Soom calls for fee referendum

The $30 athletics fee must be continued at least one year, but student votes will decide if the fee will be continued, President Albert Alston said Wednesday night.

Somit said that even assuming that the fee is extended one year, "savage slashing" is in store for the Men's Athletic Department. And once athletics is back on its feet, he said, a student referendum will be called to decide if the full $30 fee should be continued.

Soomi's long-awaited report came before meetings of the Graduate Student Council and Undergraduate Student Organization. hod all new similar recommendations to the Board of Trustees forthcoming when the board will decide whether to extend the temporary $10 athletics fee.

The temporary fee was approved in December 1979, and will be $30, President Alston told the Board of Trustees Monday night. Somit said he had the only options other than to extend athletics fees.

Soomi has been reappointed to the board for another year, and will be asked to present fees in the fall. Somit's board is proportional to the undergraduate student body.

Boycott ended by USO; CSC supports $30 fee

The Undergraduate Student Organization called off a boycott of men's athletics events and the Student Council recommended that $30 athletics fee be extended through next year in separate actions Wednesday night.

Both actions were a direct result of separate speeches delivered by President Alston and CSC President Alston.

In its recommendation to extend the temporary $5 fee, the CSC stipulated that continuation of the fee be contingent on a student-run referendum, to be held prior to Oct. 1, on future athletics fee rates.

President Alston said that student fees will be deposited in the Intercollegiate Athletics Commission and used to maintain the present student athletics fee of $30 at the board's March meeting, and promised he would call for a student referendum in the fall on whether to continue the fee.

Students currently are supporting 46 percent of intercollegiate athletics through fees.

The athletics boycott, called by the Student Senate and CSC, was called by the Student Senate and CSC.

President Alston said he would ask the Board of Trustees to make the fee mandatory in the months ahead--even for food and housing.

President Alston's budget director, David A. Stockman, said the report "indicates that we're still in a dangerous domestic inflation environment in this country." The budget director underscored the need for the "deep budget cuts in the administration proposed.

Murray Weisberg, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, said January's figures, though they reflect some -little basis for optimism with regard to the underlying rate of inflation.

Meanwhile, the Federal Trade Commission announced Tuesday that the Consumer Price Index would decline further in the third quarter of the year.

Cross, Joel, Seger win Grammies

NEW YORK (AP) — Christopher Cross, a 29-year-old pop-rock singer, guitarist and songwriter from Columbus, Ohio, is the new young artist. Wednesday night as the recording industry handed out its 23rd annual Grammy Awards at a star-studded Hollywood bash, Cross was taking his place among the greats.

Cross is the second straight year that a new artist has won all of the major awards at the Grammy Awards. Last year, when 23-year-old Elton John won all of the major awards, there were some who said that he was too young.

But Cross is here to stay. He is one of the hottest new talents in the music business and his album, "The Rose," is a hit. He has already sold over a million copies of the album and his single, "The Rose," has been in the Top 10 for months.

Cross, who was named the best new performer at the Grammy Awards, has been building his reputation as a live performer. He has been touring extensively and has been making waves with his performances.

Taylor Swift, who was also nominated for a Grammy Award, was happy for Cross. "I think he really deserved it," she said.

The Grammy Awards are a big deal in the music industry. They are given out by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences to recognize the best in music.

Cross, who is 29, is the first 29-year-old to win all of the major awards at the Grammy Awards. He was nominated for five awards, including Album of the Year, Song of the Year, Record of the Year, and Best New Artist.

The Grammys were held at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. The show was hosted by Billy Crystal.

Pope ends Asian tour in Japan

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) — Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass for 50,000 people Thursday, the last of his 12-day Asian tour, in this cradle of Japanese Christianity, which was covered with a thin blanket of snow.

John Paul arrived Wednesday evening to a warm welcome amid the heaviest snowfall in four years, about three-quarters of an inch, after calling in Hiroshnma for "the banishing of all nuclear weapons."

The pope was to visit victims of the atom bomb, which killed an estimated 70,000 people in Nagasaki on Aug. 9, 1945.

Fired employee shoots executives

LOCKLAND, Ohio (AP) — A paper company engineer who had just been fired pulled out a gun Wednesday and began shooting a group of executives before killing two others before fleeing, police said.

Lawrence Nair, 41, of Forest Park, was being sought in connection with the shootings. Gene Robinson, chief of police in this Cincinnati suburb, said police had been told he was being fired after an argument over a grievance hearing with four Diamond International Corp. officials and two representatives of United Paper Workers Local 101.

Killed were plant manager John Pratt, 49, and power plant foreman Ray Leach, 50, both of Cincinnati.

Percy submits debt collection bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-II., introduced a bill Wednesday that he said would help the federal government collect $25 billion in unpaid debts owed to commercial credit bureaus, take payment out of federal employees' salaries and allow access to Internal Revenue Service records solely for use in debt collection.

He said the total debt owed to the U.S. government by Americans is $125 billion. All but $2 billion is being paid on schedule, he said.
Study determining feasibility of fuel plant expected soon

By Randy Nagaski
Staff Writer

A study to determine the feasibility of installing a fuel alcohol demonstration plant is under way at the University and could be completed in about three weeks, Kenneth Tempelmyer, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, said Wednesday. Tempelmyer said the plant would result from an agreement signed by the University and Illinois Incorporated, a not-for-profit group which promotes economic development in Southern Illinois. Sill obtained a $200,000 grant last year from the Economic Development Administration to build a fuel alcohol demonstration plant in Williamson County if the University decided to build the plant, Tempelmyer said, the grant would be transferred from Sill to SIU-C. He said the University would demonstrate the plant, but would consult Sill in designing and operating the plant.

"Sill would have served its prime purpose in obtaining the grant," Tempelmyer said. "They would have provided aid for the demonstration and the region. University property in Carterville is being considered as a possible site for the plant, Tempelmyer said. The grant, however, requires $87,500 in matching funds.

"We're looking at the possibility of applying for the Carterville property, the fuel alcohol and ethanol services there toward the matching funds," Tempelmyer said. "With the budget situation the University faces, these things would have to contribute significantly."

Tempelmyer said the plant would produce between 200 and 300 gallons of fuel alcohol each day. The fuel alcohol would be made from grain and could be sold to companies for each production gasohol, he said.

The fuel alcohol produced could also be used to power University vehicles, Tempelmyer said. He said the engines of those vehicles, however, would require modification to use the fuel.

Several colleges in the University are interested in the fuel alcohol plant. Tempelmyer said his school thinks the plant would be useful in researching the process of fuel alcohol production.

Tempelmyer said the School of Technical Careers is also studying the plant for use as a facility to train students in the use of fuel alcohol equipment.

Delegates not bound by vote

Court OKs open primaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — States can hold "open" primaries in which voters can choose any candidate they want and cannot force a party's convention delegates to vote for the party's nominee as the results, the Supreme Court said Wednesday.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices struck down a Wisconsin law that bound Democratic delegates to the results of the state's open primary election, in which party non-members participate.

"A political party's choice among the varying ways of determining the makeup of a state's delegation to the party's national convention is protected by the Constitution," Justice Potter Stewart wrote for the court.

The court said Wisconsin's law was "at odds" with the Democratic Party's right of political association by allowing party non-members to participate in the selection process.

"I could not be more pleased," Democratic Party chairman John C. White of said of the ruling.

"The court's opinion accurately reflects the Democratic Party's view that selection of delegates to the national convention ought to be made by Democrats — not cross-over voters from other parties who tend to skew the results of the Democratic primary," Wisconsin's election law allows all registered voters to participate in the Democratic primary without regard to party affiliation. The party's convention delegates are then selected from those voters who cast their vote for one of the party's candidates.

"The court's opinion left clear that Wisconsin can, if it desires, to continue the practice, hold an open primary for "cross-over" voters. But it said the results of that election cannot be binding on party delegates.

Wednesday's decision was praised by the Republican Party's challenge last year of the Wisconsin law.

Police seek purse thief

Cerbonda police: woman is being sought in the arrest of a suspect in the theft of a license plate.

Eda M. Webb told police that she saw a man searching through her purse at about 9:30 p.m. while she was working as an election judge in the Eureka Thursday.

The suspect ran out of the door after taking a wallet containing $15 to $20, Webb's driver's license and a credit card. Police said costs declined 6.2 percent. Gasoline prices, however, jumped 2.5 percent and fuel prices were up 7.5 percent last month.

Consumer prices rose 12.4 percent in 1980, and most economists expect the rate of inflation to moderate in 1981.

The Labor Department said the decline in food prices at grocery stores stemmed from a 2.4 percent drop in the price of meats, poultry, fish and eggs.

Petitions to be available for April USO election

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

Petitions for candidacy in the April 15 Undergraduate Student Organization election will be available Monday in the USO office, said Brian Netos, elections commissioner for this year.

Petitions will be available for the offices of USO president and approximately 26 Student Senate seats, Netos said. Netos said the senate seats up for election should include six from the East Side, six from the West Side, two from both East Campus and Thompson Point, and one from each of the University's ten academic colleges.

Prospective senate candidates must secure the signatures of at least 50 students residing in the area they are running in or in the college they are representing, Netos said.

The presidential and vice presidential candidates run as a team, and need to secure the signature of at least 50 students from each of the four geographic areas, he said.

Netos said that potential candidates who will be moving from their present residence next year have a problem.

"If you're living in the dorms and are moving off-campus, but don't know where you just have to take a guess — either East or West Side," he said, "And if you guess wrong, you'll have just have to resign."

To serve in USO, a student must have an overall grade point average of at least 2.9, and be in good academic and disciplinary standing, Netos said.

Netos said all signed petitions must be returned to the USO office on the third floor of the Student Center by 5 p.m. Thursday, March 12.

We should all sacrifice

The reactions of various constituencies to Reagan’s budget cuts are not un-expected. In that context, it is indeed favorable to the rich than the poor and middle-class Americans.

However, everybody agrees that some drastic actions are needed to control the growth of the federal deficit. Nobody really wants the persistence of the present economic螺丝-capre on America was overwhelmingly elected. Why are so many of us standing or sitting to rid the country of the fundamental flaw that Reagan was so quick to recognize and the sacredness of the deficit’s un-continuable nature would be destroyed.

Reagan may be a millionaire but he is doing a good job economically from the best conservative point of view. We should all beware of those senior figures and representative who do more harm economically for political gains. Reagan needs the maximum sacrifice and support of everybody to address the present economic mess. We should be objective in responding to those budget cuts.

Getting rid of all the wasteful programs would reduce the deficit. However, this would reduce the high interest rates.

Don’t pay for Abbie’s toupee

My congratulations are extended to the SPC Expressive Arts Committee. The hype for the Abbie Hoffman lecture this Wednesdays’ Daily Egyptian was a work of art. There standing up in the front row was a challenging smirk was Abbie Hoffman himself. He managed to complete with American flag shirt.

The copy of the ad reads like this: "In memory of..." by Mickey Spillane novel (he changed his name) be commenced his start. He united and bright up right back to those good old Days of Races, when the whole world was watching.

In reality Abbie Hoffman is now Barry Fass, a balding middled-aged "fugitive" with a number of arrests. The two would eventually turn-yourself-in-and-make-the-sixties-revolutionary "fugitives." They’ll probably reunite the Chicago 7 with a greatest hits LP or have Days of the collective shRunn cups at 7:11.

You’ve heard the term: "Don’t buy books from crooks!" Well I suggest you move to a democracy; a place where you can think on our own without foreign military aids to reverse the decline in our economic development assistance, more participation in international programs to assure safe drinking water in a world where 500 million suffer waterborne diseases; better control in the exporting of hazardous substances; an increase in the research on ozone depletion.

ONE HAS A CORNER ON THE MARKET OF “good ideas,” but it is hard to invent a response that is effective without it including at least a few of the report’s recommendations: a major increase in the foreign military aid, which would reverse the decline in our economic development assistance: more participation in international programs to assure safe drinking water in a world where 500 million suffer waterborne diseases: better control in the exporting of hazardous substances: an increase in the research on ozone depletion.

At first glance, these and the many other similar recommendations may seem like the wish-list of well-meaning bureaucrats. In fact, this era of wishful thinking has passed. We haven’t been able to muddle through. National security means more than an arsenal of nuclear weapons to prevent foreign attack. It means being secure from the effects of our own attacks on the earth’s bounty.

For a few new stories following the release of “The Global Future,” public discussion of its content has been limited. This is the routine fate of reports that dare suggest nations shape their policies according to global cooperation, not mutual suspicion. The findings of last year’s Brandt Commission and the President’s Commission on World Hunger raised similar unsettling questions.

THE CEQ-STATE DEPARTMENT REPORT has had even less attention. It was released in the final week of the Carter administration, which means Reagan officials can dismiss it as the dated thinking of the ousted. The President himself, when questioned last October on an earlier CEQ-STATE Department study, “The Global 2000 Report,” revealed his disdain for suggestions that the future is bleak unless we broaden our thinking.

"How do you propose responding," he was asked, "to those long-term global implications outlined in the Global 2000 Report?" He responded with the usual answer, said he wasn’t especially concerned. For one thing, he didn’t see much accuracy in the Global 2000’s population projections. "The population menace is overblown," he told of adding thousands of acres to California’s beaches when he was governor. Yet he said "you find many of those state beaches today, on the hottest day of the summer, there's no one on them." Then, in a comment on the level of his celebrated trees case pollution statement, Reagan spoke approvingly of studies saying "the earth can support a population of 28 billion people."

Perhaps so, if a planetary Calcula be invented. What it can’t support us a population that has no leaders daring enough think beyond tomorrow." (C) 1981, The Washington Post

Christian acts like a Fascist

This is an open letter to the person I saw ripping down flyers that had been put near Faner Hall by the Krishna Consciousness Center. When I challenged you, you said that, as a Christian, you were his duty to rid the campus of pollution. When I said you were behaving like a Fascist, you cited Jesus’s exercise of power in cleansing the temple.

I hate to point out the obvious but you, sir, are not Jesus. And just because you kicked a few buttocks 2,000 years ago, that doesn’t give you the right to behave in a cheap, bigoted and un-American manner. America happens to be a democracy; a place in which differing points of view can, or should be able to, coexist in relative harmony. This country was not created to be a religiously governed state; a religious reading of the ideas of Thomas Jefferson would bear that out. If this country’s liberty and plurality dispenses you, I suggest you move to a theocratic state, like Iran.

You violatediple syntax, if not a written law, by tearing down flyers you didn’t believe in. And you thought you were helping Christianity by being a friend of God. You were acting in defiance of the Biblical injunction to show mercy toward all men (Luke 10:37) and to love even your enemies (Matthew 5:44) with a love that does not lead to self-importance or self-blessing (1 Corinthians 13:14). You profess to be a Christian, but Tuesday after-noon you weren’t acting like one.

Shape America’s policies around global cooperation

Colman McCarthy

WITH PRICES AT THE NEIGHBORHOOD gas station rising another ten cents a gallon, with strapped cities forced to reduce public services and with citizens in the crowded areas of the country nervous about wasting even a glass of drinking water, who can think globally? And who can think both globally and long range?

Against these twin measures, we have enough trouble today, this minute, on our own blocks in our own homes—a group of officials from the Council on Environmental Quality and the State Department is arguing the other way.

To withdraw, they suggest in “The Global Future: Time To Act,” is not only to flee our moral obligations to the world’s hundreds of millions of desperately poor. It is also to gamble recklessly that economic and ecological stability exists, and to misread the inter-relatedness: that the increasing discom-forts felt at the local gas station, city council hearing room and kitchen tap are skirmishes in battles that rage at a distance but which advance closer everyday.

The authors of the report, who drew on 19 federal agencies for guidance, make no claim that they are the first ones to say that a relationship exists between America’s political and economic security and how such staggering problems as world population, environmental damage and resource misuse are solved. Their goal is merely to point out, that one seeks out the “fugitive’s” body of good ideas for the first round of an effective response to the immensely challenging problems before us.

2 more Atlanta boys disappear

ATLANTA (AP) — The disappearances of two more black boys, found after police searched in Atlanta neighborhoods Wednesday, as well as a federal cash-outlay to bolster the investigation, have raised questions about the prospects for the measure.

Democratic Rep. Lee Brown, who supports the measure, has been looking for new money to fund the investigation.

Committee rejects state tax breaks

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — An Illinois House committee Wednesday rejected legislation that would have given state income tax breaks to homeowners and renters.

The measure would have allowed homeowners and renters to deduct up to $2,500 in property taxes paid to local governments.

Lab equipment missing

The value of items reported stolen from a room in Life Sciences 1 during a break-in Saturday has reached $1,000, SIU-C police said Wednesday. The items included a triple-beam balance valued at $65, reported missing Saturday by a worker, police said.

When the break-in was first reported to police, no items were reported missing. Entrance to the room was gained by breaking a window on the door of the room, police said.

A balance loader valued at $85 and a microscope valued at $1,078 were also discovered missing, along with an inventory taken Monday.

Police have no suspects in the case.

Try Rush's 'Pictures' for brainy heavy metal

By Randy Lynch
Window Manager

Heavy metal rock started to make a comeback in 1980. Black Sabbath's "Paranoid" made the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame eight years after its initial release, proving that it had not lost its luster. Rush's "Pictures," which is their new album, is a testament to that. Other metal mongers like youngsters AC-DC, Angel City, and Def Leppard have recently become suddenly in great demand. There were rumors that the members of Deep Purple were going back to the business. This year it is evident that the heavy metal resurgence was just not a fad in the electric skilllet. Only AC-DC was able to make a dent in the teeming record buying market. Now that the generic dust has settled, Rush's recent release, "Moving Pictures," further its reputation as the most intelligent thinking man's heavy metal band.

Despite its aspirations, Rush is a band besiged by image problems. No style of music embraces the "sex and drugs and rock 'n' roll" image better than heavy metal. In light of such predicaments, the term "thinking man's heavy metal" joins the ranks of other such pleads as "plastic glass" and "military intelligence." However, "Moving Pictures," Rush's new release, proves that such a term is not an oxymoron.

When it started out, Rush was just another thrashing power trio. The key to the band's success is that it offers something more than heavy metal. In light of such predicaments, the term "thinking man's heavy metal" joins the ranks of other such pleads as "plastic glass" and "military intelligence." However, "Moving Pictures," Rush's new release, proves that such a term is not an oxymoron.

Pearl finds it truly a man of vision as he proved on the "2112" LP. He gives another glimpse of a possible future in a new song, "Red Barchetta," which is also the simple pleasure of a drive in the country. The song not only makes one think about where our society is headed, it helps one to appreciate, the conveniences which we take for granted.

However, this is not a science fiction oriented album. "Lightheaded," Pearl discourses on the ambiguity about being a stage performer. He finds that being the center of attention is addictive and confusing at the same time.

On side two, Pearl becomes totally objective, as a tune called "Camera Eye" suggests. In this two-part comparison of London and New York City, Pearl finds that physically, there are no major differences between the two. Therefore, he sees the vitality of its residents as the quality which gives a city its soul. Pearl again examines society in "Witch Hunt." He observes that "ignorance and prejudice and fear go hand in hand." This song further depicts the latent implications in light of the recent acceptance of Jerry Falwell and The Moral Majority.

Finally, Pearl offers some straightforward advice in "Vital Signs." He reminds us that change is the only thing we can count on, and yet there will always be people who resist change. The only acceptable way to deviate from the norm is to rise above it. And so it is with the music. The lyrics rise above the norm, but the music merely maintains it. Guitarist Alex Lifeson and bassist-tonger Geddy Lee are still responsible for the music and they haven't made as much progress as Pearl.

In fact, "Moving Pictures" should be a step backward for Rush in terms of intensity. Some past Rush songs were not only much more beautiful than on past Rush albums, and the "triffs to melodic ratio is nearly even. Lee has also toned down the shrillness of his voice, making his singing downright tolerable.

Rush may never overcome the image problem. But they may still attain mass appeal. Still, the group has pushed the boundaries of its genre farther than any other band of the past decade. They've shown more impressive light of the fact that this trio makes better music than most five- or six-piece metal bands.

Sale of impounded grain requested

ST. LOUIS (AP) - A bankruptcy trustee Wednesday asked the Bankruptcy Court of Appeals for permission to sell the grain stored in the bankrupt Missouri elevators, including the 31,000 bushels of soybeans owned by Purcell farmer Wayne Cryts. Blender D. Lindsey, trustee in the James Brothers bankruptcy case, said the grain was in poor condition and would spoil unless it is sold soon.

"In particular, grain stored in the elevator facility at Caruthersville is in great, immediate, and irreparable danger of becoming totally worthless," said Lindsey.

The trustee has asked permission to sell 31,000 bushels of soybeans stored in the MFA elevator in Caruthersville. Cryts stored the beans, his 1979 crop, at that warehouse after he and more than 500 farmers walked past federal marshals at the Rutline elevator near New Madrid a week ago, punched holes in the side of the elevator, and removed the grain which federal courts had been attempting to have the bankrupt determine ownership of.

For that reason, the trustee also asked the court to reassure the appellants in the case to post $5 million bond with the court.

"Appellee-trustee fears that further unlawful seizure of grain situated in the elevator in Caruthersville will result in total losses to the State of Missouri," said Lindsey.

'Back on the Streets' shows promise, but not consistent

By Bill Crewe
Staff Writer

Much like the one-hit artist characterized in Paul Simon's film "One Trick Pony," Donnie Iris could be called a "journeyman rocker." However, his first solo release, "Back on the Streets," is an album by a journeyman who shows some promise, but needs to be more consistent.

Iris' career recording with various bands has been static to say the least. In the late '60s, he formed the Juggers and scored a gold record with the single, "The Ragger." Several years later he recorded and performed with Wild Cherry ("Play That Funky Music White Boy") for a short time.

On this solo effort, Iris shows a desire to escape the pop-funk trappings of Wild Cherry and play straight-ahead rock, but the result is only partially successful. For every song that shows some lyrical distinctiveness or instrumental ingenuity, there are two that register as just fundamental, pounding rockers with the usual lyrics—girls, teenage frustration, more girls, etc.

Most of Iris' problems stem from a distinct lack of invention. The arrangements, relying too heavily on Marty Lee's poppy chording guitar work while not giving him enough room to breathe with an occasional nod to producer Mark Avees. Iris' voice, which is well-suited to the role of a guy trying to steal a girl away from the local tough guy. But these tunes are the exception to the rule on this record.

"Too Young to Love" takes a good opening piano line and ruins it with a growling, overblown vocal. The rest of the album, including "Ah! Leah!" which is receiving some airplay, is populated by ponderous rockers and vocals delivered in a dull monotone, for the most part.

"Back on the Streets," at its best, is a mediocreme album. Maybe mediocrity is all that journeyman artists can be expected to come up with, but Iris shows just enough spark to show some promise for the future.

Iris fares best when performing pop without the burdens of overexerted chordal pounding. "Joking" is a catchy tune which makes good use of Avees' synthesizer and a fast-talking vocal. Otherwise, "Agnes," is the one thudding rocker that works. It utilizes an infectiously melodramatic approach that draws the listener in to the story of a guy trying to steal a girl away from the local tough guy. But these tunes are the exception to the rule on this record.

B.B. King's latest LP is more top-notch blues

By Rod Smith
Entertainment Editor

When you think of the blues, the first name that comes to mind is B.B. (Blues Boy) King. His distinctive, string-bending electric guitar style has influenced and been imitated by horde of rockers since the end of World War II.

Because of his influence on rock music, King helped to attract white audiences to the blues, a music form once played and listened to primarily by blacks. He has also consolidated various music forms in the growth of the blues—gospel, jazz, Texas guitar—in a personalized style that never seems to stagnate with age and repetition.

King's new album, "There Must Be A Better World Somewhere," (what an appropriate blues title) is much like his dozens of previous albums—plenty of clean, razor-sharp guitar solos, reaching the extremes of being up ("Life Is Just A Party") and feeling down (the title cut) and feeling the considerable talents of some top session musicians.

King has a powerful, booming vocal style that he has used in creating definitive blues tunes from other songwriter's works. None of the most-noted blues standards are credited to him ("The Thrill Is Gone," "Sweet Sixteen" and "Every Day I Have The Blues") have been written by him but are regarded as classics.

An interesting crediting on this album go to Tex Pomeroy and Dr. John (remember "Right Place, Wrong Time"?), who also adds some brilliant Louisiana barroom piano playing. The album's lyrical content, however, is nothing to get excited about. The words get lost as they take a back seat to the instrumentation.

This album does not capture the sizzling excitement of King's live recordings (he has at least six), but instead centers on drowsy, cry-in-your-beer tunes with some effectively emotive horns play.

Sure, the characteristic extended lead guitar solos that King is noted for are here and are as biting as ever, using basic call and response with his singing and playing (King admits he can't sing and pick at the same time). But King's guitar is overshadowed on this album by the saxophone play of old rhythm and blues players Hank Crawford and David "Fathead" Newman.

Crawford and Newman recorded with King many years ago and haven't been on any of his most recent LPs. Their contributions from a six-piece brass section make this album a fine work with extremely tight instrumentation rather than another run-of-the-mill blues album.

Crawford, who is credited with the horn arrangement, dominates the first side of the album with alto sax solos on all three tunes while Newman displays jazzy lesser play or two songs, including the album's best cut, "The Victim," which opens side two.

There's really nothing new from B.B. King here other than a reunion with the two versatile sax players; and that's good. When you do it best at what you do, there's no reason to change.

B.B. King is the definitive blues guitarist and proves it album after album.
Rings combine heavy metal with hooks, distinctive style

By Alan Scalley
Staff Writer

Along with the ska revival and the heavy metal resurgence, 1980 will be remembered as a year that spawned a slew of rock bands known as power pop. Now we can add the Rings to that list. This band's self-titled debut album, however, offers more than the vast majority of power pop—distinctive style.

Most of the power pop bands have a generic sound which combines the power guitar riffs of heavy metal with a melody and tempo along the lines of new wave.

The Rings, though, have found that by putting a soft edge on their songs with instruments like an acoustic guitar, they could offer music that at least didn't sound like the dozens of other bands in their genre.

This acoustic guitar played like an electric rhythm guitar and frequently punctuated many of the album's cuts with a pounding, steady dance beat, or accentuated on others with catchy electric guitar solo.

The other factor the Rings make heavy use of in their songs is hooks. Most of the cuts have a movement that draws in and draws the listener into the song.

One song that is laden with hooks is "Got My Wish." It is also the album's standout cut featuring a sweety melodic acoustic guitar matched with a very infectious rocking beat. "Too Much of Nothing" and "I Need a Strange" use the electric guitar solo as the catch which makes these songs work. "This One's for the Girls" and "Watch You Break" feature smart choruses that make the listener want to sing along.

It is when the Rings forget their lead acoustic guitar style and go back to the generic style of electric rhythm guitar that they fall flat on their faces.

"Third Generation" is one song where they make this mistake. The result is a song that sounds like most every nondescript heavy metal band in existence.

Other songs keep that distinctive acoustic style, but fall because they just weren't good songs to begin with. "Opposites Attract" and "Let Me Go" are examples of this, and are nothing more than filler.

Another strong point for the band is a capable performance from its members. None of them get flashy enough to overshadow each other, and they play well enough so none of the songs get handicapped by incompetent performances.

The singing is also basic but acceptable, even though more than less than intelligent lyrics damage this facet of the Rings music. The vocals are mainly used as another instrument to present songs with a hook.

Still, when you add the good elements together, the result is a clean, clean and energetic pop-rock style that demands little more from the listener than enjoyment. Since many of the power pop bands don't offer that much, consider "The Rings" a winner over the status quo of power pop.

The Carbondale Energy Futures Conference will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday. The meeting has been moved to the Carbondale Community Center, 607 E. College. David Morris, executive director of the Illinois Red Cross, and Charles Hanes, staff specialist, are speaking on creating an "Energy Independent Carbondale." The conference is the culmination of two previously held energy forums and will be the basis for a report to the City Council from the Energy Futures Task Force, which is drafting a comprehensive energy plan for the city.

Recreation for Special Populations will hold an Outdoor Awareness Day Sunday. Various outdoor activities, including a campfire dinner, are planned. A $1.25 fee for the dinner must be paid by Thursday in the Office of Recreation for Special Populations in the Recreation Center. More information may be obtained from Sue Williams, extension 16, or Extension Scout Leader Rhonda McDaniel at 10-1 Mon-Thurs.

A Murphyshere man was convicted of armed robbery Tuesday for his part in the hold-up of a Handy-Mart convenience store in De Soto on Nov. 17. The gun used in the robbery, a .22 caliber Sentinel revolver, had been stolen from a Carbondale resident, police said. Bruce Griffin was one of three men arrested a few minutes after the robbery, police said. Materials stolen from the store were found when the arrests were made, police said.

Griffin, who was released from the State Prison in Menard just a week prior to the robbery, was convicted for driving a getaway car while his brothers, Dan and Bobby, allegedly robbed the store of $200 cash, a cashier's wallet and a carton of cigarette papers. Griffin has already pleaded guilty to armed robbery and will be sentenced March 10. Bobby Griffin's case has not been brought to trial yet.

The prosecutor in the case, assistant Jackson County State's Attorney Michael C. Carr, said the testimony of DeSoto Police Officer Curtis Ehlers was crucial to the conviction.

Ehlers was staked-out across from the store and testified that he saw Bruce Griffin drive the car while Dan and Bobby entered the store. Ehlers said Bruce never entered the store.

Dan Griffin testified on his brother's behalf saying the incident never took place. However, the prosecution submitted a statement, signed by Dan Griffin and taken before the trial, admitting that the robbery took place.

Both Bruce and Dan face armed robbery charges in Williamson County.

"Collective work" is theme for black history observance

By Vical Ogelasty Student Writer

February marked the observance of Black History Month and the Black Affairs Council has promoted numerous activities in honor of the black community.

Black History Month was initiated by the Harvard Law School, 50 years ago, according to the Negro History Bulletin.

The theme of the SIU-C celebration is Ujima. Ujima, the third of the seven principles of blackness, means a "cooperative work and responsibility."

"One of the purposes of BAC is to form a collective unit of participation among black students and the Carbondale community," said Gena Gunn, graduate assistant for black affairs. "This fits right in with our theme for the month, which is to pull the campus and community together, said Gunn.

The BAC planning committee started planning the month-long celebration in late September. BAC is an umbrella organization that coordinates all black students and groups on campus.

Gunn said the theme for the Black History Month was "The theme of this year is to raise $500," said Gunn.

McDowell was an SIU-C student who died of a rare blood disease. The scholarship money will be given to a student who plans to attend graduate school, said Gunn.

Movies, dinners and rap sessions have also been planned for the month.

The male and female relations rap sessions, which will be directed by BAC staff member Charles Low, are expected to be a large event.

The BAC took the theme "Black History Month" from the seven principles of blackness which are celebrated each year during the Kwanzaa celebration, said Gunn.

The other principles of blackness are umoja (unity), kujichagulia (self-determination), ujamaa (cooperation), umoja (cooperation), nia (purpose), kujichagulia (creativity) and jaman (faith).

Last year's Black History Month theme was Kujichagulia, said Gunn.

Shah's former aide claims Jordan tried double cross

By Charles J. Hasley
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) -- The former chief aide to the exiled Shah of Iran says Hamilton Jordan, chief of staff in the Carter White House, double-crossed the deposed ruler by "making a deal to have the shah arrested in Panama" in an attempt to win freedom for the American hostages.

In an interview looking back over the events of the hostage crisis, Robert Armao used harsh language to describe U.S. actions during the late Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's three-month stay in Panama.

The former Pahlavi aide was particularly bitter toward Jordan, who arranged the haven in Panama. Armao said he knew all along that the former presidential assistant "could not be trusted."

He characterized the shah in the last months of his life as a man worried that his family would be scarred and branded by the hostage crisis vulnerable to Panamanian extortionists and driven into a dangerous legal corner by U.S. officials playing on his imperial pride.

Armao said Jordan and White House counsel Lloyd Cutler assured the cancer-stricken Pahlavi that "Panama had no diplomatic relations (with Iran), no extradition. He would be safe, comfortable, and they would provide for his medical care," meaning he would have access to American hospitals.

But, Armao said, it eventually led to his plan to have the shah later "made a deal to have the shah arrested in Panama."

Jordan refused comment Wednesday on Armao's latest assertions, but he has answered previous claims of a U.S. "deal" to have the ex-shah arrested by saying the matter was out of U.S. hands because Panamanian law requires the detention of anyone accused of crimes in extradition proceedings.

While the shah was in the United States, Iran demanded his return in exchange for the American hostages, hoping to try him for alleged mass murder and corruption crimes. With Pahlavi in Panama, the revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini began court proceedings to have him extradited.

Armao said the ex-shah agreed to live in Panama "because his pride would not let him linger here because he did not want responsibility for the hostages to weigh on his family's conscience."

The former aide contended the Carter administration played on the ex-shah's pride to get him to go to Panama, since the only alternative was humiliating -- staying in the United States where officials made it obvious he was not wanted.

A Panamanian doctor treating the ex-shah said Tuesday that a French lawyer and Argentinian banker, who had been involved in the crisis, have since confirmed the Panamanians planned to put Pahlavi on a private plane and then arrest him once all the extradition documents were filed. Whether Panama eventually would have handed him over to Iran was an unanswerable question.

The ex-shah's stay in New York for gallbladder surgery led to the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and hostages in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979. Six weeks later, Pahlavi left the United States for a resort island off the coast of Panama.

ISU track coach sees Redbird-SIU fight

By Greg Walsh
Staff Writer

Illinois State will be competing in its first Missouri Valley Conference Men's Indoor Track Championship when it hosts the league meet on Saturday at Horton Field House Saturday and Sunday.

"We are going to make the Redbirds to become contenders for the conference crown," Men's track Coach John Coughlan said his second-ranked Redbirds will do their best because they are always trying to win the meet.

"We are going to get on the track and in the weight room and make a run at them. We are sure going try hard," the fourth-year coach said.

He called the Saluki-Redbird matchup "a pretty appropriate anticipation of the meet.

"There are probably three good sprinters in the league, so second group would be Indiana State, Drake and Wichita State. The first is SIU-C and us," Coughlan said.

But the Redbirds may be at a disadvantage. Since entering the conference in 1976, SIU-C has never lost an MVC indoor or outdoor championship meet, a record, Men's track Coach Lew Hartwig said his squad does not want to surrender.

This is the second time the Redbirds have not done well against the Salukis either. The Salukis beat ISU at the January dual meet, 86-43. SIU-C also outscored ISU in the Illinois Intercollegiates, 153-130, and last week's Central Collegiates, 138-67.

But Coughlan would not say the Redbirds are ready to give up.

"We are going to make a pretty good run at them," he said. "I don't think we have any chance of winning an event that will win for sure, but we've got many that might win.

The Redbirds will be in the 300- and 440-yard dashes lead the pack in addition, Terry Meece and freshmen Ernie Davern and "could" win the 600-yard run with sophomore Scott MacDougall.

"We're up for goals," Coughlan said.

In the 1,000-meter run, ISU's Mike Kirk has already qualified for the NCAA indoor championships with a time of 2:01.1, so he was expected to do well. However, Coughlan said, Kirk may not be full strength because he was hit by a car while running Tuesday night.

Coughlan said, "He was taken to hospital and released. He said his knee hurt a little, but he will compete.

As for the half-mile, mile and two-mile runs, Coughlan said Illinois State has the potential "to win a lot of them.

Coughlan said he was very confident in his mile relay team, which has qualified for NCAA meet by running a 2:13.04, over three seconds better than its Saluki counterpart.

"If there is a weakness on the Redbird team, it is field events. ISU's best chance for a first could come in the high jump. Senior Vince Davis could win the event, even though Saluki freshman Stephen Wray has jumped 14 higher to 7-2. Coughlan said Wray and Davis may not be the only contenders because there are many other good high jumpers in the valley.

"A guy could go 6-10 and not place. Who knows who will win," he said.

Coughlan said the Redbirds will suffer the most in the other field events.

"We are nowhere near as strong as SIU-C in the field," Coughlan said. "In the pole vault, long jump and triple jump, we are definitely going to be outscored."

ISU also got a break since the 35-pound weight throw was dropped from the field events this year.

"There will be less points to score," Coughlan said, "and SIU-C did well in that last year.

Coughlan pointed out the flu hurt his team during late January, and most of his trackmen have just returned to full strength.

"We're about as healthy as I want to be going into the meet," Coughlan said.

Women swimmers cruise past SEMO

By Keith MacIntosh
Student Writer

The SIU-C women's swim team defeated Southeast Missouri State, 107-83, in its last home meet of the season Tuesday at the Recreation Center.

For all practical purposes, the meet clinched the Redbird team will represent quality for the upcoming AIAW national meet, to be held March 18-20 at Columbia, S.C.

"It was really pleased," SIU-C track Coach Steve Hill said Tuesday after the meet in some good time.

Hill said he was particularly pleased with the performances of his senior point swimmers—Shari Schedin, Pam Smith, Patti Perreniss and Debbie Hill—"all of whom turned in their best times of the season.

The highlight of the meet occurred in the 100-yard breaststroke when SIU-C's Pam Ratcliffe set a school record at 1:09.91.

Ratcliffe lived up to her name, " cruise past SEMO'sRegion "...in a 2:13.48 time. The 200-yard free relay, was won by SEMO with a time of 1:40.76. The 200-yard freestyle was won by SEMO with a time of 56.61, allowing her to edge the semifinals' in the Illinois Conference.

Saluki's Perreniss (57.41), and Smith (59.93) had good times in the 100-yard breaststroke. SEMO was also victorious in the 300-yard backstroke. Rater was the best in the 200-yard butterfly as well.

Taking SEMO's way as Ratcliffe beat Kay Douglas with a time of 1:11.13.

Hill said he was very happy with the season performance of his team.

Iowa sits in Big 10 driver's seat;

Indiana, Illini one game behind

By United Press International

Iowa, first in Big Ten basketball and ranked eighth in the nation, appears to be in the driver's seat to upset the Salukis season enters its last two weeks.

The Hawkeyes begin a two-game home stand Thursday against Purdue and Saturday against the league, owns one-a-game lead over Indiana, which hosts Michigan Monday.

After Michigan, Iowa hosts Wisconsin before wrapping up the season a week before the March 13 NCAA Thursday and Purdue Saturday.

Each is a contender for an NCAA berth. The Hawkeyes have a home game, while the Boilermakers are at home, but face the Buckeyes Thursday and Michigan Saturday.

In other games Thursday night, Illinois hosts Minnesota at home and Michigan State is at Northwestern.

Iowa is a team managed to get to the top with five fine on the road. A 73-67 road win over Minnesota today was a sign his team is too experienced to have a letdown coming back to play Michigan.

Our coaches know what has to be done," Olson said. "The greater the pressure, the greater the need to respond to it."

Michigan, 7-7 in the league but 16-7 overall, is coming back from a loss at home to Northwestern and Coach Bill Frieder hopes his team can win two and two weeks.

"We've just got to try to get things going come game with can win on 1:40.76. The 200-yard freestyle was won by SEMO with a time of 1:40.76. The 200-yard freestyle was won by SEMO with a time of 56.61, allowing her to edge the road in the last 11 years and hasn't won at Purdue since 1983.

Indiana stayed in the race by whipping the Gophers, 74-49, last Saturday. But Coach Bobby Knight said he was still looking for consistency from his club in order to make a run at defending the Big Ten title.

Indiana defeated Ohio State on the road last month and will seek to clinch its share of the West and post-season playoff dreams.

Coach Eldon Miller, whose team was considered a strong number two in the nation, has been under fire all week from Buckeye followers but has insisted he won't resign.

"It's a tough week, but our experience has been confined with tough weeks before," said Miller, whose club is 18-5 overall.

Indiana defeated Minnesota at home here this year, but has only beaten Minnesota twice on the season.

"They've already played for the biggest names in music...Temptations, Gladys Knight, Impressions and B.B. King. They've already received 2 gold albums.,

Gymnast a hit despite mom's jinx

By Michelle Schwenk
Staff Writer

Randy Bettis' mother has never seen her son perform in a gymnastics meet because she thinks she is a jinx. "My mother is paranoid as heck," Bettis said. "One time she went to see my brother play in a football game and she pulled into the parking lot, an ambulance was leaving. When she got inside the stadium, they called her to the medic's room because she had broken his collarbone in the warm-up."

Another time, she walked in the gym for a gymnastics meet and two minutes later Randy missed a vault, broke his ribs and tearing cartilage in his chest. Last year at the Kurt Thomas Invitational, Mrs. Bettis came to watch her son's warm-up but then decided to go home because she was afraid to jinx her son. She didn't feel well enough, however, as the electricity in the Arena went off soon after her departure. Mrs. Bettis might finally get a chance to see Randy in a real meet because SIU-C's men's gymnastics team is scheduled to be first at SIU-C's men's gymnastics meet this weekend at 1:30 p.m. Bettis said he will be ready.

DO YOU REMEMBER when the basketball Salukis were champs instead of chumps? I do. That's why I'm writing this column. Saturday night's contest between SIU-C and Drake was lost on the scoreboard but left Saluki home game, and that fact stands up a lot of memories of my first year in Carbondale.

I attended eleven of 50 Saluki home games, both as a reporter and as a fan, in my four years as an SIU-C student. But the games from the 1977-78 season are the ones I remember most fondly.

Believe me, freshmen, the crowds of 2,500 you've read about this year would have been a sellout in 1977-78. I can remember the Salukis scoring and smelling for important Missouri Valley Conference basketball games, SIU-C beat Indiana State, New Mexico State and Creighton. Contests against Drake and Bradley, our most formidable opponents, had about 9,000. And about 7,000 fans braved a snowstorm and sub-zero temperatures to watch SIU-C play a last-place West Texas A&M team.

THE 1977-78 SALUKIS over drew a crowd of almost 6,000 to watch the annual victory over ROOSEVELT, for Pete's sake.

The year before I arrived, the Salukis had been led by Mike Glenn, a fabulous guard in NCAA tournament. Glenn, whose grade-point average was almost as perfect as his home shot, was gone in my first year, but the team still had some fine players.

Like Gary Wilson, a 6-4 forward known for his leaping ability and shattering slam-dunks, and Mike Barrow, a hulking outside shooter. Barry Smith and Wayne Abrams, just sophomores at the time, also played prominent roles. But probably the most talked-about Saluki was Dan Kleidowski, third in the nation in the "forced marble," whose elbows were nearly always under the lights.

Nobody expected anything from that team—that at least not during my freshman year. Like this year's team, the Salukis of 1977-78 had no seniors. That just made what happened that season even more fun.

COACHED MASTERFULLY by Paul Lambert, a roly-poly little man who preached discipline, offense and tough defense, and buoyed by being an Arena crowd, the Salukis finished 17-10. They would have repeated as Valley champions with a win over Creighton in the last regular-season game, but Wilson sprained his ankle and SIU-C lost a nationally-televised contest, 62-56.

Without Wilson, the Salukis lost their first-round MVC tournament game to Drake, 75-58. A crowd of just 3,000, like the smallest of the year, showed up. At the time, nobody thought much of it, but it was an omen.

Lambert resigned, attracted by the big bucks Auburn University offered. He never coached a game there, dying in a motel fire in Columbus, Ga., in June of 1978.

Joe Gottfried, a successful Division III coach at Ashland College, was hired to replace Lambert. The team that got no respect in 1977-78 received nothing but adulation—the role of Valley favorite and spot in several Top 20 polls—during the 1978-79 pre-season.

But a BIRD from French Lick, Ind., first name Larry, wrecked the Salukis' chances of going to the NCAA tourney. He led Indiana State from obscurity into the NCAA championship game and the Salukis, saddled with a 15-13 record, sat at home and watched circa.

The slide has continued since then, to 7-17 in 1979-80 and a record 18-game losing streak this year. Gottfried is in grave danger of becoming the first SIU-C basketball coach to be fired.

But the memories remain. I still remember vividly the Salukis' 79-76 win over Indiana State in January of 1978. The Screamingos were undone and ranked fourth in the nation at the time, but Bird and Co. were shot down by Wilson, Abrams, Smith, Hurdle and a crowd that refused to let SIU-C lose.

I'D LIKE TO make a film and set it to an appropriate piece of music—Barbra Streisand's "The Way We Were." The first half of the film would consist of clips from the 1977-78 Salukis, of Wilson dunking, Abrams befuddling opponents with his ballhandling, Lambert kneeling along the sidelines yelling instructions, and fans cheering.

The second part of the film would be the present—bad passes, traveling violations, leaky defense, Gottfried sitting in his chair with head bowed, and a massive sign reading "Saluki Basketball Crisis."

Junior Randy Bettis performs one of the tricks in his floor exercise routine during practice. Bettis got into gymnastics as the result of a dare from a friend in grade school. He will perform in his last home meet as a senior against Illinois State and Indiana State at the Arena Friday at 7:30 p.m.
