City more than fiscal "car 1992. a generation through his youth."

by Jackie Spinner

Carbondale could be in debt by more than $1 million at the end of fiscal year 1993, a city official said Wednesday.

Carbondale Finance Director Paul Sorgen said the expected deficit is a result of expenses that continue to exceed revenue and of the increased cost of capital improvement projects.

For fiscal year 1991, the city is expected to have a debt of $99,815, compared to a balance in 1990 of $46,056. The fiscal year begins May 1.

Some capital improvements will cost more than what was budgeted originally, Sorgen said. These projects include the freight depot building, which will cost the city about $40,000 more because of a decision to install a slate roof.

Dr. Seuss dies at 87, captured hearts of many

By Jackie Spinner

Theodor Geisel began writing Dr. Seuss creations more than five decades ago, introducing children of all ages to "To Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street."

The book was the start of a writing career for Geisel that included 41 publications and favorites like "The Cat in the Hat," "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," "One Fish Two Fish Red Fish Blue Fish" and The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins. Marjory Adams, one of the nation's leading experts on Seuss writing, said Geisel's writing style captures the hearts of millions of children.

"Dr. Seuss books are very special books," she said. "He had a wonderful sense of how to play with long letters and words in a way that captures children's sense of humor and attention."

Geisel used basic sound principles to create people with names like "My Zoom-a-Zooop Troupe from West Upper Ben-Deezing who never quite know, while they loop and they room."

"He found a unique way of writing books for little ones," said Adams. "They don't read like a boring story."

Area player ready to sign with SIUC

By Cyndi Oiberle
Sports Writer

SIUC soon will get its paws on some home-grown talent when Sesser-Valier High School player Scott Burzynski signs a letter of intent to play for the Dawgs in November. The six-foot-eight-inch senior forward/center verbally committed to play for SIUC Tuesday, but will not be able to sign until Nov. 9, when the early signing season begins.

Burzynski will graduate in May and is expected to begin play for the Salukis in the 1992-93 season. "IUC Men's Sports Information said because the signing season does not begin until Nov. 9, Saluki head coach Rich Herrin, by law, is not allowed to comment. Sesser-Valier coach Rich Metcalf said Herrin has kept his eye on Burzynski for many years.

"Scott has been planning to attend SIUC for a long time," Metcalf said. "Coach Herrin has been recruiting him for a long time, and I think he is pretty happy about Scott verbally committing to SIUC."

In 1990, Burzynski tallied an average of 26.9 points, 10.5 rebounds, three assists and four blocked shots a game. He also has 2,053 career points and ranks in the top 90 national high school scorers.

Metcalf said if Burzynski averages about 26 points a game in the 1991 season he should finish within the top five of the national scoring leaders.

To contribute while playing for SIUC, Metcalf said Burzynski will have to put some weight on his 200-pound frame.

"He will have to gain and also hit the weight before he can be the kind of player he will mature into," Metcalf said. "But I think it is good for SIUC to get a kid from its own backyard. Burzynski also received scholarship offers from Michigan State and Illinois State to play second point.

"For us he plays forward and center, but he also has taken the ball down the court," Metcalf said. "He could play guard, but Scott

International soccer teams compete in World Cup finals

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

Four teams will compete for the International Student Council's World Cup soccer title this weekend.

The 14-team tournament competition, sponsored by ISC, started Sept. 14, and has been narrowed down to four teams after two weekends of play. The final four for the title consist of teams from Africa, Malaysia, United Nations and United Arab Emirates.

M. Ali Khan, chairman of the ISC Soccer Committee, said the competition this year has shown tremendous improvement from 1990.

"The teams are playing a better game this year," Khan said. "The teams in the championship have a better stamina to run up and down the field. It has played a major part in which teams made it to the finals."

ISC President Rich Robbins said the teams have practiced more as well and are performing more as a whole by playing a strategic game.

Although players come from all over the world, language has not proven to be a barrier, Ghose said.

"The teams communicate on a technical level," he said. "The skills and the principles of soccer are guiding the teams to success."

The ISC tournament has expanded in its seven-year history.

Grabb snatches quarterfinals in Brisbane

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI) — American Jim Grabb, the modest millionaire of tennis, squandered two-match points in the second set Wednesday before upsetting sixth-seed Shuzo Matsuoka of Japan, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3, to reach the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Queensland Open.

Grabb, 27, from Tucson, Ariz., held double match point at 40-15 in the ninth game of the second set, but failed to close out the match early. Instead, he labored for 2 hours and 43 minutes before completing the victory.

"Holding two match points like that and failing to convert can be one’s worst nightmare," Grabb said. "I didn’t play that badly then, but he really picked up his game."

The soft-spoken American is ranked only 116th in the world and is more noted as a doubles specialist after nine years on the circuit. But the economics grad from Stanford University apparently learned his lessons well, and he has earned nearly $1.1 million in career prize money.

Victory on Sunday could boost his total by $32,400. Second-seed Andre Agassi, almost victimized by a late nap, rallied back to defeat American Robbe Weiss, 3-6, 6-2, 6-6, in a night match. The Soviet player said he was nearly sleepwalking in the opening set.

"I was sleeping in my hotel room until 6:45," he said of the match which began shortly before 8 p.m. "I wasn’t ready for such a tough first set. I was still sleepy."

He played well, but then he got tired," he said. "I didn’t have much patience in the first set. I missed a lot of important points."

Florida ready to fight, whip Wolverines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The USC football team is coming off the college football season a shakendown, where "we’re still shaking our heads," according to coach Bob Schnel.

No. 1 Florida State plays No. 3 Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., Saturday for another clue to the national title picture.

"It’s a footspeed versus muscle," said Jackson, who calls the noon EDT game on ABC with Bob Griese. "Florida State just runs — my goodness can they run."

Bobby Bowden’s (Florida State Coach) football teams are generally fearless teams. They’ll try anything. His philosophy is: "I don’t know what you can do until you try, and he’s wonderful at it."

Michigan’s Desmond Howard and Florida State’s Casey Weldon have emerged as leading contenders for the Heisman Trophy. Howard has scored twice on pass receptions, once on a reverse and once on a kickoff return.

SIUC runner named MVC Player of Week

By Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

Saluki men’s cross country captain Mark Stuart added to his list of achievements this season when he was named Missouri Valley Conference Cross Country Athlete of the Week.

Stuart, who has won both meets SIUC has competed in, received the award on the merits of his performance Saturday against the University of Illinois in Champaign.

Stuart paced the field with a winning time of 24:54.8 in the eight-kilometer course as the Salukis fell to the No. 38 Illini by a narrow 26-29 margin.

Stuart said he runs to beat his own time and does not worry about the other runners.

"I just try to go out in the frame of mind that I have to run my best race," Stuart said. "We all have a job to do, and we know we can run with anybody if we get together and run our kind of race."

Saluki coach Bill Cornell said Stuart is a legitimate contender for the conference championship. Stewart finished second in the MVC in his sophomore season, he said, but fell from contention in 1990 because of a recurring leg injury.

"Mark is running very well this season," Cornell said. "He’s an extremely talented runner and is well deserving of the notoriety. Not only is Stuart a talented athlete, Cornell said, but he’s an outstanding student at the university."

"He’s a four point student," Cornell said. He’s a Presidential Scholar and a National Merit Scholar. He’s quite a leader."

Stuart holds both the men’s and women’s Cross Country Athlete of the Week titles this week.

ANNIVERSARY OF TEMPLE MOUNT KILLINGS — The first anniversary of the killing of 17 Arab in the Temple Mount passed quietly Wednesday as security forces beefed up their presence in the area and kept a fundamentalist Jewish group away from the holy site. Marking the holiday of Sakkot, thousands of Jewish pilgrims, many of them carrying traditional palm fronds, flocked from all parts of Israel to the plaza of the Western Wall, beneath the mount.

U.S. TO AIRLIFT AMERICANS FROM ZAIRE — The State Department said Wednesday it will begin airlifting American citizens from the former Zaire, warning that the situation in the former Belgian colony could further deteriorate. Speaking Richard Boucher said the United States is sending in three charter planes to evacuate those who wish to leave the country, with the first flight scheduled to leave Thursday.

There are about 3,500 U.S. citizens in Zaire.

MARSHALL ARGUES AGAINST DEATH PENALTY — His 24 years on the Supreme Court could officially be over within two weeks, but Justice Thurgood Marshall has not let his lame duck status interfere with a lifelong passion: opposing the death penalty. Tuesday night, on Thursday, Marshall wrote a page-long dissent to a high court decision to let 44-year-old Warren McCleary die in Georgia's electric chair for the 1978 killing of an Atlanta police officer.

BUSH USES TRASHY LANGUAGE — President Bush urged Congress Wednesday to approve a "Gizzly and Wildcat" Republican bill to extend jobless benefits, but Democrats attacked him for criticizing their more generous bill as "garbage." It was an "indefensible choice of language for the president," House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said of the president's remarks at a Republican fund-raiser in New Jersey.

Researchers try to uncover genetic pattern of rare cancer

By Julie Autor
Administration Writer

Researchers hope to study a rare form of cancer will reveal the genetic mystery between family histories and the disease.

The Illinois Department of Public Health, in conjunction with the SIU School of Medicine and Memorial Medical Center Regional Cancer Center of Springfield, is testing four Taylorville children with neuroblastoma.

Researchers will test the four children along with their parents, grandparents and siblings to detect genetic patterns through background history and blood analysis.

About 500 cases of neuroblastoma are identified each year. Most are found in infants and children. About 20 cases are reported each year in Illinois.

Dr. Thomas W. Loew, assistant professor at Department of Pediatrics at the SIU School of Medicine, said the testing will begin in the next few weeks. The researchers then will collect and process the data. The complete study will last about six months and cost $15,000.

Loew said most of the patients that are diagnosed are less than five years of age.

The cause for the outbreak in Taylorville is unknown. Epidemiologic and environmental investigations have not yielded results.

In 1989 and 1990, three cases of neuroblastoma were identified. The fourth case recently was identified.

Blood and urine samples will be collected by researchers to test for toxic substances. The samples will be tested for metals, pesticides and other toxic substances found in the environment.

Loew said the DNA of the patients and their families will be tested.

"We do know there is probably a genetic component," Loew said. "There are chromosomal changes found in neuroblastoma. We're looking to see if there is enough genetic material to suggest this is a genetic problem."

Loew said the cancer usually is an abdominal mass and can cause problems in the spinal cord, leg functions and different variations of paralysis.

Charity benefit kicks off festivities at new mall

By Sarah Anderson
General Assignment Writer

The largest shopping center in Southern Illinois will open next week in Marion with a charity benefit Oct. 1 to lead the festivities.

The benefit, "A Circle of Giving: Progress Meeting Needs," will help raise funds for local United Way charities. The benefit will be held at Illinois Center in Marion.

Sponsors of the event say the community can take part in the celebration.

"By buying tickets, the community is basically helping the community through the agencies involved," said Wayne Gerlock, chairman of the g.d.a. for the United Way.

The evening will offer many types of entertainment, including a performance by the Lettermen, which had such hits as "When I Fall In Love," "Put Your Head On My Shoulder" and "Shangri-La."

Special performances by magicians, singers and local musicians will be presented throughout the night.

Performers include: Mark Sanders from Opryland, Audrey Ashley Runkle, a jazz pianist. The Daniel Mellado string ensemble featuring performances on the violin, viola and cello, the Dana Travestead Dancers and clowns Tim and Wendy Culver among others.

People participating in the event can dance in Centre Court and sample foods at tables set up along the mall.

Participants can taste food from Tony's Steak House, Ruby Tuesday, Cracker Barrel, A & K. Canners and Marion Pepsi-Cola as well as food from other restaurants.

The mall also will sponsor raffles for dinners, weekend getaway hotel packages, Omni Health Club memberships, shopping sprees, an exercise machine and cellular phones.

"We originally expected to raise $50,000 and at this moment we've exceeded that amount. We may end up in the $60 to $70,000 range," Gerlock said.

Tickets to the event cost $25 for individuals and entitle ticket purchasers to choose the United Way agency to which they would like the money to go.

Ticket sales will benefit the United Fund of Union County, the Herrin United Way and the Lionator Marion Area United Way. Other Southern Illinois United Way agencies will receive the funds designated to them by ticket purchasers.

The opening day festivities begin at 9 a.m.

"When I see festive, I mean both from the visual and ceremonial standpoint," said Sheri Adams, a spokeswoman for the event.

Raffles will continue through the week with prizes ranging from a Caribbean Cruise package, courtesy of Thunderbird Travel, to a 1991 Hyundai Scoupe from Marion Hyundai.

The mall will be the largest shopping center development in Southern Illinois with 830,000 square feet of leasable space.

New stores in the mall include: 5-7, Foot Locker, Lady Foot Locker, Lerner, Lane Bryant, Merry-Go-Round, Cameolet Music and T.G. Square. The food court will have foods ranging from yogurt to pizza, Adams said.

"The first 500 shoppers get a $10 gift certificate toward the frequent shopper plan available at all DeBartolo malls," Adams said.

Tickets for the Oct. 1 charity event are available at DeBartolo One and Cornet Cellular of Carbondale and Bank of Marion, Marion Chamber of Commerce and Sears in Marion as well as 10 other locations in Southern Illinois.
Dawgs should bite back to gain support

HOW BUT THEM Dawgs! After four losing seasons, students have a reason to go to a football game. It is four weeks into the season and the Salukis are undefeated. People have speculated the first three wins were just lucky: The Dawgs struggled to win the three games against three mediocre teams.

Others speculate the team is winning because of its new and improved running game. That could be true. Last year the running game was practically non-existent.

The win against fifth-ranked Northern Iowa really put the Dawgs over the edge last week and moved them up the poll to No. 18. The PRE-SEASON poll rated the Salukis last in their conference. The polls are created by sport writers at newspapers and/or sports people from the athletic departments at universities across the nation who usually have not seen the teams play. But hey, the polls were wrong. Just take a look at them now.

The new ranking should show those people who are devout believers in the ranking of the pre-season poll, that miracles can happen.

Putting a lot of merit in the pre-season poll is not such a good idea. The polls are based on win-loss records of previous years and on the number of returning lettermen.

The Salukis scored high in the number of returning players, but not so high in the record department. The Dawgs had 33 of 54 players return.

BASED ON THE past record of the Salukis, why would anyone expect them to win more games than the last four games?

Rankings are not without some merit. Such rankings give the fans an idea of who is expected to do well, and who is not. In that respect, the polls could be a guide for which games to watch.

A lot of people are keeping a close eye on the Dawgs in light of their new found fame. But no one is sure what accounts for the Dawgs’ wins this season.

During the summer the offensive coordinator Phil Meyer was quoted as saying, “It’s beneficial if things are consistent.” Well, the Dawgs have been consistently bad, maybe it’s for them to be consistently bad.

“IT’S ONLY BIGGER” it is not all the team’s fault that it has not had a winning season since 1986. Nobody appreciates playing to an empty stadium. Now the stadium is filling up again. Last Saturday, people actually remained in the stands to the end of the game. Pretty impressive huh?

It should not be overlooked that they could still have a losing season. Several games remained to be played. They could end up 4-7. But for now the Dawgs are winning. Some people say the Dawgs just do not realize that they are supposed to lose and just keep on winning.

Maybe previous season contracts contained a clause that required the team to lose. Who knows. Whatever the Salukis are doing differently this year, they should keep doing it.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorialists represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Commentary

Watch worth:

Timepieces present consumers with economic, social choices

Ever since I discovered this make of wristwatch several years ago, I’ve infuriated friends and co-workers with proclamations such as this: “Nice watch you have there.” “One of those oxygen-shell jobs, hmmm? Must be expensive.” “Gift from my wife.” “Beautiful. But tell me, what can it do?” “Do? It tells the time.”

At that point, I feign amazement and say: “That’s all? For all that money, it only tells time?”

They usually fall into my trap by saying something like: “What do you expect a watch to do?” I pull back my cuff, display my watch and show them.

While jabbing at the tiny buttons on its front and side, I say: “Besides telling time in civilian or military mode, I expect it to be a fully functioning calculator. I also expect it to be an alarm clock. And to be a stopwatch. And to give me the day and date. And to beep on the hour.”

After I run through the above tricks, I now point the way, let you have your unlisted phone number. I want to store it in your watch’s data bank.

And I usually conclude my performance by saying: “All that for $32.95 plus tax. Let’s see, your watch cost about $500, right? Well, if I buy the latest, improved model of my watch every two years, at the end of 30 years…”

I pause to do some fast figuring in my calculator mode, and say: “…at the end of 30 years, I’ll have spent less for all my amazing space-age, science fiction technology than you spent to, ha, ha, to find out what time it is.”

I have a friend who owns a $5,000 Rolex and no longer speaks to me. That’s because people like him feel foolish. They spend hundreds or even thousands of dollars, and for what? To get information that is hanging on the walls of most homes and offices — the time of the day.

But for only $32.95, I can tap a button and call up the unlisted number of my bookey. Or set the alarm to be sure that I don’t oversleep at my desk and miss the cocktail hour. I’ve never had as much satisfaction from a material possession. That is, until I recently had a drink with an older friend I hadn’t seen for a few years.

He was wearing one of those delicate, water-resistant watches, made in France, I believe, so I couldn’t resist going into my put-down routine.

“Must have cost a pretty penny.”

“A bundle,” he said.

In a moment, I was putting my watch through its paces. But he just roared with laughter and said: “I can’t believe this. You? Wearing a need watch?”

A shrug.

“That’s the kind of watches nerds wear.”

“Ib, you don’t understand. This watch is also a calculator, a stopwatch, a phone directory, an alarm…”

He laughed again. “I know all that. That’s why the nerds love them.”

“Nerds. What do Nerds have to do with it?”

“The computer masts. The calculator freaks. The number crunchers. I’ve got a kid working in my office who has one exactly like this. Can’t even buy a piece of bread without adding the purchase price. Three pens, a tiny flashlight and a peanut butter sandwich in his shirt pocket.”

He slapped the bar and laughed uncontrollably. Then he added (as if who would have thought it?) “You, a nerd? Tell me, whatever possessed you to buy a watch like this?”

Gun control should focus on penalty

Letter to the Editor

Guns should be used for protection, self-defense or recreation. Of course this isn’t the way they are used.

When guns are mentioned you hear about how the weapon was used to aid the criminal. Naturally, people strongly encourage strict gun control or even totally outlawing guns so that criminals won’t have the option. Who’s the kidder here? If people want a gun they will get one. People who are using guns in criminal acts aren’t following the rules to begin with. What would possess them to follow any new laws or restrictions?

The people following new laws are those who use the weapon in a proper way.

In reality, the emphasis needs to be placed on the old laws that punish, or try to punish, these criminals.

We should establish certain penalties for specific crimes. Therefore, the criminals know what penalty they will be given for their offenses.

Our system shouldn’t view these criminals as being “punished” or “unleashed.” Rather they are “volunteering” themselves.

A criminal using a gun or any weapon to kill another person should be considering “committing suicide.” —David Scarcott, freshman, undecided major.
Staff, told the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee that the United States has "rather significant air assets" in the region that could be "available at short notice" if necessary. "We left a pretty good capability in place," he said.

"I think the patience of the international community is wearing rather thin with respect to this Perille of Pauline game we go through with the Iraqis," Bourne said.

In Baghdad, David Kay, part of the 44-member U.N. inspection team, who had stood outside an Iraqi government building, said his group was being watched by as many as 90 Iraqi guards.

"You might want to know, we have a developing situation right now," Kay said. The NBC Nightly News program, "We have about 100 people suddenly gathering outside the fence with banners apparently marching on this facility. This is with TV cameras. It is something that just suddenly started to happen.

Asked whether the demonstrators were armed, Kay said, "No, it looks like a local organization, a well-organized local organization." Asked if the crowd was threatening them in any way, Kay said "No, up to now, 1..."

Our larger problem has been a physical discomfort. We've not felt threatened physically. In fact, we have felt up to now rather well-guarded by the Iraqis.

The U.N. is trying to "keep a close watch on paper and documents that have nothing to do with technical activities."

Moreover, he said that during an inspection of an Iraqi government building on Tuesday it found key documents relating to President Saddam Hussein's nuclear weapons program.

Iraqi forces could not let them leave the building's parking lot unless they surrendered the papers and their photographic equipment and submitted to searches. The U.N. inspectors refused and the parking lot standoff continued well into Wednesday.

Ike said the inspectors are not being held hostage, but are not allowed to leave with documents from the sites.

It is impossible to determine the exact extent of Iraq's nuclear weapons capability without examining these documents or photocopies or videotapes of them.

If inspectors are met with continued resistance, Ike said he would officially report the problem to the U.N. Security Council for a presidential response. If he is not, it looks like a local and submitted to searches. The U.N. inspectors refused and the parking lot standoff continued well into Wednesday.

President George Bush has volunteered the use of U.S. armed forces to back up U.N. inspectors in Iraq if needed.

Dr. Seuss still recalls her first encounter with Dr. Seuss's books.

"I remember the 'Cat in the Hat' and the 'Green Eggs and Ham' books, but I think my favorite is 'One Dog, Two Dog'; Red Dog, Blue Dog.'" She said she later read the books "a really simple and straightforward," she said.

She remembers the style of writing making it easy for children to remember lines from the book, said Leggett, who is heading the Latino Initiative at the Carbondale Public Library.

"It gives you time to remember the words and the characters, what's coming next," she said.

"The book is a story of the children's love for the cat, the dog, and the bird," said Leggett.

"It's one of the first things parents get for their children," she said. "They head straight for Dr. Seuss books.

His topics, at times, stay from colorful pages of ham and eggs to the environment and the animal kingdom. Walter Stuington, SIU professor of plant biology, requires his students to read "The Lorax" by Seuss, a reflection on environmental dangers.

The message of "The Lorax" is clear—unless someone like you cares a whole awful lot, nothing is going to get better. It's not, Seuss says.

"No, they're not, Dad."

So began author and rock critic Danny Sugerman's wayward path down the road of sex, drugs and rock & roll. Sugerman brought his lease, "Tales of Glamtour, Excess and the Doors," which also included rare performance footage of the Doors, to the Student Center ballrooms Tuesday night.

Sugerman said his relationship with Jim Morrison, lead singer of the renowned '60s rock band the Doors—brought him fame and nearly lead to destruction.

At age 12, Sugerman received a mysterious note which he later discovered was from close friend Jim Morrison. Sugerman wrote his return address, "Dann Y Sugerman's wayward path," on the envelope and sent it to Morrison in Beverly Hills. Robert Kennedy, Morrison's attorney, received the letter and returned it. Sugerman's response was "I will not accept anything from感覺王.w.

"Something magical happened that night," Sugerman said. "Twenty years later, I'm still trying to figure out what happened that night at the Doors concert."

Sugerman began hanging around the Doors' office so much he was given the task of answering fan mail, and from there progressed upward in his relationship with the Doors and downward along the path to destruction.

At age 15, his father made him choose between his family or the Doors. The choice was obvious, he said. But two months after he gave up his family, close friend Jim Morrison went to Paris and died at age 27.

"I was devastated. I didn't know what to do," Sugerman said as he swallowed his tears.

Ray Manzarek, the band's keyboardist, provided support, but Sugerman made it his goal to die at age 21 and pick up a $500-day heroin habit.

He almost got his wish. Two months before turning 21, he was diagnosed with hepatitis, marijuana and heart problems.

"The way I saw it, I had three options; one, die; two, telling my family; and three, shooting up massive amounts of drugs — then telling my family," Sugerman said. Despite choosing the third, he also genius and a very compassionate man," Sugerman said.

With the pieces of his life gradually being put back together, Sugerman said choosing the Doors instead of his family also had a happy ending.

After his father read "No One Gets Out of Here Alive," he called Sugerman up apologizing for his ltr of compassion toward him. He also expressed how proud he was about his first book.

"He got to read the first manuscript of 'Wonderland Avenue' (Sugerman's autobiographical novel) and loved it, so I dedicated the book to him," Sugerman said.

His father died before the book was published. Sugerman currently is working for and with the remaining Doors, as well as writing, and concludes that Morrison's spirit lives on.

Morrison once said, "There are things known and things unknown, and in between are the Doors..."

He forgot to add, "And Danny Sugerman."
University set for invasion by Britain’s best animators

From the creators of the “Tournees of Animation” and the "Animation Celebrations" comes a new film featuring the United Kingdom’s finest works in animation, "The British Animation Invasion." The show will invade the Smithsonian Auditorium Thursday evening and run through Mon., Oct. 4.

"The British Animation Invasion" is armed with award-winning work from such trend-setters as Aardman Animations, Paul Vector, Joanna Quin, Nick Park and Candy Guard.

The first wave of British cartoon characters were invited with early advances such as the rotoscope, a film projector with a drawing board on which to trace live-action movements. Since then, the art of British animation has moved forward with advances in style, technique and characterization.

The award-winning team of David Sproxton and Peter Lord, who founded Aardman Animations in 1972, have become legends in the international community of stop-motion animation. In the last 19 years, Director Stephen Johnson co-founded with Sproxton and Lord in producing " pledgehammer," a video which took more than 100 hours to shoot with pop star Peter Gabriel.

Sproxton and Lord have been joined, among others, by Nick Park, director of "Creature Comfort." "Creature Comfort," about a dissatisfied gorilla and several other highly-opinionated animals brought to life through the remarkable claymation.

Aardman Animation, one of the top English animation teams, has produced the shorts that aroused even the slightest bit of interest. Most notable is Nick Park's 1990 Academy Award winner, "Creature Comforts." The short depicts life in a zoo as described by a pondering parrot, about how gorillas go to the toilet, how the animals, won an Academy Award for Best Animated Short in 1990.

Andrew Staveley directs "Granger in Paradise," an animated tale of Adam and Eve in a twentieth-century shopping center, which won a Gold Hugo at the Chicago International Film Festival. Other subjects covered in the compilation include dolphins, UFOs, evolution and nuclear power.

"The British Animation Invasion" will open for an exclusive five day engagement at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday in the Student Center auditorium with matinees and late shows on the weekend.

Films fail to entertain with just technical style

By Casey Hampton

Many British wonders, such as the Beatles and Rolling Stones, have come to the United States to be welcomed with open arms. The Beatles’1965 "An American in New York" was a world hit the same year its film counterpart "A Hard Day’s Night" was released. "The Beatles’1965 "An American in New York" was a world hit the same year its film counterpart "A Hard Day’s Night" was released.

Using stop-motion models, Aardman also brings to life Bary Parve's "Next," a clever interpretation of Shakespeare auditioning all of his plays.

After these two shorts, the film comes over from remakes interesting to nearly impossible. The showreels are merely animated commercials packaged together with a cute title. With a few exceptions, the people can find the same techniques by flipping the television to MTV. Quite honestly, the other films are more tedious than watching totally uninterested people run around like the Coyote chase after Road Runner. Respect is given to the various types of animation used, ranging from clay to computer and everything in between. Bad creators only channelled even an ounce of their abilities into making the shorts, though, with the eye-dazzling, "The British Animation Invasion" could have been a success.

Self-described "party band" Side Effect triumphed over two other local groups Sunday night in the fourth round of Battle of the Bands at the Hoffman Center.

The band blended cover tunes with a scattering of originals for an appealing sound to beat out experimental quintet Sprocket Print and heavy metal foursome, Risk. Playing second in the fourth round, Side Effect set its list through a variety of covers, from REM’s “Shiny Happy People” to Living Colour’s primal “Middle Man.” The band covered over at times to original material such as "Another Day" and "It’s Over." Drummer Cory LaHood said the win came as a surprise.

"We weren’t really sure if we were going to win last night or not," LaHood said. "We’d like to win the next round. That’s just another step in getting our name out there."

LaHood said most of the members of Side Effect met through their fraternity. LaHood, guitarist Bill Ragan on keyboards, Bill Ragan on guitar and vocals, Dave McDonald playing bass, Curt Wilson on guitar and twin brother Craig Wilson drumming, Sprocket Print combines the looseness of Pink Floyd founder Syd Barrett with the improvisational turns of jazz. The band members tried to explain their style of music.

"It’s like being shoved into a very small capsule and blasted through the ocean," Shaw said.

"Then you strike the barrier of space and time and dissolve into multi-dimensional particles," Craig Wilson said.

Sprocket Print went through a number of incarnations in the 1990-91 school year, sometimes using a different name at each party the band played.

Heavy metal quartet Risk played third and placed second, earning 96 points for their mix of metal standards with original tunes.
LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Author Theodor Seuss Geisel, the magician-ruler of a fantasy world that has enchanted generations of children, has died. He was 87.

Geisel died in his home at 8 a.m. Tuesday with family members at his side, Leighton Dinnard, said. "He had an 87-year-old body, but his mind was clear," she said.

Geisel began his writing career in 1937 with the publication of "To Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street." He went on to pen 47 classics with titles like "The Cat in the Hat," "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" and "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins." His final work was "Oh, the Places You'll Go," published in 1990.

Bob Kehoe, television's Capt. Kangaroo, said Geisel's "great creativity and wisdom in books has had a key role in nurturing the young in America."

"Parents could get as much from his works as children... He left us a great treasure that generations of children will be able to appreciate and benefit from."

Geisel had been in declining health, but spent his remaining days at his home on Mount Soledad, overlooking the Pacific, where he had lived in relative seclusion for more than 20 years with his wife, Audrey. The Cat in the Hat was the most recognizable character in his whimsical menagerie.

Forced to give up smoking for health reasons, he got a corn cob pipe, filled it with soil and planted radishes in it. When he felt like smoking, he watered the radishes with an eyedropper instead. The radishes flourishd and he lost the urge to smoke — perfect Seussian logic.
Judge: Castrate violent criminals

HOUSTON (UPI) — A state district judge has endorsed a proposal to castrate violent criminals as the strongest deterrent to crime.

State District Judge Michael McSpadden said he supports a plan by prominent Houston physician Dr. Louis Girard, to castrate violent criminals.

Girard announced the plan recently in a published paper, and espouses the idea as a quick and inexpensive way to discourage violent criminal behavior.

Castration long has been studied as a way to punish those who commit sex crimes but such plans historically have met with public objection. Girard's proposal includes not just sex offenders but all violent criminals.

While McSpadden approves of the proposal as a deterrent, he was not optimistic legislators would embrace the idea.

"If the increase in violent crime keeps the same pace, I think it's a real possibility in the future," he told The Houston Post in an interview published Wednesday.

"It would be a simple quick message out in the community that if you use violence, strong measures will be taken against you by society."

McSpadden said the surgery could be offered to convicted criminals as one form of punishment, although Girard said castration should be mandatory in some cases.

"For lesser crimes, partial castration or removal of one testicle or one ovary could be considered," said Girard.

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes Jr. and District Judge Ted Poe agreed the plan has merits. But both doubted it would be constitutional.

AIDS panel blasts politicians for failing to act on epidemic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 15-member bipartisan federal AIDS panel issued its report Wednesday, criticizing politicians at every level of government and society in general for treating the AIDS epidemic with indifference.

The National Commission on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome recommended major federal AIDS prevention initiatives, including greatly expanded drug abuse treatment, removing laws against purchase or possession of needles and syringes and a major overhaul of the health care system in general.

At a news conference releasing the two-year study, Vice Chairman Dr. David Rogers said, "This is your disease, America. Stop ignoring it."

Victim's parents want mandatory testing for AIDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The parents of Kimberly Bergalis, the Florida woman dying of AIDS contracted from her dentist, pleaded Wednesday for mandatory AIDS testing and accused dentists of "being callous and insensitive."

George and Anna Bergalis held a news conference with the sponsor of AIDS testing legislation — Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif. — on the eve of a House hearing in which Kimberly is expected to testify in favor of AIDS testing for health care workers and patients.

"Kimberly has given up her life for this," said Bergalis. "If you could, you'd use the estimate on this case and cast their opinion on this."

Dannemeyer's bill would require medical and dental workers and patients to be tested for the AIDS virus and hepatitis B.

An infected health care worker would not be allowed to perform invasive procedures and surgeons could test their patients for AIDS without their written consent, under the bill.

Scarlett, Rhett receive review to make all cry

About 110 members of SIUC faculty and staff who work on WKU Row were treated to a picnic luncheon Wednesday by the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. The fraternity invited employees from the Chancellor's office, Health Service, payroll, disbursements, purchasing, ROTC and the General Area office to the luncheon, which approximately 70 of its members cooked for and met with them.

"I really enjoyed the picnic," said Donna Lipe, typing clerk III for payroll, "like that for us before. I really really enjoyed the picnic." She said she was impressed.

"I've been here for eight years and no one has ever done anything like that for us before. I really really enjoyed it," she said.

Stephan Doowore, chairman of the event, said it was such a success that the fraternity is planning to do it again next semester and next fall.

However, a senior in biological sciences from Wheaton, said, "It thought we would be a good idea to invite them over," he said. "We really enjoyed the picnic."

"We'll make it into a semi-annual event," he said.

Steve Berry, co-chairman of the event, said he and the faculty and staff working on WKU Row always see the fraternity members doing things for the University.

"They have a good news: of tomorrow being another day."

"Scarlett: The Sequel to Gone With the Wind" will be screened Monday night at 8 p.m. at the Champaign Public Library. The sequel to "Gone With the Wind" was released in 1939 and stars Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara. The movie follows Scarlett's life after the Civil War and her pursuit of true love.

"I don't know what to say about the movie. It's just so good," said one attendee. "I've watched it a couple times and it never gets old."

"I'm excited to see it again," said another attendee. "I love the story and the characters."

The screening is part of the Library's ongoing film series, which features classic films from various eras.

The admission is free and open to the public. For more information, please call the Library at 217-398-3750.
The Classified Ads section is designed to help you place a classified ad in the Daily Egyptian. Whether you are buying or selling, this section provides a platform to reach a wide audience. To ensure your ad is successful, consider the following tips:

1. Clear and Concise Title: Make your title attention-grabbing and descriptive. Use keywords that will help potential buyers or sellers find your ad.

2. Complete Details: Provide all necessary details about your product or service. Include specifics like condition, size, location, and contact information.

3. High-quality Images: If possible, include images of your product. Visuals can significantly increase the appeal of your ad.

4. Pricing: Be clear about the price or the range of prices. If you're selling, clearly state the price. If you're buying, indicate if you are open to negotiation.

5. Contact Information: Include a phone number or email for interested parties to contact you.

6. Call to Action: Encourage potential clients to take action by including phrases like “Act now!” or “Contact us today!”

7. Timeliness: Post your ad when it's most relevant. For example, if you're selling a holiday gift, post it during the holiday season to reach potential buyers.

8. Follow-up: Be prepared to follow up with potential buyers or sellers. This shows your commitment and can lead to a successful transaction.

By following these tips, you can increase the visibility and effectiveness of your classified ad in the Daily Egyptian. Good luck with your advertisement!

Golfers' war of words makes Cup no easy Ryder

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — European Ryder Cup captain Bernard Gallacher said Wednesday he was surprised any team not will have had enough on-site practice prior to Friday’s opening matches.

Gallacher thus joined the list of those who have been offended by one thing or another since the week began — further deteriorating the sportsmanship on which the Ryder Cup was originally based.

American captain Dave Stockton had already grumbled about what he perceived to be cockiness on the part of the European players and some of the participants have expressed concern over the site of the competition because of its remote location.

Both sides, meanwhile, put in a near-last-day of practice prior to the start of the 25th renewal of the Ryder Cup matches. The Americans are seeking their 1st victory in the bi-annual event since 1983.

Thunderstorms roamed the coastal region Wednesday, but the weather was expected to stay clear leading up to Friday’s start.

None of the European players had seen the long and demanding Ocean Course until this week.

In April, St. Louis, other members of the American team to think their opponents will be at a disadvantage.

Although that seemed to be a reasonable assumption, Gallacher appeared to take personal offense and even prepped some notes from which to speak prior to meeting the media.

"I can’t remember any American team coming to a seaside course in Britain before the match," Gallacher said.

"That was important that I came here a year ago to get a feel of the place."

But they were busy trying to make the team and after discussions we felt it was not beneficial to come over.

"It was not an easy logistical operation when we live 5,000 miles away. I am slightly offended by people saying that we are ill-prepared."

Gallacher’s remarks came after Stockton had rebuffed previous comments from England’s Nick Faldo, who said he was disappointed American golfers would not recognize the Europeans were better.

"I’ve been on two teams (as a player during the 1970s)," Stockton said, "and never been on a losing one. I don’t intend to be on a losing team now. It bother me to hear the Europeans saying they are better. We’ve not yet to let our golf clubs do the talking.""}

New players to make difference, St. Louis looking for Norris title

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Last season, the St. Louis Blues finished the NHL's regular season with 105 points, missing a division title and first overall ranking by a single point.

That obviously wasn’t good enough.

Just nine of the 18 skaters return from the St. Louis squad that sported 105 points in 1990-91. Only six of the top 12 forwards and six of the top 12 defensemen return.

"We made a few changes, but we believe we have benefited the St. Louis Blues," said Brian Sutter, voted Coach of the Year in 1990-91, "we want to have a good team."

Three of the 11 who departed were from.ArrayAdapter, as Paul MacLean, Harold Snepsts and Rick Meagher all retired. Scott Stevens, an All-Star defenseman was lost to compensation for the Blues' signing of winger Brendan Shanahan from New Jersey.

To help compensate for the loss of Stevens, the Blues then traded forward Rod Brind’Amour and center Dan Quinn to Philadelphia for defensemen Murray Baron and center Ron Sutter.

The key newcomer was Baron, a rugged player who is just 24. The Blues also are auditioning three more defensemen — Rob Robinson, 24; Dominic Lacovoy, 23; and Jason Marshall, 22.

The Blues again should be strong offensively. Scoring machine Brett Hull, who tallied 86 goals last season, returns along with center Adam Oates, who scored more than 100 points in 1990-91.

"This is a new year, and we want to get to the Stanley Cup," Oates said.

"We think we have a good team," said Ron Sutter, 30-year-old right wing who has acquired by the Blackhawks in a trade with Toronto following his stint with Team USA in the Canada Cup.

Millen traded to Rangers, may replace Richter in goal

CHICAGO (UPI) — Veteran goaltender Greg Millen, his career in limbo since early last season, received possible new life Wednesday when the Chicago Blackhawks traded him to the New York Rangers for compensation.

Millen, 34, played in only three games for the Blackhawks in 1990-91 and still has one year remaining on his contract, worth $290,000. He again did not fit into Chicago’s crowded goaltender plan this season and left training camp for his Ontario home on Monday.

"The Rangers’ top goaltender, Mike Richter, played out his option last season and did not report to camp Tuesday following his stint with Team USA in the Canada Cup. He is expected to report Thursday, strictly on a tryout basis, until he is replaced," Millen’s backup John Vasbinder reportedly has been on the trading block since losing his starting spot to Richter.

Millen’s 13-year NHL career began in 1977, when he was selected in the fourth round of the amateur draft by Pittsburgh. After nine years with the Penguins, he spent four seasons in Hartford, parts of six seasons with St. Louis and 18 games with Quebec before being acquired by the Blackhawks March 5, 1990, during their playoff drive.

Millen played 10 regular-season games with Chicago in 1990 and 14 playoff games.

Oates said, "We think we have a good team.

"We have a job to do and we do it," Richter said. "We take the pride in it."

"Rookie center Nelson Emerson could make a strong showing this season," Sutter now has to meld this new bunch into a winning unit.

"The team’s exceptional work ethic and the knowledge that they came close to winning the Norris Division last season should prime the Blues for success," Sutter said.

"But after years of being the laughingstock of the NHL, the Norris Division rate as possibly the best in the league.

"The Rangers’ top goaltender, Mike Richter, played out his option last season and did not report to camp Tuesday following his stint with Team USA in the Canada Cup. He is expected to report Thursday, strictly on a tryout basis, until he is replaced," Millen’s backup John Vasbinder reportedly has been on the trading block since losing his starting spot to Richter.

YOU MAY SEEK A REFUND OF $1.00.

Who is eligible?

All students who pay the student activity fee for the Fall Semester 1991, will be eligible for a refund.

Why will I be eligible for a refund?

One dollar of your student activity fee goes to fund this campus’ membership in the Illinois Student Association. ISA’s policy requires that its fee be both refundable and authorized by a campus-wide student referendum.

How much is the refund?

The refund is one dollar and will be paid from those funds received by ISA from this campus. Until all refunds have been processed these funds will not be used by ISA and will be kept in a separate account.

What happens to my dollar if I don’t seek a refund?

All dollars collected from students who don’t seek a refund will be used to fund the operations of the Illinois Student Association such as rent, equipment, and supplies for its office in Springfield, salaries for its staff, and travel expenses. ISA represents students in the legislature and works to ensure that students’ interests are considered and protected as public policy is developed. Over 95% of ISA’s budget comes directly from Illinois students to ensure accountability to students and independence from others. ISA is non-partisan and does not contribute to electoral campaigns or political parties.

Is there a deadline?

Yes. Requests must be received by October 15, 1991.

How do I get a refund?

Any student wishing to receive a refund may fill out a request form at the Undergraduate Student Government or the Graduate & Professional Student Council office located on the third floor of the Student Center— or contact ISA at:

This year 250 players—a 40 percent increase from 1990—have participated in the tournament.

Khan said he expects the teams to improve even more.

The tournament’s purpose is to give all students a chance to interact with each other.

Asher Bandukwala, ISC internal affairs vice president, said the 1991 tournament has showed players playing to the spirit of the game.

The tournament has drawn good crowds including foreign and American students and Carbondale residents interested in soccer, he said.

Bandukwala said he is not sure who the tournament favorites are.

"The tournament is still open," he said. "Last year the teams were confident of which team would win. This year the competition has improved. The teams are using different playing techniques."

Bandukwala said ISC hopes to open the tournament to the SIUE and Springfield campuses in 1992. Last year, Kuwait was the champion. The team is again in the final, but this time under the new name United Arab Emirates.

Sophomore Salem Alkaibi, captain of the team, said it will be more difficult to win the tournament.

"We will have a hard time against Malaysia," Alkaibi said. "The competition is different from last year. The teams have improved.

"My team plays well as a team. I can't single out any player and I will play just as well."

Graduate student Fred Mehdian, who plays for the United Nations club, said his team has played well so far and has a good chance of winning the tournament.

"We have a good defense and offense," he said. "Everybody on the team knows each other. I expect us to score a lot of goals."

United Nations beat North America and Europe 1-0, and in the quarterfinals they won 1-0 against Palestine.

United Arab Emirates will play Malaysia in the final semifinal at 10 a.m. Saturday at the intramural soccer fields. The United Nations Africa game will immediately follow.

Third place playoffs will continue at 1 a.m. Sunday and the championship will be at about noon. Admission is free.
