Reagan's role in scandal still unclear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's exact role in the biggest political scandal since Watergate remained unclear Thursday, despite eight hours of videotaped sworn testimony about the Iran-Contra affair.

Under questioning last Friday and Saturday, Reagan repeatedly said he could not remember important details of the scandal, involving the secret U.S. sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of some of the arms money to help the Nicaraguan Contras when such aid was illegal.

Nor was significant new light shed, in an edited transcript released Thursday, on the stated rationale for the affair — an attempt to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon.

The sworn testimony was videotaped in Los Angeles before the federal judge who is presiding over the case of John Poindexter, Reagan's one-time national security adviser who insisted on getting testimony from his former boss.

Since the scandal broke in November 1986, Reagan's statements have been inconsistent and marked by memory lapses.

He first told the Tower commission, which was investigating in January 1987, that he approved a secret shipment of arms by Israel to Iran, but could not remember the exact date.

Approval required the president's signature or an "authorization." Reagan first said he signed one, then later said he did not approve such an order for the initial Israeli arms shipment.

But Reagan then wrote back to the Tower commission on Feb. 20, saying: "Try as I might, I cannot recall anything whatsoever about whether I approved an Israeli sale in advance or whether I approved replenishment of Israeli stocks around August of Gus says Reagan isn't quite sure about definite statements he might have made, but firmly maintains he's not unclear about something.

Flag law tested in courts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three defendants who burned American flags on the steps of the U.S. Capitol in defiance of a new law asked a federal judge Thursday to dismiss charges of flag desecration.

The request came one day after a federal judge in Seattle dismissed a similar case.

U.S. District Judge June Green heard arguments from the three charged with violating the Flag Protection Act of 1989 and from lawyers for the executive branch and the House and Senate. She made no immediate ruling and took the case under advisement.

Defendants Dread Scott, Dave Blalock and Shawn Eichman were arrested Oct. 30 by U.S. Capitol Police for burning flags on the steps of the Capitol two days after the law took effect. The three claim the law is unconstitutional and they have a right to violate it.

A federal judge in Seattle Wednesday — in the first challenge to the law — dismissed charges against four people arrested for burning American flags moments after the law took effect Oct. 28.

Officials uncertain about bar problem

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Carbondale officials aren't sure why the city is having a problem with bar occupancy.

Bar owner Sally Carter said this is because there is no problem.

"I don't have a problem with overoccupancy," said Carter, the co-owner of Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave. "Every business has peak hours — the Student Center, the mall at Christmas time. There is only a short period of time when everyone wants in at once."

Carter said a Daily Egyptian investigation that found Hangar 9 in violation of city capacity limitations was wrong.

"There is no way 400 people could be in the Hangar," Carter said in response to a Daily Egyptian report that said the Hangar had about 175 extra patrons over its capacity Jan. 27.

The reporters also counted more patrons than allowed by city law at Frankie's, 204 W. College St., Sidetracks, West College Street, and American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave.

Frankie's and American Tap received tickets for overoccupancy from Carbondale Police last weekend. They are scheduled to appear in court March 5.

Frankie's manager Kenneth Akers and owners or managers of Sidetracks could not be reached for comment. American Tap managers declined comment.

"We six bars on the Strip aren't the only ones that have to cope with problems of dealing with peak business hours," Carter said. "It's not fair you picked six bars out of 62 liquor licenses."

Mayor Neil Dillard said he believes the managements of the bars have overlooked the occupancy codes.

"I believe it's just an oversight. It has been called to (the bar owners') attention by the Fire Department and police, so we expect it to be resolved," he said.

Carbondale city code requires all public establishments to adhere to their legal capacity limitations, determined by a formula that calculates one person per unit area of space.

Carbondale Fire Chief Everett Rushing said the problem of bar overoccupancy seems to have just cropped up in the last month.

With combined efforts of the Police and Fire departments, the city is beginning to crack down, Rushing said.

Civic center feasibility study to be implemented

Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Civic Center Authority Board of Directors took another step toward its goal Thursday by deciding to implement an Economic Feasibility Study through the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission.

Funding for the study was approved by the Carbondale City Council on Jan. 18. The preliminary budget of $32,000 also will include an economic impact study and a master building study. Both are required to apply for state funding for the proposed civic center to be built in downtown Carbondale.

Public information brochures and meetings with various local organizations to gauge public support will be taken a step further with a needs assessment survey that is expected to be sent out next week.

Step one is a needs assessment to get information community-wide to take into account everyone's needs and wants, Jim Hanson, of the Commission, said.

The surveys will be sent to groups and individuals with an emphasis on those who will be users of the civic center.

Hanson also suggested that letters of support from the groups be obtained. The letters would state how the groups would use the center and where revenue would come from. These letters and survey could be combined, he said.

A site for the center is another aspect the authority must decide on in the very near future. Hanson said that although it isn't necessary for the survey, it may help in obtaining responses.

The second major step is developing a plan of operations that contains a financial plan with a five-year projection. The state wants a specific projection of revenue, Hanson said. The application can show an operating deficit for the first year or two, but it

Strike by Pittston miners sets national standard

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The 10-month strike by Pittston Group coal miners to get a satisfactory contract sets a standard for company officials across the nation to heed, an Illinois United Mine Workers official said.

"I think it sent a message to the companies. Now I think a company will take a long hard look and say 'Is it worth it to risk a 10- or 11-month strike?'" Jerry Jones, president of District 12 United Mine Workers of America, said.

The union ratified a new contract last Tuesday only after Labor secretary Elizabeth Dole brought in a federal mediator, William Usery, to end the dispute.

Usery said health care benefits for employees, employees families and retirees was a main point of concern for the miners. Satisfactory agreement on those benefits avoids creating a precedent by which other coal companies could cut employee health care.

A spokesman for the Old Ben Coal Company in Benton said the problems with Pittston have had little effect on the company.

"The only impact (of the strike) I could identify at this time would be the strikes flowing over into our area," Jim Spiller said.

Illinois miners, as well as miners in other states, participated in strikes in June and July to show support for Pittston miners in Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. The Pittston strike began with a walkout in April 1989.

The strike involved about 2,000 miners at 30 mines in the three states.

Jones said as of Wednesday he had word that the Pittston mines were being inspected for safety measures and that miners could be back to work in a few days.

Mahan's threes push SIU-C into 1st

By Kevin Simpson

A little additional quickness can go a long way.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin opted to go with a smaller, quicker lineup down the stretch and it payed big dividends as the Salukis blew past the upset-minded Bradley Braves 83-71 Thursday at the Arena.

The SIU-C win coupled with Wichita State's 66-52 upset win over Illinois State and the Salukis are tied for first place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

For the sixth time this season, the Salukis rebounded from a loss with a victory. SIU-C upped its record to 22-6 and 8-4 in the Valley. Bradley fell to 11-17 and 6-7.

With the Salukis down by 6 points, 66-60, with six minutes left in the game, junior point guard Sterling Mahan canned a 3-pointer to put the momentum in the Dawgs favor. On the Braves next possession, Mahan made the defensive play of the game.

Bradley's junior guard Curtis Stuckey drove the lane for what appeared to be an easy hoop but Mahan harassed him into shooting an airball. Junior forward Rick Shipley picked up the miss and a Bradley foul in the process.

Two Shipley free throws, another Mahan 3-pointer and the Salukis took the lead for good. Junior guard Kelvan Lawrence, playing in place of Jerry Jones to give the Dawgs more defensive quickness, picked off an inbounds pass which Shipley converted it into a layup. Freshman Ashraf Amaya intercepted the Braves' next inbounds pass and sank two free throws after being fouled to complete a 12-0 run by the Salukis. The Salukis outdistanced the Braves 23-5 down the stretch to secure the victory.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin once again relied on defense to pull the Salukis out of a poor offensive night.

"We thought we were better off playing a small lineup," Herrin said. "I have to give our players tremendous credit. Our press was very good. I think maybe we just wanted it a little more down the stretch."

Mahan paced the Salukis with 22 points — six 3-pointers — and dished out five assists. Shipley scored 17 points to go with 8 rebounds, five assists and two steals. Stuckey led all scorers with 29 points but sank only 3 of 12 second-half shots.

For the game, the Salukis shot a woeful 38 percent from the field, compared to 50 percent for Bradley. The Salukis dominated the glass — offensively and defensively — and finished with 45 carems while the Braves managed only 34. Amaya finished with a game-high 15 rebounds.

Bradley head coach Stan Albeck said the defense and rebounding proved to be in the Salukis favor down the stretch.

Heimstead's late shot keys women past Wichita State

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Colleen Heimstead's driving basket with three seconds remaining gave the Saluki women a 63-61 victory over Wichita State Thursday at the Arena.

The Salukis improved to 11-4 in the Gateway Conference and 16-9 overall. The Shockers fell to 6-10 and 7-18.

Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said the Shockers may have been surprised at Heimstead taking the final shot.

"Colleen is probably the last person they expected to shoot it," Scott said. "That was a great clutch shot."

Wichita State Coach Linda Hargrove said her team wasn't expecting any one player.

"You always think they are going to Amy Rakers," Hargrove said. "But we were playing the same defense we had used the whole game."

Scott used Rakers carefully. Rakers, suffering from the flu, didn't start, but played 15 minutes. She led the Salukis with 17 points and 6 rebounds.

"This was a great team victory," Scott said. "We had a great effort off the bench from (Kelly) Firth, Karrie Redeker and Cyd Mitchell played very well. This was a crucial victory."

Heimstead's winning basket was symbolic on a night the Salukis had to prove they weren't just Amy Rakers.

Mitchell, who started in Rakers' place, responded well in her first career start. The junior forward from Harrisburg scored 4 points, grabbed 5 rebounds and had 2 steals and 2 assists.

Ingram counting on youth to net Gateway crown

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

As the SIU-C women's swimming team prepares for the Gateway conference meet this weekend, swimming and diving coach Doug Ingram is looking to several of his young swimmers to capture victories and give the Salukis the conference title.

Nancy Schmidtkofer, a sophomore majoring in exercise science from Spokane, Wash., has the fastest time in the 50-yard freestyle for the Salukis. Her best time in the event is a mere .6 second off the NCAA qualifying time.

"I am very confident about this weekend," Schmidtkofer said.

"I'm in a lot better shape and have a lot more experience this year than last year. I think it is going to be a good meet for me."

Ingram expects to use Schmidtkofer in other events.

"Nancy has come around in the backstroke events. Backstroke is probably the one event that we don't have a lot of depth, so we'll need her to swim hard for us in those events," Ingram said.

Kristin Harvey, a freshman majoring in visual communications from Indianapolis, Ind., is one of the team's top breaststrokers. She had mono earlier in the year and has battled back to get in top shape for the conference meet.

"I'm back into it now and I am ready to swim really fast," Harvey said.

The breaststroke events should be the most competitive, Ingram said.

"Kristin (Harvey) will probably be seeded no better than second in this meet because a girl from Northern Illinois has a better time, but I think it will be a real battle," Ingram said.

Harvey is excited about competing in the conference meet, especially with it being at home.

"It will be a big plus for us to swim at home," Harvey said. "It's our home environment so we know the blocks and we know the walls and our fans will be there."

Saturday's game between the Salukis and the Illinois State Redbirds could have a major impact on deciding who will capture or share the Missouri Valley Conference crown.

Game time is 7:35 p.m. at the Arena.

A win against the Redbirds and the Salukis, 22-6 and 8-4, will knock Illinois State out of first place.

SIU-C head coach Rich Herrin said Valley teams are naturally at their best at this point in the season and the Salukis will rise to the challenge.

"We're gonna try and be the best we can," Herrin said. "I think the advantage we have is we'll have a great crowd there. We think that's an advantage but we still gotta go out and do the job."

"We've got a challenge and we have to come ready to play," Herrin said. "I don't care what kind of role you get put into, whether you're favored or not, you still have to come out and produce."

Illinois State played Wichita State on the road Thursday and will play Creighton on Monday in Normal on the last night of the conference regular season. On the same evening, SIU-C plays Wichita State to close out its season until tournament play begins March 3 in Normal.

Before Thursday's games, Illinois State was in sole possession of first place with an 8-3 conference mark. Their overall record of 14-10 is not indicative of how first-year head coach Bob Bender has turned the Redbirds around since conference play began.

After a 4-6 start, Illinois State gained confidence and wins. The Redbirds were winners of five straight games before Thursday's game.

Illinois State was not looked on as a contender beginning the season.

from St. Paul Minn., took firsts in the 200 individual medley and 200 butterfly last year at the conference meet and hopes to do even better this year.

"I feel stronger all around this year," Hosier said. "I am more confident about the team, the coaches and myself and I am sure I can win this weekend."

"Illinois State is a good team, but I think we are mentally tougher. We swam against tougher teams all year and we have more depth."

Ingram has confidence that Hosier, his top butterflyer, will have a strong meet.

Explosion rips U.S. tanker, American crewman killed

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An explosion and fire ripped through a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker Thursday in the Persian Gulf, killing one American crewman and leaving another missing in the first such incident since a 1988 Iran-Iraq cease-fire took effect. However, U.S. officials in Washington said the blast aboard the Surf City, which also injured at least four other sailors, did not appear to be from a mine left from the war or an attack on the tanker.

French rocket explodes, destroys satellites

KOUROU, French Guiana (UPI) — A French-built Ariane 4 rocket exploded two minutes after liftoff Thursday, destroying two Japanese communications satellites in a major disaster for the European space program. Frederick d'Allest, president of Arianespace, said a full investigation would be conducted into the disaster before flights are resumed.

U.S., Britain warn protesting Nepalese

KATHMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The U.S. and British embassies posted notices in Nepalese hotels Thursday warning their citizens to stay away from certain sections of Katmandu during pro-democracy protests planned for the weekend. The notifications came as demonstrations demanding a return to a multi-party system continued Thursday in the mountainous kingdom at the top of the world — home of Mount Everest, the world's highest peak.

Insults huried by rival Christian militants

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Militia leader Samir Geagea pledged Thursday there would be "no more battles" for control of the Christian enclave, but military strongman Gen. Michel Aoun called him a liar and said the city was a powder keg ready to explode at any minute. The remarks by the rival Christian military leaders, who have been vying for control of the Christian enclave since Jan. 31, came amid efforts to reinforce a shaky cease-fire that has been in effect since Saturday.

FDA approves use of low-cal fat substitute

The new product, called Simplex, is a blended, protein-based ingredient that provides a smooth and creamy taste sensation similar to fat in food, but with far fewer calories.

Shell says Roxana oil spill larger than early estimates

ROXANA (UPI) — Shell Oil Co. said Thursday an oil spill this week at its Roxana refinery was 16 times larger than early estimates. The revised estimate came on the heels of a statement from an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency spokesman who said the refinery just north of St. Louis has Illinois' worst environmental track record among refineries in the last year. Tony Canino, a spokesman for Shell, said early estimates of the Monday spill were made by the IEPA — not Shell.

Visual literacy emphasized by design educators

By Jerlanne Kimmel
Staff Writer

British designers Ken Baynes and Krysia Brochocka spoke to educators at SIU-C Wednesday, kicking off efforts to integrate aspects of design education into the general education curriculum at every level from preschool through higher education.

Baynes' concept of "Learning Through Design" addresses design education's role in the development of critical, creative and visual thinking skills.

These skills are necessary to "read between the pictures" and negotiate the modern information age where most information comes across in graphics form, said Ann Saunders, assistant professor in art and design and co-creator of LTD.

"We assume that because we know how to read and write, we can't be manipulated or taken advantage of by visual information," Saunders said.

Visual literacy is a stepping stone to other literacies, Saunders said. Design awareness plays a fundamental role in all other disciplines from science to communication, she said.

"We need to know how to identify, interpret and analyze various forms of information because visual information is designed to appeal to one's emotions as opposed to one's intellect," Saunders said.

The LTD concept suggests that by training individuals to be visually literate, people will be prepared to understand images in a world where "everything from the bag you carry to the evening news" is designed, Saunders said.

According to recent reports issued by the U.S. Department of Education, American students have "disturbing" gaps in geographic knowledge, have "dreadfully inadequate" reading and writing skills, and lag behind their counterparts in other industrial countries in math and science.

"If we want to become once more leaders in the economic and technological community, we need to educate our society to think with all sides of the brain," Saunders said. For example, geography students will be better prepared if they are equipped with an understanding of the visual language necessary to read and interpret maps, Saunders said.

Great Britain will begin implementing design education into its general education curriculum for 5-, 7- and 11-year-olds starting in September, Brochocka, also a design educator, said. The program will be fully implemented in the United Kingdom by 1993.

The program is a source of "tremendous change in the whole educational system," Brochocka said.

Ways of integrating art and design awareness include studying drama in English classes and dance in physical education classes. An additional eight percent of class time will be devoted to music and design technology, Baynes said.

Such a curriculum has been established in Australia for a number of years, Baynes said. The main influence to implement such a program in Great Britain came from industrialists who said they needed more people with a practical view of the world and who could understand the concept of change, Baynes said.

Saunders said she hopes to develop strategies to push LTD to the forefront of the U.S. educational agenda by bringing together and tapping into people from all disciplines who are interested in the concept.

"We are of the mind that this is as important as in the '60s when we needed to have P.E. in the schools and a man on the moon," Saunders said. "And it will take that kind of effort to advance this nationally."

Baynes, who is a design consultant, prolific writer and design educator, was originally trained as a painter and a craftsman in stained glass. He works as a senior partner in the educational design group, Triangle Projects.

Baynes is a consultant to the British government's Design Dimension Project, to the National Building Museum in Washington, D.C. and the Royal Fine Art Commission in London. He is the presenter and script writer for the Design Matters television series in London where he has been involved in creating 24 programs dealing with every aspect of design.

Baynes was responsible for the first design education course for high school teachers and founded the all-graduate program at the Design Education Unit of the Royal College of Art where he worked as the unit's director for five years.

Baynes' publications include three books: "Art and Society," "Scoop, Scandal and Strife: A Study of Photography in Newspapers," and "The Art of the Engineer" (with Francis Pugh).

Bar crowds need to be limited for safety

BUSINESS MAY be booming at some of Carbondale's many bars, but at whose expense?

Bar business equals big business. And a social one at that. In Carbondale, a lot of the University undergraduate's social life pivots around establishments serving alcoholic beverages.

A POPULAR theory behind this phenomenon goes along the lines that there is nowhere else for the students, particularly the underaged ones, to socialize. While that's not exactly true, given the University's traditional party image and the city's 18-and-over bar entrance requirements, it's no wonder that the myth persists.

ALONG WITH this popularity comes some possible safety hazards. The Carbondale bars attract many patrons, so the possibility of dangerous overcrowding always exists. Fire Bureau inspectors have set specific limits which need to be enforced as to how many people can be in a public establishment at any given time.

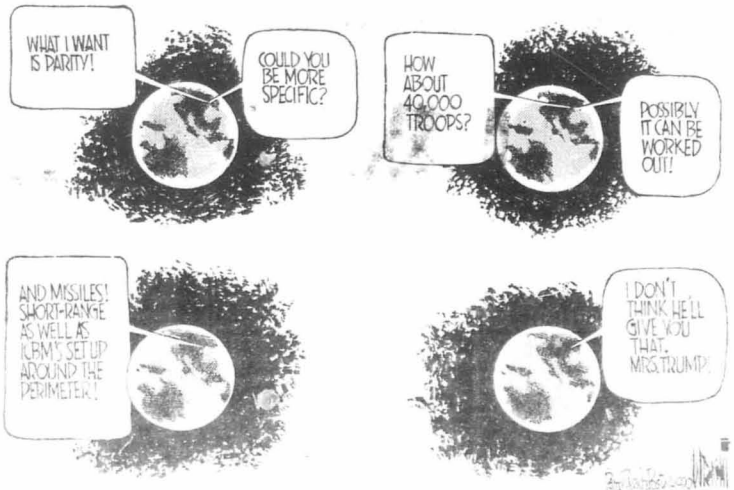

A two-week Daily Egyptian investigation of the seven bars along South Illinois Avenue and West College Street uncovered overcrowding problems. Four bars were found by the police to have far more patrons than they are legally permitted to have inside their premises.

THIS MANY people in one place at the same time not only creates a huge inconvenience for everyone involved but is a potentially dangerous situation. What should be done to combat these dangerous problems? What if a fire were to break out? How would people be evacuated? What if someone got in a quarrel that degenerated into violence, drawing in innocent bystanders?

While not every bar in Carbondale is guilty of this practice, several of the bars investigated were found to have more patrons than allowed by the city code. Two of them, Frankie's and The American Tap, were issued citations for these over occupancy problems last weekend. Violation of the codes only carries a minimum fine of $10 and a maximum of $500. This fine may seem appropriate to the violation, but not in the context of endangering lives.

ONE POSITIVE thing has come out of this. The Carbondale police have stepped up their patrols on the bars in an effort to get this problem under control. Some bars have placed counters at the door to determine when their bar is too crowded, and bars such as the Hangar 9 and T-Birds have closed their doors after reaching capacity, forcing patrons to wait outside until the crowd subsides.

But this is just a start. These efforts must be stepped up and continued until the problem is eliminated. We all need to be aware and takes steps to prevent a very real tragedy. The crowds in any establishment, including popular bars, must be kept down to the maximum amount prescribed by the fire code inspectors as safe for the occupancy of their building. Period. Being turned away at the door may put a damper on some people's evening, but it's a small price to ensure their safety.

Glasnost furthers human rights

There are exciting and amazing times as the political configuration of the Soviet Union dramatically changes. For the first time in my memory, I have hope for both the furtherance of human rights and the possibility of arms reduction.

It is inspiring to watch people move toward freedom and self determination. Cause for optimism regarding the relationship between east and west is strengthening as we watch the demonstrations for freedom in the Baltic countries.

Despite our government's approval of this movement toward freedom, the same appreciation and understanding does not extend to the struggling countries of Central America. Rather, the U.S. spends $1.5 million per day in El Salvador to insure that the government in power remains so. In Guatemala we are unconcerned about the vicious governmental oppression. In Nicaragua we continue to fund the Contra forces which both Eliot

Richardson and Jimmy Carter criticize as a major threat to the upcoming elections. This government's policy toward central America is exemplified in the recent Noriega affair.

As long as he provided political support the U.S. wanted, we were quite willing to ignore his crimes against the Panamanian people.

Only when his drug trafficking career became embarrassingly public, and his viciousness became focused upon U.S. citizens did Noriega become a dictator to be deposed. Apparently our government will deal with the most reprehensible of scoundrels if it serves U.S. interests.

Because of a policy rooted in a self-interest which ignores the plight of people in Central and South America, it seems that we must share the complicity in the tragedies of these countries. Currently, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala offer graphic proof of what happens to the poor and the dissident. When the ruling elite are challenged. Being imprisoned without trial or murdered by the ever present "death squads" are the usual fate of those brave enough to try and change things for the better.

As the Nicaraguan elections occur at the end of this month, I hope that impartial observers from the United Nations and the Organization of American States will help protect the legitimacy and credibility of this process.

And, if as is likely, the Sandanistas do win, then I hope our governments pursue a decent policy which enables a communication and cooperation.

Perhaps President Bush, like President Gorbachev, will become enlightened enough and courageous enough to attempt some essential positive changes in the U.S. approach to the situations in Central and South America.

Continued economic exploitation while we wield a "big stick" simply isn't morally justifiable or acceptable.—Sherry Stephens, graduate student, special education.

Parking spaces too hard to come by

Have you ever had "one of those days" when you just couldn't find a parking space? Did you have to wait "forever" to find an opening? This seems to be a common problem on campus for anyone who drives a vehicle, excluding motorcycles.

The parking situation here at SIUC is difficult for me to comprehend. For many graduate students, married students, faculty and students living at home, it can be very difficult to find a parking space every day of the week. I admit there are quite a few small parking areas available, but they are quickly taken, usually by 8 a.m. every day.

I will also admit that because of the new free parking lot (lot 50), located behind the Arena, there are adequate spaces for anyone driving a vehicle to campus. My problem is not the space available to the students and faculty, it is the money we pay for the parking stickers.

At present, for a full year a blue sticker costs $30, a red, red-overnight, or a green costs $7 and a yellow sticker costs $2. At the midpoint through the year (around February) a blue costs $20, red, red-overnight, and green costs $7 and yellow stays at $2.

This may not seem like a large amount of money to pay, but what exactly are we paying for? Why should we pay for the stickers when it is so hard to find a parking space?

My first class is at 10 a.m. and because of certain restrictions the earliest I can be on campus to "begin the hunt" is around 9 a.m. There have been several days when I have been late to my first class because I have had to wait over an hour to find a space. Fortunately, I have a lecture class in Lawson and I can slip in quietly in the back row.

I would guess that many students as well as faculty members have this same problem. I know I can always park down by the Arena and walk a country mile to my classes, but I paid for a parking sticker and believe I have the right to use it.—Dan Reed, sophomore, undecided major.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

International fest coverage bungled

The DE story "International Buffet Concludes Week of Festivity," in the Feb. 19 issue, was a masterpiece in "responsibility," misinforming and shoddily journalism," from headline, to photo captions to body copy.

Firstly, the international affair was not the conclusion of the festival, the International Cultural Show was. Both photographs have totally wrong captions proves the healthy sparsity of DE staff for accuracy.

The coverage of the Cultural Show is taken straight from a booklet which emphasized "Subject to Change." Not only was the final program different from the tentative schedule in the booklet, but also some of the countries mentioned in the booklet were not part of the final presentation. The countries and associations mentioned by the DE as having presented their cultural performances and who did not do so are: Gulf Council, Saudi Arabia and African Students Association.

Mr. DE Staff Writer, were you present at the International Cultural Show?—Nabarun Ghose, Vice-president of finance, International Student Council.

BOWED IN PRAYER

1986 followers opened the Islamic Center at its present location.

The image comes from a National Geographic special, but the scene happens only a few blocks from the University.

An Imam, the man who leads the prayer in Islam, calls the faithful to prayer. His hands on the side of his heads, he utters his call in Arabic.

HE CALLS North and South, East and West; he is a believer, for there is no clergy in the Islamic religion.

"There is no God but Allah, and Muhammad is His Prophet," the Imam calls. "Come to Salat (prayer); come to success."

The Imam calls the Muslims to prayer at Carbondale's Islamic center, 511 S. Poplar St. Many of about one thousand Carbondale followers of Islam gather there for their five daily prayers and other religious and social activities.

Carbondale's Moslem community is composed mainly of University students of various nationalities, said Mazhar Butt, a local dentist and secretary of the Islamic Center.

BUTT ARRIVED in Carbondale in 1983, when Moslems rented a local apartment to use as a Mosque, performing their prayers.

The Islamic population of Carbondale has decreased since then, Butt said, but the community prospered, and in MOSLEMS GATHER at the center every day to perform the five daily prayers. They listen to the Imam's call, and then they kneel and perform their prayers facing Mecca, the holy site of Islam.

Moslems believe that Allah, the God of Islam, is the God of the whole universe, who gave religion to Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed and all the prophets in the Bible.

MOSLEMS BELIEVE that the scriptures given to Jews and Christians have lost their original form over time.

For the Moslems, Jesus was another prophet.

Carbondale's Moslem community is composed mainly of University students of various nationalities.

—Mazhar Butt

THEY BELIEVE that the Archangel Gabriel spoke through Mohammed, the last of all the prophets, and his teachings, written under Mohammed's supervision and compiled in the Koran, the sacred book of Islam, are the ultimate message for mankind.

Butt said the Koran is the guide for humanity. It was written for all generations, past, present and future, and it teaches people how to live so that their lives are pleasant to Allah, he said.

MOSLEMS BELIEVE Islam is not an imposing religion. Believers are given guidelines that they should follow, trying to do their best to be in peace with Allah.

1985. My answer, therefore, and the simple truth is, I don't remember. Period."

Poindexter told Congress during the Iran-Contra hearings in 1987 that Reagan had approved the arms shipment in November 1985, when it occurred, and signed an order authorizing it retroactively in December 1985.

Poindexter said he destroyed the authorization when the scandal became public because it was a political bombshell that seemed to describe an outright arms-for-hostages trade.

Overall, the Tower commission report gave an image of a distant, hands-off president who delegated many details. The congressional investigation did not change that image in any substantial way, although it raised many questions about Reagan's precise role.

But documents introduced during the 1989 trial of former White House aide Oliver North suggested Reagan had far greater knowledge of Contra aid operations than previously disclosed, including military and economic aid to Honduras in exchange for allowing Contra bases and arms shipments on Honduran territory.

During his congressional testimony, Poindexter also said he could not recall many details. But his lawyers have said Poindexter will show during his trial that his actions were authorized by Reagan and were consistent with overall administration policy.

Reagan's professed lack of memory in the videotaped deposition, however, apparently provides little of the legal help Poindexter was seeking.

Another big issue is the use of arms sales money to help the Contras. In August 1987, Reagan said: "I was aware the resistance was receiving funds from third countries and from private efforts, and I endorsed those endeavors wholeheartedly. But let me put this in capital letters: I did not know about the diversion of funds."

In the testimony released Thursday, the former president appeared confused and surprised that the Tower Commission, which he appointed, determined there was a diversion of money to the Contras.

Poindexter told Congress that he had approved the diversion of money to the Contras and he never told Reagan.

Reagan said in the videotaped testimony that he would have expected Poindexter to tell him about the diversion, "unless maybe he thought he was protecting me from something. But, no, I don't understand. This is very confusing to me about this."

Reagan also said he could not remember whether he asked aides to withhold information from Congress, but insisted that he did not order Poindexter to lie to lawmakers investigating the scandal — a key charge against the former national security adviser, who met with Reagan daily.

"You can't totally eliminate (overoccupancy), but this will help control it," he said.

Rushing and Police Chief Ed Hogan said a recent Jackson County ordinance that forces county bars to close at 2 a.m. instead of 4 a.m. could be contributing to bar overoccupancy.

Overoccupancy has a "degree of newness in our community," Hogan said.

"The problem to me is that they are allowing the 18-year-olds on the premises," Hogan said.

U.S. District Judge Barbara J. Rothstein in Seattle ruled that protecting the right to political protest is more important than saving the American flag from desecration.

That case is likely to be appealed to the Supreme Court, which ruled last year in a Texas case that burning the flag as a political protest is a constitutionally protected form of free speech.

"My contention is that the statute is unconstitutional on its face," defense attorney William Kunstler argued before Green. "The First Amendment requires strict neutrality but this law singles out the American flag. ... It's impermissibly one-sided."

Charles Tiefer, deputy counsel to the House, argued the government has a right to make laws to protect its interests and "legitimate government has a sovereign interest in the flag.

"James Madison saw the distinction between recognizing sovereignty and suppression of First Amendment rights."

But Kunstler said the law violates freedom of expression.

"The law singles out only certain forms of activity," he said. "Words, language, anything that is indicative of protest activities.

... The statute is not neutral."

Kunstler said he expects Green to follow the ruling in the Seattle case.

must be shown that the deficit will be made up, he said. For example, the city could guarantee to compensate for the money that the study projected to be lost.

Involving an architect to work on the details of the building after a plan of operations is developed and conducting an economic impact study are also vital in making the state deadline for application of July 1, Hanson said.

Depending on state legislature appropriations, the authority would be eligible to receive up to 75 percent of the construction costs to build the center, to a maximum of about $3 million. The rest of the funds must be met locally.

Comedian's performance ferments

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

A Review

The Comedy Cellar had the atmosphere of a wine cellar Wednesday night as comedian Roger Kabler muddled his way through a full performance. Kabler's act began with his rendition of a comedian telling a joke and purposely stumbling through and forgetting the important parts of the story.

This was a bad opener and because the show was delayed 15 minutes, the already anxious crowd quickly turned a cold shoulder when Kabler bombed the introduction.

Kabler's impersonations of Peter Falk, Robin Williams, Jack Nicholson and Red Foxx drew much welcomed laughter from the crowd, but the material he used didn't seem appropriate for the college scene.

His funniest moments came when he was caught off guard by the crowd. When he asked one person who their favorite actor was, he received the reply of Mel Gibson.

It was obvious he didn't know any Gibson material. His comment was, "No, a real actor." Again Kabler turned to the audience for a suggestion. When he was confronted with another request for Gibson, he looked like a deer caught on a highway by a semi-trailer truck.

Kabler managed to quip one of his funniest lines when he remarked, "What the hell is this? Mel Gibson fan club night."

Overall, Kabler was doing the wrong material, in the wrong place and at the wrong time.

Why beat a dead horse? Kabler's act just wasn't flexible enough to please the crowd. He should have realized that his act wasn't going well and changed his material accordingly.

Play pays tribute to writers

A Review

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

The Calipre Stage performance of "Algonquin Wit" brings to life the literary works of four writers from the 1920s.

The performance was a tribute to Dorothy Parker, George S. Kaufman and Robert Benchley.

The performance of each character started out slow and forced, but further into the show, the performers seemed to be more comfortable with their roles and improved greatly.

The story is set in the 1920s in the Rose Room of the Algonquin Hotel in New York, where the young writers gathered regularly for lunch and conversation.

"The stage setting is a lovely suggestion of what the Rose Room looked like in the 1920s," said James Van Oosting, professor and chairman of speech communications.

Tables decorated with white tablecloths, maroon napkins and vases with fresh flowers are set on a carpet that is hand stenciled with the actual design of the floor tile from the Algonquin during the 1920s. A mini-bar and piano complete the look of the Rose Room.

Five tables were set up around the stage for the audience. This allowed the audience to get a feeling for the performance.

The performance began with a narration by Frank Case, owner of the Algonquin, who gave a detailed background on each of the writers. Case is portrayed by Scott Dillard, a doctoral student in speech communication.

The first of the writers to perform was George S. Kaufman, portrayed by Kevin Paul, a sophomore in speech communications.

Paul's performance of Kaufman was strong and believable, but there was one small drawback in one of his pieces.

"School for Waiters," a comical piece about a head waiter who teaches new recruits the art of being an irritating waiter, is comprised of many different characters, each demanding different vocal quality. At times Paul had to switch from character to character very quickly, and this caused some confusion in the different accents he used.

Writer and critic Dorothy Parker, portrayed by Amy Burt, a doctoral student in speech communications, performed four of her literary pieces.

"Just a Little One" is an amusing two-part piece that reflects on Parker's drunken conversations in the Algonquin. When the drink orders are taken, Parker always orders "just a little one" totaling a lot of little ones.

In the second part of "Just a Little One," a drunken Parker sang "You'd Be Surprised," by Irving Berlin and was accompanied by the hotel pianist, played by Marilyn Medved, a graduate student in music.

Mark Kopilash, a junior in speech communications, portrayed writer Robert Benchley and gave a humorous performance of his literary works.

"Algonquin Wit" starts at 8 tonight and Saturday at the Calipre Stage, on the second floor of the Communications Building. Admission is $3.

SIU-C professor awarded for work

By Jerianne Kimmel
Staff Writer

Mary Ann Phillippi, ecologist and zoology professor, has been recognized for her ongoing effort to protect the environment with the Conservationist of the Year award from the Southern Illinois Audubon Society.

"She has been so active for so long in so many different things that it was really only a matter of when — not if — she got it," said David B. Muir, chairman of the society's Conservation Committee. The group presented the award to Phillippi Feb. 2 at its annual meeting.

The award is based on achievement and effort in conservation. It is presented each year to someone who has done a substantial amount of work in the conservation field, Muir said.

"[Phillippi] was very deserving because of her tremendous amount of energy and effort directed toward conservation issues in her lifetime," Muir said. "She's someone who works extremely hard and cares strongly about conservation issues."

Phillippi said she is always motivated to defend the ecological integrity of nature.

"I knew I wanted to be a biologist since I was in the fourth grade," Phillippi said. "I've always been intrigued by nature and I've always been disturbed when it's destroyed."

Lee Drickamer, chairperson of the zoology department at SIU-C, said the award is proper recognition for someone who does an outstanding job of working with groups on conservation issues.

"It's nice to have someone in your department who can carry that end of the ball around," Drickamer said.

Phillippi said she thinks her greatest accomplishment so far was leading the fight at the University of Kentucky in 1981-1983 to help protect 16,000 acres of University of Kentucky-owned forest from being coal-mined, a controversy that has risen again.

Phillippi, who held Muir's position between 1985 and 1987, still serves on the Conservation Committee and advises the society on environmental issues. She also serves on the nine-member Illinois Nature Preserves Commission.

Phillippi has taught at SIU-C since 1984. She is known for her work on the Cache River wetlands in Johnson and Pulaski counties to get that area declared a national wildlife refuge, and various other U.S. Forest Service issues.

Phillippi, a Beaumont, Texas native, earned a bachelor's degree from Auburn University in Alabama, a master's from Oklahoma State University and a doctoral degree from the University of Kentucky.

She, her husband, Melvin Warren, and their 2-year-old son, Daniel, live in Carbondale.

USG allows more time for petitions

By Eric Reyes
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government is giving election applicants more time to file petitions.

The USG Wednesday passed a mandate to move the final day to pick up candidate applications from today to Feb. 28. The deadline for petitions to be filed in the USG office has been moved to March 7.

East Campus senator Penny Felton said the mandate was written because only election commissioner Tami Todoroff and the USG secretaries were permitted to pass out the applications. Felton said they were not always available.

The mandate states that commission members should be able to pass out applications. The mandate requires that someone be in the USG office from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to pass out applications.

In other business, the USG responded to Lawrence K. Pettit's strategic planning document by passing a resolution asking for additions.

The additions requested include improving the core curriculum for undergraduates, enhancing science and technology without "cannibalizing" communications and fine arts areas.

The USG also granted registered student organization status to the Engineering Club, the Gulf Association, the Hotel Restaurant Student Association, the Saluki Squash Club and the Anthropology Society.

Field hockey earns trip to national tournament

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Being a club provides them with an adviser and some funds.

They ought to be called the SIU-C Resurrections.

Three years ago newly-crowned athletic director Jim Hart decided the fate for the field hockey team was death. The team was cut from the athletic program.

Last weekend the reincarnated field hockey club traveled to Ball State to compete in the Regional Tournament and finished second out of eight teams and qualified for the National Field Hockey Tournament next month in Maryland. They needed to finish in the top two spots to advance to nationals.

"We don't have as many players this year. It's tough because we played all teams. We were the only club," club president Wendy Darius said.

The club went 6-2 this weekend, failing to the tournament champs Ball State twice, the last time in a 4-1 championship loss.

The key game for the Salukis was the downing of Central Michigan in the consolation bracket which insured them second place and a shot at the championship.

"We were down 2-0 and came back to win it 3-2," Illner said.

Women Salukis face showdown with 1st-place Southwest Missouri

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

One team battling to clinch the Gateway Conference championship and another just fighting for a berth in the postseason tournament meet Saturday at the Arena.

Southwest Missouri State and the Saluki women tip off at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The first-place Bears were 13-2 in the Gateway and 18-5 overall heading into a game Thursday at Eastern Illinois. The Bears hold a one-and-a-half game lead over Illinois State (11-3) in the Gateway.

After playing Eastern and Southern, the Bears close out the season March 5 at Wichita State. After playing on Thursday, Illinois State has three Gateway games remaining.

The Salukis were 10-4 in the conference and 15-9 overall heading into Thursday's game against Wichita State. The third-place Salukis are just two games ahead of fifth place Eastern Illinois (8-6). Bradley is fourth with a 10-5 record. The top four teams advance to the postseason tournament.

The Bears defeated SIU-C 69-54 Jan. 25th in Springfield, Mo. "We got beat pretty bad at Springfield," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said. "They outplayed us defensively and we couldn't get into our halfcourt offense. We'll have to play much better to win."

GILLEY'S since 1972 FRED'S since 1987

WHY go to FRED'S?

(established in 1967)

You've come all the way from Will, Cook & DuPage counties, and every weekend you do the Strip Stumble and meet West Rogers Park cowboys and Homewood cowgirls. Like people who order only hamburgers & fries at the best ethnic restaurants you're missing the opportunity to try something different.

You know about Giant City and Little Grass? - those are easy. But what about the Pomona General Store and its Green River Floats - The Goreville Horse Auction with 300 real cowboys bidding on horses from four states - the Anna Library built in 1906 and an architectural design breakthrough that was a precursor to good ol' Frank Lloyd - the Jonesboro Park Square where Lincoln & Douglas debated 123 years ago.

And then there's FRED'S - only 4 1/2 miles east of Carbondale. From Harrisburg & Herrin, Cartersville & Creal Springs, Galatia & Grandtower come coal miners, truckers, farmers & factory workers to dance to country music that has its roots in the Appalachians.

You've come a long way, baby - now leave your cultural snobbery behind & come a little bit further. Come to FRED'S and become a part of the real Southern Illinois ethnic.

Appearing this Saturday a very, very good band:

JACKSON JUNCTION

FRED'S very seldom talks about the quality of its bands. In fact, we could play Elmer Fudd's Marching Band, and you'd still have a great time. But this Saturday we really do have a very good band.

events and I see no reason why she can't repeat the same thing. She is a 'big meet' swimmer," Ingram said.

Debbie Gutteridge is a sophomore from Carbondale majoring in marketing. She placed second last year at the conference meet in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. She missed first by .01 second in the 100 and .02 in the 200.

"It was kind of disappointing last year because I was so close to winning, so this year I'm kind of looking for a little bit of revenge," Gutteridge said.

Ingram expects the losses of last year to help Gutteridge this year.

"She was a bit of a hard luck story with the close losses last year and I'm sure she'll be hungry for a victory this year," he said.

"In terms of our team this year, we are better because of the depth that we have," Gutteridge said. "I have more breaststrokers that push me to swim faster.

"I think Illinois State is favored because they won last year. What they fail to realize is the potential that we've got here. We've been going against some of the best competition in the country, it isn't that we aren't capable. We are really psyched up to win this meet."

Janel Patrick, a junior majoring in fashion merchandise from El Paso, Texas, is one of only two upperclassmen on the squad.

Patrick was happy with her performance at last year's conference meet. She swam some very good times but was unable to place higher than fourth.

"I'm looking forward to this year's meet," Patrick said. "I think I have improved a lot from last year. I have been swimming the my best times ever, since I've been here.

"I think the good competition that we have been swimming against all year has challenged us to be better and helps us regardless of who we swim against."

Tonia Mahaira, a native of Greece, is a sophomore in Pre-medicine. She is a qualifier for the NCAA meet this year and was named the Gateway conference swimmer-of-the-week in the month of January.

Mahaira was named the Most Valuable Swimmer at the 1989 conference meet. She placed first in the 200, 500 and 1000 freestyle.

This year could be a little different for Mahaira.

"Last year I was well rested for the conference meet, but this year I am going to rest for the NCAA meet so I don't know if I will be at my best," Mahaira said. "I still hope I can win my events."

Ingram couldn't say enough about Mahaira's importance to the team.

"She is undoubtedly the leader of our team in regard to the number of events she leads for us," Ingram said.

WIU coach dead at 46 of cancer

MACOMB (UPI) — Western Illinois University football Coach Bruce Craddock died Thursday following a 10-month battle with cancer. He was 46.

Craddock died at 12:45 p.m. at McDonough District Hospital in Macomb. He was taken to the hospital at about 3 a.m., a spokesman for the university said.

Craddock learned of his illness last spring. Although the actual coaching last season was left to two assistants, Craddock was on the sidelines for every game, said WIU Sports Information director Larry Heimburger.

"He toughed it out to the end," Heimburger said.

In seven seasons at WIU, Craddock compiled a record of 41-35-1 and was named Gateway Conference Coach of the Year in 1987 and 1988.

Craddock, a native of Washington, D.C., had an overall college record of 65-54-1, which included four seasons at his alma mater Northeast Missouri State in Kirksville, Mo. He was twice named Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association Coach of the Year.

He served as an assistant coach at Northeast Missouri and the University of Vermont before being named head coach at the Northeast Missouri.
