Bombing case poses defense dilemma

Right to trial by jury:
Top lawyers hesitant to represent accused in Oklahoma mass murder.

Los Angeles Times

OKLAHOMA CITY—It promises to be the biggest mass murder case in American history, with accused bomber Timothy McVeigh likely to be charged with killing more than 150 persons, yet many of the nation's most celebrated criminal defense lawyers want no part of this latest trial of the century.

"This crime is so evil, so senseless that I wouldn't want to engage my talents in defending this client," says New York attorney William Kunstler who is engaging his talent to defend the World Trade Center bombers. "I have children too," he added.

Houston attorney Jack Zimmermann, who helped represent the Branch Davidians in Waco, Texas, said he, too, prides himself on taking on loathsome defendants, but not the accused Oklahoma City bomber.

"I have a Marine Corps background, and I have two sons in the Marine Corps, and there was a recruiting office in that building. I would not represent someone who engaged in treason or a direct attack on the government," he said.

Finding a qualified defense lawyer to represent the accused Oklahoma City bomber promises to be only the first complication in a criminal case that has no parallels in U.S. legal history.

The grim TV footage of bleeding babies will make it hard to find jurors anywhere, let alone in Oklahoma, who can approach the trial impartially. The judiciary itself will be tested since its members were among those who were attacked. And federal prosecutors will be moving into somewhat uncharted territory since they will be relying on new death penalty provisions added to the law in the 1994 crime bill.

Indeed, far from the multiple shootings and child killings that have become almost routine in recent years, legal experts say the Oklahoma City bombing case seems destined to enter a hypercharged zone of national outrage matched, if ever, by the Lindbergh kidnapping case in the 1930s or the Rosenberg spy case of the 1950s. In both cases, the defendants were convicted and executed, but questions were raised then, and later, about whether the accused received a fair trial.

Neckers honored by society

Program offers fresh soft drinks

By Carey Jane Atherton

Designated drivers can now get free soft drinks at 31 Jackson county liquor establishments by flashing the yellow and black "It's Your Turn Card."

Robert Oakes, a health educator for the Jackson County Health Department, unveiled the new program at yesterday's Community Forum on Responsible Beverage Service.

Oakes said the Jackson County Health Department worked with the SIUC Wellness Center to expand its designated driver program. He said the program's funding came from a Department of Health Designated Driver Grant.

Oakes said the grant money has gone toward the purchasing of the designated driver cards, posters, coasters and table tents carrying the "It's Your Turn" theme. He said

He said the program is designed to inform the community of the importance of designated drivers, and provides easy access to nonalcoholic drink alternatives.

"I'm not too worried if people use the card or not, but if they have them they are thinking about it," Oakes said.

Miriam Link-Mullison, director of health education at the Jackson County Health Department, stressed the desire to inform people of the program's purpose. Link-Mullison said it is a designated driver program, not a designated driver program.

Carbondale high holds meetings on prom issue

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students and administrative officials of Carbondale Community High School held meetings this week to resolve differences stemming from incidents at last Friday's prom activities.

Three students were not allowed into after-prom activities on the high school campus, 300 N. Springer Ave., because they did not have the required stamps on their hands, DeWayne Kelly, dean of students, said.

Three other students were asked to leave because their baseball caps were kicked, or tilted to the side, a fashion popular among gang members, he said. Several after-prom attendees left with the students who were turned away.

Students dressed in black rallied at the school Tuesday to protest what they called unfair treatment of RWANDAN OFFICIALS ASK FOR INVESTIGATION — KIGALI, Rwanda—The Rwandan government scrambled to regain international respectability Thursday by inviting the world to investigate the horrors of Kibeho refugee camp—but it may have done as much damage as good with a macabre on-scene exhumation of bodies from mass graves. The president of Rwanda, government ministers and military leaders summoned diplomats, relief workers and journalists to the scene to argue that they had nothing to hide in last weekend's bloody rampage. President Pasteur Bizimungu called for the United States, the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and southern European countries to join in an international inquiry into the killings.

FIND CONFIRMS AFRICAN ADVANCEMENT FIRST — KATENDA, Zaire—Africans who lived about 90,000 years ago carved animal bones into barbed spear points and used these relatively sophisticated weapons to catch fish. A team of anthropologists has concluded. If they are right, their discovery indicates that technology reached this level of advancement in Africa about 75,000 years before it appeared in Europe or Asia. The findings, reported in Friday's issue of the journal Science, fit well with other evidence that anatomically modern human beings (people physically like those living today and presumably of comparable mental ability) evolved first in Africa, perhaps about 125,000 years ago, and then reached Eurasia much later, bringing their superior tool-making abilities with them.

AIDE'S UNAUTHORIZED ENTRY UNDER SCRUTINY — WASHINGTON—A member of District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry's security detail used an electronic key to make an "unauthorized entry" into the Board of Elections office Friday an hour after the office had closed for the day, several elections officials confirmed Wednesday. William H. Lewis, general counsel to the elections board, sent a hand-delivered letter late yesterday to Barry and to Sgt. Shakir Muslim, the head of the mayor's security detail, asking that the incident be investigated.

INSIDER TRADING EARNS ATTORNEY SEC FINE — WASHINGTON—In 1994, a 32-person team at Lockheed Corp. was briefed on "Project Aftershock"—a proposed merger with Martin Marietta Corp. that came to pass this year. Stephen H. Wagner, an attorney in Lockheed's California legal department, was not invited to the briefing. But according to a complaint filed Wednesday by the Securities and Exchange Commission, that did not stop Wagner from learning about the plan and using confidential insider information illegally to trade securities in Lockheed before the announcement of the $10 billion merger. Wagner, 60, agreed, without admitting or denying the allegations, not to violate securities laws in the future and to disgorge to the SEC more than $44,000 in illegal trading profits and pay a civil penalty of $42,000.

ANTI-REGULATORY MEASURE MOVES FORWARD — WASHINGTON—The Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday rubber-stamped controversial legislation designed to make it harder for federal agencies to regulate industry. The bill also would repeal the Delaney Clause, a longstanding statute heralded by environmentalists as the centerpiece of government efforts to protect the American public from cancer-causing food additives. The risk-assessment bill is the latest in a series of proposed statutes requiring the Environmental Protection Agency and a dozen other federal bodies to make extensive risk assessments and cost-benefit analyses before issuing regulations.

Community members will have an opportunity to ride through Shawnee National Forest as part of the River to River mountain biking trip which starts Monday, May 15 and extends through Saturday, May 27.

This will be the first year the trip will actually go from the Ohio River to the Mississippi River. The River to River Trail Society recently completed the trail to make the trip possible.

'Take Your Daughters to Work' day expands youngster's worlds

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

Today is the third annual "Take Your Daughters to Work" Day. Seven million daughters are expected to participate in the annual event sponsored by the Ms. Foundation.

The day is designed to encourage young women to achieve their goals and expand their self-confidence by having a firsthand look at their parents jobs — from administrators to civil service employees.

Jeannie Cook has been celebrating "Take Your Daughters to Work" Day since 1983.

Cook, a secretary for the Upward Bound Project, said her daughter Katie, 15, has come to work every time she has an open day.

This year, Katie has come to work with her four friends.

"Katie comes in when she is off school," Cook said. "She helps me answer phones and sort files."

Katie, a freshman at Goreville high school, is applying the skills she has learned from going to work with her mother. Katie, who wants to be a nurse, uses her computer skills at school.

However, the annual event is not just for daughters.

Cook, although she is not participating in today's event, said because both her children, Katie and her son Jamie, 20, come to work, they have a closer relationship.

Other SIUC employees will bring their children to work today.

Nancy Hunter Pei, director of Student Development, said she and several other members will bring their kids to campus for the event.

"We are very child-oriented up here," Pei said.

Pei, who participated in the annual event last year, said her daughter, Katherine, 9, will sit in on two meetings.

"She will get here late and I have two appointments in the afternoon," Pei said. "I think it is a real important experience for the children."

Pei said the office always has children running around because the Student Development encompasses Rainbow's End child care facility, located behind the Recreation Center, and Non-Traditional Student Services.

"I'm a scout troop leader too, so we always have children up here," she said.

Cook said because of good relations with her supervisors, her children are able to help out.

Cook has worked at SIUC for almost 20 years. In that time, she has worked at the School of Art and Design, Center for Basic Skills and the philosophy department. She has been at the project for over a year.

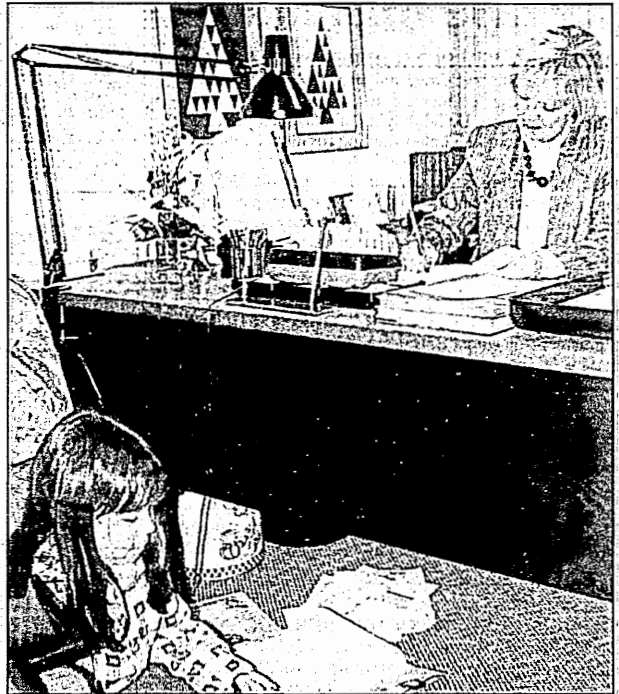

However, a lot of campus personnel are not participating in the event.

According to University Human Resource department, only two persons have inquired about the event.

Beth Firestein, from Women's Services, said the services support the event.

"We have been too busy to coordinate publicity for the event," Firestein said. "But we do think it's important."

Last year, 5 million girls participated in the nationwide event, according to the foundation.

SIUC Skydiving Club to perform for public

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

To residents of the surrounding area, the skies of Carbondale will be invaded today, when 10 parachutists land near the SIUC campus in an effort to recruit new members for their organization's cause.

Carbondale is not in threat of foreign invasion. Its skies will host the SIUC Skydiving Club's first spring event of the year between 12 p.m. and 6 p.m., as members of the group land in the Sam Rinella Cathie Downing, a senior in psychology from Belleville, said the event is to promote awareness and inform people about skydiving and the student organization.

"It can be a dangerous sport, but when you learn how to do it there are a lot of safety features involved to make it safe," she said.

Downing said there will be between seven and ten jumpers parachuting tomorrow.

license, which means they have completed over 300 jumps. Jumps will be made every half hour, with four jumpers at a time.

The plane will take off and land at Southern Illinois Airport.

Besides watching parachutists in action, interested onlookers can indulge in the club's bake sale or play numerous games in which a portion of the proceeds will go to the American Red Cross in an effort to help the Oklahoma Bombing victims.

"We wanted to let people know about the club and at the same time raise money for a good cause," she said.

"Last October when we had our jump, it was raining, but we are hoping for good weather this time."

The SIUC Skydiving Club has approximately 50 members, and has been active in the past year.

Downing, a skydiving student who has not yet received her class D license, said when she became interested in skydiving she didn't have a hobby and saw this as a perfect opportunity to become involved with the sport.

"It is total exhilaration," she said.

"It is a big self-esteem builder, because you say to yourself if you can do this, you can do anything."

Future pilots to preview SIU on Aviation Career Day

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Chicago high school students are flying to the SIU area on a Boeing 737 airplane to view the SIU aviation program Saturday.

This is the second year for the event which is part of the Aviation Career Day for minority and female students who are studying aviation or are interested in a career in aviation. The plane is scheduled to land at Southern Illinois Airport at 10:05 a.m. and will depart at 4:00 p.m.

David NewMyer, chairman of SIUC's aviation management and flight department, said the career day will enhance the student's knowledge about aviation.

NewMyer said United Airlines does not have enough minority employees.

"United Airlines must hire more minorities in their flight and maintenance department and SIU is trying to help them expose minorities to aviation," he said.

United Airlines will provide the plane that will transport the students and the SIU aviation program will host the students, NewMyer said.

Once students from Gage Park High School in Chicago and Chicago Vocational High School arrive in Carbondale, their day will be filled with briefs about aviation topics from SIU aviation clubs, the United Airlines senior vice president for flight operations, and airplane pilots.

The students previously participated in an essay contest describing their aviation goals, NewMyer said.

Two of the writers of the 12 best essays will sit with the pilots in the plane's cockpit during the flights to and from Southern Illinois. The other ten will have a chance to fly an SIU aircraft after arriving in Carbondale to get a feel of the plane's controls once in the air, NewMyer said.

"It's really exciting (for the students) because you get to see the landing and takeoff up close," NewMyer said. Diane Higgins,

Referendum on fee increase misleading

SOMETHING IS WRONG HERE. IN AN APRIL 10 Undergraduate Student Government referendum, students voted to approve a fee increase to cover SIUC's membership in a Washington, D.C. lobbying organization devoted to college issues, including better funding for higher education.

In the referendum, students voted to approve a 50-cent increase in activity fees to fund SIUC's membership in the United States Student Association. What many students may not have known is that such an increase would be entirely unnecessary in light of a similar fee hike the Board of Trustees approved in 1990.

ACCORDING TO JEAN PARATORE, ASSOCIATE vice president of student affairs, a $3.20 per semester fee increase went into effect in the fall of 1990. Twenty cents of the increase was earmarked for campus safety. While no official allocations were made for the rest of the money, $2 was expected to go to Registered Student Organizations, with the other dollar going to the now-defunct Illinois Student Association.

To give later administrations more flexibility in determining ISA's usefulness and deciding whether to remain in the group or redirect the money to causes deemed more beneficial to students, the trustees opted to leave that decision in the hands of USG officials.

WHEN USG ENDED ITS MEMBERSHIP IN ISA, the funds were put into the account that funds RSOs. USG president Edwin Sawyer said the purpose of the April 10 referendum was to determine students' receptiveness to USSA. According to Sawyer, the students' response would help decide whether to split the ISA money between student organizations and USSA — a decision on the initial resolution basically left up to USG.

However, the referendum question did not ask for a reallocation of funds; it asked students if they were willing to pay an additional 50 cents per semester for SIUC's membership in IUSSA.

Sawyer said the ballot was phrased as it was because it was a standard USSA referendum question — with wording provided by USSA — and USG was afraid to change the wording in case legality questions arose.

GIVEN THE CONTROVERSIAL NATURE OF THIS issue and the fact that Sawyer was free to do as he wished with the ISA money anyway, why didn't USG do anything to clarify the issue for students? An actual fee increase to support a lobbying group — however effective it may be — is a repugnant idea to many students. However, a change in the use of existing money that originally was intended to cover membership in a student lobby is an entirely different issue.

It would appear that either Sawyer and his administration intended to ask the board for a fee hike if students approved it and then chickened out in the face of controversy, or else they failed to research their options before turning to the students — an approach for which USG has long criticized University officials.

USE OF STUDENT-FEE MONEY IS A SERIOUS issue, and it is commendable that Sawyer decided to ask the students before making a final decision. However, an uninformed vote is almost as bad as a nonexistent vote.

We can only hope Sawyer is telling the truth now and our money will be used wisely. We pay enough in student fees without wasting cash on unnecessary fee hikes.

Controls unfair to firearm owners

On Monday, the DE ran an article about the Turner Diaries, a violently racist book. Since President Clinton is advocating a stand against "the angry voices" that are spreading hate in America, it would be wise to register all authors and editors and require them to obtain special licenses to publish literature. Government agents should be placed on editorial staffs of all newspapers and magazines to prevent the dispersal of inflammatory writings.

Sound stupid? So was the DE editorial that appeared the next day. It was a naive attempt to justify legislation restricting firearms. This archaic reasoning is not fitting to a University. Did anyone on the DE staff bother to find facts before generating this blather?

Understandable is confusion started when both sides of firearm debates spew statistics or give fabrication as fact. However, as this student understands, newspaper writers seek interesting stories; a national figure caught in an outright lie is interesting. Some writers even cover the truth of events.

Mike Royko, a Lincoln Academy Laureate, has written articles exploring world reality and how firearms carried by law-abiding citizens would not spell Death Wish-style vigilantism that many gun-toting, gun-fearing public figures cry about. When will those who advocate firearm bans understand that harassing law-abiding firearm owners does nothing to stop those who ignore laws in the first place? Even Sarah Brady acknowledges the Brady Law wouldn't have stopped Hinckley from his evil deed, although he had broken several laws.

Why are present firearm laws not enforced?

Restricting legal firearm owners is like restricting doctors from prescribing illegal drugs — pointless. Assuming concealed carry laws result in more homicides is as dumb as assuming people who dress provocatively will be raped. Will the editorial staff next accuse rape victims of bringing it upon themselves? Hopefully common sense shall prevail, and attempts at finding the truth of the firearms debate will begin.

Event helps students conquer stress

An exciting event is happening soon at SIUC. The 1995 De-Stress Fest is being held May 1, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium and International Lounge. This event, sponsored by Student Development, Non-Traditional Student Services and the Student Health Programs Wellness Center, is free to all and a great place to come to relieve tension while learning ways of educating and empowering yourself to reach your full potential in mind, body and spirit.

I attended the De-Stress Fest last year and really enjoyed the mixture of activities offered. Most of the same activities offered last year (massage therapy sessions, tai chi, chiropractic demonstrations, bio-feedback, stress management, visual and auditory displays, pot-making and more) will be offered this year along with a variety of exciting new activities.

I, and other students who came to last year's Fest at the Rec Center, really gained from being there. The atmosphere was happy and light-hearted, with people readily sharing ideas and techniques to help empower and create a higher quality of life. I think when people take control of their lives with the help of the tools and techniques such as those that will be available at the De-Stress Fest, it can't help but ripple out into the overall social fabric and do its part in creating a better world. For these reasons and more, I'd really like to see a lot of people come on out and take part in this wonderful event taking place May 1. Hope to see you there.

Porn degrades women, prompts assault

In response to Ms. Martin's and Ms. Meier's letters: No, I do not look at women the same way that I would look at a car but I would bet that a potential rapist would. They have no respect for a woman's feelings. I believe that is why they look at pornography. Because the pictures have no feelings, the pictures cannot refuse, and the rapists can see whatever they want.

And no, I haven't been raped. Although some of my closest friends have been raped and molested. Does that mean I should remain silent because I don't know how it feels to be raped? I believe that use of pornography and lack of respect for women are just symptoms of a much larger disease. I would like to say that I have the cure but I don't. These symptoms will most likely lead us to a cause for sexual assault. Through it all, I wish you luck in finding a cure.

Amendment allows debit card with inclusion of local business

By Dave Mack
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government resolution which stated that an Illinois Senate bill would make the debit card illegal at state public universities was incorrect.

An amendment to proposed Senate Bill No. 93 would allow a student debit card system at state public universities if local businesses are given a fair opportunity to participate.

The bill would prohibit debit card usage only if local business were excluded from the program, according to Lee Blankenship, owner of the 710 Bookstore.

"You can do your debit card but when you do your debit card, it needs to be extended to other businesses," he said.

Undergraduate Student Government is not against the bill and supports a debit card system that would allow students to choose where they take their business, said Matt Parsons, USG chief of staff.

"How anyone can be against this bill is beyond me."

Lee Blankenship
owner, 710 Bookstore

"The amendment is generally good," he said. "There's a need for a debit card program at this University."

According to Parsons, students support the debit card concept.

"The students at this University want the debit card to stay in place in this state," he said. "We passed our bill last night to make it clear to the House how the students feel," he said.

The debit card program that was briefly in place at the beginning of the last fall semester met with good responses, Parsons said.

"The people who used it were very happy with the service and were very disappointed when it was gone," he said.

Blankenship is a major proponent of the amendment to the senate bill which passed.

"It's a fair bill," he said. "It's especially fair to the students. It allows local merchants to participate (in the debit card program). Any other way would be a monopoly."

"How anyone can be against this bill is beyond me," Blankenship said. "The only motivation I can see is greed."

Blankenship said he would have fought the bill if it didn't allow local merchants to participate.

"If it wasn't shared, (it wouldn't be) fair to the students or the community," he said.

"This bill is ten times better for the students because it will allow them to shop where they want to."

Local merchants simply want a fair shake in the debit card program, Blankenship said.

"We're not asking for any advantages at all," he said. "The merchants are willing to pay a fair price for (the University) to extend the credit."

Federal office space freeze reflects cuts

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The General Services Administration Thursday imposed a nationwide freeze on leasing federal office space.

The move was seen as an effort by the GSA, the government's chief rent negotiator and landlord, to keep pace both with looming congressional cuts to federal agencies and the Clinton administration's efforts to reinvent government.

"This is an attempt to ensure that we don't have excess space," said Nancy Carver, a GSA spokeswoman.

an. "We're going to try to figure out where we're going to have growth and where we'll have downsizing. Then we'll go to the agencies and ask them to look at their requirements, to see whether or not they need all their space or could do some consolidation."

Attorney general to host conference today

Illinois Attorney General Jim Ryan will chair a domestic violence conference at SIUC today.

The conference is the last in a series of three in which Ryan will listen to recommendations for protecting and assisting victims of domestic violence, according to Dan Curry, spokesman for Ryan. The other conferences in the series, titled "Domestic Violence: Assessing the Crisis and Looking for Solutions," were held in Springfield and Chicago.

"Basically, we are getting people related to domestic violence together to let them know this is an issue that is important to the attorney general," Curry said.

"He will talk with them about different pieces of legislation he is working on."

The conference will run from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Lesar School of Law Auditorium and is open to the public.

Link-Mullison said. Link-Mullison said the health department's stance is that intoxication is not acceptable.

She said they are not saying alcohol is unacceptable, but rather that people must be responsible about it.

"What we need to do now is to get people to actively use the cards," Link-Mullison said.

She said people can pick up the designated driver cards at the Wellness Center, participating liquor establishments, the Jackson County Health Department, or in the First National Bank parking lot tomorrow night.

Link-Mullison said - the Normal Police Department's Breath Alcohol Testing Mobile or BAT Mobile will be in the First National Bank parking lot from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. administering breathalyzer tests to anyone who would like to try it.

Link-Mullison said only first names will be asked, and participants will not have to reveal their age.

Sergeant Scott said the Carbondale Police Department also will be in the parking lot giving breathalyzer tests.

MARTIN C. WEN — The Daily Egyptian

On cue: Tony Giacchetti, a junior in radio and television from Lemont, spends time playing pool Thursday morning at the Student Center Bowl & Billiards. Hours there are Monday-Friday 8 a.m.-11 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m.-12a.m., Sunday 12 p.m.-11 p.m.

Pottery and an herbal tea

The Arts Cafe combines music, food and crafts

By Benjamin Golshahr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Arts Cafe evolved through SPC as a place where people can relax, study or socialize while drinking herbal tea or coffee.

This cafe will feature live music, a storyteller and the opportunity to create an original piece of pottery using an ancient Japanese method.

Zen Buddhist monks of Japan developed a special pottery-firing technique that involves removing the still-glowing pottery from a blast kiln and placing it in a barrel full of combustible materials.

An explosion results in this transfer which melts the special glazes into the pottery, said Lynn Sutton, a senior in fine arts from Effingham. The barrel is then covered and the oxygen inside is consumed by the heat of the blaze.

"The lack of oxygen (in the barrel) and the production of carbon create a chemical reaction within the glazes that produce the metallic colors and lustrous commonly found in American Raku," she said.

Sutton said the Raku pottery is primarily meant as a work of art, for utilitarian purposes such as eating and drinking.

"The extreme temperature change from the kiln to the barrel causes the glaze to crack," she said. "Water gets into the cracks in the glaze and the pottery will eventually dissolve after repeated use."

In addition to the Raku firings, this Art Cafe also features live music by Mr. Wonderful and the Magdaddies, a local group that specializes in swing, blues and jazz.

"It's kind of a whimsical name," said horn-player Kevin Cox. "We're not really sure who Mr. Wonderful is. Sometimes I accuse the piano player of it; sometimes he accuses me."

Cox said one of the key characteristics of the swing music that Mr. Wonderful plays is the bass melody.

"This type of music is mainly swing with the walking bass," he said. "That's what they used to call it back then (fifties). The bass is kinda walking up and down the fretboard."

Cox, Bob Pina, the keyboardist, Jim Wall, the bassist, and Charlie Morrill, on drums, make up Mr. Wonderful. Phillip Brown, an assistant professor in the School of Music, plays bass with the group on half their gigs in lieu of Wall.

Mr. Wonderful has been together for more than 30 years. During that time the members of this four-piece band have been in other musical projects with such greats as Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows, Shawn Colvin and Coalkitchen.

Currently all the band members jam in St. Stephen's Blues and 4 On The Floor.

Cox, who has been playing in night clubs since he was 16, said his favorite thing about playing swing music is that it brings joyful tears to his eyes.

"It tears me up to hear the music and it tears me up to play it," he said. "It gets rid of all my worries — it's fun to play."

Like the first, this Arts Cafe will have free refreshments on hand including iced herbal tea and coffee.

Also, storyteller George McIntosh will spin yarns and tall tales.

McIntosh has performed in Herrin's "Past to Present" festival, the Mohammed Civil War Re-Enactment and the Spring Grove Storytelling Convention.

Anyone interested in attending the Arts Cafe can do so tonight at 8 p.m.-11 p.m. on the West Patio of the Student Center. Admission is free.

Director gives 'The Underneath' 'depth'

By Jack Mathews
Newsday

remake of a fairly routine '40s film noir.

"The Underneath," adapted by Sam Lowry and Daniel Fuchs from both the novel and screenplay behind Richard Siddmak's 1949 "Crisis Cross," is a highly stylized potboiler in which Peter Gallagher takes on the role played in the original by Burt Lancaster. No, Gallagher can't hold a candle to Lancaster. But what "The Underneath" lacks in star power, it makes up in finesse and psychological depth.

The cliches of film noir are great for creating atmosphere, but hell on character development.

(now SIUC) was precipitated by a phone call from the dean of the College of Education.

"I was told that President Shryock wanted to hire a Ph.D. to head the chemistry department at the school," Neckers said. "The first thing I said was 'Where's Carbondale?'"

Neckers was born in a Chautauqua County, New York, just southwest of Buffalo, and said he had never been as far south as Carbondale.

He had earned his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois, which was a full liberal arts university offering advanced degrees in many disciplines, and says this had a negative effect on his thinking about SIUC. "I really didn't know what I was getting into when I accepted the position," Neckers recalls.

Neckers said the students in the department were lacking in basic chemistry knowledge. In one of the first classes he taught here, he said most of the students received Ds or Fs.

Realizing the situation, Neckers said he talked to Shryock about giving the students incompletes.

"I was sure they could do better after they got the basics down," he said. And, he said, they did.

Roger Beyler, who was hired by Neckers in 1959, said that's the type of man Neckers is — firm, but fair.

"He is a man with good standards, and he holds people to those standards," Beyler said. "When we was the chairman of the department, he held everybody to high standards — students as well as faculty. But he was fair and understanding."

Neckers said he was the first Ph.D. faculty member hired by the University. The science department was in Altgeld Hall, although he said he was promised by Shryock that a new building would be built to house the sciences.

The new building, Parkinson Laboratory, was completed a few years later.

"The students packed their equipment in bags and moved everything themselves," he said. "We used a hay cart pulled by horses to move some of our heavier equipment."

Because of his U of I education, Neckers said he was no fan of schools whose mission was turning out teachers, so he started encouraging some of his best and brightest students to attend graduate school instead of immediately beginning their teaching careers.

One of the students Neckers said he encouraged to go on to graduate work was a young man named Fred Basolo, who came from a coal-mining family in the tiny community of Coello in Franklin County.

"When I mentioned graduate school to Fred, he asked me what it was," Neckers said. "Well, he was accepted into the University of Illinois inorganic chemistry graduate program, where he became one of their prize students."

Neckers said Basolo went on to receive his doctorate and joined the faculty at Northwestern University. There his research gained him world-famous notoriety.

"Some years later my wife and I were in Italy and we stopped at a university," he said. "They soon found out I taught Fred, who they called Frederick."

"It turned out because Fred's parents were from Italy, he was somewhat of a celebrity," Neckers said.

The Italians soon broke out the wine, and one of the students brought him one of the books Basolo had written.

"Chemists don't see immediate gratification for their work," he said. "But hearing what these people thought of Fred, well, it is definitely one of the dividends of my job."

Neckers said he had his hand in the small teaching school advancing into an institution which offered more than the one education degree.

"By 1943 we had grown and could have offered advanced degrees in many areas," he said.

Conrad Hinckley, president of the Southern Illinois chapter of the ACS, said Neckers is getting the honor from the society because they want to thank him for giving those who followed a good base from which to work.

"He built the department," Hinckley said. "He helped set up the curriculum. He spent his last year as chairman in 1966 making the transition smooth for those who followed him."

Neckers retired in 1967, and has continued to make his home in Carbondale. During the hot, humid summers he retreats to a summer home on a lake in Michigan.

From time to time he's back on campus, too, in the building named for him.

"I attend a few of the seminars the chemistry department offers on Friday afternoons, but sometimes I have no idea what they're talking about," he said with a laugh.

Since his retirement, Neckers has been collecting a retirement check from the University, which is only fitting.

The check, you see, is part of a retirement program which Neckers helped to develop during the Depression.

and unpopular defendants," said Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin who represented Branch Davidian leader David Koresh, "but this guy (McVeigh) has got to be the most unpopular defendant in our history."

Thursday, McVeigh will appear for a pre-trial hearing before a U.S. magistrate in Oklahoma City, where his two court-appointed attorneys are expected to renew their requests to withdraw from the case. Wednesday, Magistrate Richard Howland said it was "premature" to transfer the case elsewhere in the 10th U.S. Circuit of the U.S. court system, which includes Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming. He also refused at this early stage to allow the lawyers to withdraw.

coordinator of aviation and transportation at Gage Park High School, said she believes the trip will give the students a broader concept of aviation.

"It will give the students the opportunity to fly in a huge aircraft which many have not done," Higgins said.

Students at Gage Park High School are informed about aviation classes available for seniors, she said.

There will be 26 students from Gage Park High School and each year the school will be attending the Aviation Career Day, Higgins said.

Michael Hogan, a senior at Gage Park High School, said he wants to be an airplane mechanic.

"I heard SIU has a great aviation program and I think the trip will be beneficial for us," he said.

Tim Milton, an aviation instructor at Chicago Vocational High School, said the trip will be a good opportunity to view the aviation program.

About 20 students from Chicago Vocational High School will be attending the Aviation Career Day and several students who attended last year's career day have applied to SIU, Milton said.

of Illinois where the trail ends.

Midway through the trip, at the 70-mile mark, there will be a one-night layover at Camp Ondessonk to give trekkers a chance to rest, Kobel said. A University van will carry all the gear for the group.

Josh Whitley, a junior in outdoor recreation from Carbondale, said this year's trip will not have hikers and will be more structured.

"Last year it was a democratic structure and we discussed the route with the group; this year we've got the camp sites chosen beforehand,"

Whitley said.

Trail conditions vary throughout the trip with 65- to 70-percent single-track trail, 15-percent gravel and 15-percent paved, Kubal said. Cost of the trip is $140 and includes food, a van with gear, maps and transportation to and from Carbondale. Deadline for registration is Tuesday May 2, with a pre-trip meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the adventure resource center in the Recreation Center. The River to River biking trip is sponsored by the Office of Intramural Sports.

Kubal will be in the Hall of Fame area in the south end of the Student Center Friday and Monday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m., and can be reached at 457-5870 for questions.

African Americans and met with Principal John Dively Tuesday and Wednesday to discuss their concerns.

Kelly said that while the administration labeled some clothing styles, including the kicked hats, rolled-up pant cuffs and certain color combinations as gang-related, students insisted they were just dressing in current fashions.

Students express concerns

"During the meeting, they expressed their concerns about the prom issue, about the students who were not allowed to come into the after-prom," Kelly said.

"They expressed concerns that I felt were legitimate concerns. They just felt that we should be concerned with other issues at the school."

Kelly said he agreed with the students that the administration may have overreacted to the situation.

"Maybe we overreacted to the thing about the gangs, but I think if we're going to react, it's better to overreact in that situation," he said. "We've been able to provide our kids with a safe learning environment, and that's what's important."

Milton McDaniel Jr., a senior at the high school, said both sides left the meeting with a better understanding of each other's positions.

"Basically, we came to an agreement that there are gangs in Carbondale," he said. "The gang problem in Carbondale might not be that bad, but the Gang Task Force in Carbondale may be making it bigger than it really is."

According to McDaniel, the administration said they would take a look at how to deal with clothing in the future.

Hat rule still in effect

"We came to a conclusion that the hats (rule) is still going to be in effect, but they'll be less concerned with things like the pant legs in the future," he said.

McDaniel said students expressed other concerns regarding treatment of African Americans at the high school. He feels Dively will take care of any problems, McDaniel said.

Kelly commended the students for their peaceful method of protest.

"These kids did a nice job of conducting themselves," he said. "These kids were organized, they showed more unity than most adults show. I think both (sides) left the meeting with a better understanding of each other."

McDaniel said he feels Dively now understands the students' concerns.

"I feel that he's opened his eyes to the situation, that he will do something about the situation," he said.

Students pleased

McDaniel said his fellow students also are pleased with the outcome.

"I guess they feel we got everybody's attention — not just Principal Dively, but everyone in the school — that we can get together and solve a problem and be non-violent at the same time."

Dively declined to comment.

Baseball's Opening Day: Special for players, fans

By Rob Parker
Newsday

DENVER—It snowed. It was cold. None of it, however, could suppress the excitement at Coors Field Wednesday night. In fact, nothing ever can on opening day.

Aside from the seventh game of the World Series, it's the biggest day on the baseball calendar.

So while players, managers, team colors, mascots and pennant chances may come and go, one thing remains constant: opening day is special.

For some fans, this opening day may be as special as they come.

Not long ago, this day didn't even seem remotely possible. The players were on strike.

The owners and players were bitterly battling over a new labor agreement.

Replacement players were set to start the season.

Indeed, it was a mess.

Then The Miracle happened. Somehow baseball made it back for the fans. Sure, there's still no agreement in place.

And it remains a fact that the owners and players still don't trust one another. Nonetheless, the game had to go on.

"This year has a really special feeling to it because we came so close to not having it," said New York Me's Hall of Fame radio broadcaster Bob Murphy before the Mets opened the 1995 season against the Colorado Rockies.

"And after going through the replacement-player thing for four weeks and suddenly here it come back really gives it a special feeling."

Usually, that feeling is one of anticipation. Wednesday, it was one of nervousness.

This opening day, baseball owners and players had a little more to be queasy about.

After halting America's pastime for 234 days, they weren't sure how the fans would respond.

"Opening day might be a little less special to a lot of people because it's late in the season, not the beginning of April, but the end," second baseman Jeff Kent said.

"A lot of fans were hurt by baseball."

"You just hope that the excitement is there. Fan support of baseball is important. Fans are part of the game like the baseball players are."

Not surprisingly, baseball fans responded. They usually do. And not just here because of the opening of $215-million Coors Field.

At stadiums all around this country, the fans came back even in places where they weren't opening a spanking-new stadium.

Day 2 might be something different. It usually is.

But opening day can't be resisted. It's special whether you go to the game with friends or just watch it on TV by yourself.

"Without a doubt, opening day is special," said Bobby Bonilla, who was pine-tarring some bats in front of his locker a few hours before Game 1 of 144.

"It always has been and always will be. I like to take part in the festivities and get your name introduced. So many wonderful things take place during the day."

My favorite opening day remains 1983.

It was the year Tom Seaver returned to the Mets after the 1977 trade that broke many Met fans' hearts.

That April day is still so clear. I was a sophomore at Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven.

Along with my three roommates, I journeyed down to Flushing. Shea was packed and the crowd was pumped. It was a cool but sunny day.

After warming up in the bullpen, Seaver walked from the pen to the Mets' dugout.

The crowd stood and cheered. Seaver waved his cap at the sellout crowd.

A true hero finally was back home.

I had goose bumps on top of goose bumps.

"The Mets lost their first eight opening ballgames," Murphy said. "They just couldn't win one."

Then when Tom Seaver came along, that all started to change. With the combination of Seaver and Doc Gooden, they've now won 10 of their last 11 opening ballgames.

"Seaver was something special on opening day."

Bobby Jones, of course, isn't Tom Seaver.

But the young right-hander must have been just as happy Wednesday night as Seaver was 12 years ago upon his return.

Jones, who gave up three hits and two runs in the first inning, had to be nervous starting on opening day.

Even a seasoned veteran like Seaver had to be nervous when he took that long trek to the dugout.

Baseball players, whether they admit it or not, get a butterfly-filled stomach for the first game of the season.

"I'm still a little nervous," closer John Franco said.

"I always get nervous on opening day. I love running out to that line when they call your name. It's a special feeling."

For Kent, opening day 1993 was his most memorable.

"It was a big thrill to be introduced at home as the starting second baseman," he said. "I was real proud of that day."

Opening day is mostly about memories. But it is also about expectations.

A true baseball fan always has hope about what could happen, no matter what the experts say.

No matter what the talent looks like on the roster.

And no matter what happened during the exhibition season. None of it matters on opening day. Everybody is on equal ground.

"Expectations of a good season, a championship season, somehow boils down to one game—opening day," Kent said.

"I know we play 144 ballgames, but I guess all the excitement occurs on this day."

Mets fans should be happy about their team's 1995 version. They were 55-58 when baseball froze Aug. 11.

With the additions of Brett Butler and Pete Harnisch, the Mets will be more competitive.

But making the playoffs? That's something people can say about every team on opening day.

"I just love everything about it," Bonilla said. "It's a special time."

Opening day, that is.

to succeed.

"I always liked sports and to keep in shape, but sometimes its hard to keep going," she said of her early morning routine.

"That's what a partner is for.

"If I don't show up, then I feel bad because I know Jorge is going to be there. He counts on me and I'm counting on him."

Most of Saturday's competitors have toned-down their workouts this week and have started resting up for the show.

Part of the final preparation means a drastic switch in diet, which has the bodybuilders scrambling to reduce their water and sodium intake.

Davis said the competitors likely started to watch their diets even closer than usual during the last two weeks.

"Carbohydrate depletion started last Saturday or Sunday and then they'll 'carb' load and deplete water until the day of the show," he said.

"They've got to reduce water and sodium to make themselves really cut.

"But the main goal the past 14 weeks is to get rid of fat and water."

The most intensified stage of the preparation comes on the actual day of the event, Davis said.

That's when a competitor can make or break himself by the routine they choose to follow.

"You wake up in the morning and have a little 'carb' and water until the morning session gets over," he said.

"Then, if you go and eat like a pig; you might not be as ripped and your abs (abdomen muscles) might not be there that night.

"The last thing is, you go in the pump room for 15 minutes before you go on stage and go through one of the hardest workouts of your life because it's tough to pump up that quick."

Prejudging begins at 2 p.m. Saturday and the Finals start at 7 p.m.

Tickets will be available at the door — $6 for the Finals, $3 for pre-judging, and $7 for both sessions.

Netters

for the Dawgs in the spring season, fashioning an 11-7 mark with seven consecutive wins.

"His wins against some of the top teams, like Wichita State and Tulsa, have been particularly impressive," Rowan said.

Rowan also likes his squad's chances in the tourney. "You never know, what could happen if we play like we have been playing lately," Rowan said.

Evansville

hit .400, scored five runs and knocked in four RBIs during that five-game stint. Cosgrove is hitting .206 overall.

Russell hit a three-run homer in a game against Indiana St. last weekend, which led to the Dawgs' only victory of the season. During the past week Russell has hit .409 and is currently batting .342 for the season.

Pitching Problems

It has been the same problem all year for the Salukis and the pitching has continued to struggle. SIUC resides in the MVC basement in team earned run average, as the pitching staff has an inflated 6.51 ERA.

Jason Kline continues to be the most consistent SIUC starter, as the Goreville native has a 3-1 record and a 4.67 ERA.

"Pitching continues to be an area that must improve for us to accomplish that goal, although I believe the talent is there to still do the job," Callahan said.

Conference Race

Creighton still holds a one-game advantage over nationally-ranked Wichita State, with Evansville and Southwest Missouri State a couple games back.

The Blue Jays take on Bradley, while the Shockers tangle with Northern Iowa, this weekend.

SIUC begins its four-game series at Evansville at 7:30 p.m., Friday.

Women's hoops signs second new recruit

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Saluki women's basketball team signed its second recruit for the 1995-96 season when junior college transfer Niki Washington put her signature on the dotted line.

Saluki head coach Cindy Scott signed Normandy High School senior O'Desha Procter, a five-foot nine-inch forward from St. Louis, last fall.

Washington played this year at Seminole Community College in Sanford, Fla., but has Division-I experience, as she played her freshman year at Houston.

The six-foot forward averaged 13.4 minutes, 3.7 points, and 2.8 rebounds during her freshman season that was cut short to 11 games, two of which she started, before suffering a shoulder injury and leaving the Cougars to play for the Belles her sophomore year.

As a junior college player, Washington averaged 13.3 points per game.

"We are fortunate to sign a player of Niki's caliber," Scott said. "With her injury and rehabilitation now behind, her best years are ahead."

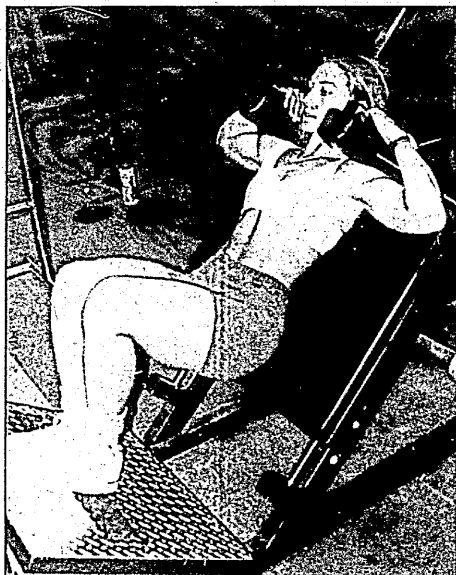

"She is very versatile, has good size, and will play the three spot for us. Her maturity and experience will be assets to our ball club."

As a senior at Seminole High School, Washington averaged 15.3 points and 7.1 assists per game for her 22-6 squad and also played for the school's softball and track teams.

Procter averaged 20.8 points, 10.3 rebounds, 2.8 assists, 4.4 steals per game as a high school senior. She shot 48.7 percent from the field and 63.9 percent from the free-throw line.

"O'Desha is a versatile player who can play either forward spot," Scott said. "She handles the ball well and can score from the outside or on the drive."

"She's another virtual unknown from the St. Louis area who benefits from great coaching."

Bodybuilders try to muscle way to Mr. and Ms. SIU

Shryock Auditorium is set to get pumped-up Saturday night when the Fifth-Annual Mr. and Ms. SIU Bodybuilding crowns will be handed out.

Seven women and 10 men are slated to take part in the flex-a-thon that gets underway Saturday afternoon with the pre-judging and resumes that night for the Finals.

Kevin Davis, a former competitor and President of the SIUC bodybuilding club, said this year's show has the makings to be one of the best on record.

"The women's competition is the best ever. Two of the women are faculty members in their 40's and are in excellent condition and the other girls look just phenomenal," he said. "The guys show should be great too, but this year's women are in great shape."

One of the women Davis is speaking of, Kendra Knaga, is entered in the competition for the second-straight year.

A junior in exercise physiology from Carbondale, Knaga said she takes the Ms. SIU competition seriously, but not to the point where she would ever resort to steroids or vitamin supplements.

"It's (winning) important, but I don't let it take control of my life," she said. "I don't go to the point where I'd do something extreme to win."

Knaga works out with a partner on a 2-days-on, 1-day-off cycle that gets her up at 5:30 a.m. on a daily basis. She does aerobics nearly every day, but said she might not be as motivated if it weren't for her partner, Jorge Rebellon, pushing her

Netters to take on MVC's best

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Riding a wave of confidence inspired by 4-of-5 conference wins late in the season, the Saluki men's tennis team heads to the Missouri Valley Conference tournament on Friday.

The Saluki netters are looking for a sixth seed in the conference, allowing them to bypass the first round bracket line-ups.

"If we get that six seed we play a four or a three team and we would have a chance at the upset," Saluki men's tennis coach Jeremy Rowan said. "But if we're seven or eight then we'll have to battle through a preliminary round first, and that's tough to do."

The 84th MVC tourney is scheduled for April 28-30 in Wichita, Kan., at both the Sheldon Coleman Tennis Complex and the Heskett Center, with the championship match slated for 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Last year's MVC tourney winner, Wichita State, capped the '95 season in the No. 3 position, with an 8-2 record in the conference. The Shockers' hold more MVC Tournament titles (18) than all other current conference opponents combined.

Top contender Tulsa boasts the No. 1 spot on both the coaches poll and the men's tennis standings, with eight first place votes and a 9-1 MVC record. The Golden Hurricane are 48th in the nation under the Rolex Collegiate Rankings. Top flight Chris Milliron heads up the competition for Tulsa with a 15-10 record to the tourney.

Indiana State rounds out the top three positions at the No. 2 spot, receiving one first place vote in the coaches poll and finished the season in second place with a 9-1 valley record. The Sycamores hacked out the best seasonal record in the school's history, and are backed by freshman standout John James, with an individual record of 31-6 in the top-flight position.

The Saluki netters, who ended the season in the No. 8 slot with a conference record of 4-5, will hope to capture their first title in five years with the help of Bojan Vuckovic in the No. 3 singles flight.

Road trip crucial for Dawgs

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For the Saluki baseball team, this weekend's four-game series at Evansville is crucial to the SIUC Missouri Valley Conference Tournament hopes.

The Dawgs are currently in last place at 5-11, while the Aces sit in fourth at 15-12.

With a good weekend SIUC has a chance to catch both Bradley and Illinois St., who are tied for seventh at 7-13 in league play.

Evansville is led by John A. Logan transfer Jamey Carroll who is hitting .345 and has swiped 20 bases. The Aces also don't hurt themselves on defense, as Evansville is the nation's 15th best team in fielding percentage at .968.

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said that because the Aces are good on defense the team is always in games and the Salukis will have to be solid fundamentally to win.

"Evansville has won many close games this season, and that is certainly a sign of a good team," he said. "We know our backs are up against the wall this weekend, as we have to have a solid series if we are to stay in the hunt for an MVC

Tournament spot.

Kratochvil Streaking...

After a slow start to the season, First Team All-MVC selection Tim Kratochvil has excelled in the last couple of weeks. Kratochvil hit .491 the past week and he has batted at a .424 clip in conference play.

He currently leads the Salukis with a .354 batting average, 52 hits and 37 RBI's. Kratochvil also has the longest SIUC hitting streak at 14 consecutive games.

Unsung
Brad Cosgrove and Mike Russell have quietly been filling in nicely to the Saluki lineup over the last few weeks.
