African-American students look for ways to improve life at SIUC

SUCCESS: Students become more involved in activities as years go by.

MIKAL J. HARRIS DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

Editor's note: This is the first installment of a four-part series examining the quality of life for African-American students at SIUC.

Set to continue the inquiry into African-American life at SIUC initiated by the previous administration of the Black Affairs Councii, sophemore Sean Smith was elected as the next BAC coordinator April 20.

Undergraduate Student Government President candidate Sean Henry nearly became the second African-American student body leader in three years, placing second in elections April 15.

African-American greek organizations have consistently aided the Black Affairs Council in providing social outlets and other valuable support for SIUC's African-American students.

African-American athletes are highly visible in SIUC's largest athletic programs — some, such as the Minnesota Timberwolves' Chris Carr, have found professional success after attending SIUC.

African-American students have long been active in many segments of campus life as SIUC's historically largest ethnic minority. When many public institutions of higher learning barred African-American students long before the Civil Rights Movement gained momentum,

Special Report

SIUC was an exception. As a Northern school located almost next door to the Mason-Dixon line, SIUC not only attracted in-state African-American students, but also African-American students from segregated southern states.

Not many early surveys of SIUC's history, such as Eli Lentz's "Seenty-Five Years in Retrospect" published in 1955, acknowledged SIUC's African-American student population or the important role of the University during that bleak period of American history.

SIUC's African-American students generally have encountered a number of problems as minorities attending a predominantly white institution.

Cross-cultural social interaction with other students could have been very difficult in the early years of African-American enrollment. The spirit of students' hometown African-American communities was seldom mirrored in the campus climate.

The majority of the faces of administrators and instructors staring back at African-American students looked nothing like their own.

And in addition to navigating through their college years with these concerns, African-American students from working- or middle-class families may have needed extensive aid in covering the College of Education dean to be named soon

SEARCH: No official date set for dean replacement; next BOT meeting on May 14.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The College of Education dean search has been narrowed down to one candidate and the finalist awaits presentation to the SIU Board of Trustees by President Ted Sanders.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said he would not disclose the name of the candidate, citing the Board of Trustees concern of confidentiality.

The next Board of Trustees meeting is

The next Board of Trustees meeting is scheduled for May 14, but there is no word as to when the candidate will officially be announced.

"They don't like reading of these people in the paper before the name is announced," he said.

John Pohlmann, professor and chairman of educational psychology and special education and a candidate for dean, said he was cation and a candidate for dean, said he was informed of the provost's recommendation. He said Keith Hillkirk, assistant dean for Teacher Education and Partnerships and Teacher Education and Partnerships and associate professor of education at Ohio University, was recommended by Jackson.

"I got it from Dr. Jackson," Pohlmann

"When he called me on the phone he told me who he was going to contact."

Pohlmann said the official announcement is the one that should be trusted most.

"You really can't release this type of information until it is official," he said.

Hillkirk could not be reached for comment, although his secretary said he was in Carbondale for the weekend. His secretary would not say why Hillkirk was in Carbondale.

Margaret Winters, associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, said she could not confirm that Hillkirk was in for the weekend but said she knew he was recommended.

"I know he's been recommended, but I'd be careful," she said. "There are still decisions to be made."

Jackson would not confirm that Hillkirk has been recommended.

The recommendation came from the College of Education dean search committee and was forwarded to Jackson.

Jackson approved the recommendation and sent it to Chancellor Donald Beggs. Since Beggs' approval, it awaits the president's presentation to the Board of Trustees.

Upon the announcement of a new dean, interim dean Nancy Quisenberry will retire. Quisenberry has been dean for the College of Education for the past two years of her 27-year stay at SIUC.

Slie took over the role when Beggs was named interim chancellor, replacing John Guyon.

GPSC plants memorial for Beggs' legacy

REMEMBER: Chancellor Donald Beggs talks about his days at. SIUC next to a tree planted outside Wham Hall Monday afternoon. The October Glory maple tree was planted by GPSC in his honor.

TREE: Ceremony speech describes Beggs as an undying champion for the students.

> SARA BEAN DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

To symbolize the beginning of Chancellor Donald Beggs' legacy, the Graduate and Professional Student Council planted a tree in front of the Wham Education Building, which Beggs called home for many years as College of Education dean.

In a ceremony Monday after-noon, leaders from GPSC, Undergraduate Student Government, the Faculty Senate and Student Programming Council gathered with Beggs to plant an October Glory maple in his honor.

In his speech at the ceremony, GPSC President Tim Hoerman said Chancellor Beggs had been an "undying champion for the stu-dents and the University as whole" and this tree was a mo ment to his service.

"This tree is something tangible that will be seen for years to come, instead of just a plaque that might end up in a box some-where," Hoerman said after the ceremony. "He can return to this campus and remember his time

In his time as chancellor,

Beggs has had many obstacles to overcome, from declining student enrollment to negotiations between the faculty union and administration.

Beggs said he really appreciated this gesture from GPSC and the other constituencies.

"This was a surprise to me, I didn't know what they were doing until I saw the tree and the shovels," Beggs said. "The relationship with the students has been special.

"It is not unusual, but it is really nice in terms of the student dership."

The tree was paid for by GPSC, and other groups will be collecting money to purchase a bronze plaque to be placed at the base of

Waiting until last minute to do classwork spells trouble

FINALS: Students find balancing homework, socializing a strenuous task that repeats itself.

> TAMEKA L. HICKS DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Brian Smith faces repetition each year. Instead of balancing his time with classes, work and socializing throughout the semester, he tends to cram all his classwork into the last week of class.

Smith, a junior in psychology from St. Francisville, promises himself each semester that he will not repeat putting off a strenuous workload until the last week of class but his promise always fails.

"I say every semester that I'm not going to do that, but it came upon me faster than I thought," he said. "This semester went pretty approach. And he has no problem with putting forth that extra effort to meet end-of-semester deadlines.

Although he has had the entsemester to carry out his cla-assignments, Smith said it is hard to maintain high grades in every class.

"I'm on the borderline of getting a better grade," he said. "I'll still have a decent grade, but it will pull me up. I'm a couple of points from an 'A.' I know I could have done this a long time ago."

Mike Sasso, a freshman in administration of justice from Chicago, said he also tries to avoid

"crunch time," but it is in his nature to put his classwork off until the last minute. His workload for this week is occupying him so much that he has not even thought about finals

"It's very difficult," Sasso said. "Sometimes I'll stay home on a Saturday to get eaught up. Once I try to get ahead, I just stop and put it off. When I'm at home I get distracted easily. It just doesn't work at

When the semester winds down, he is sometimes approached by stu-dents who are suddenly concerned about their grades.

"When they figure their grades aren't going be the grade they want, all of a sudden they're asking for extra credit, which is a little late at that time," Kohler said. "And I just don't give extra credit. Then I will have to make it available to every-

College of Liberal Arts dean search extended another year

COLA: Dean finalist drops out; committee not enthusiastic about alternates.

Spring Thing passed University's test

Saturday's Spring Thing event was successful and one of the most positive events on campus in years. That success should cement a permanent activity for SIUC students to look forward to each

The event simply was a performance by Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers, but that alone drew about 9,000 people to McAndrew Stadium. 20,000, the turnout was good considering the rainy, windy weather early Saturday. The attendance of Spring Thing points toward a need and demand for similar events.

Students were remarkably well-behaved. In light of speculation, it was proudly reported there were no arrests, and, as SIUC Police Lt. Andrew Smith said, "the crowd was real friendly and well behaved." If the University was using this event as a test for future events, then it is safe to say we passed.

The last spring event t SIUC sponsored was the disastrous Spring Fest that, after a few years, exploded into a drunken melee. The University has been very adamant about sponsoring another spring festival. Spring Fest caused the administrators to lose faith in the student body, which the students did not help by pulling infamous Halloween

SIUC Chancellor Don Beggs said Monday that the organizers of Spring Thing should be proud of their accomplishment. And even though Beggs was out of town Saturday, he was concerned enough about the event's success to call Vice Chancellor for Administration Jim Tweedy for an update. After receiving a positive report from Tweedy, Beggs said Monday the "students have demonstrated through the past year and this event that they can behave in a responsible way."

The entire campus should take note of Beggs' confidence in the student body. Students, faculty and administrators should begin investing in future events, and the administration should not hesitate to allow and assist future attempts. Carbondale and the University are at their finest when the weekends are packed with positive and highly visible events. Maybe there should be more focus groups and task forces working to organize promotional and entertaining activities like Spring Thing rather than "creating" traditions and regulating a dead Halloween celebration.

The burden of organizing campus events should not be placed on administrators and SPC alone.

The entire University community needs to contribute by performing as they did Saturday.

It was good to see RSOs contribute both physically and economically to the concert, but they need to become more involved. Out of the more than 400 Registered Student Organizations on this campus, not one had a table set up to help promote their organization.

The Ziggy Marley show was done by the students, with a little help from the city. It was done to show the school that it could be done. If students themselves were able to accomplish such a uccessful event, imagine what could happen if the University's administrators played a bigger role.

Clearly some of the basic tenets of various religions and of "non-religious" world views

We need a world view that is logically con-sistent, adequate to deal with the harsh realities of life and benevolent toward others. Unionization helps bring faculty together

Some recent letters to the Daily Egyptian and a guest column have focused on the alleged negative affects of the SIUC faculty organizing. I will attempt to address some of these concerns by using Steve Scheiner's ("Guest Column", March 31) allegations as a base.

Scheiner alleges that, "The campus has been reversed from a community of schol-ars working toward a common ideal to an industrial model...." Interesting, but I never saw faculty working together toward com-mon ideals before we organized. I saw independent scholars (myself included) working to further their own professional careers without regard for the collective University.

Since we organized, I have for the first time met and worked with more faculty across various departments and colleges than ever before. And for the first time we are working toward common ideals. I also have never seen the faculty become so concerned about students' issues either until now. It has actually been one of the most enriching professional experiences of my life. Our campus, for the first time, is vibrant.

Concerns by Scheiner and other recent writers to the Egyptian concerning our following an industrial model and our behaving like common laborers and craftspersons instead of "professionlead me to suspect a bit of elitism on their parts. But putting aside the fact that I personally am proud to work alongside SIUC's painters, electricians, police, clerical workers, printers, etc., these writers seem unaware that other professionals, such as screenwriters, musicians, physicians and pilots are also organized and even members of the AFL-CIO.

Scheiner alleges that funds appropriated by the state for salary increases have been refused by the faculty association. This is not so. They could release those funds to us tomorrow if they wished. They will not, however, because they first want us to agree that the meager (3 percent) increase will be all we ask for. They have been hanging the 3 percent over our heads in hopes that their threats of losing it will make us cave in.

Scheiner asks, "Why are we told that after 16 months the bargaining teams have yet to discuss salary?" Because the administration refused to work from the already existing staff handbook to settle the issues that should have been easier to settle than salary, first.

Scheiner alleges that SIUC President Ted Sanders has been criticized for his K-12 background when the union's own mailings suggest that NEA has little interest in higher education. I have not heard or read any specific criticism concerning Sanders' K-12 background, although it may help explain why he seems to lack the competence to sit down with his faculty (without outside lawyers) and work out an agreement as many other newly organized campuses have done through interest-based bargaining. I would have thought that our administrators had enough higher education experience to be able to discuss issues related to tenure and promotion and programs and salaries, especially when SIUC already had a mature faculty handbook from which to work. The faculty seems to have enough experience and competence to come to the bargaining table without lawyers; too bad the administration of the salaries and the istration apparently doesn't.

I was one of the two delegates who voiced concern over the IEA's lack of experience in higher education. (Evidence that union members do practice free speech?) This was to be expected because SIUC is IEA's first organized four-year state institution. However, the NEA represents over 100,000 higher educators and it is likely that the NEA and the AFT will merge soon and this merger will likely benefit those of us in higher education even Either way, becoming the first four-year institution with IEA allows us the unique opportunity and challenge to work with the IEA in the collegial and democratic sprit that characterizes the association (far more than it has characterized the University) to help higher education achieve its rightful place within the organi-zation. Although the IEA and all labor unions for that matter are imperfect, I am now thoroughly convinced that in our case it was preferable to not organizing.

Scheiner states, "We are committing institutional suicide; enough is enough." Well said. The sooner the administration begins to negotiate seriously (instead of intentionally dragging this on in hopes that collective bargaining will fail), the sooner we will be able to abandon our campaign to expose their abuses of university vehicles, internal re-allocations of funds to enhance their own salaries above the 3 percent requested from the state etc. If you ask me, they are committing institutional homicide. Finally, one can never be sure why a colleague like Steve Scheiaer feels so strongly that SIUC did not need to organize. SIUC's published salary figures (available on the fourth floor of the library) suggest he has been allocated a 34 percent raise for this year. You can draw your own conclusions.

After careful consideration, Philip Burke has made the decision to enhance and expand his musical career. Burke, a second-year graduate student in opera and nusic theater has gained the respect and accolades of several volunteers. "Friends of Philip Burke" have agreed to help aid him in his quest by organizing several con-certs to assist in raising funds to support Burke's European tour.

A series of concerts — the first scheduled for 8 tonight at the First Christian Church, 306 Monroe S. — have been designed by the eager volunteers.

The goal of the concerts are to raise finds to series Purch to testing Kroot, a sophomore in radio/television from Hoffman Estates, went to Chicago at the end of the spring semester last year to visit his grandparents. There Kroot was introduced to two relatives he had never met.

One of the two people he met step uncle k. It turned Wawrzeniak. Wawrzeniak is the assistant cameraman for "Seinfeld."

Kroot said he never knew he was related to someone that works on the top-rated television show in the nation today.

"I've been a 'Seinfeld' fan for a long time," Kroot said. "If you would have told me I had a step uncle on 'Seinfeld', I would have said you were crazy. That thought never existed in my head." Wawrzeniak told Kroot to visit the 'Seinfeld' set when he was on break from school.

Kroot took him up on the offer this spring break.

On the way to Studio City, Calif., Kroot jokingly said he dreamt about the episode he was dreamt about the episode he was going to see. He hoped the episode would be about Kramer's long lost son but that the hired actor they hired became sick and NBC execu-

Kroot spent 40 hours on the Seinfeld set shooting a scene in the coffee shop. He said he could be seen in the background over the shoulder of Jerry Seinfeld.

Throughout the course of his stay on the set, Kroot met and took pictures with Jerry Seinfeld, who plays himself, Jason Alexander, plays George, and Julia Kroot said he was not able to get a picture with Michael Richards, who plays Kramer, because Richards was in a rush to leave the set the final day of taping.
The show will air April 30 at 8

The episode Kroot is on is named, "The Maid," Kroot would only reveal certain aspects of the show so as not to not give the entire plot away. He said Jerry has a relationship with his maid, Kramer gets involved in a long dis-tance relationship, George tries to up with a new nickname for himself and Elaine needs a new telephone number.

The series finale will air May 14 at the same time on the same channel. Kroot said he has no knowledge of what the final show is about. The subject of the final show still looms as east members Scinfeld executives have imposed a gag order on their employees.

While on the set, Kroot was careful not to make the wrong move around anyone from the cast.

"I was timid all week long," he said. 'Tim went through a lot to get me there. The last thing I wanted to do was piss people off."

cost of their SIUC educations.

Those concerns notwithstanding, African-American students are pic tured on the steps of Altgeld Hall in an instructor's class 1 oto as early as 1908. SIUC traditionally has enjoyed a significant African-American student enrollment compared to other state schools — even as the campus battles falling enrollment and a decline in its international numbers in the '90s.

But SIUC administrators may find themselves working harder to maintain that tradition. Ninety years after that class photo was taken, SIUC's African-American students saying those concerns still are significant.

At the April 2 Black Affairs Council town half meeting, administrators and students were invited to examine and discuss the research compiled by the BAC Task Force on African-American Student Concerns during the 1997-98 school

The council's research was based heavily on an earlier comprehensive survey by the SIUC administration. Both research methods produced similar results.

In "A Survey of African-American Life at SIUC," a study released in October, students overwhelmingly reported needs for increased financial aid, additional African-American courses, faculty, administrators and staff, improved academic services, and additional cultural and social activities at

Two-hundred eleven of SIUC's 2,654 undergraduate African-American students completed the survey, which was administered last fall by Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the chancellor and SIUC affirmative action officer.

In an attempt to focus on some of ese needs, SIUC administrators these needs. and students have provided some insight about the need for increased ncial aid for African-American students, an in-depth look at African-American enrollment and the challenges African-American

The remaining parts of this series will examine African-American students' needs for additional African-American faculty and additional social and cultural activities. A spesocial and cultural activities. A spe-cial story also will focus on admin-istrators' concerns about the acade-mic progress of SIUC's African-American basketball players.

The Survey
First undertaken in 1986, the annual report examines the institutional racial climate for undergraduate students. Reasons why African-American students attend and stay at SIUC, impressions of the campus racial climate, faculty behavior, and needs and concerns are among the areas evaluated in the survey.

Bryson said survey results have generally remained the same in recent years. But some reported needs of African-American students, such as counseling, have had a marked change in the last decade.

"In 1987, students felt that counseling was in the top three in being adequately provided," he said. "In 1997 there was a greater need for this. It was not adequate. Students felt the University was not provid-

Bryson said results varied on a number of factors in the survey, but the research should not be used as a general tool to measure the sentiments of SIUC's entire African-American population.

"We cannot categorize all African-American students," he said. "The needs of freshmen are different than the need of seniors. The more time students have spent on campus, the more they are able to critically analyze a situation.

"All African-American students don't think alike — and that's OK."

Enrollment

As a public university, SIUC strives to have a diverse student body and staff comparable to the diversity of the state of Illinois.

Out of the 11.4 million Illinois residents reported in the 1990 U.S. Census, 1.7 million, or 15 percent, were African-Americans. African-American students make up 13.7 percent of SIUC's total enrollment, and 15 percent of its undergraduate enrollment. Chicago State University — with an African-American enrollment of 8,002 in fall 1996 --- is the only state university with a larger African-American population than SIUC, according to a March 1998 Illinois Board of Higher Education report.

Known as Southern Illinois Normal University when it opened July 2, 1874, SIUC has enjoyed a long history of African-American enrollment that can be traced to the very early 20th century. About 10 African-American students out of more than 300 SIUC students are pictured in a 1908 photo of the stu-dent body in the book "Southern Illinois University, A Pictorial Illinois " History

John Jackson, vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost, maintaining SIUC's American student enrollment is a source of pride for the institution.

"We've always been heavily ori-ented toward minority students," he "We were never a segregated institution, and we should take pride in that fact. [Before the Civil Rights Movement] we were the second leading university in the nation in terms of enrolling minorities - primarily African-American num-

Those numbers were boosted by SIUC's SIUC's geographic location. Situated near the Missouri and Kentucky borders, Southern Illinois is near the Mason-Dixon boundary that once separated the free states of the North from the slave states of the South. Slavery once existed in a small area of Southern Illinois most likely because of the areas' proximity to Southern states.

After slavery, legal segregation through Jim Crow laws became a way for Southern whites to oppress African-Americans. One of the countless damaging results was that outside of historically black colleges, African-Americans could not enroll in many state universities in the South.

As African-Americans fled the South in droves during the Great Migration to the North, many African-American students jour neyed to Northern universities such as SIUC. Despite the slavery once existing in the Southern Illinois region and the attitudes of areas only miles away, African-Americans were able to prosper at SIUC

We got an enormous flow of talented people who wanted to go to school, but could not because of the Southern segregated schools," Jackson said. "We were the first stop heading North. It was mark of some courage for the [University] leaders of that time."

Financial Aid

On a four-part scale of importance, 67.9 percent of African-American students surveyed said increased financial aid was a prominent need. Nearly 50 percent of these students said the availability of financial support was the most significant reason why they decided to attend SIUC, and 44.9 percent said financial support was the mos significant reason why they remained at SIUC.

The surveyed African-American students' outcry for increased financial aid could signal imminent prob-

Bryson points to the escalating cost of a college education as the reason behind these results. A recent national survey indicated a 5 per-cent average increase in tuition and fees at four-year public and private institutions. SIUC doled out more than $127 million in financial aid to more than 20,000 students in 1997.

The issue of financial aid seems to be more of a concern because the cost to attend college is going up," Bryson said, "When most students look at institutions, they don't look at where to go but where they can afford to go. That has traditionally been a concern of African-Americans, and SIUC has a large African-American enrollment.

In recognizing the general finan cial needs of its students, SIUC offers a variety of financial support including scholarships, grants, loans and work-study packages.

Black Affairs

Council Coordinator Tiffany Thomas, who is preparing a task force to investigate concerns of the SIUC African-American population, says many African-American students have approached her with a concern for how that support is distributed.

"My No. 1 major concern is the financial aid allocation of money," she said. "African-American students are more likely to have to get federal work study instead of grants, and I believe that the grant money is

Financial Aid Director Pamela Britton, said Thomas has not contacted her with this concern, but Britton said this claim has little

"The concerns expressed by African-American students are the same for all students as they seek ways to curb tuition costs and cut loans," she said. "That's a perva-sive issue for all students."

Chancellor Donald Beggs is familiar with students' concerns about financial aid as SIUC's head administrator, but knowing stu-dents' needs and filling them often is difficult.

As a public institution, SIUC depends on taxpayer money allocated by the state government. The school competes with the state's 11 other four-year universities and 49 community colleges — the third-largest community college system in the nation — for that money. Work-study programs, campus jobs paid by money set aside by the fed-eral government, help stretch avail-able financial aid for many univer-

Britton said any financial aid that would target African-American students specifically would have to come from outside sources. Government-provided Title IV funding for schools to use as student financial aid is based on need, not ethnicity.

Beggs sees work-study pack-ages as a valuable resource for all students in need, and a resource for the University as well.

"This institution takes great pride in offering work-study packages," he said. "We also know the needs of all students, including African-American students.

"We have a limited amount of financial aid. Are we better off giving full packages to fewer students or would it be better to give students work opportunities so we can spread the financial resources among students? It's a hard call. Dr. Bryson and I have talked about this on a regular basis."

Although Beggs will leave the chancellor's office July 1, he is concerned with this expressed need of African-American students and says the results of the October survey are consistent with the results of past surveys.

But Beggs believes this need is a greater issue than indicated in those surveys. He is unsure whether insight into the problem alone is enough to set a clear path for both students and administrators.

"The data does not tell us what to do — if it did we'd be doing it," Beggs said. "It's an issue that's going to get more critical as the years go on."

The present
SIUC actively recruits students from Chicago's inner city and suburbs, and 30 percent of SIUC students are from Cook County and the surrounding area.

Much of SIUC's African-American student population realts from these efforts. Bryson, New Student Admissions and such roups as SIUC's Black Alumni Council also provide strong recruiting efforts for the University.

But once African-American students attend SIUC, graduating within the traditional four years seems to be an obstacle for the majority of them - although less than half of all entering SIUC freshmen graduate within six years. By 1996, only 21.6 percent of African-American freshmen entering in 1990 had graduated within six

Undergraduate African-American students' 1997 mean grade point average of 2.46 is below the 2.84 average of white SIUC students. The average undergraduate GPA in 1997 was 2.78. The 1997 average was an improvement, as African-American stu-dents' average GPA had remained average GPA had remained below 2.4 during the 1990s.

But African-American students' aduation rates and grades consistently remain below the averages attained by white students and undergraduate students in general.

"As we try to increase the GPA numbers and try to improve graduation rates," Bryson said, "we need to decrease the gap between black and white students. It will let us know we're making progress. One method of closing that gap is providing African-American students with a vast array of campus

According to Bryson, a large ercentage of all entering African-American students are admitted through the Center For Basic Skills program. Since 1969, the center has provided academic advisecounseling, orientation, and free tutoring for freshmen --regardless of race -- who are designated as needing extra support services. That designation can include a number of factors, such as high school classes taken and college entrance exam scores.

Bryson said the Basic Skills Center is a successful counseling program that also is available to all students upon request.

"Anyone who wants help can come in," he said. "We wouldn't turn them down. They would have access to our services.

University services are not the only assistance African-American students can find at SIUC. Black Affairs Council member Brian Jordan said the council also can provide this help for students.

"If you have problems with your grades, there are people have [in the council] who will help you," he said. "And if we can't help you, we'll find someone who can."

But as students and administrators seek to turn those numbers around — as well as address other needs of African-American stu-dents — finding student support for these efforts may be a challenge.

Beggs, Bryson and Jim Scales, director of University Career Services, accepted the council member's invitation to attend its wn hall meeting April 2.

About 45 students attended the meeting. More African-American students were present at a social event mocking "The Jerry Springer Show" that was scheduled on canipus after the town hall meeting.

Council task force member Timothy Oden, a senior in finance from Chicago, was not pleased by African-American students' lack of response.

He believes it may be difficult to address the needs of African American students' without their support. "We've been conditioned to complain about our condition," he said, "and our priorities are put into entertainment and not in enrichment and education.

"We can't just say what we want and complain about what we need. We have to fight for what we need and support what we want."

athletes must meet the same requirements of regular students.

Our procedures for student employment will remain the same for athletes or non-athletes," Britton said.

But SIUC velleyball coach Sonya Locke, whose team is allowed only one full scholarship per year, does not expect many of her players to ave jobs.

Locke said the demanding schedule of an athlete will cause interference. Her feam practices two hours daily and plays about 30 games during the fall

To be really honest, I don't think it really matters because for the most part they aren't going to have time," Locke said. "Between the time we take away from with practices. I can't see that hap-

Concerns with athletes missing class time and declining grade point averages surface when the idea is mentioned. SIUC Assistant Athletic Director Nancy Bandy said the extra money will prevent athletes from coming to her with money problems, but it is not only poor demic performances she fears.

The new guidelines create possibilifor the ruling to be abused, especially by the major universities. Higher-paying and less stressful jobs might be effective recruiting tool for larger schools with more money to offer.

Also, athletes will not be required to work strictly on campus. This can pro-vide the perfect opportunity for athletic club boosters, who own local businesses, to take advantage of the system.

Bandy said it will be difficult for the rest of the Athletic Department to regu-late the behavior of the athletes and diam'r.

"I have mixed feeling-about it se on the one hand, yes? I do want them to have the opportunity, but I do worry," Bandy said. "It's going to cause a deal of more work for me in terms of; monitoring.

This is one area where we have had a lot of violations and not necessarily just at SIU. I think only time will tell how good it will be.

Bandy hopes the boosters learned a valuable lesson from the last time SIUC experienced NCAA regulation problems. In 1985, the men's ball team had questions raised about accepting gifts from alumni.

"Most of our boosters, I think, learned back in 1985 when we had a major one in basketball," Bandy said. It can hurt the whole program and not just one sport.

"So, I'm hoping that people in this community who help us out will be very honest and attempt to do it right. If not, it's going to be the athlete and ath-letic program that's going to get penal-ized more than the booster. We'll do the best that we can and trust that the athletes follow the rules, as well as the boosters.

Men netters' improvements show as they better last year's record, finish sixth in MVC tourney.

PAUL WLEKLINSKI DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's tennis team has made small improvements all season, and last weekend's Missouri Valley Conference Championships was another step in the right direction.

The Salukis topped their record of a year ago of 5-12 sea-son record and a 2-7 MVC mark with an 8-13 overall record and 3-6 in MVC play this year. The small improvement resulted in a seventh seed in the 1998 MVC Championships, one seed higher than in 1997.

The Salukis continued their progress as they finished sixth in the MVC Championships at Illinois State University this weekend

The first two matches of the weekend went as planned for coach Brad Iftner as the Salukis defeated the No. 10 seed University of Northern Iowa 4-2. They moved on to face No. 2 seed Indiana State University, losing 4-0.

After losing to Creighton University in their final match of the regular season 4-3, the Salukis gained revenge by defeating the Bluejays 4-1, to guarantee a fifth- or sixth-place finish. The Salukis defeated No. 5 seed Illinois State University 4-3 during the regular season but fell 4-1 to claim sixth.

When I came here two years ago, my job was not to maintain the level of the program," Iftner said. "We are making small strides, and we are definitely improving."

SIUC defeated the University of Northern Iowa 6-1 during the regular season and expected the same result as they began the tournament Friday morning. The Salukis started the match slowly, dropping the doubles point and ig 1-0 to begin the singles matches.

The Salukis finally got it going and picked up victories in the top-four spots, overcoming the deficit to claim the 4-2 victo-

"We were not playing to our potential in the doubles," Iftner said. "We looked tired and [UNI] played very well, maybe as well as they are capable of."

The Salukis entered their second match of the weekend as the underdog to Indiana State, who handed SIUC a 7-0 defeat during the regular season. Indiana State swept every match again to claim an easy 4-0 victory. Brad Iftner knew that the final two opponents of the champi-onships would be a mirror image of the talent level of his own team. The Salukis faced Th Creighton, to h they lost 4-3 in the final match of the regular University, hich they defeated 4-3 in the season.

SIUC began the match with Creighton strong, picking up two victories in the doubles matches victors in the adults infantises to start singles play 1-0. Senior Mick Smyth and junior Jack Oxler defeated Creighton's Haakon Nygaard and Carl Heine 8-2, while freshman Kenny Hutz and senior Brian Etzkin defeated Magnus Muller and Brandon Greenwood, 8-3.

"I couldn't ask for a better way to start," Iftner said. "We gave them no hope going in the singles matches."

In singles competition, Hutz defeated Nygaard 6-1, 6-3, in the No. 1 spot, while Smyth defeated Heine 7-5, 6-1, in the No. 2 spot. Junior Brian Ingle stepped up to give the Salukis their fourth point for the victory with a defeat of Greenwood 6-3, 6-2.

That is the best I have ever seen (Ingle) play all year," Iftner said. "He could not have chosen a better time to play his best to give us the winning point."

The victory over Creighton guaranteed SIUC either a fifth- or sixth-place finish. The Salukis fell 4-1 to Illinois State University to claim sixth place.

The Redbirds dominated the Salukis' doubles teams, sweeping the two matches played. In their final matches of their careers, Smyth and Etzkin led the Saluki fight but came up short.

After two previous defeats to Chris Klepper, Smyth ended his SIUC career defeating Klepper 7-5, 6-2. Etzkin refused to give up in his final match but eventully, fell to Dan Rosu 6-0, 7-6. Etzkin began the second set down 4-0, retaliated to tie the set at 6-6 but lost the tie-breaker 12-10.

"Brian is such a fighter," Iftner said. "And he would not have it any other way. It will be a match I will never forget.

In his second season as SIUC men's tennis coach, Iftner knows that this season has been another step forward and should continue next season.

With recruiting and hard work, I think we can be a top-four (squad) next season," Iftner

Wichita State University defeated Indiana State University in the championship MVC crown.
Missouri Statto claim the Southwest University claimed third place after defeating Drake University.

U.S. women's soccer team routs Argentina 7-0

RAGGED: Sunday's victory comes on heels of Friday's 8-1 pasting of Argentina.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SAN JOSE, Calif. — "Some days," Mia Hamm was saying Sunday, "it's based on who wants it more, not on who's more talented or who's fitter or who's faster, but who wants it more

On Sunday afternoon, in front an enthusiastic crowd of 14,608 at Spartan Stadium, it was clear who that someone was.

Hamm and her United States women's national team teammates ran Argentina ragged for 90 minutes en route to a 7-0 vic-tory. Coupled with Friday night's I win at Fullerton, the United States has left quite an impres-sion on the South Americans.

Hamm, in particular, will haunt them for months.

After scoring two goals and assisting on four others Friday, she was held without a goal Sunday but created three and caused a fourth. One of them was to longtime friend and mentor Michelle Akers that made the score 3-0 just before the end of the first half.

You put her in front of the goal with the ball at her foot, 99 percent of the time the ball's going in the back of the net,' Hamm said of Akers.

The goal came off a corner kick, with Hamm floating the ball high into the goal area and Akers rising above the defense to power home a header. Hamm had no doubt that Akers would

"I was telling her at halftime, there was no question in my I." she said.

"As soon as the ball left my foot and I looked up, that ball was going in the back of the net.

She wanted it."

The goal was the 96th of Akers' 117-game international career.

She and Hamm are closing in on an astounding 100 goals apiece for the U.S. team. Hamm, who has 87 goals in 145 games, says there is no race, however.

All I care about is that we win," she said.

"If that means that Michelle is scoring all the goals or Tiffeny Milbrett or Julie Foudy, that's

"I think we're working really well as a team right now. Milbrett and I have been talking a lot about getting that cohesive ness up front, working off each other. It's working well now and I like it because she's such a threat. I think she has the best technical speed in the world.

Argentina found that out to its cost once again on Sunday. Milbrett, who scored a hat trick Friday, netted two more goals Sunday, both off passes from

Also making it a long day for the South Americans' defense were Kristine Lilly, who opened the scoring a mere 2:25 into the game; Brandi Chastain, who scored on a penalty kick after Hamm had been upended by Argentina's Maria Villanueva after beating two other players;

Capping a long day for Argentina, Andrea Arce deflected the ball into her own net off a Debbie Keller shot in the 76th minute to give the U.S. its seventh goal.

Long before that, U.S. Coach
Tony DiCicco had virtually emptied his bench, bringing in, for the most part, younger and less experienced players, including Notre Dame's Kate Sobrero, who made her national team

Given the level of talent in the U.S., DiCicco easily could field two competitive teams in next summer's FIFA Women's World Championship.

Championship.

"It's very competitive in camp, and that's the way it should be," he said.
"Everybody's fighting for positions. I think it's good that we have that type of depth because nobody can sit still and think that they can just have a position granted to them."

North Carolina's Jamison leaving school for NBA

Antawn Jamison, college basketball's Player of the Year, is skipping his senior year at the University of North Carolina to enter the NBA.

"If I would have stayed, it would have been for selfish reasons like breaking records," Jamison said during a campus news conference Monday. "Once you really think about it, there's not much more to accomplish, other than maybe winning a national championship.

The 6-foot-9 forward, whose team lost to the University of Utah in the NCAA semifinals, said he reached the decision last Wednesday after consulting with coach Bill Guthridge and former coach Jamison is the 13th player to declare early for the NBA draft, joining such players as Mike Bibby of Arizona, Paul Pierce of Kansas and Robert Traylor of Michigan. Among the 13 are two high school players.

Jamison said a key element in his decision was that he can graduate after the second session of summer school this year, ahead of his senior class.

"I am so close to two goals that I want the NBA and graduating," he said. "It was an opportunity I couldn't pass up."

In helping Jamison reach his decision,
Smith said he contacted the top 16 teams in the NBA draft. Smith is confident Jamison will be among the first selections

"I would be shocked if he wasn't in the top five," Smith said.

Jamison averaged 22.2 points and 10.5 rebounds this season and joined Michael Jordan as the only Tar Heels player to be chosen Player of the Year by the AP. Jamison also won the John Wooden Award and was selected Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference after leading the Tar Heels to their second straight conference championship, a 34-4 record and their fifth Final Four of the

You don't replace someone like Antawn," Guthridge said. "You just regroup."

Duncan runs away with Rookie of the Year honor

San Antonio's Tirn Duncan, already considered one of the best players in the NBA, overwhelmingly won the league's Rookie of the Year award Monday.

Duncan, the first rookie to play in the All-Star game since Grant Hill in 1995, received 113 of a possible 116 votes (97 percent) from a panel of NBA writers and broadcasters. New Jersey's Keith Van Horn got the other three votes.

The margin of victory was the biggest since Shaquille O'Neal received 98 percent of the vote in 1992-93.

"It's a goal I had coming into this year," Duncan said in San Antonio after receiving the Rookie of the Year trophy.
"I wanted to play well this year and win this ewent!" this award."

With the addition of Duncan, plus David Robinson's return from ankle and back injuries, the Spurs improved by an NBA-record 36 wins over their 1996-97 mark. San Antonio set another league record by holding opponents to 41.1 per-record by nothing opponents to The Per-cent shooting.

Duncan, the first pick in last year's NBA draft, averaged 21.1 points, 11.9
rebounds, 2.7 assists, 2.5 blocks per game

The Salukis entered the MVC Championships in Normal with the No. 4 seed, a ranking expected by coach Judy Auld. The Salukis faced Indiana State University for the third consecutive season in the first round of the MVC Championships.

The Salukis suffered their sixth 5-4 loss of the season, falling to Indiana State in the opening round of the MVC Championships in Terre Haute, Ind.

To top that disappointment, Indiana State defeated SIUC for the third consecutive time in MVC Championships. The Salukis could only hope for a top finish of fith place.

The Salukis went on to defeat Bradley
University 6-0, Southwest Missouri State University 6-3 and the University of Northern lowa 5-4 to claim fifth place.

The Salukis proved they could beat Indiana State when they defeated them 5-4 during the regular season. Both teams split the singles competition to begin doubles play tied 3-3. The Salukis would need two of the three doubles matches for the victory. the No. 2 doubles team, as senior Helen Johnson and freshman Keri Crandall defeated Ann-Sofia Bengtsson and Erika Hirth 8-4.

"It came down to whoever played the best tennis on that day," Auld said.

The loss eliminated SIUC from a top-four finish in the tournament. The Salukis needed to win the next three matches to get the fifth-

The Salukis defeated the No. 10 seed Northern Iowa 6-0. Senior Sanem Berksoy finally surpassed Maureen Harney with 120 career singles victories to become SIUC's all-time winningest player. Berksoy defeated Bradley's Alpna Jain in an easy 6-0, 6-0 vic-

"She would have preferred to get the record against Indiana State," Auld said, "It was kind of anti-climactic, but it is a good achievement."

The Salukis swept all six singles matches without losing a single set. The two teams did not play the doubles portion of the meet since the Salukis had already settled the match.

SIUC then faced Southwest Missouri State University immediately after the Bradley match. Weather forced the match to a gym on the Indiana State campus. The gym floor was marked with many different lines, including basketball lines and volleyball lines. The background blended in with the tennis ball, causing chaos for both teams. Berksoy had trouble locating the ball and struggled in losing to Tuva Hegna 6-2, 6-1.

"Not making any excuses, but some peo-ple can make better adjustments than others," Auld said. "Sanem had no idea where the ball

With both teams battling the surroundings, the two teams entered doubles competition tied 3-3 again. The Salukis again needed two of the three matches, but swept all three for the 6-3 victory.

SIUC then beat Northern Iowa for the fifth-place finish. Once again, the Salukis split the six singles matches to enter doubles tied 3-3. Johnson led the way, defeating Melanie Becker 6-4, 6-0. Junior Maria Villarreal defeated Karen Olson 6-1, 6-0 while Crandall defeated Lisa Shanley 6-1,

The Salukis got the two needed doubles wins to claim the victory. The doubles team of Johnson and Crandall came up with an 8-6 victory while juniors Villarreal and Jennifer Robison claimed an easy 8-0 win.

"[UNI] has improved tremendously after getting new recruits," Auld said. "I am glad we were finally able to turn a 5-4 loss into a

In their first season playing together, Johnson and Crandall were selected to the All-Conference team as the No. 2 doubles team. Individual honors included senior Molly Card and Berksoy, who were named to the All-Select team consisting of the top six players in the MVC.

"(UNI) was a big win for us Sunday," Auld said. "The selections were just the icing on the cake. It's a nice achievement to have other coaches in the conference show respect to these players and their abilities."

Wichita State University defeated Indiana
State University for the MVC crown. Illinois

State University took third place, defeating Drake University.
"I don't like having a losing record," Auld said. "The record does not show the strength of this team. We had a good year, but the Indiana State loss was disappointing. We finished strong, and overall it was nice to finished strong before with the team and the players being recognized."
