Daily Egyptian photograph misidentifies SIUC student

A photograph on the first page of the Daily Egyptian Monday, Oct. 26, 1998, incorrectly identified the man in the picture as Chris Malacame, a senior in cinema and photography from Belleville. It was not Malacame. The Daily Egyptian apologizes and does so regret the error and any harm brought to Mr. Malacame by the error.

Mr. Malacame could not have possibly been on the stop Saturday night because he was in Eerie, Ohio attending the Midwest Society for Photographic Education Conference Thursday through Sunday with5 students and photography faculty member Gary Kuhl.

Saturday night, the Eerie photo staff had five photographers assigned to assignments in downtown Carbondale. The picture was taken from a solo car, preventing the photographers from the opportunity to positively identify the person in the photograph.

Upon developing the photographs, and determining that is would be the front page photo, a discussion arose about the identity of the individual. Three photographers, who knew Mr. Malacame by sight, simultaneously identified the individual as the person was Mr. Malacame. The photographs also compared to other photos of the individual and still thought the individual was Mr. Malacame.

Typically, it is an policy of the Daily Egyptian to verify the names of subjects in photographs. Because of the false sense of certainty of the Daily Egyptian newsroom, the Egyptian ran the photo with an inaccurate caption.

The photographs and the editor-in-chief incorrectly blamed the situation to a public event such as a party. The Daily Egyptian regrets the error. It is regrettable that many parties involved have recognized the error. However, the Daily Egyptian is grateful for the recognition of the error and is working to improve the situation.

The photographs and the editor-in-chief do not require a verbal confirmation of identity. The assumption that every photograph could mistakenly fail to recognize the subject was thought to be validly. It also regrettable that the identity of the individual was not recognized in the photograph. The Daily Egyptian regrets the error. It is regrettable that many parties involved have recognized the error. However, the Daily Egyptian is grateful for the recognition of the error and is working to improve the situation.

The Egyptian regrets the error, and we wish to apologize to Mr. Malacame for our negligence in not securing positive identification of the individual in our photograph.

Costello, Price contend on education

CONTRAST: Candidates divide on role of federal government in local schools.

SARAH BEAN AND JAY SHERWOOD
DAILY ELEPHANT REPORTERS

Typically, incumbent 12th District U.S. Representative Jerry Costello's bid for a sixth term in Washington would not have a great deal of drama surrounding it.

But Costello, D-Ill., is not involved in a typical campaign this time, with his opponent, Republican Bill Price of Belleville.

Costello's ethics have come under fire from a result of Costello being named an unindicted co-conspirator by federal prosecutors in a 1997 case in which Amiel Canto, longtime friend and business associate of Costello, was convicted of obstruction of justice.

Vote U.S. Representative

In addition, Price has a great deal of same recognition in the district. At the same time, Price has, with his district.

But at the center of the race lies a flood of new issues, rather stark contrast between the two candidates, the role of the federal government in the lives of the people divides the two hopefuls right down the middle.

Jerry Costello

Costello says he believes the U.S. Department of Education should be completely abolished and that the role of the federal government in the lives of the people should be minimal.

Price says that the Department of Education should be pared down in the interest of more efficient and effective use of government funds.

Price, who gave up his orthopaedic surgery practice in order to pursue office, has said that his opponents overstate the magnitude of the educational problems in the 12th District.

Price believes that the Department of Education should be pared down in the interest of more efficient and effective use of government funds.

Bill Price

"My campaign is about renewing a trust in government in local schools.

"It comes down to who can represent the people best," Costello said.

Costello and Poshard best suited for SIUC

After careful consideration, the DAILY EUPHONIA has decided to endorse Democrats Jerry Costello for the 12th Congressional District seat and Glenn Poshard for governor. We believe that Costello and Poshard are the best suited candidates to represent the needs of both Southern Illinois and the University.

The Daily Euphonia's endorsement is based on thorough interviews and analysis of their positions on issues pertinent to the district and University.

Regarding education, Costello supports an increase in funding per student and a $200 million increase in education funding. Ryan plans to take 51 percent of natural revenue growth and put it into education. This means funding would have to be cut from other areas, but which ones? And if there is an economic downturn, where would the money in education come from?

Both candidates agree there is a need for a third Chicago airport, but Ryan would like to begin construction on it immediately. However, Poshard believes that Southern Illinois could use the money instead.

Another notable difference between Poshard and Ryan is their position on tax cuts. Poshard believes that tax cuts are necessary to stimulate the economy, while Costello is more cautious.

In conclusion, we believe Costello has a strong link to SIUC because of his past experiences, and that he will attend the University. Poshard's endorsement was Poshard's willingness to work toward Action P.E.A.C.E: Power, Education, Anti-Hate, Civil Rights, and Economic Growth.

Patriotism is needed

Dear Editor,

I was looking forward to attending the Homecoming football game this year, but it was disappointing to see a display of ignorance at the game.

The students in the stands were drinking beer and alcohol, and the atmosphere was not one of respect for American values. It was a disgraceful display.

NEW LABS:
Renovations in chemistry department add in learning process.

KENDRA THOMAS
DAILY EYEWITNESS REPORTER

A maroon ribbon was cut Friday afternoon to herald the end of a $1.5 million remodeling job that converted 30-year-old teaching laboratories into 16 high-tech research facilities for SIUC's analytical and organic chemistry students.

An audience of nearly 40 SIUC faculty, students and University officials waited to enter the new labs on the third floor of the Neckers Building as increased workspace. The rooms are converted to 30-year-old labs and research facilities for SIUC's analytical and organic chemistry students.

An audience of nearly 40 SIUC faculty, students and University officials waited to enter the new labs on the third floor of the Neckers Building as increased workspace was provided.

The work began about one year ago and the entire process took roughly six years to complete.

Scheiner said the third floor of the Neckers Building is not finished quite yet because four laboratories still need to be worked on. "Four labs still have not been touched," Scheiner said, "but we are finished for now. We've spent all the money we have got.

The event was attended by not only chemistry faculty, but also by Chancellor Jo Ann Arrigunig, President Ted Sanders, and J.W. Neckers, after whom the building was named.

Scheiner said there were many benefits of the new labs. The laboratories are much more effective because of the larger size and the increased work space provided by increased desk space. The rooms also have improved in cleanliness because of more effective "some hooding".

"I think that the students will have the challenge of matching the challenges presented in the teaching labs.

The students will have the challenge of matching the challenges presented in the teaching labs." - Ted Sanders, SIU president.

"This is a good reminder of what we need to be doing," Scheiner said. "I think that the thing that we have done is a wonderful experience for the students who use the labs."

As Scheiner cut the maroon ribbon leading to the remodeled laboratories, he gave some words of encouragement. "When we received this funding, the members of The National Science Foundation were saying that we have potential in our department," Scheiner said. "You will definitely see some productivity in these labs.

The Door is Open

"The Door is Open" is a documentary film now playing at the Neckers Building. The film explores the history of the building and its impact on the SIUC community.

"I think we need to take a look at the Sa," he said.

"It was not fair," Schoonover said. "But I asked him to leave so that we could move forward."

"To say that I fired him was correct," he said. "He was unhappy with his performance as chief of staff. I think he did a great job, was very organized and got things done."

HAZING:

more positive things than most organizations, Hazing has no place in the greek system.

Forty-four students have reported feelings about the results of the investigation.

"I feel for the organization," he said, "but I am also worried about the organization through this.

Poteat said most students in the entire organization have been hearing the decision and the need to continue working to fix the problems.

"Phi Beta Sigma is the third SUIC fraternity to lose its IFC status for the 1998-99 academic year," Poteat stated. "Phi Beta Sigma lost its IFC status during the spring semester, and Phi Sigma Kappa lost its IFC status during the academic year."

"There is something wrong with the system and we need to fix it," Poteat said.

There is a kink in the system that needs to be worked out. Until the kinks are worked out, fraternities will continue to fail through the cracks."

Sennelheimer said the national chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, located in Washington, D.C., has been working with Student Development during this investigation.

"The national organization appears to be working hard hand-in-hand with us," she said. "All indications show they support our decision at this time."

Sennelheimer said there are no indications of prior problems with Phi Beta Sigma.

The organization has the opportunity to appeal the original ruling by submitting an appeal to Student Development by November 2.

"If anyone has questions or is encountering problems with the Hearing Board, they need to bring it to the attention of the Student Conduct Code."

"There is no place for hazing at the University," Poteat said. "We pride ourselves on our fraternities and sororities and their programs over the years. Sometimes we lose an organization that slips up, like this one."

Troy Blood, president of Inter-Council Greek Council, said he is not happy to see a fraternity or sorority forced out of campus, but he does not want his group to face the same thing against the Student Conduct Code.

Blood said he too is concerned about the way this incident will make the Greek system appear.

"It happens and gives us a negative stereotype of taking part in hazings," he said. "That is something that fraternities don't do. We are trying to do positive things and this is just going to overshadow them."

U.S. Rep talks at Student Center

PEACE: Lee Hamilton shares his thoughts with SIUC students regarding situation in Middle East.

KATE KLEMPER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The United States role in the Middle East Peace Process is vital, and the U.S. must continue to be a negotiator if peace is to become a reality, U.S. Rep. Lee Hamilton said Thursday at the Middle East Symposium at SIUC.

The Indiana congressman, who is the ranking Democrat on the House International Relations Committee, said the Middle East Peace Process has preoccupied the foreign policy of every American president since Harry Truman. He said every president has had the term "vital" to describe the peace process, and presidents have not used the term "vital" casually.

"The United States plays a vital role and that process creates a sense of confidence and support between the two parties," Hamilton said. "The U.S. must continually remind the two parties that peace will keep the process moving."

Hamilton spoke to a crowd of about 100 in the Student Center Ballrooms. He was one of many speakers to share his views in the symposium sponsored by SIUC and John A. Logan College.

"The U.S. is needed to help because the Middle East is a major player in oil and petroleum supply. Over the last 25 years, the U.S. has invested more time and effort in the Middle East than in any other area of the world."

Hamilton said efforts to contain Iran are important because the U.S. must stop terrorism and promote mutual trust and understanding. "We have all been caught in the U.S. not making forward progress or the Middle East Peace Process.

"The momentum generated by the peace agreement of the early 1990s has not been sustained," Hamilton said, "and peace processes, as we all know, have been broken down many times before."

"When things don't go forward in the Middle East, then we end up going back."

Hamilton said there are barriers reducing the peace process in the Middle East. "One problem is the lack of mutual respect between Israelis and Palestinians, and the people in the region are suffering. The countries also are too dependent on the U.S."

"The simple truth is that the peace process will not move forward in the Middle East unless the United States there and there to push forward," Hamilton said. "These parties are not going to make peace on their own."

Hamilton said peace is going to require improving security for Israel and protecting her from Palestinians. Palestinian refugees "must be able to participate in the process and look at the benefits of peace." The U.S. has learned that just peace is not universal and terrorism and violence can undermine an agreement," Hamilton said. The U.S. should reduce the threats to terror and work to make peace on their own.

The United States has not been involved in the peace process in the Middle East, which has been dominated by the peace process in the Middle East. The U.S. has invested more in the peace process and in economic development, he said.
