Victory ■ Bush declares win; Iraqi army crushed

United Press International

Allied troops freed Kuwait Wednesday and President Bush declared that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's army had been crushed and the Persian Gulf war "is now behind us."

Bush ordered a temporary cease-fire beginning Wednesday at midnight but he demanded that Iraq accept all 12 U.N. Security Council Resolutions and halt all hostilities.

"Kuwait is liberated," Bush told the world in an address from the Oval Office. "Iraq's army is defeated. Our military objectives are met."

He laid down the conditions under which the cease-fire would become permanent with Iraq accepting the 12 U.N. Security Council resolutions.

"This war is now behind us," he said.

Saddam had offered to abide by some of the U.N. resolutions in return for a cease-fire but the White House demanded total compliance.

Earlier Wednesday, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, U.S. commander of the allied forces, said Iraq's only significant remaining threat was two divisions of the touted Iraqi Republican Guard in southeastern Iraq.

"I know all Americans took great heart in the beginning of the liberation of Kuwait City, but the liberation of Kuwait, the country, is almost complete," he said. "We're going to end that (war) and end it right."

Residents of Kuwait City moved into the streets with the advancing allied troops and waved their nation's four-colored flag.

UPI correspondent Anthony O. Miller reported from Kuwait City that jubilant Kuwaitis honked horns, shouted thanks and waved their national flag in the first day of freedom from nearly seven months of Iraqi occupation.

Nowhere was the joy more evident than outside the U.S. Embassy where a stream of cars festooned with the Kuwaiti flag drove by and a crowd of men, women and children gathered to toss flowers, candy and offer thanks to U.S. Marines who retook the compound Tuesday night.

SIUC returns $1.2 million to Illinois

Academic affairs hit hard, to give largest rescission

By Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

SIUC purse strings tightened from a 1-percent return of general revenue funds, cutting the budget by $1.2 million.

The rescission was divided between seven presidential responsibility areas, one of which — academic affairs — returned $613,200.

Because academic affairs is the largest vice presidential area, it was responsible for the largest portion of the cut, said Harry Miller, associate vice president for academic affairs and research.

John Jackson, College of Liberal Arts dean, said cuts took $97,000 of COLA's 1991 budget.

Jackson said COLA took the funds from a special department account that had been set aside for future projects.

"The rescission had a fairly negative impact on this account, but at least it didn't spread the devastation throughout the college," he said.

John Evans, College of Education

associate dean, said COE returned about $77,000 for the rescission.

The cuts came from non-salary funds, Evans said.

Russell R. Dutcher, College of Science dean, said the college made its spending cuts, totaling $73,745, from an equipment fund.

"The cut is going to have a big impact on the college because science lives on equipment," he said.

The funding return required $66,184 from the College of Communications and Fine Arts, CCFDA Dean Marvin D. Kleinau said.

He said department chairmen made the program cuts.

"No matter where the cuts come from it still hurts," Kleinau said.

The College of Engineering and Technology lost $57,000 to the rescission, said Juh Wah Chen, COET dean.

Chen said cuts came from the equipment and salary budgets. Cuts in the salary budget will come from leaving unfilled positions vacant, he said.

Greg White, College of Business and Administration associate dean, said the $35,000 COBA returned came from cuts in graduate student assistantships, supplemental summer budget funds and summer research projects.

"The people hurt most will be students who won't have the classes they need," White said.

White said COBA tried to rearrange graduation requirements for students who have been affected by summer curriculum cuts.

Kenneth Peterson, Libraries dean, said the $32,864 in rescission penalties to the libraries were passed to faculty and staff members instead of the students.

The largest library cut, $16,742, came from the salary budget. Vacant positions will be left open for two to three months, Peterson said.

Other cuts were made in the library materials budget, which means fewer book purchases and the travel line budget, he said.

There are no plans to cut back library open hours, but it is possible hours will be cut between spring and summer semesters, he said.

The College of Agriculture took its cuts from the support cost budget, COA Dean

Edgar expands staff despite pledge to cut 35 employees

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The number of employees on Gov. Jim Edgar's staff increased slightly during his first month in office even though the new chief executive's first major act as governor was to pledge to cut 35 workers.

On Jan. 15, the day after he was elected, Edgar said he would slash $1 million in annual costs from his office. He pledged to cut 35 employees, reduce executive security, restrict travel and eliminate many magazine subscriptions. The move was to show he was serious about budget cuts with the state facing a financial crisis.

However, payroll records obtained by United Press International this week from the state comptroller's office showed that in all parts of the governor's office except the Bureau of the Budget, the number of employees rose by one from 185 on Jan. 31 to 186 on Feb. 15.

The 186 workers was also 11 more than the number of executive office employees on Nov. 30, when Gov. James R. Thompson neared the end of his term.

Edgar's press secretary Mike Lawrence said Wednesday the transition period for state government has made it impossible for Edgar to quickly reduce the staff. The new governor is instead gradually phasing out people who worked for former Gov. James R. Thompson.

At least six of the people who are listed on the last state payroll on Feb. 15 have left or are in the process of getting out, Lawrence said, adding that some people are still on the payroll because they are using accumulated vacation time before they leave.

"(Termination) notices have gone out all over," Lawrence said. "There are some unhappy people since we've been sending notices out."

Among those employees who were on the last payroll but have left since then are two of Thompson spokeswoman. Beth Bosch, who was Thompson's speechwriter in the last months he was in office, left the governor's

SIUC Kuwaitis grateful to U.S., world for help

By Tiffany Youter
Staff Writer

As Kuwait became liberated, Kuwaiti students at SIUC expressed their relief and gratitude for the worldwide aid their nation received.

President George Bush declared total victory in the Persian Gulf war Wednesday. He ordered a temporary cease-fire to the 42-day-old war, which was brought on by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The emir of Kuwait is expected to return to Kuwait City this week. He has declared martial law for Kuwait.

Three Salukis recognized in Valley

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Saluki sophomore center Ashraf Amaya made a name for himself last season as the Missouri Valley Conference Outstanding Freshman. This year he was honored by the media as a member of the MVC All-Conference First Team.

Two other Salukis were honored as senior guard Sterling Mahan was named to the All-Conference Second Team by the media and coaches. Senior forward Rick Shipley was selected to the Second Team by the coaches and the Honorable Mention squad by the media.

Amaya was the only player named to the All-Conference First Team that was not a senior. He led the Valley in shooting percentage and tied MVC Player of the Year Chad Gallagher as the top rebounder. The 6-foot-8 center from Oak Park averaged 15.5 points and 8.7 rebounds a game for the Salukis this season.

Amaya's 30 points Monday night against Drake was the most compiled by a Saluki this season. His 16 rebounds against Drake Jan. 26 also was the highest on the SIUC squad. He led the team with 49 blocked shots, while playing 33.2 minutes a game.

In the coaches' poll, Amaya was named to the All-Conference Second Team. He was also selected to the MVC All-Defensive Team.

Mahan's average of 17.3 points a contest was tops on the Saluki roster this season. Mahan also led the team with 51 steals and 99 assists, playing 33.5 minutes a game.

He has scored in double figures 70 times and has scored 20 or more points 22 times as a Saluki. Mahan topped the 1,000-point mark Dec. 1 when he scored a career-high 28 points against St. Louis in the Arena.

Mahan, as is Shipley, is one of the most durable players in

Salukis need two more wins to be Gateway Champions

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Two down and two to go. The Saluki women's basketball team is just two wins away from repeating as Gateway Conference Champions and hosting the conference tournament as the No. 1 seed.

Last weekend, SIUC made a couple big steps in its quest by knocking off Northern Iowa and Drake at home, but this week the ladies will have to finish up with Wichita State and Southwest Missouri State on the road.

If SIUC drops both WSU and Southwest, the Salukis take the title and the No. 1 seed. However, if Southwest beats Eastern Illinois tonight and SIUC Saturday, the Shockers take the entire cake.

The contest against Wichita State tonight would seem like a pushover. The Shockers are a horrid 5-20 overall and 2-14 in the conference. But WSU came up with a stunning upset of Big 8 power Kansas Monday to prove they do have some firepower left. "I was just so pleased with our defensive effort against Southwest last week," WSU head coach Linda Hargrove said. "I thought the whole team played hard and that's encouraging."

The Shockers offense is led by forward Gina Johnson and guard Monck Dean-Johnson. Johnson is WSU's top scorer and rebounder averaging 16 points and eight rebounds a game. Dean-Johnson is notching just under 10 points a game and is the Shockers leading 3-point shooter. "They have all their starters back," Saluki head coach Cindy Scott said. "And they are coming off a big win over Kansas. It will be a good game."

The Gateway finale will come to center stage Saturday at Southwest Missouri. The Bears high-powered offense (75.6 points a game) will try to solve SIUC's league-leading defense (allowing only 54 points a game).

The frontlines of both schools should be where this contest is won or lost. The Bears boast a big three of Lawayntia Dawson (17.4 ppg.), Karen Rapier (15.2 ppg.) and Secelia Winkfield (10.3 ppg.). The job of outscoring and out-defending Southwest's trio will fall into the hands of SIUC's Amy Rakkers, Angie Rougeau and Kelly Firth.

Firth, Rakkers and Rougeau combine to average more than 35

Swimmers compete in Gateway

Salukis vying for NCAA qualifying times

By Jennifer Wise
Staff Writer

Confidence is abundant among SIUC women swimmers and divers entering the Gateway/Midwest Conference Championship at 11 a.m. today through Saturday at the Recreation Center.

The Salukis will compete against Gateway Conference schools Illinois State, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois and Northern Iowa. Midwest conference teams competing are Northern Illinois, the University of Illinois-Chicago and the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

ISU has won the Gateway the past three years. SIUC placed second last year.

"ISU and SIUC have been really close the last couple of years," Saluki junior Nancy Schmidkofer said. "This year we're stronger and more mature. Everyone is set on qualifying for the NAAs more than winning the conference. As a team we have set our goals higher. We're a good team and I think we'll win."

SIUC coach Doug Ingram said Schmidkofer has high potential for making the NCAA zone cuts. Schmidkofer will compete in the 50 and 100 freestyles, and hopes to swim all three relays; the 400 freestyle, 400 medley and 200 freestyle.

Relays bring in points and allow the team to work as a group rather than depend on just one person, Schmidkofer said.

"We have three relays," Schmidkofer said. "Those are so close and if we make those then there will be a substantial amount of chance to go to the NAAs. It's a team effort."

Ingram said the meet will come down to SIUC's quality of versus ISU's quantity of swimmers. He added SIUC is strong in freestyle sprints and mid-distance events but not as strong in the 500 and 1,650.

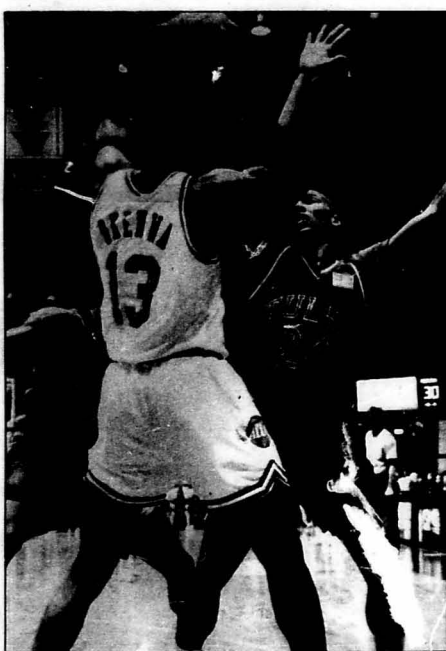

"They have good depth in every event," Ingram said. "We have really good quality but we don't go as deep in each event. If we can get enough point lead built up in the freestyle, maybe we can offset deficits in the distance events. ISU has no real weak spots so we can't afford to be weak in anything."

Junior Tonia Mahaira, junior Julie Hosier and Schmidkofer are likely to qualify for the NAAs, Ingram said. He added that the relay events should score high for SIUC.

"The relays are a key because when you can win relays it shows that you not only have four people performing well on the same day, but there is team unity and bonding," Ingram said.

Ingram added that Mahaira is the Sophomore center Emeka Okenwa is working hard for his turn to shine for the Saluki basketball team.

Emeka Okenwa waits for his turn in spotlight

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Saluki sophomore Emeka Okenwa is just waiting in the wings for his chance to run with the pack.

The 6-foot-8 center has played in 25 of the Salukis' 27 games this season. He started two of those contests when Coach Rich Herrin installed a bigger lineup, but he has only averaged 9.8 minutes a game.

Okenwa scored a season-high 19 points in the season opener against Western Kentucky, but has only scored in double figures twice since then.

"Emeka Okenwa has made a lot of progress this season," Herrin said. "He started off strong for us, then struggled in the middle of the season, but he's been coming around again toward the end of the season."

Herrin said Okenwa could see more time against some of the bigger teams in the Missouri Valley Tournament this weekend in St. Louis.

Okenwa is happy with the season he is having, but plans to continue to work hard every day

Salvadoran rebels release hostages taken in night raid

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran rebels Wednesday released hostages taken in a late-night attack on a posh residential neighborhood that left one civilian dead and seven others wounded, the military said. Rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, FMLN, used two U.N. observers as hostages to withdraw from the Escalon neighborhood early Wednesday, the army said in a statement. The hostages apparently were never taken out of the neighborhood and were released unharmed.

Soviet troops destroy Polish environment

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The estimated 58,000 Soviet troops stationed in Poland are devastating the environment and refusing to pay for the damages, press reports said Wednesday. Trybuna, the former newspaper of the disbanded Communist Party, said the Polish government will demand millions of dollars in damages during a fourth round of talks on the withdrawal of Soviet troops scheduled for March 13-14 in Moscow. It cited as examples the setting of 92 fires in Silesian forests in the southwest and the dumping of oil and wastes into rivers.

Senate ethics panel faults Cranston conduct

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee charged Wednesday that Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., engaged in an "impermissible pattern of conduct" and rebuked four other senators for pressuring a federal agency on behalf of a savings and loan operator who gave $1.3 million to their campaigns and causes. The committee found fault — but did not recommend additional action — with the conduct of the four other senators: Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Donald Riegle, D-Mich., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John McCain, R-Ariz.

NASA undecided on shuttle launch schedule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — NASA officials, split over whether to launch the shuttle Discovery with cracked hinges, decided Wednesday to delay a key meeting. Discovery and its seven-man crew are tentatively scheduled to blast off on the year's first shuttle mission at 3:49 a.m. EST on March 9 to kick off an eight-day "Star Wars" research mission. A final decision on whether to clear Discovery for takeoff as is or roll the shuttle back to the hangar for time-consuming repairs had been expected Friday.

Jackson's 1990 campaign loans questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson may have violated District of Columbia campaign laws when he borrowed $33,500 from the National Rainbow Coalition last year, it was reported Wednesday. The Washington Times quoted a source in the D.C. Office of Campaign Finance as saying Jackson has been ordered to repay the loans his campaign secured last October and November. City law prohibits contributions of more than $2,000 from individuals or organizations that are not professional lending institutions.

Daley savors renomination, seeks first full mayor term

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Richard M. Daley Wednesday savored a renomination victory so overwhelming that even his late father, Richard J. "Boss" Daley, would have been impressed. The younger Daley, seeking his first full term as mayor, rolled up nearly 65 percent of the vote in a four-candidate primary; endorsed 24 City Council candidates, all of whom either won outright or got into runoffs; and helped to easy victory the candidates he endorsed for city clerk and treasurer. Daley significantly improved his support among blacks.

SIUC faculty to exhibit art at campus museum

By Sherril L. Wilcox
Staff Writer

SIUC faculty members will showcase their personal artwork next month as part of the annual Faculty Exhibit at the University Museum.

The exhibit is open to faculty from the School of Art and Design, the Department of Cinema and Photography and the Department of Theater.

Janet Berker, museum secretary, said 24 faculty members have entered the 1991 exhibit.

"We have oils, glass, photographs, fibers — all kinds of interesting stuff," she said.

Brett Alexander, a graduate assistant at the museum, said each faculty member is allowed one entry in the exhibit.

"This way, the exhibit is new," he said. "It changes quite a bit from year to year."

Kevin Veera, a graduate assistant, is handling the production of the exhibit.

"One piece included is a large sculpture by Joel Feldman (professor of art and design)," Veera said.

"It's about 20 feet by 20 feet, completely constructed of interlocking pieces of assorted wood."

Jan Roddy, assistant professor of cinema and photography, entered a piece that uses plexiglass and lighting to enhance its visual effect.

Participating faculty members include:

■ David McLain, Jan Hiatt and Ron Naversen from the Department of Theater,

■ Jan Peterson, Roddy, David Gilmore, Daniel Overturi and Charles Swedlund from the Department of Cinema and Photography, ■ Joel Feldman, Ed Shay, Aldon Addington, Larry Bernstein, Bill Boysen, Harris Deller, Herbert Fink, Sylvia Greenfield, Jed Jackson, Brent Kington, Joan Lintault, Richard Mawdsley, Jerry Monteith, Michael Onken, Robert Paulson, Ann Saunders and Kay P. Zivkovich from the School of Art and Design.

The exhibition will run March 1 to April 7.

The University Museum in Forer Hall is open 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday.

911 on hold

New system delayed two years; surcharge to start in spring

By Gregory Norfleet
Staff Writer

Even though the Jackson County 911 system will not be fully implemented for two years, surcharges for the service begin in April.

The Jackson County Emergency Telephone System Board is developing, installing and making operational the enhanced 911 system for emergency services, board Vice Chairman Bill Crawshaw said.

In April, a $1.25 surcharge will appear on phone bills for the 911 system, said William Kilquist, chairman of the board's Mapping and Database Committee.

The reason for collecting the fee before the 911 program is actually implemented is that it will save Jackson County from borrowing the money. Expenses now include attorneys and insurance, he said.

The process is projected to take 18 to 24 months, Kilquist said.

"This is an enormous task to create a very, very detailed system," Crawshaw said.

An application for the system must be filed and approval must come from the Illinois Commerce Commission, Crawshaw said.

The board also needs to select a company to do the job of mapping and assigning addresses, a key component of the enhanced 911 system, Kilquist said.

The committee will work with SIU Campus Affairs to establish an enhanced Public Emergency Service Answering Point system for on-campus emergencies, Crawshaw said.

He said SIU has a very basic, non-licensed 911 system that hooks a person up with the security office. On that system, a person needs to give basic information such as name and location.

The off-campus system, when fully operational, will have the capability to trace phone calls with an automatic name locator and an automatic locating system, Kilquist said.

"Before any information is taken over the phone, the computer will know where the call is coming from, whether anyone in the home has a heart condition, if there are any chemicals on the premises and such," he said.

Before any information is taken, the computer will know where the call is coming from.

An extensive amount of work will go into mapping and addressing Jackson County.

"Every building capable of having a phone will be mapped," Kilquist said. "Every address will be put into the system, those streets without names will be given names, places without addresses will be given addresses."

The board will consult aerial photos, the postal authority, the assessor's office and the electric company to be as thorough as possible, he said.

The telephone company will upgrade its information into the system every three days by a phone modem. Every 10 to 20 feet of roads will be digitized for more accurate directions to get emergency information to the location sooner, Kilquist said.

Civic Center still in the works despite lack of state funding

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

The Civic Center Authority Board of Directors is not giving up. It still wants a civic center in Carbondale.

Gov. Jim Edgar announced Monday he will stop funding to civic centers around the state that have not been approved, because the state needs to fund programs such as road and waste-water treatment projects.

But Board Chairwoman Helen Westberg said she does not want to "close the door too soon" because there are some things that can still be done.

Steve Hoffner, secretary-treasurer of the board, said the next steps to take include looking at buildings in the downtown area that are already built. There may already be a building that could serve as a civic center.

Another possibility is to downscale the project, he said.

Downscaling might include only building the city hall instead of having the city hall as part of the civic center, Hoffner said.

The original plan was to connect the civic center to a new city hall. It would have been located on the corner of Illinois Avenue and Walnut Street and would have included several meeting rooms and an auditorium.

"I certainly understand the state's financial problems," Hoffner said. "But there is no where else to look for those kinds of funds."

Westberg said many civic groups were hoping to use the civic center for meetings.

"I don't think there was anything we could have done differently," she said. "We had valid needs we were trying to address. The sad part is that we still have those needs."

Carbondale was one of 16 cities asking the state to help build or expand its civic center and other community projects.

Bush's energy plan ignores conservation

PRESIDENT BUSH'S ENERGY policy drilled to the core of maintaining the American lifestyle. But it failed to dig deep enough into conservation.

The policy favors an increase in oil drilling, nuclear power and the use of alternative fuel sources.

But Bush argued that some conservation proposals he had seen would "adversely affect the working man and woman in this country, American jobs and American industry."

In other words, decreasing production would create unemployment and lower the standard of American living conditions.

While the president focused on the well-being of individuals, he should have suggested how the same individuals can conserve resources.

THE PERSIAN GULF WAR could have exemplified a conservation element in such a proposal.

The war should have shown Americans, if anything, that oil is not an unlimited supply and that the United States is dependent on other countries to some extent for its own well-being.

The United States imports 42 percent of the oil it uses, and Americans use 40 percent of this oil for automobiles alone.

For a more balanced policy, Bush could push for more domestic oil production (by drilling in northeastern Alaska, for example) while pushing for more Americans to drive the speed limit to conserve fuel.

THE ADMINISTRATION ALSO CAN BE questioned on its stance of clean coal technology, which conserves coal by breaking it down to its components and allowing for wider uses.

Although the president proposed to increase use of such technology, he cut $600 million in clean coal research funds from the national budget.

Such a position emphasizes production over conservation.

If the president wants a "secure, efficient and environmentally sound" future for America as he pledges, he must stress both individual and corporate conservation as well as pushing ahead with increased production.

Quotable Quotes

"When you have faith in your God and in your leader this kind of thing from Arab soldiers is impossible,"—said a Jordanian citizen expressing his disbelief over reports of the large numbers of Iraqi prisoners.

"... We must give them the tools and the information that will help them prepare for their future—or they'll have no future."—said the president for Planned Parenthood of New York City about the N.Y.C. Board of Education's decision to hand out condoms to high school students.

"I want to bring music back to the point you can play it to your mother."—James Brown said about his return to music after being granted parole.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

Software makes marriage hard

This is the story of a once-happy, middle-class couple who have come to marital grief. Out of respect for their feelings, I withhold real names. But the story should be told as a warning to others.

It begins innocently enough. Joan, as I'll call her, was Christmas shopping. As always, she had trouble finding something for Mel, as I'll call the husband.

A successful man, he had all the material possessions that were dear to him: graphite-shafted golf clubs, a snow blower, his favorite CDs and more neckties than he could ever stain.

Joan was in a mall to buy another golf shirt and sweater Mel didn't need when she paused at a computer store. In the window was a software program for designing dream golf courses.

She remembered the computer in Mel's home study. He bought it a couple of years ago because everyone he knew was buying them. He hooked it up, wrote a few letters, turned it off, and it had just sat there since.

On an impulse, she bought the golf software. But it seemed a small gift. So she talked to the salesman and he showed her several other programs. She selected a war game and, on a whim, a home accounting system.

"If he doesn't like them," she told herself, "he can bring them back."

When he opened the gifts, Mel seemed pleased. At least they weren't more ties. And his interest in the computer was rekindled. On weekends, he began spending hours in his study, poring over the manuals and jabbing at the computer keys.

Then one Saturday Mel asked Joan if he could see the ledger she used to record checks.

She was surprised. Mel had never taken an interest in household finances. He earned a comfortable living and left such things to her. Why did he want it, she asked? He said he just wanted to play around with the accounting program.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

He took the ledger and stayed in his study until dinner time.

The next morning, he asked if she would dig out their credit card receipts. Not just current bills, but for the past year. Once again, he didn't emerge until she looked in and told him dinner was ready. He was furiously rapping at the keys.

He wolfed down his food and returned to his study. Hours later, Mel came into the living room.

I'll let Joan tell the rest:

"I asked him if he had designed his dream golf course. He shook his head. Then he unfurled a computer printout. It had to be 6 feet long. And he had another one that was even longer.

"He said: 'This is incredible. Do you know what we've been spending eating out?' And he showed me this row of figures with every restaurant we'd been in for the last year. And he said: 'Look at this.' I asked him what it was. He said: 'That's what I was going to ask you. There's no way we can be spending this much on groceries. There's enough here to feed an army.'

"He had a printout of every check I've written at the supermarket. I told him that when I pay for groceries, I make it bigger so I'll have cash for other things. You know, gas, the carwash, the baby sitters.

"He said: 'Cash. Ah, very good.

I can easily set up a cash account. All you have to do is make a note of how much of the check is for groceries, and how much is for cash.' Then he went back to his computer and I didn't see him until morning.

"So I started doing that — making notes on checks. But one day he comes out with another printout. He said: 'This isn't good enough. Just saying cash doesn't tell me enough. Look at this. In my cash account, I know where every nickel goes. I just put it in and the computer breaks it down and organizes it and adds it up. See? At this point I know precisely what I've spent this year on lunches, cough drops, Kleenex, panhandlers, everything. But all you tell me is cash. Cash? That's meaningless.'

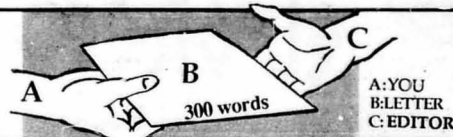

"I asked him what he wanted. He said: 'Everything. Every receipt, every item of cash flow.' I said: 'Cash flow?' He said: 'Right. How can my computer establish my total financial picture unless I have cash flow, net worth, the whole thing? All I need do is feed data in and this program tells me up to the minute what we are worth. Isn't that incredible?'

"I asked him why in the world we had to know what we are worth up to the minute. We've always had more than we need. He had this strange look in his eyes and he said: 'Please, just do it for me. In data there is knowledge, and in knowledge there is life.' I didn't ask him what that meant.

"So I did as he asked. He has every receipt from the dry cleaners, drugstore, supermarket. And it's a nightmare. He has every purchase broken down, item by item.

"He says to me: 'Do you know what we spend on toothpaste? Do we eat it?' He saw a pear that no one had eaten. It became overripe. He ran to his study, poked his computer, showed me a printout and said: 'Look! This is what that pear cost me. And that doesn't include the interest I could have earned.'

Kuwait, said he thanks God and the allies for the liberation of his country.

He said he is sure Kuwait will rebuild soon.

"The sun of freedom is rising in Kuwait after seven months of darkness," Al-Qenlas said.

He said there will be no security in the Middle East region if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein remains in power. He said he hopes Saddam will be removed very soon so all neighbors of Iraq can be more relaxed.

"I wish I were there in Kuwait just to see what is going on," he said. "To see Kuwaiti people happy and laughing."

Abdul Aziz Al-Bader, member of Solidarity International for Kuwait in Washington, D.C., said although Iraqi soldiers killed and tortured Kuwaitis prior to and during the liberation effort, Kuwaiti citizens now have started to organize and are trying to get the situation under control.

According to a report issued by the solidarity on recent aggressions by the Iraqi military against Kuwaiti civilians, the Iraqi regime issued an order Feb. 17 to their military in Kuwait to execute all Kuwaiti detainees.

Their number is assumed to be 65 men and women, the report said.

The solidarity report also said after Feb. 21 the Iraqis undertook a major arrest campaign, including anyone found in the streets.

"The ages of those arrested were between 15 and 55," the report said. "After blindfolding their eyes, they were transported to Iraq and treated as POWs."

Naser, SIUC student from Kuwait, said he was unable to contact his family for months because of communication restrictions imposed on Kuwait.

He preferred not to have his full name printed because his brother is a prisoner in Iraq and he is concerned for his family's safety.

Naser said Kuwaiti citizens are very happy about the emir's return and are completely behind him.

He said Saddam and his regime should be totally held responsible for all that has happened to the Kuwaiti people.

There will be no peace in this region if he remains in power, he said.

"As long as he doesn't have a strong army he cannot wage any wars," Naser said. "But we won't shed a tear if he goes."

He said Kuwaitis are in debt to the American people for the help and support they have received since the Aug. 2 invasion.

"We are thankful to the whole world for liberating our country," Naser said. "It is really a coalition job."

Adel Al-Wugayan, graduate assistant in business administration from Kuwait, said he was amazed to see his cousin being tortured on national television Tuesday.

He said he was watching live coverage of the war on CNN when he saw his cousin blindfolded and his hand branded with a hot knife.

"They did this so that when he becomes an old man he will remember this incident," Al-Wugayan said.

He said he is outraged that Jordanians and Palestinians who lived in Kuwait at the time of the Iraqi invasion in August still are supportive of Saddam's regime.

"When they went back to Jordan they said everything is normal in Kuwait City, with no atrocities," he said. "They said Saddam is a hero."

Al-Wugayan said he thanks God not many allied soldiers were harmed during the liberation of Kuwait.

He said he cannot wait to return to Kuwait and rejoice with his people.

over the embassy when Marines arrived, said Lt. Brian Knowles, 25, of Chesapeake, Va., who led the team that recaptured the embassy.

The flag that flew, Knowles said, was the same one raised and left by the U.S. ambassador when he departed Kuwait.

The Iraqis did not touch it or the embassy.

The abandoned U.S. Embassy was reclaimed by 12 Marines.

"One platoon came in, did the job, and we had tea brewing before anyone else was up," said Staff Sgt. Edmond Maztarski, 28, New York.

"U.S. Embassies are guarded by Marines," he said. "We wanted Marines to be the first ones to take it back."

But the celebrations were tempered by reports that as many as 40,000 young Kuwaiti men were taken north by Iraqis and what Schwarzkopf called atrocities "of the most unspeakable type" throughout the city.

The allies, meanwhile, started trying to work out a plan on what to do when the hostilities ended. Meetings among some of the foreign ministers began and were scheduled to continue through the next few days.

Schwarzkopf was clearly upbeat in briefing reporters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, using adjectives like "brilliant," "superb" and "extraordinary" to describe the success of the troops he led.

The commander unloaded an array of statistics to prove his point. He said allied forces had "rendered inoperable" 29 of Iraq's 42 military divisions and expressed confidence that ongoing battles with two Republican Guard units would be allied successes.

Pentagon officials said the other 11 divisions do not pose an imminent threat.

Allied forces destroyed 3,008 of Iraq's 4,230 tanks, 1,856 of its 2,870 armored vehicles and 2,140 of its 3,110 artillery pieces, he said, adding these numbers were growing and Saddam by midday Wednesday had only about 500 tanks remaining in the gulf war theater.

James A. Tweedy said. "We just picked up money where we could find it," Tweedy said. "Anytime you have to take money from supplemental costs base it really hurts."

The college will be hurt most by its inability to purchase new equipment, he said.

"I have a long list of equipment items that we won't be able to purchase," Tweedy said. "A lot of our equipment is old and worn out and needs to be replaced."

Tweedy said the only reason the college isn't crippled by the cuts is because his faculty actively obtained outside grants for equipment and research in the past five years.

The School of Law returned approximately $30,000.

John Yopp, Graduate School dean, said cuts from the Graduate School only came from funding that had not been committed yet. The cuts, totaling $28,000, came from unfilled assistantships and travel budgets, he said.

The rescission did not hit the Graduate School as hard as the other colleges, Yopp said.

"Figures for the College of Technical Careers could not be obtained.

The largest academic unit cut was in the School of Medicine, which returned $259,402. Dean Richard H. Moy was unavailable for comment.

The six other SIUC presidential responsibility areas returns include:

- $136,400 for campus services;
- $69,500 for financial affairs;
- $34,900 for president's administration;
- $26,600 for student affairs;
- $9,600 for intercollegiate athletics;
- $8,000 for university relations.

office earlier this month to become a public information officer at the Department of Revenue. Meanwhile, public information officer Jill Fowler has left Edgar to go work for the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

Another chief Thompson assistant, Phil Gonet, has left the governor's office for a top job at the Illinois Commerce Commission, the state's utility regulatory body.

The staff cuts in the governor's office are expected to be a preview of what may be major layoffs when Edgar presents his first budget to the General Assembly on Wednesday.

Earlier this week, Edgar said he plans to have 2,000 fewer employees in state agencies under his control than the total headcount during former Gov. James R. Thompson's administration.

As of Feb. 15, Edgar had 17 employees in his office earning more than $70,000 per year, which is more than many directors of state agencies make annually. The top two salaries went to John Washburn, who was Thompson's deputy governor and is still on Edgar's staff, at about $90,000 per year and Edgar's chief of staff Kirk Dillard, who will earn about $89,000.

However, Washburn may not remain with Edgar in the deputy governor capacity because Edgar said his deputy governor will be Bob Kustra, his lieutenant governor.

Older Americans face nursing home stays

BOSTON (UPI) — Older Americans face a "substantial" risk they will someday have to receive extended nursing home care at considerable possible expense, researchers said Wednesday.

Of the 2.2 million Americans who turned 65 in 1990, more than 500,000 are expected to spend at least a year in nursing homes before they die and 195,000 will likely spend at least five years in such facilities, said Christopher Murtaugh of the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research in Rockville, Md.

"With the elderly population growing, this has important implications for both medical practice and the financing of long-term care," Murtaugh and a colleague at the agency, which is part of the Department of Health and Human Services, reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Based on projections formed from a national survey of adults who died in 1986, Murtaugh said one out of 11 Americans who turn 65 can expect currently to spend at least five years in a nursing home at an annual average cost of $25,000 a year.

"The likelihood of spending a large amount of time in a nursing home is substantial," he said, noting that a five-year stay costing $125,000 or more is "enough to exhaust the financial resources of all but the wealthiest elderly persons."

The study found a "much higher proportion" of older women than older men likely will spend time in nursing homes. Of those currently 65, one out of every three women but only one out of seven men are expected to spend at least a year in such homes, said Murtaugh.

In addition, considerably more whites than blacks receive nursing home care, he said. Among people who died in 1985, 38 percent of whites but only 27 percent of blacks had experienced at least one nursing home stay, the study found. Murtaugh said women may be more likely to wind up in nursing homes because "they generally outlive their spouses. While husbands are alive, their wives are often available to take care of them. But later on, the wives must rely on nursing homes for their own care."

He said it is not known why blacks use nursing homes less than whites.

Possible reasons include discrimination on the part of health care providers or insurers, fewer available beds in areas with large black populations or a better system of family-provided care, Murtaugh said.

An estimated 1.5 million Americans currently reside in nursing homes — a figure expected to double within the next 30 years. Annual inflation-adjusted expenditures for nursing home care rose from $4.2 billion in 1964 to $34.7 billion in 1985, Murtaugh said.

Lawmaker rejects 'wimpy' 'Friendship State' motto

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Texans may have a reputation for being friendly, but one state lawmaker doesn't want that "wimpy" image splashed across automobile license plates.

Wednesday proposed a new motto for Texas plates — "The Lone Star State."

In August 1989, the Texas Highway Commission proposed the motto "Friendship State" for Texas license plates, prompting complaints from almost 25,000 citizens who said it was too generic, too bland and downright "wimpy."

Special effects, neon lighting highlight of ZZ Top concert

Concert Review

By Tracy Sargeant
Entertainment Editor

Southern Illinois laid out the red carpet for ZZ Top, and the bearded trio swept the sold-out Arena crowd off its feet Tuesday night.

The opening act, the Black Crowes, received a fair amount of applause from the audience, especially for the songs, "She Talks to Angles," and "Hard to Handle."

But a noticeable tension filled the air as the crowd anticipated ZZ Top's entrance.

The crowd buzzed during the short intermission before ZZ Top played. The road crew was busy setting up the elaborate stage partially hidden by a large black curtain.

As the curtain dropped, a neon transparent mesh with the outline of a chain-link fence appeared. Two "headlights" shone through the smoke and curtain, and the sound of a revving engine could be heard.

The multi-level stage contained items that would be found in a junk yard.

Compacted cars contained television sets that buzzed on and off with surreal visions of naked women during parts of the show.

A safety-yellow electromagnetic crane, with stains of rust running from its bolts, carried several items into a junk hopper.

In "Gimme All Your Lovin'," drummer Frank Beard's traveling drum set was made from the junk in the hopper.

The typical ZZ Top laser-light show was outstanding. Although some people couldn't see the large black screen because of their seats, the optical effects that were produced from the stage encompassed the crowd.

At one point, a curtain of green laser light and smoke turned and whirled through the audience.

In the middle of the concert, two rows of lights dropped from the rigging and spotlighted the band. This created a very intense moment as the lights moved from audience to stage and back again.

The trio jammed on several blues tunes, including "My Head's In Mississippi," "Jesus Just Left Chicago," and "Blue Jeans Blue."

The stage also included a conveyor belt, which guitarist Billy Gibbons and bassist Dusty Hill used in their performance. The two looked like they were having a blast on stage.

One of the outstanding special effects was when the crane came down and "picked-up" Hill and Gibbons and the magnet lifted a life-like doll of Beard into the junk hopper. This followed the theme of the Recycler tour.

The song, "Got Me Under Pressure" from the Eliminator album, which was pre-recorded, kept playing as the hopper smoked and wheezed.

In three to five minutes the recycled ZZ Top came out of the hopper wearing fitted cranberry purple suits with matching derby hats. They were driving crushed red and blue cars.

The fuzzy guitar-wielding duo proceeded to do an electrifying rendition of "Legs," and "Sharp Dressed Man."

A clean-up crew consisting of five women scantily dressed in high-heels, torn white T-shirts and denim shorts ripped-up-to-the-belt loops and shiny silver hard hats, picked up the pieces of the cars.

While not cleaning the stage, they proceeded to dance and pose for the audience.

The show seemed very balanced. During the special effects, the music was less intense. When the music was at its height of perfection, the stage show and lights backed off to emphasize the musical precision of the band.

The main speakers, which wrapped around the stage, were about 12 feet tall and 18 feet wide. Although loud, the sound quality was not distorted. The bass rattled and vibrated through the audience.

For their encore, Gibbons and Hill sported neon green guitars with pink detailing. They played "Tube Snake Boogie," "My Head's In Mississippi," and "Tush."

On the last song, the car on the far right side of the stage wobbled and fell to the stage as the final fireworks exploded in a powerful blast.

A round of applause should be given to the stage and light crew. The behind-the-scenes work went off without a hitch.

It was evident that most of the audience came to see ZZ Top, especially when the Black Crowes were playing.

Someone on the main floor broke out a pink latex balloon, which the audience batted around for some time. Pretty soon it was joined by a blue balloon.

The lead singer for the Black Crowes, Chris Robinson had a few moves of his own, though.

He hopped around the stage twirling his microphone around like a propeller blade.

It was sad to hear the Crowes rip off the Beatles classic, "Get Back." However, they took the liberty to make up their own lyrics and only used the chorus to "Get Back" and they had enough material to keep the audience mildly entertained.

Illinois high school photographers to shoot for prizes in competition

By Annette Holder
Staff Writer

Prizes and recognition may be as easy as clicking a shutter for Illinois high school students interested in photography.

A contest for high school photographers is sponsored by the SIUC Photographic Production Technology program in the College of Technical Careers.

Prizes valued at more than $2,500 include cameras, lenses, tripods, camera bags, photography books and magazine subscriptions. Gerald Courvoisier, instructor at the college, said he expects more participants this year than last because the required size of the print has been reduced.

The print size required used to be 8 1/2 x 11, but the department will now accept prints 3 1/2 x 5.

Courvoisier believes more people will enter this year because of the reduced cost of mailing the smaller sized print.

Last year CTC received 125 entries.

Courvoisier said this year he would like to double that number.

The four categories that black and white or color photographs can be entered include school life/sports, landscape/nature, personality/portraits or open.

The open category includes everything that does not fit into the other three.

"This is an opportunity for every student (in Illinois) to produce images through the photographic media," said Courvoisier.

Every student who enters the contest will receive a prize.

The deadline for entering is May 15.

Additional information is available from high school art departments.

Brown released from prison, plans new direction for album

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — State officials paroled singer James Brown on Wednesday, nearly 2 1/2 years after the "Godfather of Soul" was sentenced to six years in prison for leading police on a two-state auto chase.

Brown appeared before the board and was released after a brief hearing, said Beth Allain, spokeswoman for the Parole and Community Corrections Board.

The performer will remain on parole until Oct. 23, 1993, and then will be placed on probation for an additional five years, she said.

"I feel good," Brown, 57, said after the hearing, borrowing a line from one of his best-known songs.

The two-time Grammy winner said he plans to finish a new album in April and told reporters he hopes to change the direction of modern music. "I want to bring music back to the point you can play it to your mother," he said.

Brown, popularly known as the "Godfather of Soul," was convicted of trying to run down police officers during a 1988 car chase along the Georgia-South Carolina border. He was sentenced to concurrent six-year prison sentences.

Brown served 15 months of his sentence at the State Park Correctional Facility near Columbia. Last year, he was transferred to a work-release program in Aiken, where he worked counseling youths about drug abuse and spent his nights at a corrections department minimum-security facility.

The singer has maintained a low profile since his sentence, serving as a community liaison officer "helping the poor help themselves," said George Anderson, executive director of the Aiken and Barnwell counties Community Action Commission.

This past Christmas, Brown gave a benefit performance at the Fort Jackson Army Base, where he had a reunion with St. Clair Pinckney of Atlanta, who has known Brown since the fifth grade.

"He was in superb shape and his voice sounded great," said Pinckney. "He appeared to be very strong. It kind of took me back to the old days, made me feel good. He seemed to be revitalized. His mind is sharp."

Pinckney said Brown is looking forward to resuming his performing career and seems to have benefited from his work with the poor.

"It was a forced vacation," Pinckney said. "That's the most positive way to put it. I'm ready for the next chapter in the James Brown story. I pray that it will be right around the corner."

New York schools to vote on giving condoms to stop spread of AIDS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Amid a boiling controversy that would have been unthinkable a decade ago, the New York City Board of Education Wednesday was scheduled to vote on a proposal to hand out condoms to students in the nation's largest high school system.

The board was reported deeply divided on the plan, which was hailed by its supporters as the only way to stop the spread of AIDS, and condemned by church leaders and others as condoning immorality and abandoning parents' moral authority.

The seven members, reported split three for and three against, with one swing vote, were to take up the proposal at a meeting Wednesday.

The major stumbling block to passage of the plan has been whether students should be required to obtain some form of parental consent to get the prophylactics. As proposed, parents would not have to be informed.

The condoms would be distributed in at least one location at every public high school by faculty or volunteers.

Students would not even have to identify themselves to receive a condom.

Schools Chancellor Joseph Fernandez has stood firm on the parental consent issue, saying he wants a simple "up or down" vote on the original proposal.

Fernandez has pointed out that New York City has the nation's largest population of AIDS victims between the ages of 13 and 20.

Princeton kicks out ex-con who faked credentials

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — A Princeton University sophomore who won admission claiming to be a self-educated ranch worker was expelled after officials discovered he was an ex-con who faked his credentials and used a false name, the university said Wednesday.

James Arthur Hogue, 31, who spent a more than a year at Princeton under the name Alexi Indris-Santana, was arrested Tuesday by Princeton police. He is charged in Utah with violation of parole.

University spokesman Justin

Harmon said officials have not determined whether Hogue stole someone else's name when he applied for admission in 1988. He entered as a freshman in the fall of 1989.

"All we know is there's not a real Alexi Indris-Santana on the Princeton campus," Harmon said. Hogue, who gave his birthdate as 1969, was able to pass as a college student because of his youthful appearance, Harmon said. While the university refused to comment on his academic record, officials said he must have done adequate work to remain there into the second semester of his sophomore year.

He ran on the men's track and cross-country teams, winning two 5,000-meter races and placing in several others.

Students to stage show at Shryock with popular mystery game theme

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

Those wanting to add a little mystery to their lives this Saturday may wish to check out the 44th Annual Theta Xi Variety Show.

"Clue: The Mystery" is the theme for the show, starting at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium.

The show will feature musical numbers and skits by SIUC fraternities, sororities and other campus groups, said Chris Reedy, a director of Theta Xi fraternity's segment of the show.

Each segment will incorporate elements from Clue, the popular Parker Brothers game, Reedy said.

Three categories of groups will perform: large group (16 or more people), medium group (10 to 15) and solo performers, he said.

Each act will be judged by SIUC faculty, and prizes will be awarded in all three categories. Most original performance can be awarded to any category, Reedy said.

Originated in 1947 by Kappa Delta Alpha, which later became Theta Xi, the show is sponsored by the Inter-Greek Council.

Tickets are $4 for both students and the public and are available from the Student Center Central Ticket Office or at Shryock Auditorium. Proceeds from the show will benefit University scholarship funds.

RSOs to have display case in Student Center for events

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Student Center Board approved a glass display case in the Student Center for the exclusive use of registered student organizations.

Student Center Director John Corker said the case probably will be located near the crossroads in front of the University Bookstore, but the exact location and who will pay for it have not been decided yet.

Representatives of more than 6,000 students attended a meeting Monday, where Richard Fasano, chairman of the Presidents Council, appealed a previous board decision against reserving a glass case for listings of RSO events and meetings.

The board's policy and space committee turned down the original request because members said they viewed the Presidents Council as a single RSO. They felt the council did not adequately represent RSOs because of the low turnout at council meetings.

Fasano said the glass case would provide a calendar of the month's RSO events and meetings, and include a phone number to call for additional information. He said this would help RSOs to get information out to members and interested students.

"Maybe (RSOs) could get a little better participation because students will be better informed," he said.

Fasano said the glass case is a more immediate and accessible way to get RSO information to students than having an RSO calendar run on a cable channel or having meeting announcements run on the Market Source Calendar in the Student Center Roman Room.

"(The glass case) may not be the best method, but let's give it a try," he said.

Fasano said the Black Affairs Council, representing 2,000 students, the Inter-Greek Council, representing 1,500 students and the International Student Council, representing 2,000 students, supported the glass case resolution at the Feb. 22 Presidents Council meeting.

Other RSOs, including the Gay and Lesbian People's Union and the Southern Illinois Collegiate Sailing Club, attended the Student Center Board meeting to show their support for the glass case resolution.

Student Trustee Bill Hall described the meeting as the "largest non-constituency student group to come before Corker in his experience."

Corker said he agrees with the concept of getting RSO information to students and hopes the Presidents Council is up to the task of managing the glass case.

"It will take a tremendous amount of time to maintain an accurate (RSO meeting) listing," Corker said.

The Student Center handles about 100 RSO events each month, Corker said.

WAR REPORT

Bush: U.N. council to arrange peace

United Press International

President Bush said he has asked Secretary of State James Baker to request the U.N. Security Council meet soon "to formulate the necessary arrangements for this war to be ended."

"This war is behind us," Bush declared. "Ahead of us is the difficult task of securing a potentially historic peace."

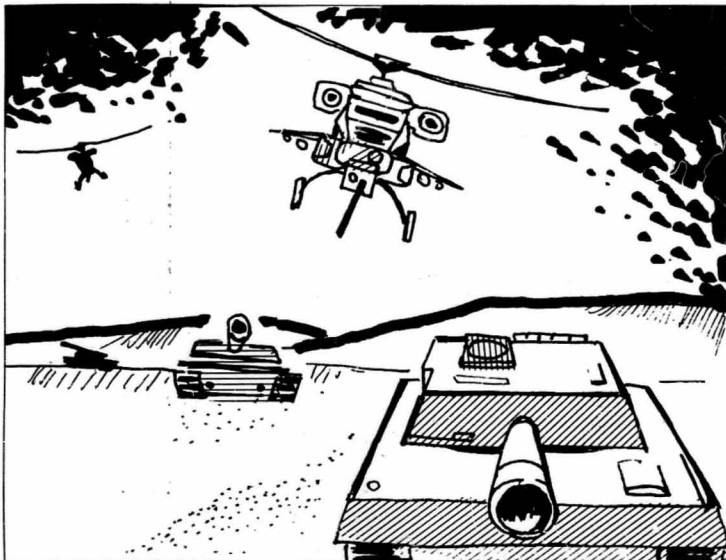

Bush's speech came at the end of a day that began with Iraq making another bid to end hostilities, offering to accept three of the 12 U.N. resolutions adopted after the invasion of Kuwait.

During the day, the Security Council pressed Iraq to comply with all the resolutions. The 15-nation Security Council made its request at the end of a closed-door meeting to consider Iraq's demand that the council adopt a cease-fire resolution.

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir Al Anbari informed the Security Council that he expected to have an answer by midnight on compliance with the resolutions. The security council agreed to meet at midnight to hear his report.

In his speech, the president said he had stressed to the Iraqi people during the war "that our quarrel was not with them, but instead with their leadership — and above all, with Saddam Hussein."

"This remains the case," he said. The Iraqi leader was targeted as the chief villain of the piece throughout the conflict by Bush who early on likened Saddam to

"Hitler," calling him the "brutal" perpetrator of "naked aggression."

The president also told the Iraqi people, "you are not the enemy. We do not seek your destruction. We have treated your POWs with kindness."

Earlier in the day, Pentagon officials estimated that there were some 100,000 Iraqi prisoners now in the hands of the allied forces, many of them gave up in the last two days.

The air war began on Jan. 17, 42 days ago, and the ground war was launched four days ago.

During a picture-taking session earlier in the day before a meeting with British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd, Bush said the news from the gulf "continues to be very, very good, very, very heartening."

Hurd told reporters following a 40-minute meeting with Bush that allied officials were trying to assess conflicting versions of Iraq's latest response on demands for compliance with the resolutions.

Allies gamble with strategy of flanking Iraq

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Outnumbered in men, tanks and artillery and facing potentially deadly Iraqi defenses on the Kuwaiti border, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf said Wednesday he opted to run a flanking move to trap a foe blinded by the loss of his air force and fearing an amphibious landing.

Likening the massive move of men and 60 days of war material to positions well to the west of Iraqi forces to the military equivalent of football's "Hail Mary" long-shot play, the head of the U.S. Central Command described a complicated operation that led to the crushing of Iraq's military in just over three days of ground warfare.

Starting with the air phase of the campaign Jan. 17, Schwarzkopf said that in addition to attacking Iraqi ground forces dug in along the border to weaken them for an assault, eliminating the threat of the Iraqi air force left President Saddam Hussein's commanders blind to U.S. and allied movements to the west of the Saudi-Kuwait-Iraq border.

"When we took out his air force ... we took out his ability to see what we were doing down here in Saudi Arabia."

Yellow ribbons symbolize homecoming, separation

By Shonda Talerico
Student Writer

Since soldiers first were stationed in the Middle East last August, Americans showed their support for the men and women serving in the Persian Gulf by displaying yellow ribbons.

Like the song made famous by Tony Orlando and Dawn, people back home are "tying yellow ribbons 'round the ole oak tree." The yellow ribbons also have been pinned on coats, tied to car antennas and rear view mirrors and spotted in other places.

Although no one can determine when the yellow ribbons became a sign for support, many people have different ideas about the origin of the ribbons.

But most seem to agree that the yellow ribbons are a sign of "homecoming." From the hostages held captive in Iran to a man released from prison into the accepting arms of his loved one, the yellow ribbon has been a traditional American symbol of separated sweethearts.

The yellow ribbons were symbols for the safe return of the 52 American and British hostages held captive in Iran during 1979-1981, said Sgt. Cameron Bailey, public affairs officer for the U.S. Air Force at Scott Air Force Base in Belleville.

"When this (the crisis in the Persian Gulf) started, the yellow ribbons were hung because so many reservists were called in. It was like taking people from their everyday lives, they were like hostages," Bailey said.

Others credit the yellow ribbons to the song, "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree." In the song, a man is released from prison, and writes his sweetheart, asking her to tie a yellow ribbon around a tree in her yard if she still wanted him. If not, he'd stay on the bus and move on. When the bus arrives, he sees "a hundred yellow ribbons 'round the ole oak tree."

But, many people don't know that the song actually has to do with a man getting out of prison, said Nancy Wiedener, secretary for the U.S. Marine Corps public affairs office in St. Louis.

"I heard that they (the Marines) want to get away from yellow ribbons because the song is about prison. They want to encourage red, white and blue ribbons to show support because they're the colors of our flag," Wiedener said.

She said she also has seen white flags with a red border, and a blue star in the middle in support of the troops.

The yellow ribbons are still seen, however, regardless of their questionable background.

The popular ribbons are more than just a sign of support — behind nearly every yellow ribbon, there is a story to be told.

"They're a silent voice," said Denise Kennedy, founder of a support group in Herrin, Kennedy, whose son, Steve, has been stationed in the gulf since September, has yellow ribbons tied around the trees in her front yard in Carterville.

"When my son left I wanted people to see the ribbons and know that he was gone — and not to forget him."

Cliff Jenkins, a junior in therapeutic recreation from Benton, has a cousin in the Army medical corps who will soon be sent to the desert. Jenkins said wearing a yellow ribbon is a good idea.

"It's a way to let the troops and their families know that others are thinking about them," he said.

Jason Hilkovitch, a sophomore in history and Spanish from Des Plaines, said that the ribbons are a "pretty good step for people to get involved."

"If they don't care about the war, they can care about the people," Hilkovitch said. "It's different from Vietnam. We can support our troops; they're people too."

To Stacy Rausch, the soldiers serving in the gulf are not just people — they're friends she grew up with in her small hometown of New Athens.

"I have friends in Saudi Arabia," said Rausch, a junior in psychology. "My ex-boyfriend is a medic in the Marines, and we still keep in touch. The other one is a rescue pilot in the Air Force. They were just sent there last Tuesday."

Rausch said that she thinks when people don't wear the ribbons, it shows that they don't want to hear about the war.

Scud attack kills two women, first female casualties of war

GREENSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The first two female soldiers reported killed in Operation Desert Storm, including one who got engaged the day she shipped out, were identified Wednesday.

The two casualties were Spec. 4 Beverly Clark, 23, of Armagh, Pa., and Spec. 4 Christine Mayes, 22, of Rochester Mills, Pa., who got engaged to be married on Feb. 17, the day she left for the gulf.

Both died in Monday's Scud attack on a U.S. Army barracks in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

Eleven of the 28 soldiers killed in the barracks attack were from two western Pennsylvania reserve units, officials said at a news conference.

At Marion Center High School, where Mayes was a 1986 graduate, she was remembered as "a quiet, but very nice girl" who participated in softball and was a member of Future Homemakers of America and Future Business Leaders of America, principal Robert Stewart said.

Gov. Robert P. Casey Wednesday declared a week of mourning for the 11 victims of the Scud attack and two Pennsylvanians killed before the start of the ground war.

Illinois municipal elections result in low voter turnout

By United Press International

Low voter turnout was the rule in Illinois municipal elections as voters appeared distracted by fighting in the Persian Gulf and disinterested in mostly lackluster local races.

The State Board of Elections said 76 communities had elections Tuesday.

In Chicago, where Mayor Richard M. Daley swept to a landslide victory in the Democratic Party primary, turnout was projected at only 48 percent.

That would translate to the smallest number of voters in any modern election.

In East St. Louis, where there was a hotly contested Democratic primary match-up for mayor, few voters were going to the polls.

"Everyplace that I've stopped, it's been slow," said Bettye Moore, an East St. Louis election commissioner.

East St. Louis Mayor Carl Officer lost his re-election bid by a wide margin to Gordon Bush, a member of the St. Clair County Board of Review.

With 39 of the city's 50 precincts counted, the complete but unofficial results were 6,730 votes for Bush and 2,470 for Officer.

Since the Mississippi River town is predominantly Democratic, Bush is virtually assured of a general election victory in April.

Officer has been under fire because the city is in terrible financial shape and the mayor recently was arrested on charges of driving more than 100 mph on Interstate 55.

Police launched an investigation in East St. Louis because 400 voter registration cards temporarily disappeared on Monday.

Authorities said the cards may have been lost when they fell off a delivery truck.

They were later recovered and elections officials said the voting was unaffected because the city had photocopies of the cards.

In Springfield, in an open primary, incumbent Mayor Ossie Langfelder and city Public Works Director Todd Renfrow won the right to meet in an April runoff.

With all precincts reporting, Langfelder outpolled Renfrow by a 55 percent to 43 percent margin.

But Springfield Elections Board Executive Director Mary Beth Awerkamp said turnout was dismal.

"We're seeing some precincts with about 15 percent turnout, others as high as 40 percent," she said. "The board was projecting 35 percent to 40 percent."

She said her office was investigating a rash of complaints that supporters of a candidate for city clerk had written their candidate's name on election materials in violation of state law.

A long-shot candidate, Maurice Horton, received less than 1 percent of the vote in Springfield.

Horton had gained attention because he called for "surgical bombings and assassinations" of several political leaders in the city to advance civil rights.

Earlier this month, Horton joined the militant African-American group the Black Panther Militia, formed by controversial Milwaukee Alderman Michael McGee.

In other races:

■ Champaign Mayor Dan McCollum racked up 58 percent of the vote and will face Jerry Jamison in an April runoff.

McCollum and Jamison led a field of six candidates.

■ In Elgin, incumbent Mayor George Van de Voorde garnered nearly double the votes of both challengers combined. Turnout was just 11 percent.

■ Naperville Mayor Margaret "Peg" Price lost her bid for reelection.

Election officials said Price finished third behind Councilman Douglas Krause and retired businessman Samuel MacRane.

Ku Klux Klan increases membership by 4,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — The increase of social and economic stresses in the United States may be helping the Ku Klux Klan make a comeback, more obsessed than ever by hatred of the Jews, the Anti-Defamation League reported Wednesday.

In a special report on the 1991 status of the KKK, the watchdog arm of B'nai B'rith estimated there are about 4,000 members of the hate organization across the nation, with Georgia, Florida and North Carolina showing the most significant gains in membership.

Tennessee, Louisiana and Mississippi have registered minor gains in membership, the report said.

Pennsylvania, with 250 to 350 dues-paying members, have witnessed the most Klan growth outside the South.

Modest increases were noted in New Jersey and Missouri, while losses were recorded in Connecticut, Indiana and Illinois.

The ADL said hardly anything remains of the Klan in the Rocky Mountain and Western states and the Klan in California is being replaced by other hate groups.

"With the onset of new social and economic problems in the country as it entered the 1990s, the KKK is finding it a little easier to obtain a hearing," the report said.

"The crowds turning up at Klan rallies, for example, tend to be slightly larger."

The ADL reported the major segments of today's Klan are more than ever obsessed with the "Jewish question," mainly because Protestant fundamentalism has been replaced by the Christian Identity movement, "which holds Aryans are the true Israel and Jews are the spawn of Satan."

"The other influence, which fed an especially virulent strain of anti-Semitism into the bloodstream of today's Klan, was David Duke (of Louisiana), who shifted his field of activity in the 1970s from the neo-Nazi movement into the KKK," the report said.

One aspect of Duke's influence can be seen in the Klan's effort to cultivate and recruit neo-Nazi Skinheads.

Trucker found dead, locked in semi-trailer

PEORIA (UPI) — Police are investigating why a truck driver was found dead in his semi-trailer while the engine of the vehicle was still running.

Authorities said Ernie Cotelleso, 32, of Peoria had no visible signs of trauma to his body when he was found on Tuesday morning.

The owner of the trucking company, Cletus Waters of Normal, found Cotelleso in the locked truck.

Police said they do not know if foul play was involved, but they are looking at a "worst-case scenario."

Peoria County Coroner Herb Buzbee said an autopsy will be conducted to determine the cause of death. Toxicology tests will also be conducted.

Conceptual agreement to settle damage claims of Exxon oil spill

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A tentative agreement has been reached to settle state and federal government damage claims against Exxon Corp. arising from the 1989 Alaska oil spill, but details still were being hammered out, the attorney of general of Alaska said Wednesday.

"A broad framework for the settlement of the state and federal natural resource damage claim has been reached," Alaska Attorney General Charles Cole announced.

"Presently, lawyers for all interested parties are engaged in endeavoring to reduce to writing those concepts."

Cole refused to name a figure for the settlement but said the $1.2-billion requested by Alaska Gov. Walter Hickel was "in the ballpark" and that Exxon would pay what it owes on the installment plan over a period of years.

The money would go into a trust fund to restore, protect and study the environment damaged by Exxon's spilled oil, Cole said.

He said state and federal trustees would decide how to spend the money and that Exxon would be excluded from any role once it pays for damage caused by its crew running a loaded tanker aground on Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound in March 1989.

Nearly 11 million gallons of crude poured out of the Exxon Valdez, killing tens of thousands of animals, ruining fishing, coating shores with oil and disrupting life in coastal villages in the worst spill in the nation's history.

Exxon stock rose from $2 to $55.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday.

The deal calls for Alaska to drop its massive civil suit against Exxon, the federal government to settle its civil claims with Exxon and, presumably, the Justice Department to negotiate a plea bargain to settle a five-count criminal case against Exxon Corp. and its subsidiary, Exxon Shipping Co.

Cole has been virtually the only person willing to say anything about the talks.

Jackson hobbles into Royals' camp

HAINES CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Outfielder Bo Jackson of the Kansas City Royals arrived in camp on crutches Wednesday, and headed straight for the pool.

"Everything is fine," he said. "I'm going swimming."

Jackson, who had little else to say, joined the Royals one day before the position players are due. The Royals will know in about two weeks if Jackson can play Opening Day.

Jackson, an All-Pro running back with the Los Angeles Raiders, is hobbled by a hip injury suffered in a game Jan. 13 against the Cincinnati Bengals. Dr. Steve Joyce, the Royals' team physician, put Jackson on crutches Feb. 15.

"Bo said his hip is causing no discomfort," Joyce, who started Jackson on an exercise program Wednesday. "He's spending 20 minutes in the swimming pool, 20 minutes on the bike, and there will be some isometrics and work on the Nordic track.

"There will be no baseball for a while. On March 15 he'll come to Kansas City for more therapy and a CAT scan. Then we'll determine if he can come off the crutches.

"Until March 15 we won't be able to say anything about his availability for opening day. I know it won't take long for Bo to get into playing condition once he is ready to work out."

Jackson's his first day in the outdoor pool at the Royals' minor-league complex was not the most pleasant. It was a cool day with temperatures in the 50s, and pool temperatures at 50 degrees.

Jackson, 28, is in his sixth season with the Royals. He played in 111 games last season, hitting .272 with 28 home runs and 78 RBIs.

Nike accuses L.A. Gear of patent infringement

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nike, the world's largest athletic shoe and apparel company, tried Wednesday to take the spring out of L.A. Gear's "Catapult" shoes by suing the California company for patent infringement.

In a two-count lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, Nike alleged L.A. Gear violated two patents by selling the Catapult shoes, which have a special wedge in the heel that acts as a spring.

Nike, of Beaverton, Ore., sought an unspecified amount of damages and a court order prohibiting L.A. Gear from infringing on the patents.

An L.A. Gear spokesman said the company had not yet seen a copy of the lawsuit and had no comment.

The lawsuit alleges that L.A. Gear's heel design on the Catapult violates a 1984 patent for a "spring moderator." It also alleges the shoe's lacing system infringes on a 1985 patent for an "adjustable width, adjustable tension closure system."

The complaint alleges Nike has already lost profits because of the patent infringements.

Nike's public relations department referred all calls about the suit to the company's lawyer, but a woman in his office said he could not discuss details.

L.A. Gear launched the Catapult line of basketball shoes earlier this year with Utah Jazz star Karl Malone as spokesman. The company says the shoe features a "spring-like" heel insert of carbon graphite and fiberglass that gives the wearer additional lift.

The commercials for Catapult take obvious aim at Nike's "Air" line of shoes promoted by Chicago Bulls star Michael Jordan, with Malone saying, "Everything else is just hot air." The "air" shoes use a gas capsule in the heel to soften impact.

Nike is the world's largest seller of athletic shoes and apparel. It was founded in the 1970s by former University of Oregon track star Philip Knight and his old coach, Bill Bowerman. The company has reportedly made Knight, who is still chairman, the richest man in Oregon.

The company enjoyed great success in the 1970s, chiefly with running shoes. After a brief slump in the early 80s, Nike rebounded behind its "Air Jordan" line of basketball shoes.

Nike recently completed a palatial new headquarters complex — complete with man-made lake — in the Portland suburb of Beaverton. But that project has run into trouble: the general contractor filed a $12 million lien on the property, alleging the shoe company added costs to the project but now won't pay. Nike denies the charges.

L.A. Gear is the nation's third-largest athletic shoemaker after Nike and Reebok International Ltd., of Avon, Ma., with 1990 sales of $902.2 million.

It went public in 1986 and grew to prominence by specializing in selling flashy sneakers for teenage girls. L.A. Gear's annual sales hit $617 million in 1989 as it expanded into sportswear and men's athletic shoes.

The company said it wanted to hit $1 billion in sales for 1990, but it began running into problems as a fickle public started spurning its newer styles, particularly a buckle-laden Michael Jackson shoe. Earlier this month, it posted its first quarterly loss ever as a public company with a $7.1 million loss for the 1990 fourth quarter.

Maleeva wins before rain douses Palm Springs tennis tournament

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Third-seeded Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria advanced to the third round when France's Pascale Paradis withdrew in the second set with an ankle injury Wednesday in the rain-plagued $350,000 Virginia Slims of Palm Springs.

The evening match featuring No. 2 seed Martina Navratilova and Ginger Helgeson was among those washed away after rain suspended play at Bono's Racquet Club at about 1 p.m.

No. 5 Amy Frazier and No. 6 Barbara Paulus of Austria also had their matches postponed. With first-round byes, they have yet to play in the tournament which began Monday.

In second-round matches that were completed: No. 7 Nathalie Tauziat of France beat Kimiko Date of Japan, 6-2, 6-2; No. 11 Sabine Appelmans of Belgium beat Anna Keller, 6-1, 6-4; No. 13 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden ousted Pam Nelson, 6-1, 6-3, and No. 15 Julie Halard of France ousted Andrea Temesvari of Hungary 6-2, 7-6.

Also, Canada's Patricia Hy defeated Anne Minter of Australia, 6-1, 6-4, and Stacey Martin eliminated Japan's Tamaka Takagi, 6-3, 7-5.

Maleeva was credited with a 6-1, 2-0 victory after Paradis fell to the court attempting to return a drop shot.

"I felt good playing today and wanted to get some matches in," said the seventh-ranked Maleeva, whose match was one of seven singles contests that beat the rain. "I felt sorry it ended like this."

In matches that were stopped in progress because of the rain storm: Fourth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia was tied with Peanut Louie Harper at 2-2 in the third set; No. 12 seed Lori McNeil and Karen Kschwendt of Switzerland stood at 5-5 in the third, and Rosalyn Fairbank-Nideffer led Isabelle Demongest of France 4-1 in the first.

Orel Hershiser throws again

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander Orel Hershiser, attempting a comeback from extensive shoulder surgery, Wednesday threw batting practice for the second time.

Hershiser, the 1988 Cy Young Award winner who has not pitched since last April, was on the Holman Stadium mound for 10 minutes, throwing 62 pitches and six warm-ups.

"I felt good," Hershiser said. "This outing was progress compared to the last outing (last Sunday when he threw 51 pitches). I hope they all feel this good."

McDonald to start opening day

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — With the season still more than five weeks away, the Baltimore Orioles have their Opening Day pitcher — Ben McDonald.

"He's my ace," Manager Frank Robinson said Wednesday, the Orioles' first full day of workouts, with all their players in camp. "He made that clear to us last season with the way he performed and handled himself."

McDonald was 8-5 with a 2.43 ERA last season. The Orioles open the season April 8 at home against the Chicago White Sox. The 23-year-old right-hander also was tabbed to pitch the Orioles' first exhibition game March 7 against the White Sox.

Oriole pitching legend Jim

Palmer, ending a nearly seven-year retirement, is slated for his first pre-season start March 11 against the Boston Red Sox. That game will be televised on a cable network to the Baltimore-Washington area.

Palmer, 45, attempting to become the first Hall of Famer to resume his major-league career, will throw batting practice Thursday for the first time.

He threw from a pitching mound for 15 minutes Tuesday and reported he has "some zip" on his pitches.

"I think I've thrown better every time out, but it still comes down to getting people out," said Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner with 268 lifetime victories.

Palmer is bidding to become the fourth player in a major team sport to return after being inducted into a Hall of Fame. The other three played in the NHL: Gordie Howe, Guy Lafleur and Dit Clapper.

Fifty-three players attended the Orioles' official camp opening Wednesday, and the day began with a 12-minute run.

Robinson is implementing an on-field dress code for spring training. Everyone must be in full uniform at all times, with caps optional only during post-workout running drills.

Robinson said the dress code will improve discipline and help create team harmony.

For example, if somebody wants to wear a jacket over his jersey, it must say "Orioles" on the front.

Toronto exercises Stieb's option with raise

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Blue Jays picked up the option on the contract of pitcher Steve Stieb Wednesday, giving the veteran pitcher a raise in the process.

Stieb, 33, is the winningest pitcher in the franchise's history and threw a no-hitter last year on the way to best season of his career. He finished with an 18-6 record and a 2.93 ERA in 1990.

Under the terms of a contract signed in 1985, Stieb will schedule to receive $1.7 million this season. But the club "readjusted the salary figures within the contract," as a number of off-season signings had left his salary far below current values.

Terms of the contract alterations were not disclosed.

Chicago getting a bit Bullish

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bulls are moving away from their identity as a one-man gang and as a result they are the NBA's hottest team.

With a 129-99 pasting of the Boston Celtics Tuesday night, the Bulls won their 10th straight game overall while extending their club-record home winning streak to 19. The club record for overall consecutive wins is 12 from 1973.

"Right now, we have a lot of continuity and chemistry," said guard Michael Jordan who has long carried the Bulls. "We are playing very well as a team. We are focused, but we must build on this streak."

In the last three victories, the Bulls have won by margins of 47, 21 and 30, albeit the first two came against Sacramento and Charlotte.

"We're pleased that we're here," Bulls Coach Phil Jackson said. "There is a long way to go in the season—28 games remaining, and we're going to be tested. This is where we hoped to be."

Where that is atop the Eastern Conference and within striking distance of Portland for the league's top record. The Trail Blazers have lost two straight games this week.

Jackson has consistently talked about gaining home-court advantage for the playoffs, with his team sporting a 24-3 record at Chicago Stadium this year. Another indication of just how hot the Bulls are is the fact they began the season 0-3, losing twice at home.

With Kevin McHale out due to a sprained ankle, the Atlantic Division-leading Celtics are 4-3

"The Bulls are the best I've ever seen. Go ahead write that. Maybe it will put some pressure on them."

—Larry Bird

in their last seven games, including dropping back-to-back games to Indiana and Chicago. The two-time defending NBA champion Detroit Pistons, with Isiah Thomas out at least until the playoffs while recovering from wrist surgery, are fading in the Central Division, dropping 4 1-2 ballgames behind the Bulls.

"The Bulls are the best I've ever seen. Go ahead, write that," Boston's Larry Bird said. "Maybe it will put some pressure on them."

What could actually figure to put a little pressure on Chicago is the injury to starting power forward Horace Grant, but the Bulls even got good news on that front Wednesday. Grant injured his left ankle in the first quarter against the Boston Celtics.

X-rays came back negative, and the injury was diagnosed as a moderate sprain. Grant will be evaluated each day and probably will miss the next two games. The team listed him as doubtful for Friday night's game at the Stadium against Dallas, questionable for Saturday's game at Indiana and probable for next Tuesday's home game against the Milwaukee Bucks.

"Hopefully he can be ready to play sometime soon," Jordan said.

But when Grant left Tuesday's game, his team was leading just 12-10. The Bulls followed with a 21-2 run en route to the rout. Cliff Levingston, acquired during the offseason, played well filling in for Grant, and the bench that was much-maligned in the first half of the season soared again.

"Right now, it is a high that we want to ride," Jackson said. "As long as it lasts, it is wonderful."

SIUC history. Mahan has missed only one game in his four-year career, that being his sophomore year because of influenza. He has played in 122 games at SIUC, including 62 consecutive starts.

The 6-foot guard from Maywood was named to the All-Conference First Team last season.

Shipley became the 24th player in Saluki history to score 1,000 points or more when he notched 14 tallies Dec. 14 against Murray State on ESPN. He is also among the SIUC all-time leaders in rebounding. He is one of only three freshman ever to lead SIUC in rebounding when he averaged 6.9 boards in 1987-88.

The 6-foot-8 forward from Centralia has scored in double digits 33 times as a Saluki.

He became a starter in his fourth game at SIUC and has been out of the starting role only twice since then. He is on a string of 72 consecutive starts heading into the MVC Tournament.

He celebrated Christmas being named the MVC Player of the Week Dec. 24 for two standout performances at the Old Style Classic in Chicago.

Shipley, who saw time at the small forward and power forward positions, averaged 12.9 points and 8.3 rebounds a game for SIUC. His 35.6 minutes a game was the most by anyone on the SIUC roster.

None of the award winners were available for comment because SIUC coach Rich Herrin called a closed practice session Wednesday.

The Salukis begin postseason play at 11 a.m. Saturday in their first game of the Valley Tournament in St. Louis.

to improve. "It's not where I want to be," Okenwa said, "but so far I'm doing very nice."

Okenwa is one of the strongest members of the team, and will work on a weight-training program designed by Strength Coach Mike Jones again in the off-season.

"So far I'm happy where I am with the weights," Okenwa said. "During the summer I'll work with the weights a lot and I hope to get better."

Okenwa's season has gone a lot like the Salukis. They started off with two three-game winning streaks, winning the Old Style Classic in Chicago, then played mediocre ball through the middle of the schedule. Now, heading into postseason play, the Dawgs are showing signs that they could dominate the Valley competition.

"We haven't done what we wanted to do, but we have what it takes," Okenwa said. "I'm glad that everyone's attention is on the tournament. We need to come out and play hard every game to win the tournament and get to the NCAA's."

Okenwa, a native of Nigeria, was offered a scholarship sight-unseen as all recruiting efforts were conducted by mail. He played a year at Imo State in Nigeria, averaging 34.7 points, 16.3 rebounds and 5.9 blocked shots a game.

In his first season in a Salukis uniform, Okenwa has averaged 4.4 points and 2.8 rebounds a game, while shooting 53.5 percent from the field. He is working on a short hook shot that Herrin said cannot be blocked.

likes to see Okenwa entering the game because he gets the chance to roam outside as the power forward.

"When he's in there it takes a lot of the burden off the rest of us inside," Amaya said. "He is becoming a very good rebounder and he is learning to kick the ball outside to the guards so they can run the floor."

Okenwa admits he is a long way from ever thinking about basketball as a career, but if his hard work pays off he would love to play professional ball. If not, he will be more than happy pursuing a career in international business.

"If I have the opportunity I will play basketball," Okenwa said, "but it is not my top priority. My priority is to make use of what I got now, and work hard. If I don't make it in professional basketball I will not face any disappointment. I have a lot of opportunities and that is just one of them."

Okenwa sat out last season after a mix up with his transcripts. To be sure SIUC didn't violate any NCAA rules, Okenwa wasn't even allowed to practice with the Salukis. He spent a lot of time in the weight room and at the Recreation Center in pick-up games.

"It hurt me so much," Okenwa said. "If I could have practiced with the team last year I would have already adjusted to the system."

strongest distance swimmer. She may be pulled out of some of the sprint events to swim the 500 and 1,650. Mahaira hopes to make her NCAA zone cuts this weekend.

"I feel pretty good," Mahaira said. "I'm going for my cuts. We've been working at it for so long."

Freshman diver Donnelle DuBois has already qualified for the NCAA zones in the 1-meter dive. She hopes to qualify in the 3-meter this weekend. The Gateway is DuBois' last chance to qualify for the NCAA zones before competition the week of March 16. If she qualifies, she will go to the NCAA's March 21 through 23.

"I'm getting anxious," DuBois said. "I think if I have a good day I have a good chance of winning it. If I hit my dives, I think I have a very good chance of being in the top two, hopefully No.1."

But it could be Firth who takes it to the Bears. The 6-foot-1 sophomore exploded with 18 points and 10 rebounds against Drake Saturday.

Scott believes the game plan, in which the Bears will probably do much pressing and trapping, is simple for the Salukis.

"If we can't handle their pressure and get into our half-court offense, we can't win," Scott said. "It's that simple."
