'Falstaff' Promises Sparkling Entertainment

As the cast for "Falstaff" scurried about, Mary Elaine Wallace, director of musical productions for the School of Music, was busy checking details for a recent session with press photo-graphers. She was noticably tense, and had a great deal of concern that everything was just right. Waiting for the photographers, the

Despite the trials of rehearsal, things are shaping up nicely for the March 3 opening of the opera "Falstaff" which should prove to be a magnificent presentation by the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater.

"Falstaff" is a comic masterpiece. It is a very lively story, involving difficult music. Hardly to be thought of as a "stuffy" opera, the action in six scenes goes fast and orchestration is excellent, Mrs. Wallace said

The costuming, handled by Richard Boss, is outstanding. The costume of Falstaff will attest to that fact as will the other outfits. Boss has been

At the recent photographic session with the cast, McFadden laughingly grumbled, "It took the better part of the afternoon to put on this costume and makeup—nearly four hours."

The set and lighting for "Falstaff" has have been designed by Darwin Payne, assistant professor in theater. He has previously been scenic designer for the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater.

Careful attention by Mrs. Wallace has been paid to the sets, costumes and lighting as they are key elements of the opera picture as a whole. Mrs. Wallace points out in her prepared guide, "Let's go to the Opera," that visual awareness of audiences has dictated that these factors receive close scrutinization.

In scenes where there is a great deal of spontaneous action, a lot of preparation must go into the set to give the right positioning and balance. "This ensemble opera poses some problems because of the large number of people involved. Here you have to be careful, and you must have planned movement," Mrs. Wallace emphasized showing a model of the stage.

Concert Fee Could be Answer to Financial Woe

As long as there has been a Univer-As long as there has been a Univer-sity, there has probably been a Univer-sity Orchestra. The orchestra's begin-nings are uncertain—it simply exists, as part of the educational institution that is SIU.

During the past three years—that is, since James Stroud and Richard Strawn became co-directors—the orchestra has doubled its numbers, its activities and its enthusiasm.

"We appear to be a connival group," joked Stroud. "Morale in the group is way, way up from when I started here."

The orchestra, now numbering about 90 players, as well as presenting several free concerts a year, breaks into smaller groups for such presen-tations as the SIU Chamber Orchestra and the Opera Orchestra.

"There was a time when there was a great deal more trouble," recalled Stroud. "There was not enough people

When Stroud and Strawn took over the orchestra they decided to recruit and reactivate the orchestra. They recruited people who had played in high school and "went to great lengths to recruit outside the School of Music," said Stroud.

The University Orchestra is about one-third funded through student activities money "and funding is always a serious problem for any activity that is even partially student funded."

Making the problem even more serious is a recent edict from George (amilla student heat)

Camille, student body president, that the Student Senate Constitution prevents student money going to any activity connected to an academic unit.

"He's going to make a mess, isn't he?" remarked Stroud dryly. "I just wish he would keep his nose out of it," said John Stubbs, the student concert master. "You don't know how many times I have cursed his name."

"It seems to me they have a right to make that choice." Stroud commented.
"I don't see why the student body president is trying to take over."

Students shoud have the prorogative to have trained professionals helping them, Stroud said emphatically.

"If we have the trained people, who earth can't we use them," Stroud shook his head. "I don't know."

If the orchestra loses the $4,000 it receives from student government, the situation would be serious. Already, the orchestra has had to dismiss two of their four student workers.

"But they are continuing to carry on their duties," added Stroud, "out of loyalty to the program."

Presently, the orchestra does not charge admission to concerts, And Stroud doesn't want to start.

"That would be a tremendous step to have to take in a philosophical sense, because of the nature of the educational venture," he commented.

"There is absolutely nothing wrong with those committed to the commercial idea," Stroud smiled.
"But not here."

Laugh Machine's Hit Comes to Campus

By Glenn Amato Staff Writer

"What's happened to us, Barney? What's happening to the world? I can't keep up with it," laments one of the ladies—a respected family friend, at that—forth-seven-year-old Barney Cashman has been trying to seduce in Cashman has been trying to seduce in vain.

Barney's attempts at extramarital flings are the central concern of Neil Simon's comic "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," which Celebrity Series brings to Shyrock Auditorium on Sunday, March 5, at 8 p.m.

Barney, a happily married restaurant owner, is convinced that life is going out of its way to ignore him. Adultery is his only means of sampling a taste of the New Morality, but his proposed bed partners are an improbable bunch: a cynical girl about town, a freaky would-be actress who lives with a Nazi lesbian vocal coach, and an eternally depressed family friend.

Simon's sense of the ludicrous operates in his choice of setting. The den of sin where Barney, who will be played by Stubby Kaye, tries to play Casanova is his mother's prim one-room apartment while she is away in the afternoon doing charity hospital work.

The Neil Simon success story is now a part of show businessfolklore. His eight plays—"Come Blow Your Horn," Barefoot in the Park," "The Odd Couple," "The Star-Spangled Girl," "Plaza Suite," "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "The Gingerbread Lady" and Lovers," "The Gingerbread Lady" and his current "Prisoner of Second Avenue"—and the books for the musicals "Little Me" and "Promises, Promises" were and will continue to be moneymakers. The film versions of "Barefoot in the Park" and The Odd Couple" broke all attendance records at Couple broke an attendance records at Radio City Music Hall, and his annual earnings of almost $2 million stand to make Simon the highest paid show writer of all time.

The critics-and this may come as a surprise to some, especially the purists who denounce Simon as a laugh machine—are seldom without kind words for a Simon comedy. "Effor-tlessly hilarious" is the term Clive Bar-nes used in The New York Times to describe "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," and Richard Watts Jr. of The New York Post observed, "Simon is Post observed, "Simon is unquestionably one of the most brilliant comedy writers of our time."

Simon sees himself as an optomistic man, and it is this reflection that runs through all his writing and sets the mood for laughter. Though worldly and guarded, Simon's good faith is still strong enough to afford comfort to most modern audiences. Where else, except at a Simon play, can they dependably go into a theatre knowing they will feel better coming out?

Stubby Kaye and Pat Benson will be here for the Celebrity Series March 5 presentation of Neil Simon's "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers."

Sal y Pimienta Española

De 'Mi Costilla' a 'Mi Marida'

Las palabras "esposo" y "esposa" no se usan tanto en España como las de "mujer" y "marido". En otras partes, en muchas de Hispanoamérica, "esposa" y "esposo" son más comunes. Pero es frecuente también oir llamar tanto al uno como a la otra, "mi otra mitad". Algunos introducen la variante de "mi mejor mitad". Esta mitad no es sino la mitad de la naranja famosa que ha venido simbolizando tradicionalmente el todo del matrimonio: "Mi media naranja" llamamos a la mujer. La otra media es naturalmente el marido, aunque sonaria extraño, y nunca se le oye llamar así.

"La costilla", "mi costilla", se oye en los barrios bajos de Madrid entre casqueros y zapateros de portal, sin que nadie se acuerde de la leyenda bíblica de como Dios formó a la primera mujer. El campesino castellano, tanto más señor cuanto más pobre, habla frecuentemente de "el ama", "mi ama": "Allá está el ama, en la casa, preparando la cena". El ama es la dueña, algo así como la señora de la casa "Mi señora". Por otra parte, en España a lo menos, dicen que no se oye decir sino a sargentos y a horteras recién casados, que quieren dar a su situación social una respetabilidad que no tiene. no tiene.

La manera diversa de llamar a la La manera diversa de llamar a la esposa es tan antigua como la misma lengua castellana. El curioso "oíslo", tan trafdo y llevado, aparece ya en "La Lozana andaluza" y en "El Cortesano", en Timoneda. Es conocido el pasaje del "Paso de las aceitunas de Lope de Rueda: "i Oíslo! i Muchacha Mencigüela!: Si todos duermen en Zamora! Agueda de Torutegano! ¡Oíslo!" Cervantes, en "la Cueva de Cervantes. en "la Cueva

Salamanca" hace a Leocadia llamar a satananca nace a Leocadia namar a su engañado Pancracio nada menos que "mi gusto"; y en otra parte "mi cuyo". Y todavia en otro pasaje la encon-tramos diciendo: "Oigo a mi cepo Pan-El empleo de esta palabra, "cepo", implica, i oh ironia!, la prisión o el sometimiento y manera de esclavitud que el matrimonio supone para la mujer española. Pero ¿ y el marido? No llamamos "esposas" a los hierros que atan las manos del preso? En "El rufián viudo" de Cervantes, una de las "projimas", la Pipita, dice: "-Pero, en projimas, la ripita, dice: "-Pero, en fin, como y ceno, y a mi cuyo le traigo más vestido que un palmito". Y en otro pasaje: "No tengo cuyo, y tengo ochenta cobas (reales)".

Pero el vocablo que más agrada a Cervantes es el "oislo" consagrado por la tradición.

"Diga a mi olslo que si viene alguno, el rapio rapis (barbero), que me aguarde un poco".

Sancho llama invarjablemente casi a su mujer, "mi olslo". Dice a D. Quijote, en el famoso pasaje del reino prometido: "-...si yo fuese rey por algún milagro de los que vuestra merced dice, por lo menos Juana Gutiérrez, mi olslo, vendría a ser reina". Y en la segunda parte: "En casa no lo tengo (vino); mi olslo me ayudará". En "El entremés famoso de la endemoniada" leemos: "Que mi olslo fue ahora a la casa de los naipes".

Finalmente, esta joya: en el "persiles" (IV) encontramos a la esposa llamada "marida": "...tan marida es Maricobeña, de Tozuelo, y el marido de ella, como mi madre de mi padre y mi padre de mi madre".

Ahora la "esposa mal maridada" famosa tiene su sentido.

'Very Rock-and Roll Music' Labels Spoonriver Band

Editor's Note

Beginning today and continuing each Saturday for the rest of the school year, we will be printing a cultural rock music column designed to keep you informed about the music - scene on campus and the surrounding area.

Our tentative format will include each week a feature article or interview, preferably of local interest, and an up to date calander of rock events within a 300 mile radius of Carbondale

Because of the many facets of rock culture happening on and around campus, and the many different ways in which a column of this type might be handled, we would like to urge anyone with suggestions, ideas, or criticism to speak up. Give us a call or write a letter We want you to write about things that interest you.

Some of the ideas we have kicked around include interviews and feature articles on local bands and nationally known bands (if any should ever happen to appear in Carbondale), reviews of the bands at clubs every week, record reviews and coverage of street dances, benefit dances, parties and other friendly gatherings.

obviously the format is wide open and all suggestions are welcome.

It was a strange sort of Saturday afternoon in Carbondale. Already it was nearing four o'clock and the streets still appeared as deserted as early morning. But inside Bonaparte's Retreat, the walls echoed with the sounds of feverish activity.

The Spoonriver Band from St. Louis had played there the previous night, while most people were at Merlin's listening to REO Speedwagon.

Now, the Bonaparte's stage was clut-

Now, the Bonaparte's stage was clutered with sound men and technicians, who were scurrying about trying to repair a faulty public address system. "They would have put on a good show had it not been for the damn PA cutting off all the time," muttered one technician under his breath. "I just hope we make it through tonight."

Just then, a back door opened and in stepped Steve Scarfina, 22, lead guitar player of the Spoonriver Band and former member of REO Speedwagon.

He was followed by the other six

He was followed by the other six members of the group, most notably 17-year-old Michael O'Hara, who, in ad-dition to playing piano and singing lead, written most of Spoonriver's original material.

Almost immediately, tables were rearranged and chairs were hastily placed around a makeshift table.

As everyone sat down, jokes and quick one-liners were passed back and forth, and the two girl singers, Janice Woodard and Connie Fairchild, smiled and giggled at each other in slight embarrament. barrasment.

Across from O'Hara sat his older brother Leon, who specialty is flute, congas and all woodwinds used in the congas and all woodwinds used in the band. Filling in the other seats were drummer Rick Carrell and bass guitar player Dave Torretta.

Scarfina seemed the most relaxed. "I think we should basically talk about our music," he began. "What we have is an original thing, the majority of it being Michael's tunes.

Scarfina looked as if he wanted to say more, then looked expectantly at the younger O'Hara.

Basically, everybody in the group kind of has their own background scene that has been put together," said Michael. "Steve has a very, very rock-and-roll type feel to music, real funky."

Michael paused. "And Leon and the chicks and I, we come from a Baptist church life in St. Louis. So, we take that, plus a little touch of soul, I guess, and combine that with Rick's aggressive drums and David's light the way, one of them being 1950's idol Chuck Berry. "Chuck owns a big farm called Berry Park in Wentzville," said Scarfina. "Michael and Leon know him real well and that's sort of where we started playing, with Chuck giving us tips."

Michael and Leon have known Chuck

Michael and Leon have known Chick Berry so well, in fact, that Leon is engaged to his daughter. "He's very, very bizarre!" said Michael. "Chuck's really mysterious. Out of all the years my brother has been involved with his daughter. I've been involved with his daughter, I ve never really sat down and talked with him. It's just kind of a quick Hi! and a return Hi!, you know?" "He's even got a guitar-shaped swim-ming pool," said Scarfina.

Despite all these influences, said Michael, the group has tried to stay in-dependent in its music. "It's not so much what you say as how you say it that establishes you as a distinct ar-tist," he said.

"The lyrics of our songs are very im-portant," said Michael. "but unfortunately, when you're playing mostly club jobs where people basically come to dance and drink, the words are often not heard.

not heard."

His songs, said O'Hara, are drawn mostly from his religious upbringing. His father is a Baptist minister, and Michael used to direct the church choir. Is it hard to do original music in a club like Bonaparte's or Merlin's?

"Usually no," said Leon. "And I thin!" the reason is because we don't tell the armed with control we don't tell the armed.

the reason is because we don't tell the crowd who wrote the song, we just tell them the title and then bam! we go into it."

This, said Leon, results in the audience "listening to the music with a more open mind and they don't think more open mind, and they don't think

"The hardset thing to impress upon an audience," said Michael, "is that you have something original that you you have something original that you want to say to them. That, to me, is what a musician really is."

The life of a rock musician is extremely demanding, said Michael. "Of all the bands I've been in," he said, "none of them ever stayed together that long to really see all the business, preparations and thought that go into it."

"But this band," said Michael, "has

"But this band," said Michael, "hasbeen completely different. We've had the necessary equipment and everybody is concerned about what's going on with everybody else when porblems come up."

"When it comes to performing," said Michael, "I give everything I have to an audience but I can give so much more if the audience is giving with me. When they participate, this spears me off to do more. I like to see excitement in people."

It was getting late, and it was time for the band to begin practicing.

When will you be back in Carbondale?

when win you dale?

"March 1," said Scarfina, "we're going to be taping a half-hour TV show for WSiU. So, maybe you can catch us again then."

SIU's own cooking champ wins by untested chip dish

Seltzer, a sophomore majoring in government at SIU, entered ten dif-ferent recipes using potato chips.
The use of potato chips was one of the rules for the contest since it was sponsored by the Potato Chip In-stitute International. But the use of potato chips wasn't the only unique thing about Seltzer's recipes—he's never tested any of them to see if they even work

As it happens, one of Seltezer's

"I've been cooking for a long time, because my mother's cooking is so horrible. My father and I do all the cooking in our family," he commented. He said his father won the same contest a father. father won the same contest a couple of years ago, only he was the Missouri state cooking champion. "I really enjoy cooking," he ad-

Observance of Purim scheduled

Purim, a 2,500 year-old Jewish holiday that is traditionally celebrated by carnivals, parties and especially the consumption of alcoholic beverages, will be obser-ved from Sunday through Tuesday in Carbondale, Rabbi Earl Vinecour of the Wild Henry scir Exidence of the Hillel House said Friday

They aren't exactly the "happy foursome" as you can probably tell by the fist-clenching character with the rebellious, scheming facial expression. Calipre Stage production of 'Cuckoo's Nest' soars high

By Glenn Amato Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Warts and all, "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest" is worth a visit. The Calipre Stage production, which plays Saturday and Sunday and next Friday through Sunday at 8 p.m., is an adaptation of the Ken Kesey novel by Robert S. Fish—and as adaptations go, this one goes fairly well, if somewhat slowly. The primary concern in this fairly well, if somewhat slowly.

The primary concern in this dramatization is to expose the evils of social conditioning, to dramatize the relationships among maimed personalities and to investigate the struggle between the powerless and the powerful. McMurphy, a burly, often stupid and malicious veteran who has been dishonorably discharged, is committed to a veteran's psychiatric hospital, and he struggles.

He rebels in an institution which prohibits rebellion, but it isn't the form his rebellion takes that we cheer. It isn't the manhandling of girls and the humiliation of nurses that we admire and applaud. It is his assertion of self that gains our attention and respect; we're im-pressed by the act of rebellion and not the character who rebels.

The target of McMurphy's rebellion is Nurse Ratched, a very proper and dignified rules-and regulations bitch who stifles her charges' minds in order to "protect" them. She keeps the men sealed off from the 'tl of the world because the spreading of ideas in-variably leads to social upheaval.

McMurphy can't actually be said to represent intellect, because he seems to make most of his accom-plishments by gut strength. What is important is that he's able to choose alternatives, which is something that Nurse Ratched's patients can't and won't do. When McMurphy urges one of the men to flee the hospital, he trembles and replies that he needs "more time" and wants to leave the place legitimately. The ultimate sadness and irony lie in the fact we know that this kind of man probably won't leave; he's been kept sheltered in an intellectual cocoon, and the responsibility that free movement in a society entails is too much for him

What's odd about this produc tion—and the Kesey novel—is that the end results are more in the nature of wish-fulfillment than dramatic credibility: they make sense as metaphors for social change, but seem strained as McMurphy is lobotomized, much in the manner of Hitler's "final solution" to the Jewish problem and the shootings at Kent State, and one of the patients murders him in sym-pathy. Then the majority of patients proceed to follow McMurphy's independence bent and leave pospital; Nurse Ratched is left a general without an army. The potion that one man who has unwittingly driven another patient to suicide can still coerce others to walk out is awfully noble, but hard to accept. It's asking too much for an audience to accept this sort of mass exodus as a result of McMur-phy's gung-ho, strike-out-for-yourself attitude.

Fish's adaptation is largely car-pentry, but I don't want to sound snide about it. What else could he do in adapting a novel with so many scene changes and transitions? Still, there are too many blackouts, and there are too many biackouts, and each practically murders whatever mood the dialogue and actors manage to create. The action is disjointed and choppy, and the in-numerable scenes become a matter of picking up the pieces and starting over again—and again...and again. The language is vivid and often very funny; it's a pity the play couldn't have been more cohesive.

Fish achieves much better results with the performers. Lenny Rosen-blum's McMurphy comes on strong, which might have been his undoing, which might have been his undoing, since it doesn't give him much opportunity to build. But it's a basically fine performance, crude and blustering and popping with gusto. Theodora Bach's Nurse Ratched is a stunner, and Scott Ebaugh's Narrator is alternately dignified and moving. A fine cast throws in their all and helps make this a convenedable effort. this a commendable effort.

Court action delayed on remap suit

Harold Kuehn, a DuQuoin farmer

Harold Kuehn, a DuQuoin farmer and president of the American Soybean Association, was named Outstanding Agriculture Alumnus of SIU Friday by the Agricultural Student Advisory Council.

The citation was presented to Kuehn during the annual SIU All-Agriculture Banquet.

Other awards presented were Outstanding Service to Agriculture, Alfred B. Caster of Sun City, Ariz, retired SIU professor of plant industries; Outstanding Senior in Agriculture, Steven D. Korte, Belknap; Faculty Service Award from the school's alumni, Prof. Keith Leasure, chairman of the Jent industries department; the Jerry Cobble Memorial Award, James Elliott, junior in agriculture education, Burnt Prairie, and the James Elliott, junior in agriculture education, Burnt Prairie, and the Herb Oetjen Memorial Award from Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, Robert A. Butz, secretary of marketing for the Illinois Agricultural Association, said American farmers still display some power in the halls of Congress but the political clout of the days of the old farm bloc has waned.

He spoke to 300 students, staff members and friends of the SIU School of Agriculture. It is evident that candidates of both political parties are courting the farm vote in this election year, especially in the midwest where the agricultural forces might swing the vote in a close contest, Butz said. He also noted recent congressional moves toward bincongressional moves toward binding arbitration for wage disputes of key transportation industries after strong farm pressures over the farmers millions in lost grain exports. The congressional moves came in spite of the powerful influence of organized labor.

Of present concern to agriculture

Of present concern to agriculture is the controversy over food prices, especially rising meat prices, and some misconceptions about the American family farm and govern-ment support prices. Butz foresees a tough fight to save agriculture from the dangers of establishing price ceilings or relaxing import restrictions on meat because of con-sumer pressures for lower food

Butz expressed concern about the what is being purchased in the name of food and how easy it is to fix the blame on farmers without considering other factors—laber, packaging, handling communications. packaging, handling, convenience processing—that are mainly to blame for price increases.

"We (agriculture) can tell them," he said, "but it is really ineffective because we are suspect, and we are not unbiased."

Butz suggested educational in-stitutions might be in a better position to inform the consumer on these issues.

SIU challenges league-leading Huskies tonight

By Mike Klein Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Searching in nooks and crannies fa digestible reason to attend the Civil War, chapter two?

Well, for openers, Saturday's SIU Arena meeting between Northern Illinois and the Salukis promises to be worth more than the 50 cents you'll shell out to walk past the blue-uniformed doortender.

Northern ought to win the Mid-western Conference crown and can assure itself at least a portion by wis-ing tonight's 7:30 p.m. contest. The other portion could belong to Illinois State, pending next week's action

But even though the Huskies have

But even though the Huskies have that 184 record and seem NCAA or NIT bound, Paul Lambert and his 9-12 Salukis will concede nothing.
Chapter one was no lopsided afair, even though the Huskies of Tom Jorgensen carried a 96-82 victory to the showers 10 days ago in Decalls. SIU was even, 76-all, until hitting just three field goals the final 10 minutes.

Still unconvinced you want to go? How about the Greg Starrick-Jerry Zielinski shooting matchup? Zielinski, who ruined SIU with 38 points in the DeKalb affair, has been sizzling hot the last five games. Sixty-seven per cent from the field sizzling hot to be exact.

"sis "problem" of Zielinski's began against Illinois State with a 7 of 14 effort. Since, he's made 13 of 17 against Indiana State and 14 of 21 versus SIU. The figures were 14 of 17 against Ball State before another .500 effort (5 of 10) during Nor-thern's Wednesday loss to Illinois

During that span, Zielinski has in creased his average from 17.4 to 24.8 points per game.

Not bad, huh. Well, Starrick's been even hotter. In his last two games, Starrick has connected at a 69 per cent pace. He was 13 of 20 at Northern for 29 points at Northern, then 12 of 16 at Indiana State this past Tuesday night. Starrick scored 30 points against the Sycamores.

Still, the Salukis haven't been in the win column since defeating In-diana State here when Valentines Da month was just 48 hours old.

The reason is sub-30 per cent shooting from the three inside positions. And Lambert says without balanced scoring, any hopes of stopping the Huskies will be dreams turned sour.

Lambert indicated Eddie James will start his third varsity game at forward. But the other forward and

GSC makes tenure plea for Allen

By Richard Lorenz Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council (GSC) Friday approved a motion asking the governor to take appropriate action to insure that Douglas M. Allen, assistant professor of philosophy, is granted tenure.

The motion was approved by a 20-2 margin. The motion states that the GSC opposes the Board of Trustees' action of not granting Allen tenure. The motion said, "The reasons given by the board are unsupported and hopelessly inane," and that support the said of the and hopelessly inane," and that unless the board provides adequate reasons why Allen should not receive tenure, the governor should take appropriate action to grant Allen tenure.

Allen tenure.

The council's action followed a description of the case by Allen and two members of the Committee to Defend the Right to Speak.

"Action which is done now is irrelevant," Allen said. He indicated that time to have taken action was when he was first denied tenure by the board in November, 1970.

The representatives from the committee read parts of a transcript of the board's December meeting in which former President meeting in which former President Robert G. Layer supported Allen's bid for tenure. The representatives expressed the fear that SIU will be censured by the American Association of University Professors. the Federation of University Teachers and the AFL-CIO.

Before approving the motion, the council defeated a motion by D. Reed Clark, president of the council, which said the council did not look with favor upon the board's action of denial of tenure. An amendment to Clark's motion was also defeated. The amendment would have asked for the resignation of board mem-bers who voted against Allen's

Health system fee estimate down to $75

By Sue Millen Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Donald DuBois, consultant for the comprehensive health service system, said Friday that $75 per year instead of an earlier estimate of $120 would be a more appropriate student fee for the DuBois, speaking at a meeting of the Health Advisory Board (HAB) of the system, said the ideal program would be one which "actively and efficiently dealt with the present and future health problems of students."

Under the ideal plan, the health care delivery systems in Carbondale would be adequately staffed with physicians and other personnel and provide reimbursement for health care needs when the student was away from campus. DuBois said that in his opinion "it would be impossible to use that much money efficiently during the coming two-year period—even if it were collec-

The $75 figure is the average fee charged for similar health programs at other universities of SIU's size, he said. "This amount," he said, "would be adequate to finance a 12-month, on-campus program for students and would provide them with good access to doctors, specialists and hospitalization as needed."

as needed.

The problems of staffing shortages, discontinuity of care and other problems cited by students and physicians could be alleviated through expansion of the on-campus medical staff and financial provisions for specialist referral and hospital costs, DuBois added.

Other major action at the meeting consisted of three specific proposals submitted by the Student Health Consumer Council (SHCC) to help solve some of the health care problems of

The SHCC proposed ways to increase accessibility to the Health Service, restructuring of HAB and a request that HAB issue a favorable statement on defining the status of student workers and graduate teaching assistants with regard to receiving coverage under the Illinois State Employes Comprehen-sive Insurance Plan. The latter plan is to be studied and will be reported on as soon as possible.

The HAB voted to put into action the first part of the three-part transpor-tation proposal. This section allows for the use of the Campus Transit for tran-sferring patients from the Minor Care Clinic to the Health Service. However, HAB stipulated that the use of the taxi service is to be left up to the nurses at the Minor Care Clinic and the program is to also be initiated on a trial bases. The other two sections which were to be investigated and reported on at a later date were: use of Campus Transit for students with appointments in need of transportation and a more per-manent plan of establishing a regular transit system through Carbondale to transport Health Service patients.

The second proposal asked that HAB restructure itself so that it consists of 51 per cent consumer representation. Specifically, SHCC recommended that nine students, four Health Service personnel, two administrators, one faculty member and one nonacademic ployee be on the board.

However, since a new super board, combining the Shawnee Regional Health Maintenance Organization and HAB, is about to be created—action was delayed until the inevitable restructuring takes place.

Wet, wet

Three inches of rain in four days—the U.S. Weather Bureau's estimate for the Carbondale area—made ponds and puddles in inconvenient places, and the only thing to do was take yo? chances, as Pat Foltz, Fort Wayne, Ind., senior in social welfare is doing in getting across Lincoln Drive. But the downpours also filled Crab Orchard Lake to just below spillway level. The weatherman said the wet weather would end Saturday but it will turn colder. (Photo by John Legicet)

Indications are that the communique the President was host at a banquet for Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders. There was a round of applause as Nixon arose to propose a toast. Recalling his visit to the Great Wall of China, the President said this served as a reminder that many walls still exist that divide nations.

"In these past four days, we have begun the long process of removing that wall between us."

Nixon conceded that great differences exist between the two nations but said: "We are determined that those differences will not prevent us from living together in peace."

Like Nixon, Chou observed that great differences of principle exist between

"Through earnest and frank discussions, a clearer knowledge of each other's positions and stands had been gained." Chou said.
Chou said that the world is changing.

and he was deeply convinced "the general trend of the world is definitely ward light and not darkness

"It is the common desire of the Chinese and American peoples to enhance their mutual understanding ennance their mutual understanding and friendship and promote the normalization of relations between China and the United States," he said whemphasis. "The Chinese government and people will work unswervingly toward this goal."

Report due in May

Textbook rental will be studied

By Richard Lorenz Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Governance Committee of the University Senate Friday approved for-mation of an ad hoc committee to study the textbook rental service and the feasibility of eliminating rental of up-per division (junior and senior) books before fall, 1974.

The motion was made by Tony Catanese, graduate student represen-tative. Under Catanese's motion, the ad hoc committee would be composed of McCoy, dean of library affairs. A report would be made by the committee no later than the May meeting of the

If the senate approves Catanese's idea, the Executive Committee of the senate would appoint the members of the ad hoc committee. The idea will be presented at the senate's March meeting.

The textbook question had been sent to the governance committee from the senate's screening committee. Sidney Moss, professor of English, originally proposed the idea at the February

In other action, the governance committee received a outline of a study of the Board of Trustees made by Jim Stortzum, senate intern.

Stortzum's study deals with five areas: the manner of selection, the composition of the board, the term of office compensation for serving and the average age of board members.

According to Stortzum's study, 70 per cent of the boards in the United States are appointed by governors. SIU's board is appointed by the governor. The majority of board members are white, male, Republican and businessmen. The average size of the board is eight. SIU's board is composed of professionals and businessmen except for Michael Bakalis. Bakalis, state superintendent of public instruction, serves as an ex-officio member. There are eight members on SIU's board are eight members on SIU's board.

The average length of term is six years. The term at SIU is six years. Most trustees nationally do not receive payment except for expenses involving travel, board and meals. The situation at SIU is the same. Sixty-five per cent of the board members nationally are over 50 years of age. The average age of the SIU board is about 50.

The committee decided to present the information contained in Stortzum's study to the senate at the March meeting.
