Minority faculty present despite student concerns

SURVEY SAYS: Thirty percent of African-Americans polled say additional faculty needed.

TAMEKA L. HICKS DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Editor's note: This is the second installment of a four-part series examining the qual-ity of life for African-American students at SIUC. Previous installments can be viewed on the Internet at www.dailyegyptian.com

Although a recent survey reported some African-American students want more African-American students want more African-American faculty on campus, they may not effectively utilize the African-American faculty already are on campus, says SIUC's affirmative action officer.

Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the chancellor and affirmative action officer, analyzed the survey and said African-American students, like other students, should enter a classroom feeling comfortable with the professor and interact with the pro-fessor as well.

Bryson supervised "A Survey of African-American Life at SIUC," by Jesse J. Brennan, Edgardo R. Pimentel and John Hetherington of the psychology department, to find the underlying perceptions of African-American students toward the racial climate involving financial aid, academic programs and faculty and classroom behavior.

In the study, completed in October 1997, 30 percent of 211 African-American students reported being treated indifferently by non-African-American faculty. The presence of African-American faculty ranked as the No. 2 concern in the study with financial aid rank-ing No. 1 among the needs and concerns of African-American students.

On a four-part scale ranging from not important to very important, 57.3 percent reported the presence of African-American faculty is very important, and 54.4 percent reported the presence of African-American administrators is very important. COMPROMISE: Vingren says strike could devastate students' academic careers.

> TRAVIS DENEAL DE POLITICS EDITOR

Undergraduate Student Government President Dave Vingren says USG must oppose the possibility of a strike by SIUC's faculty union.

Vingren has written a resolution, which he will urge the senate to pass at its meeting at 8 tonight, that states a strike by instructors could devastate stuocademic careers.

This legislation comes from many conversations with many students who have varying feelings about the possibility of a faculty strike," he said. "There is a mix of feelings about it, with some students thinking it's a bluff, some having fears and some who are angered e threat of a delayed graduation.

"I know that when anybody threat-ens my date of graduation, I get angry. I don't take it lightly."

Though the resolution opposes a strike, it does not support either of the negotiating parties. Vingren said the senate should not side with the administration or the faculty union until it has more information. In addition, it may be a while before USG will, if ever, take a

"I don't see any circumstance where we'll be taking sides in the near future, Vingren said, "especially since it's summer and the senate will not meet until this fall."

Vingren said that while the topic may be controversial, the Senate likely pass his resolution.

Unless they've been hearing different things from students than I have, they'll pass it," he said. USG members call for the end of the Saluki Safe night

Election by mail leaves some senators angry

BALLOT: Vote for Faculty Senate president too close for outright decision.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two tie votes in the Tuesday election for Faculty Senate president for the 1998-99 school year ended with the Senate having the election via mail ballot, upsetting some Senate members.

The Faculty Senate voted 14-14 two separate times for the two candidates running for president. There were two Faculty Senate meetings Tuesday. The first was to finish business and say farewell to exiting members. The second was to elect new executive officers to the Faculty Senate.

Jim Allen, a professor in his-tory, and Dan Chavez, an associate professor in anatomy, are the two presidential candidates.

Joan Friedenberg, a profes-sor in linguistics, made a inotion to suspend the rules and the motion was seconded by Mary Lamb, a professor in English.

Then, Allen, made a motion to conduct the election by mail ballot and was seconded by Marcia Anderson, a professor in workforce education and development.

Some Senate members justified the mail ballot by stating that too many members were two votes. Jensen added the Senate was close to not meeting quorum.

The decision to conduct the elections via mail caused four senate members to walk out while voicing their displeasure. Eric Niederhoffer, an associate professor in medical bio-chemistry, left during Allen's motion saying, "this is com-pletely out of order."

Russell Wright, an associate

Four environmentalists are pursuing a lawsuit in federal court against representatives of the U.S. Forest Service, Pope County Sheriff's Department and an Illinois State Police trooper on the grounds of constitutional deprivations for damages exceeding $1 million.

Joseph M. Glisson, founder of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, is seeking $20,000 in actual damages for alleged deprivations that transpired during the summer of 1997. EFFORT: Walker served in many positions helping international students.

Tears welled from Beverly Walker's eyes as she accepted an award for her commitment to international students.

Walker, a former SIUC employee for 20 years and SIUC alumna, was presented the Mary Wakeland Award during a ceremony Tuesday for her 25 years of service to international students. The ceremony was sponsored by the International Students and Scholars and the International Friends Club.

After retiring in 1993, Walker wanted to remain a volunteer in the international community. In 1974, she served as International Student adviser. In fol-lowing years, Walker was assistant director of International Student and Scholars, director of Overseas pro-grams and coordinator of the English in Action Program.

As a volunteer, Walker places more than 50 international students with American students to help them devel-

Our Word

Opening the doors of justice would provide safeguards and information

The public allegations of forgery brought against the Blacks in Business Registered Student Organization has created a double standard on SIUC's campus concerning the open or closed nature of criminal cases involving students. With the Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act being so vehemently opposed by members of the University it is surprise to see such an issue, one that would tarnish the names of those involved, to be thrown into the public eye.

The Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act, which would open campus judicial hearings and mandate that colleges maintain open crime logs, including the names of accused parties, has met with strong resistance from SIUC administrators and Undergraduate Student Government members.

They have been adamantly opposed the bill because they believe it would prevent victims of sexual assault from reporting incidents. They might feel humiliated or embarrassed by a hearing open to the public. There is even different versions of the bill. The House of Representatives bill would require that campus crime reports be disclosed, while the Senate version simply would recommend the records be open.

The Higher Education Act and one of its amendments, The Family Educational Right to Privacy Act, or the Buckley Amendment, was designed to provide privacy for students' educational records. It lets colleges that prosecute criminal cases internally label conduct code violations as "educational records."

This amendment has been defeated in other states, through both legislation and court decision. The amendment is a hindrance on media and a hindrance on the public that is not aware of what is happening on campus. The important issue in this case is consistency, or the lack thereof. Hiding campus crimes under a blanket of secrecy presents an image of safety that may not be there.

The United States House of Representatives is scheduled to vote on the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act today or Thursday, A proposed amendment would remove FERPA protection of disciplinary records that contain information that personally identifies a student or students who have either admitted to or been found to have committed a crime or violated institutional policies.

The allegations against Blacks Interested in Business charge that Greg Akers, the group's president, entered Student Development and attempted to transfer $300 from the Blacks Interested in Business' account into the Saluki Party account. The allegations also charge that Akers forged adviser Michael Haywoods' signature on the authorization form.

Obviously such strong allegations need investigation. But this case was treated differently. It has been in the public eye. ACCRA opponent Connie Howard, USG Internal Affairs Committee chairwoman and Judicial Affairs board member, argues that the Committee meeting was open because it is considered a public body.

If the committee is considered a public body by being a body within USG, why is Student Affairs, a group of student who decides the fate of other students at a public university funded by the state, not considered a public body?

If other campus disciplinary actions are considered in closed meetings, why should this one be any different?

Another argument against ACCRA is that college students are young, make mistakes and should not have to be branded because of an institute of the college.

What about Greg Akers, Blacks in Business president? His image has been tarnished by the accusations, even if they turn out to be false. Any protection that Akers would have enjoyed through a closed hearing has been blown by the Internal Affairs Committee.

Even more inconsistent is the fact that the fate of Akers could be up to the judicial board, regardless of the Internal Affairs committee findings. Thus, any decision reached could be kept from the public record.

from the public record.

The Daily Egyptian supports ACCRA because it would allow college students to have a more accurate sense of the crimes occurring on Opening the judicial proceedings would allow media to perform their duty of watchdog, and prevent any backdoor justice from occurring. Even juvenile court proceedings are open to the media. Although the records remain closed, the courts are open to ensure justice is performed properly and according to the law.

Journalists need all available information to provide the public with accurate stories. If the judicial board is allowed to act in secret, what is the check to prevent abuses of power?

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

To the graduating class of 1998, or anyone else fortunate enough to be a card-carrying member of the last full generation of this century, welcome to the end of the world as you know it. We're about to grow up.

Today finds us standing at the gates of tomorrow, which is Thursday, hurtling toward the weekend of our collective future. Our destinies lie in front of us like a baseball diamond shrouded in a misty fog of hidden opportunity. We're bound to enjoy ourselves, if we can only find our way.

For years we have drank deep from the keep of knowledge, sipped heartily from the bottle of experience, and are now prepared to chug vigorously from the mug of life itself. There is no new challenge that will daunt us, as far as daunting does, nor any risk we won't receive readily and without regret.

The keys to a life lived well are jingle-jangling before our very eyes, waiting to be grasped, fully prepared to unlock the doors to a grand new existence waiting around the bend. We have been trained and we have been educated, and we will persevere, as well as prevail.

But we cannot allow the road of life to be a simple path toward the end, nor a simple trek to eternity. Nay, it is the road itself that brings the greatest pleasure, the journey that causes us to quest, to seek our futures, shining brightly like a holy city.

upon a hill, or something to that extent.

So, I cannot foresee what life will bring for all my brethren nor for those that I have met along the ride toward tomorrow, but I must say I see an exciting future, one brimming to the rim with opportunity for those filled with a passion toward life.

with opportunity for those filled with a passion toward life.

We must seize the day, and squeeze every last drop of willingness and joy from its fresh, juicy pulp, warmed from the arrogant glow of a newly born sun. As it is the light from this sun that will allow us to see our way, even when the storm clouds of misfortine and strife dim its overwhelming splendor.

We, as a generation, have been raised in a greenhouse of overwhelming affluence run amok, with so much plenty of water and light, and certainly too much fertilizer.

But if we are to branch out and become pollinated with the

But if we are to branch out and become pollinated with the seed of experience, then we must become accustomed to a life lived outside the protective layers of good intentioned but elderly glass. It is our time now to bloom and grow, to show our hidden colors, our petals of glory.

And so I say to you, members of a blamed generation, the problems of this world, though not of our creation, are certainly ours to overcome, if we are to give our own children a legacy of pride.

Thus, in retrospect, do not cancel my subscription to this resurrection, for we will be a rebirth of hope, and the creation of a new world, filled with joy and opportunity, and we, its noble caretakers.

Senate hears of corruption, misconduct in IRS management LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON - The Internal Revenue Service is beset by management corruption and misconduct that goes unpunished by the agency even when allegations are proven, a Senate hearing was told by key witnesses Tuesday.

The agency's managers have engaged in documented cases of sexual harassment, theft of govern-ment property and illegal harass-ment of taxpayers but were not held accountable, according to probes conducted by the Treasury Department's inspector general and testimony from a senior executive of the IRS office of general counsel. In one case, a senior IRS execu-

The faculty may have to take the time to get to know the person. When planning for black students, faculty need to be appreciative and sensitive to individual differences."

Some individual differences include how students progress with academics as well as their personal

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, said the responsibility not only lies within the faculty but the students who feel a need for change as well. Students should make an extra effort to interact with their professors. Not all professors will be interested in a student that they only know as a "number."

This is a two-way street," he . "Professors need to reach out to them and not be intimidated. Every time I talk with a student I tell them. You are capable of obtaining success in the academic programs here. You're not going to do that by sitting in the back (of the classroom). Sit up front and look that professor in the eye. If you do those things, that creates interest in you. Students must interact with the professor to learn more."

Rob McNeal, a senior in biological sciences from St. Charles, said in order to feel comfortable in a classroom setting, a student has to take the initiative to get to know the professor.

He said he has never experienced being treated differently by faculty. Perhaps, it is difficult for a rofessor to give equal attention to hundreds of students, he said.

"I think it's to the student's advantage to get to know their teachers, so they can put a face with a name," McNeal said. "Then they'll know you're a serious stu-

"It's very important to know all the black faculty on campus, just to know their whole perspective on things," Fisher said. "I try to go into the teacher's office a couple times just to talk."

Brian Clardy, a Black American Studies lecturer, said he is more than willing to help students and wants to see more students staying after class and visiting his office, but he cannot take on the task

"That's why we need more African-Americans on this staff in all fields," Clardy said.

"Most of the time I end up see ing students when they're failing, they need a letter of recommenda-

RAILY EGYPTIAN

The Rev. Joseph Brown, director of B. ack American Studies, said that when he arrived at SIUC last fall, he was concerned about the lack of African-American faculty. Because there are only a few African-American faculty, they have a lot of weight placed on their shoulders.

"I was disappointed in the small number of African-American faculty and staff, and I was disappointed at the decentralization of African-American programs," he said, "I am also concerned about the fact that the black faculty are asked to do more than they're responsible for — and that they are not recognized for this added responsibility.

The teaching responsibilities are significant in themselves. The counseling and advisements overwhelm most of the black professionals. It does not seem like enough attention is paid to this problem.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost, said the Black American Studies program is the support system for African-American students. Given the amount of support by the pro-gram, he said other faculty should do the same.

"I think [BAS support of African-American students is] an extra burden for them," Jackson

"It's an additional thing we ask them to do, but having said that, it's important for all faculty. It's a crucial part of mentoring. Not all faculty provide it. Some faculty are available to students, and some hide out from students."

Welch also encourages faculty gct involved with African American students more often to make them aware of their presence. "Faculty probably need to attend as much of the activities that the stu-

Harold Bardo, director of Medical Education, makes it priority to talk to each of the 80 students in the Medprep program. Students progress well in a welcoming atmosphere -

The fact that students don't know all the African-American faculty means that they are getting by," Bardo said. "It's critically important that they see African Americans in the classroom. And it's important for other ethnic groups as well.

"[Medprep faculty] directly intervene with the students' progress. We sit down and talk with them about what the points are for what they need and how we can help them. It makes a difference."

Chancellor Donald Beggs finds that there may be an abundance of isolated students at SIUC.

He said no matter the race of the students and faculty, there will always be some confusion among

By looking at the pattern of the responses, Beggs said that most students appreciate the faculty on campus.

"When dealing with humans, there's going to be some friction," he said. "We have an overwhelming number of faculty that want their doors to be open no matter the race or gender. It's important for us to recognize commonalties and differences. And it's important to have diversity in our faculty and our stu-dents. Our goal is to minimize the isolation of students."

Beggs said it is common for stuto feel more comfortable with someone from their hometown, culture, race or gender. He said the concern is not only African-American problem. It is a matter of communication.

"I'll always remember when I was a dean. I had a female student who felt uncomfortable talking to me about a sexual harassment problem. She talked to a female administrator instead.

When a student is dealing with a problem, they feel comfortable talking to someone who can understand the problem or relate to the problem. I don't want to isolate it as an African-American concern only.

Anita De Valle clutched the crucifix around her neck and carried a large wreath as she walked in the seemingly endless procession of mourners who lined up to see Gerardi's body lying in state. As she stood before the open casket, the 29-year-old seamstress could no longer contain herself.
"My God, why did this have to happen?" she tearfully exclaimed while others attempted to console her. "The world is now a worse place because of his death, and there was so much hope."

The brutal killing of Gerardi, 75, has stunned Guatemala and threatened the uneasy peace that had set-tled over this Central American country in the two years since the end of its bloody 36-year civil war.

First international student adviser dies

Employees of the International Students and Scholars will always remember the remarkable efforts made by Wakeland to improve the international community.

Beth Mochnick, community pro-ject coordinator for International Students and Scholars, said she also admired Wakeland's contributions.

"She tried to se vice all their [international students] needs, both personal and academic," she said. "She tried to really help the people who came here, she opened her heart as well as her office to them." Coppi said Wakeland will always be on her mind during new student o nt orientation in fall.

never met Wakeland, she strives to meet Wakeland's high standards in working for international students.

'She was the role model for all of us," Mochnick said. "She realized these people needed more than academic support — they needed personal support. Different people have picked it up and rolled with her idea."

Wakeland established Hospitality Program to look after international student arrivals at SIUC. When the numbers of interstudents Wakeland could no longer provide the same level of personal service. The Hospitality Program expanded to the International Friends Club in Friends Club and International Students and Scholars program established an annual award for out-standing, volunteers in Wakeland's name. Think of the six women closest to you. Now guess which one will be raped this year.

One out of six college women will be sexually assaulted this year. But you can change the odds of it happening. Simply by trying to avoid situations that leave you or your friends vulnerable.

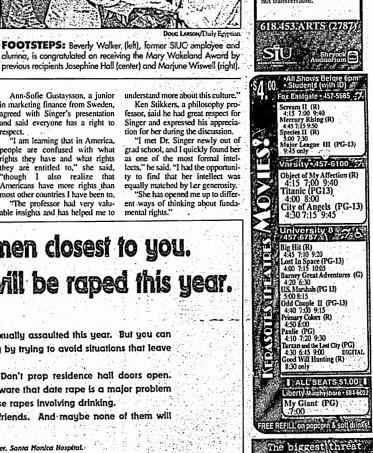

For starters, follow security measures. Don't prop residence hall doors open. Walk with a friend after dark. And be aware that date rape is a major problem on college campuses. With many of these rapes involving drinking.

Then share these facts with six of your friends. And maybe none of them will become another statistic.

HOPPIN': Band swings full house at Copper Dragon: Tuesday night.

> KIRK MOTTRAM DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

And this year's award for best live musical performance in Carbondale goes to ... Big Bad Voodoo Daddy.

To be anywhere other than the Copper Dragon Monday night would have been foolish. Never before has a band in Carbondale commanded the attention of its audience so absolutely while inundating a venue with music you would have to be a stiff not to enjoy.

Such was the case with Daddy, an eight-piece "little" big band from Hollywood. Daddy's flawless performance should sornd a wake-up call for some local bar owners who, when it comes to bands, seem to prefer the trite to the piquant.

Monday's show proves the burgeoning neo-swing scene immortalized in the movie "Swingers" is here to stay.

The question is, can Carbondale keep up with times and solicit bands like Daddy in the future? If the eclectic sellout Copper Dragon crowd is any indica-tion of what could be, then this Southern Illinois community can look forward to jumpin' into the next century.

Daddy's appeal is two-fold. Its uniquely-orchestrated sound bursts with nostalgic freshness and charming intensity, and its on-stage energy is intoxicat-ing. Both the hom and reed sections, anchored by the lively Glen "The Kid" Marhevka on trumpet and workhorse tenor saxophonist Karl Hunter, outgun a lot of their modern counterparts with their definess and dash.

Add multi-talented baritone saxophonist Andy Rowley and trombonist Jeff Harris to the mix and one can understand why Daddy has sold out shows nationwide for nearly three months.

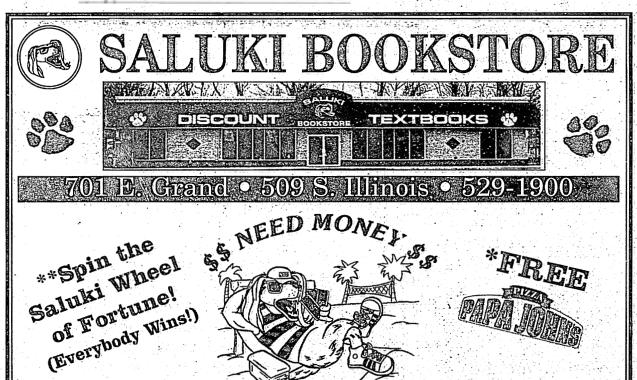

Not only does this foursome successfully invoke the swing of old, but it artfully entertains with its endless stage

Speaking of antics, guitarist-lead vocalist-band leader Scotty Morris, sidekick bassist Dirk Schumaker, spectaclesporting pianist Josh Levy and drummer Kurt Sodergren provide many of their own while forging a tightly-wound

Morris nimbly intertwines his cool vocals and subtle on-stage humor with rest of the performance Schumaker strives to upstage by twirling his stand-up bass and cavorting around in circles with the oversized instrument tucked under his arm. Levy wows peri-odically with his Jerry Lee Lewis imitations and Sodergren bangs the skins with Daddy's set list included most of the songs appearing on its recently released major-label debut and all three of its con-The audience crupted during "You, Me, & the Bottle Makes Three Tonight" ac the Bottle Wastes Time Fongin while Daddy members seized the oppor-tunity to solo during "Jump With My Baby Tonight." All of the solos were crisp and defily undertaken, Marhevka and Hunter providing the most masterful. After the official set had concluded, audience members unanimously and vociferously demanded Daddy to continue. Trotting back onto the stage for what was to be an even bigger and badder encore, Moris asked, "are you ready for the big stuff?" With the crowd's approval, Daddy topped off the show with "Swingers" theme song, "Go-Daddy-O." With Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, there's never a dull moment and you'll find yourself swingin' no matter how much you hate to dance. Let's just hope this n't a one-night stand.

Grocery chains sued over diesel truck fumes

Claiming that people living near supermarket distribution centers face an excessive cancer danger from breathing diesel truck fumes, California Attorney General Dan Lungren and environmental groups sued four of the state's largest gro-cery chains Tuesday.

The lawsuits target a Vons distri-bution center in Santa Fe Springs, a Ralphs facility in Los Angeles, Lucky Stores operations in Buena Park and San Leandro, and a Stater Bros. center in Colton

The environmental groups say their goal is to get the grocery chains to convert their entire fleets to cleaner-burning fuels, such as liq-

These four companies, came up

Ruderman Feuer, senior attorney with the environmental group Natural Resources Defense Natural Council. Their distribution centers are smack in the middle of residential neighborhoods and these facilities are huge. We're talking hun-dreds, if not thousands of trucks, driving in and out of their facilities every day." Vons spokesman Brian Dowling, however, said diesel trucks are the 'single best and most cost-efficient' way to ship goods to the stores.

"We've looked at alternatives, but right now there is not a suitable alternative that can handle the kind of tonnage that is going in our ," he said.

Judy Decker, spokeswoman for Lucky Stores Inc., said the company believes it "provides a clean and safe working environment for our employees, and we feel we've been a good neighbor."

The attorney general's lawsuit alleges that the four supermarket companies failed to warn nearby homeowners and schools of the cancer risk as required

1986 anti-toxics law. The state's suit was filed after the Natural Resources Defense Council, the Coalition for Clean Air and the Environmental Law Foundation filed a complaint against the supermarkets with Lungren's office.

In the suit, the attorney general's office charges that the supermarkets "expose thousands of people to diesel truck exhaust without providing warnings.

The coalition of three environmental groups simultaneously filed their own lawsuits on similar Feuer said the litigation "culmi-nates a year's investigation" in which the environmental group monitored the air in homeowners yards near each of the facilities.

The environmentalists say their research shows residents living near the five facilities are breathin; about 15 times more diesel exhaust than the average person in the Lcs Angeles basin and face a cancer threat 10 to 100 times greater than the level deemed significant by the state law.

U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Monica Ross declined to comment because she had not heard of the legal developments as of Monday.
Glisson and Steams said the trial could be delayed for years but are confident their version of the truth will prevail in court.

"It's a shame that we have to be so aggressive," Glisson said. "But the media and the police have not taken us seriously.

Their timing is perfect: Women's boxing, once disdained as an unsavory come-on — more spectacle than sport — is catching on in a big way. The ranks of female boxers— amateur and professional—are swelling, and gyms in the Washington area and else-where are filled with women enjoying the rigorous cardiovascular workout and adrenaline rush that boxing brings.

More than 50 women have signed up for lessons at Jones' Olympia Boxing Center—about 45 percent of his clientele. Not all of them want to climb in the ring, however, and certainly not with Joni Ruff.

This night, as on most others, her oppo-nent is Cheryl O'Looney, 25, a middle school math teacher from Arlington, Va., who towers over Ruff and has a six- or seven-inch advantage in reach. But Ruff is scrappy and determined, like a pesky gnat intent on spoiling the picnic. She comes in low and relentless at

The bell sounds and the two women exit the ring complimenting each other for their good punches and overall improvement. They are eager to get back to their skills drills. This one-two combination of willingness to learn inside the ring and camaraderie outside it is something Jones, a former Golden Gloves fighter and member of the Washington, D.C., Boxing Hall of Fame, particularly appreciates.

"He's worked very hard in the weight room and on the track," Wright "He is very dedicated to become great. When you have talent plus dedi-cation that equals success."

Bowers wants to step up even more as the year progresses to put him in a higher caliber of jumpers.

"It's been a real good step," Bowers said. "I've accomplished everything I've wanted to so far this year. As of this date. I'm just ready to move up to the

For Bowers, the next level is a possible MVC Championship to close out the outdoor season in Cedar Falls, lowa, May 14-17 and a national qualifying jump. Bowers thinks the long jump is his best chance at an NCAA qualifying sh (25 feet 3.25 inches).

Wright thinks Bowers is ready to overtake his old personal bests in one of the Salukis' upcoming meets.
"I see Brad as a jumper on the verge of getting a p.r. (personal record) soon," Wright said, "We've had some scratches Wright said. We ve had some scratches that have reached very far lately. I'm thinking that either at Missouri (the University of Missouri Invite Saturday) or the MVCs we'll see that p.r. "Vith his hard work, I see him reach-and better."

Bowers said the tutelage of the former Olympian high jumper Wright has helped him in his training.

"It helps out a lot, even though I don't do the high jump and he's never said." I feel that he knows what I need to be doing as a long jumper because he does a lot of research, plus he's just a good coach overall.

"If I have a problem with any of the workouts I can just easily tell him. "I feel we should be doing this," and he is open for suggestions because he is pretopen for suggestions occause he is pre-ty new at what he does."

Along with Wright, Bowers has another Olympian jumper that he looks up to his brother Eric, who graduated from Georgia Tech University last year.

"He made the finals for the Olympic trials in '96 in the long jump, so that just shows me if he can jump that far, I feel it could run in the family maybe,"

As the season comes to a close, Bowers knows his time, is winding down to prepare for the MVC Championships and make the qualifying jump for the nationals. But Bowers said he can picture it happening as he dreams for his next look down a runway.

"I try to visualize myself jumping a really long jump," Bowers said. "Not at the Olympics or anything, but I just try to picture myself jumping a great

Salukis tune up for conference race with twin bill against SIUE

ONE-SIDED: SIUC owns 14-game win streak against Cougars dating back to 1989.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The rivalry between SIUC and its Southern illinois University counterpart in University counterpart in Edwardsville has not been much of one as of late — at least from the SIUC standpoint.

The Salukis have won the last 14 meetings against SIUE dating back to 1989.

"Anytime you have a Division I or Division I or junior college teams play -probably the team that is supprobably more critical for them," SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "Because playing up and winning shows them really well, but in our case it doesn't do the same thing for SIUC's matchup today against SIUE, which was originally scheduled April 1, may appear to be a meaningless game. The Salukis sit in second place in the Missouri Valley Conference and have a date with league leader Creighton University Sunday.

The Salukis enter the 5 p.m. doubleheader at Edwardsville with a record of 29-12-1 overall and 11-3 in conference play. But today gives the Saluki softbut today grees the Saints Striball team a chance to touch up on their skills before the final week of Missouri Valley Conference play.

This is important because we want to get tuned up for the conference Brechtelsbauer said.

Brechtelsbauer has no intentions of letting up against the Cougars (36-21, 22-5). The last time the Salukis were in Edwardsville, one week ago today, they were being handled by the nationally ranked Missouri pitching staff. Missouri pitching staff. Missouri swept a doubleheader, and SIUC needs to regain some confidence:

The Tigers ended the Salukis six-game winning streak by shutting down the their offense, limiting them to only two runs in both games.

"We just need to come out and be a little bit more fired up than we were." Brechtelsbauer said. "We weren't playing as hard as we needed to in terms of intensity."

The recent hitting of junior first baseman Theresa Shields could ignite the fire needed to resurrect the offense Shields has batted .409 (9-Shelds has batted .409 (9-for-22) during her seven-game hitting streak. In the process, she has leapt back in front of junior outfielder Jen Feldmeier (.336) for the lead in batting average.

Brechtelsbauer said Shields

Turkey hunters gobble up their chances

WASHINGTON POST

Spring wild turkey season is in earnest in Virginia and Maryland and there are gobblers aplenty in the woods, but none aptenty in the woods, but none fewer for my being there, so far.

Yes, I dressed up like a tree again this year and got up before some people go to bed to be in the woods before turkeys leave their nighttime roosts in the trees. I count my first outing in south-em Maryland last week a success. No shots, but I saw some birds up close and personal. Most days you consider yourself lucky just to hear them.

These are wonderful birds smart, wary and beautiful to watch, with incredibly sharp eyes and ears: They may only weigh 15 or 20 pounds, but they're considered big game with reason. To take one after a fair chase is a great achievement, soon to be followed by a fabulous meal. It took seven years to get my first spring bird. Or was it nine?

This is shaping up as a fine turkey season. The birds were gobbling strongly when hunting opened last weekend after a long warm spell and the weather since has been generally fair, which should keep them raising a nickus.

Spring hunting is all about the gobble, which is the male turkey's way of letting the female population know where he is so they can rush to avail themselves his services. Generally, the bigger the gobbler, the more ram-bunctious he is. Since you may take only males in spring, a gob-bler's rattling cry alerts hunters to the whereabouts of the quarry.

Then the fun begins.

Mark Hoke and I had been roaming around Cherry Hill, a 700-acre horse farm near Huntingtown, Md., for about an hour watching dawn turn to day before the action got hot. We'd heard a flock of hens fly down from their roosts, clucking like mad, and heard a distant gobble we couldn't quite pinpoint before that bird clammed up.

Now we were on the move, owl-hooting and crow-calling into the soft, green, dew-dappled hollows and ridges in hopes of rousing a late-rising gobbler. Soon we got a solid response from across a field of fresh grain sprouts.

after Saturday we would be in pretty good shape. You think if you win twice on Saturday you could at least split on Sunday — at the worst. Unfortunately that didn't happen. I think it is probably going to go down to the last weekend of the season."

One aspect he would like to see changed is the consistency of his

if some of his players are not taking care of themselves before games.

"You can't impose a curfew on Saturday night," Callahan said. "You'd like to think that a Division I athlete has enough discipline to where they can take of themselves. I'm not implying that's a problem.

Kentucky's Mohammed advised to stay in school

University of Kentucky center Nazr Mohammed may enter the NBA draft, skipping his senior season with the national champions, according to Kentucky coach Tubby Smith.

"I'm sure he's thinking about it,"
Smith told the Lexington Herald-Leader in a story Tuesday. "He's a smart and intelligent kid. It's his decision. No one can answer for him."

Smith and the player's father, Tahiru Mohammed, have advised the 6-foot-10 center to play for the Wildcats next sea-

"I talked to my son last week," Mohammed said. "He said he was think-ing about it (NBA)."

The NBA draft is set for June 24 in Vancouver. The deadline for college underclassmen to declare for the draft is May 10.

A player can regain his college eligibility by withdrawing his name before the draft but an NCAA rule enacted this year does not allow the player who is drafted to retain his eligibility.

Jim Mitchell, a Lexington-based scout for the Los Angeles Clippers, also advised that Mohammed stay in school for another season.

"He needs to stay in school," Mitchell said. "He's made such improvement. If he makes just normal improvement next year, he'll be in greater

"But there are no (frontline) centers (available in this year's draft). So someone will take him early. I'd say he'd go in the top 20 pretty easy."

Former Kentucky star Antoine

Walker, who entered the NBA draft after his sophomore season, has encouraged Mohammed to think about entering the draft. Both players are from Chicago.
"Antoine Walker is a very, very close friend," Tahiru Mohammed said.

"Antoine said he should leave every thing open. Whatever comes, grab it."

Giuliani warns New Jersey about wooing sports teams

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani warned New Jersey to back off on trying to lure the Yankees across the river — noting that New York can play the raiding game, too.

"If they are interested in talking to our heseball team, we are interested in to their soccer team, and maybe a few other teams," the mayor said.

New Jersey is home to the NFL's New York Giants and New York Jets, who share Giants Stadium. Its other teams include the New Jersey Devils of the NHL, the NBA's New Jersey Nets and the New York-New Jersey MetroStars of Major League Soccer.

The New York Post reported Monday that Yankees and New Jersey representatives discussed a possible move.

Dedication is a motivator coaches use to measure up their athletes. But no coach has ever questioned SIUC track and field long jumper/triple jumper Brad Bowers' dedica-

Bowers, a sophomore in marketing from Freeport, has remained dedicated to his sport since his arrival at SIUC last year.

"I simply work hard and try to get better and better each week," Bowers said. Better is quite an understatement considering he has already increased his personal best in the long jump nearly a foot from his fifth-place Missouri Valley Conference Championships jump of 23 feet 5.25 inches last year. He is also closing in on 50 feet in the triple jump (49 feet 1.75 inches). Last season, Bowers' best triple jump was only 46 feet 11.5 inches. 11.5 inches.

Bowers said he has always taken a strong work ethic toward his track and field events.

"I started running in sixth grade, and ever since then I've took a lot of pride and effort in trying to do my best," Bowers said. "I try to go that extra mile and basically just finishing all your workouts. A lot of people just leave or don't finish things. I feel that's important if you really want to do well and you want to try to do your best.

Men's assistant coach Cameron Wright said Bowers has been a model of consistency

Dawgs to face red-hot Illini Diamond

SLUGFEST? Illinois coming off four-game sweep of lowa.

> TRAVIS AKIN DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER.

The University of Illinois and SIUC battles usually are emotional contests, and it will especially take on more meaning since Salukis have a score to settle.

The Salukis lost 7-5 to the Illini March 25 at Abe Martin Field. The game was a 12-inning affair that the Salukis could have won, but never could put the final blow to the Illini.

But the Salukis are catching the Illini after a four-game sweep against the University of lowa. Illinois is 31-16 and are atop the Big Ten with a record of 15-5 in the conference

"It is usually a pretty good game," baseball coach Dan Callahan said. "In the past it has turned into a slugtest. I've very seldom been to a game at Illinois where the wind has not own straight out." SIUC is 17-29 and 9-15 in Missouri Valley Conference play. They are in eighth place and still in contention for the conference tournament, but only the top six teams get in the tournament. The Salukis have lost two in a row after they split two doubleheaders last weekend against Bradley University. Callahan said he plans to use several pitchers in the mid-week contest at Illinois. But he is concerned about the future for the staff as ey prepare for the final two weekend series

"I just hope we are OK as far as our pitch-," Callahan said. "I think for the most part we've got some guys who are just going to have to pick it up on the mound. We are down to eight healthy pitchers."

The Salukis used five pitchers in the second game of the Sunday twinbill. The Salukis had tied the game 3-3 in the sixth, but SIUC pitching allowed three more runs in the seventh and the Braves beat the Salukis 14-3.

"That can be demoralizing when you are struggling a little bit offensively to finally get back in a game then go back and give that back on the mound," Callahan said.

Callahan said the team is a little forestered.

Callahan said the team is a little frustrated with losing twice to Bradley and dropping to eighth place in the conference. He said there is still time to secure a spot in the tournament. "Everything is still bunched up," Callahan said. "It would have definitely been nice to win three out of four this weekend. I thought
