Board to review city vehicle accidents

The Carbondale Accident Review Board next week will review two traffic accident reports, one involving a police vehicle and the other a public service vehicle. City Attorney and Chairman of the Review Board John Womick said during a recent interview.

These will be the third and fourth accidents the board will review. Last week, it reviewed two police accidents in which one was found chargeable. The city manager will determine disciplinary action on the board's findings.

The board, established May 15 by administrative order, reviews all accidents involving Carbondale employees in city-owned vehicles or privately-owned vehicles on official business.

Carroll Fry, city manager, said that the board's job is to judge the traffic offense and he would not comment on the upcoming reviews.

"It would be unfair to comment on the accidents until the board makes its decision," Fry said. "It is their duty to determine the severity of the accident and particularly if the city official was chargeable. Until the findings are before me, I cannot prejudge the man. The accidents were published in the print media."

The administrative order was enacted because of 23 reported accidents last year, Fry said. Four accidents were reported this year.

"Ironically, the largest number of accidents involve police vehicles (15 in all)," City Manager Carroll Fry said recently. The remaining accidents reports are scattered among the fire department vehicles, public works vehicles and sewage maintenance vehicles.

The board will meet regularly in order to review as many city vehicle accidents as necessary and make periodic recommendations to the city manager to prevent or lessen the number of accidents, Fry said. However, the board does not have enough experience to come up with general conclusion on Carbondale's "accident problem," Fry added.

"In order to best serve the city, the board will review accidents and determine who is chargeable or responsible," Fry explained. "The goal of the board is to develop a pattern for safe driving and collect statistical data."

A city employee held chargeable for two motor vehicle accidents occurring within a twelve-month period can be either required to submit to a physical examination by a city-selected physician or required to take a driver's test before a state driver's examiner.

The nature and extent of the accident shall determine what corrective action is required, Fry said.

If a physical deficiency is diagnosed by the physician, which would impair the employee's ability to safely operate a motor vehicle, the employee will be permanently removed from operating the city's motor vehicle. The employee's department head, will then decide how the employee's services shall be used. A report from the department supervisor shall be submitted to the city Personnel Department.

If no physical deficiency is spotted, the employee will be relieved of driving duties for a period not to exceed 30 days. Again the department head shall determine how the employee will be used during this period.

Involvement in any chargeable accident is "an offense meriting disciplinary action," Fry said.

Employees who are involved in three accidents within any twelve-month period will automatically be required to appear before the review board, Fry said. These accidents may be either non-chargeable or a combination of non-chargeable and chargeable, he added.

An employee involved in three chargeable accidents will be permanently removed from operation of all city vehicles, Fry said.

Cox asks White House to turn over ITT files

WASHINGTON (AP)—Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox disclosed Friday he has asked the White House to turn over its files on the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. He called the file "of utmost importance" and said his request for it has been pending for some time.

Cox also said he asked for a confidential intelligence file kept by former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

He told a news conference he would seriously consider issuing another subpoena for that material "if something becomes urgently necessary."

Cox did not elaborate or describe what might be in the ITT file but his office has had under investigation the administration's handling of an anti-trust case against the giant international conglomerate.

It also is possible that the file contains details of ITT's contributions in support of the 1972 Republican National Convention at a time when plans called for the convention to be held in San Diego.

The White House indicated that President Nixon is planning to speak out on the Watergate scandal sometime soon, perhaps within the next two weeks.

Ehrlichman: Okay to probe moral habits

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman declared Friday that drinking habits and personal morals of political candidates are fit subjects for investigation and disclosure in political campaigns.

He charged in testimony to the Senate Watergate committee: "I know of my own knowledge of incumbents in office who are not discharging their obligation to their constituents because of their drinking habits."

And he added: "It distresses me very much that that is not discussed."

In an exchange with an openly astonished Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., Ehrlichman defended his hiring of former New York policeman Anthony Ulasewicz to do outside investigating jobs for the White House.

But Ehrlichman insisted that during the months in 1969 and early 1970 that he supervised Ulasewicz, his only probe of an individual politician concerned Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and the Chappaquiddick incident in which a young woman died in an accident involving an auto driven by Kennedy.

Ulasewicz told the committee last week he had investigated the sexual habits, drinking problems, domestic difficulties and personal social habits of political opponents.

Weicker and Ehrlichman quickly broadened their debate to the general propriety of such activities rather than any specific instances.

Ehrlichman concentrated on drinking problems and declared:

"You'll agree with me, senator, that someone with serious drinking habits is of doubtful fitness for the sort of heavy duties that you bear, for instance, or that any senator bears."

The former domestic adviser to President Nixon said "constituents at home have no way of knowing that you can go over here in the gallery of Congress and watch a member totter onto the floor in a condition of at least partial inebriation which would preclude him making any sort of sober judgment on the issues that confront this country."

Ehrlichman said the news media have an unwritten rule against publicizing such habits and said they won't reach public attention unless brought out by the challenger of an incumbent.

Credit union for students planned

By Joann de Fiebre
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A federally approved credit union to allow students to become its members and increase their ability to obtain loans is being planned by members of Student Government and the Student Welfare Commission.

Joel Blake, administrative assistant to Student Body President Mike Carr, said a charter will be drawn up if enough interest can be stimulated in the community for the union.

Blake said a new credit union needs to be established in Carbondale because the one currently on campus does not allow student membership.

"The only people who can join the SIU Employees Credit Union are administrators, faculty, staff and teaching assistants," he said. "No undergraduate or even graduate students who have fellowships are allowed to join."

Blake added, however, that living in Carbondale or associated with SIU will be eligible for membership in the union, the Student Government is trying to form.

Blake said if the union is approved members will be able to open pass book savings accounts with interest, receive short term loans and cash checks.

He said loans would be handled by the credit union like those granted by banks, with a certain amount of collateral needed by the borrower. Interest would be charged, with the rate to be established by the members of the union, he added.

The primary advantage of joining a credit union is the members' ability to obtain loans, Blake said.

"The loaning and credit power of this union will be magnified twice as much as in a bank because we'll be loaning to students," Blake said. "And no bank in Carbondale will loan money to students."

Blake said the union will also have important economic outgrowths for the University.

"Federal funds are being cut which cuts back student loans and jobs," Blake said. "When students can't go back to school, the number of faculty employed at the university goes down and salaries also go down." The union would help students obtain money so they can stay in school and generate more funds in terms of faculty jobs and salaries, he said.

Blake said loans would not only be given to students to use for tuition, but would be given to any member who has a "provident or productive purpose" for the loan.

"This means that loans will be given to members for anything that has to do with family or personal growth," Blake said. "For example, someone might need an addition on his house, air conditioning or repair work on one of his cars."

He said the union also would help members establish a credit rating.

Blake said two criteria are necessary before a charter to establish a credit union will be approved by a federal examiner from the national office of the Federal Credit Union.

The credit union has to be, by law, unaffiliated with the university, Blake said. "The university can have no control over the union," Blake said. "A charter cannot be granted if there is any way that someone will profit or gain power from the union."

The second requirement, Blake said, is that 300 people have to promise to join the union if the charter is approved. "Student Government will be soliciting members by showing public education movies on how a union can help them and the services it can offer," Blake said. "We hope to have the 300 charter members this summer."

Blake said Student Government is trying to obtain an association charter for the credit union.

"This type of credit union is one that people with a common bond of some kind join," he said. "Our common bond would be a town-gown relation between the community residents and university students and personnel."

He said if the charter is approved the credit union will be the second in the country to have an association charter between a college community and the town area.

The cost to join the credit union would be minimal, Blake said.

"Initially, it will cost members 25 cents to fill out the forms and a $5 to $10 membership fee in the form of shares," he said.

He added that this fee serves as a deposit which the member gets back with interest if he withdraws from the union.

Blake said the major objective of the credit union is to meet the financial needs of its members.

"If the credit union here didn't have enough money to lend we could go to any other federally chartered union and borrow it," he said.

Black market reported starting as U.S. beef supply shrinks

CHICAGO (AP)—Black market selling of beef is reported turning up in scattered sections of the country as meat supplies continue to shrink. It is aimed at meat packers, supermarkets and restaurants willing to pay extra to maintain business.

The extent of the practice is undetermined at this time and the picture is clouded by widespread rumor and speculation in the beef industry, still under tight government controls.

Middlemen in Illinois, New York and Louisiana have described various black-market operations in their states, however, and there are predictions the wheeling and dealing may become more prevalent as supplies get tighter.

In the three cases the selling is done at the wholesale level and the consumer is not directly involved.

"I've had several offers to buy black market beef. As for me, I've decided to stay legal even if it means going out of business," said Robert E. Bartlow, a partner in Bartlow Brothers, Inc., of Rushville, Ill.

Bartlow runs what is known as a "full-line" packing house but has closed down his slaughtering operation, laid off about one third of his 160 employees and now is scratching the countryside for whatever beef is available.

Interviews with Bartlow and more than a dozen other farmers, packers and store and restaurant owners in Illinois produced a picture of how the process works.

It begins after the slaughterhouse purchases cattle from a rancher or farmer, a transaction which is not subject to government price ceilings.

The slaughterhouse, feeling the pinch of overhead costs, would sell to a packer at a price higher than that allowed under federal guidelines. The packer then processes the beef and sells it to his wholesale and retail outlets at higher than ceiling prices.

The process then moves to the supermarket level.

But under the Phase 3 ceiling prices, usually posted in clear view at the meat counter, store owners would find it extremely difficult to sell unlawfully without detection. So to stay in business and to stay competitive, they pay the illegal price and absorb the losses in sales to customers until Sept. 12 when the price freeze is lifted.

Gilbert Fourmigue, president of Econo-Meats, a Louisiana wholesale firm, said red meat supplies were drying up quickly and he does not foresee any deliveries beyond next week unless controls are lifted. "Farmers are determined," he said. "They're going to hold it out."

He said there is a black market arrangement operating which is similar to one during a poultry shortage: a supplier bills a buyer for 100 pounds of meat, but only delivers 70.

Cambodian capital preparing for attack by insurgent forces

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—The military high command ordered the people of this capital Friday to take arms against the possibility of attack by antigovernment rebels it said have infiltrated the city.

There was no immediate sign that anyone had done so and no indication that an attack inside the city of 1½ million was imminent.

But rebel forces, whom the government identifies as Cambodian Communists called the Khmer Rouge, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, have moved up to the outskirts where fighting continues.

U.S. jet fighters and B52 bombers roared over the city attacking suspected insurgent positions.

A military command communique broadcast by Radio Phnom Penh said 60 battalions of Khmer Rouge and their Vietnamese allies—the equivalent of 30,000 troops—had massed around the capital in preparation for a 1-scale assault.

The communique said the rebels had failed so far to launch their attack on the city because of heavy casualties inflicted on them by round-the-clock U.S. air strikes.

The U.S. air operations, however, are entering their final phases here because of the Nixon administration's Aug. 15 deadline for a bombing halt.

In New York, a U.S. Court of Appeals ordered a stay in a lower court injunction of earlier in the week that would have halted U.S. bombing in Cambodia by 4 p.m., EDT, Friday. The appeals court granted the stay at the request of U.S. government attorneys pending an appeal set for Aug. 13.

The antigovernment forces outside Phnom Penh have resorted to rocket and shelling attacks on the city in an attempt to cause panic and confusion, the military command's communique said.

Board will review two accidents

"The department head determines future use of the employee's services. The employee will be dismissed from service if he has no capabilities which can be utilized elsewhere or if he cannot qualify for another assignment," Fry explained.

The board also has the authority to summon an employee's supervisor during any review, Fry said. This action will not be taken unless absolutely necessary, he added.

"The supervisor may have been negligent for failure to give proper instruction or supervision and may be held chargeable," Fry said.

The board's action is regulated by an administrative memorandum which established the board, other administrative memoranda from the city manager's office and the Carbondale City Code, Fry explained.

"If it should become necessary to suspend or reduce a classified employee, the department head will be governed by the Personnel Rules and Regulation of the City," Fry said.

The board consists of Womick, the city clerk, the city purchasing agent, the city industrial development director and the city personnel director.

The chairman, appointed by the city manager, on a rotating basis, must be from one of the first four mentioned city positions. He serves for one year.

The personnel director, George Paluch, serves as secretary to the board.

Student health benefits discussed at lunch-talk

By Ed Dunin-Wasowicz
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Plans for the Student's Health Benefits Program were discussed Friday at a lunch-talk sponsored by the University Health Service for members of Student Government and the Graduate Student Council (GSC).

Sam McVay, Health Service administrator, began the discussion with an outline of the plan, which calls for the reallocation of student fees to provide a hospitalization plan and specialty care program to take effect late fall or early winter quarter.

A necessary element in the program, McVay said, is the improvement plan for the Health Service. The plan calls for addition of trained specialists in areas such as dermatology, surgery, neurology, urology and radiology.

The plans are part of a revamping of the Health Service system based on a consultant's proposal of May 1972.

Health Service officials called the lunch-discussion to get acquainted with the student leaders and get feedback from them.

"We want a good relationship with Student government," McVay said.

He said seven physicians now work at the Health Service. The consultant's proposal calls for 15 physicians.

"We handle about 140 students per day out of 300 who need attention," McVay said. "This is an estimate during our heavy seasons, like flu season."

He said the specialty treatments and hospitalization plans are awaiting fee reallocation from the Fee Priority Board.

Fielding questions with McVay was George O'Neill, executive director of Shawnee Health Service, Inc., with which the Health Service is coordinating the program.

O'Neill explained the program is the beginning point of a larger program which he hopes to extend to neighboring communities such as Marion, Herrin and Murphysboro.

"What we are trying to do is start the organization of area citizens and students, toward better medical benefits," O'Neill said.

Cornie Frisch, GSC secretary, said the image of the Health Service is damaged by lack of personalized care of students by doctors.

"I like to feel that I know the doctor who is treating me, and this doesn't happen very often at the Health Service," she said. "If you go there two or three times you get different doctors."

McVay answered, "It's nearly impossible to always guarantee a student the doctor that previously handled his case because of the size of the staff and the large, constantly changing, community we serve."

Another question centered on whether a student having hospitalization insurance, with his family would be required to take out the Hospitalization plan with the university.

"We will probably have to consider exemptions for those who already have a hospitalization program, if that program offers the same or better protection than ours," McVay said.

The cost of the proposed program would fall in the neighborhood of $1,750,000, McVay said.

Broken down, the Student Health Program once completed, would include:

—The primary care clinic, which will be the services at the Health Service, costing $1 million per year;

—The proposed hospitalization plan, costing $325,000;

—The infirmary clinic, costing $100,000;

—The emergency service, which includes the ambulance service, and emergency clinic at Doctor's Hospital, costing $100,000.

—The specialized care program, which includes the specialists, costing $150,000;

—A prevention program, which includes organizations like Synergy and Human Sexuality Information Referral Service (HSIRS), costing $100,000.

"This is the total picture of the program as we hope to see it in the future," McVay said.

Cans ought to be with their own kind.

Irving and Gertrude went on a picnic to Little Grassy Lake but couldn't find a place to sit down. It wasn't that the area was crowded and they didn't want to sit on a picnic table, but they found their favorite spot covered with more cans than trees.

Bud cans, Schiltz cans, Falstaff cans, Coke cans, 7-Up cans and even pork and bean cans.

Cans wherever they walked or looked.

"I wonder how cans grow," Irving exclaimed as he kicked at the horde at his feet. "I thought they had to be planted by someone."

"I really don't know, Irv," Gertrude said. "Maybe the wind blew them here."

"Nah," Irving snorted. "Look at the different stages of growth. Over there the cans are turning a rust color and very ugly, and here they are very bright and ugly. Maybe the rusty ones encourage the newer looking ones to move into the neighborhood."

"Yes, the rusty ones do look older and maybe they set the example for the younger ones, but still, where do they come from?" Gert asked.

Irving and Gertrude looked around. It seemed that wherever there were old cans, a messy little subdivision of new ones had sprung up near them.

"I wonder if they moved here because of the water," Irving said. "Look down there along the shore. A big batch of them are sitting on the edge."

"It could be," Gert said. "But maybe they really like the trees, beautiful grass or the fresh air that used to be the first things to catch your notice."

"I wonder where they come from," they both mused simultaneously.

The roar of a souped-up car came from the road nearby and a brown bag shot from the rear window. Clink-Clatter-Bang.

Another batch of cans was born.

"Well, maybe now we know," Irv said as the contents of the bag spilled forth. "The cans come from people. They really don't want to be here at all."

"Yah, well maybe we should relocate them to that big green papa can over there so they will be with their own kind," Gert said. "That way they may be more happy and we will have a place to sit down."

The pair rolled up their shirt sleeves and proceeded to throw the mounds of cans into the big green papa can.

Now if you should ever see Irv and Gert at Little Grassy, Devil's Kitchen, Crab Orchard or anywhere else, give them your empty cans. They will be glad to give them to the big green papa can.

If you don't ever see or meet them—help them out and throw your cans in the big green papa can yourself.

Then you too may have a place to sit down and enjoy the outdoors.

A commission that government listens to

By Phil Cogswell
Reprinted from the Portland Oregonian

WASHINGTON—Federal commissions come and go with most receiving only limited attention from Congress, their recommendations often spending years on the shelf before gaining acceptance, if considered at all.

By contrast the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries has sent a report to the President in which there is great interest among the highest levels of government.

Coincidentally, the report discusses whether there

Contents of the report are secret, but there are rumors that it recommends raising the salary of congressmen from the present $42,500 a year to something above $50,000.

Under a rather devious procedure set up in Legislative Salary Act of 1967 Congress does not have to vote directly to raise its pay.

The act requires the appointment every four years of the commission, which makes its recommendation to the President on salaries for Congress, high executive branch officials and federal judges.

The President then makes his salary recommendation to Congress—free to abide by or disregard the commission report. If within 30 days Congress has not rejected the new pay schedule, it automatically becomes law. The next presidential recommendation is due in January.

Members of the Oregon congressional delegation all say they are opposed to any pay increase for themselves, but this is not necessarily the view of their colleagues from other states.

Among the Oregon senators and representatives there is a general feeling that any increase from the present $42,500 would be inappropriate in these times of severe economic troubles. Frequently expressed is the view that it would be difficult to ask the general public to make a financial sacrifice that the highest paid government officials were not willing to share.

Some members of the delegation also volunteer that they think $42,500 is all they need, especially if adequate funds are made available to cover rising office and travel expenses. They cite outdated expense limits and rising numbers of constituent letters requiring action as more troublesome than personal financial burdens.

Unmentioned but certain to be a consideration is the possibility that any pay raise could become a potent campaign issue.

One place the pay issue was discussed was at a meeting between Republican congressional leaders and President Nixon a short time ago.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., invited to the session along with some others who were not members of the leadership, urged the President not to allow any increase next January.

Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., disagreed, commenting later that whoever raised the issue (Packwood) was as welcome as a skunk at a picnic.

Apparent support for a pay raise also is evident in Senate approval of a bill which would allow an increase every two years instead of the present four. This is based on the logic that smaller, more frequent increases would look better than large, less frequent ones.

What happens to congressional pay is of more than passing interest, it should be noted, to judges and high-ranking executive branch officials below Cabinet rank. Their salary is pegged on the congressional level.

Only the President at $200,000 a year, and the vice president, Cabinet members and Supreme Court justices, all around $60,000, make more than congressmen.

Whatever is done on congressional pay, certain changes in procedure are desirable.

First, while the formation of a study commission is probably useful, the group's recommendation should be made public rather than kept secret. Second, Congress should avoid ducking the issue as the present procedures permit. Each member should go on record on the matter, unpleasant as the chore might be.

The Oregon delegation is right: Faith in government is too shaky right now for any claim to gain acceptance that our leaders deserve more pay than they are already getting.

Dog days

Summer months bring litter boom to Humane Society

The Jackson County Humane Society is currently experiencing its annual warm weather population boom.

Eugenia Hunter, president of the Humane Society, said the shelter handles about 20 to 40 per cent more animals during the summer months. "We average about 350 animals a month in the winter," Mrs. Hunter said. "During the summer months, however, we handle upwards to 500 and more."

Mrs. Hunter said the animal population increase is due to the breeding habits of the animals.

Cats and dogs, the largest percentage of animals taken to the shelter, are more likely to have offspring in the warmer months, she said. "Cats will have as many as two to three litters in the summer," she said. "In the winter months, however, reproduction is minimal."

Mrs. Hunter said the shelter can only handle 40 to 50 animals at a time. "This depends, of course, on the size of the animals, whether the animals are puppies or kittens, cats or dogs, she said. "It also depends on whether or not the animals are released to us by the owners." If the animal is released, it could be destroyed within ten minutes, Mrs. Hunter said. Strays, however, are kept for seven days and if unclaimed are also destroyed.

Mrs. Hunter said the overgrowing in the humane shelter won't be solved until the surplus population of animals is solved.

"The total problem is city, county and country wide," Mrs. Hunter said. "There are over 10,000 animals born nationwide an hour. Last year in Jackson County, 5,000 animals were born and about 80 per cent had to be destroyed."

Mrs. Hunter said the animal overpopulation can be solved if owners would get their animals altered. "If owners made a conscientious effort to prevent litters, the problem would be solved," she said.

If the owner does not want to spade the animal and it is mated, Mrs. Hunter said a shot is available at a veterinarian that will prevent conception.

Mrs. Hunter also expressed concern over the reaction dogs have to heat. "Dogs are very susceptible to heat," she said. "And can die in a matter of hours."

She said owners should not keep their dogs tied up in the sunlight for a long period of time or lock them inside cars, and should keep them near water during the summer months.

Army eases standards to aid recruitment

WASHINGTON (AP)—Unable to recruit enough volunteers, the Army Friday eased its standards to avert a serious manpower shortage.

Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway announced a new program to permit more non-high school graduates to enlist in the Army this year.

Thus, the new Army secretary backed away from a previous policy which concentrated on enlisting at least 70 per cent high school graduates on grounds they are more reliable than dropouts and less likely to be disciplinary problems.

"We are falling short in quantity some 2,000 men a month," Callaway told his first news conference since becoming secretary.

"It's not serious yet, but this can't continue very long without getting serious."

The Army is the only service which has failed to meet its monthly recruiting objectives ever since the government stopped drafting young men last December.

At one point, Callaway acknowledged that "you've got to have tradeoffs between quality and quantity."

But in almost the next breath he asserted that "my bias has been

The new approach will permit non-high school graduates "to prove themselves by their performance in."

The new approach will permit non-high school graduates "to prove themselves by their performance in training" rather than emphasizing entrance requirements before going to basic training.

Callaway said a recently developed battery of written tests prepared by the Army Research Institute will measure aptitude for training.

Until now, the main emphasis has been on intelligence-measuring qualification tests. Men who indicate by lack of achievement or poor behavior that they are unsuited will be honorably discharged before completing six months of service.

Under questioning, Callaway acknowledged that non-high school graduate recruits cause most of the Army's drug and disciplinary problems.

Free snake show might dispel fear

By Linda Lipman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The way to change your impression that all snakes are dangerous and poisonous is to handle one, Tim Merriman, interpreter for Giant City State Park, said in an interview.

A free snake show and slide presentation sponsored by the State Department of Conservation, Division of Parks and Memorials, is presented every Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the family camp grounds at the park.

Merriman said he brings predictable snakes from his own collection of 27 snakes that have been handled by more than 1,000 people, to show. "I have a variety of local and exotic snakes, all are gentle and non-venomous. They are predictable in that they have never made an attempt to bite any person," Merriman said.

He talks about the snakes and answers questions. He said youngsters are more interested in handling the snakes than older people who are less trusting. "A few brave adults will realize their fear is foolish and may handle one," he added.

$275 camera taken from Pulliam hall

A camera and two lenses valued at $275 were stolen from Gordon Butts, chairman of the Department of Instructional Materials, SIU Security Police reported.

Butts said the items were taken from a locked cabinet in 319A in Pulliam Hall Tuesday night.

Merriman said he feels most people would like to overcome their fear of snakes. He never forces a person to handle the snakes because this causes more fear.

The slide show begins at 8:30 p.m. every Saturday. Tonight Merriman will show slides on the plant and animal community of Giant City State Park and discuss the show.

Aug. 4, the show will be conducted by Mike McNeerney, archeologist at the SIU Museum, who will discuss Southern Illinois Indians. On Aug. 11, Ray Zoanetti, former researcher at the Cooperative Wildlife Laboratory, will show slides on the animals of the Mississippi River Valley.

Merriman is available for speaking to groups outside the park on any topic dealing with nature.

Fuel shortage might affect schools in fall

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—The Illinois superintendent of public instruction says a fuel shortage may affect some school districts this fall, and educators should make plans now to avoid school closings.

Michael Bakalis made the comment Friday to a meeting of the Council of Chief State School Officers in Hyannis, Mass., his office in Springfield reported.

"Schools are not immune from the problems faced by other elements of society from the energy shortage," Bakalis said. "They are, in fact, more vulnerable and some something must be done to assure continuation of millions of students' education in a healthy and safe manner."

Bakalis said a preliminary survey of schools in Illinois has shown that some school officials are concerned there will not be enough fuel to heat classrooms this winter and that cutbacks in bus transportation may also be required.

"Even if winter conditions are no problem, energy is needed for lighting, refrigeration of foods, preparation of meals and operation of instructional equipment," he said.

"And in some parts of the country, air conditioners are a necessity," he added.

Bakalis said a national plan for energy allocation for schools should be developed and presented to the federal government.

Skylab astronauts ready for Saturday launching

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The Skylab 2 astronauts made final preparations Friday for a record 58-day space stay that will tell man more about his earth, his sun and his potential to make trips to other planets.

Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma planned to climb into a modified Apollo spacecraft atop a Saturn IB rocket at 4:30 a.m. (EDT) Saturday. At 7:11 a.m. the rocket is to hurl them away on the eight-hour journey to the 85-ton Skylab space station orbiting the earth 270 miles over-head.

The Skylab 2 crew will concentrate on solar astronomy during the two-month stay in America's cabin in the sky, adding to the masses of date brought home by the Skylab 1 crew last month.

Medical scientists also hope to learn more about the physical adaptations to weightlessness that occurred in the bodies of the Skylab 1 astronauts during 28 days in space.

The Skylab 2 astronauts had early morning physical examinations at Cape Kennedy Friday, then spent the rest of the day relaxing and talking with friends and Space Center officials.

The Skylab 2 astronauts will turn the Skylab's instruments on the blue, brown and green earth as it revolves beneath them. They hope to test its geological structure, ocean currents, cloud patterns, pollution, crop diseases and a dozen other areas of interest.

Solar astronomers and physicists were excited by the data the Skylab 1 crew obtained with the space station's eight telescopes. They said that much of the information would take months or years to analyze.

Garriott is a solar physicist, and it is hoped the information he and the other crewmen obtain on Skylab 2 will tell more about the sun's effects on earth's short-term weather and the planet's climatic changes over geological periods.

The crewmen will also take a look at the effects of offshore currents on water pollution and areas where cold deep-sea waters rise near the surface and produce rich fishing grounds.

Sharon Vondra Thach also attended the meeting as managing editor of Southeast Asia, an International Quarterly, the hour-nal published under the auspices of the Center.

At a meeting with a contingent of Southeast Asia specialists, several of whom are members of the International Editorial Advisory Board of the journal, Nguyen gave a status report of the journal, of which he is associate editor. The journal format, content, and the problem of cutting production costs, also were discussed.

The National Board of Medical Examiners, the country's major non-governmental medical examining agency, is enacting proposals to alter the methods of evaluation of physicians.

The proposals were made public Monday in an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association written by Dr. John Hubbard, the Board's president. The proposals were recommended by the Board's Committee on Goals and Priorities. D. Dax Taylor, M.D., associate dean for Medical Education, SIU School of Medicine, was a member of the committee.

The proposed changes which the Board seeks to implement include educational achievement examinations during medical school, and a single qualifying exam upon graduation, which, together with the med school's evaluation of a student's performance, would enable state medical licensure boards to grant a permit to practice medicine under supervision during residency training.

A grant of nearly $25,000 to SIU from the Illinois Division of Vocational and Technical Education has been approved to help fund a special "capstone" project dealing with admitting selected junior college students from occupational programs to certain four-year degree programs at SIU without undue loss of their credit.

The grant is for research being carried on by Eugene S. Wood, chairman of the agricultural industries department, and Thomas R. Stitt, associate professor of agricultural industries. Their project is titled: "Pilot 'capstone' baccalaureate degree programs which build on competencies gained in community college occupationally oriented programs and work experience." Preliminary studies in a 'capstone' pilot project were conducted at SIU last year.

Beef supply drying up; more bad news worries consumers

By Louise Cook
Associated Press Writer

Beef shortages, rationing rumors and steadily rising prices added up Friday to more bad news for consumers.

There are fewer cattle sold at livestock markets, and beef processors said they couldn't live with a continuation of the price ceiling on their product.

The ceilings were removed from all food items except beef under the Phase 4 economic program announced last week. Beef prices remain frozen until Sept. 12.

A spokesman for the American

Meat Institute said Friday "the situation is to deteriorate... Beef is disappearing from wholesale markets." He said Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz had agreed to meet with representatives of the beef industry in Washington on Wednesday.

The spokesman said cattle receipts at 11 major terminal markets for the first four days of this week were 16 per cent below the figure for the same period last week. Hog receipts went up, he said.

The pork industry—among those hardest hit by the earlier price freeze—showed signs of recovery.

Several plants which closed down or cut back, claiming they couldn't afford to make a profit while livestock costs went up and retail prices remained frozen, were getting back to normal.

The situation was just the opposite in the beef industry.

Charles Glorioso, the owner of a small grocery store in Milwaukee, said he hadn't been able to get any beef for the past two days.

John Morrell & Co., South Dakota's largest meat packer, announced Friday it was halting all beef slaughter operations immediately and laid off 200 persons.

General Manager Bob Atkins said the company could not afford to buy live cattle and sell dressed beef under the ceiling.

Dick Conn, sales manager for A&P in Kansas City, said "no panic situation exists." He added, however, that "the supply of beef is drying up on us."

Ray Booth, the owner of a market in West Hartford, Conn., said "There was quite a bit of extra beef buying. We are experiencing some shortages, particularly rib roast."

The Cudahy Food Co. at Wichita, Kan., which cut back its work force earlier this month, said it was now operating at a normal summer rate. A spokesman said the pork situation seemed fairly stable, but added: "I could change my mind by Monday."

Autos jam tiny village at site of rock fest

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP)—Automobiles jammed roads bumper to bumper for miles as thousands of youths inched through this tiny village of less than 3,000 Friday en route to a rock concert expected to be the biggest since Woodstock.

The yellow-and-green canopied stage at the Watkins Glen Grand Prix race track was set, flanked by seven sound towers and two light towers and ready to rock from noon to midnight Saturday.

Some 200,000 rock fans are expected to attend the 12-hour fest, "Summer Jam." The program features the Grateful Dead, the Allman Brothers and The Band.

Concert promoters said the advance sale of 110 tickets exceeded 125,000.

In 1969, rock events attracted 400,000 persons at Woodstock and 300,000 at Altamont.

Tents and lean-tos dotted the area inside the track grounds Thursday and Friday nights. Those who didn't use tents had sleeping bags stowed in cars or slept in van-type trucks and other vehicles. A Thursday night rainfall, accompanied by lightning, crated large patches of mud but failed to dampen spirits.

Many brought their own food and water. But concession stands, pizza trucks and ice cream wagons did a big business.

Some of the would-be concertgoers have been arrested—a few on misdemeanor charges that included possession of drugs and others for traffic violations. But a Schuyler County deputy sheriff manning a command post at the track said, "The general behavior of the people has been very good."

Four persons were killed in traffic accidents Thursday and Friday while driving to the concert site.

High school musicians to attend free concert

By Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The two-week efforts of 188 high school musicians participating in the twelfth annual Music and Youth at Southern music camp will culminate in a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

Orchestra selections will include Sibelius' "Finlandia" and Frescobaldi's "Toccata," while choral selections will include Bach's "Alleluia, O Praise the Lord Most Holy" and Kodaly's "Birthday Greeting." The band will play selections from "Shaft" in addition to Reed's "Festive Overture" and Smith's "Emperata Overture."

The purpose of the camp, according to Art Schmittler, assistant to the camp director, is to enhance and enrich the student's cultural experiences in music.

In addition to performing in the chorus, orchestra and band, students take courses in music theory, music appreciation, conducting, acoustics and instrument repair, Schmittler said.

The music campers live in University housing and, when allowed free time from study and rehearsal sessions, are able to participate in various campus activities. The students also attend Summer Playhouse '73 productions, faculty and camp recitals, a variety show and movies.

Campers pay a tuition fee of $115 plus all expenses in return for music courses, individual instruction on various instruments and participation in performing groups.

Donkeyball game slated Aug. 15

A poster bill describing the Buckeye Donkeyball Show says, "It's the Craziest Show On Earth." This statement may prove to be more real than funny.

The Carbondale Police Department will square off against the Fire Department in a game of donkeyball at 8:00 p.m. August 15 at Bleyer Field in Carbondale.

Tickets costing $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for all children under 14 years old are available at the Carbondale Police Department Office, Police Community Services Center and all local Fire Stations.

A police spokesman said the proceeds from the event will go toward the purchase of public information equipment and materials for the two city agencies.

Summer Playhouse '73

'The Tavern' lacks style, termed single-set disaster

By Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"The Tavern" is an antiquated beehive of activity that must be seen to be endured—a course of action I do not recommend.

This George M. Cohan comedy, which Summer Playhouse '73 has decided to disinter and exhibit through Sunday in the University Theater of the Communications Building, is a single-set disaster, a straightforward theatrical flop.

Cohan was, of course, the nation's "Yankee Doodle Dandy" who, in the course of his career, ground out literally hundreds of plays and musicals. The fact that they were once popular does not necessarily validate their success. If anything, they point to the vagaries of current tastes. What worked, 53 years ago may not work well—if at all—today.

Bev Appleton (left to right), Marion Scherer, Wade Benson and Steve Drakulich play in "The Tavern," a production of Summer Playhouse '73. The George M. Cohan play will be presented at 8 p.m. through Sunday in the University Theater of the Communications Building.

A Review

The story of characters defy any sort of rational description, since both are thrown at the audience like so many wilted lettuce leaves. A Vagabond arrives at a tavern on a stormy night. The tavern-keeper, his son and their maid do not know what to make of the intrusion. A young woman follows. Then the governor, his wife, his daughter and her fiancé make their entrances. The governor has been robbed. The culprits are discovered just in time for the final curtain. That is all. It lasts two long, humorless hours.

The Summer Playhouse '73 production lacks style and sheen. If the company had no inkling of its troubles, it might have stopped and taken a good look at itself. Everyone yells rather than talks and runs rather than walks. This is a Neanderthal approach to staging technique. Neither does it advance the cause of the theater.

Bev Appleton plays the Vagabond with a vocal mannerism that sounds like a baritone radar blip. Cindy Benson's performance as the maid would be disgraceful by high school standards. Lewis Bolton has been ordered to play his character like a drooping idiot, which becomes wearing the moment the actor first opens his mouth. Marion Scherer and Patricia McCormick, in supporting roles, deserve better.

There is no use going on. The whole miserable enterprise is best forgotten. I would have rather spent the evening reading the fine print on a candy wrapper.

Chief military aide to Allende slain

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Gummen assassinated the chief military aide to President Salvador Allende early Friday, adding another volatile ingredient to Chile's increasingly tense political situation.

Navy Capt. Arturo Araya, 45, a burly, balding career submarine officer, was cut down by a volley of bullets as he looked from the second-story balcony of his suburban home after hearing a disturbance in the street.

Allende's leftist government immediately blamed the assassination on the extreme rightist, Fatherland and Liberty movement. The group has been linked to an abortive army rebellion June 29 by members of an armored regiment which left 22 persons dead.

But Roberto Thieme, secretary-general of Fatherland and Liberty, said in a statement from hiding that the movement was not responsible for the assassination.

Police, aided by naval intelligence authorities, began a massive dragnet for Araya's killers.

The assassination followed by a day a walkout by some 50,000 truck owners throughout Chile in protest against the Allende government's alleged inaction in raising cargo rates and providing for imports of needed spare parts and tires for their vehicles.

The effects of the walkout were immediately felt in Santiago with rationing of gasoline and swindling supplies of fresh fruit and vegetables.

Store managers say food business normal

By Ed Husayko
Student Writer

The consensus among major food store managers in Carbondale is that business is normal despite the increases in some food prices this week. Prices on milk, eggs, pork and chicken have increased in most local supermarkets.

On Monday, National, A&P and

Kelley's Big Star listed price increases of six cents on milk and eggs, eight cents on chicken and 25 cents on pork and pork products.

Inquires at five local grocery stores revealed that managers consider the price situation confusing and feel it is still too soon to predict what items will be affected by the increase. All said they must wait until word comes down from their suppliers.

"It will be another week before we know what is going to happen," Dick Peterman, manager of Boren's IGA East, said during an interview. "The shopping here is normal. People seem to have adjusted their shopping lists to the increases."

National's manager, Carroll Barnhart also said shopping is normal. Rick Noeth, manager at Penny's Food Store, said there has been no immediate increase in prices. He added, he has to wait word from his supervisors on price increases.

Peterman speculated that prices should raise, then drop and finally become stable.

Hoarding doesn't seem to be on the minds of the Carbondale residents, the managers agree. Penny's has indicated slight hoarding but not a mass movement by its shoppers.

The Associated Press has reported that in parts of the country people have purchased large amounts of food before the prices rose.

An unidentified employee said meat sales have been slightly higher since President Richard M. Nixon lifted the freeze. Prices on canned goods and produce will remain the same, the managers said.

GSC might restructure to tripartite government

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The first phase of restructuring the governing body for graduate students was put in motion by the Graduate Student Council (GSC) Friday.

GSC voted to implement the recommendations made by a committee which studied the feasibility of switching to a tripartite form of graduate student government. The recommendations called for establishing a committee to begin coordinating efforts toward the new organization.

Each GSC representative was charged to seek volunteers for the implementation committee, to be taken from each's constituency.

Organizing the committee and working through all of the implementation phases should result in the new structure being ready in last October, George Wilson said.

Wilson, GSC president, explained that the new government would enable graduate student representatives from each graduate department to sit on a "Unit Council" for each particular college or school. Each college would send two representatives to a parent graduate student senate.

The present GSC will remain in operation until the new system is completely organized. GSC unanimously voted invitations to the new law and medical schools to join the present GSC, and both schools will be included in the new government.

Wilson also charged representatives with finding volunteers to serve on a Fee Allocation Board. The board will have the responsibility of allocating the estimated $18,000 in graduate student fees to various graduate departments. One member from each college or school is desired for the board.

An orientation program is also under consideration for incoming graduate students. Wilson charged the GSC representatives with finding volunteers to serve on a committee to discuss various orientation ideas.

The floor was open for nominations to fill GSC's two vacant seats on the University Senate. Only one nomination was made, and the matter was tabled until the next meeting.

Emergency aid numbers listed

Stephen J. Creamean, Supervisor of ambulance services at the Health Service, has announced there are two numbers a person needing emergency health service may call. For emergency calls of ambulance service the number is 463-3600. The number of the Doctor's Hospital Emergency room, if the first line is busy, is 549-0721.

If plans to sink the Illinois Central railroad tracks should materialize, this may be Carbondale's new look. The drawing, showing the lowered track bed and a pedestrian overpass, is from the 1968 track relocation study prepared by a Chicago firm of consulting engineers.

Track relocation bill surprise to city

By Lana Gillen
Student Writer

Central Railroad," which was made in June, 1968, B. J. Schwegman, public works director, said.

The study, prepared for the Carbondale Railroad Relocation Authority by De Leuw, Cather and Co., Chicago, consulting engineers, recommended sinking a two-mile section of track below ground level. The below-grade stretch of track would begin at a point directly east of the SIU Arena. The track bed would elevate to ground level near Carbondale Mobile Home Park.

The plan calls for the construction of two pedestrian overpasses, one at Grand Avenue and the other at Harwood Avenue. The Harwood Avenue overpass from east campus to main campus had not been constructed when the report was made.)

Traffic over-passes would be built at Mill, College, Walnut, Main Jackson, Oak and Hickory Streets.

In 1968, the cost of the relocation project was figured at $10,692,000. That estimate has been rendered obsolete by inflation.

"If we allow a 19 per cent increase in prices for each year, the cost now would be considerably more," Schwegman said.

"With this cost factor in mind I tend to think the appropriation may be used to explore other possible proposals," he said.

The IC Railroad co-operated in the 1968 study, Schwegman noted. The railroad raised no objection to lowering the tracks as long as the project involved no cost to the railroad, Schwegman noted.

"If the IC tracks are lowered, it will probably be done in stages. The IC could maintain regular service on one track, while the other is being lowered," Schwegman said.

The 1968 proposal is "not without its problems," the public works director continued. Lowering of the tracks would necessitate "expensive relocations" because the city's storm drainage and sewer systems run southwest to northeast, Schwegman said.

The new lowered track bed "would be like a big trench running through the downtown section of town," Schwegman explained.

The city's proposed $1.5 million Mill Street underpass has not been co-ordinated with the 1968 track relocation study.

"Our preliminary plan, which was Street traffic running under a bridge built to support the IC tracks," Schwegman said.

wegman said. It may be possible to lower the tracks north of the proposed bridge and utilize both proposals, he added.

However, Schwegman said, lack Mill Street bridge proposal is only a "tentative plan."

The railroad project is "up in the air" at the moment, Schwegman concluded. "We'll know the whole story" once Congress has acted on the highway bill, he said.

A $10 million federal fund for relocation of Central railroad tracks which bisect Carbondale, apparently came as a surprise to city officials.

The $10 million appropriation is part of a $20 billion federal highway bill now awaiting action by the U.S. House of Representatives. The bill was approved by a joint House-Senate conference committee on July 21.

City Manager Carroll Fry said he has not seen the bill and knows only what recent news releases have disclosed on the subject.

Presumably, the appropriation is related to the "Report on Grade Separation Study of the Illinois

Saddle club trail ride starts today

By Ed Dunin-Wasowicz

"Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

For the seventh consecutive year, the Associated Saddle Clubs of Southern Illinois are bringing riders and campers from near and far to the Shawnee Forest Nine-Day Ride, Saturday, as the association's camp grounds in Pope County just north of Golconda.

Riders began assembling Thursday, though riding will not begin until Saturday. On daily long and short rides, they will go through spots of interest and scenery such as One-Horse Gap, Indian Kitchen, Lusk Creek, and War Bluff.

Mrs. Calvin Gillespie, publicity chairman for the saddle club association, said that aside from trail rides, the association also sponsors charity drives and other benefit programs.

"We give horse shows, cerebral palsy drives and have done shows for Anna State Hospital," she said.

Riders and campers are pretty much on their own and have to "rough it" on the trails. "We provide campgrounds with electricity, drinking water, an outhouse, portable toilets, trash collection, a horseshoe at the campsite, and hay, grain and some tack for the horses," Mrs. Gillespie said.

Riders are expected to bring their own houses as none will be available for rental. The association will not provide bathing facilities, and it is recommended that each person bring their own trash can and plastic bags.

"As far as food goes, Red Campbell's cookshack will again provide three meals a day, snacks, cold drinks and will pack lunches on order," Mrs. Gillespie said.

The daily trail rides are only one of the several activities planned for the nine-day camp. There will be entertainment in the cookshack nightly; a White Elephant Auction will be held; and horseback activities such as broom polo and square dance riding are planned.

"This year, on Wednesday, August 1, we will set up competitive trail ride course and give prizes and trophies for Mr. and Mrs. Trail Rider," she said. "There may be a small entry fee."

The ride will be judged on the rider's ability to follow the trail, which will consist of ten obstacles on a cross-country trail and an arena on a high meadow.

The Mr. and Mrs. Trail Rider Trophies are the first prize with money prizes for second place competitors on down.

Other prizes and awards are in store for the person who has come the greatest distance for the ride and for the best trail ride horse.

A registration tent will be set up on the road leading in to the camp to collect the one dollar charge per person; plus, for those who request it, a one dollar a day fee is required for use of electricity on the camp grounds.

Mrs. Gillespie said that she doesn't know how many riders are expected. In the past the number used to reach hundreds because of all the saddle clubs involved. "For nine days it just turns into a little 'ol town out there," she said.

White Sox GM Holcomb resigns

CHICAGO (AP)—Stu Holcomb resigned Friday as executive vice president and general manager of the Chicago White Sox in what apparently was a power conflict with Roland Hemond and Chuck Tanner whom he hired three years ago.

Hemond, player personnel director, said in Kansas City, where the Sox have a series with the Royals, that the resignation came "somewhat as a surprise."

Manager Tanner said he is withholding comment "and I think anything that has to be said should come from Mr. Allyn."

Owner John Allyn left a message at his suburban Chicago home that he has nothing to say at this time.

In a letter of resignation to Allyn, Holcomb indicated there was a growing breach between him and Tanner.

The differences widened recently when Rick Reichardt and Mike Andrews left the team after failing to reach salary terms with Holcomb, who was unable to obtain players in return for the injury-depleted Sox.

The Sox, early leaders of the American League West have dropped to fourth place, six games off the pace. Holcomb, former football coach and athletic director at Purdue and athletic director at Northwestern, said among his disagreements with Tanner was Tanner's choice to keep Hank Allen, older brother of first baseman Dick Allen, on the roster at the beginning of the season instead of a younger player. Hank is hitting .118 in only 34 times at bat.

In his letter, Holcomb said he and Tanner also had other differences on the makeup of the Sox roster this spring.

"I was not in accord with his (Tanner's) 25-man squad, but I did not challenge it," said Holcomb. "As the season progressed and we became beset with injuries, we called several young players up to fill in. I felt we should have kept them here and add a few more...."

"It was at this stage that Chuck said he had to have it his way or else find a new manager."

Holcomb also was rankled last summer when Hemond and Tanner obtained Phil Regan from the Chicago Cubs in a cash deal to help bolster the Sox attempt to overtake the Oakland A's in the pennant race.

"I think the three of us worked as closely as a team as any group could and never had a break until Roland and Chuck made a deal for Regan without any discussion with me. I did not like it and told them so."

Regan was signed on June 1, 1972, after a meeting Hemond and Tanner had at Wrigley Field with John Holland, Cubs' vice president.

Following the Regan deal, Holcomb said he and Tanner and Hemond "remained most compatible, but we were no longer a three-man team."

"I have given Chuck everything it has been possible for me to do and have not crossed Chuck on his demands or decisions on or off the field though I have not always been in accord," Holcomb said in his letter.

"... I feel there can be only one head man in every successful organization and I want nothing but success for the White Sox ... I will step aside."

"And in so doing make it very clear, I hope, that Chuck Tanner, while I have been in charge, has called the shots on all player trades and personnel shifts up and down our farm system. This he does because he believes he can only manage successfully by following his opinions alone."

Oakland's Guy comes to terms

CHICAGO (AP)—Ray Guy of Southern Mississippi, first punter ever selected in a first National Football League draft round, signed a three-year contract Friday with the Oakland Raiders.

Salary terms were not announced at the signing, attended by Al Davis, Oakland's managing general partner, and Ron Wolf, director of player personnel.

Also a placekicker, Guy was the kicking specialist for the College All-Stars against the Miami Dolphins in the 40th All-Star Football Game at Soldier Field Friday night.

Guy last season had a 46.2 average to lead the nation's major college punters and his career average of 44.7 was second highest in NCAA history.

Football practice would start earlier

Duffy lays out college playoff plans

By Wick Temple
Associated Press Sports Editor

CHICAGO (AP) — Duffy Daugherty is out of coaching but he definitely is still in college football-beating the drums for national collegiate playoffs.

The Michigan State legend laid out his playoff plan Friday for the Football Writers Association and said it would be the greatest step that could be taken to spur interest in the game.

"The colleges are in a battle for the entertainment dollar," said Daugherty, who stepped down as Spartan head coach last year after 19 seasons. He now is assistant to the vice president for development of Michigan State University, and will do football television commentary this fall.

Under Daugherty's plan, colleges would start football practice two weeks earlier and move up every regular season game by two weeks, leaving room for playoffs in November.

The top eight teams would be selected from the top major conference and presumably room would be provided for representation of independents.

The playoffs would cut the field to four teams the first week, two the second week, and then produce a national championship game.

"We would have the games on the college campuses and the television revenues would be divided. The finals would be the last week in November," he said.

Daugherty contended that such playoffs "wouldn't disturb the bowls at all."

The colleges would be fools to give up bowl games. They're such a tradition of college football they show all the fanfare and color. But this wouldn't dampen interest in bowl games. They aren't meant to determine a national championship. They're a showcase for college football—a reward for the college teams.

"This is so practical and so feasible that it will probably never come into being," Daugherty said, laughing. "But we must be guided as to what is good for college football."

He said such playoffs would capture the imagination of the sports public and make a great contribution to the success of the sport nationally.

—High school seniors should be limited to three visits to college campuses in recruiting. "The main reason I became disenchanted," he said, "was not because I didn't like being out on the field. It was because you have a young man all set, then find out he's visiting some other school. Then you get him back in the fold again and then he's visiting someone else."

Slumping Cubs lose, 10-6

CHICAGO (AP)—A two-run homer by Richie Zisk and two-run singles by Al Oliver and Manny Sanguillen highlighted a 21-hit Pirate attack that carried Pittsburgh to a 10-6 victory over the slumping Chicago Cubs Friday.

A leadoff double by Rennie Stennett, a single by Sanguillen and a passed ball set up Oliver's two-run single in the first inning.

In the third, Zisk powered his fourth homer after Willie Stargell had doubled.

Pirate pitcher Nelson Briles hit his first of two singles in the fourth after two outs and Stennett followed with a double, Briles stopping at third. Sanguillen then blooped a single to right, scoring both runners.

The six runs came off Cub starter Larry Gura, 2-4, and cushioned Briles' 10th victory in 19 decisions.

Rick Monday's lead-off triple and Jose Cardenal's sacrifice fly got one run back for Chicago in the first inning. The Cubs added another in the second on Adrian Garrett's third homer of the baseball season.

Stargell doubled in the seventh and Zisk singled him home for Pittsburgh's seventh run.

Briles weakened in the seventh, yielding a run and three hits, and was replaced by John Lamb with two outs. Jim Hickman greeted Lamb with a single, scoring another run, and Ron Santo followed with a two-run double. Dave Giusti finally put out the fire, fanning Farrett.

The Pirates added a single run in the eighth when Stennett delivered Dal Maxvill with a single and scored two more in the ninth on singles by Giusti and Stennett, his fourth hit of the game.
