Couple approved by City Council, 4-1

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

"The City of Carbondale votes no," Councilman Keith Tuxhorn said as he voted against the east-west couple, but the rest of the City Council voted yes in front of a packed city council chambers Tuesday night.

Punctuated by applause from the audience at several points, a visibly frustrated Tuxhorn gave his reasons for voting against the couple and asked that other council members give their reasons for voting in favor.

"If you can't answer questions, why the hell are you sitting up here," Tuxhorn asked after Mayor Neil Dillard said he was not obligated to give the reasons for his vote.

"He (Tuxhorn) is interrogating the council, and that is not (his) appropriate role," Dillard said.

Councilman John Yow, the only councilman who attempted to answer Tuxhorn specifically, said he was voting for the couple in part because the "West Main Street suicide lane" has to be eliminated.

Yow apparently was referring to the street's single lane running east.

The couple proposal was submitted in April by the Illinois Department of Transportation and will make Main Street one-way westbound and Walnut Street one-way eastbound.

To complete the couple, a street from the intersection of Brook Lane and Main Street to the intersection of Walnut Street and Oakland Avenue will be built.

Ironically, Tuxhorn abstained on a resolution to commit money for studying the "location and corridor" for a northern connector or bypass.

"If we really and truly believe in (the bypass or connector) we need to make the (financial) commitment," Dillard said.

Tuxhorn objected, saying the council should delay the couple vote and commit money to the bypass or connector now.

Lewis Park gets tough on partiers

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

Freshman and sophomores from nearby dormitories seem to be one of the problems at Lewis Park Apartments, Judy Calufetti, property manager for the apartments, said.

But, Edward Jones, director of University Housing, said the residents from the dormitories are not Calufetti's main problem.

Although Jones said he is not present when the incidents happen at Lewis Park, a lot depends on the rules and regulations and what the students expect.

"It is not a matter of students from the dorms being crazy, it is a matter of what is permitted," Jones said.

"We encourage all students, in or out of the dorms, to socialize without drinking," Jones said.

Neil Jacobson, administrative assistant to the chief of police, said that people other than residents of Lewis Park are always present, but could not comment on who was the main problem for the underage drinking or fighting at Lewis Park.

"The bars uptown are cracking down, so the freshman and sophomores from the dorms hit the liquor store, and then come over to Lewis Park with their twelve-pack," Calufetti said.

"If there isn't a party, they make their own in our parking lots," she added.

Andrea Dukakis comes to Carbondale

Roberto Izurieta, graduate student in economics from Ecuador, discusses U.S. relations with Latin America with Andrea Dukakis, the daughter of Michael Dukakis.

Andrea Dukakis was present for the opening of the Dukakis for president headquarters located at 719 S. University Ave. About 100 people were present for the campaign stop.

Campaign stop puts emphasis on education

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

Making an appearance before a rallying crowd of more than 100 Michael Dukakis supporters Monday, Andrea Dukakis emphasized the importance of education on the upcoming presidential election.

"Education is going to play an extremely important role in this election," Dukakis said at the grand opening of the Michael Dukakis for President headquarters, 719 S. University Ave.

Dukakis, a 24-year-old graduate of Princeton University, is the daughter of the Democratic presidential candidate.

"There's something happening in the country right now," Dukakis said.

"College students are looking around at the issues and there are so many issues we can feel strongly about."

Speaking before a crowd dominated by University students, Dukakis said "we have to stop the assault" on Pell Grants and other forms of financial assistance started by the Reagan administration.

"Every student that graduates from high school deserves the right to get a college education," she said.

Dukakis also called for an increase in educational standards of the nation. The increase, she said would let teaching once again become a respected position and would allow the United States to be more competitive with the world.

She thanked those in attendance for the support and energy they have shown for the Dukakis campaign, saying "this is what kept my family going the last eight months."

Dukakis has been traveling from state to state helping to rouse support for her father's presidential bid.

She said her traveling around the country is important for both the voters

Duke's daughter turns to Spanish in Latin American conversation

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

The briefing Andrea Dukakis gives to her father might be a little more exciting than usual.

During her visit Monday to open the Michael Dukakis for President headquarters in Carbondale, Dukakis had the opportunity to talk with Roberto Izurieta, graduate student from Ecuador.

Izurieta has been in the United States for seven months, but has become very active in the 1988 campaign.

Izurieta's interest stems from decaying relations between the United States and Latin America. Relations, he said, are declining because of the Reagan administration.

He said it is important for the next president to rebuild relations with the countries of Latin America "or face a situation similar to that going on in Nicaragua."

Although the issue isn't new and Michael Dukakis probably is well briefed on the situation in Latin America, the manner in which Izurieta and Dukakis discussed the issue was new.

Izurieta, who can speak English, appeared to have a hard time presenting his point to Dukakis in his second language.

Dukakis, realizing his difficulty, asked him, in Spanish, if he spoke Spanish.

From there, the conversation progressed into a meeting of two cultures with a common bond — the language.

Michael Dukakis' fluency in Spanish has long been considered an asset to his campaign and the fluency with which his daughter used it proved the point.

Izurieta said the conversation was enhanced by Dukakis' ability to speak his native language and reinforced beliefs Michael Dukakis will work hard to improve relations between the two Americas.

"(President Ronald) Reagan doesn't know how to deal with Latin America," Izurieta said.

"I felt more like she understood where I was coming from," he said. "I was just one of the hundreds of hands she was shaking that day and she didn't have to stop."

Gus Bode

Gus says Duke's fluency in Spanish would be more useful if he was campaigning in Latin America.

Cabinet head limits flights of helicopters in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The head of the new military Cabinet has restricted U.S. Embassy helicopter flights and demanded advance notification of the movement of Americans in Lebanon, Al Diyar newspaper reported Tuesday. The newspaper said the restrictions were ordered by army commander Maj. Gen. Michel Aoun.

Opposition names head of new political party

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — Opposition leaders Tuesday named retired Brig. Gen. Aung Gyi, an outspoken critic of Burma's authoritarian one-party government, as president of a newly formed political party fighting to restore democracy. Aung Gyi, 70, once considered the likely successor to longtime strongman Gen. Ne Win, was elected to head the first formal organization joining dozens of opposition groups, party spokesman Maung Maung told United Press International.

Military experts seek to account for MIAs

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — American military experts traveled to Laos Tuesday to begin a survey of U.S. warplane crash sites, seeking to account for some of the American servicemen missing in action during the Indochina war. Maj. Thomas J. Boyd, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said the survey in Laos would be conducted simultaneously with investigations in Vietnam.

Soldiers use plastic bullets; Palestinian killed

BET EL, Israeli-occupied West Bank (UPI) — Soldiers killed a Palestinian teen-ager with a plastic bullet Tuesday shortly after Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin defended the new ammunition and said its purpose was to wound more Palestinians but not kill them. "Our purpose is to increase the number of (casualties) among those who take part in violent activities but not to kill them," Rabin told reporters.

U.S. military personnel involved in shootout

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. military personnel were caught between Salvadoran soldiers and attacking guerrillas two weeks ago and fired on the rebels, in the first shooting incident involving Americans in 18 months, the Pentagon said Tuesday. Army Maj. Kathy Wood said three U.S. advisers were acting in self-defense when they fired their M-16 rifles at rebels who attacked the Salvadoran army's 4th Brigade headquarters at El Paraiso Sept. 13.

Terrorism could reach highest level in 1988

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Terrorism may reach its highest level in 1988, with incidents running more than a third over 1987's record because drug dealers and terrorists in Colombia have joined forces, the U.S. anti-terrorism chief said Tuesday. Jerry Bremer, the U.S. ambassador-at-large for counter-terrorism, told reporters the greatest increase in terrorist activity in the first six months of 1988 was in Latin America.

Discovery crew to conduct AIDS experiment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The crew of the shuttle Discovery will use the weightlessness of space to grow oversized crystals to help scientists learn more about AIDS, the space agency said Tuesday. The experiment involves an enzyme called reverse transcriptase, which NASA said is "a chemical key to the replication of the AIDS virus."

Study: Health care costs rise; availability declines

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Illinoisans are paying more for health care while the availability of health care is declining, according to a study by Illinois Public Action Council released Tuesday. The public interest group studied health care statistics from 1980 to 1986 and determined national health care costs increased 63 percent and per capita health care expenditures in Illinois increased 78 percent, said Robert Creamer, IPAC executive director.

Art festival aimed at children

Dancing, music, and storytellers to highlight event

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

ARTS IN Celebration '88, a festival designed to give children a first-hand knowledge of art and highlight local artwork, will be held at Turley Park this weekend.

The festival has been in the planning stages for two years. Bonnie Mareno and Cathy Sunjabi, co-chairwomen of the event, initiated the idea, which resulted in a community meeting to discuss the possibility of having an arts festival in Carbondale.

"Cathy and I wanted to do something for the community," Mareno said.

The children will release 2,000 helium-filled balloons in hopes of reaching other children across the country.

The festival will allow children the opportunity to view and participate with storytellers, drama and dance companies, musicians and other types of visual and performance artists in throughout the park.

THE FESTIVAL'S artistic "signature event" will be the hanging of hundreds of yards of a hand-dyed satin clothesline, the work of Sandra McMorris Johnson, which will extend east to west on Route 18.

Also featured in the festival are several exhibits that are not at Turley Park.

These will include an exhibit of new works by Carolyn Plochmann, Herbert Fink and Matthew Daub; a juried art exhibition, which will award $4,000 in prizes; and individual juried exhibitions of Illinois Ozark Crafts and framed needle arts at the University Museum.

THE FESTIVAL will begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday. The SIU-C Wind Ensemble, directed by Michael Hanes, will lead the opening parade by giving the world premiere performance of "Hoye's Tribute," a contemporary children's march.

Composed by Frank Stemper, composer-in-residence at SIU-C, the piece is named in honor of Stanford and Eileen Hoye, who aided with the production costs.

Masked children will march in the parade. Some of the children will carry a banner while others will wear T-shirts acknowledging contributions by local people and businesses.

The children will then release 2,000 helium-filled balloons in hopes of reaching other children across the country.

ALL OF the activities will begin after the parade.

Entertainment will be provided on Saturday by For Healing Purposes Only, Wamble Mountain Ramblers and the Step Sisters, Forever

Endavor, the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Co. and Mercy.

There will also be an international culture show, featuring traditional dances from China, Malaysia and Laos.

The finale to Saturday's activities will be a masked ball held at the National Guard Armory, on the corner of Oakland and Sycamore Avenues in Carbondale. It will be a black-tie optional dance with music provided by The Egyptian Combo.

RESERVATIONS FOR the ball are being taken at the Associated Artists Gallery, 213 S. Illinois Avenue, Carbondale. Admission is $25 per person.

The festivities will resume at noon on Sunday with a performance by The Marjorie Lawrence Opera, continuing with shows by the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Co., the Elkville Whiz Kids, the Sweet Adelines, Rich Frers, the Grigsby Family Singers and the Hughlett Family Singers.

The festival will conclude at 5 p.m. with a community sing-a-long and the repetition of the fanfare from "Hoye's Tribute."

Memories fading for Obelisk II yearbook

THE COLLEGE years can be the most exciting times of a student's life, but after graduation, all that is left of those years are memories and, perhaps, a yearbook of photographs.

IN RECENT years, the Obelisk II Yearbook publication at SIU-C has stood on very shaky ground. Financial problems, reductions in staff and management controversies have threatened to dissolve the publication altogether.

ALREADY, THE yearbook for the 1987-88 academic year has been declared dead. Students who graduated in the 1987-88 academic year will be omitted from the Obelisk II library. For those students looking forward to having a pictorial memorabilia of their college years, this is unfortunate.

CHANGES in the Obelisk's accounting methods for fiscal year 1987 put restraints on spending, forcing the number of paid staff members to be reduced from 14 to one. Staff members who previously had been paid for their services were asked to become volunteers. Of course, most of them left.

BECAUSE OF reductions in staff, the 1986-87 Obelisk yearbook has been delayed until December, when the Obelisk staff hopes to distribute them. The two year delay in publication is negligent to those students who have been waiting for their paid-for yearbooks.

THE UNIVERSITY must decide whether to give more funding to the Obelisk II or abolish it until money is available to produce a more stable yearbook. We suggest the University attempt to save the yearbook. The Obelisk II is a nice digest of SIU-C, enhancing the image of the University.

WITHOUT A secure foundation, there is no reason for students to trust that their yearbook will be published. This could mean a lot of trouble for future yearbook publications. Lack of advance orders and student participation could very well kill another yearbook, and assorted memories for some unfortunate students.

Movie not victim of censors

If an uninformed and ill-read person were to glance at the words of Larry Auchstetter, he might get the humorous impression that Auchstetter stands for human rights.

"This narrow view (of what is right and what is wrong) frightens me," chirps Auchstetter, who is angry that the Christian community has somehow "banned" the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ." Actually, what is frightening is how a college senior like Auchstetter can be so ignorant as to what constitutes censorship.

What actually took place in Carbondale was not censorship at all. Christians decided to protest a movie which fictionalizes the man Jesus. They wrote letters saying that they would not attend the movie house for one year if the manager showed the film.

Apparently, the manager weighed the consequences of not showing it, and concluded that, for financial reasons, he would benefit by not showing the movie. The manager made a prudent business decision. There was no censorship whatsoever. He had every right to show the film, regardless of Christian opinion.

He also exercised his right in declining to show the film, regardless of non-Christian opinion. It wouldn't surprise me if the movie does get a showing in Carbondale, but the decision is entirely in the manager's hands.

Censorship occurs when someone is legally punished, financially or otherwise, for expressing his views. When the laws prohibit someone from speaking his mind, when someone is thrown into prison for showing movies or writing articles, then we have censorship. One recalls that many countries today prohibit the importation of Bibles. This blatant form of censorship doesn't seem to bother the Holier-Than-Thou censor criers, such as Auchstetter, who are polluting Carbondale.

The manager of the Varsity had every right to show the film. He would not have been legally punished at all. He may have lost the business of the Christian community for a period, but to shout "censorship" reveals the ignorance, and the arrogance, of an illiterate society which has long forgotten how to think rationally.

That the movie is being shown in many places throughout the U.S. is irrefutable evidence that no censorship has taken place. If people deny the manager's right to make a decision, which is what they like Auchstetter seem to be doing, then we have a frightening form of censorship. — Chris Hamilton, English.

Abortion stance shouldn't give edge to candidate who hasn't sorted it out

By Jackie Hampton
Staff Writer

Following the debate I see that abortion should not be an issue in presidential politics.

Both pro-life and pro-choice (that's anti-abortion and pro-abortion) supporters agree that a woman shouldn't be punished, should abortion be outlawed and the woman choose to have an abortion anyway. The abortionist is the culprit, the pro-life people now say. George Bush also agrees, after having the chance to consider overnight the penalties that might be exacted against women violating the anti-abortion law he believes should be passed.

The pro-abortion lobby agrees that women should not be punished because it believes that abortions should be legal.

Regardless of which side of the abortion issue voters fall on, they should remember the past eight years and disregard the issue when selecting a president. That's because there was little in the past eight years that President Reagan couldn't do.

He didn't balance the budget, as promised. He raised taxes, which he promised wouldn't increase. But, most significantly, in many circles he is perceived as having done everything he promised. That's no miracle: It's just Ronald Reagan.

ONE ACCOMPLISHMENT that Reagan can't take credit for — no matter how many clarifications his press corps cranks out, no matter how much he forgets or doesn't know and no matter how hard he waves the flag — is reversing the Supreme Court decision that allows abortion. Reagan considers himself among the pro-life crowd, but not even the Great Communicator could outlaw abortions.

So, those among the pro-life lobby that have chosen to make the presidential race a single-issue campaign can forget it. If Ronald Reagan couldn't get it done, what chance does George Bush have, considering the fact that until Tuesday morning, he hadn't sorted out the details of his stand on abortion.

Once there was a time when a man felt a sense of responsibility for his actions. Today, however, the two men who want to be our leader fail to acknowledge that a man has any role in a pregnancy.

Michael Dukakis, on the other hand, is pro-choice and would leave it up to the woman to decide whether or not she would have an abortion. Dukakis probably has sorted out his stand better than Bush, considering the fact that Dukakis has had to deal with hostile outbursts from the pro-life lobby at nearly every campaign stop. But, Dukakis answer still misses the point.

BUSH WOULD prosecute the abortionist. Dukakis would leave it up to the woman. Those are two strange positions, considering that both have stressed the importance of the family.

The one person missing from both Bush's and Dukakis' abortion dramas is the leading man. Bush, though, probably is farthest from the mark. Punishing the person who performs the abortion and calling the women "additional victims" is asking for trouble. I wonder if Bush has learned anything from the current drug policy he so heartily embraces.

On the subject of drugs, Bush wants to go after users as well as suppliers. When it comes to abortion, which Bush and the pro-life lobby consider murder, the suppliers are criminals and the users are victims.

Worse yet, Bush acts as if there is no father in his abortion scenario. I realize Bush grew up in an era when sex education was not part of the school curriculum, but doesn't he know that it takes two to make a baby?

BOTH CANDIDATES would have the country return to those glorious days of yesteryear when father knew best and my three sons overcame the problems of the single-parent household. Those kind of family ideals would make more sense than any of the emotional gibberish that we hear on the abortion issue.

Once there was a time when a man felt a sense of responsibility for his actions. Today, however, the two men who want to be our leader fail to acknowledge that a man has any role in a pregnancy.

Bush may want to make the family strong again, but he has not said what he has in store for the families that are not as fortunate. What will Bush do for the women who choose not to have an abortion? Would the Bush government help support those women, who choose not to have an abortion even though the father of the child has disappeared from their lives as the notion of fatherhood has disappeared from Bush's abortion stance?

Here's a clue. What kind of programs does Bush consider "liberal, liberal, liberal?" Remember that his mentor has dismantled many social programs and used the savings to help pay for weapons.

OF COURSE Bush doesn't care about what happens to these babies he believes have a right to life. If he cared, he'd talk tough about the fathers that leave children to fend for themselves, with only a teenage mother to protect and support them.

If the presidential candidates seriously addressed all aspects of the abortion issue, I'd believe that they were taking it more seriously than they do the audience response to the one-liners and news bites.

Bush is the worse of the two. He panders the emotions of those who clearly adhere to the ideal that life is sacred. If Bush were as truly aware of the ramifications of abortions as the pro-life voters Bush claims to represent, he would have sorted it out many years ago.

He's right, the women are victims. He just doesn't remember who victimized them.

Number of drug-related deaths show American drug policy is misdirected

In response to your editorial regarding ABC's three-and-one-half hour discussion-debate on the decriminalization of drugs in our society: In my opinion such a public forum on this issue has been long overdue in view of the dismal track record of our present drug enforcement policy.

Until recently, anyone who supported the decriminalization or legalization of drugs (e.g., marijuana, cocaine, and heroin) has not been portrayed in the most-favorable light (e.g., as some sort of left-wing crackpot or a drug-crazed lunatic). I'm sure a lot of viewers were surprised to find such a prominent conservative as William F. Buckley advocating legalization of drugs. But our present drug enforcement policy has not even come close to producing the results so sought after by its proponents, a fact that did not escape Mr. Buckley as well as the two law professors from Harvard and Princeton, the mayor of Baltimore, and journalist Hugh Downs.

Amidst the histrionic shouting and blubbery illogic of Ed Koch and Rev. Jesse Jackson (talk about strange bedfellows, eh?!), their opinions represented the voice of reason and rational analysis in view of the facts, which are:

In 1987 we spent $6 billion (federally, i.e., not counting state and local expenditures) on drug-related law enforcement and yet confiscated only a small fraction of the drugs smuggled into our country. Week after week, month after month, year after year we receive news that the local or federal government has made another major seizure of drugs or cracked an important drug ring. Yet people still continue to use drugs, drugs are very easily obtained anywhere (even in prison!), dealers are making huge profits as a result of our policy, and addicts are committing all sorts of crimes (e.g., thefts, burglaries, muggings and occasionally murder) in order to procure funds to support their addiction. And what has been our typical response to this continued and undeniable failure? Well hell, let's just pump some more money into drug enforcement, and then that will solve everything...yeah, that's the ticket. At this point it is safe to say it is clearly not the ticket.

The majority of the people in the United States are generally fearful of what changes would occur if drugs were legalized. No doubt there would be an increase in drug use. It's unclear just exactly how much of an increase there would be. On the positive side, without a doubt we would lower the crime rate significantly. Drugs would cost much less than they do now and even the most impoverished addicts would not have to resort to crime to support their addiction.

A portion of the incredible sum of money that we spend annually on the interdiction of drugs and the imprisonment of dealers and users could be redirected toward public education aimed at preventing drug addiction. We could also use some of this money for treating those already addicted. The money left over would be that much less that we have to pay in individual income taxes.

If we regulated these drugs the same way we do alcohol and tobacco, we would ensure the quality of the drugs and thereby eliminate deaths resulting from accidental overdose as well as deaths from AIDS acquired via dirty needles. We could also tax these drugs as we do alcohol and tobacco, which would certainly significantly increase federal revenue (and perhaps help lower our huge federal deficit).

Each year about 320,000 Americans die from tobacco products (via emphysema, lung cancer, and heart disease). There are also approximately 55,000 alcohol-related traffic deaths each year (not to mention crimes such as assault, rape, and murder where alcohol was a prominent factor). Presently approximately 5,000 people die each year from so-called illicit drugs (i.e., heroin, cocaine, and marijuana). Clearly the most dangerous drugs are already legal. I think it is time to try a new more rational approach in dealing with drugs. Maybe we can be as successful as those in Holland have been. If we're not then we can try something else. Our present approach is irrational, futile, and in view of the above death statistics, misdirected. — Scott Parker, graduate student, clinical psychology.

Earth First! purpose is information

This letter is in response to the editorial "Battleground Tactics Won't Save Shawnee." Once again the media has labeled Earth First! an ecological terrorist organization.

First, Earth First! is not an "organization" but a group of people which share similar environmental views. Second, I personally neither condone nor disapprove of radical measures taken by others of Earth First! While I support them financially and spiritually, I do not and will not support any damaging illegal actions. The main purpose of Earth First! is to inform the public of what is taking place on our land.

This is usually through public demonstrations, acts of non-violent civil disobedience, and "media stunts." People have to be wakened up to what's going on in their own backyards. The ecological saboteurs are a small radical faction which feel that tree spiking is the last resort to preserve a forest. All spiking should be openly publicized as was the case in Cave Valley. The ball is now in the court of the logging company.

It can either put its workers in jeopardy by cutting the spiked forest knowing full well that an injury may result, or it could abandon its plan to cut. All injuries which have resulted from spiking were the results of the companies' "we'll-show-you-and-still-cut-the-forest" attitude. The purpose of spiking is not to injure. The company has the choice, people or profit.

Having dealt with the Shawnee National Forest, I must say that the Shawnee has a fairly sound management scheme overall and are not clueless as are many Forest Service districts out west where administrators are busy kissing the logging industry's (explosive deleted). Go to Mt. St. Helens and try to tell the difference between the volcano's destruction and some nearby clear cuts. You can't. Past Forest Service decisions have usually been in favor of the logging industry.

Old growth forests have been cut behind the backs of environmental groups as they tried to save them legally.

The "death penalty before the trial" argument is (explosive deleted). The evidence is there. Timber is being sold by the Forest Service for well below cost, and logging roads are being built to be used once, all at the expense of the taxpayer. As consumers we still have to pay high prices for lumber which came off of our land. We lost coming and going.

Let the tax dollars go toward building and maintaining facilities and roads which everyone can use and enjoy. If the Forest Service promoted tourism instead of logging, the economy of Southern Illinois would improve significantly. People in Chicago are looking for places to go nearby. They don't know what a gem they have down here because no one tells them, and if they do come down they must contend with poor roads and few directional signs. Just let a Chicagoan try to find the Little Grand Canyon without careful, detailed instructions.

If not logging the Shawnee would cause economic collapse, then maybe it should proceed. That is only if the timber is sold at fair market prices and all development costs are absorbed by the company. If that pushes costs too high and loggers are put out of work, so be it.

Should hospitals be allowed to dump medical wastes into the ocean because it's too expensive to dispose of them properly and doing so might cause some doctors and nurses to lose their jobs? Ask about a million Easterners that couldn't swim in the ocean last summer.

Yes, I use wood products, but my needs and the needs much of the country can be met by the cutting of plantations of the Forest Service, private industry, and private woodlot owners. Leave the old growth alone. It can manage itself. If you don't agree, I'd like to see some pre-Columbian Native American chain saws.

We have the technology to live in a bastardized version of harmony with our environment, but it will cost money. Until the almighty dollar takes a back seat to doing the right thing, groups such as the Sierra Club, Audubon Society, Nature Conservancy, and Earth First! will be there seeing to it that "the right thing" at least gets a fair chance. — Edward Kandl, graduate student, geology.

Southmark-Johnstown Management Co., spends hundreds of dollars every weekend on security, maintenance, and cleaning up the area after parties on the property occur, Calufetti said.

People are paying rent somewhere else, she said, and coming here to Lewis Park and trashing it.

Calufetti has been in the managers position for about two years, and is trying to get rid of the reputation Lewis Park has for being the party place at SIU-C.

"I want to work with the University and the Undergraduate Student Government to help them find something for the students to do besides come to Lewis Park," Calufetti said.

The previous reputation of Lewis Park as being "the place to go" for a party is over, Calufetti said.

"The days of the huge courtyard parties are gone," she added.

Another apartment complex, Garden Park Acres Apartments, managed by Wayne Ellis, doesn't seem to have the problems Lewis Park does.

"Partying is not a big problem here, and in most instances the residents ask for permission to have the parties," Ellis said.

"Ninety-five percent of the residents here are interested in their education, they are not here to party," Ellis said.

Ellis said that he feels the party image the University has is "completely unjustifiable."

"SIU-C is just like any other large university where the kids are going to party," Ellis said.

A near riot at Lewis Park on Sept. 16, though, is what sparked Calufetti's anger.

Although the police were called to the disturbance at Lewis Park, Calufetti said she thought the initial problem started at the Student Center.

Sgt. Robert Drake of the SIU-C police said the incidents on the same night may be related, however, he could not say for sure because he did not have a list of names.

"We don't want people milling around our apartments like it is a state fair."

—Judy Calufetti

The SIU-C Police, Carbondale Police, and the Jackson County Sheriff's Department were all called to Lewis Park, where a car was parked in the front of the entrance with a keg of beer in the trunk, Calufetti said.

An ambulance was called because of a reported injury, and the 500 people gathered at the scene wouldn't let the vehicle through, Calufetti said.

The instigators of the riot did not appear to be residents of Lewis Park.

Pablo Reyes, who was charged with assault, resisting arrest and unlawful assembly that Friday night, was listed as a resident of 68 Lewis Park.

However, Calufetti said that Reyes is not under lease with Lewis Park, but said he stays there some weekends with friends.

Most of the problems Lewis Park has are basically not from the residents, Calufetti said, however, they are who pays for the damage done.

The money spent on repairing damage done over the weekends could be going for more positive things, Calufetti said.

"We've worked really hard to upgrade the apartments for those who live here, and after we get rid of this problem then our residents can start having their parties again," Calufetti said.

"We don't want people milling around our apartments like it is a state fair," she added.

Calufetti has warned residents of the new rules regarding parties at Lewis Park.

Parties must be small and kept in the apartment, and anyone found wandering around the property who is not an invited guest of residents will be asked to leave by off-duty police officers hired for security.

"We've had a real bad reputation in the past, and we are trying to turn it around," Calufetti said.

"It's important for them (the voters) to hear why we feel strongly about them (Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen). But it also allows us to go back to my dad and tell him some of the ideas people have around the country."

"We have to keep thinking the only poll is November eighth."

—Andrea Dukakis

Vice President George Bush, was lessened by Dukakis, saying "we have to keep thinking the only poll is November eighth."

Ann Sheridan, a representative of the Chicago campaign headquarters said a visit to Southern Illinois by Michael Dukakis before the campaign ends is a definite possibility, but could give no time when a visit would occur.

Correction

Robert Pauls is president of the Carbondale Historic Area Association, this information was incorrectly stated in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian.

Welfare overhaul approved

Mandatory work program included for recipients

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House-Senate conferees approved a compromise plan Tuesday to overhaul the nation's welfare system, agreeing to a mandatory work provision critics call "slaveware."

Breaking a three-month impasse over the cost and scope of the bill, conferees accepted a series of compromise measures negotiated late Monday, including the first federal work program for welfare recipients.

In a 26-8 vote, the House conferees agreed to the compromise measure, but the first welfare overhaul bill in 53 years won unanimous approval from the nine Senate conferees.

"A chance like this doesn't come along very often," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. "This legislation is far from perfect. I am confident, however, that the families who are trapped in the cycle of poverty would tell us to give them a chance and pass the bill."

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., the chief architect of the legislation, said the House and Senate could vote on the welfare reform bill as early as Friday.

President Reagan had threatened to veto the massive bill, which attempts to get recipients off welfare and into the workforce, if it did not contain a provision requiring welfare parents to work.

But returning to the White House from New York Tuesday, Reagan gave conditional support to the compromise, saying: "I think it's something I'm going to be very happy to put a pen to."

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., one of a handful of House members who spoke out against the bill, criticized key negotiators for including the mandatory work requirement in the compromise package.

"This compromise welfare package is a case of false labeling," Hawkins said.

The chance of obtaining state money for a northern bypass or connector will evaporate after the council approves the couple, Tuxhorn said.

In five years IDOT will spend about $5.5 million for completion of the couple and for widening Main Street to six lanes, Tuxhorn said. The money could be applied to the north bypass, he said.

However, H. R. Mulroney, state director of highways, has said there is no money in state coffers to pay for IDOT's estimated $14 million construction cost for the bypass.

But last night's vote probably will not spell the end for the couple controversy.

Robert Pauls, president of the Carbondale Historic Area Association, has threatened to sue the city if the couple is approved.

His group and another citizen's group has presented their case against a couple and for a "northern connector" that would skirt the northern edge of town, running from Giant City Blacktop on the east and New Era Road on the west.

Larry Meyer, IDOT planning and programming engineer, said the couple is expected to be completed by fall 1991.

Advice To The Drug Worn

A column answering alcohol and drug questions
Dr. Buzz Says:
Prepare NOW for the cold and flu season ahead!!

Remember that drugs such as alcohol, marijuana, speed and cocaine can make you more susceptible to illness. Late night partying, and even pulling all night study marathons, can contribute to fatigue that can open you up to infections ranging from a simple cold to recurrent strep to much more serious illnesses like AIDS.

You can help keep your immune system in the best possible condition if you:

1. Avoid the use of alcohol and other drugs.
2. Maintain a nutritionally sound diet.
3. Engage in stress-reducing activities like exercise.
4. Get plenty of rest; avoid chronic fatigue.
5. Practice safer sex.

PROTECT YOUR HEALTH. Boost your immune system, don't booze it.

If you have a question about alcohol or drugs - send it to Dr. Buzz c/o the Wellness Center or call 536-4441! Look for your answer in Dr. Buzz's column.

Retired New England couple supports anti-Dukakis vote

By Robert L. Koenig
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This one story in a series.

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N.H. — On the best days atop the mountain, Virginia Martin looks over a sunlit sea of clouds broken only by the island peaks of the Presidential Range. On the worst, she can't see her own feet in the fog.

"Ginny" Martin, 57, works every other week as a museum caretaker atop Mount Washington, the highest peak in New England. She spends the odd weeks helping to run an old cog railroad and fixing up Sleigh Bell Farm, her home in the valley at Whitefield, N.H.

From the birch-tree valleys to the mountaintops, Ginny Martin and her husband, Warren, 64, know the landscape and the people of New Hampshire's north country.

WITH THEIR perspective from the heights of Mount Washington, the Martins delight in describing burdened Massachusetts residents crossing the northern border of that comparatively high-tax state to settle in southern New Hampshire — a state that has no income tax and inscribes its license plates: "Live Free or Die."

The way the Martins see it, those folks are voting with their feet against a "people's republic" state government set up in part by Massachusetts' governor, Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential candidate.

"A lot of people come here to escape 'Taxachusetts,'" says Warren Martin. "Massachusetts is the perfect state — if you live on welfare."

LIKE MANY northern New Englanders, Warren Martin prides himself on his individualism. On the weeks when he isn't working with his wife in the museum, he teaches skiing in Bretton Woods, N.H., or works at Sleigh Bell Farm. He enjoys talking about his days in the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division during World War II.

Both Martins backed Senate Republican leader Bob Dole in this year's New Hampshire primary — Dole also served in the 10th Mountain and was badly wounded in the war.

"They are disappointed that he did not win the Republican presidential nomination. That colors their view of the nominee, Vice President George Bush. Though the Martins hardly want to name a peak in the White Mountains' Presidential Range after Bush, they both expect to vote for him.

"IT'S REALLY a vote against Dukakis," Ginny Martin says.

When they survey the presidential race, the Martins feel a bit like they do when a dense gray fog moves in. They have trouble discerning a clear direction to the campaign. And they think both candidates — like streams taking the path of least resistance down a mountainside — have avoided confronting some bedrock issues.

For one thing, the Martins hear the talk about the federal budget deficit, but have seen few good proposals from either candidate to solve the problem. The Martins have a personal reason for worrying about fiscal problems: A few years ago, the nest egg they had saved for early retirement was virtually lost when their investment firm ran into financial problems.

sometimes work seven-day weeks even though they consider themselves to be retired. Every other Wednesday, they drive up the rough road to the 6,288-foot summit of Mount Washington. There, they work as a museum with exhibits on the history of the mountain the Indians once called "Home of the Great Spirit."

Ginny Martin has a jolly, rounded face and likes to regale visitors to the museum with tales about Mount Washington. Warren Martin is more laconic but has plenty to say about skiing — a sport he began to learn at age 6.

Down in the valley, they enjoy the warm sense of community in Whitefield, where they live in a renovated hunting lodge that was built in the 1850s.

"SOMEBODY MAILED us a postcard the other day that was addressed only: 'Warren and Jenny Whitefield,'" Ginny Martin says. "And we got it."

But the mountains, especially New Hampshire's White Mountains, have always been a special place for the Martins: from the exhilaration of the view on clear days, to the forbidding loneliness when midnight storms lash the summit.

"You know the scripture, 'I lift up my eyes to the hills, from whence comes my strength,'" Ginny Martin says. "When you're down in the valley, you can look up and feel the strength of these mountains. It's something that makes things like politics pale in comparison."

THAT'S WHY the Martins

Reggae night set to benefit Jamaican hurricane victims

By Diana Mivell
Staff Writer

Students will have a chance tonight to help Jamaican communities damaged by Hurricane Gilbert.

A collection will be taken tonight at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand, during reggae night. Donations of dried food products as well as monetary contributions would be appreciated, Alex Paul, a Carbondale resident who will be collecting the donations, said.

Paul, who has traveled yearly to Jamaica since 1969, said he will personally deliver the donations. They will benefit the villages of Catadupa and Mount Salem located near Montego Bay, he said.

Paul said he will provide addressed envelopes for people wishing to directly mail their contributions.

"People in these villages struggle in their everyday lives and after this (Hurricane Gilbert) they're really struggling," Paul said.

Ann Karayiannis, a partner at Pinch Penny Pub said, "We are doing this promotion because for the past two years we've had reggae night weekly on Wednesday and it has been successful. Jamaica has helped us. Now we would like to help Jamaica."

"Anything will help. If we make $20 out of this, it will help," Paul said.

Karayiannis said the promotion will run all day from 3 p.m. to close and WIDB will provide music from 9 p.m. to 12:30. A percentage of the day's gross profit also will be donated to the cause, she said.

Kelley, Poshard to debate

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

The second of three debates between Congressional candidates Patrick Kelley and Glenn Poshard will be held tonight at Rend Lake College.

The debate begins at 7:30 p.m.

Both candidates are coming off what they consider to be a good debate, representatives of both candidates said.

"We were happy," Jim Wilson, campaign chairman for Poshard for Congress, said. "Our people left full of energy," he said.

The Kelley camp was also pleased with the debate saying that it accomplished what it was supposed to, "getting the issues out to the people."

The candidates will be taking questions from a panel made up of representatives of the various news media.

Representing television will be April Burry, WCEE in Mount Vernon; representing radio will be Joe Helleny, WCIL in Carbondale, representing newspaper will be John Callerman, Mount Vernon Register. Marlo Millikin, copy editor for the Rend Lake College Times, will represent the host school.

Dr. Harry J. Braun, president of Rend Lake College, will be the mediator in the debate.

A bus to the debate will be furnished by both the College Democrats and College Republicans as well as Poshard for Congress. Those needing a ride should be at the south entrance of the Student Center by 5:40 p.m. A bus also will stop at John A. Logan College at 6 p.m.

Group to help minority students

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

Students in the College of Human Resources have started a group to help minority students adjust to the University.

The group, called the Project Retention Organization or PRO, was initiated by Tracell Parker, a junior in social work. The organization is composed of social work and administration of justice majors.

Parker said that she and other students felt the program was needed to help minority students that come from predominantly black areas into the mostly white University because these students usually have insecurities.

The idea for the group came from their own experiences. Parker said. "We want to help incoming freshmen and transfer students. It's a good awareness program," she said.

The program comes from students for students, and will help minority students maintain their academic potential, inform them of support groups within the University, make them aware of student work, scholarship and financial aid possibilities, child care facilities, wellness programs, and housing opportunities, and help them keep their confidence up, Parker said.

Carol Felder, chief academic advisor for the College of Human Resources, said that the group will help students feel they are an important component of the University.

"There is a strong interest and need for the program," she said.

The group holds study sessions every Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday that combine two hours of studying and one hour of discussion about issues individual members bring up, Parker said. Since all the members are from the College of Human Resources, many academic questions can be answered.

Social gatherings also are part of the groups activities. Once a month the group sets up a volleyball game, a trip to St. Louis or another social activity that provides a chance to get away from academics. "It's a pressure release," Parker said.

The group holds fund raisers to provide money for the activities and keeps some money aside in case a student has an emergency such as a death in the family, Felder said.

Involvement with other activities such as workshops by career development also will be encouraged, she said.

Playoffs are rescheduled

NEW YORK (UPI) — Starting times for the two League Championship Series games scheduled Oct. 5 have been changed to accommodate the national telecast of the vice presidential debate. Major League Baseball and ABC announced Tuesday. Game 1 of the American League Championship Series will start at 12:20 p.m. CDT instead of the originally scheduled 7:28 p.m. Game 2 of the National League Championship Series has been moved from 2:07 p.m. CDT to 9:08 p.m.

The vice presidential debate, originally scheduled for 8-9:30 p.m. CDT, will be conducted from 7:30-9 p.m. "Although these changes will create a significant inconvenience to the clubs, leagues and baseball fans everywhere," Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said, "baseball recognizes its responsibility in this election year to allow the Democratic and Republican parties access to a national forum in prime time."

Booster Club at Ramada

Women's cross country coach Don DeNoon and football coach Rick Rhoades will be the guest speakers at the Saluki Booster Club's weekly luncheon. The Boosters meet at noon Thursday at the Ramada Inn in Carbondale.

Tennis, racquetball posted

Schedules for intramural racquetball singles and mixed-doubles tennis will be posted on Thursday at the Student Recreation Center. Players must check draws in person. Information desk workers will not give names and numbers of opponents over the phone.

Entries for bike race due

Entries are being accepted for the intramural bike race Oct. 8 at Lake-on-the-Campus. The 10-mile race consists of four laps around the Lake. For more information, contact Sarah Simonson at 536-5531.

U.S. women's basketball still in men's shadow

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — On the verge of a gold medal, the U.S. women's basketball players still get overshadowed by the men in the Olympics.

They don't attract large crowds, don't get as much press and have been subjected to about one question regarding the U.S. men's team for every three about themselves.

Remarkably, they don't let it bother them, aside from an occasional few words of wishful talking.

"We don't play as high, but who says we don't play as hard," said Teresa Weatherspoon, every bit as daring and darting as her point guard counterparts on the U.S. men's team.

That hard play can garner the highest award tonight, when the Americans take on Yugoslavia in the women's gold-medal game.

The U.S. women are solid favorites for several reasons, among them an earlier 101-74 victory over the Yugoslavs in the preliminary round. It's reasonable to expect Yugoslavia to put up a better fight, but the meaning of the game provides sufficient incentive to counteract a U.S. letdown.

"It's a great feeling to be there but the job is not done," said U.S. Coach Kay Yow.

"This is a great happening for women's basketball in the United States. The challenge is there, the opportunity is there. But nobody is going to hand it to us on a silver platter."

Silver is not the metal on the minds of the Americans.

revised and adapted," Hunter said. "We have to be willing to recognize improvements."

Sinclair tallied 22 assists for the Salukis, compared to just 16 for the Billikens' Shelly Metzler.

Hunter said one area the Salukis need to improve is serving.

Baier-Howe said her team needs to focus in on winning instead of just going through the motions.

"They just go out and play," she said. "We need to learn how to apply pressure."

The Billikens arrived at Davies early for the match, something they don't usually do, Baier-Howe said.

"I think it took us out of context a little," she said. "Usually we come in like a flash and leave. This time we came in and flopped."

the U.S. armed forces. She began teaching tennis lessons during their 18-month stay.

Auld was named temporary women's tennis coach at SIU-C in February 1975. But the assignment was soon permanent after early successes.

Auld said one of the highlights in her 14-year coaching career was leading Sue Briggs to a first-place finish at the regional championships in 1976 at Ohio State.

"Sue was probably one of the best players I've had here," Auld said. "She was just so tough mentally, she could be a few match points down and still pull through with a win."

Auld, whose current record stands at 201 wins and 164 losses, has coached 10 Gateway Conference champs in singles and doubles.

Auld, named 1987 Gateway Coach of the Year, said of the future: "I'm comfortable here, ... at the same time you always want to see what you're capable of achieving.

"Athletics is a big part of my life. It's a way of developing confidence and self-esteem, and it gives you an aggressive type of behaviour you need out in the world."

Auld said she has always derived satisfaction from participating in athletics.

"So, in some way or another, I'll probably be involved in athletics for the rest of my life."

Terri Schultehenrich (6) and Nina Brackins (19) leap to block an attempted kill by a St. Louis player. The Salukis tallied seven blocks on the evening while committing only one blocking error. The Salukis swept the Billikens 15-5, 15-7, 15-7.

Salukis win second straight

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

If the St. Louis University volleyball team was as good as its 12-3 record seemed to indicate, someone forgot to tell the Salukis. Or, as Billiken coach Janet Baier-Howe said, maybe her team just had it coming.

"We needed a good blasting," Baier-Howe said after a 15-5, 15-7, 15-7 thrashing by the Salukis that took just 55 minutes to play Tuesday at Davies Gymnasium. "I wish we could get off a 1 hour match. Winning is good, but you need to come back to reality."

The Salukis had seven blocks as a team, but only one blocking error. Hunter credited her team's play on the front line.

"This is the second straight match in which blocking has been a major factor," she said. "That is good to see."

Hunter said she was pleased that the Salukis were able to maintain large leads.

"When the margin of the score was significant, I was afraid we might let up," she said. "They stayed pretty focused. My theme to them before the game was 'Let's be the tempo setters.' We established the feeling and the flow."

Terri Noble led the Salukis with nine of the team's 32 kills. Lori Simpson, who was not scheduled to play because of tendinitis, contributed seven.

In the evening's first game, the Salukis rolled off seven straight points following a 2-2 tie and never looked back.

In game two, the Salukis came back from a 6-3 deficit by stringing together 10 straight points, thanks much in part to Sue Sinclair's three aces.

The Salukis posted a 5-1 lead in the third game en route to a sweep of the Billikens, which snapped their seven match win streak.

The Salukis' record is 5-7.

Hunter said the Salukis are getting away from the slow start which has plagued them all season. The Salukis have lost the first game in eight of 12 matches this season.

"We have built up our intensity in practice so that it starts right when practice begins," Hunter said. Baier-Howe said after beating several good teams in a row, a loss was bound to come sooner or later.

St. Louis coach Janet Baier-Howe can only watch as her team's seven-match win streak is snapped. Baier-Howe is a former Saluki player.

"When you play a wall, a wall, a wall, it's bound to fall on top of you," she said.

Despite St. Louis' record, Hunter said the win was not an upset in her eyes.

"I think strength of schedule has got to be considered," Hunter said.

Freshman Debbie Briscoe again started for the Salukis, and freshman Terri Schultehenrich played in all three games. Hunter said playing freshmen at this point of the season is earlier than she had planned.

"When I designed our schedule I thought I would debut our freshmen when we came back with St. Louis," Hunter said. "When things went like they did I debuted the freshmen earlier."

"The freshmen are responding well. The upperclassmen have just got to continue to be stable and offer consistent play."

Hunter said continued improvement in the recruiting process explains the abundance of quality freshmen.

Billikens' coach finds things changed

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

For St. Louis University coach Janet Baier-Howe, Tuesday night's match was more than a road trip to SIU-C. It was a trip back home.

Baier-Howe is a former Saluki volleyball standout and a member of the U.S. Olympic team from 1975 to 1982.

"It's nice to be back," said the former music major. "I went over to Altgeld Hall and haunted the halls a bit."

A member of former Coach Joanne Thorpe's team in the mid-1970s, Baier-Howe said Davies Gym has had quite a face-lift.

"It didn't have all this fancy gray, and the paint was falling off," she said gesturing to the ceiling. "The girls always go the old gym and the guys got the nice, pretty one."

Auld gains 200th win as women's tennis coach

Judy Auld

Born: Judy Powell, Decatur, Aug. 3, 1948.
High school: Decatur High School, Class of '66.
College: Lake Land College, 1967-69; SIU-C, 1969-72 with bachelor's in physical education.

Playing Highlights: Tennis, won Illinois Sectionals title and was invited to Nationals in 1970 and 1972. Basketball, guard on 1970 fifth-place National Collegiate team. Softball, third baseman on 1971 team which competed in Women's College World Series. Field hockey, played senior year as right wing. Coaching Highlights: Sept. 16, 1988, 200th career victory vs. Shelby, 9-0. She has a 204-184 record, a 723 win percentage since 1976. She compiled a 47-18 with record against Gateway Conference foes. First in Gateway in 1985, third in 1987 and second in 1988.

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

Judy Powell's passion for tennis began as a 13-year-old who made the five-mile bicycle trek across Decatur to the city tennis courts.

It was a modest start for the future Judy Auld, who as coach of the women's tennis team recently got her 200th career victory.

"When I first started playing," Auld said, "I took free public lessons from two instructors on two courts — with about 50 other kids."

Auld grew up on the shirt-tails of her older brother Richard. He developed her interest in sports, she said.

"Wherever Richard went, I went, and whatever Richard got, I got," Auld said. "If he got a glove, I got a glove. I never played with dolls. My mother bought me one doll and I never played with it."

Auld lacked formal training during high school because she grew up in a time when sports were taboo for girls. Decatur had no organized sports teams, Auld said.

Auld attended Lake Land College in Mattoon where she practiced with the men's tennis team because the college lacked a women's team. "I always beat them, but it kept me in shape," she said.

Auld then transferred to SIU-C, where she played tennis, softball, basketball and field hockey from 1969 to 1972.

In basketball, she was the guard for the 1970 team that finished fifth in the National Collegiate. In softball she was part of the 1971 College World Series squad that took fourth. In tennis, Auld won an Illinois Sectionals title and was twice invited to the national tournament.

"It was so different then," Auld said. "The only people who encouraged me in athletics before I came to Southern were my parents, my tennis coach and my softball coaches in Decatur."

"If I had my life to do over, I'd be right where these kids are now. Everything is so specialized now, and that makes the competition even stronger."

After graduating with a physical education degree, Auld joined her husband Gary (from whom she was divorced in 1983) in West Germany where he was stationed with
