Menard inmate still at large, officials say

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Authorities continued their search Tuesday through the southeast portion of Franklin County for Menard Prison escapee Bruce Davis, checking numerous reports from citizens who thought they saw the convicted murderer.

About 25 local, state and correctional officers were still searching the Christopher area for Davis Tuesday morning, said Nic Howell, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Corrections. On Monday, about 80 officers used planes, helicopters and dogs in scouring the countryside.

Davis is described as white, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 160 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes and a scar on his right palm.

He is serving a 25-to-45-year murder sentence and a concurrent 5-to-10-year term in connection with the slaying of a Roman Catholic priest in Chicago in 1971.

Sam Fleming, Franklin County jail superintendent, said that a state police aircraft was still being used Tuesday, but no dogs were being used. He said mostly state and correctional officers are involved in the search.

The sheriff's office received numerous calls from residents who saw someone fitting Davis' description hitchhiking. Fleming said, but none of the leads proved fruitful. An Illinois State Police spokesman at the Du Quoin District also said they had received calls reporting that Davis had been sighted.

Howell and Michael Lane, traveled from Springfield to the search site Tuesday, reviewing the situation with corrections officials.

Davis was discovered missing from the correctional center at Chester at about 7:15 p.m. Sunday after inmates found the state body of Joseph J. Cushman, 52, a foreman at the prison farm. Davis was in charge of storing tools on the farm, which is located outside Mendard's walls.

Cushman's car was found Monday on a side road near Christopher, along with an ax and a pair of bloody jogging shoes, authorities said. Randolph County coroner Gary McClure determined that Cushman died of repeated blows to the head.

Authorities said that Cushman's wallet and trousers were also missing and have not been recovered.

Howell said that, as far as he knows, Davis has not been formally charged with Cushman's murder.

The prison farm has minimum security, but Howell said it is rare for a farm resident to escape.

Technical skills vital, expert says find themselves unemployed and unemployable, there could be a "serious, if not catastrophic problem," hitting the United States, an authority on high technology said Tuesday.

Martin Goland, head of the Southwest Research Institute, an organization that is internationally recognized as a center of industrial and governmental research development, said he believes that the nation will be in "grave danger" by the end of the century — a danger of "social unrest."

Speaking at high technology colloquium in Morris Library Auditorium, Goland told a group of about 125 people that the hi-tech era and that automation, such as robotics, will place the manufacturing field in the same situation that "the unskilled assembly-type jobs just will not be there in the future." He said the nation is not preparing itself correctly for the coming electronic age, and those that have no technical experience will find themselves without a job nor prospects of getting one.

"In the period ahead of us there is going to be a problem of compatibility with those who are (technologically) skilled and those who are not. In Japan they already have this problem."

Richmond, Young vie for House seat

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Bruce Richmond says he knows how the system works. Larry Young says he knows how the system should work.

The two candidates for the House in the 116th District race differ on how the General Assembly should act regarding issues on the agenda in Springfield — education, utility bills, roads and crime.

Young is agitated by "career politicians" who bask in the limelight.

Richmond does not fit the mold. Friends and legislators say he is a quiet, effective legislator. A four-term incumbent Democrat, Richmond does not call press conferences to announce pieces of legislature he has pushed through.

Young, the Republican challenger, is a teacher and Carbondale School Board member. He previously taught American government at Elverado High School and was in a management training program at Wal-Mart. He now teaches at the Menard Correctional Center.

Young, who is being outspent by his opponent and bemoans the advantages incumbents wield, announced support for campaign reform before Sen. Ken Buzbee, D-58th District, told the media earlier this month that he would introduce a "truth in campaigning" bill.

Richmond touts his experience in the General Assembly as well as on the Murphysboro City Council and as mayor of Murphysboro. He says it would be harmful to put an inexperienced politician from the district in Springfield.

"I know how the Legislature works," the incumbent says. "I know how to use it for my district."

Richmond is considered a friend of education in general and SIU-C in particular in the House. He has guided legislation for the University through the House, including bills for the renovation of Davies Gymnasium, the construction of the new Law Library and faculty salaries.

Young says SIU-C was a strong institution before Richmond came along and that Richmond has not been as effective as he claims. Gov. James Thompson vetoed funds

Copier cost reduction measure to be studied by City Council

By Mike Nelson
Staff Writer

Robert P. Higsen, Carbondale's purchasing agent, believes he has found a way to save the city nearly $4,000 a year on copying costs.

Higsen presented a proposal to lower the city's copy machine costs at the City Council meeting Monday. The city presently pays about $48,000 a year for use of the machines.

Under a contract with the Xerox Corp., which expired Sept. 30, the city paid $2,140 a month for copies. According to Higsen, Xerox recently announced rate increases, which would have raised the city's monthly expenditure to $2,205. This would represent a yearly increase of $3,852.

The rate increases prompted Higsen to find another, less costly company for copy service. Higsen determined that switching over to International Business Machines Corp.

copiers would cost the city only $2,006 per month for the same service provided by Xerox, assuming the same number of copies.

The city currently leases six copier machines, located in the engineering department, reception area, police department, printing office, finance department and the Eurma Hayes Center. Under Higsen's proposal, the second floor City Hall copier would be eliminated, saving an estimated $2,206 per year, in addition to the nearly $2,000 saved by switching over to IBM copiers.

According to Higsen, the IBM copiers will increase the productivity of the city's copying operation, since they have several features the Xerox machines do not. He pointed out that by using the IBM copiers, the council agenda items could be printed on both sides of the paper.

The council reacted favorably to the proposal and will consider its approval at its meeting Monday.

In other business, the council discussed the proposed changes to the Grand Avenue Crosswalk opposite the Student Recreation Center. The council tentatively approved the city's recommendations for crosswalk changes and an additional change proposed by the Undergraduate Student Organization.

The city administration recommended installation of two advance warning signs 300 feet prior to the crosswalk from each direction and a two-directional floodlight on the south end of the crosswalk. In addition, the USO requested that a sign saying "Caution - Hazardous Pedestrian Crosswalk" be installed on both sides of the crosswalk. The costs for the safety improvements would be shared by the city and SIU-C.

USO to study organization funding

Bills to fund several recognized student organizations will be discussed at the Undergraduate Student Organization senate meeting Wednesday.

The senate will also discuss a bill to establish Nov. 17 as the date for senatorial elections, and is scheduled to vote on bills to impeach two senators for consecutive absenteeism at regular senate meetings.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Ballroom C of the Student Center.

The senate is scheduled to vote on a bill that would allocate $1,055 to radio station WIDB to use to buy new equipment.

A bill to transfer funds from audio-visuals and workshop funds of the American Society of Interior Designers to its transportation fund will also be discussed. The transferred funds would be used to finance a trip to Columbus and New Harmony, Ind. on Nov. 5 and 6.

The Student Theatre Guild has requested $300 from the USO to finance a three-play show entitled, "An Evening of New Plays," which it plans to show at the Laboratory Theatre Nov. 15 through 17. The guild has also requested $300 to fund its participation in the American College Theatre Festival, to be held in Milwaukee; Jan. 18 to 22.

News Roundup

New laws endanger Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Parliament enacted laws cracking down on "social parasites," juvenile delinquents and drunkards Tuesday over the objections of members who said the new laws are aimed at Solidarity union members and other dissidents.

Non-communist Deputy Karol Malcurzynski, warning against the new measures, called the bills "pernicious and demagogic."

Consumer price increase slows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, paced by tumbling mortgage rates, inched ahead at an annual rate of 2.1 percent in September, the smallest increase since spring, the government said Tuesday.

The report on the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index said inflation was running at an annual rate of 4.8 percent in the first nine months of the year. That matched the level for all of 1976 and raised the possibility that inflation for all of this year would come in at its best pace in a decade.

Union locals vote on Chrysler strike

DETROIT (AP) — Workers at three small United Auto Workers union locals voted Tuesday against striking Chrysler Corp. on Nov. 1, as UAW members turned out in large numbers for a one-day referendum.

The vote was 29-1 against a strike at Local 546 in Richmond, Va., 57-4 against a strike at Local 573 in Cleveland, and 59-0 against a strike at Local 688 in Atlanta, local union officials said.

Chrysler's 43,000 working U.S. autoworkers plus many of the 40,000 on indefinite layoff were eligible to vote.

Thompson focuses on final week

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson plans to spend more than $180,000 on television and radio advertising in the final week of his re-election campaign, with one television commercial directly attacking Democratic challenger Adlai E. Stevenson III, aides said Tuesday.

Bill Peltier, a partner in the advertising agency that is placing Thompson's ads, said four new commercials are being or will be aired this week. Two of them are built around "man-in-the-street" interviews, and one of those dwells on critical remarks about Stevenson, a former U.S. senator.

A Stevenson aide said Stevenson would spend more than $150,000 on broadcast commercials the final seven days of the campaign.

He said that the United States is on the "brink of change" into agriculture is in today.

In the past, it took many people to produce food, he said, but today only "a small population grows all the food for the world."

He said that already traditional jobs in auto manufacturing and secretarial work have been replaced and will never be reinstated again, even if the current economic slump picks up. "They are being replaced by robotics and by people who are trained," he said.

The United States is "moving in a direction which is mortally severe," he said. "The government is not approaching nor even considering the problems which will result from these people being functionally unemployable."

Goland said that minorities will be particularly hurt, and that some initiative on the part of both government and industry is needed to head off the problem.

The new technological age could be a boom to the employment situation, he said.

this year for Richmond's pet project, Food for Century III. Thompson wanted no salary increases for faculty and Richmond wanted 8 percent pay raises as catch-up pay to restore what inflation has taken away. The settlement was 2 percent raises, which start Jan. 1.

Richmond says he will test the support he has during the November veto session before deciding whether to fight to restore some of what Thompson vetoed.

"To put it off a year doesn't make any sense," he said about the veto of funds meant to renovate buildings at SIUC through the Century III program.

But Richmond says he's done pretty well to get 3 percent and 4 percent raises for faculty when the governor wanted no increases.

Young says that his being a teacher and school board member in Carbondale helps him understand education.

Rather than raise tuition, he says the "luxury" courses should be dropped. In order to decide what the luxury courses are, he said he would survey faculty and students.

Young says education is necessary for a renewed economy in Southern Illinois. American workers are not meeting the needs of high technology, which is replacing heavy industries, he says. Workers, he says, must be retrained.

Young believes Americans are afraid of the political system so legislators go unchecked. His campaign stresses high morals and renewed faith in government.

Richmond has stayed clear of controversy during his political career and says he will match his morals against anyone's.

"I may not be at the church door as often as he is, but I'll put my morals against his," Richmond said.

While Young blames lack of long-range planning for Illinois' crumbling roads, Richmond places blame on Thompson's raids on the road fund and other abuses of the fund.

Richmond wants to revive the economy by putting coal miners back to work. He supported funding for coal desulfurization research at Illinois universities, including SIUC.

He also sees industries such as food processing and service-oriented business dominating the market. He predicts Illinois will stay in a recession when the economy recovers unless it shifts to service-oriented industry.

Richmond tried to help the elderly cope with utility bills with a proposal that the state pick up a percentage of utility rate increases. He says he hasn't given up on that yet and that it wouldn't cost the state very much because utility taxes also would be rising as rates increase.

Richmond is among legislators who have reversed a position and now support an elected commerce commission. He said some problems with utility rates would remain, but electing a commerce commission seems to be the only way to get the utilities' attention.

Young also supports an elected commerce commission as one way to return the government to the people.

Because of experience at Menard, Young questions whether a society should send children convicted of crimes and non-violent criminals to prisons.

Opinion & Commentary

Illinois coal should be the big burning issue

By Joan Lovelace
Student Writer

HIS NAME IS James R. Thompson and he is running for a third consecutive term as governor of Illinois. We have heard him say that he is concerned - when it comes to standard political campaign issues. We have heard him say that something should be done - in reference to new issues. We have heard his opponent, Adlai Stevenson, say essentially the same thing. Nothing new.

We are the voters of Illinois. And we are waiting to hear about coal.

The United States supplies the world with 30 percent of its coal. Illinois has vast coal resources. Why, then, has the production of coal nearly slumped to a halt? The answer is not an easy one, and that is why neither Thompson nor Stevenson will take a firm stand on the subject.

COAL WAS THE black hope of the 1970's. It was projected by the National Coal Association that with continued improvements in mining, Illinois could produce up to 83 million tons a year by the early 1980s. Then the Clean Air Act stepped in and new laws inhibited production. Rather than confront clean air laws with sound investment in modernized mining facilities and some tough decisionmaking, Illinois legislators set the problem aside for the 1980s.

They set it aside because they chose to cater to special groups instead. It is easier to deal with oil because big business likes it, environmentalists like it, and it is relatively cheap to buy and sell. Oil is only cheap, however, in the short run. The economy in Illinois receives almost no benefit or return from imported energy. For example, in 1972 it cost the state $2.67 billion to import oil. That takes into account the money returned to Illinois in the form of purchases. In 1979 the bill rose to $4.6 billion. Even this increase does not fully illustrate the economic loss to the state. During those years, the source of the energy changed. In 1972, only 11 percent of the oil in Illinois came from foreign countries. In 1979 that figure jumped to 49 percent.

THE IMPACT IS devastating. For every dollar that the import cost rises, 60 cents goes to the exporters. The result in 1979 was a $5.3 billion economic loss - enough money to support nearly 200,000 jobs.

There are 3,400 coal miners out of work in Illinois. With Thompson's deep concern for high school graduates and proper training for today's job market, their children will be working but they won't. Legislators should construct programs dealing with coal in order to ensure that money spent on energy is reverted back into the local economy. If Thompson can find $75 million to add to the student loan program, there must be a money source for coal.

There are more important aspects of energy than money. It may cost the Illinois consumer more during the initial stages of coal production, but it will be well worth the money in the long run. Energy costs would eventually be much lower. Jobless miners would return to work. The energy money would pour back into the state economy. Most importantly, Illinois could be energy independent.

LEGISLATORS SINCE THE 1970s have managed to ignore the issue of coal, pawing it off on the next decade's lawmakers. Before long, costs are going to rise enough to make coal production unpractical. Illinois would then be forced to keep feeding the pocketbooks of foreign business.

We need a governor who will make a commitment to the development of coal, even at the risk of losing the support of special interest groups. We need a governor who is willing to make firm investment decisions. We need a governor who is willing to sacrifice the immediate convenience of imported energy. We need a governor who is willing to expose this very dangerous Illinois energy problem. We need a governor who is unafraid to instigate a drastic solution.

Wet t-shirt pix bad taste

The Oct. 12 edition of the DE was the first time I have ever seen a picture of a wet t-shirt contest on the front page of a newspaper. The DE owes an enormous apology to the community for printing this type of picture and ideas it represents. Though many people, misguided, nonetheless, view this degradation as entertainment, it richly deserves a thorough condemnation. Like many people, the DE apparently does not see the connection between this form of exploitation and the abundance of its other forms - all contribute to the objectification of women. From pornography to rape and from advertising to wet t-shirt contests, women are presented as objects of pleasure and sex for men to "salivate" over, to enjoy, to use, and to discard when they are bored.

What people will do to themselves for money, as well as the huge market for this type of garbage, is a continual source of sadness and amazement for me. In a community where the incidence of violence (including murder) against women is tragically high, the DE performs an absolute disservice to the Carbondale and SIU communities by printing this picture and the ideas it represents. You need to re-examine your standards. David Byrne, Senior, Philosophy-English.

On gay awareness

Blue jeans are our usual wear, not our amen to gay lifestyles

Without expressing my personal views on the subject matter of homosexuality, I would like to respond to a gay and lesbian awareness activity that is scheduled for this Thursday, Oct. 28, here at SIU.

Monday, Oct. 25, the DE presented a list of activities organized by the Gay and Lesbian Awareness group that are taking place this week. In this list, one particular activity struck me as being somewhat ridiculous.

I am referring to the Blue Jeans day. This Thursday, all students of SIU who wish to support Gay and Lesbian lifestyles are supposed to wear blue jeans in support of homosexuals who want to "openly express their proud existence."

After reading this I walked the campus of SIU and what did I see? I saw our campus filled with thousands of students wearing - yes! - blue jeans. Come off it Gay and Lesbian Awareness group. You must realize that blue jeans happen to be the numero uno form of dress here on campus.

I'm sure that there will be a substantial amount of students who will not be aware of your Blue Jeans day and continue to wear their normal style of dress - blue jeans. These people, ignorant of your Blue Jeans day, will unknowingly be making a social statement. This is not fair to those people or an accurate way to receive response to the issue of homosexual lifestyles.

Blue jeans are quite an inadequate medium to use when trying to get SIU students to express their views on homosexual lifestyles.

Why not carry "homosexuality yes" flags or wear armbands or bandanas on the arm? Even a declared "homosexual hat day" would serve better than using Levi Strauss. Let's be reasonable Gay and Lesbian Awareness group, you could do better than to use blue jeans to "say no to opposition" of homosexual lifestyles. If you want an accurate account of open expression for homosexual lifestyles, I suggest you look elsewhere, but for now, I hope that SIU students have done their laundry, for Thursday is the day to express their views on this matter. - Scott Radzik, Junior, Radio-Television.

flower that your support would be minimal?

After speaking with a number of people on this subject, most agree that this is a cheap tactic and is being used to gain their brand of false support. Their type of reasoning is akin to stating that all those who wear shirts with sleeves are in support of nuclear warfare. My suggestion to this community is to clean up their tactics before they even attempt to gain anyone's support. - Matthew Bowman, Junior, Psychology.

Blue jeans idea dumb

It has come to my attention through the DE (Oct. 25) that Thursday, Oct. 28, will be "Blue Jeans day" supporting gay & lesbian movements on campus. Blue jeans are a universal dress for men, women, all races and religions. I do not support the movement and will not wear blue jeans on Oct. 28. But what of the other people on campus who have not read the agenda or only own blue jeans. Come on! Be more creative! Make it easier on yourselves and us "non-gays" or normal people and just wear arm bands or t-shirts stating "I support gays." By being so stupid as declaring a campus-wide blue jeans day, there may be a few clenched fists Thursday. - Mark H. Case, freshman, forestry-geology.

Editor's Note: This letter was signed by 10 others.

What a cheap tactic

I stand in disbelief that the gay and lesbian community here in Carbondale have proclaimed this Thursday, Oct. 28, as Blue Jean day. Their presumptuous idea that all who wear blue jeans on this day wear them in support of the gay movement does not even approach logical thought. Let me remind the gay community that this is a college campus and on a typical afternoon all one sees is blue jean clad students. Why must you insist on an article of clothing worn by almost everyone? Are you afraid that if you recommended wearing an unusual article of clothing like a

Tylenol deaths prompt students to market poison detection kits

WACO, Texas (AP) — A current and a former student at Baylor University are marketing a test kit they say will protect consumers against poison and acid in pain-killers, mouthwash, eyedrops and nasal sprays.

But they ran afoul of university policy in announcing the product at a news conference in Baylor's Student Union Building and the current student, Chuck Watson, may be disciplined.

Mark Bower said he and Watson, an insurance major and pre-law student, got the idea after the recent deaths of Chicago-area residents who were poisoned by cyanide-spiked capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol, and contamination of over-the-counter health products elsewhere.

Bower said a fraternity brother, who majors in chemistry, helped develop the kit. The kit, which sells for $19.95, is "easy to use," he said. It includes chemicals that change color and give off an odor if cyanide or arsenic is present in pain-killing tablets or capsules. Bower said.

Litmus paper is used to discover acid in eyedrops, mouthwashes and nasal sprays, he said.

"The problem was gaining credibility," Bower said. "We are college students and are operating as a mail-order business."

But Bower said inquiries started coming in after the Fort Worth Star-Telegram ran the ad last Friday.

Bower said his employer, Waco restaurant owner Tom Kuebler, put up the money to market the kit.

"He came to me one night and said if I had some money, he has an excellent product," Kuebler said. "I thought it was an excellent idea," Kuebler said.

Bower said Baylor's Center for Private Enterprise Entrepreneurship also has assisted in the venture.

But Baylor officials disavowed any official connection with the venture.

"The Baylor University administration had no knowledge of the product and did not authorize the promotion of the kit on campus," Baylor spokesman Allen Hunt said in a prepared statement.

Mark T. Bower is not a student at Baylor University and did not seek administration approval to promote the product on campus.

"Since the student (Watson) violated university policy, the situation has been referred to the division of student affairs. Possible disciplinary action against the student may result."

Year-round monitoring to yield overall view of Campus Lake

By Stace England
Student Writer

SIU-C's Pollution Control Department is keeping an eye on Campus Lake.

For the past year, monitoring of Campus Lake for water purity has been conducted on a weekly basis, according to Steve Pavlovich, water program director.

The program started in 1981 as part of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency's Volunteer Lake Monitoring Program. Volunteers from all over the state, coordinated by local community environmental groups, were organized to supply the needed manpower. The program was designed to form an overall picture of water clarity in Illinois lakes.

According to Pavlovich, the EPA program has been expanded by Pollution Control to include many more tests, such as bacteria testing, chlorine level, and oxygen level analysis.

"We hope to compile all of the data to form an overall picture of the seasonal trends of campus lake. This information can then be used to plan for proper lake management in the future. Proper lake management would include determining what types of recreation the lake is suited for and how much, algae control, stocking of fish, chlorination, and a variety of other activities.

Water clarity is measured by using a black and white metal plate called a secchi disk. The disk is lowered into the water to check visibility. The Illinois EPA recommends that swimming areas have a 49 inch visibility level. Campus Lake passed this test most times during the year, Pavlovich said.

Pollution control also monitors lake usage to determine what kinds of recreation the lake is suited for, and how much. Compiling usage figures can help determine if too much boating, fishing, and swimming are taking place on the lake, disturbing natural processes.

Imagination soars in children's mural

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

An orange moon, a big haunted house, a couple of ghosts and skeletons and a Pac Man character populate a window of the Carbondale Public Library in a salute to Halloween, painted by children from a Museum and Art Gallery Association art class.

Cathy Walsh, part-time librarian at the library, helped arrange for the class to paint on the front window of the library as part of their class project, said Judy Addington, the group's sponsor. This is the first time the class has painted a library window for Halloween.

The class is subsidized by MAGA but the children pay $27 to enroll for eight weeks. The class has been in session three weeks.

Nine children helped create the mural: Jennifer Schedler, Troy McGinnis, Lucia Eagleson, Amy Smith, Peter VanOosting, Carl Dietz, Rachael Christado, and Arran and Bryan Addington. Their ages range from 4 and a half to 11 years old, Addington said.

The mural, which took about an hour and a half to paint, was based on a picture drawn by Bryan. Addington said that she decided to have the children paint it on the library window shortly after seeing the sketch. The haunted house and two trees were in the original sketch but the rest of the painting was created free hand on the spot by the children, she said.

The children wanted to get the huge moon in the upper right corner of the mural just right, but they had two problems. First, something was wrong with the paint and then, the moon got out of shape.

"I'm doing pretty bad on my moon but it's just this paint," Bryan said as he stood on a ladder attempting to paint around the witch and a couple stray bats. Addington left to find some new paint and a bigger paint brush.

About that time, one of Bryan's friends yelled, "Hey, that is a good moon. I don't see any white on it. Hey, Troy, it looks like a belly button or something cause it's kind of bulged out." Somehow, the moon ended up round.

"I'm creating," Arran said as he stood back, paint brush in hand, examining the work of his friends. "Oh, I got it," he said resolutely and he then proceeded to paint a large black cat perched upon the haunted house's roof.

Moments later, Amy, 7, who had been clutching a bottle of blue paint just waiting for her chance, climbed the ladder to finish painting the sky.

The mural was however, far from finished, as Jennifer, 4 and a half, the youngest in the group, walked around painting the grass and developing a ground line which was, Addington said, as high as she could reach.

Meanwhile, Pete sat near the lower left corner, painting red goblin eyes, which he later turned into an entire goblin, devil or whatever he imagined it to be.

Throughout the paint job, the sidewalks outside the library were lined with newspapers to keep paint off, but there was little if any paint on them. Most paint was either on the window or the children.

In fact, by the end at least some of the children may have had more paint on themselves than on the window.

Pumpkin is this king's domain

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Gene Rhodes, the pumpkin king of Kalamazoo, grows 10 tons of pumpkins a year. But he doesn't leave it at that — his bathroom is orange, he drinks from an orange goblet, drives an orange car and wears an orange ranch hat and an orange shirt.

"I almost sided the house in orange," he said with a grin. "If I could have found a halfway decent orange, I would have done it."

Each year, he opens his patch of 24,000 pumpkins to nursery school children, who climb aboard his two orange-painted hay wagons and pick a pumpkin for 50 cents.

Education will be discussion topic

By Eric Larson
Staff Writer

The Fall 1982 Brown Bag Luncheon Series, sponsored by the Black American Studies Program, will feature three presentations and discussions about education.

The meetings will be held on the first three Wednesdays in November from noon to 1:30 p.m. in Quigley Hall.

"The purpose of the series is to provide a forum through which black professionals and members of the black community can meet informally to discuss relevant issues," said Locksley Edmunson, professor in the Black American Studies Program.

Arthur Black, Carbondale school board member and former Carbondale Community High School principal, will present "Racism in the Carbondale Educational System" on Nov. 3 in Room 7 of the Quigley Hall basement. Edmunson said. Black works with adult educational programs for the Illinois Department of Corrections, Edmunson said.

Malvin Moore, professor in educational leadership, will speak on "The Future of Blacks in Higher Education" on Nov. 10 in the Quigley Hall Lounge. Edmunson said.

"Racial Violence in the Public Schools" will be presented by Lillie Lockhart, director of the Center for Basic Skills, on Nov. 17 in the Quigley Hall Lounge.

The Brown Bag Luncheon Series was started last semester and included presentations on the future of affirmative action, a racial profile of Carbondale and a discussion of literature on discrimination and protest. Edmunson said.

"Last semester's luncheons were attended by a solid core of 15 to 20 people," he said. "The group was small enough, and intimate enough to allow discussion, but we would like to see more people attend this term's series."

Coffee will be provided at the three bring-your-own-lunch meetings, which are all open to the public, Edmunson said.

German study programs to be explained

By Michele Hanson Staff Writer

SIU-C students who are liberal in German have a chance to use their language skills in Germany on Austria, while earning credit toward their degree.

As part of the International Services International Seminars, Sheldon Tom Austland will be the head of 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, in the Usher Room.

The session, sponsored by International Services and the Languages Department, will feature the SIU Year Abroad in Austria program and several exchange programs with Germany and Switzerland.

The SIU Year Abroad in Austria program is in cooperation with the University of Illinois, Tom Saville, international opportunities adviser, said. The director of the program at Illinois, Henry Gerlach, professor of German languages and literatures, will attend the session.

Students in the program will study two semesters at the Pädagogische Akademie in Baden, Saville said. American students attend classes with Austrian students and are taught by Austrian professors. Saville said that each student will live with an Austrian roommate in a dormitory. "It's like spending a year here as far as courses," Saville said. "You get a full year of SIU-C credit there. You're actually enrolled in an SIU-C course."

Saville said that students in the program pay tuition at SIU-C and go through the normal financial aid procedures.

Saville said that a resident director in Austria advises and evaluates the work of the students. He also teaches courses that are available to both American and Austrian students.

Gerlach was resident director in 1978 to 1979. The current resident director is Thomas Keller, SIU-C professor in languages and literature.

"Having one of our teachers there is a good opportunity to improve his skill in the colloquial language culture," Saville said. "We improve our faculty by having him there."

Any student may enter the program, Saville said.

"It doesn't matter what major. Anyone can do it," he said. But, all the courses are taught in German.

"The main bonding factor is that the student must have five semesters of German or the equivalent with a 1.9 grade point average in German," he said.

"They can take a variety of courses," Saville said. They include courses in German language, literature, art, civilization, music, art, architecture, history.

thropology, political science and physical education. SIU-C also offers exchange programs for students to study in Switzerland, Germany and for native students.

"Countries of study are usually one or two of our students who go there and are directly enrolled in their school and the same number of their students are directly enrolled here."

Saville said. According to Saville, usually a tuition scholarship is awarded to the student studying abroad by SIU-C while the international student is awarded one by the or the university.

SIU-C students are selected, Saville said, by the German department.

Business major doubles as comedian

By Nancy Zehr
Student Writer

If you visit the Recreation Center during weekday afternoons, you may see a guy doing strange things in front of the mirrors.

He moves one way and then another. He makes all kinds of facial expressions.

On top of all that, he talks to himself.

But don't worry, it's only Kaz polishing up his act.

He'll appear on stage at T.J. McFly's Wednesday.

Kaz, known only to his more intimate acquaintances as Dave Kazanjian, is a comedian. A 21-year-old senior majoring in business at SIU-C, this Methuen, Mass., native has been making people laugh for many years.

"I've always been a clown," Kaz said.

Pumpkin carvers compete for prizes

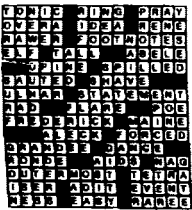

College students may not go trick-or-treating any more, but some never outgrow pumpkin carving.

In order to promote the Halloween pastime, Thompson Point residents will hold a pumpkin carving contest Thursday.

Thompson Point's Cultural and Educational Activities Committee is sponsoring the event. Judging will take place from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. in Lentz Hall.

Head residents and resident's assistants will judge the pumpkins in three categories: most original, most comical, and ugliest. A $5 gift certificate from either Spencer's in the mall, 719 Bookstore, or University Bookstore will be awarded to the winner in each category.

Puzzle answers

But only in the last year did he start to take his comedy to the stage. "It all started at a talent contest at the (Carbondale) Ramada Inn last year. Being on stage had always been a dream," he said.

He went on to become a finalist in the contest, eventually taking second place overall.

Since then he has done more than 15 shows at such Southern Illinois spots as DuMarne's, the new New Yorker and T.J. McFly's. In March he went to Daytona Beach, Fla. for spring break and booked his act into a night club for one show. He also performed in Boston near his hometown.

"I've done everything from church shows to night clubs. And I've done everything in between," he said.

This summer Kaz signed with an agent who worked as a comedian in the '50s. "He thinks I have a lot of potential. He thinks I need a lot of work, but he thinks I've got potential. He's given me a lot of breaks," Kaz said.

"I feel I'm far from good. But I'm a hard worker. I'm a confident person. But I'm very realistic too.

"I've only been doing it a year, but I've come a long way in that year. I've seen good. I know what good is. I'm not there yet, but I'm working toward it.

"I'm young and I try to learn from my mistakes. I still get nervous before a show. It doesn't matter if you get bigger or better, you still get nervous," Kaz said.

He's got a motto that he works by: "Don't perform, entertain."

His best show so far was when he got off stage one night and a friend said to him that he wasn't a performer, but an entertainer.

"I owe a lot to my friends. They gave me lots of support," Kaz said.

He came to SIU-C on a track and cross country scholarship. During his senior year in high school the former All-American was ranked 12th in the nation in cross country. However, injuries and other events caused him to lose the scholarship, he said.

Although he still ranks running as a high priority in his life, he now finds time for other things.

When he's alone, Kaz said he spends about 70 percent of his time writing. He is working on three books, and he writes about three-fourths of the material he uses in his shows.

"Dave the person is a very serious person, believe it or not," Kaz said.

After graduation in May he plans to return home to work with his family running a pro-shop at a golf course.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO SECTION 9 OF ARTICLE I (Ball)
Explanation of Proposed Amendment
 The proposed amendment deals with the category of persons who may be denied bail under the Illinois Constitution. The present constitutional provision permits denial of bail only to persons charged with offenses punishable by death where the proof is evident or the presumption is great. If the People of Illinois adopt this proposed amendment, persons charged with offenses for which a sentence of life imprisonment may be imposed may also be denied bail where the proof is evident or the presumption is great.

If the proposed amendment to Section 9 of Article I of the Illinois Constitution to permit a court to deny bail for persons where the proof is evident or the presumption is great and a sentence of life imprisonment may be imposed as a consequence of conviction.

State Sen. Ken Buzbee talks to Central High students at a special session Tuesday.

Reading, writing and politics? Campaign stops at high school

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois candidates became substitute teachers Tuesday as high school students filled Carbondale Community High School's learning resource center at Central Campus for a lesson on politicking and elections.

Some whispered among friends, but most listened to speeches on jobs, education, spending and voting.

A few candidates played hooky. Others were just tardy. Among the tardy were state Senate candidate Wayne Alistat, county treasurer candidate Mary Nell Chew and Bill Tapella representing U.S. Rep. Paul Simon.

The candidates' day was planned by an honors American government class at Central Campus. Chuck Lemings said he has been teaching the course 11 years and doing the same thing during each campaign.

A tape was made that will be shown to students at the high school's East Campus Wednesday. Students are scheduled to take part in a mock election Thursday.

Candidates found it difficult to squeeze their lessons into the five-minute limit. County clerk candidate Bob Harrell's talk was interrupted by the bell, and students scuffled to second period classes to explain to teachers that the talks would take up more time than expected.

A. R. Womick, candidate for county clerk, and Bill Maurizio, candidate for sheriff, skipped the session. Lemings said all candidates had planned to attend, but a few came up with "understandable reasons" for being absent.

Lemings said many of the seniors who attended the session work for various candidates but have never met them.

Most candidates for state office talked about education and how universities and community colleges should meet the needs of high school graduates.

While not everyone who attended will be voting Tuesday, the candidates urged those who were eligible to vote to get to the polls.

"That was the real lesson for the day."

CPA society to hold tax conference

The Southern Chapter of the Illinois CPA Society will sponsor its 25th annual Southern Illinois Tax Conference, Thursday in Ballroom B.

The tax conference has been designed to help the CPA practitioner provide more expert income and estate tax planning services to individual clients. It is expressly tailored for the tax practitioners who wish to be brought up-to-date on current tax planning opportunities and techniques, according to a spokesman for the group.

Conference speakers are Joseph P. Giljum, of the St. Louis law firm Kohn, Shands, Elbert, Gianoulakis and Giljum; Theodore Z. Gelt, adjunct professor in the graduate tax program at the University of Denver; James P. Breen, senior tax manager in the Chicago office of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co.; John DeBruyn, practicing attorney in Denver, Colo., and Michael J. Lins, senior tax manager for the same company as Breen, in Oak Brook.

ther," Weil said. "We don't have to say anything, we just do."

Because the offense controls the ball so often, communication between the allbacks and the goalie is especially important.

"We'll be just sitting back here for so long, if you don't constantly yell at people and tell them what to do and get into the game, you'll just kind of drift," Weil said. "Then you know it's time to switch."

"During those times, one of us will stay up for about five minutes," McAuley said. "We'll be back at each other and ask if the other wants to switch." Often the flow of the game will quickly change and the Salukis suddenly find themselves on defense. Although all the players should help out defensively, there can be times when the goalie and one other defensive player find themselves alone.

"When that happens, whoever is up will be right back there because we both have been in that position," Weil said.

Greater confidence has helped both McAuley and Weil this season.

I have a lot more confidence this year," McAuley said. "Last year, I was supposed to tell everyone what to do and I was intimidated. I didn't think I had any right to tell people what to do."

Weil has also overcome her initial shyness.

"You start learning to work with everyone once you start playing more with everyone," she said. "Last year I was left alone, without the seniors, and I had to guide everyone and take the leadership position over the new players because they were intimidated and I was supposedly not."

Gay & Lesbian Awareness 1982

Wed. Oct. 27, 3-5pm, Mississippi Room: Women's Culture

A whole new world of women's music, art, and literature has been developed by and for lesbians and lesbian/gay women. If you've never discovered this source of support and celebration or if you want to find out more about it, please join us.

Wed. Oct. 27, 7-9pm, Quigley Lounge: Being Gay and Christian

"And God saw everything that I had been made, and behold it was very good."
A panel discussion which looks at the Bible's and the Church's view of homosexuality. Representatives of gay Christian folkgroups will answer questions and invite comments.

Thursday, Oct. 28, BLUEJEANS DAY

Support gay and lesbian lifestyles by wearing bluejeans. Bluejeans Day gives lesbians and gay men an opportunity to openly express their proud existence and gives non-gays an opportunity to express their support for gayrights. Be proud, be supportive and say no to oppression—WEAR BLUEJEANS on Thursday Oct. 28!

Thurs. Oct. 28, 9-5pm, Mississippi Room:
A "Straight" Perspective on Gay and Lesbian Lifestyles

A panel of "straight" men and women discuss their views and reactions to the gay and lesbian experience. A question and answer period will follow the panel discussion.

Thurs. Oct. 28, 8pm, Ballroom B of the Student Center: CONCERT CHARLIE MURPHY and JAMI SIEBER in Concert

Openly gay singer/songwriter Charlie Murphy with cello and vocalist Jami Sieber provide music that is at times gentle and quiet and at other times dynamic and provocative. Charlie Murphy's music touches on a number of subjects from oppression of native Americans, women, gay men and lesbians to environmental conservation and stopping the threat of nuclear war to expressions of love between men. His music challenges our ideals, encourages change and inspires us to heal ourselves and our world. For a warm and inspiring evening join Charlie and Jami on Thursday Oct. 28 in Ballroom B of the Student Center. Tickets are $3.00 and are available at all Gay and Lesbian Awareness events, a table in the Student Center on Oct. 26-28; Mainstreet East from Oct. 23-28, and at the door as available. Free draft of Mainstreet East with purchase of a ticket. Special thanks to Mainstreet East for their help.

Fielders strengthen defense with confidence in each other

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Associate Sports Editor

In a high-scoring game, an offensive line gets the credit. In a low-scoring contest, the whole defense can be responsible, but it's usually the goalie who gets the credit. For Coach Julee Illner's field hockey team, defense means more than just the goalie.

The play of the two fullbacks, Dore Weil and Nancy McAuley, has been a major factor in each of the Salukis' 13 shutouts this season. The two have developed a confidence in each other that has worked as a definite advantage for the team.

"Last year, it was kind of like the blind leading the blind," said Weil, a junior from Elmont, New York. "We were all new. But this year we have a better feel for each other."

This season, the offense has dominated much of the action, but the two fullbacks have not spent their time standing in the backfield. When the ball is at the other end of the field, so a fullback.

"When one of us goes up on offense, she wants us to push everyone toward the goal," Weil said. "She expects us to be offensive-minded."

Although they help out with offense, the two usually don't get a chance to score.

"When the ball comes out of the circle, one of us will be passing to get it back in," said McAuley, a sophomore from Trumbull, Conn. "It's usually never a shot on goal."

During a game they often switch positions.

"I don't like staying back there doing nothing," McAuley said. "But some games I'll feel more comfortable back. And in other games, Dore will push me up and I'll gladly go."

Positioning usually depends on how the game is going at that point. McAuley and Weil have almost developed an instinct in knowing where to be.

"We depend a lot on each

Coach Cindy Scott is looking forward to the 1982 season, which, she said, should be the lady Salukis' best ever.

Top honors go to Carlton, Kuenn

NEW YORK (AP) — Both Phillies pitcher Steve Carlton and Brewers manager Harvey Kuenn received post-season awards from the Associated Press Tuesday.

Carlton recovered from the worst start of his career this season to win an unprecedented fourth National League Cy Young award, while Kuenn was selected as the American League Manager of the Year.

Carlton was the only pitcher in the major leagues to win 20 games this year, finishing the season with a 23-11 record and an earned run average of 3.10.

At age 37, Carlton got off to an old man's start, losing his first four games. But he won four of his next five and, once again, was on the form that has made him the all-time National League and left-handed strikeout king.

Carlton's league-leading 286 strikeouts this season gave him 3,434 for his career, only 74 shy of Walter Johnson's all-time record of 3,508. Carlton should have little trouble breaking that mark next season, his 17th in the major leagues and 12th with the Phillies.

Kuenn, 51, who received a one-year extension of his contract only two days ago, was a runaway selection. He was named on 47 of the 79 ballots cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Under Kuenn, the Brewers finished the season with a 95-67 mark and made it to the World Series. Before Kuenn took the helm from Buck Rodgers, the Brewers were sitting in fifth place in the AL East.

"I'm very happy to be coming back with a great ballclub and with guys who are real easy to manage," Kuenn said Monday when his new contract was announced. "It was great winning the pennant, and I hope 1983 will be just one game better than 1982."

Coming in second in the balloting was Earl Weaver, who resigned this year after 14 seasons as manager of the Baltimore Orioles.

Lady cagers practice to make perfect

By Jackie Rodgers
Sports Editor

The SIU-C women's basketball team's regular season stretches from Nov. 27 to Feb. 26, a period of three months.

The SIU-C women's basketball preseason began at the end of August and will conclude Nov. 26, a period of about three months.

Those three months are spent in earnest hard work, according to Coach Cindy Scott, because this year's edition of Saluki basketball should be the best ever.

"This is our year," said Scott, who will be beginning her sixth season as head coach. "This team really wants it. They know what we can do and how far we can go."

Unlike the men, the NCAA places no restrictions on when the women may begin practice.

There are also other rules the women are exempt from, such as when off campus recruiting may begin. Scott said the rules will be in effect until 1985, then the women will be subject to the same rules as the men.

"We spent the month of September doing conditioning," Scott said. "We did weight training, interval and distance running, and spent about 1½ hours in the gym each day."

Scott said the coaching staff also instilled the defense during that month. The Saluki defense, which ranged between mediocre and non-existent last season, promises to be much improved this year.

"I'm really happy with the way the defense has looked in practice this year," Scott said. "It is 100 percent better than last year."

Right now the women are working on the offensive system, which, according to Scott, is nothing complex.

"We're trying to instill a simple, basic, fundamental system," she said.

Even with the season a month away, the Salukis have already been plagued by the injury bug. Sophomore forward Cheri Bacon has been sidelined with a cartilage tear in her knee. Scott said the cartilage has been repaired, and hopes to have Bacon back practicing by Dec. 1.

Connie Price, the Salukis' 6-3 starting center, has just returned to practicing after missing five weeks with a muscle tear. Guard Susan Wright has missed some practices because of a chronic foot problem, according to Scott.

"Injuries will kill you," the Saluki coach said. "I'm just hoping that this will be the last of them, and we won't sustain any during the regular season."

Scott and assistant Coach Julie Beck said that the women cagers are much further ahead at this point in practice than they were last season. Scott attributes that to the maturity of her club. For the first time in a few seasons, Scott has the luxury of upperclassmen on her squad.

Beck said that the strength of this year's team is its depth, meaning none of the players have a lock on a position. That has resulted in tough competition, even in practice.

"They say you play like you practice," Beck said. "In the case of this team, that has really been true this year."

Even with the three-month long workout session before the Salukis face an opponent wearing something other than maroon or gray, Scott said the players are unlikely to lose their intensity.

"Burnout is not even a factor to be considered," Scott said.

The Salukis open their schedule with a home game against Oregon State on Nov. 27. Other early season games will be at Vanderbilt on Nov. 29, and at Western Kentucky on Nov. 30. They return home to play Illinois on Dec. 4 and Murray State on Dec. 9.
