Direct loan cap dropped from budget

By Lori D. Clark and Donita Pully
Daily Egyptian Reporters

An appropriations bill for 1996, which includes a provision not to limit the direct student loan program, passed the U.S. House of Representatives Thursday.

The House approved an appropriations bill for the fiscal year 1996 federal budget Thursday. The bill was passed after Republicans dropped a 40-percent cap on the number of colleges that could participate in the direct student loan program, David Carle, spokesman for Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said.

"This turned out to be a victory for the students," he said. "This is the clearest victory so far."

Carle said the original bill would have prevented the other 60 percent of colleges not using the direct student loan program from participating in the program. Without the cap,

Congress passes 1996 spending plan

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Ending one of the most bitterly fought budget battles in U.S. history, Congress Thursday passed a far-reaching, $160 billion spending plan that represents a major achievement for Republicans who swept to power last year.

The bill's central achievement is to reverse a decades-old trend of ever-increasing federal spending and cut $23 billion from a wide swath of domestic programs, from subsidized housing for the poor, to the National Endowment for the Arts.

But while the 1996 spending bill was supposed to provide the spark for the Republicans' revolution of diminished government, it emerged instead as a monument to the scaled-back ambitions of the once-swaggering GOP.

The bill falls far short of the more audacious GOP goals of rolling back federal benefits, sending power back to the states, eliminating major programs wholesale and balancing the budget in a few short years.

And the legislation, which provides funds for dozens of federal departments and agencies whose budgets have been in dispute for seven months, includes some surprising triumphs for President Clinton, who just a year ago was teed student loan program. He said without the direct student loan program and the competition it offers, there would not be any reason for the guaranteed student loan program to offer better or improved services to students.

Pam Britton, director of SIUC Financial Aid, said student aid at the University would not have been affected by the 40-percent cap on the new direct student loan program because the University already participates in it.

Britton said not having a cap would keep the program strong and allow other schools to participate in direct lending.

"Other schools that want to join the program will be able to," she said. "It will strengthen the program, and schools will be able to choose."

Britton said the appropriations would allow the University to better serve students.

schools could switch from the previously offered guaranteed loan program to the direct loan program, he said.

The direct student loan program allows students to receive their loans through the mail, rather than from college bursar offices and other lending institutions.

Kevin Boyer, executive director of the National Association of Graduate — Professional Students, said having any type of cap on student loans would be "bad news" for students and taxpayers.

Boyer said the direct student loan program allows for competition between it and the previous guaran-

Fire hazard forces boats to be moved

By James Lyon
DE Features Editor

Richard Archer was told he was committing a fire hazard on April 24. The only problem was that the fire hazard was 23 years old.

Archer is an assistant professor at the School of Art and Design and is the founder of the Carbondale Boat Regatta that has been a weekend city and campus tradition on SIUC's Campus Lake for the past 22 years.

Many of the boats in the event are built by students because Archer uses it as his final exam in his design class.

But for the first time in 22 years, someone issued a complaint with the Carbondale Fire Department that the boats, which have always been stored in the Blue Barracks near Brush Towers and University Park, were a fire hazard.

Archer said he was notified at 3 p.m. on Wednesday about the fire hazard and said he was given until 7 p.m. to move the boats.

Archer said the boats were relocated to a building by the library storage facilities on McLafferty Road. The new site is an old hazardous waste storage facility.

"I was given the news at 3 o'clock, and by five there were about a hundred students helping us move

FAILED DETONATOR SAVES LONDON FROM BOMB — LONDON—Only a failed detonator saved London from a powerful Irish Republican Army bomb Wednesday night, ending speculation that several relatively weak IRA bombs recently meant the terrorist organization was pursuing a merely symbolic "calling card" strategy. Police said Thursday that the bomb, planted under a Thames River bridge, was large enough to have wrecked a major traffic artery leading into central London and to have killed or maimed any passersby or police who had responded to the scene after a warning a half-hour earlier. A detonating device did explode — at about 11 p.m. — but it failed to set off the explosive itself, 30 pounds of the chemical Semtex, attached to the underside of the Hammersmith Bridge.

ITALIAN COALITION SEEKS ACTION ON ECONOMY — ROME—Italy's new government faces a series of tough economic decisions that will indicate whether the precarious center-left coalition soon to take power can withstand the strain of tackling problems left unresolved during the country's recent period of political paralysis. Important decisions have been delayed during two years of sterile political maneuvering within the country's fractious political establishment. Issues such as electoral reform, corruption and control of the media dominated inconclusive debate, while economic reform lay mostly dormant.

CHINA, RUSSIA SAY TIES POSE NO THREAT TO WEST — BEIJING—China pledged support for Russia's battle to halt NATO expansion. Russia stood by China's territorial claims on Taiwan and Tibet. And after a day of mutual back-scratching, the two powerful neighbors Thursday said their strengthening alliance poses no threat to the Western World. A progressive thaw in relations between Beijing and Moscow that followed the collapse of Communist power in Russia has made President Boris N. Yeltsin's three-day visit here one of the warmest since the 1950s era of solidarity between what were then ideological twins. But the Sino-Russian love feast could raise eyebrows among Western powers, particularly the United States.

UNIVERSITY TAKES FINALS EARLY DUE TO THREAT — TAMPA, Fla.—Students at the University of South Florida have less time than they expected to prepare for final exams. The university recently announced it would move up the spring-term exams in response to a bomb threat. The student newspaper, The Oracle, received a letter last month signed by "The War Purgers." The letter threatened to blow up an administrative building and kill an unnamed white female professor on April 29, the day several finals were scheduled. The letter stated the threats would be carried out unless the university issued a public apology to a former faculty member, Ramadan Abdullah Shallah. He now is the leader of Islamic Jihad, a terrorist group in the Middle East, the university said.

BOOTLEGGERS RUNNING BOOZE INTO CANADA — BALTIMORE—Gun battles, rumrunners. Federal law officers hot on their trail. Reminiscent of an age-old racket, bootleggers are running booze to Canada, where stiff sin taxes are rekindling the lucrative trade that once dominated the Roaring '20s and the rumrunning days of Al Capone. In federal court in Baltimore this month, a Maryland liquor store owner was sentenced for his role in a busy, international smuggling ring. Federal agents say it is all part of a new trend for lawbreakers in the United States — boxing up cases of liquor and heading to the Great North.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA COLLEGE TO REMAIN OPEN — BUENA VISTA, Va.—Southern Virginia College, the two-year women's college set to shut its doors in May, has been saved by several members of the Mormon Church. The 130-year-old college lost its accreditation in January after failing to recover from financial ills and declining enrollment. A group of business leaders and educators, all members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, said they would take over its management — and its $4.5 million debt — to keep the school open. —from Daily Egyptian wire services

House passes same-sex marriage bill

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

Every legislator in the Southern Illinois area supported a bill that passed the Illinois House Thursday prohibiting same-sex marriages from being recognized in Illinois, a local representative says.

Eighty-seven representatives in the Illinois House voted for a bill that would not recognize same-sex marriages as legal marriages under state law. Thirteen representatives voted against the bill.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said every legislator south of Springfield voted for the bill because it was "painted as a moral issue."

Bost said there was also a financial reason for passing the bill because same-sex couples would receive tax exemptions and pensions that could place burdens on businesses.

Jeff Lucas, co-director of SIUC's student group Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, said he does not believe that legislators supported this bill for financial reasons. He said legislators that claim same-sex marriages would place a burden on businesses and the state by lowering insurance revenue are just making an excuse for their prejudices.

He said same-sex marriages would save the state money because partners would be more faithful to each other. He said because gay couples would be less likely to be unfaithful, the rate of sexually transmitted diseases would decrease.

Leonard Gross, SIUC School of Law professor and chairman of the Southern Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said there were no good financial reasons for passing the bill.

Gross said the bill was passed because gays and lesbians are an easy target. He said the ACLU was not surprised by the vote.

"We thought it was discriminatory and promoted hate towards gays and lesbians," he said.

Lucas also said the bill discriminates against gays and lesbians. He said there was no reason to pass this bill because same-sex marriages already are not recognized in Illinois.

Presently, Illinois prohibits same-sex marriages from being performed. The new bill would not recognize same-sex marriages from other states as legal marriages.

"I feel our government is not representing some of the wishes of its constituents," he said.

Kris Bein, a sophomore in social work from Chicago, said she thinks the bill is a slap in the face to all gays and lesbians in Illinois.

Bein, who was married to another woman in a symbolic wedding last month on campus, said gays and lesbians have as much respect for family values as heterosexual couples and should not be prevented from becoming a family.

"Everyone worrying about gays undermining family values is wrong," she said. "It's (the bill) just an added insult. The only reason for the bill is homophobia and ignorance."

The Illinois Senate passed the bill last month, and now Gov. Jim Edgar must sign it if it is to become law.

Eric Robinson, spokesman for Edgar, said the governor has not had a chance to look over the bill, and it would be premature to say what Edgar's position will be.

GPSC officers vow continued budget dialogue

By Signe Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Working with the University to understand how budget changes next year will affect graduate students and getting more graduate students involved with the Graduate and Professional Student Council are the main goals of the newly-elected council executives, GPSC members say.

Mark Terry, GPSC president-elect, said he is prepared to keep an open line of communication with campus administrators.

"I really intend on continuing to work constructively and be involved with the budget changes at the University," he said. "Also, we want to maintain the tight fiscal management that has resulted in good spending of student fees this year by GPSC."

Terry, who was elected by GPSC members in an unanimous vote April 17, said he will continue to work as closely with the administration on budget problems as this year's GPSC President Bill Karrow has. He said he will try to get council members involved with committees that discuss student fee increases and with the advisory boards that work on SIUC's budget.

This year, Karrow worked with SIUC Chancellor John C. Guyon on the University's budget when it was announced that several campus departments could be facing cutbacks because of a low enrollment.

The GPSC president chairs the bi-weekly council meetings and represents the council and graduate students on all University decisions.

Ralph Granger, vice president-elect for administrative affairs, said he will make University budget changes a main concern during his term.

"I want to particularly find out, in a helpful and cooperative way, what cuts have to be made and how they will affect the graduate students and Graduate School," he said. "I hope we can work with the University in a cooperative fashion, as opposed to the antagonistic way that has been done in the past years."

Granger said he also wants to get more minority students involved with GPSC next year.

"We only have one woman in a high position on the council, and there are no disabled students, no Hispanic students and no African-Americans on any of the committees," he said.

The vice president for academic affairs serves as a liaison between

Professors, pupils take petition to cinema department

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A group of SIUC cinema and photography students signed a petition at a meeting with some of their professors Thursday to express concerns that fees they pay every semester for equipment maintenance are not being used properly.

Dave Palamaro, a senior in cinema and photography from Hellertown, Penn., said most of the equipment made available by the Cinema and Photography Department is in bad shape and is not state-of-the-art.

He said cinema students pay $50 each for an equipment-usage fee every semester, but he said the equipment has not been improved.

"We pay our fees and would like to see new equipment every now and then," he said. "We feel like we are not getting a return on our investment."

Palamaro said the petition will be given to Gary Kolb, chairman of the Cinema and Photography Department.

There were about 40 students present at the meeting on the cinema sound stage in the Communications Building. Palamaro said the discussion was organized by about 10 students concerned with the state of cinema equipment and the future of the cinema program.

One of the faculty members at the meeting, Susan Duhig, assistant professor in the Cinema and Photography Department, said the petition is a good idea.

But she said students and parents also should write letters to the college dean and the SIU president requesting new equipment.

"This is a department with a lot of potential, and it deserves better equipment and better resources," she said.

Students at the meeting also discussed problems they have with some of the faculty members in the Cinema and Photography Department.

Palamaro said some instructors seem to lack enthusiasm when teaching their classes. He said the department could increase enthusiasm among faculty by having instructors work in their field every two years and by featuring more guest instructors.

He said hiring graduate students with more production experience to assist instructors also would help.

Duhig said that hiring graduate more experienced in the production field is not always possible. She said that when reviewing graduate applications, students with a lot of creative potential are admitted because they may contribute more to the program.

"If the department were to admit graduate students with more production experience, it may leave out some of our best applicants," she said.

Kevin Mendenhall, a senior in cinema and photography from Springfield, said the student-faculty relationship is very important in a cinema department because it is not a traditional field of study. He said he thinks there should be more hands-on training in classes.

Network news correspondents to visit SIUC

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Top television news correspondents to speak at SIUC today say meeting deadlines and constantly learning are the keys to being successful in the field.

The changing roles of news correspondents will be discussed at the Network News Correspondent Symposium on campus that will feature four leading news correspondents, a University official said.

SIUC alumni Jim Bitterman, ABC correspondent in Paris; Chris Bury, ABC correspondent on "Nightline"; Roger O'Neil, NBC News Denver Bureau chief and correspondent; and Walter Rodgers, CNN Jerusalem Bureau chief, will give their views at the symposium on the television news industry.

O'Neil said the most important element of being a news correspondent is time.

"One constant that drives everything you do is the wristwatch on your arm," he said. "One thing you can't ever be forgiven for is missing the deadline."

O'Neil said that being a correspondent is learning through experience. He said all news correspondents seek the same goal.

"We're all looking for that precious two minutes of air time," he said. "The reason you're doing this is to get on the evening newscast."

O'Neil said that in past years, he would not have recommended that students go into the broadcast journalism field. Now there is a huge new market being developed in television news because of 24-hour news channels, he said.

O'Neil said the quality of TV journalism is getting worse because news development tends to be going in the direction of what the audience wants to see instead of important news.

"You cannot alienate the public," he said. "Viewers are precious, and we have to listen to what they say, whether they are right or not."

Rodgers said one thing that is important in making it in the television news industry is drive.

"You gotta have fire in your belly," he said. "No matter how many times you get turned down or how many times you fail, remember, successful people have more failures than people who are failures."

Bitterman said it always is better to start off in a small industry.

"Starting in smaller industries, your failures aren't as apparent," he said.

WIDB suffering from a lack of communication

AS ABSURD AS IT SEEMS, COMMUNICATION seems to be the thing that is keeping a radio station off the air.

Wednesday night, WIDB received $15,000 from the Undergraduate Student Government to begin repairs and get the station back on the air.

But WIDB's chief engineer said this was not enough to get the student radio station back on the air and asked that USG stay out of the affairs of WIDB in the future.

Both parties, USG and WIDB, have accused the other side of not understanding what it is requesting or saying. But by trading accusations, neither side is helping solve the station's problem — getting back on the air after shutting down because of equipment failure in February.

There are legitimate points to argue for both sides, but now is the time to deal with the future of the station. WIDB has been a good learning tool for students in the past and has the potential to improve — but only if both sides begin to earnestly talk and listen.

The biggest contention for the groups is over what USG requires from the station in order to help it. USG said that WIDB has not followed the steps it set out for the station in early March.

WIDB said it followed the steps and that USG is asking the same questions over and over while putting more demands on the station.

BUT NOW THERE IS A BUDGET FOR THE station's repairs, and the requirements for the station are ready for discussion on how to fund them. The priorities and ideas in the budget demonstrate the groups' desire to improve the station.

USG asked WIDB to plan its equipment purchases to ensure it would not return in seven to 10 years looking for more money for equipment.

WIDB added the antenna system, a suggestion from USG, so it can transmit on campus and earn revenue from advertising. The antenna system will cost $25,000 and is awaiting the approval of the SIUC administration.

Unfortunately, these good intentions will fall by the side without cooperation between the groups. And both sides appear willing to end the accusations and begin talking.

The resolution passed by USG calls for the two groups to work with the administration on future funding.

Al Harper, WIDB's program director, said he has met with administration officials to find out what dates they will be free for meetings.

Everything seems to be in line for a solution to the problem. Now all that is needed is some communication.

Radicals make peace a difficult goal to achieve

I am writing in response to people who have asserted that I believe Jews do not have a right to live in Israel. There is no doubt that Jews have a right to live in Israel. How this became a question, I do not know. They should be able to live anywhere on the planet as equal and productive members of the human family. However, regardless of race, ethnicity, sex, etc., human rights cannot come under compromise as a means of establishing power, whether it be by Jews or Palestinians. Under no circumstances should we justify the killing of innocent people, particularly in the name of someone's nationalism. Extremists on both sides have made peace a dismal prospect. My concern as an American citizen is the crime, prisons, poverty, and lack of education that exist in the United States. It is, then, intelligent to ask "Why do we have billions to give to Israel, when our nation lacks proper health care and adequate public education for its citizens?" As Americans, we must have a continuing analysis of this question.

In terms of considering my argument about the legitimacy of Israel anti-Semitic. It's quite an oxymoron. Arabs are Semites, the Falasha Jews of Ethiopia are Semites (direct descendants of the prophet Abraham; peace be upon him). I'm not, as a result, anti-Semitic. (The Ashkenazi Jews of America and Israel are not, by this definition, even Semite. They are not related to the line of Abraham (p.b.u.h.). The use of the term 'anti-Semitic' is clever psychologically, but incorrect in its application to such a case. Something that is Semitic relates to the Afro-Asiatic language of the Semites or their bloodline. None of this would apply to the Ashkenazis. Therefore, the terrible treatment of the Ethiopian Jews by the Israeli government would qualify as anti-Semitic.

I am anti-tyranny and anti-oppression. I'm not ignorant of Palestinian terrorism. These small terrorist groups contradict the plight of the majority and represent the highest level of oppression in which the oppressed become similar to their oppressor. I am a supporter of human rights. I respect the sanctity of human life and wish that it was considered in the world's game of politico-economics. I'm not interested in personal attacks, but in the truth or falsity of my information. Before we delve off into name-calling, let's carefully and as unemotionally as possible analyze the facts.

Internet time limits needed to share resources

As a member of the Computing Advisory Committee, I feel compelled to respond to Scott Janz's April 18 letter regarding the implementation of time limits on Internet access. The CAC is a constituency-based committee with representatives from faculty, staff and student groups. Despite what Janz might think, the decision on time limits was not made by Information Technology. Instead it was a recommendation of the CAC after considerable study and discussion of a very real problem.

We are all in agreement that there are not enough access lines available for the number of potential users. Realistically, we cannot expect that there will be resources available to significantly increase the number of lines and modems in the near future. Because of that, there must some sort of rationing of the limited resources. One method is self-rationing: first come, first served. However, this system, which was tried, was abused. A significant number of the dial-up lines were being tied up by individuals for six or twelve or more hours per day.

The idea of rationing is not new in the academic community. In the library we are able to check out books for limited times. Some books in very high demand are placed on reserve and accessible for very short periods of time. Some reference books cannot be removed from the library at all. Should an individual be allowed to hide such a book so that he or she only has access to it? I don't believe so, nor do I believe that an individual should be permitted to keep a dial-up line open in anticipation of need later in the day. Unfortunately, some members of the SIU community felt that their needs outweighed those of others.

Janz is not prepared to pay for private Internet service. Neither am I, for that matter. His solution is for the University to spend more money for more modems and more lines. Is Janz prepared to pay larger student fees, higher tuition and higher taxes to raise the money so every student can have unlimited time to surf the Net? I suspect not. Therefore he is asked to share the existing resources.

Janz and all users should give the new system a chance and allow IT to gather data on usage under the new system to determine an effective balance of lines with limits of four hours and those with 30-minute limits.

Reader dislikes, not hates, Christians

This is a response to Andy Gillespie's letter that appeared on April 15. I want to clear some things up about our altercation last semester.

I was not "Christian bashing." I didn't harm one hair on your precious head, tempting though the idea may have been. I was merely expressing my opinion, but since I was angered because I was in a hurry and you kept pushing that tract on me, I generalized what I actually meant. I do not "hate" Christians. Hate is a very powerful emotion, and it would take far too much effort for me to apply it to such a large group of people. I merely dislike Christians and most everyone else who willfully chooses to bother me when I obviously have other things to do. I hold a dear space in my heart for Christians — right next to telemarketers and people who ride bicycles in the middle of the street.

Also, it is ludicrous for you to say that you "love" me and all mankind. Love also is a very powerful and private emotion, and to love everyone in general would make it impossible to love anyone specific. All I ask is that Christians (and telemarketers) employ some common courtesy and leave me the hell alone. I'll return the favor.

Let homosexuals live as they please

This is a reply to the Rev. Scott's April 18 letter about same-sex marriages.

First of all, I am happy for the Hanebrinks and Harbisons. It is rare to see good marriages last 60 years. However, I do not see how the marriage between two women (or two men for that matter) cannot last just as long, or be just as fulfilling.

I have to ask, isn't the institution of marriage about love? So what is immoral about two people loving each other whether they are homosexual or heterosexual? Whose morals are homosexual marriages against? Please don't tell me God's, because not all of us believe in your God.

In ancient times, such as the Greek and Roman empires, it was a common practice to have sex unions. The opposite sex was for procreation, while the one you truly loved was generally of the same sex. Are you saying these morals are inferior to your own simply because you disagree with them? Is it so hard to accept that homosexuals can be happy? Sometimes, if something does not affect you, you should not worry about it. Homosexuals let you live the way you want to, so why not let them live the way they want to?

Sean Lilly

Homosexuals can be Christians too

This letter is in response to Andy Gillespie's letters on March 28 and April 15 and his holier-than-thou attitude. How can anyone respect your opinion, Andy, when you feel the need to retract things you have already published? Do not insult the people of this University by trying to hide your bigotries behind Christianity because you are far from being a true Christian. I know many devout Christians who would prefer that you did not speak on their behalf. You commit blasphemy by using (your version of) Christianity as a staging platform for discrimination. You need to accept the fact that you are a gay-basher, only then can you cleanse your spirit and seek your own absolution. Your soul is tainted with delusions of superiority that limit your ability to grow as a person.

I think it is sad that you so subtly separate homosexuality and Christianity as if they were at opposite ends of some continuum. It makes me sick that you think you can fool us with your shallow, condensed "ing words of love and forgive. Homosexuals do not want your help" for their "sins." You obviously believe that homosexuals cannot be true Christians, a belief that is short-sighted and not very realistic. Homosexuality is a physical and emotional attraction to members of the same sex, not some rebel offensive bent on the destruction of the nuclear family. Your version of Christianity condemns people for loving each other. The day will come when you find out that someone very close to you is gay. What then?

School of Law enhances community

Law students at the SIU School of Law engage in community service activities year-round. During National Volunteer Week, April 21-27, it is appropriate to reflect on their contributions. Some examples of law student service are:

- Spearheaded drive to collect Christmas gifts for 200 children at the Migrant Workers' Camp.
- Planted trees at the Migrant Workers' Camp and offered clean-up services at the Women's Center.
- Organized and sponsored lectures and symposia on legal topics.

Served as volunteers to attorneys handling legal cases for persons in the Pro-Bono program.

Through the Learn and Serve America program, sponsored by the Corporation for National Service, law students learn by doing service work and earn credit. Some of their contributions this year are:

- Trained 100 elementary students in peer mediation.
- Talked with 76 students about conflict resolution.
- Gave talks on campus and in the community about conflict resolution.

■ Offered mediation services to the campus, courts and community.

Lawyers have a long tradition of community service. These future lawyers are already living with that tradition. During National Volunteer Week we salute their efforts and encourage them to continue.

Alternative Dispute Resolution Project coordinator.

scrambling to demonstrate his relevance as a Republican wrecking ball was swinging toward his legislative legacy.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., conceded: "It is not all the things we wanted. But it is a remarkable step in the right direction."

That mixed picture allowed both sides to claim victory Thursday when the House passed the omnibus spending bill by an overwhelming 399-25.

Only 20 Republicans and 5 Democrats voted against the bill.

The Senate followed suit with a vote of 88-11.

The White House said Clinton, who called the bill a "real victory for progress over partisanship," would sign the bill Friday morning.

the boats," Archer said. "The kids got on the phone and called everyone they knew. I am extremely proud of everyone involved, especially the students in the class."

Archer said employees of the Physical Plant helped the students load their boats onto trucks, but he said it was a pretty tedious process.

"I can't even tell you how many boats we moved, but we had to be careful because the students are really concerned about them," he said. "They would tell the movers that it has to go a certain way, or that it has to be placed at a certain angle in order to move it."

Karric Kimble, a junior in German from Rochester and a student in Archer's class, said her grade will probably suffer because of the move.

She said she had spent several weeks working on her boat, which was designed as "The Mystery Machine" van from the "Scooby Doo" cartoons.

Kimble said because the boat race is tomorrow, she only will have time to put together a two-dimensional boat.

Cliff Manis, Carbondale fire chief, said the fire department received a complaint about the boats being a fire hazard because they were blocking the halls in the buildings.

Manis said the department turned the matter over to John Hicks, a safety officer for the center for Environmental Health and Safety.

Hicks determined that a fire hazard was present and said the boats needed to be moved.

He then helped Archer and the students find an alternative place for the boats.

Archer said that the fire complaint isn't the only problem he has been having in relation to the regatta.

Despite the attention the regatta has drawn in the past, Archer said the event has not gotten much exposure this year.

He said part of the problem is that he had to buy his own press releases this year. In the past, the University News Service has provided him with releases.

Archer said he is not sure what the future holds for the event.

"I told myself when I started that I was going to do this for 25 years. If nothing gets done, I just might have to stop the tradition at 23."

The 23rd Annual Great Carboard Boat Regatta is scheduled to begin at noon Saturday on Campus Lake near the Technology Building.

NATIONAL PIG WEEK AT... FRED'S

Starting this week, for our Ninth Annual Pig Week, Fred's continues a new and exciting way to get in free; for the last nine years. We had only 5 ways to get in Fred's for free: birthdays, wedding anniversaries, finalized divorces, and your name being Fred, Freida, Frederick, Fredina etc.

But this week bring your favorite PIG and receive a free admission (spouses & dates do not count). Examples are posters, pictures suitable for hanging, dolls, toys, salt and pepper shakers, etc. Don't just tear out a picture of a pig from a magazine and do not bring us one of your pathetic pig drawings. Bring a real pig object. Most unusual example, someone brought a jar of pickled pigs feet.

PIGNOTE: Glacier National Park Anniversary Week takes place the same time as our festive pig week. Wow! How can you not have cause for celebration?

Rodgers said that the television newspaper industry is tough work. "Be sure this is what you really want to do with your life," he said. "Because as good as we look, we really paid an awful price."

Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, said nobody has ever looked at the roles of news correspondents or talked about their impact on American news media. Foote said correspondents are the important people in the news industry because they are on the front lines gathering news. "It's changed a great deal because there aren't as many resources to gather news, and there is more competition," he said.

Foote said that in the past, television was restricted to national networks. Now, there are global networks such as CNN, he said.

The symposium is from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in the Student Center Auditorium.

University administrators and GPSC, as well as reporting information from the administration to the graduate students.

H. Paul LeBlanc III, vice president-elect for graduate school affairs, said he will concentrate on making GPSC more student friendly.

"I want to try to make GPSC more service oriented and also make GPSC a more central location for information for graduate students," he said.

LeBlanc said he hopes to accomplish his goals by having council members encourage graduate-student involvement with GPSC decisions and business.

The vice president for graduate school affairs is supposed to inform graduate students about University policy changes that can affect them.

The new GPSC executives were elected April 18 and will begin their term of office May 15.

The next GPSC meeting is scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

about things that they could more easily demonstrate," he said. "Film making is about doing things like working cameras and setting up the lights."

Duhig said faculty and students often will have different ideas. She said a weekly meeting between students and faculty would provide the opportunity for an exchange of ideas.

She said some students seem to come to class with the feeling that they will not have to participate.

"As a teacher, I want students to argue with me to show me that there is something going on in their heads," she said. "Part of what you have to learn is learning how to respond to different demands."

Rec Center leaks to be fixed

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Leaks in the roof of the SIUC Student Recreation Center that have created noticeable water spots on the indoor tracks are in the process of being fixed, an assistant director of the Center says.

Brian Lukes, the assistant director of facilities at the Recreation Center, said there are a few spots in the roof that are leaking over the tracks and the aerobic area that need to be worked on.

"We have four or five different spots in the part of the building that was constructed in 1988 and 1989," he said.

The roof has been leaking on and off during the last year, Lukes said. He said it could be leaking because the Recreation Center has a flat roof that does not allow water to run off. Recent rain has accelerated the leaks, Lukes said.

He said workers from the SIUC Physical Plant are trying to locate where the leaks are.

"It is hard to identify where these leaks are because they could be around the skylights, beams, or the water could be blown in through cracks in the roof," he said.

Neither a time when the roof will be fixed, nor the price of the construction has been decided, Lukes said.

No one has been injured due to the leakage, he said.

1930s-style 'Merchant of Venice' set to open at McLeod Theater tonight

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The 17th century meets the 20th century as SIUC's production of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" takes the classic drama out of its original context by placing it in the 1930s.

Director Alex Chrestopoulos has set the play, which opens tonight, in Italy in 1939 during Italy's alliance with the Third Reich.

It is the story of Antonio, a merchant in Venice, who gets a loan from Shylock, a rich Jew.

The loan is for a friend who wants to court Portia, a rich heiress. Shylock demands a pound of Antonio's flesh for collateral.

When Antonio loses his money and cannot repay his debt, Shylock comes looking for the collateral.

One of the challenges of the play

"Playing such a villain, I feel a little separated from the rest of the cast. The other cast members play characters with more desirable traits like love and friendship."

*Kevin Hiller
Shylock in "Merchant of Venice"*

is the fact that the villain is a Jew, scenic designer Hilary Chandler said.

The fact that Jews have been victims of so much persecution in modern times can make the play seem as though it is a negative stereotype of Jews, she said.

She said by putting the play in the 1930s, it takes away the stereotypes by placing the story in the historical context of the Holocaust.

"In our production, there aren't any good guys," she said. "This allows the audience to reflect on the choices being made by the characters and how they deal with their bonds and agreements, whether they are legal bonds, traditional bonds or love bonds."

Kevin Hiller (Shylock) said his character really believes he is justified in his actions.

Shylock feels he has been insulted by the people around him his entire life, he said.

"I think a lot is due to the fact that he is a Jew," he said.

"People spit on him, laugh at him and hit him. He wants to get even."

Hiller said the script helps him get into character because it is so well written.

Getting into character takes its toll on him, he said.

"Playing such a villain, I feel a little separated from the rest of the cast," he said.

"The other cast members play characters with more desirable traits like love and friendship."

He said he had to purge himself of the evil nature of the character at the end of each rehearsal.

Playing such a villain puts him in a weird state of mind, he said.

Doing Shakespeare is no easy task, but Chrestopoulos has helped the actors understand the material by breaking it down and explaining the underlying themes in the work. Ben Kramer (Launcelot Gobbo) said.

He said because the actors have a good grasp of the script, they will be able to help audience members who might be fearful of Shakespeare.

"Merchant of Venice" will be presented at 8 p.m. on April 26-27 and May 3-4 and at 2 p.m. May 5 at McLeod Theater.

Admission is $8, $7 for seniors and $4 for students.

Special Olympians go for gold

123 athletes win top honor at McAndrew Stadium

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Aside from the heavy winds slowing down their running times, gifted athletes managed to cross the finish lines with smiles and pride during the 29th annual Special Olympics Thursday, a public relations director says.

Jo Gulley Ancell, public relations director for area 15 Special Olympics, which includes eight Southern Illinois counties, said more than 2,000 people came to SIUC's McAndrew Stadium Thursday to watch and participate in the events.

She said 447 pre-registered athletes with mental or physical disabilities performed in events such as the 50-meter run, the softball throw and the standing long jump.

There were 600 volunteers on hand to support the athletes.

Vicky Sheehan, director for area 15 Special Olympics, said Special Olympians have trained for these events for an entire year.

Sheehan said 123 athletes walked away with gold medals. She said they will move on to the state championships, which will be held in Bloomington on June 14, 15 and 16.

She said the athletes have to go through time trials to receive their average scores. She said the divisions are based on their average score, age and sex.

"Most divisions are based on functionality," she said. "Occasionally, we mix the males with the females. We have to look at all angles of the competition and the athletes."

"I think they've been pushed aside in their lives for so long, so finally, Special Olympics brings them into the mainstream with everyone else."

*Chuck Allen
Special Olympian*

Ancell said the spirit was exciting on and off the track.

She said the athletes were pumped up and ready to go, and they deserved every ounce of credit because they have trained for these events for so long.

Chuck Allen, a Special Olympian from DeSoto, said he was eager to participate in the 100-meter run and to compete in the softball throw.

"I think today was tremendous," he said. "My team and I have been training for the gold as long as we could remember."

Nicole Bellecomo, a junior in physical education from Lombard, said she came to support Special Olympics because she had the expertise in track and field and physical education.

She said the athletes appeared to be dedicated and enthusiastic about the events.

"They were excited throughout the day," she said. "They were pumped up for all of their events."

She said Special Olympics boosts the athletes' self-esteem.

"I think they've been pushed aside in their lives for so long, so finally, Special Olympics brings them into the mainstream with everyone else," she said.

Ross Stebbins, a junior in physical education from Arlington Heights, said he showed his support by helping other volunteers set up the track-and-field events.

He said he enjoys watching the athletes achieve their goals by competing in the events.

"Spiritually, the athletes are on cloud nine," he said. "It's great to see them smile. Special Olympics gives me an understanding of how these athletes react to competition."

Yet, Ancell said some athletes train for an entire year for an event but have trouble competing because of a health or sport injury the day of the competition. She said one athlete was having trouble breathing before she competed for a track event. She said Special Olympics always has at least one emergency medical technician present at the events.

"They handle any emergencies regarding sports injuries or any health-related problems that might occur," she said.

Frank Voltri, a professor in physical education, said Special Olympics is an opportunity for SIUC students to experience the positive and negative aspects of these events.

Loans

Britton said the appropriations bill also would increase the maximum awardable Pell Grant up from $2,340 to $2,470. The Pell Grant is for the neediest students, she said. She said with the appropriations bill, the Federal Work Study program would continue to receive $1,829,587.

Britton said if the direct loan program had been eliminated as the Republicans had once suggested, schools participating in the direct student loan program would have to change all of their financial aid programs.

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote on the appropriations bill by midnight Thursday. If the Senate approves the bill, President Bill Clinton would have to sign the bill before it becomes law.

Boat regatta sails Saturday on lake

By James Lyon
DE Features Editor

They are boats that would probably make a Viking cringe, but Carbondale will be the invasion site for a cardboard navy this weekend.

The 23rd Annual Great Cardboard Boat Regatta begins at noon on Saturday on Campus Lake near the Technology buildings.

The regatta began in 1974 when Richard Archer, assistant professor in the School of Art and Design, decided to do something different as a class project. Little did he know that the class project would turn into a tradition.

Archer continues to use the regatta as a final exam for the students in his Art and Design 100B class, but now it gets much more attention.

"This is probably one of the biggest confidence builders for many of my students," Archer said. "Many of these kids have never built anything on this large of a scale, and some have never built anything at all."

"I see so much pride in some of my students when they are done that it makes all the work they put into it worth it."

Archer said there should be about 150 registered boats by the time the race begins.

The regatta consists of three classes of boats.

Class I consists of boats powered by oars. Class II is made up of boats with alternative power sources, such as sails or propellers, and Class III contains instant boats.

People interested in Class III are given equal amounts of materials a few hours before the race and then are judged on the boat's performance.

Archer said there also are various prizes given for different parts of the race. There are categories ranging from who comes in first to who has the most spectacular sinking.

The regatta has gained so much fame during the years that it is now a registered trademark, and Archer says there are competitions in various cities in the United States as well as in other countries.

"This thing just literally snowballed," Aldon Addington, assistant professor in the School of Art and Design, said. "The popularity is tremendous, and the students seem to love it."

"We give them a series of assignments on how to handle different tasks, and when many of them hear they are going to have to build a cardboard boat, most of their thoughts are that it will never float. But when they begin to build them, you can really see them get into what they are doing. It takes on a life of its own."

Michael McKinley, a sophomore in product design from Downs said people can learn a tremendous deal about themselves from this type of assignment.

"Many people think this is impossible, but it is worth it when you get out there on race day and see how your boat actually floats and that you accomplished something," he said. "I am pretty much of a procrastinator, and some of these guys have been working on their boats for weeks. But it is going to be a lot of fun no matter what happens."

Karrie Kimble, a junior in German from Rochester, said she was in a friend's boat last year, and she took the class this year because it was so much fun.

"I wanted to build my own boat because it was such a good time," she said. "It is a lot of work, and it takes time from me studying for other tests, but in 20 years, this is going to be the thing I remember most about my classes."

remaining after this weekend. Brechtelbauer said the Salukis are, "going to shoot for all of it," against WSU and Creighton.

She said if the Salukis play to their capability, they can take all four contests.

"We are going to go after all four of them," she said.

"Whether or not we can get all four of them I don't know. If we play up to our ability, and get some timely hitting, some timely pitching and some good defense, we think we can get all of them.

"We should be a good enough team to do that."

Junior third baseman Becky Lis says no matter how tough the challenge this weekend, the team is up for it and is ready to go.

"We're comfortable with where we are at," she said.

"Our hitting is OK, our pitching is OK and our defense is OK, so nobody feels any pressure.

"It would be great to come out with four wins, but we're going to take it one game at a time."

Junior hurler Jamie Schutteck will get the start in the first game of today's doubleheader, and sophomore hurler Kim Holder will start the second game.

Schutteck is 11-7 with a 1.35 ERA, while Holder posts a 6-5 record with a 1.56 ERA.

Schutteck needs only five more strikeouts to break SIUC's single season mark of 94, set by Lori Day

Southern has had ample time to prepare for this weekend's series and recover from its nagging injuries.

SIUC's non-conference game against SIUE Tuesday was canceled because of a rain-soaked field in Edwardsville.

Lis believes the extra practice time has helped the team out considerably.

"It has helped a lot because we have had a lot of injuries and soreness," she said.

"We've come out and worked on our hitting and taken some grounders, and we have gotten a lot done.

"This weekend will be a battle from the first pitch to the last pitch, but I know we are ready for it."

Today's first game against the Shockers begins at 3 p.m. at IAW Fields.

Saturday's contest against Creighton begins at noon.

Third-longest playoff game goes past 2 a.m.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—At 2:02 a.m. Thursday, Charles Ridout burst through the doorway of the Star & Stripes entrance to USAir Arena. More than an hour before, he had tuned on his television at home and discovered, to his amazement, that the Washington Capitals were still playing.

He watched almost in disbelief as the Capitals' Joe Juneau skated in alone on a penalty shot that could have won the game in the second overtime. Incredibly, it was the only penalty shot ever awarded in overtime in the playoffs in National Hockey League history. But Juneau missed. Penguins' goaltender Ken Wregget made a miraculous save. The game went on. Ridout raced out of the house, jumped into his car and headed for Landover, Md.

"They need me here," he said, after rushing across the arena concourse, skipping down a long flight of concrete steps and tasing an empty seat in the first row on the corner behind Wregget's left shoulder. "I can't believe I came. I can't believe they're still playing. My boy Joe Juneau missed that shot. How could he have done that?"

A substitute schoolteacher, Ridout said he doesn't have the money to attend games often. But he loves the team. "C'mon Pens. C'mon Caps. C'mon (Petr) Bondra," he shouted. "There's Bondra. Here we go, Caps. They're going to win. I'm here."

But these were the Capitals, beloved by their fans, but haunted by bizarre plays and games during their last 14 years of competition in the NHL's Stanley Cup playoffs.

On April 18-19, 1987, the New York Islanders beat the Capitals, 3-2, in four overtimes of decisive Game 7 of a playoff series. That was the Capitals' infamous "longest game"—until now. Now it was 2:22 a.m. This game was longer. This was now the third-longest game in NHL history, the longest game since 1936.

About 6,000 diehards remained from the sellout crowd of 18,130. Youngsters slept in their parents' arms. Back and forth the two teams skated in what seemed a 2-2 tie that would be frozen for eternity. And then ... and then ...

Petr Nedved of the Penguins seized an opportunity with the Capitals' Jim Johnson in the penalty box and slapped a shot past a valiant Olie Kolzig for the game-winner.

Netters look to take on MVC's best

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Accompanying the SIUC women's tennis team to Evansville, Ind. this weekend to compete in the Missouri Valley Conference championship is the same attitude it has played with all season to play tough aggressive tennis coach Judy Auld said.

"The whole season boils down to this weekend," she said. "We're anxious and ready to play and we're going to play the best tennis possible."

Eleven teams will compete for the title in the MVC championship Friday-Sunday. Drake University (13-5), Wichita State University (14-5), Illinois State University (12-11), Indiana State University (13-7), the University of Tulsa (8-13) and the University of Evansville (13-7) are expected to do well.

Southern has the second best record in the MVC, and has only lost one conference match out of six this season. The Salukis have an 11-5 record for the spring, and Auld said she is expecting her team to be seeded at the No. 3 spot in the MVC championship.

Saluki sophomore Sanem Berksoy currently has a 12 match win streak. She has a team best 17-2 mark for the spring the most by any MVC player.

Auld said the matches against Drake and Wichita State will be intense because the Bulldogs will be the No. 1 seed and the Shockers will be seeded at No. 2.

"They're beatable, but you have to be playing at your max on that day to beat them," Auld said.

Auld said her team has a good chance at finishing near the top of the field.

"We've had a great year and I want to finish the tournament playing as best as possible," she said. "We have a good chance to finish first through fourth place."

Saluki track makes way to Drake Relays

Meet officials expect 18,000 fans to watch 87th annual track/field meet in Iowa

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With meet officials expecting a sellout crowd of 18,000 spectators at the 87th annual Drake Relays this weekend in Des Moines, Iowa, the SIUC men and women's track and field teams will make their bids to rise to the occasion.

According to SIUC women's track and field coach Don DeNoon, the crowd at Drake will definitely play a role in the performance of athletes.

"The biggest change is when the athletes take the march from the staging area to the starting line, and they look up and see a sellout crowd in the stands," DeNoon said.

"It's like the difference between giving a speech in front of a small class and doing one in front of the United Nations."

While a majority of the women's team will make the trip to the Drake Relays, which take place Friday and Saturday, only one member of the men's team will compete at Drake.

The remaining members of the teams will make the trek to Murray,

Ky. to compete in the unsecured Murray State Twilight Invitational, which will take place the same two days.

While 10 men's teams including Southern will compete at Murray State, 12 women's teams will bid for the top spot at the twilight competition.

Vanderbilt University, Southeast Missouri, Arkansas State, and Western Kentucky are just a few of the scheduled opponents.

Sophomore high jumper Neophytos Kalogerou will go to the Drake relays in hopes of turning out an Olympic appearance.

According to SIUC men's track and field coach Bill Cornell, Kalogerou will face some tough competitors at Drake.

"The Drake Relays is a much better meet for him to compete at," Cornell said.

"Not only is he looking to automatically qualify for the NCAA's, but he wants to qualify for the Cyprus Olympic Team.

"He's the best in Cyprus right now, but he has to go 7-3 3/4 before he can go to the Olympics (with the Cyprus team)."

Kalogerou's best jump this season is 7-2 1/4 which he cleared at the Tyson Invitational April 13 provisionally qualified him for the NCAA's, but the NCAA automatic qualifying height is 7-4 1/2.

As for the rest of the team, Cornell said he hopes competing at Murray State will spark his team to season best performances.

"We're hoping for good weather, good competition, and improving our personal best times in time for our conference (the Missouri Valley Conference championship meet May 15-18) three weeks away," Cornell said.

"They (Murray State) have got a super nice facility down there, a nine lane Rekortan (brand name) track and it's conducive to good performances.

"We hope to have a repeat of what we did last year. We came away with quite a few season bests," he said.

According to Southern's assistant women's track and field coach Tina Debro, the Murray State Invitational usually presents a relaxed atmosphere for her team, but for those going to Des Moines, Iowa, the Drake Relays could be the toughest competition her team has faced all season.

"Usually Drake brings on great competition," Debro said.

"We're just hoping everybody competes well with what the competition brings and that's all you can hope for.

"A lot of times we face good competition in some areas, but in others, we don't.

"I think with this meet (Drake Relays), there's competition all around. There's a standard that you have to get to to get to this meet, so you know there are obviously people at least on your level or even higher."

"I think with this meet (Drake Relays), there's competition all around. There's a standard that you have to get to to get to this meet, so you know there are obviously people at least on your level or even higher."

SIUC to play host to Lady Jays, Shockers

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

The phrase, "critically important," best describes SIUC softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer's feelings toward this weekend's doubleheaders at home against Wichita State University and Creighton University.

Heading into the weekend series, it is essential the Salukis get some wins.

Southern is currently in the No. 5 spot in the Missouri Valley Conference standings with a 7-5 record.

WSU is one step ahead of the Salukis, while Creighton remains four steps behind.

The Shockers enter the series in the No. 4 spot with a 6-4 mark in the Valley, while Creighton continues to struggle in the No. 9 spot at 2-8.

With the conference schedule slowly coming to an end, Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis need to perform well this weekend in order to avoid trouble down the road.

"This is our last home weekend, and it's our second to last weekend of conference games," Brechtelsbauer said. "We need to have a good showing this weekend, or we are going to have our backs against the wall next weekend."

After a fast 6-0 start in the Valley, the Salukis have slowed considerably, losing five of its last six conference matches.

Southern's run in the conference has gone in a totally opposite direction of the Shockers, who after a slow start, have emerged as the Valley's newest threat.

WSU has won its last four games, and has a 10-6 record in its last 16 contests, while Creighton has dropped its last six contests in the conference — all of which were on the road.

However, it is not the standings that has Brechtelsbauer concerned. What is weighing heavy on her mind is how well the Shockers have been playing, and how each team can explode.

"Wichita State is right above us, and they are on a four-game roll," Brechtelsbauer said. "They are going to be strong down the stretch — they always are. They have always been known for solid defense, they make few mistakes and they never beat themselves."

"Creighton, on the other hand, has a lot of power, a lot of speed, plus good pitching."

Dawgs look to shade record with Sycamore visit

SIUC (11-9) hopes to end four-game losing skid with win against Indiana State

By Chad Anderson

Indiana State University's visit to Abe Martin Field may be a blessing in disguise for the baseball Salukis this weekend.

SIUC (11-9) is currently on a four-game losing streak, three of them coming against Missouri Valley Conference foe Wichita State April 20-23, and hopes to get back on track to stay in the hunt for a second-place finish in the Valley behind league leading WSU (12-3).

Southern fell to fourth place in the Valley with its defeats against Wichita State, but only remains two and a half games behind second-place Southwest Missouri State (13-6).

Another reason for the importance of this weekend's four-game series is that only six teams out of the nine in the MVC qualify for the conference tournament May 15-18.

The teams are divided into two brackets, and the Salukis want to finish in the top division to receive a good seed in the tournament.

While Indiana State is serving as the caboose of the MVC with a 5-13 conference mark, SIUC associate coach Ken Henderson said the Sycamores can not be taken lightly, and this weekend's series is vitally important to how the Valley shapes up at the end of the season.

"It's crucial. All three of the last weekends are crucial if we want to finish where we think we can," Henderson said.

"If we go out and do our job the next two, three weekends, we have a legitimate shot at finishing in the top two or three in the conference."

Even with their 5-13 record, Henderson said competition in the MVC is tight, and the Sycamores have defeated Wichita State once this season, which indicates the uncertainty of how a team will play.

"Any time you play in this conference, anybody can beat anybody. That's one of the great things about the Valley — there's so much parity up and down the thing," he said.

"Indiana State beat Wichita once, and they're certainly capable of beating anyone on any given day. So we're going to approach it like we would any other series."

In Southern's 10-inning, 3-2, defeat by St. Louis University

Wednesday, the Saluki pitchers paced the team, but the offense could not catch up.

"Henderson said the offense, and team, has forgotten about that, but he hopes the pitching carries over against the Sycamores."

"You're going to have bad days at the yard, and we just pretty much chalked it up as a bad day at the yard," he said.

"We had a good practice today (Thursday) offensively, and swung the bats well. I think it's forgotten, and it won't affect as one way or the other."

"From a pitching standpoint, hopefully we gained some confidence. They did a great job, and although St. Louis isn't a great offensive ball club, we hit spots, threw strikes and made them swing the bats."

The first game of the series begins today at 3 p.m., with a doubleheader Saturday at noon and the final game Sunday at 3 p.m.

Between the Lines

One of the nation's top high school basketball recruits has decided to stay at home in Baton Rouge, La.

Lester Earl has signed a national letter of intent to play for Louisiana State.

Earl, a 6-foot-9-inch forward, led his high school team to three straight state championships.

He averaged 24 points and 15 rebounds this season while making the Parade Magazine and McDonald's All-American teams.

Earl was also a finalist for the James A. Naismith Award, which goes to the nation's top high school player.

The National Basketball Association has plans to start a new pro basketball league for women in the summer of 1997.

The eight-team league expects to play from mid-June to mid-August, which will consist of a 25-30 game schedule over 10 weeks in NBA cities.

Val Ackerman, NBA director of business affairs, said good players will earn from $1,500 a month to as much as $200,000 to $300,000 per year.

The New England Patriots on Wednesday released the draft rights to Christian Peter, a Nebraska lineman with a criminal record.

The 6-foot-3-inch, 300-pound lineman is to be sentenced May 21 for disturbing the peace following an incident in which he grabbed a woman by the throat.

The Patriots organization claimed it "failed to do its homework," on Peter prior to the draft.

The Chicago Bulls begin their quest to complete their record-breaking season tonight when Michael Jordan and Co. take on Pat Riley and the Miami Heat in the first round of the Eastern Conference playoffs.

The Bulls will be looking to avenge an early-season loss to the Heat when Riley's crew suited only eight players after trading for center Alonzo Mourning.
