intended by its sheer size to gum up the computer used by the law firm, a husband-and-wife operation called Canter & Siegel.

How will ad fare on the information highway as it unfolds in the future? The Internet, moving text and occasionally sounds and images between computers at high speed, is the closest thing today to that highway. What happens there may shape any coming networks that connect to homes and offices.

The Internet was established as a private channel for researchers and academics. Today, anyone with a properly outfitted computer and the subscription fees can get on, but sentiments against commercialism remain strong.

Law firm partner Laurence Canter dismisses the critics as "people who have had the computer networks as their private world for a long time." Resistance to ads is outmoded and will change, he predicted.

Most analysts agree that more ads are coming. Used by roughly 30 million people worldwide, many of them with higher-than-average education and income, the network is simply too tempting a place for advertisers to ignore. Moreover, as the network expands, it will need new sources of income. Most companies will avoid the scattergun approach of Canter & Siegel, many analysts predict. "Mass advertising gets you hated," said Mark Gibbs, a consultant who advises on using the Internet. "It's only for the thick-skinned."

The network already designates electronic locations where ads, subtle or otherwise, are accepted. The common trait is that the consumer must reach out and collect the information rather than have it arrive uninvited.

Companies can create public databases offering topical information, with ads for their products or services mixed in. Tourist information in an Internet database in Thailand, for instance, includes the names and telephone numbers of hotels.

Canter & Siegel's ad was aimed at the thousands of Internet bulletin boards, electronic meeting places where people "post" messages for anyone to see or read. A few boards are formally designated as markets generally for second-hand goods. But most exist for words—fact and opinion on defined subjects as diverse as microbiology, Star Trek trivia and problems of programming in a particular computing language.

Canter, the Internet bulletin boards were an ideal, low-cost and perfectly legitimate way to target people likely to be potential clients. Many Internet users are foreigners in need of immigration services, he said. And messages flow over the Internet almost for free.

"I can't think of any other way to reach that many people who have things in common without spending thousands of dollars," he said.

So the firm compiled a list of virtually all the bulletin boards in the world. It created special software that sent the ad to roughly 6,000 bulletin boards. Transmission took just an hour and a half last Monday night.

The ad informed people that the United States was about to conduct a lottery to issue 55,000 green cards. People responding to the offer of free information received a six-page description and an offer by the firm to handle the paperwork, said Canter.

But posting a message that is off a board's subject is a serious breach of network etiquette—and advertisements are particularly unwelcome. The offense is sure to get the perpetrator and anyone viewed to have helped out "flamed," Internet argot for showered with angry messages.

Jeff Wheelhouse, system administrator of Internet Direct, a Phoenix company that Canter & Siegel paid for Internet access, said he arrived at work last Tuesday morning to find hundreds of messages taking his firm to task for allowing the ad to go out.

Other messages were flooding in to the law firm, so many, Wheelhouse said, that Internet Direct's computer crashed more than a dozen times. On the grounds that they had abused their privileges, Wheelhouse revoked Canter & Siegel's account. "They took 15 or 20 years of Internet tradition and said the hell with it," he said.

But mail kept arriving. Internet Direct stored almost 30,000 messages on magnetic discs, Wheelhouse said, leading Canter & Siegel to threaten the company with a lawsuit if the messages weren't turned over.

Out on the net, thousands of people were outraged, though here and there was grudging respect for what was seen as the firm's diabolical thoroughness. "You, Laurence Canter, make me sick," wrote one user. "This idiot posted this to every news group," wrote another.

Travel scams lure with free trips

By Barbara Shea
New day

Almost everyone who loves to travel is a sucker for a free trip—which is exactly what scam operators bank on.

Scammers reappear as surely as pukeweed each spring, the peak vacation-planning season. They promise idyllic getaways and then either disappear with your money or deliver a "great deal" that costs much more than similar packages sold through reputable travel agencies.

While some unsolicited travel opportunities that arrive via phone or mail are legitimate, many are not. To help consumers determine the difference, the Federal Trade Commission has a new booklet explaining how many common travel scams work and advising how to protect yourself.

Here are some key points:

■ Be Wary of "Great Deals." One tipoff to a scam is that the offer is very low-priced. Few legitimate businesses can afford to give away things of real value or to undercut substantially everyone else's price.

■ Don't Be Pressured Into Buying NOW. Legitimate businesses do not expect you to make an instant decision.

■ Ask Detailed Questions. Find out exactly what the price covers—and doesn't cover. Ask if there will be any additional charges. Find out the names of the specific hotels, airports, airlines and restaurants that your package includes—you may wish to contact them to double-check arrangements. Find out exact dates and times. Ask about cancellation policies and refunds.

■ Get All Information in Writing Before You Agree to Buy. Make sure the written material confirms everything you were told by phone.

■ Don't Give Your Credit Card Number Over the Phone. One easy way for a scam operator to close a deal is to get your credit card number and then charge your account. Never give any personal information, including credit card or bank account numbers, to unsolicited telephone salespeople.

■ Don't Send Money by

Messenger or Overnight Mail. Instead of asking for your credit card number, some scam-operators may ask you to send a check or money order right away—or offer to send a messenger to pick these up. If you use money rather than a credit card in the transaction, you lose your right to dispute fraudulent charges.

Holding on to life

Boy source of strength despite obstacle

Three years ago this month, Cynthia Tedford of Eldorado sat in a hospital waiting room talking with a mother whose baby had a rare disease and a slim chance for survival. After their conversation, Tedford turned to her mother, who was waiting with her, and said, "I don't think I could handle having a terminally ill child."

Four days later, she would hear doctors tell her that her 3-year-old son Dustin had brain cancer, making her worst nightmare come true.

"It's something vicious Mommy or nothing else can stop," she said. "I wish no other parent or child would have to go through this."

Now Tedford, 24, must helplessly watch as her only child suffers 10-minute seizures sometimes five times a day.

"If he's outside playing, he'll come find me or someone to be close to, and even though he has trouble talking, he'll say, 'I love you,' because he's scared," she said. "But I can't handle it — he gets this look in his eye — an empty look."

And at night, when most children sleep quietly, off in a dreamworld, Dustin is awakened by seizures. It has gotten to the point where Tedford expects them to come — like bad dreams, uninvited visitors in the dark.

"We don't know if the seizures are from the tumor or the treatments he's taken," she said. "We're trying to get that under control now, but we're being unsuccessful."

Tedford, who sometimes works with terminally ill patients as part of her job with the Visiting Nurse Association in Eldorado, said her field of work did not prepare her for what she would see happen to her child.

"It doesn't bother me because my patients are elderly," she said. "I just ask them not to put me in the children's homes — it's just too close to home."

The first symptoms of Dustin's disease appeared more than three years ago when he complained of headaches. He cried and Tedford paid attention, but was not seriously concerned at first.

Then one night he developed an agonizing headache that made him vomit. He eventually slipped in and out of a coma and Tedford drove him to Ferrell Hospital in Eldorado where doctors gave Dustin a brain scan.

They found what was thought to be a cyst, but after exploratory surgery discovered it was a tumor. Doctors transferred him to a hospital in Louisville, Ky., for his first of two major brain surgeries.

During the 14-hour procedure doctors removed most of the tumor, which covered one third of Dustin's brain. They diagnosed it as astrocytoma, cancer of the central nervous system, grade four. Grades one and two are benign and three and four are malignant. Grade four, glioblastoma multiforme, is a very evasive tumor full of highly bizarre cells.

At first, neurologists told Tedford that Dustin had a 30-percent chance of survival, but then they were amazed at his speedy recovery.

"He could've been dependent on a respirator or drugs but he wasn't," she said. "About a day after surgery he was down at the McDonald's in the hospital."

Less than a week later he had to endure his second surgery, lasting 10 hours, where doctors removed all of the tumor they could see. By mid-May, doctors sent him to St. Jude's Children Hospital in St. Louis for an experimental treatment called radiation implants.

The implants were sticks doctors attach to his head in areas believed to be cancerous. The sticks, which he wore for seven days, allowed him to receive more radiation on a time-released basis.

"Otherwise the radiation would melt his brain," Tedford said. "He didn't complain about them — he was a wonderful child."

In more ways than one, Dustin is a soldier fighting a battle. In June and July he received radiation treatments from a machine two times a day for six weeks. When he was radioactive after receiving treatments, he had to wear a 15-pound helmet, similar to those worn in combat, whenever he went outside his hospital room.

With Dustin's cancer, chemotherapy does not help much, Tedford said.

"If it (the cancer) came back, they'd give me a choice whether to put him through the treatments — with this kind of tumor, if he had three months to live, it may give him one month," she said. "But then I would have to ask myself, 'Is it worth making him so sick?'"

And Dustin's fight still is long from being over. Now 6, he visits the doctor weekly for blood to monitor levels of his two medications for the seizures, which he has on the right side of his head. Tedford also gives him growth hormone shots daily because he is about average in weight but below average in height.

"The radiation affected his growth hormones and he won't grow without the shots," she said. "It's a never-ending thing — he'll have to take the shots until he's 18 or 19."

He does not have good coordination, and the radiation has affected his memory, she said.

"He has no short-term memory — he can't remember hardly anything," she said. "It's like this: the radiation is going to do some damage, but it's the only thing that will save his life."

Like most parents with sick children, Tedford must worry about expenses, such as a $97,000 tag on Dustin's first surgery, but she said there are other things on her mind.

"It may sound odd, but his medical bills are the least of my worries — people can sit back and say, 'I can't survive this or that,' but they won't know until it happens to them," she said.

is a chance the cancer may come back for 10 years — after that, doctors said I can breathe a relief."

But because of her experiences with Dustin's illness, Tedford said she will not have any more children.

"I don't want another one — not after seeing a kid go through this," she said. "Not after he hold him down while they (doctors) prod him, not after hearing 'Help me, Mommy,' 'Why, Mommy, Please, no, Mommy.'"

Top: Cynthia Tedford of Eldorado kisses her son Dustin, 6, good-bye Monday afternoon before she leaves her apartment on First Street. Dustin always wants to stay close to his mother, but Tedford, a single mother, works 40 hours a week for the Visiting Nurse Association to support her son. Right: Ronnie and Terri Hale sit with their children Megan, 7, Joshua, 5, and Lecia, 2, in their home in Murphysboro.

Formerly sick Joshua bubbles with energy

When Joshua Hale of Murphysboro lost his hair from radiation treatments at the age of 3, he thought it was cool because he looked like his basketball hero, Michael Jordan.

But in the eyes of many, Joshua, who last month celebrated his fifth birthday, is the real hero — he is in remission after battling cancer of the intestines.

Joshua is the middle child of Terri Hale, 26, a homemaker; and Ronnie Hale, 30, a guard at Menard Penitentiary near Chester.

A bundle of energy, he does not take naps like many children — he has too much catching up to do. As he rides his bicycle around his front yard with his two sisters, Megan, 7, and Lecia, 2, he appears to be unleashing years of energy built up while he was too sick to play.

"Ready? Here I come — bombs away," he yells, mouth open wide, to his watching parents.

"It's about time to take those training wheels off, Josh," Ronnie calls to his son.

For this family, the future never seemed so bright.

In April 1992, Joshua suffered from a high fever, vomiting and pain in his stomach — symptoms that prompted doctors to diagnose him with an ear infection or bronchitis.

But after his condition persisted for a month and a half, doctors took X-rays and CAT scans, where they discovered a tumor wrapped around his uterine tube.

Nerves were entangled in the tumor, so doctors did not want to try to remove it. But when Joshua eventually less the use of his left leg, his parents decided they had to do something and took him to Cardinal Glennon Hospital in St. Louis for surgery.

In late May, surgeons performed nine hours of exploratory surgery where they diagnosed Joshua's cancer as rhabdomyosarcoma, a highly malignant tumor of the muscle that can develop anywhere in the body.

According to "Recent Results in Cancer Research Paediatric Oncology," researchers have found that the disease affects white children three times more than blacks and there is a definite link between breast cancer on the maternal side of the family and incidence of rhabdomyosarcoma in the children.

Joshua stayed in the hospital for two weeks and started one week of chemotherapy the day after surgery. Like many cancer patients, he developed a bad reaction to the medicine — he threw up and could not eat.

Besides the disease being hard on Joshua, it took its toll on the entire family, as well.

"Traveling was hard on us — Terri had to travel back and forth to St. Louis almost every day," Ronnie said. "Both sides of the family were really good about helping us out — watching the kids — especially Terri's family."

Joshua sleeps peacefully in his bed.

Because of Joshua's condition, Ronnie and Terri could stay with him in his room. Sometimes Terri would stay at Marion Hall, a facility attached to the hospital with small rooms with bunk beds. Family members could stay there for $5 a night.

She said nurses were her biggest supporters during Joshua's illness besides family. "They became our second family because we were up there so much," she said. "Joshua had three favorite nurses, two who he said were his girlfriends, he even gave them nicknames — Nurse Big Butt and Nurse Noodle Head."

round of 78 and that score was the first time she has broken 80 all year.

Sophomore Kristen Oglesby, playing on only her second tournament all year, rounded out the Saluki finishers tying for 20th. Her opening round score of 82 was a career best for her.

SIUC's second place finish was the second consecutive one for the Salukis in the MVC championships. Last season, SIUC tied for first, but then lost in the playoff.

Those are the best Saluki finishes since the 1988-'89 season when the Salukis finished as MVC champs.

SIUC's talent brings hope of thoughts for the team's upcoming future said Daugherty.

"Right now it is a battle to get the recruits in here and keep building on our strength because it is hard to keep up with the funds we are losing," she said. "Golf is the second fastest growing sport to soccer, and the recruiting business is going to be tougher when you have schools that can travel to Hawaii for competition and so on."

Daugherty said the key to keeping her team competitive in the conference is the competition they play in non-conference.

"You have to play the best to be the best, because you are not as good when you back away from the competition, which is what we would do if we didn't play Georgia and LSU," she said.

Her team members also bring that competitive strength to the classroom as five Salukis were selected to the MVC all-academic team. SIUC's five was the most selected from any school, and only 11 were selected from the entire conference. Eller joins Tulsa's Sophie Eriksson as the only unanimous selections to the first team all-academic.

Eller, a psychology major from Centraia with a 3.65 GPA is joined by Stefanich who is in athletic training from Rensselaer, Ind. with a 3.47 GPA.

Carrie Hall, a junior in sports psychology from Ilion, N.Y. (3.68), Molly Hudgins, a sophomore in pre-business from Carbondale (3.69) and Ramus, in elementary education from Bloomington (3.11) were all named to the honorable mention team.

SIUC head basketball coach Rich Herrin announced Tuesday the signing of James Watts, a 6-foot-8-inch, 195-pound inside player from Carver High School in Memphis, Tenn.

Watts earned all-district and all-regional first-team honors after leading his team to a 17-14 record. Watts averaged 12 points, eight rebounds and five blocked shots per game while shooting 47 percent from the floor and 65 percent from the free throw line. Watts said his contributions usually come from defense and rebounding.

Yet, both Carver's head coach Ed Thornton and assistant coach Steve Bratcher like Watts' chances of success at the college level because of his shooting.

Watts selected SIUC because of its all-around appeal.

Designated hitter Pete Schlosser popped up to the Aces catcher to end the game, dropping SIUC to 21-21 overall. Henderson said it takes more than a ninth inning rally to beat a solid team like Evansville.

"The problem with ninth inning rallies is it means you didn't do the job through the first eight," he said.

SIUC will have a chance at redemption Wednesday when Evansville plays host to the Salukis in a 7 p.m. start.

Joshua was a big charmer, to say the least.

"He loves Billy Ray Cyrus, so when the nurses would come he'd say, 'Do you want to listen to my achy breaky heart?'" she said. "He had them wrapped around his finger."

For a week after he returned home, Joshua received medicine every eight hours through an IV tube going into his chest. He was restless from having to keep still but too weak to move around.

His weight dropped from 42 to 26 pounds.

He continued chemotherapy for a year and lost all of his hair.

"But it didn't bother him — he'd say he didn't want to grow hair," Ronnie said. "If people ask him, he'll talk about it, but other than that he doesn't."

"Kids would ask him why he didn't have hair and he'd tell them he was sick and his medicine caused it," Terri added.

His second major surgery was in October.

"His bladder is higher in his chest cavity because doctors cut off a four-inch section of his (uterine) tube," Ronnie said. "They found more tumor, so they decided to boost up radiation."

Joshua's first year of chemotherapy cost between $40,000 and $45,000. One of his medicines cost an additional $1,000 for 240 milliliters and would last for only 30 days, Terri said.

After Terri gave birth to Lecia she planned to return to her job at Nutrition Headquarters in Carbondale, but that is when Joshua became sick, so she never went back.

The couple said they received a lot of support, both financially and emotionally, from the entire town.

In October 1992 a benefit at the Knights of Columbus Hall raised $10,000 to buy the family a car they needed to drive to St. Louis. The family used the remainder of the money for food and bedding for Terri when she stayed in St. Louis.

Because Ronnie also is a musician, two local bars sponsored smaller benefits, raising about $500 each.

After local newspapers wrote articles about Joshua, he received hundreds of letters, books, toys and money from concerned people.

the people who read about Joshua.

When the Democrat from Makanda heard Joshua was a big fan of Chicago Bulls star Michael Jordan, he wrote Jordan to tell him about the little boy. In return, Jordan wrote a personal letter to Joshua.

Wal-Mart also "adopted" the family for Christmas 1992 so the children could have toys.

"They wouldn't of had a very good Christmas without that help — that's the year everything came down on us," Ronnie said.

Ronnie, who has worked at the prison for seven years, took time off of work when Joshua had surgery, but he said Terri showed the most strength during their ordeal.

"Being as young as she is, she's done good with raising these kids and going through what she has," he said.

The couple has been honest with Joshua and their other children about cancer and its effects.

"We'll be on the way to the doctor and he'll say, 'Mom, are they going to put that needle in my hand?' and I'll tell him, 'Yes,' because I'm not about to lie to him," Terri said. "And then he'll cry all the rest of the way to the doctor."

But in mid-February 1993, after taking 30 rounds of radiation during January, the cancer disappeared. Joshua has not taken chemotherapy since.

Now in remission, he only travels to St. Louis every two months for X-rays and CATscans to make sure the cancer has not come back.

In the meantime he attends Head Start and to Ronnie and Terri's joy, will start kindergarten this fall.

"Sometimes he'll say, 'Hey Mom, remember when I had that cancer?'" Terri says with a smile.

high school career behind in Iowa to begin a new volleyball future at SIUC. Harden sparked Spencer High School to a 42-5-2 record and second place finish in the state tournament two years ago and assisted the school to a 34-6-5 record last fall and a No. 6 ranking in Iowa.

The First Team All-State pick set three school records — assists, average per game and service aces.

Locke said Harden knows the game well and has the talent to eventually lead the team.

"Monica gives us a third seuer," Locke said. "There's no question that she will eventually be good enough to lead our team. She has a good understanding of the game and is improving at a rapid rate."

Monique Gavin, a 6-foot middle blocker, hails from Chicago's Bogan Technical High School. Gavin helped Bogan Technical to a 18-9-1 record last season.

The two-time Chicago Public League All-Star led Bogan to a Southwest Sectional title while collecting team-highs in kills, aces and block solos.

Locke said Gavin should eventually make major contributions to the Saluki program.

"Monique is a raw athlete, who is impressive physically," Locke said. "She is intelligent and has played quite a bit of volleyball but needs to refine her skills to compete at the Division I level."

The three signees will join five starters from last season's 14-13 team.

Holyfield retires of heart ailment

Los Angeles Times

Four days after losing the heavyweight boxing title for a second time, Evander Holyfield announced his retirement Tuesday, failed by the one part of his body no one had ever questioned — his heart.

Saying it was a miracle that Holyfield could continue fighting through his 12-round loss to Michael Moorer last Friday, Holyfield's personal physician, Ronald Stephens, said that examinations showed that Holyfield is suffering from a congenital heart problem.

thing that mattered at the end of spring was for progress to be made in aspects that the coaching staff had taught, the most important accountability.

"We're seeing an accountable young man that has taken pride in the program and pride in hard work," he said.

Pride and hard work is a good start in rebuilding this SIUC program which is made up of many young and inexperienced players.

The area of concentration that seems to stand out after spring practice is in the sights of the Saluki defense which had a horrendous time trying to keep opponents from scoring last season. Watson said the attitude he wanted his defense to come away with was to get 11 hats to the football.

"I was pleased to see, our number one unit especially, get to that football, and they showed that in the scrimmage," he said. "I have a lot of admiration for the coaching staff on that side of the football and their motivation as they have done an excellent job of selling tough two-fisted football."

In setting out to develop young candidates, the Saluki defense has developed players like defensive ends Arglistia Scott, Cortess Washington and Shawn Payto who have had strong springs, along with Right Tackle Brian Prudent.

Linebackers Tommy Anderson, Brian Tranchitella and Tony Seman will be looked to as providers of solid leadership of the defense, adding to where the real strength which seems to lie in the secondary, Watson said.

On the offensive end, players like last year's sensation, tailback Melvin Dukes, are sure to keep the game off and running, but there may be a new look in store.

Compared to last year's offensive scheme, which used more of a finesse running game, this year's game plan will now be more of an attitude running game, Watson said.

"Running hard between the tackles and making big plays will be important, and I have seen improvement every day in the running game since day one," he said.

Separating himself from the pack at the end of spring to lead the offense is quarterback Dave Pierson, who seems to have proven what he can do at the position.

While Watson seems to have a great beginning at evaluating the team, he said there is a long way to go not only for his team, but for him.

"People think I get a break when spring is over, but I have a big summer ahead, because rebuilding is a 24 hour job, seven days a week," he said. "Right now we have to get the team ready to start hitting the weight room and get a little bigger for the season, that is going to be an important factor now."

Salukis aced by Evansville, 10-5

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

The Evansville Aces brought a full deck to Carbondale Tuesday afternoon and trounced the Saluki baseball team 10-5, at Abe Martin Field.

The loss comes on the heels of a weekend in which SIUC won two of three against Missouri Valley Conference rival Bradley.

"Obviously we were not the same club today that came out against Bradley," Saluki interim head coach Ken Henderson said. "Great players come out and play great every day and we played no phases of the game well today."

Evansville cut through two Saluki pitchers in the first 4 1/3 innings to jump in front of SIUC 8-0, and never looked back.

Saluki starter Mike Blang (1-2) coasted through the first two innings, but was shelled in the top of the third for three runs and yielded the mound to reliever Dave Farrow in the fourth.

The Aces offensive onslaught continued against Farrow, though, as Evansville hammered out three more runs in the top of the fourth and sent Farrow to the showers with one out in the fifth.

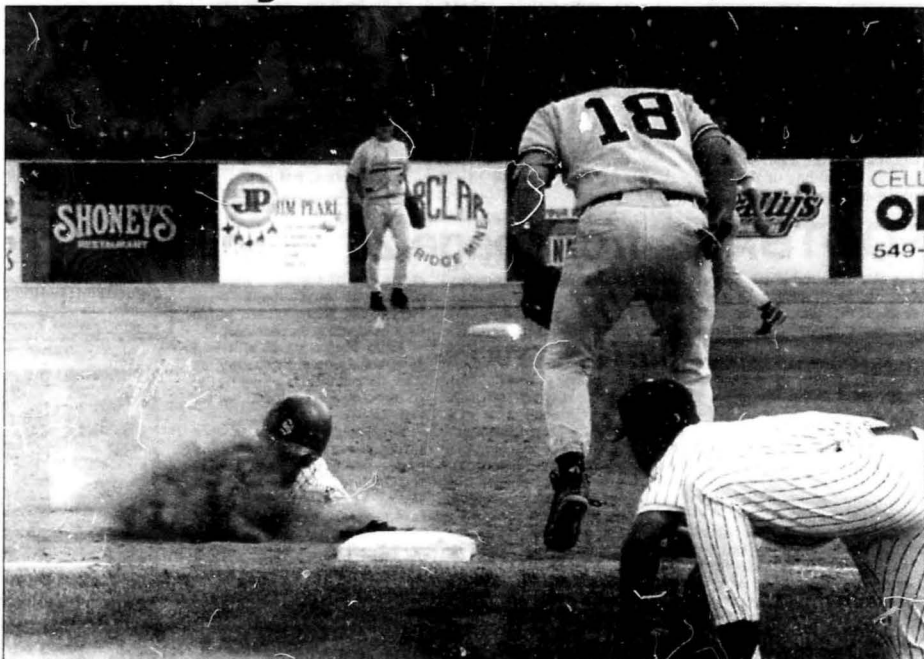

Sophomore Zac Adams came on in relief of Farrow and derailed the Evansville bats temporarily, while SIUC sparked at the plate.

Saluki senior Scott DeNoyer came through with a triple that knocked in two runs in the bottom of the fifth and shaved the Aces lead to 8-2.

Evansville came back with single insurance runs in the seventh and eighth, though, to push its margin back to eight runs heading into the ninth, 10-2.

Adams blanked the Aces in the top frame of the final inning and set the stage for the SIUC bats to take one final crack at a comeback.

being the 63rd Saluki player to be hit by a pitch this season and third of the game.

Sophomore Craig Shelton then cleared the bases with a two-run homer to left that drew the Dawgs to within six, 10-4.

Chris Saurich kept the Saluki hopes alive with a slicing double down the left field line and scored on a Dan Esplin grounder to make the score 10-5, but it's as close as the Dawgs would get.

Women's golf takes 2nd in MVC championships

by Karyn Viverito

Saluki golfer Dana Rasmus returned to the school she used to call home when SIUC traveled to Illinois State to compete in the Missouri Valley Conference championships.

In her homecoming, Rasmus led SIUC to a second-place finish in the championships with a career best performance.

Rasmus, the lone senior on the team, had transferred from ISU to SIUC to finish out her college career, and she did it with style.

Rasmus' career-high opening and closing rounds of 76 helped lead her to a fourth place finish overall individually, and her three round total of 234 was also a career-high.

Saluki coach Diane Daugherty said Rasmus knew it was her time to shine.

"It was a dream come true for her because she wanted to play well in front of her family and at her old school," she said. "She was very comfortable with the ball, knew the course well and handled the pressure."

Not only did Rasmus feel the pressure, but the whole Saluki team as well as they were projected to finish third in the championships.

While first place seemed to be locked in by conference foe, No. 8 nationally ranked Tulsa, it turned out to be a fight for second place in which the Salukis rose to the occasion, said Daugherty.

"Everyone felt Tulsa would be tops for they are an excellent golf school that has turned out many golfers on the LPGA tour, including Nancy Lopez, so that's a good indication of their talent," she said.

"Everyone knew we were playing for second, and I am elated that we finished there."

Four Salukis finished in the top 20, with Rasmus and junior Lieschen Eller finishing in the top 10.

For the first time all season, Eller was not the top Saluki finisher, but her performance still stood strong finishing seventh with a three round total of 238 (76-82-80).

Eller's stroke average for the year is 79.8 for 24 rounds which is a team best. Her season also included 11 rounds in the '70s.

Player named as alternate for North Team at festival

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

The SIUC basketball team kept a recent tradition alive when Christel Jefferson was named to be one of three alternates for the North Team at the 1994 U.S. Olympic Festival this summer in St. Louis, Mo.

This marks the second straight year that a Saluki has made the cut to participate in the Olympic Festival. Jefferson's current teammate Nikki Gilmore represented SIUC in 1993. Other Salukis who have participated include Bridget Bonds (1986), Cathy Kampwerth and Dana Fitzpatrick (1987) and Anita Scott (1991).

Jefferson was one of 310 participants at the North's regional trials this past weekend in Champaign. She made the grade after four rounds of cuts and will be under the tutelage of Arkansas coach Gary Blair.

Should one of Blair's top 12 players be unable to participate at USOF this summer, Jefferson could see some playing time.

SIUC assistant coach Julie Beck, who accompanied Jefferson to the tryouts, said Jefferson played her heart out at the tryouts.

"As the trials progressed, I felt more and more confident Christel was going to make the team," Beck said. "She played with as much emotion and

SIUC's Locke picks back-up for spikers

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The SIUC volleyball team recently signed three players to scholarships for the fall season.

The new spikers include Traci Eggers (Rantoul, Ill.), Monica

Harden (Spencer, Iowa) and Monique Galvin (Chicago).

Traci Eggers helped Rantoul Township High School capture a 22-10 record last fall. The 5-foot-11-inch setter/outside hitter is a Second Team All-State pick who led her team in kills, kill efficiency and service aces. She was second in block solos, block assists and digs.

SIUC volleyball coach Sonya Locke said Eggers will be used to aid the Saluki's right side weaknesses and to back-up Heather Herdes.

"Traci is physically strong and a powerful hitter," Locke said. "She has been trained a very well to play the right side. She is also versatile enough to help us in other areas of the court."

Coach takes role seriously

In rebuilding a college football program, a plan of attack is needed. Saluki head coach Shawn Watson is attacking.

As spring practices come to an end for SIUC football, Watson has analyzed not only his team, but what he has to do as a coach — and he is not backing off.

"Anyone that gets into a role of leadership is going to get hit from all angles, but I never look at it as things that overwhelm me. I just start swinging away and start attacking," Watson said. "It will just never paralyze me, and I will just go after it that much harder."

Watson said the number one
