Fighting rages in Iran; scores wounded in raids

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran’s guerrillas reported firing rocket-propelled grenades, machine guns and anti-tank rocket-propelled grenades, killing 10 open street fighters in Tehran, according to reports from Tehran.

Iran’s Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has carried out the most widespread street fighting in the city’s history, the reports said.

A resident of Tehran reached by telephone early in the Khomeinist day said: “It is quiet now. There have been no attacks on homes or businesses.”

He said there had been “fighting on every street corner, behind every tree everywhere. It was the worst and most widespread street fighting since the start of the revolution.”

Tehran Radio carried a news conference in which government spokesmen Behzad Sabahi said the clashes were “pre-planned and of course, were carried out to protect the Islamic regime for the Mujahadeen.”

The head of Iran’s revolutionary police, or central Komiteh, said: “The fighting was not serious at all.”

Tehran Radio reported early this afternoon that the guerillas opened fire on “innocent” people, and that “today’s fighting is the fifth column in the United States and the Mujahadeen have engaged in clashes in several areas of Tehran.”

Residents have said a call on black smoke hung over a number of neighborhoods that were attacked by the piad al Qods Revolutionary Commando, a paramilitary group.

Scores of endangered street fighters were carried to Tehran Hospital, where the government has set up a number of field hospitals.

The reports of anti-government fighters were very well organized. They have formed their own in commands groups, ranging in size from small groups to larger formations of 100 or more.

The Tehran Radio report said that “toughs to the right” carried rocket-propelled grenades.

In the, the exiled leader of the leftist Mujahadeen Khalq said the attacks were “a total war.”

For getting rid of Khomeini’s savage sadism and vowed “our nation’s best resistance will go on until we win.”

Walesa defends Solidarity leaders

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity chief Lech Walesa defended leaders of the independent union Sunday in a blistering denunciation of bitter internal feuding over a new version of self-management they demanded.

"We have got self-management now and we will be able to choose our own leaders," Walesa said. "If anyone wants to try not to give them hope to get a strong vote in the House; so it will have a better chance in the Republican-controlled Senate where a tough fight is expected."

Walesa interrupted Solidarity's fiery speech several times to applaud, but he continued to denounce the compromise law squabbling, his voice rising and railing.

"Don't treat me as a stupid guy who is led around by our bosses," he shouted, referring to those who are representing them.

"I want to reject the law."

The law is being extended twice, but in the conservative climate now dominating Washington, it has been criticized as an unfair intrusion into states' rights. Critics say the South has been punished enough for such discriminatory practices as poll taxes and literacy tests.

A House Judiciary subcommittee, however, has heard testimony that practices designed to limit black voting still exist.

In addition to South Carolina, the state's redistricting now covers Alaska, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia and some counties or towns in Connecticut, California, Colorado, Florida, Hawaii, Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Voting Rights Act to be tested in House debates this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 16-year-old civil rights law credited for encouraging hundreds of thousands of black and other minority citizens to register to vote comes up for a test in the House this week.

Debate on the 1965 Voting Rights Act that President Lyndon B. Johnson considered a benchmark of his administration will begin in the Democratic-controlled House on Wednesday.

The law now requires nine states, most of them in the South, and some cities and counties in 13 other states to get prior approval from the Justice Department before any redistricting plans and election rules changes that provision would expire next August if not extended.

Supporters of extension say that would effectively kill enforcement of the law because the Justice Department lacks the resources to review election changes by every state and local government.

AWACS manufacturers ‘forced’ to argue fighter plane faults

By G. G. LaBelle
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The debate over whether to sell the sophisticated AWACS spy plane to Saudi Arabia has opened a new, uncustomed position among those who might be angry that their electronic marvel cannot be sold.

The argument goes that while the AWACS can provide early warning of an attack on the Saudi oilfields and direct fighter planes against such an attack, this same technology would be of no use in spying on Israeli aircraft and, if used in that way, would be vulnerable to being blown out of the sky by fighter jets.

Plants to sell five of the planes to Saudi Arabia have been blamed by many members of Congress, where hearings on the $8.5 billion sale began this week, and by Israel. Here are some of the issues that have been raised about the AWACS and answers from the manufacturers to some of the officials of the Air Force and the Boeing Corp., prime contractor for the craft.

Q: What is an AWACS?
A: The AWACS stands for Airborne Warning and Control System and the plane is officially known as an E-3A. Basically it's a Boeing 707 with a radome containing rotodome, or scope, and packed full of electronic equipment.

Under optimum conditions, flying at up to 50,000 feet, the plane can use its radar to scan planes approaching from any direction for about 225 miles or—in the case of high-flying craft—about 350 miles.

Q: The Israelis are against selling AWACS to the Saudis, maintaining its radar and its ability to guide interceptor fighters would wipe out Israel's military superiority over the Arab world. Is this so?
A: In looking from Saudi Arabia toward Israel, the AWACS would have blind spots in its view created by the mountains of Jordan. To be in a position to watch for Israeli aircraft, the AWACS would have to fly right up to the Saudi-Jordanian border, either near Iraq or near the Sinai Peninsula. In either place, it would be vulnerable to Israeli fighter jets attacking from behind the mountains.

The AWACS could be watched, too, by the Israelis, who have their own American-supplied spy planes and mounting radar installations.

In summary present commitments," Shaw said.

But, fiscal year 1982 is "the best year we've ever had with around $88 million in new funds for higher education," Shaw said.

Looking at the economic prospect for the state and the SIU system in the 1980s, Shaw cited a University of Illinois report which projected that the Illinois population growth rate will be less than that for the nation, and much less than in Sun Belt states. Illinois will have a 10 percent increase in population by the year 2000 versus a 17 percent increase for the nation as a whole, Shaw said.

"This greatly affects our tax base," Shaw said, "and fewer people mean there will be less tax revenue. By 1984, fiscal tax reform already on the books will result in $500 million less in the treasury. Those decreases will directly affect us."

The economic growth rate for the state for the 1980s will be less than the nation's, Shaw said.

Shaw cited that per capita income for Illinois was 14 percent higher than the national average in 1970, but has declined to 11 percent with further decreases expected.

"That doesn't put people in a good mood for increased state expenditures," he said. "This means receiving less than what we've been used to. The positive scenario would be for funding to continue at the present rate and the negative scenario would be not very difficult times."

The good news, Shaw said, is that Illinois is a "wealthy state," the top third or fourth in the country. Illinois citizens pay less, in personal income for taxes than the national average, and the amount of debt outstanding is less for state and local government here than nationally.

The biggest change, Shaw said was that spending in the state generated General Revenue Funds category has been the federal government's share increase from 5.7 percent of the total in 1970 to 11.5 percent in 1981.

"Federal cutbacks will affect this greatly and not just cutbacks in education," Shaw said.

In order to deal with these problems, Shaw said, priorities need to be set.

Contacted by The Associated Press a few days later, he said by telegraph he had learned that "30 of my sisters children belonging to the Muhajerun Millia Gil" had gone before firing squads. Their ages ranged from 18 to 30, he said, and the names were told. His claims could not be independently verified.

Educational Minister A-A Bar Parvareesh, in a telephone conversation with the AP, denied that schoolchildren as young as 12 have been executed. "This is not the case at all," he said, but he did not address the question of whether high school students were executed.

Parvareesh, one of the five Khomenei disciples running for president in Friday's election to replace the assassinated Mohammad Ali Rajai, said some high schoolers who are fighters against Islam have been arrested and are in prison.

But he said it was too early to tell how many students have been imprisoned because school is out for the year and the nine-month education classroom is less than a month old.

Several Iranian sources, who stayed out of politics during the late Shah's regime and continued that aloofness after his downfall in 1979, told the AP they had personal knowledge of 30 Tehran high school girls being executed earlier this month.

These sources, interviewed here and contacted by telephones in Tehran, said they knew some of the girls and their families.

They said the girls were executed because of their connections to the Muhajerun Khalq (People's Mujahedeen) and distributing its literature at their school last spring. They were rounded up, taken to Evin Prison, and executed two days later, the sources said.

The letters stand for "People's Mujahedeen," had gone from 9 to 14, he said. He had been arrested and are in a university of Illinois prison because of interviews with AP.

TheArabs, in a telephone interview with AP, said: "We are against the AWACS. They can provide early warning of an attack on the Saudi oilfields and direct fighter planes against such an attack, this same technology would be of no use in spying on Israeli aircraft and, if used in that way, would be vulnerable to being blown out of the sky by fighter jets. Student safety comes before image of the University Statements by the Undergraduate Student Organization and the University administration concerning the proposal of changing warning signs at both ends of the "Ho Chi Minh Trail" provide a better indication of the transitory student population and the long-range interests of Student Safety. In the wake of the Aug. 17 rape and murder of SIU-C student Susan Schumake, the USO has proposed placing signs on the trail which will read something like, "Shop. Take the safe way. Take the Bright Way" – a reference to the Brightways Paths. Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus development, subsequently told USO President Todd Rogers that University officials are concerned that the signs will unnecessarily alarm women and will reflect poorly on the University's image. Although the administration's concern for the University's image is understandable, their oversight is misplaced. Their position seems to be a reflection of the attitude that "students come and go, but the University remains" – an attitude that the University has cultivated by painting on the face of buildings that it discounts the needs of the student body.

Unfortunately, it seems that many of the proposed signs are a drop-in-the-bucket solution to a much larger problem. One murder has directed attention to one small area of the campus but universities are concerned everywhere. In itself increasing safety awareness deserves more attention than the placement of two signs.

But while we must address the larger problems of life in a campus, if we find some comprehensive solutions, we must also take some small concrete steps toward the placer of two signs – that will meet some immediate need. It is often those small, seemingly insignificant things that accomplish more good than the endless proposals for a long-term solution.

There are many more programs and more efficient safety measures to attack the widespread problem of crime in Carbondale. But the signs are a positive step and their impact is one need for an image of safety that simply does not exist here or anywhere else in America.

Letters

This is criminal deterrence?

With the future declining over the campus, the matter of Ms. Schumake, it appears that the police have met their usual grandiose attempts at deterring real criminals. On Sept. 15 at approximately 8:30 p.m., a woman was walking to campus, we were fortunate enough to see one of the finest examples of how our tax dollars are being spent.

The incident involved an idling, unmarked police car. The car was parked in the right lane of East Freeman Street – people were seen to drive around the car and traffic to access an area with a no parking sign posted less than 10 feet away.

An unwary, westbound male bicyclist was approaching the police car when suddenly the policeman sprang from his car, pulled a nightstick, and yelled: "There's a boy turning at the turn." The officer, normally post, smiled proudly and waved us on safely. Yes, we agreed that we will sleep better at night – never mind those Peeping Toms, rapists and murderers still at-large – knowing that criminal bicyclists are being steered the right way – Earl Triple, Senior, Speech Pathology and Audiology, and Darlene Weiss, Senior, Social Welfare.

Bottle, can deposits are answer

There is a relatively simple solution for the problem of all of the empty beer bottles and cans that are found scattered all over after any green weekend of parties in Carbondale. The solution has been tested and proved successful in several places throughout the country.

The thing to do to keep people from discarding their empty bottles and cans more places is to charge a deposit on the container. If people had to pay a nickel deposit on every bottle and can they throw away, there would be more waste of throwing their valuable empty bottles away on the streets and lawns in town.

Even if someone did throw them down, there would be someone else right behind them picking up the discarded containers for 5 cents apiece. The people who would be happier about picking up the empties are also aluminum cans that might normally be thrown away as useless refuse but which might be recycled by the distributors.

This idea has worked elsewhere and can work in Carbondale. It would be a healthy move for the town and the environment in general. Just give it a try – Andy Allen, Freshman, Engineering.

Poland’s revolution may be heading for calamitous ‘days of stone’

George F. Will

At the Communist Party congress in July, most of the 1,550 delegates -- elected in secret balloting from unlimited lists of candidates -- were Moscow's menacing words.

The congress called for free parliamentary elections and pledged encouragement for free trade unions throughout the Eastern Bloc, including the Soviet Union. But for many months the Polish Communist Party's "leading role" in Polish society, although formally acknowledged by Solidarity, has been a chimera.

Poland's revolution may be heading for calamitous "days of stone," -- not only for the Soviet bloc but perhaps for the entire region. The political revolution there suggests some Western observers may blame the excesses of the recent Solidarity congress. Since then the government has been intensely criticized as a "domestic institution. Project attacks abuse of children at source

By Vicki Olney

When one mother was turned in to the state Department of Children and Family Services for child neglect, all she could do was scream for help. The case, discussed here from SHU’s Project 12-Ways, The project, administered by the Rehabilitation Institute, uses an ecobehavioral approach to help with child abuse and neglect, according to Gail Sunderman, regional coordinator of the program.

The 35 staff members look at all aspects of each problem from a macroscopic view. Services range from parent-child training and marriage counseling to stress reduction and health maintenance and nutrition, Sunderman said.

The counselors handle cases from seven counties referred to them by the DCFS. Sunderman said, Project 12-Ways handled 152 cases in fiscal year 1981, including 34 abuse cases and 48 neglect cases.

Six cases were referred to the project for prevention. Several of these dealt with abused mothers or high-risk cases of abuse and neglect, Sunderman said.

When Debbie (not her real name) contacted a caseworker for help in dealing with her son, Jeff (not his real name), she was asked to contact Project 12-Ways.

Kathy, a caseworker, and Marie Halasz, graduate student with a master’s degree in social work, Debbie and 7-year-old Jeff spent several weeks interviewing them in their home at least once a week since then and will continue to work with them until the majority of the problems are solved, Dachman said.

The counselors spent several weeks assessing the situation. They talked with the DCFS caseworker, studied the case file and talked with significant people in the lives of Debbie and Jeff, Dachman said.

Dachman, Halasz and Debbie emphasized parent-child interaction and how they functioned while working together.

The family was living in what Debbie called a bad environment, causing Jeff to have legal and behavioral problems.

"It has to keep rein on my son when others wouldn’t keep a rein on theirs," Debbie said. After months of effort by Dachman and Halasz and a lot of waiting, Debbie and Jeff moved into subsidized housing in a better neighborhood the last month.

"They’ve done quite a bit to get me where I am now," Debbie said. "They gave me courage all the way through." Sunderman said.

Job placement is an important aspect of the ecobehavioral approach. The counselors may also help clients obtain vocational training.

When Debbie was turned in to the DCFS, she was conversing with a woman. After quitting her job, Dachman and Halasz encouraged her to enroll in the University this fall, something she had always wanted to do.

"They kicked my rear until they knew I was here," Debbie said. "All I heard was magazine." Debbie had trouble dealing with Jeff’s frequent tantrums before counseling began. Dachman and Halasz utilized dot-to-dot drawings of Jeff’s favorite outside activities to discourage the tantrums.

For every 10 minutes that Jeff didn’t have a tantrum, he was allowed to connect a dot, something he enjoyed doing. After such tantrums were connected, Jeff received a small reward from a grab bag. When the poster was completed, Jeff and his mother did something that was pictured on the drawing. This was the big reward.

The counselor is not the primary therapist, Halasz said. "We’re there more or less to teach the mother the things she can do when we’re not around." She said. "She’s learning that she has a set of skills to use."

As the tantrums decreased, other problems intensified. "The son is going through a release process," Dachman said. "He is testing his limits."

When non-compliance became a problem, Debbie designed the solution herself. She put a foil star on the dot-to-dot posters every time her son obeyed her. He has to earn several stars before he gets any reward.

Dachman said they will gradually step back from Debbie’s life as she develops relationships in the parent-child relationship.

Debbie’s relationship with Jeff has improved about 7 percent of the time since she went to Project 12-Ways for help. "It isn’t easy being a single parent," the counselor said. "It is not always easy to remember that I have to think about communications."

Investigator: No human hazard

Refuge deer lead content high

By Douglas Hamm

Staff Writer

The high concentrations of lead levels in deer killed last fall at the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge do not constitute a human health hazard, Alan Cowell, investigator for the Southern Illinois Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory, said.

"Lead tends to accumulate in the liver and body organs of deer and not in the meat that people eat," Cowell said. "You would have to eat the meat every day for there to be a hazard."

Wayne Adams, project manager at the refuge, has advised hunters not to eat the liver of deer they kill this year.

The high lead shows turned up in a state-wide white-tail deer health study conducted by the Cooperative Wildlife Research Lab and funded by the Illinois Department of Conservation. The study showed lead remains in Crab Orchard deer to be above the level recommended for human consumption.

Adams said the problem may be associated with the industrial history of the area. "With the advent of World War II, the closed portion of the refuge became the Illinois Ordnance Plant which manufactured explosives," Adams said. "We’re going to look at this area and see what residues have accumulated.

The refuge is investigating the problem by taking fish samples in cooperation with the Illinois Department of Public Health. The results of the study are expected in a week or 10 days.

Woolf said the study showed the deer had significantly higher lead than deer in other regions of the state.
Parker lacks polish despite many talents

By Pam Petrow
Staff Writer

Folk singer Dave Parker displayed a wide variety of talent when he performed at the Student Center Old Main Restaurant last weekend. But, he lacked the polish that is needed to transform a good performance into a great one.

An opening act by Jim Swick and Jim Triplet got the audience in a good spirit. The two sang and played guitar to several of their own songs. Ballads like "I Bet You Ten To One That She Ain't Pretty" explained the perils of asking out a woman who is sitting in a dark section of a bar.

The two men harmonized better in their fast-paced songs than in their slower melodies. But, their humorous lyrics kept the audience chuckling.

College Republicans circulating petition

By Mary Bennett
Student Writer

The SIU-C College Republicans have launched a "Progress for Poland's People" campaign in support of the Solidarity Workers' Union.

The Solidarity movement is growing. It's swelling right now," said Wood.

The College Republican National Committee headquartered in Washington, D.C., originated the petition, which group members are distributing on 1,100 campuses nationwide. Wood and other members of the SIU-C group learned of the effort at the College Republicans' convention at Illinois State University. The 25 SIU-C members working on the campaign have received around 40 signatures so far. Wood said he would like to try for 2,000 signatures.

Signatures are sent to the Republican National Committee headquarters in Washington, D.C., where they will be sent on to Poland. The campaign will continue for an indefinite period of time, according to Wood.

The College Republicans will circulate the petition in the Student Center Sept. 21 during their membership drive.

"We want to show that Americans are ready to stand up for Polish freedom."" said Wood. "We want to show that Americans are ready to stand up for Polish freedom."

By Tom D.C., the petition was originated by "Bong Water," a Bob Dylan and "Lighthouse," which he wrote himself. Both songs effectively combined whimsical and harmonica playing with the guitar.

A guitar strapped across his chest and a harmonica in a holder below his chin, Parker opened the songs in a slow, mellow style. The audience was silent as Parker jumped from singing to whistling to playing the harmonica, then back again. And all the while, he continued to play the guitar.

Both of the songs tempo picked up halfway through and he played some pretty fast-paced, complicated guitar. But, Parker's talent was often dampered by his knocking the guitar into the microphone, interrupting the otherwise good songs.

Likewise, it seemed that his crew forget to turn off an echo box after a few of his songs. The reverberation was especially ineffective when it occurred during his slower ballads.

Parker is a very talented man. His voice is smooth and clear and his guitar and harmonica playing is excellent. With a little work on the technical aspects of his performance, he should be a much sought-after folk singer.

By Mildred Bent
Staff Writer

The Friday audience also seemed to enjoy the friendly mannerism of Parker. He talked and joked with the crowd of about 60 people as he set up his microphones and instruments before the show.

His humor was also apparent in many of his songs. Performing a "Leave It to Beaver" song which he wrote, Parker paid tribute to Eddie Haskell, often stopping to imitate the teenage rascal of the show. The audience laughed throughout the song as he shuffled his feet and ever-too-sweetly told "Mrs. Cleaver (alias Beaver's mom) how much she loved her.

Another song he wrote entitled "I'm My Own Grandpa" purposely confused listeners with its complicated plot. The song explained the dilemma of a man who married a woman with a young daughter.

The man's father then fell in love with and married the daughter, making the man his own grandfather. If that didn't make any sense to you, you aren't alone.

In another of his songs called "Bong Water," Parker envisioned himself drowning in a large pool of bong water. Unfortunately, the entire song went under.

Parker's many talents were evident in songs like "Firewater" by Bob Dylan and "Lighthouse," which he wrote himself. Both songs effectively combined whimsical and harmonica playing with the guitar.

The College Republicans started a petition in support of the Solidarity Workers' Union. The group is headquartered in national Republicans and "Progress for Poland's People" campaign will continue for an indefinite period of time, according to Wood. Renowned veteran guide tours

Staff Writer

She may have retired as a dance performer, but Bella Lewitzky retains the grace and beauty that so many in her profession tend to lose.

Lewitzky, in her long career as a modern dancer, choreographer and teacher, developed one of the most acclaimed dance artists of her time. Although she retired from performing three years ago, the Lewitzky Dance Company continues to give performances throughout the country and abroad.

Lewitzky, who now conducts dance workshops especially likes performing at universities. "We like to be more educational and stress concert-going as our main objective," she said. "College students are usually very receptive, especially if the university has a dance program." The 12-member dance troupe performed at Shyrock Auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and she and members of her company conducted dance workshops for beginning and intermediate dancers in several buildings at SIU-C. More than 30 people attended. She also held a lecture-demonstration for children at Glenland Grade School Thursday morning.

At age 65, Lewitzky stands 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 100 pounds. Despite her small stature, she's in excellent condition and still active. "I can't imagine when it comes to dancing," she said. "Using a drum-like instrument, I snap out a rhythm and demonstrate several dance techniques for the class to follow." Students then attempt the same moves as she calls out instructions.

Lewitzky began dancing when she was 17. Her early training was with Lester Horton, and later as his colleague she co-founded the Dance Theater in Los Angeles in 1946.

Although New York seemed to be the destination of most modern dancers in the 30s and 40s, she chose to make Los Angeles her home base. She has been credited with originating a "western approach" to modern dance, but she does not see her dancing as any one specific style. "I don't like to describe or define my dancing," she said.

I leave that to the critics." One favorite acquaintance from her dancing days is longtime friend Agnes DeMille. Lewitzky was a student of the Lester Horton Studio when she first met DeMille.

"Agnes had been doing concerts at the Hollywood Bowl and needed a lot of dancers," she said. "She said, 'I need dancers. I need dancers.' And she helped me before the crowd of dancers got there. She also assisted DeMille with much of the choreography in the musical "Oklahoma." She and Demille still stay in close contact, Lewitzky said.

Carbondale is the third stop in the company's three-city tour. The troupe stopped in St. Louis and Kansas City before coming to SIU-C. They plan to visit Interlochen, Mich., before returning to Los Angeles next week.

The company will perform three works: Changes and Choices, Pietet and Kinaseonata at the concert Friday, and every move will be scrutinized by a pair of extra-critical eyes as Lewitzky watches and critiques from the audience.

Bella Lewitzky troupe's dance poignantly portrays emotions

By Joe Walker

Entertainment Editor

The movements of the Bella Lewitzky Dance Company paint a picture of modern dance, melancholy, fear, comedy and absurdity—a whole range of human emotion.

In fact, their performances were so poignant that one person not acquainted with modern dance, such as this reporter, could still be moved by what he saw in the Shyrock Auditorium Friday night.

The dance troupe from Los Angeles performed four of their works, "Changes and Choices," "Pietet" and "Kinaseonata" Friday night. The first work dealt with abstract movement, and collapses. The dancers' muscles rippled, but seemed to come alive to a rhythm of their own. Their movements demonstrated the determined amount of physical control. The dancers' bodies at one moment could seem rigid, but blend quickly, like the snap of a door latch, into a new pose.

During one part of the performance, the dancers put on gaily-colored fabric strips that had hung from a clothesline. The segment was rather comical because of the performers' efforts to stage the gimmicky synthesizer music with the unpredictable, fan­tastous movements of the dancers.

In "Pietet," the action began with the dancers in street clothes pubising a beat. This piece, conceived by the company during the Vietnam war era, conveys a muted melancholy aura that was also aided by synthesizer music. The marching, frenzied motions, the dark lighting and the interlocking of limbs, accompanied by the frightened expressions on the performers' faces, brought forth a distur­bing, ghostly feeling. During this segment, a dancer entered the stage to find all her companions collapsed on the stage floor—seemingly dead.

At the end of the piece, there was a positively stark, haunting, shadow effect of a body lifted by the other cast mem­bers like a corpse lifted by pallbearers.

In "Kinaseonata," there were four acts. Each of the four acts had a different flavor but they all took a rather classical, ballet-like approach.

In the first act, the bright red costumes lent a festive feeling to the dancing. The second act also had the festive feel. The third act was probably the most interesting of the work: it had a sense of humor. The fourth act, rather ghoulish and at times morn­ingly accompanied by a beautifully lilting, classical piano. The fourth act returned to the joyous feel of the first two acts.

Overall, the performances elicited a wide range of responses from members of the audience. Which should fully and unquestionably demonstrate that moving drama need not only be conveyed by con­ventional theater, cinema, television, literature or even just the spoken word.

Impact, excitement missing from Dylan's 'Shot of Love'

By Julie Guadagnoli

Bob Dylan's new album, 'Shot of Love,' looks exciting, colorful and explosive. But looks can be deceiving.

Not that the album does not contain good songs. It is just that compared to the hot, powerful work that Dylan has proved himself capable of, most of the songs on this album are lukewarm.

Dylan sings best when he is angry, passionate about something. This album covers familiar ground that even Dylan seems bored with at times.

His earlier protest songs carried great impact, because he would be an acknowledged public figure and, with it, make a point about our entire society.

In 'Hurricane,' he made a far more effective statement about prejudice by saying "If you're black, you might as well not show your face on the streets." But he would have said something like "Freudely red in the face, black people in our society..." but some of the lyrics on this album are so generic that they do not hit listeners with much impact. They are too far removed from the lives of individuals for there to be hard to directly relate to.

In 'Trouble,' Dylan simply lists some problems without commenting on them (hardly Dylan-esque). The song is a dull, parsing, persecution, execution.

Dancers precise, fiddlin’ homespun at festival

By Joe Walter
Entertainment Editor

The performances of the Cahok Indian Dancers and fiddlers Noah Beaver and Rocky Wuhlwend were without a doubt spontaneous at the Du Quoin State Fair Grandstand. However, though the Indian dancers were seemingly a tad more professional than the fiddlers, they were not as enthralling to the small crowd that assembled at the Grandstand Saturday night during the 16th Annual Southern Illinois Folk Festival.

The main reason for this was the introduction of the dancers by the leader of the troupe, an old timer dressed as a chief. He kept apologizing for his bad singing voice and for the fact that the young dancers were not real Indians. Who cared? His monotonous voice, which sounded like a bad Chief Dan George impression, drowned out fortuitously for almost seven minutes. He even asked the crowd not to applaud until the dancing performances were over.

"When the show is going to be over" a little boy asked his parent. The children have a charmingly blunt way of reacting to everlasting introductions.

However, the dances were put on with a respectable amount of precision, especially now during which the dancers worked with long strips of cloth, twirling them and unfurling them slowly and evenly. Even so, between performances the crowd had to stifle its desire to clap and suffer through the old timer's drone again.

At the end of the Indians dance the audience gave a spontaneous round of applause, probably partly because of appreciation and partly out of relief. My hope is that the youngest stay in the act and that the sole man finds employment elsewhere. Maybe he can get a job standing in front of a tobacco store holding cigars.

The Indian Dancers came a performance from the Carbondale chapter of the Sweet Adelines, a female chorus group. They performed harmonies that were lush and enchanting arrangements of "Over the Rainbow," "Moon River," "Down by the Riverside" not to be confused with Neil Young's "Down by the River," "Melody of Love" and "Zippadeedoodah.

Though the harmonizing of the Sweet Adelines was a little clumsy at times, they still were very pleasant to listen to.

Then came the Fiddlers jam featuring 82 year old Noah Beaver and 60 year old Rocky Wuhlwend. The fiddlers were accompanied by a number of cloggers from the audience. For those of you who don't know what clogging is, clogging is a dance that combines stamping and shuffling of the feet. It almost looks like tap dancing.

Combine the clogging with the rhythmic fiddling and you have an old fashioned hoedown. Beaver and Wuhlwend played crowd-pleasing favorites like "Turkey in the Straw" and "Ragtime Annie." Wuhlwend also played a solo—"Violette Blossom Special"—which is not easy to do without a guitar to back the fiddler.

What might have amazed some folks was the fact that both fiddlers have never read sheet music. They learned to play their fiddles entirely by ear Beaver, who has played fiddle for 73 years, said that he learned by watching other fiddlers play. "It would come to you," Beaver said. "When you'd get home pick up the fiddle and play it. I don't read music."

Wuhlwend said that he can play "just about any tune except classical."

The cloggers, too, have learned their art without formal instruction. Bill Ashbury of Du Quoin said that he has been clogging since he was old enough to dance. His father, Donald, said that he has been clogging for about 40 years, and he has been clogging for about 4 years.

Cause found in drug case against local

Probable cause was found last week in the case of a 23-year-old Carbendale man charged with two counts of drug delivery.

Deputy Westlund, 211 N. Michaels, was arrested in late August for allegedly delivering over 1,000 grams of cocaine on June 20 and 22 to Southern Illinois Enforcement Group agents.

The Jackson County Circuit Court set no trial date. Westlund has been released on $38,000 bond, according to Assistant State's Attorney Paul Baertchi.

Perm a have-not in White House cloud

By Mike Robinson
Assistant Sports Writer

SEN. CHARLES H. Percy
began the year confident that, with Republicans back in the White House, he soon would proceed to create a new generation of federal judges and district attorneys across Illinois.

But Percy's power to interest President Reagan in his candidates for federal posts has proved less than hypothesized. "Superficially, says Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Bensenville, "Percy's recommendation would seem to be the kiss of death, but that may not be so."

The latest evidence that Percy has become a have-not in the dead of the White House surfaced this month with the word that the Reagan Administra- tion is considering sending a state Sen., Republican counsel Philip Weber for a U.S. district attorney in Southern Illinois.

Percy has been backing Delaware County Attorney Fred Hess for the post, one that by custom presidents have used as a stepping stone to the Senate, or to the candidate of state Sen. Don Tolten in Southern Illinois.

After his name came up for an Illinois district attorney, with an eye on a possible 1984 Republican Senate primary, has evidenced another main protagonist in the state.

COMING AFTER two similar episodes earlier this year, the administration's move casts any doubt about whether Percy is just having a little bad luck, or is, instead, losing the last of his clout.

"Even putting the best of motives on it, it's an affront," has said another Republican congressman who asked not to be identified declared: "Boy, if they keep doing this to Percy on all these appeals, he's going to have to be held to pay."

In the two episodes, Percy backed two favorites of Gov. James Thompson for key positions. The White House put a political "hold" on his recommendation for key positions. The White House put a political "hold" on his recommendation for key positions. The White House put a political "hold" on his recommendation for key positions. The White House put a political "hold" on his recommendation for key positions.

The two other openings by custom have been earmarked for Democrats and Illinois Senator Reagan already has named Judge Jesse Edbach of U.S. District Court in Fort Wayne, a favorite of Sen. Percy from Page 16 been serious and later called back to read a report a Chicago newspaper column quoting Weber as affirming their seriousness.

EXACTLY Why Percy is on bad paper with the White House remains open to conjecture. Some say he once was tried in 1972 when he was in danger of losing his reelection. Specifically, they point to Percy's opposition to Ernest May before the committee. Among other things, Leever denied testimony by his two brothers that he believes black people are inferior to whites as "the reaction of disappointed brothers to a very successful brother."

LEFEVER also changed his position about reported donations to his Ethics and Public Policy Center from the Nestle Co. while the center was preparing a supposedly impartial report on a matter of financial interest to Nestle.

Percy patronizes compare his Leever vote to his 1976 vote against Richard Nixon's nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court.

A source who knows says the late GOP national chairman Rogers Morton visited Percy on the eve of the Carswell vote and said that if the senator opposed the nominee he surely would be annihilated in the Illinois Republican Senate primary in 1972.

Percy did vote against Carswell but was easily reelected in 1972. Fate was less than kind to Carswell. He not only was defeated for the supreme court but in 1976 pleaded no contest to a charge of battery against a Tallahassee, Fla., vice squad officer after an incident in a shopping center men's room.

But the Reagan Administration was clearly stung by Percy's vote on Leever—a high-visibility issue that received nationwide attention—and has responded by putting him through a painful ordeal.

It is a measure-of-magnitude type of vengeance that avoids all semblance of overkill. The White House has by no means shut Percy's patronage—such high-visibility patronage that counts in Illinois.

For example, Washington conservatives were furious when the White House forced Percy to name a former aide, Julia Chang Bloch, as head of the Food for Peace program, a post that means little in Illinois.

On July 25, just as the Foner episode was becoming public, the weekly conservative newspaper Human Events ran the story of the Bloch appointment under the outrageous headline: "White House Crying Up to Percy. OKing Patronage Choices."

Wilson Hall takes 'international' turn

By Mark Sturgell
Student Writer

Wilson Hall, an off-campus residence facility, was sold on August 15 to the parent company of Stevenson Arms. The sale of the government housing facility was announced Aug. 18. Harris explained that this was the first time he became aware of the interest of the new management to develop a facility compatible to a primarily Malaysian population.

Harris described the building's status as a private housing facility for Malaysian and international students who can adapt to the Malaysian diet and food service. Harris said that approximately 30 applicants, who had not signed contracts with the hall, were divided evenly between 600 Freeman and on-campus housing.

The hall staff of one resident director, six student staff, and several residence hall coordinators had been relocated, according to Harris. Approximately 100 Malaysian applicants have been successfully relocated, according to Harris. Approximately 100 Malaysian

Vietnamese refugees rescued

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - A Navy vessel rescued 62 Vietnamese boat people in the South China Sea, so weak they had to be carried on stretchers, officials said Sunday.

The Navy said the Southern Cross was a day out of Singapore when it picked up the refugees Saturday about 250 nautical miles south of the Chine Minc complex, formerly Saigon. The 25th fleet information office at Subic Bay Naval Base near Manila has no further details on the refugees condition and the Navy did not say where the Vietnamese people were taken.
Golfers nab 3rd at state meet

By Keith Mascelli

Only seven strokes separated first place from the women's state golf championship played at Rend Lake Golf Course in Benton Saturday. Unfortunately for the Salukis, they fell seven points short of the state title.

Illinois State won the title with a team score of 631, followed by Illinois with 644, and the Salukis with 649. Rebuilding, the condition of the course which was pretty fast considering the way to the starting line. "It started to rain Friday afternoon and didn't stop until the start of the meet," Blackman said. "We would have been better off running some parts of the course. I walked through puddles six inches deep on my way to the starting line." However, the course had been changed for the better since the last time the Salukis ran it. She said the course had been made "easier" since several hills were eliminated.

"The results of the race are deceiving because of the high number of runners competing. All of the Salukis runners finished ahead of our second runner, but they were just by a few seconds. A difference of a few seconds can mean a big difference in the places the runners finish," Blackman said. "It was closer than it appears to be. Sometimes you need a poor meet to learn how to better prepare yourself mentally."

Cubs split doubleheader with Phillies

CHICAGO (AP) - Pat Tabler's three-run homer and Ty Phinizy's three-run triple keyed a seven-run, fourth-inning Sunday that led Chicago Cubs to a 140 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and a doubleheader split. Bake McBride hit a three-run homer to back the six-hit pitching of Steve Carlton, giving the Phillies a 5-2 triumph in the first game. Carlton, 13-4, struck out six and yielded solo home runs to Waller and Bill Buckner, who also homered twice in the second game and had six hits in the two games.

Besides:

Poole talked with the Salukis and their coach John Cooper was mad after watching his team fall 0-4. As they came out and put it up in the second half, he said, "I don't know what we can do except go to practice tomorrow and watch the films, and try to correct the mistakes. A junior high team could've played better football than we played tonight. The Salukis had turnovers, too Quarterback Brewer lost the ball three times, and his last, which came in the fourth quarter, was the scarcest for the Salukis. After a 20-yard gaffe by Poole, Johnson was intercepted by cornerback Albert Myers on the Tulsa 16-yard line, and Tulsa had the chance to get dangerously close. But the SUI-C defense held.

'You can't play conservative against a team like Tulsa,' Dempsey said. "Fans listening on the radio probably wanted us not passed, and they probably called me a bad coach, but you have to take some chances,' Dempsey took a big chance early in the third quarter, and the chance paid off. On fourth down and inches on the Tulsa 40, Johnson ran a keeper for a first down. The drive ended with a field goal.

'It was fourth and inches, not fourth and a yard like it's usually advertised in the press,' Dempsey said. "We had timeouts, but we went for it."

Johnson came from behind for the Salukis. They fell behind 1-0 in the first quarter and went up 31-14 by halftime despite a missed field goal attempt by Paul Molla. Dempsey said, 'I saw nothing bad about Paul.' Dempsey said, "He made some kicks tonight." Molla hit three field goals and three extra points. His missed field goal attempt was from 38 yards.

Besides Molla, Salukis' scorers were Poole, Crick Field, and Marvin Hinton. Fullback Field ran a 13-yard touchdown, wide receiver Hinton caught an 11-yard scoring pass. Tulsa did a lot of scoring too, using some long pass plays. Their receivers shouldn't have been that open," Dempsey said. "That's almost embarrassing for us. We don't have enough competence back there. We tried two secondary people. Some of them got hit pretty hard, but we just sit back and get back." Cornerback Terry Taylor did twice intercept a pass and ran it back 56 yards to set up Hinton's touchdown with time running out in the first half.

'That interception really stopped them down,' Taylor said, "We don't think they got down on themselves.'

Softball team splits 28-inning twin bill

By Jim Cagle

Staff Writer

The SIU-C softball players knew they were in for a long day when Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer scheduled a triple header to open the team's first fall schedule.

But the Salukis didn't know they would only play two games and end up putting in all innings of work—four games worth of softball.

The Salukis scheduled triple dip with the Illinois State Redbirds for a game short because of a 20-inning marathon game that the Salukis lost 1-0. The long game was the second extra-inning game of the afternoon, the first in the 2-1, in eight innings. The first game looked as if the Salukis had picked up where they left off last year. SIU-C batted only 178 as a team last year, and could only muster three hits in the game. The Salukis had an advantage of two.Redbird throwing errors and Gene's three strong hitting performance, and managed to scrape together a win.

SIU-C's first run scored as a result of a Redbird error and bunts. Vaili hit a shot to the ISU shortstop, who bobbled the ball, handled, and then advanced when Diane Breze's was bunted over the plate. Vivall had a base hit and a base error and wasAdvanced to the first baseman's base.

The winning run scored when Chris Brewer crossed the plate on an error in the ninth inning in the eighth. Brewer led off the inning with a single, and advanced to second when an error occurred on a fielder's choice.

Donna Preson, center, and Gene's three bunts, seven hits in eight trips to the plate in the second game.

Vally was "poised and consistent according to Brechtelsbauer. He struck out one and walking one for the win. 'Gene played very well, both pitching and at first base,' Brechtelsbauer said. "He adds both an offensive and defensive dimension to our team.'

Vally had four hits in eight trips to the plate in the second game, finished seventh base. Said Brechtelsbauer: 'We had our chances to put them away, but we just couldn't do it.'

Salukis starter, and eventual loser, Donna Dapsen pitched 19 and one-third innings before being lifted for relief. Meredith Stengel in the top half of inning No. 20, Stengel yielded a game with a sacrifice fly, scoring a Redbird that had reached base against the inning Dapsen.

The Salukis claimed that the Redbird runner left the base too soon, as Kathy Clements made a great throw to second, but the umpires thought otherwise.

The Salukis, who scored two runs on only three hits in the first game, could manage only three runs on 10 hits in the second game. The Salukis scored in the 12th inning and the 13th inning. The Salukis scored two runs in the 12th inning. The Salukis scored two runs in the 13th inning. They scored two runs in the 14th inning. They scored two runs in the 15th inning.

The Salukis will play Missouri-Still on 3 PM Thursday at the women's Athletics field south of the Smith Center.

Netters win three; streak goes to nine

By Keith Mascetti

Staff Writer

The women's tennis team continued their streaks Friday and Saturday.

The No. 6 seed Heidi Eastman won her ninth straight singles match at 6-0 against 21st seed Alessandra Molinari in still another close match.

This weekend's victims were Southwest Missouri State and Saluki State, No. 8 seed SIU-C defeated Southwest Missouri State 3-1. Coach Auld has been happy and surprised with the team's play in the four matches.

'I'm really pleased with our performance,' said Auld. Three more wins put us at 8-1. Auld wanted this week to win 20 matches in fall and spring combined. We're almost halfway there.'

The only Salukis loss so far was to Idaho State in the first round of the conference.

Auld said she wishes the team could have played a stronger conference match.

She feels her team has improved and could beat SIU-E now.

Auld said she was satisfied with the weekend win but felt her team wasn't as sharp as it should be, and not as strong as it should be as it was still competing.

Auld said also the team was looking forward to next weekend's match at Illinois and may have a different look on SEMO, Southwest and Sambanet.

Auld was looking forward to playing Illinois. Auld said, 'We know what a win can do for us.'

The No. 3 doubles team of Stayce and Eileen Colon picked up three wins against Southeast Missouri Tuesday.

The No. 2 team of Molinari and Lisa Warren won both of its matches and improved its record to 5-1.

The No. 3 doubles team of EASTMAN, and Amanda Allen lost two out of three matches, dropping its record to 3-4.

At times they do well,' said Auld. 'I know they have the potential. Maybe there is too much pressure on them playing in the top spot. They just need more confidence in themselves.'

Harriers finish 13th at Midwest meet

"We ran crummy," said Coach Claudia Blackman described the weather's impact on the team's performance in the Track and Field Association's Midwest Cross Country Championships at the University of Parkside in Wisconsin.

The Salukis finished 13th of 20 teams with a 337, Illinois State won with 44, the University of Michigan had a 131, and Wisconsin-Madison finished with a 126.

SIU-C didn't fare well against other states in the meet. Illinois State was sixth with a 93, Eastern Illinois was eighth with a 115, and Northwestern was 12th with a 354. Northern Illinois finished 19th with a 553.

Senior Patty Plymire finished third, second with a 20:30, and her fastest time on the second with a 10.6, and Wisconsin-Madison finished with a 131.
