Educators worry
Edgar sets high goals with low budget
By Christine Leringer
Administration Writer

Local educators are hearty of education goals. Gov. James Edgar has set the tone of drastic budget cuts to elementary and higher education.

Edgar’s Illinois 2000 initiative is a voluntary, community-based plan similar to one presented by President George Bush to target and bring about excellence in education.

‘It takes more than a teacher to educate a child,’ Edgar said in a statement. ‘Students need the encouragement of their parents, and they need the support of their communities and business leaders.’

Larry Jacobson, superintendent for Carbondale Elementary School District 95, said the district has suffered a loss of $150,000, cut from its budget in January.

‘The state keeps dumping the cost of education on the local taxpayer, which is not fair,’ Jacobson said.

The vision of the plan is needed and good, but the state government needs to put the money where the mouth is,’ he said.

‘Without the money to back up the plan, it is really unrealistic to expect to attain such goals. Goals of the Illinois 2000 plan include:

U of I still ISA member

University of Illinois students have rejected a recommendation to terminate their membership with the largest student lobbying organization in the state. Of 1 students voted Tuesday and Wednesday in a referendum for a $1 mandatory but refundable fee to go toward Illinois Student Association.

The U of I students voted by a narrow margin to maintain membership with the ISA, despite the recommendation of a task force and the student government association at the U of I.

The referendum passed by 98 votes, with a total voting number of 4,787 students.

‘This means (ISA) is going to exist for a while longer,’ said ISA Executive Director Phil Lyons. ‘I don’t think it would have passed if I ever had pulled out. When you are a student-lobbying group and you lose 3,000 students—there is a student-lobbying group and you lose the largest university—there is an organization and you have to look in the mirror and see who you’re looking it, and I don’t think would have been a clear image.’

Lyons feared other universities won’t.

Illinois residents beginning to pay for 1990 clean air act

Illinois residents may not be starting to pay the cost for keeping the nation’s air clean, coal industry experts say.

The 1990 amended Federal Clean Air Act was put in place to limit the amount of pollution put off by burning fossil fuels, but it places a large part of the cost for clean air on the backs of Midwest consumers.

Cable officials: Bill transmits contradictory results
By Brian Gross
Special Assignment Writer

A federal cable regulation bill aimed at controlling cable TV rates includes a provision the cable industry says actually will force rates to increase.

The Cable Television Consumer Protection Act, in the hands of U.S. House members, easily passed the Senate this month behind strong consumer support for curbing rates and checking the growth of the cable monopoly.

The bill's main intent is to give local governments authority to control cable rates if it can prove a lack of competition and unreasonable rates.

But broadcasters and the TV networks support the bill because of less publicized provision requiring cable companies to get permission to re-transmit local broadcast signals.

John Williams, station manager of WPID-TV in Paducah, said broadcasters feel re-transmission consent is only fair.

‘Over-the-air networks deliver the bulk of the viewing and receive nothing in return,’ Williams said.

‘Stations like CNN are paid for their service.’

But cable officials see the provision as an attempt by broadcasters to protect their pockets and market share, which has been shrinking because of the growth of cable.

If the bill passes, cable TV will have to increase rates, said Craig Fahringer, Carbondale manager of Telecommunications, Inc.

Women win by 1 point at Western

The SIUC women’s basketball team hung on for an 85-84 victory over Western Illinois Thursday. The Salukis, which dropped to No. 10 of 18 in the nation, just beat No. 14 of 16, 84-80, on Tuesday. The Salukis are 9-2, 4-0 in the Gateway and 9-5 overall. WIU dropped to 4-11 in the conference and 8-16 overall.

In the first half, WIU led off with a 3-point shot from guard Angel Jaggers. The Westerwinds kept the lead until the Salukis went up 11-10 with 13:30 to play. SIUC had a tough time stopping guard Michelle Nason and Jaggers, who combined for 24 points in the first half, and WIU’s zone defense collapsed on SIUC’s inside offensive game. WIU had a 5-point lead at one time, but the Salukis came back to go up 40-37 at the half.

Coach Cindy Scott said the Westerwinds played on an emotional high after coach Kelly Hill gave her resignation Monday. “Many games have been won on emotions rather than physical strength,” Scott said. “Western was trying to win one for their coach. Our kids played their guts out. They played great defense. It was a matter of Western shooting well (that kept the score close).” WIU outscored the Salukis 59 to 48 percent. But SIUC outrebounded the Westerwinds 39-28.

In the second half, SIUC started off hot, making seven of its first 10 shots. A 3-point shot from senior guard Karrie Redeker and a bucket from Rougela gave SIUC a 56-45 lead. Three Salukis finished with career highs. Rougela had 14 points, junior point guard Anita Scott had 23 and freshman forward Rockey Ransom had 15.

SIUC held a 15-point lead with 11 minutes to play, but the Westerwinds battled back to make it close in the final minutes. Jaggers and Nason finished with 19 points for WIU. Mishi Crandall had 15, Houstetz and Michelle Walter had 10.

Both Ransom and Redeker fouled in the final minute, but both players failed to hit on one-and-one opportunities and Western pulled within 83-81. But Rougela put the game out of reach.

Also Moore has been named SIUC’s Most Valuable Track Athlete in both her freshman and sophomore years and is No. 7 in total points earned at SIUC.

“I guess the reason I’ve got the team’s most valuable athlete award is simply because I participate in so many events and earn quite a few points,” Moore said.

But her coaches said she is more than just a good athlete.

DeNoon said Moore, in addition to being one of the most talented athletes she has coached, has outstanding mental approach to her events.

“Nacolia is not only a multitalented athlete but is also a consistent athlete,” DeNoon said. “She is able to get ready for every event and use every bit of energy she has.”

By competing in five completely separate events, junior Nacolia Moore figures to have a significant impact for SIUC this weekend at the Salukis’ indoor Gateway Conference Indoor Championships.

Women’s track head coach Don DeNoon said it will be nothing new for Moore, who has made a huge impression at SIUC in her two years.

At the 1991 indoor championship, Moore captured first in the triple jump and was part of the 4 x 100-meter relay’s first place.

Moore’s mark of .39.3/14 for the triple jump title ranked her second in the event in SIUC’s record book.

Also Moore has been named SIUC’s Most Valuable Track Athlete in both her freshman and sophomore years and is No. 7 in total points earned at SIUC.

“I guess the reason I’ve got the team’s most valuable athlete award is simply because I participate in so many events and earn quite a few points,” Moore said.

But her coaches said she is more than just a good athlete.

DeNoon said Moore, in addition to being one of the most talented athletes she has coached, has outstanding mental approach to her events.

“Nacolia is not only a multitalented athlete but is also a consistent athlete,” DeNoon said. “She is able to get ready for every event and use every bit of energy she has.”

Raske also said Moore’s approach to her training is good for the team.

“On a team it’s important to have reliability, and Moore has that,” Raske said. “You can always count on her.”

In addition to competing in the triple jump, long jump, 55-meter dash, 200-meter and participating on the 200-meter and 400-meter relay teams, Moore has added the 400-meter to her repertoire in 1992.

Moore said participating in so many events is not easy, and she had to learn how to manage her time.

“I don’t have time to work on every event every day, so I arrange things on a weekly basis,” Moore said. “It’s mostly a matter of keeping myself focused and using my energy efficiently.”

The Salukis, 19-5, average 41 rebounds a game, good for No. 1 in the Gateway Conference. Center Kelly Firth and forwards Rockey Ransom and Angie Rougela have combined the Salukis up front on the line to dominate on the boards for SIUC.

Firth said a big factor in the Salukis’ new up-tempo offense is controlling the boards.

“Rebounding starts our transition game,” Firth said. “If we aren’t rebounding well, it hurts our transition game.”

A strong board and a good outlet pass allow the Salukis to move the ball downcourt in a hurry, she said.

Before the game I try to focus on getting the rebounds,” she said. “It’s an important role. I know it’s more important for me to get rebounds than it is for others.”

But Firth said she does not have to put all the pressure on herself to crash the boards.

“If I can’t get to the ball usually Angie or Rockey has been there for it,” she said.

Averaging 9.5 rebounds a game, Firth is the No. 2 rebounder in the Gateway Conference. The 6-1 junior has 10 double-doubles in scoring and Con cerns were aided by falling energy prices in January. The decrease in energy prices marks the first since July, reflecting a sharp drop in the price of petroleum-based products.

Gasoline prices at the pump now are a decidedly lower than when prices peaked in October 1990.

In the last 10 years, when accounting for inflation, the price of unleaded regular gasoline has fallen by more than 15 percent, while the average price of all oil products and services has increased by nearly 30 percent, said Don Schaefer, associate director for the Petroleum Council in Springfield.

The 15-percent decline in gasoline prices occurred even though state and federal excise taxes on gasoline are much more than doubled in the last 10 years, he said.

Illinois, has the highest taxes on gasoline in the nation, especially in downstate areas such as Jacksonville.

"Forty percent of the dollar of gasoline prices is state and federal taxes," he said.

Inflation was low on all components of the index except medical care costs, which have jumped 7.8 percent in the last 12 months.

Medical care services, such as professional and hospital services, advanced 0.7 percent in January. The index for medical supplies increased 0.5 percent.

Several reasons are responsible for this increase, said Lisa Grimes, an administrator at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis.

"New technology is the main reason for the increase in medical care costs," she said.

Abortion discussed at forum:

By Trumer Camphor

General Assignment Writer

The Student Health Advisory Board will consider comments made at a public forum today and make recommendations to the administration on whether to add abortion on an as-needed basis for the student health insurance policy.

Student health insurance covers the costs of not only carrying a baby to term during enrollment at the University and the costs of termiating a pregnancy for therapeutic reasons. But students who choose to terminate a pregnancy for other reasons are not covered.

Brad Cole, vice chairman of the student health advisory board, said "We may need to look at health and student health programs, and other student health program representatives responded to students and community members who attended the forum.

Cole said the hearing was informative.

"We asked for a lack of feedback from the students and we got it," Cole said.

"Everyone who attended got a chance to air their views." More than 40 students addressed the option of including elective termination coverage.

McKilip said students have a say in what types of benefits exist because of the student health insurance program out of their fees.

Survey findings revealed two weeks ago by Jack McKilip, a professor in the psychology, sparked the forum.

The results indicate 57 percent of SIUC students surveyed support adding elective abortion as a benefit and almost all of the students who supported it agreed to pay an estimated cost of a $1.00 per semester.

McKilip said many people have conflicting values about adding the coverage.

"So many people see this as terms of internal and mental values of many of them have strongly held beliefs about this issue," he said.

But McKilip said the abortion benef-el is like any other.

"We are going through the labor-

some process of making sure that everybody is heard," McKilip said.

Thus the issue surrounding this benefit happens to be a lot more volunary.

Phyllis Wohlfried, president of the Rutherford Institute, a pro-life student organization, said people are opposed to the addition of elective abortion to the student insurance because of the increased student fees.

"Initially, I was told that adding elective abortion would cause an increase in cost to students," Wohlfried said. "Now you are saying there is going to be no cost to students? Which is it?"

Wohlfried said the student health see ABORTION, page 6

WIDB’s opposition fearful of fair play

WIDB HAS SPENT 22 YEARS crawling gradually toward a radio station’s highest purpose—a broadcast slot in the mass radio market. Recently, that goal has come within the station’s reach, but the ultimate decision is still out of WIDB’s hands.

The elements for the transition to broadcast are in place: WIDB meets Federal Communications Commission standards for broadcast. Undergraduate Student Government has approved a student fee increase to help pay for the shift, and a petition drive has collected 3,000 student signatures in support of FM transmission.

BUT IF THE SIUC RADIO STATION makes the jump to the airwaves from low-frequency AM and cable FM, it will do so only after the objections of the major players in Southern Illinois’ radio market. Local stations have registered their protests with the administrative committee studying the broadcast proposal, saying an FM station operating with University support has an unfair edge in market share and competition.

Local commercial stations—WCIL, WTAQ and WOOW among them—have the rock and Top 40 format cornered in the Southern Illinois region. This market is precisely what WIDB would cut into with its blend of alternative rock and urban contemporary music.

THE ESTABLISHED STATIONS CLAIM WIDB’s volunteer operation is a second thorn in their side. As a broadcasting entity, the general manager and engineer would receive salaries for their work, but all other jobs—disc jockeys, program directors, and so on—would be voluntary, just as now.

But this gripe overlooks the fact that WIDB would show no profit from its broadcasting position. The proposal under consideration recommends a $100,000 annual operating budget, with 80 percent drawn from student fees and 20 percent raised through sales, promotions and other sources.

As a non-commercial broadcaster, WIDB would gain no profit from advertising—the bread and butter of commercial stations. WCIL and company have no competition on that front.

THE CRY OF UNFAIR COMPETITION smells like a smoke screen to maintain the radio status quo of Southern Illinois. WIDB’s format is unique in the region: more cutting-edge than those of local commercial operations. Its intrusion would force the established stations to change their approach, toughen up their act and show.

But this gripe overlooks the fact that WIDB would show no profit from its broadcasting position. The proposal under consideration recommends a $100,000 annual operating budget, with 80 percent drawn from student fees and 20 percent raised through sales, promotions and other sources.

Paranoia fuels Japan-bashing

Rejicining Japanese ownership of American enterprises, including baseball teams, is irrational. Like the refusal to buy Japanese products, it is not only chauvinistic and racist, but also counter-productive.

When they see foreign businesses investing in the United States, promoters of such sentiments let their imaginations run riot with paranoid fantasies of foreign domination, even though they rarely criticize Americans for selling to foreigners or buying their enterprises: this is chauvinism.

Japan magnifies these negative feelings. When other North Americans or Europeans invest in United States: companies or sell to our consumers, few people criticize them; contrast this with the demagogues who find it easier to appeal to anti-Japanese prejudice.

If we block foreign investment and imports, we will be the losers economically. Japanese companies are investing in the United States because they have the capital and American companies do not. If they cannot invest here, our companies will have less money, and among the losers will be the workers whom they fire.

"Protecting" businesses from foreign imports will remove incentives to innovate and to improve products. The lack of competition will result in higher prices for Americans.

If you believe that American businesses is so feeble that it cannot survive without "protection," go ahead—keep out the "Foreign devils." But you’ll owe the rest of us a subsidy to put up with fewer jobs, poor quality, and higher prices.—Charles F. Hammond, assistant professor, foreign languages and literature.

Gays’ morality least of worries in violent times

Professor Wayne Helmer’s spewing of Bible quotations in the Feb. 24 DE is most inappropriate. Homosexuals do not perceive their behavior as a "problem," and if they are not comfortable with their sexuality, let them reevaluate themselves. Live and let live.

Forgiveness is for those who have committed a crime, and there are more deserving targets for your quotes. Professor Helmer—such as those who commit the rapes reported every five minutes in America, the one in four families suffering from domestic violence, or the racism that people encounter daily. I would be interested in your views on those issues.

I respect your opinion and your right to freedom of speech. Prof-essor Helmer, but you might possibly consider restricting your outbursts to the engineering department bulletin board.—Marie Lyandrou, freshman, music education.

Who Shot JFK?

By Casey Hampton
Special Assignment Writer

A movie-maker's idea to question history and stir up the past has added another layer of intrigue and tension to the JFK assassination story. The process was strange and controversial—but it worked!

Academy Award-winning filmmaker Oliver Stone's new film, "JFK," is a film that authentically would trigger public reactions to President John F. Kennedy's assassination.

The first 10 days of production were spent in Dallas Psychiatry还原 actual location of the assassination, where painstaking detail went into creating the exact look of the plaza as it appeared in 1963.

The exterior of the School Book Depository, the alleged site of the assassin's position, was restored to its original look; railroad tracks were reinstalled in the area behind the grainy knoll and pick-fence, the suspected sight for assassins involved in a conspiracy; and trees, which are now far larger than they were 30 years ago, were removed to match photographs from the period.

The result was "JFK," a film that opens today. It's a new conspiracyallenging the Warren Commission findings on the assassination and substantiating the disbelief felt by the nation at large.

"Oliver felt the American people had been hoodwinked, and wanted to open up evidence to get the truth," said "JFK" producer Nancy Kirkpatrick. "He very much said, 'Let's make the film so people would ask questions.'"

And his plan was successful. Lawrence Stone, the co-chairman of the JFK Assassination Center in Dallas, served as research coordinator and technical adviser to Stone.

Howard furnished Stone with 100 photographs, videos, and 23 witnesses on the case, including Marina Oswald, the alleged assassin's wife.

"I think the movie is incredible—for all the information we had, and for him to put that into three hours and still be so powerful is to his credit," he said. "And it has stirred up enough reaction from the public to have them demand more, an imputation that the JFK assassination was a conspiracy."

James H. Leear, president of the Assassination Archives and Research Center in Washington, D.C., said "JFK" has served as a catalyst in opening sealed files concerning the assassination.

"(JFK) has been enormously helpful in mounting pressure to open documents pertaining to the assassination."

But James Allen, GUC associate professor of history, said the Warren Commission is closer to the truth. "The Dec. 20 release of filmmaker Oliver Stone's "JFK" has sparked a debate and divided experts. In the film, Stone presents his version of the truth behind the Kennedy assassination on Nov. 22, 1963."

Opposing forces in the Kennedy administration killed its president, Kennedy. The deed was an exigency, an event outside the government's control, a conspiracy.

For many, the assassination nation's youngest president remains a mystery to be solved. But in the 25 years since President John F. Kennedy's assassination, the only facts around the area are the facts presented in the final report.

Kennedy's administration suffered a setback when an investigation into an assassination attempt by Lee Harvey Oswald failed to solve the problem. The CIA gave its account to the Warren Commission, and the commission reported that Oswald was a Soviet spy.

By Lawrence Stone

_Last week's House Select Committee on Assassinations report on re-investigation into Kennedy's death concluded with the Warren Commission's lone-assassion theory indicating Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, murdered Kennedy.

But less than three weeks after its 600-page report was released, a review occurred. The committee released a summary of findings still implicating Oswald as the lone assassin, but acknowledging Kennedy "was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy.""We think it's a vast conspiracy involving the Pentagon, the CIA, the FBI, Lyndon Johnson, anti-Castro Cubans and military contractors was behind Kennedy's assassination.

"I certainly think the government has something to hide," he said. "The public has never believed the Warren report."

program advisory panel has gone back and forth with the cost issue. McVay said this is not it. "The possible increase in fees has nothing to do with the possible addition of the elective abortion benefit," he said.

"The possible increase in fees comes from a University deficit because the Illinois State Scholarship Commission did not pay the University," McVay said.

McVay said the confusion about costs to students has come from misinformation. "This is not the first time the issue of adding elective abortions has been raised," he said. McVay said the issue of student insurance covering elective abortions was rejected by the students in the early 1980s.

A student poll conducted by the Health Service in 1986 indicated that students did not want abortion covered by student insurance. But McKillop's survey suggests students' attitudes may have changed.

Tom Szabo, a SIUC senior from Florida, said providing the abortion coverage gives the students a chance to think on their own. "The question is not whether abortion is right or wrong or a cost issue, because the law says it is illegal," Szabo said. Illinois State, Northern Illinois University and the University of Illinois offer elective abortion coverage in their student health insurance plans.

Kelly Minger, an SIUC graduate student from California, said she is 100 percent in favor of students having the option to have or not to have a child.

"If you get pregnant by accident what are you supposed to do, have a child even if you don’t want it?" Minger asked.

"If students are 18 or older and adult and should have the chance to make the decision for themselves and making it available to them on campus will give them the chance to get the emotional support they need." The survey results submitted by the Student Health Service Advisory Board, along with the opinions expressed in the forum, will be presented to the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Student Professional Council for review and recommendation.

McVay said the councils' recommendations and the survey will be reviewed by the administration before any decision is made.
Cable systems are putting commercial ads for local advertisers on cable TV and CNN, which have taken in money from broadcasters, Faehnrich said.
Gary Maher, president of the Illinois Cable Television Association, said the current system benefits cable television and broadcasters

"If right now there is no charge to broadcasters and so little charge to cable," Maher said. "Nobody says we would keep rates under control, but probably the most important thing it will do is increase costs. Every state agency says they need the help but after months of waiting, they're asking for a subsidy from cable.
Doug Willa, spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters, said broadcasters support the bill for many of the same reasons consumers do.
Cable costs the companies $3 a month but they charge $120 a month, Willa said. "The mark up is tremendous," he said, and the most watched programs are the broadcast channels. Cable is not a monopoly that can raise its rates at will and be responsible in its pricing, he said. They can take and re-sell signals without broadcasters consent. We'd like to see that be a step," he added.
Randy Ross, program director at WDRT, D-Carbondale, supports the bill as a concept, said David Schwartz, program director at the station's sister station, KDRA, D-Carbondale, which is owned by the same company. It can help control the number of channels and what kind of programming they advertise, he said.

• every adult will be literate and possess the skills to compete in a global economy;
• every school will be free of drugs and violence;
• every public school student will be prepared to enter a viable, stable finance system.

Jacobsen said until the financial aid goal, which is listed seventh on the plan, is placed first in the list, the school district cannot expect to operate predictably.
"Budget cuts could force us to rearrange our classes in each class. A person cannot take a class of 35 and expect each child to get an adequate education—"it is impossible," he said.

"The current student to teacher ratio in District 95 is about 25:1."

Margaret Hollace, representative for the Carbondale Community High School District 165, said she supports the plan, but also expressed concern about the financial implications.
"Every year, the district is asked to make cuts for the coming year. We have been under excessive self-analysis for many years. Hollace said: "The plan goals and our goals are very much alike so our commitments to goals will not be a problem."

"When I first read the plan, I was concerned about the financial aspect of it because of the recent budget cut. "The lack of funds puts an added impetus on the need for priorities and planning." School District 100 had $7,000 cut from its budgets in January, which brings the total cut to $120,000 for the 1991-92 school year.

The current student to teacher ratio is 15:1.

The district has been fortunate to have good professional teachers because it has helped the quality of education, Hollace said.

"Toms. Faulker, a state educational official, said people need to remember the plan is a voluntary program.
"We are not asking educators to foot the bill for increasing budget problems.

"The only way we can change the plan is if they have voted to withdraw, he said.

U of I Champaign
U of I Champaign is one of 10 schools with membership in Illinois Student Association. It contributes $3,000 in financial support, one-third of the organization's budget.

The SGA created a special task force last September to investigate and research the student fee to ISA after concern was voiced regarding inadequate representation in Springfield.

The task force presented a final report to SGA in January recommending withdrawal of its membership from the organization, accusing ISA of a general lack of competency, and no sense of commitment.

Waldinger, chairman of the Select Committee to Investigate ISA, said the vote is contrary to his expectations, and he is glad the ISA has a reputation it can work with.

"Regardless of the election vote, we will continue pressing for those issues most important to us," he said. "We'll just have to dig in a little deeper and continue at the state level and hopefully we can remember the voice we have been." Waldinger said he hopes the narrow margin of the vote will not inhibit the policy-making or legitimacy of ISA.

"We are representatives of the students, and the results of the vote validate what we do," Waldinger said. "This is a fight on a new level now and we will have to work a little harder and hopefully unite more people for our cause. The issues don't change, just names and facts, and we'll do whatever it takes to make these changes happen.

The task force had submitted a list of concerns to ISA last October, with no substantial change, so, he said. The next step was the final report made to SGA.

The committee in the final report recognized ISA's inability to successfully lobby for legislation pertaining to U of I, lack of effectiveness in creating a cohesive and concerned staff, unavailability and lack of presence on member campuses, inadequate representation and general irresponsibility of board members.

Acknowledging the committee's conclusions, the SGA recommended to students not to maintain membership in ISA.

Representatives of ISA spent Tuesday and Wednesday on the U of I campus trying to persuade students to stay in the organization by explaining its purpose and visions for the future, Lyons said.

"We weren't really in the position to promise anything after going 1/2 month without an executive director," he said. "It wasn't a bell-ringing victory, but we will continue."

Brad Cole, Undergraduate Student Government chief of staff, said U of I SGA will consider U of I's decision to continue membership before it takes a position on it.

"The U of I decision to continue membership will somewhat affect our decision but we will not dictate our membership," he said.

"Our emphasis will be placed on IU students' maintaining their membership in ISA," he said.

Cole said this number vote comes at a time when the College of DuPage has decided to withdraw and SIUC's representation by ISA has been questioned.

"USG will look at the whole sum to make the best decision for students here," he said.
Malaysians must return home or lose native status

By Fatima Janvekar

Malaysian students in the United States must leave the country within the next six years or face loss of their legal Malaysian status. The Malaysian government is requiring all of its citizens to obtain new government-issued identification cards. The law affects 215 Malaysian students at S.I.U., according to fall 1991 enrollment figures.

"It is imperative for students at this point to understand, as soon as they are done with their studies here, that they should return home if they want to retain their legal Malaysian status," said Raywind Das, sophomore in agribusiness economics from Malaysia.

The new card, launched by the prime minister of Malaysia in February, is the third type used in the country.

The effective date of issue was June 23.

Das said the law is a response to demands by illegal immigrants in Malaysia for better treatment.

"Malaysia is a very hot country right now," said Malaysian national very much in demand," he said.

"It is necessary, we are booming, and so there are many illegal immigrants who come to work in our country, and end up here," Das said.

The government wants to stop the immigrants from taking over industries, Das said.

"We pay income taxes in our country to benefit our people, not those illegal immigrants," he said.

The legislation, every man, woman and child over 12 had to possess the paper identity card, bearing a thumb print and photograph, Ishak said.

The cards also bear new features, including a bar code that has been unprinted, instead of inserted, photographs.

The legislation for the new cards cannot be done while a person is housed in an overseas country or through the Malaysian embassy, Ishak said.

"Application has to be made personally at the Registration Office in Malaysia," he said.

January, the chairman in IIU and president from Penang, said the identity cards are the U.S. counterparts of a local security card.

"We are nothing in Malaysia without a card," he said.

"It is the Malaysian government's affair," Copp said.

Crackdown on DUI laws proves successful; arrests on rise

By Scott Wuerz

Carbondale police have taken the offensive in the battle against drunken drivers.

Police Chief Joe Strom said tough Illinois DUI laws have resulted in a drop in intoxicated drivers on the road.

"It's not any secret that like mine,Compatibility, we've had our share of DUI offenders over the years," he said. "But we're taking a new approach and getting those dangerous drivers off of the road through tough enforcement."

Carbondale, which was ranked 11th in Illinois per capita drunk driving arrests in 1990, fell to 14th last year according to the Alliance Against Intoxicated Motorists.

"While I don't know if there will ever be a time when we can eliminate the problem of drunken drivers completely, we feel that we can greatly decrease the number of drunk drivers by strict enforcement," he said.

GM President Don Ogden said tough Illinois DUI laws are a major factor in preventing possible offenders from getting behind the wheel.

"Drunk drivers in Illinois face the loss of their license for six months, tremendous financial strain due to increased insurance and court costs and prison sentences in alcohol related vehicle fatalities," he said.

"In realistic terms, the driver has to think twice before deciding to drink and drive if he wants to take such a large potential risk," Ogden said.

Mike Murphy, spokesman for the Jackson County state's attorney, said drunken drivers who kill can receive up to 14 years in prison through changes in Illinois DUI law.

A "look related cases of vehicular manslaughter are now considered a Class Ill felony by Illinois law," he said.

"As a result, it carries a maximum punishment sentence of seven years and $15,000 fine. Cases that result in multiple deaths carry a maximum sentence of 14 years," Murphy said.

Strom said Carbondale police hope to make the streets even safer by customer's efforts with a strong DUI education program in the city.

Two Illinois cities find transit useful

By Teri Lynn Carlcock

The City of Carbondale is moving toward a mass transit system that should join 39 others in the state of Illinois.

Carbondale is in the process of conducting a $67,530 feasibility study to establish a mass transit system in the city. The Turner and STLIC administration are contributing 20 percent each and the Illinois Department of Transportation is contributing 80 percent.

The Chicago consultant firm of DeLuev, Cater and Co., is entering into the third and fourth phases of the report.

The third phase is preliminary planning, which involves frequency of service, hours of operations, route configuration and ridership estimation.

The fourth phase of the report is the preliminary planning review. The consultant will meet with IDOT and STLIC officials to select a preferred course of action for the remainder of the study.

The third phase of the Decatur development of its mass transit system in 1972 after a public referendum was passed, giving the city a mass transit system over the private system from a Class 1 employer, said Robert Reed, mass transit administrator for Decatur.

"In the 1960s, ridership dropped to less than a million and in the late 1960s the system could no longer operate," he said. "So the private operator approached the city about and opened the system."

It took the city eight months to acquire assets and get federal grants from the Illinois Department of Transportation.

"We had to work out arrangement with the funding because you can accept federal grants you cannot worsen the condition of federal employees," he said. "The government didn't want the private agencies to be thrown out of work."

It would have been different if the city had started its system from scratch.

Reed said.

"We wouldn't have had worries about employees or old equipment," he said. "If a city were to start its system from scratch, it would not take as long—two or three months at the most."

"In the third phase a mass transit system fills the need for transportation for a wide variety of people."

"Students without cars, elderly people who can't drive and disabled people can carry on with their lives this way," he said. "We view it like city police and fire protection—just simply necessary."

Champaign-Urbana also has a privately-owned mass transit system into public mass transit system. When the funding for its system came from federal and state dollars, fares and local funding.

The Chamber of Commerce and local business owners did not want the transit system to go out of business, so residents passed a referendum to establish a public system, said Robert Patton, operations planner.

"We need a community and a campus system that are integrated," he said. "We are a municipal government of our own."

The system serves 7 million passengers a year, a combination of students and community residents.

Center's program aims of preventing hazardous wastes

The Hazardous Waste Research and Information Center is sponsoring a matching funds program designed to help companies in their efforts to reduce and prevent hazardous wastes.

Grant awards will range from $5,000 to $50,000 and will provide for development or demonstration of waste reduction techniques and technologies or for the issuance of new applications of existing methods.

The Center is a division of the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Projects include, but are not limited to, process modification to reduce waste, research on the use of toxic chemicals, substitutions of less hazardous substances, and the use of equipment for testing of samples.

The deadline for applications is April 3. For more information, call 217-335-8404.

Four students share dream in new Afro-centric venture

The owners of a new Afro-centric club in Carbondale say ownership of the club, an idea that started as a dream, could help black students in their efforts to reduce toxic technology in their everyday lives through a center's program.

SIUC students Cheryl Robbins, Sherri L. Wheeler, and Timothy Zinnaman have poured their savings — $1,000 in all — into their dream.

The result is Klub X, an entertainment club created for African-American students by African-American students.

The club will open at the site of the former Funky Pickle on the 5th Street.

Owners say Klub X will be different than its predecessor.

The club will cater to the African-American market by providing live black entertainment and an African-American cultural experience.

"We are going to have everything from jazz, new & b, top groups, some reggae," Davis said.

"The club will be deco- rated very nice," Davis said.

No alcohol will be served at Klub X, but customers still will be able to bring in their own.

Davis said the search for an Afro-centric club started last semester.

There is no place that is specifically geared toward blacks, he said, but Klub X is a place where we could call our own, that we could take pride in and it would cater to us.

Wheeler said the need exists for an African-American club because African Americans and other cultures have different ideas of fun.

"The Euro-centric programming doesn't always work well with the Tap, Styx, Gatsby's— that's not our culture," Wheeler said.

"We don't have fun doing the same things that they do."

"We're coming from the south side of Chicago and they're coming from the suburbs," he said.

"We party differently; we listen to different music. What whites consider fun, blacks don't and what we consider fun, whites don't, and that's the truth.

There is no reason to sugar-coat the issue.

African-American students turn to Islam for guidance

By She rl L. Wilcox

General Assignment Writer

Young African-Americans are finding a new church home in the Islamic faith, a place where many SIUC students say they receive support and guidance.

Sam Yarber, a sophomore from Champaign, is a Nubian Islamic Hebrew, one sector of Islamic religion.

More youths are leaving the Christian church while parents are remaining because of changes in culture and society, he said.

"The black mother and father see church as a place of refuge from the stresses and pressures of their daily lives," Yarber said.

"But the youths are looking to black leaders to justify what they are doing in their daily lives. For them, the church is a meeting place where they can discuss the pressures of each day, not escape them."

Yarber said things have changed so much for African Americans that parents and grandparents cannot sell their younger stories of how things were when they were young and consider them relevant.

Brian Bell, a junior in law enforcement from Chicago, also is a Nubian Islamic Hebrew. He said since the equal rights movements in the 1960s, Christianity has lost many church members.

"If you look into history, the Christians and Martin Luther King Jr. got boat up because their religion told them not to fight back," he said.

Christianity has turned the other cheek when they are slapped, Islam tells you to strike back."

Many black youth today find the Christian approach unacceptable, Yarber said.

Islam realizes that family comes first and teaches us to be the protectors of our families no matter what," he said. "Islam gives us more respect and to have more self-respect."

Islam is becoming more popular because it is offering people answers to questions Christianity writes off, Yarber said.

"I studied both religions," he said. "I was a Christian, but Islam offered me answers to my questions. It teaches that every question has an answer, while Christianity often says things are a certain way just because that is "how it is."

This is one reason African-American Christian churches are losing political influence and Islam is opening the door, Bell said.

"Our strength comes from faith, not preaching," Bell said.

"Islam teaches us to question everything, then offers answers," he said. "There are no answers coming from the Bible and that's what makes it strong."

The African Methodist Episcopal Church was historically a strong point in African-American culture.

Because the church was the only place African-Americans were allowed to meet in large groups, they were often the planning place for slave revolts and protests.

This is followed by the same guidelines and holds the same beliefs of a United Methodist church, but was formed during slavery because of segregation.

"We don't just believe in the black nation," he said. "We believe in all people and that negro is not acceptable; it is not a word that is used."

Many young blacks switch from the AME church to Islam because they find AME too racist, he said.

"We need Allah, and we do not promote violence and are not as radical as they are made out to be."

"Malcolm X was a follower of the Nation of Islam, another sector of Islam, at one time, but he became too violent and mad that Islam didn't want him any more," Bell said.

So he left, and that was when the violence really started, Bell said.

"We have no argument with them, but if they want to fight, we will fight back."

Byler said.

"We are not going to sit around and let the whites continue to mistreat us."

"We are going to stand up to them and show them who we are."

"We have our own church, our own religion, our own people," Bell said.

The AME church did not allow black people to have their own church, according to Bell.
Folk band to play at Student Center

By William Ragan

The mere kiss of a fair damsel once transformed a slimy frog into a handsome prince. The event took place in a tale gone.

And making folk-rock quartet Toad the Wet Sprocket has tasted the tongue of critical success. Singing into its songbook, too—wars and all.

The band, which takes its name from a childhood pet, will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Laura Moore, chairwoman of the Student Programming Council, said the group goes beyond the cliches of other bands.

"It's a great live show," she said. "No coat will walk away disappointed."

WIDB sponsored a listening contest, "Pick on the CDUG" for S. Illinois Ave. Moore said group response was enthusiastic.

Toad released the Wet Sprocket's newest release, "Fear," the band worked on off and on tightening its sound, said vocalist and guitarist Glen Phillips.

"I don't want to use the studio as a nightclub," Phillips said. "We wanted to do a lot of practice to make sure we had material about the arrangements." Toad the Wet Sprocket recorded its two previous albums, "Bread and Circus" and "Pale," live in the studio.

The band received an advance from Columbia Records.

From the opening bars of "Milk and Cheese" to the final notes of "I Will Not Take The Teachers Word For It," "Fear," at drumming Randy Guss describes, "It's a band expanding in broader directions.

The songs on "Fear" explore a variety of topics such as random violence with "Build Her Down," commercial love with "In My Ear" and spirituality with "Pray You God.

The band has matured since its humble beginnings in San Diego, Calif., and the new album reflects a rebirth in the group's endeavors.

"This album is action, experience," Guss said. "It's moving. It's exploring. It's the next step forward."

Before the band released the new songs on "Fear," Toad the Wet Sprocket performed them at a large summer music festival.

"We had songs that were written before the first album, ones we wrote on the road and some we worked on for up to three years before we went into the studio," Dinning said. "The ones we played live needed less work in the studio."

Guitarist Todd Nichols said the band has a special connection with its fans. "We feed off of each other." Van said.

Dinning said he remembers an illustration that illustrates the effect the band's music has on the people who listen to it.

"We got a letter from a girl who said some of our music kept her from committing suicide," Dinning said. "That's pretty heavy, it weights a real responsibility on you.

"Our music touches the lives of so many, the band performs only for itself, Phillips said.

The bureau's report indicates that most of the housing start occurred in the Midwest. Construction of new homes affects other sectors of the economy because furniture, appliance and other items are needed to fill the new homes, also.

The index marked an increase of 0.2 percent in home furnishings and operations, Kasek said.

But the increase was reported before the recent rise in mortgage rates, he said.

Renter and homeowner costs rose while maintenance and repair costs fell by 1 percent. The bureau reported a significant increase in prices of cereal and bakery products, marking the largest increase in 12 months. Renter prices rose in January as well.

Two other components of the index, the restaurant and food service index, the restaurant and foodservice index, are those which are most popular.

Alcoholic beverage costs rose 0.4 percent in January on a national basis.

Jewelry prices rose in last month a substantial 2.7 percent and accounted for the largest increase in apparel prices in January.

Publishing prices for select recs declined slightly but within an expected range after holiday sales.

Minister retires after 41 years of working for peace, justice

The Rev. Ted Braun fights for human rights at home, abroad

By Jeremy Finney

General Assignment Writer

A sign at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale bores the symbol of a man floating beside the word "peace." Its colors are red, white and blue.

An almost identical sign hangs with the Spanish word for peace, "paaz," in a small church in Cuba.

They symbolize the efforts of a Carbondale minister.

After 41 years of ministry and peace-related efforts, the Rev. Ted Braun is retiring from the Church of the Good Shepherd, where he has served for 18 years.

Braun, 65, said his interest in peace and justice stems from a passion for peace's parents.

"My grandfather and father were both pastors, and my mother and father were very concerned with peace and justice," Braun said.

His interest in peace has translated into many years of service to communities around the world. Braun traveled to Africa in 1960 to lead a work camp in a project titled "Operation Crossroads Africa.

"The organization was formed to help the people in Africa," Braun said.

"Out of 24 work camps in Africa, I was chosen to head the camp in Ghana." Braun feels strongly for peace not because of personal and social injustice.

"In my younger years, I went to an arrangement park with some black friends, and the workers at the park would let me in but not my black friends," Dinning said. "We were jailed in Baltimore for causing a stir."

Braun said he felt a sense of "righteous civil rights" march on Washington.

In 1979 he was chosen to travel to Cuba to report on the struggles of life there. After a 10-day trip, Braun said he knew what he was destined to do.

"I was just a local minister chosen to go," Braun said. "The trip was so interesting and I learned so much, I decided I could do even more when the United Church that was sponsoring it decided not to have any more trips.

After the first years in the Cuban communities, Braun met the congregation of a small church which shared his interest in peace and justice.

"After we met the congregation, we established a correspondence church," Braun said. "It is because of our united churches that the sign with the doves came about."

Braun's wife, Donna, said the community is different than she expected.

"The people there were very friendly and I learned a lot," she said. "It's different there than what is believed by the public.

Braun met Donna when she was a senior in college. The pastor of her church in Indianapolis was sick and the church needed a temporary minister.

"I came to Donna's church for the two months they needed me," Braun said. "I really didn't want to go and move to a job for only two months, but I'm glad I did.

Braun's mission for helping others also has stayed in his own backyard.

He worked with students in 1973 to organize a printer family support group. The group works at home and raise money to help their family members in prison.

"People are brought, from all over the world to prisons, and it's difficult for families to visit," Braun said. "We help by providing transportation to and from their homes and train, and with housing for the time they are visiting.

Braun also is involved with the Southern Illinois Latin America Solidarity Committee, working to raise awareness of this community.

He has written four books for young audiences dealing with problems they face.

Braun's wife also shares his interest in helping others.

Donna is the retired director of the First Presbyterian Church nursery school and has worked with older citizens and shut-ins.

Braun became the fourth minister for the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale, often preaching to his congregation about peace and justice.

His parishioners will celebrate his achievements with a coffee-house and talent night at 7 Saturday at Braun's Church.

Margie Parker, deacon of the congregation, said church members and friends will gather to honor their retiring pastor.

"He's taught us a lot," Parker said, "especially about peace and justice."

Joe Pope, president of the church council, said it is difficult for him to express his gratitude to the Brauns.

Their presence and their openness to everyone, and especially their willingness to grow and help others makes them special to everyone. It's hard to put words to how much they mean to us," Pope said.

Braun said it was time for him to retire and plan to work on more books. He will work as a computer programmer, and the church and friends gave him a retirement gift.

"I had a wonderful time at the church," he said. "I had such a good time that I feel it's time for someone else to share the experience."
Lee Clpton discovered his own little gold mine almost six decades ago—a volunteer tomato plant in his small backyard garden. "I knew I'd hit it rich this time," said Clpton, 82, of Mount Vernon.

Free homegrown vegetables were gold as food, after all, during the Depression. The single plant turned into 82 under Clpton's tender care. The plants produced small, cherry tomatoes, he said, but they were edible nonetheless.

His first baby was born in 1931 near the beginning of the Great Depression. The '30s were lean times for the Clpton family, which soon grew to nine children.

Clpton found work with a local farmer to supplement bus garden. He labored in a field for a pile of milk each day for the baby.

"We had to survive on that," Clpton said, his healthy leg shuffling in a beat up chair back and forth across the waxy lobby floor of a local nursing home.

Clpton and residents at Carbondale Manor have lived through more hard times in their 80 and 90 years than there are lines on their weathered faces.

They remember pieces of their lives' puzzles. What one forgets, the others usually remember. And together they tell a loving story about not only living but also surviving the 20th century.

After the Depression, Albert Bunge, 80, began working as a county school teacher in Perry County.

"We made $80 a month," he said. "Of course we had to pay for our room and board. That wasn't part of the $80. You take care of your bedding and all that and there wasn't too much left. But it wasn't that bad after a while."

Clpton, too, saw better times following World War II. A local factory offered him a job for 42 cents an hour.

"I didn't turn it down," Clpton said. "In those days it was take it or leave it. Another job came along about five years later. That paid $60 a month. A lot is money in those times. But I always heard Keystone Steel and Wire Co. paid big wages, at least 75 cents an hour.

"When I got a chance I went down there. They paid 62 cents," he said, a little smirk climbing along the creases of his mouth. "I guess I didn't bruit myself a great deal with that one."

Cairo native Peggy Green, 81, said people began to better themselves after World War II, not through higher salaries, but through education.

"The smaller towns really caught it hard," she said. "You didn't get to go to school. I got to the second grade and then the fifth grade as an adult. That got me a really good job."

Green worked as an elevator operator for the secretary of state for 2 years.

"I started passing out bandannas for Jimmy Carter," she said. "Even after Secretary (James) Edgar came in they looked at my record and retained me. I learned something from that. Republicans didn't like Democrats too much but you gain more friends regardless of y'o politics and religion if you be nice."

Clpton said education is the greatest thing young people have now.

"I never had any vision of everyone going to school," he said. "My two children had to walk to school. I had to walk to school. I was an orphan's kid, though, so I didn't go to school too much."

"But I said to myself later 'Boy, you better learn or you'll come up short.' So I got myself some books and I learned everything I could. I still study. The girls from the school come in here and ask me about my teacher. Say 'no,' of course, but maybe I'll pick it up."

Bunge got a better education than most. He graduated from Southern Illinois Normal University in 1925.

"SIUC, that's what they call it now, you know; that university made Carbondale," he said.

"They sure dress different now," Bunge said. "They wear any kind of clothes. Old Henry W. Shroyer, if you didn't wear a tie he would flunk you. If you belonged to the Ag Club you had to shine your shoes or they would flunk you."

Green said education brought unprecedented freedom in the 1970s to African-Americans.

"People got 100 percent free equal under Edgar and Jimmy Carter," she said. "We did get freedom then."

Clpton said he and Bunge have lived through times the later generations will never have to experience.

"You have lived through five wars and hundreds of military conflicts. You have lived through the rise and fall of communism in the former Soviet Union and the construction and destruction of a wall that separated Germany. At he: they lived through the greatest economic depression this country has seen. They lived through the McCarthy Era, the Civil Rights movement, the women's movement, the times of Lyndon B. Johnson and the Great Society, the Vietnam War and the '80s with Ronald Reagan."

"Every generation is going to have to go through a hardship," Clpton said. "We have no way of knowing what the future is going to bring, but for some of the hardships I've been through, I am able to look to the future. It will bring so many different changes."

Polio victim beats the odds:

By Ronnie Chua
Special Assignment Writer

Doctors at the John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas, said Richard Hall was dying. His skinny arms and legs lay weary and limp. His hollow cheeks and bony frame were a picture of a Nazi holocaust victim.

His body had wasted away 100 pounds. Hall ate everything he could but something in his body would not assimilate the food.

Doctors had discharged Hall from the hospital after six months of physical therapy—they had given up hope for his survival.

That was 37 years ago.

Hall, 59, is a polio survivor. He is no longer just flesh and bones. His short, crepeau hair, bushy eyebrows and a ready smile betrays his age.

"God answered our prayers," Hall said.

Hall now lives with his mother, Josephine, and his brother, Harri, in Carbondale. He lies on his Emerson Rocking Bed most of the time, even when he eats, reads, or writes lyrics, poems and a novel. Because the disease had weakened the muscles surrounding his lungs, the specially ordered bed works like a teeny tooter to help him breathe more easily.

"I'm so busy, there's not enough he in a day," Hall said.

"I correspond on and off with about 400 people around the world but mostly in the United States. Some may just get one letter a year and some two," Hall said. "I find it very enjoyable keeping up with what's going on."

Hall was diagnosed with polio two weeks after he married his college sweetheart, Marion Stone, in 1953. They had just graduated from Baylor University where they were religiously involved and planned to become missionaries.

Hall entered Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth.

After the first day of classes, Hall and his wife participated in a pre-school retreat at Baylor where he was the song leader.

"After the service, I felt just terrible. I had a severe headache," he said. "We had to drive back from pre-school retreat to our home in Fort Worth and I was so ill that I had to ask if my wife could drive my car."

"I got home and was very stiff and that evening I went to the hospital. I felt like I had the worst case of flu ever had. It came on very quickly because I felt fine during the church service under the open air tabernacle," Hall said.

The next day, because of a high fever, Hall called a doctor. The doctor performed a spinal tap to extract some spinal fluid from his weakened body for a test. The test confirmed the doctors' suspicion—polio.

Hall then hospitalized in the John Peter Smith Hospital polio ward.

"By the end of that day, I was paralyzed," he said. "They had to carry me to the car because I was completely unable of breathing in my own. I couldn't lift my rib cage with my muscles."

Richard Hall uses his portable respirator to help him get a deeper breath of air in his bed at his home in Carbondale. Hall, who was diagnosed with polio in 1955, keeps busy by writing letters, poems and working on a novel.

ILLINOIS AGENCIES TO SPONSOR FORUM ON BOARD HOMES

The Illinois Departments on Aging and Public Health will sponsor a public hearing March 5 in Marion as the seed and viability of establishing laws and regulations to govern board and care homes.

The hearing is scheduled from 1:30 to 3 p.m. at the Department of Public Health Region Five Office in Marion.

The public hearing in Marion is one of three the departments are sponsoring to address the need for board and care homes in Illinois.

The public is invited to address issues such as:

- the advisability of developing regulations for the registration of licensing of board and care homes to provide room, board and personal care to older citizens and people with disabilities in Illinois.
- the definition of personal care used by board and care;
- the minimum qualifications for operators of board and care homes.

Survivor diagnosed 37 years ago with polio spends time reading literature, writing book

"By the end of that day, I was paralyzed," he said. "They had to carry me to the car because I was completely unable of breathing in my own. I couldn't lift my rib cage with my muscles."

The fever already had raged through his body and destroyed the motor nerves in his muscles. He was quadriplegic.

"They (hospital staff) would open up the iron lung every morning to see if you could breathe to say, 'help!'" Hall said.

"We have the love of God in our hearts and friends who prayed, encouraged our faith in God to keep us together, we probably wouldn't have made it," he said.

"Like Billy Graham who said several times he and his wife had rocky moments in their marriage (and) they never thought about divorce—but murder, yes," Hall said with a laugh. "We probably thought about that several times.

Hall was confined in the iron lung for a month before, he was able to get out and breathe on a rocking bed.

"I also use this portable respirator—"breather" they call it—to breathe more deeply," he said.

Slowly, he was able to recover the use of his right hand.

"My right hand has been restored well enough to write," he said.

"I had always been interested in drawing an painting from my earliest childhood, and I had an art exhibit while I was in Illinois Research Hospital in Chicago in about 1958. My wife carried a lot of my paintings up on an Illinois Central train early one morning and had to have a helper to carry them to the hospital," Hall said.

When his condition improved, Hall was able to leave the hospital and stay at his home in Houston. Refusing to be confined to his bed, and he and his wife often toured the sunny Texas coastline—in a convertible.

Before the invention of the electric lift to move people in wheelchairs to their cars, a hydraulic patient lifter had to be used which was cumbersome equipment. But the Halls found a novel way to overcome the problem.

Marian would wheel him to the car, flip over the roof of their convertible automobile to make room for the hydraulic patient lifter to lower him onto the front seat. Then she would collapse the lifter and put it in the trunk.

"For a number of years, my wife and I enjoyed a convertible automobile, it was great fun living in Texas because we'd go to the beach," he said. "Sometime early in the morning, very slowly we'd open the front doors of the car and just let the car ease forward, looking at the seashells.

"When I see a seashell, usually after a big storm, big blow, I'd say, 'Wow!' She'd put on the brakes, park and get out, come around and pick up a seashell. Oh, we loved to do things like that just courting nature, wash the dishes of sunshine."

His wife died of a rare leukemia in 1980. Since then, Hall likes to spend more time writing, reading and listening to classical music in his own room, the walls of which are decorated with paintings and artwork.

One in particular is a needlework of a close friend and dedicated to his wife titled "An Irish Blessing." It hangs on the wall near the head of the rocking bed.

Two other huge paintings near his bed depict the crucifixion of Christ, testifying to his faith in God.

"Hail to the victor, you are beyond reasoning," he said. "I do believe that He can either heal me or give me enough strength to endure it. I don't know why I got polio. I don't seek God why. That's imperative, it's none of my business."

"He's not going to tell me. I'll be greatly surprised if he did. If he did, I may not be able to foolishness.

"He's my shepherd," Hall said. "He led me through the valley. He's not scared, so why should I be?"

Jim Garrison, the New Orleans district attorney who brought forth the first and only public prosecution in the Kennedy assassination case to date, is Stone's new focus as he hones his movie. "JFK" chronicles Garrison's investigation into the assassination and his unsuccessful prosecution of New Orleans businessman Clay Shaw, who had involvement in an alleged JFK assassination conspiracy.

Stone sees himself as a forum for presenting all the evidence of the Kennedy case around the world, and Garrison said it.

"The part of the film that excites me most is the personal feelings in the summation speech in the courtroom," Garrison said. "A lot of that information has been gathered between the time of Garrison's investigation and now. Oliver utilized the courtroom to share this information and his own feelings about it.

Members of Congress were given an advanced screening of the film's Dec. 19, and the results of the screening have been released. It has been confirmed that the release of the film is the result of the 75th Anniversary Edition! Saluki junior guard Tyrone Bell gets fouled while driving to the hoop in the Dawgs' game against Ohio State. The Salukis, who beat the Buckeyes 71-64, clinched a tie for the Missouri Valley title.

SIUC-SMSU battle to determine MVC race

The Bears are on an 11-game win streak, most recently beating Wichita State 69-57. They post a 15-4 league record and stand at 19-6 for the season. The Salukis have won six games in a row and have a 13-3 conference mark. The Dawgs post a 19-5 record overall.

The two teams last met Feb. 2 when the Dawgs experienced their only loss at the Arena this season. The Salukis lost 49-56 to the Bears. SIUC has only five games left, including the MVC Tournament March 1st-9th. Their final game of the season is March 2 against Northern Iowa University.

Herrin said SMSU is a shooting team that also plays strong defense. "They do a good job of controlling the tempo of the game," he said. "But we will still do what we have been doing all season long. We'll do what we do best, and make whatever necessary adjustments to their style of play as we go along."

"But we play an up-tempo game also, so it will be a non-stop running game. I expect it to be a good, fast-paced game." SMSU ranks second in the nation in scoring defense, allowing 58.3 points a game. But SIUC, which will have a big height advantage, ranks ninth in the nation in rebound margin and is led by junior Asfrel Amaya, who at No. 21 nationally in rebounding with 10.5 a game. Amaya is the Bears' leading scorer with 19.2 points a game.

The Bears are led by senior guard Jackie Crawford, who averages 11.3 points a game and is making 47.3 percent of his shots. He also is shooting 85 percent from the charity stripe. The Bears' second-leading scorer, Tony Graves, averages 10.2 points a game.

The game begins at 2 p.m. and will be broadcast on ESPN.

No. 6 Ohio State wins against Purdue 71-64

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Guard Mark Baker led Ohio State's attack with 17 points and the No. 6 Buckeyes scored a 71-64 victory over Purdue.

"This is a real big win for us, especially coming off a real emotional loss at Indiana," Buckeyes coach Randy Ayers said of Wednesday's game. "I'm glad for our seniors, because they've never won here. We had good help from the bench and good balance."

Ohio State's standout forward Jimmy Jackson, who averages 23 points, was held to 15 by Purdue's Conno Martin. "Jackson didn't have a great game and they still beat us," Purdue coach Gene Keadey said. "That shows the type of team they have."

Ohio State led 61-50 with 6:33 left to play when the Purdue dribblemakers ran off 8 straight points, cutting the lead to 61-58 with 3:55 remaining.

Purdue sophomore guard Travis Trice fouled out with 3:32 left and Purdue lost its momentum.

Purdue forward Ian Stanback missed a chance to cut the deficit further by missing two free throw attempts.

Jackson hit his two attempts to increase the OSU lead to 63-58.

A three-point play by Lawrence Funderburke boosted the Buckeyes' lead to 66-58.

"The last few games, we're playing good ball until the last few minutes then we have a couple of mental lapses," Trice said. "I don't know what causes it or I'd have the cure."

"We ran out of gas," said Purdue's Craig Riley. "It's the same story as other games."

For the last six or seven games, we can never find a way to win," Purdue senior guard Woody Austin said. Austin had a team high 17 points.

"We always find a way to lose."
Baseball team to start '92 on road
By James T. Rendulich
Sports Writer
SIUC baseball will venture into its 50th season in the team's opener Saturday at 1:30 p.m. against the University of Mississippi.
Head Coach Sam Riggleman, whose team is coming off an injury plagued 1991 season in which the Salukis posted a 27-31 record, said the 1992 squad is healthier, more athletic and should fare better.
"We're much improved with what we have seen so far, but as with all young teams, the thing we need right now to improve is to play ball," Riggleman said.
This will be the second year Riggleman will have experience behind the plate, with senior first baseman and captain Brian Heuerman, with senior first baseman Darrin Barton and senior third baseman Donnie Smalley.
But the rest of the squad will be composed of underachievers.
Up the middle, SIUC will be starting three sophomores, Jeff Caynar and Clint Smothers will take over second base and shortstop respectively and Jason Smith will play center field.
Smith will be flanked by sophomore Dan Epstein in left and freshman Leland Maoon in right.
The Salukis pitching staff will be anchored by Mike Van Gilder, who has compiled a 3-2 record in 1991.
At this point in the season, Riggleman said he has his goals set for executing the basics.
"Right now I want us to concentrate on making the plays defensively and executing on the mound," Riggleman said. "Offen-Sively, I think we will be able to find ways to score."
But Riggleman said the key to his team's success is defense.
"Defense is the one constant that you can control," Riggleman said.
"We are pretty good right now, but we need to improve on a day to day basis as well."
In a pre-season poll, 1991 Missouri Valley Conference champion Wichita State is favored to win the Missouri Valley title, and the Salukis are picked to finish fifth.
"The poll that is made correct in that Wichita State and Indiana are going to have outstanding teams this year, but we are not going to be intimidated," Riggleman said.
SIUC will return to play host in the Saluki/Best Inn Classic Classic on March 6-8.
Five teams that are ranked in the top 30 by Collegiate Baseball will be on the Saluki 1992 schedule.
But Riggleman said he prefers to battle tough competition and believes it will make his team better in the long run.
"My approach is to let the players play the best teams possible, as it makes you a better squad lar v in the season," he said. "If you have a quality season and do not win the MVC, you must have a strong schedule to help you gain a NCAA bid."
A long way off, but as with many first-year teams, the Salukis are looking for that first taste of victory.
"This is our team. This is our year," Riggleman said.
"This is a chance for us to break through in the MVC, and we hope to win the MVC this year."
"We will be better than we were last year," Riggleman said.
"We are going to play some rough games, but we are going to try to improve each game."
"It is going to take a lot of time, but it will all come together at the end of the season."
"As long as we play hard, we will be fine."
"This is our year."

Montgomery Ward Pricing Pledge
We'll match any store's current advertised price at time of purchase. Plus, if you find a lower advertised price elsewhere, we'll cheerfully refund the difference. Simply bring in the ad and your receipt. This pledge is not limited to identical items, model numbers or like items in our competitors' comparable brand name. We will match the price on the same brand item even if the model numbers are different. If shown on our comparable model chart. And on many items we will also match our private label item with our competitors' comparable name brand or private label items. Our sales associates in Electric Avenue, Auto Express, Home Ideas and our Special Shops have comparable model charts of matchable items. Price Matching policy does not apply to sales of floor samples, one of a kind damaged or clearance goods, closeouts or limited quantities, special order items, manufacturers' rebates, sales by other than local stockists or stockists or merchandise sold in mail order catalogs.
