Union inspects graduate class project

Construction work by students investigated to ensure compliance with SIUC labor agreement.

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

A construction project worked on by agricultural students was inspected by labor organization representatives Tuesday to ensure the project met with the University's labor agreement, a University employee says.

Adam Kantrovich, a graduate student in agricultural education from Des Plaines, said for an assignment, students in the agriculture independent study class began minor electrical and drywall construction on an apartment inside the SIUC Horticultural Research Center.

SIUC has a collective bargaining agreement with various labor organizations that provides for exclusive rights to specific work in University buildings.

Marian Brown, associate director of operations at Plant and Services Operations, said any building on campus property is subject to the agreement.

"Students can't work on anything on campus," she said. "We have agreement with the unions."

Kantrovich said students working on the project were constantly checked by faculty for safety precautions. He said the project was undertaken purely for academic reasons.

"As long as we are doing the construction right, I don't see a problem," he said. "We're not out to take anyone's job. We need the outside class experience, that's all."

Tim Murray, a graduate student in agricultural mechanics from Carbondale, said work began on the apartment in December 1994, and the union organizations contacted the department last week.

"They told us we can proceed with the work," he said.

Rick Hampton, a Human Resource representative, said the matter simply involves an assessment by the labor organizations to ensure work was not assigned that infringed on the unions.

"It was an academic exercise as part of an independent study course," he said. "It was not an assignment of work, but the unions have a right to inspect University property to determine if there has been an infringement on their work."

Hampton said copies of the independent study agreement and course catalog were given to the union representatives when the groups met on Tuesday.

"We gave them the evidence that this was not an assignment of work," he said. "If they are satisfied with the explanation, they will not take any action. But if they find infringement, they can file a grievance. It's their right."

BOT looking at proposed $17 fee hike

By Signe K. Skinoin

SIUC students could be paying an extra $17 each semester starting in fiscal year 1998 if the SIUC Board of Trustees approves across the board fee increases, University officials say.

Lawrence A. Juhlin, Jr., associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said the board will vote on student fee increases in several areas for fiscal year 1998.

"The proposal is on a four-year projection and includes a $2 increase for the Student Recreation Center; a $1 increase for the students' attorney; a $4 increase for the Student Center, which has not had any fee increase in the past 10 years," Juhlin said. "Also, there

Warrant out for suspect in stabbing

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A former SIUC student wanted on charges of aggravated battery is still at large following an alleged Feb. 18 stabbing outside of a party on Beveridge Street, Carbondale Police say.

Christopher A. Settles, 23, of Carbondale, a former computer information processing student, allegedly stabbed a Carbondale man in the abdomen at the 500 block of South Beveridge, Don Priddy, Carbondale Police community resource officer, said.

"Settles should be considered armed and dangerous," Priddy said. "He has a criminal history."

Carbondale development plan in works

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Problems with traffic flow in Carbondale and housing needs are among the 30 most important issues that need to be addressed by Carbondale's new development plan, planning committee members say.

A 27 member planning committee, consisting of Carbondale citizens appointed by the mayor, listed the main issues in Carbondale that they would like to see a planning firm look into when creating a new comprehensive development plan for Carbondale.

Carbondale hired Camiros Ltd., a planning firm from Chicago, to create a new comprehensive development plan for the city.

The plan will outline development and ordinances for Carbondale for the next 15 to 20 years.

The new plan will replace a development plan that was adopted in 1979.

Camiros representatives Jacques Gourguechon, principal consultant, and Tom Weber, senior associate, were on hand for the first Comprehensive Plan Advisory Committee meeting Tuesday night.

Committee members were split into five groups and were asked to list several issues in Carbondale development.

Each group was then asked to list the top three.

The committee instead listed 30 issues.

Topping the list was traffic flow, areas for children to play in and a look into housing needs throughout Carbondale.

Gourguechon and Weber said they will compile the recommendations from the committee and create a survey to be sent out randomly to 2,500 households in Carbondale.

Gourguechon explained that the plan he and Weber will develop will be based on citizens' suggestions. He said the plan they create will guide the city in all development areas for the next 20 years.

City plans to start home page on Internet

Gourguechon said the process will take place over the next 15 months.

He said the general public will have several opportunities to express their opinions about what the plan should include.

"I hope the citizens of Carbondale contribute to this plan," Gourguechon said. "It is their plan, not ours."

Weber said he was pleased with the energy at the meeting but said he would have liked to see more citizens present in the audience.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the committee was off to a good start.

"With the input of the committee, we will be able to provide assistance for Camiros," Dillard said.

"I believe they will deliver a first-rate plan," he said.

Undergraduate Student Government President Kim Clemens, a member of the committee, said she was happy to see most sections of Carbondale represented by the committee.

SIUC Vice Chancellor James Tweedy, Clemens and a representative of the Graduate and Professional Student Council will represent SIUC on the committee.

GPSC has not yet named a representative.

EXILE GROUP WAS VEERING TOWARD DISASTER — WASHINGTON—Anyone watching the growing confrontation in recent months between Cuban authorities and the exile group Brothers to the Rescue could see, as U.S. officials now say they did, a disaster in the making. But reviewing the record Monday, Clinton administration officials said there had been few avenues open to them to try to avert Saturday's bloody denouement in the skies off Cuba, apart from attempting to counsel both the Brothers and the Cuban government against rash action. Yet the group's ill-fated trip had ended up generating consequences far beyond the personal tragedies for those involved, exploding into a major diplomatic and political dilemma for the Clinton administration.

PALESTINIAN'S CAR RAMS BUS STOP; DRIVER SLAIN — JERUSALEM—Israel's shock over Sunday's double suicide bombings was compounded Monday when a car driven by a Palestinian American rammed into a bus stop, killing one commuter and wounding 23 others before survivors shot the driver dead. Police said that Ahmed Abdel Hamid Hamida's driver's license showed he was a resident of California. Family members in the West Bank village of Mazra al Sharkiya said Hamida, whose age they gave as 35, returned to their village in July and became a devout Muslim. Eyewitnesses said the car appeared to deliberately speed through a red light, directly toward the bus stop. Hamida's family members, who spoke to reporters on condition of anonymity, insisted he was not a suicide bomber. Police inspectors said they were not sure.

COUNTERFEIT U.S. $100 BILLS FLOODING EUROPE — WASHINGTON—A Middle East counterfeiting operation is producing "the highest quality family of counterfeit" $100 U.S. bills Treasury officials have ever seen, the General Accounting Office told Congress Tuesday. It was the first government confirmation of what House Republicans, European bankers and terrorism experts have alleged since 1992: that a bogus "superdollar" is flooding overseas markets and undermining faith in the U.S. dollar. A number of foreign banks have refused to accept U.S. $100 bills, one of the most widely held paper currencies in the world, fearing the money may be counterfeit. The GAO stopped short of accusing a foreign government of running the counterfeiting operation, but others at a House Banking Committee oversight and investigations subcommittee hearing said they suspect a foreign government supports the printers.

COURT REJECTS CLAIM OF BIAS AGAINST BLACKS — WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court justices indicated Monday that they were not ready to allow a claim of biased prosecution against blacks without clear evidence whites were getting away with the same crimes. "If there is selective prosecution" of blacks for selling crack cocaine, there should be many examples of whites not being prosecuted in federal court for selling crack, said Justice Stephen G. Breyer.

CALIFORNIA'S CREDIT RATING EARNS UPGRADE — SACRAMENTO, Calif.—As Wall Street recognized California's improving financial condition, one of the nation's three major bond rating agencies Monday upgraded the state's credit rating for the first time since economic recession set in more than six years ago. State officials said they had not yet calculated how much savings the rating improvement would represent.

Carbondale may go online soon

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Carbondale's government may get a new address that would make it more accessible to citizens, a Carbondale official says. City government offices would not move to a new location in town, though.

Lou Morgan, deputy finance director, said he submitted a plan to City Manager Jeff Doherty examining the benefits of Carbondale getting a home page address on the Internet.

Both Doherty and Morgan said the possibilities are endless as far as placing information on the Internet about Carbondale. But they say the primary reason is to make city government more accessible.

Doherty said citizens with access to the Internet could e-mail city government with their concerns, eliminating a back log of phone messages. He said city officials would receive their messages, and citizens would know their messages were received, instead of waiting for a phone call to be returned.

Morgan said he sees a lot of opportunities for Carbondale on the Internet. This could make city government more accessible and bring exposure of Carbondale to people all over the world who are surfing the Internet, he said.

Morgan said the exposure on the Internet could attract visitors to Carbondale or those wanting to move to the city.

Doherty said the service will be simple at first.

"We are looking at placing (basic) information about Carbondale on the Internet," he said. "Also, we would set up e-mail addresses for city workers."

Doherty also said the city would be interested in placing a link on the SIUC home page. He said those looking at SIUC as a place to come to school would be able to learn about the city, as well as the University.

Morgan said any funding required for the home page would come from existing funds, not from new taxes.

Morgan said there are possibilities of other pages containing Carbondale's services that could join the Carbondale home page in the future. He said he did not know what other city services would be interested at this time.

Debbie Moore, Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau director, said the Illinois Bureau of Tourism is going online in March.

She said the Internet site will have every tourism attraction in Illinois represented, including Carbondale's Tourism Bureau. She said the Bureau's page would provide a link to Carbondale's city government page if the city page goes online.

Doherty said he is looking at other cities that have gone online. He said he and Morgan are going to make final decisions soon.

John A. Logan's enrollment rising

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

A record-setting boost in John A. Logan College's spring semester enrollment could lead to an eventual increase in SIUC's enrollment, an SIUC official says.

Ray Hancock, president of Logan, said the college is the state's largest growing community college, which has led to its 27th record-setting enrollment out of the past 32 semesters. Spring enrollment for Logan is 5,057 students.

SIUC experienced a decline in enrollment this semester because of graduating students and non-returning students, SIUC officials said.

Roland Keim, director of Admissions and Records, said SIUC is not in competition with Logan for students whose main goal is to receive a bachelor's degree. He said this is because a large number of those students will

Students inspired by Farrakhan

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A speech given by the leader of the Nation of Islam has inspired some SIUC students to work toward breaking down communication barriers between cultures, SIUC Black Think Tank members say.

Black Think Tank members traveled to Chicago last weekend to attend the National African American Leadership Summit which featured a speech given by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

Farrakhan spoke on Sunday about his Middle Eastern and African root. Anthony Muhammad, president of the Black Think Tank, said.

"Minister Farrakhan called focus to human rights and the fact that all people are suffering all over the planet," Muhammad said. "He wants African Americans to realize that the problem with the world is bigger than just the black struggle. It's a human struggle."

Lorenzo Henderson, chairman of the Black Think Tank Political Action Committee, said he gained insight from Farrakhan's speech. He said he realized the importance of bridging the gap between blacks in America and blacks in other countries.

Black History Month

"This is definitely needed because lessons can be learned from them," he said. "And combined, we can accomplish more widespread improvements."

Henderson said he thinks the most progressive idea Farrakhan spoke of was the notion of empowering oneself. He said with the political and economic improvement of the black nation in America, the number of crimes and the number of people on welfare in the United States would be reduced.

"If the black community can become more self-supportive, it would remove the burden from all of America and strengthen American society," Henderson said.

As for the rest of the summit, Muhammad said urging local organizing committees to work together to "collectively make things happen" was emphasized.

He said the Black Think Tank is ready to improve awareness within the local community by strengthening relations within the community.

Muhammad said one way to strengthen relations is to break down barriers and open doors of communication between individuals and organizations locally, nationally and internationally.

Muhammad said dialogue needs to be set up to break down these barriers. He said a lack of communication and misunderstanding is at the root of many of the world's problems.

Henderson said a meeting is tentatively scheduled for March 26 to initiate communication between SIUC students, administrators and faculty to begin improving race relations on campus, within the community and abroad.

'Melting pot' does not meld cultures well — professor

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The inevitability of a nation the size of the United States is "clusterization into groups" rather than coming together as a nation, a professor from Washington University says.

Professor Stephen Legomsky spoke at the SIUC School of Law Tuesday, discussing the lack of unity in the nation for the Hiram H. Lesar Lecture Series.

In Legomsky's speech, "E Pluribus Unum: Immigration, Race and Other Deep Divides," he said it is not realistic for the people of America to really be one nation.

"I don't think that 260 million people can achieve an enduring kind of kinship," he said. "Sometimes it is necessary if there are going to be insiders that there be outsiders as well. It is a natural thing that exists here.

The benefits of learning from different cultures was something Legomsky also addressed.

He said people can learn from people of different generations, religions and races of the country.

"People have different basic desires when it comes to basic things," he said. "This could be a positive thing for people to learn."

Legomsky explained his theory that E Pluribus Unum, Latin for "out of many — one," should be "out of many — few."

"Instead of being one, it should be few, because we really are not one. We are a lot of different cultures, and that should be recognized," he said.

Legomsky also discussed immigration, which he said is the core of the country's make-up.

Immigration reform harms international students and SIUC

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IMMIGRATION? ONCE again America is debating with itself the pros and cons of immigration. The debate centers around illegal immigration, and yet the U.S. Senate and the U.S. House have chosen to tackle legal immigration.

It is illogical to punish people who follow laws set up by the government. Legal immigrants are the people who follow those rules. They fill out the forms and wait for permission to enter the country. And yet it is these same law abiding people, people who attend and work at SIU, who are being targeted by Congress.

There are two bills, a House bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, and a Senate bill proposed by Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.

While there are other portions of the bills that are objectionable, two provisions, a required tracking system paid for by a tax on non-immigrant student visas and a requirement for checking immigrant status, would do the most harm to SIU international students and the University.

The bill in the U.S. House would tax non-immigrant students $100 to establish a tracking system. The University would monitor the student's enrollment, current address and whether the student is making "normal" progress. This information is to be reported to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

BOTH BILLS WOULD REQUIRE VERIFICATION of legal immigrant status by a business or University before hiring or admitting an individual through the use of a 1-800 number.

Essentially, SIU International Programs and Services advisers would become an arm of the immigration service, losing a degree of trust that is essential for a beneficial adviser/student relationship.

Add to this the fact SIU has had a drop in international student enrollment of 17 percent from 1991 to 1995. Increased competition from overseas institutions is one of the reasons cited for the University's declining international student population by International Programs and Services.

Now with an additional requirement of $100 and the ominous word "tracking" hanging over admission to the University, it is not a great leap to see SIU losing more students to institutions in other countries.

Besides the additional fees and "tracking," the bills call for a nationwide 1-800 number to check immigrant's legal status before college admittance or hiring.

There are 65 million new hirings every year in the United States. That is a lot of phone calls. The database used to check the immigrant's status comes from Immigration and Naturalization Service data and Social Security Administration data. Both departments have admitted to having databases as inaccurate as 20 percent in the past.

These inaccurate databases open the door to possible lawsuits against businesses because of inaccurate data supplied by the government. Paul Zulkie, a member of the board of directors for the American Immigration Lawyers Association, said there is work underway to shield businesses from such lawsuits if the bills are passed. But said has doubts as to whether providing that shield is possible.

ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION IS A PROBLEM IN the United States. It is a problem that requires attention. This makes the Congress' misguided attempts at legal immigration reform all the more perplexing. These are the immigrants that help this country economically and culturally. They, and SIU, should not be penalized for that.

Core taught by profs and GAs

I'm writing in response to an article in the Feb. 23 Daily Egyptian. The article, which discussed the effect of hiring restrictions on the new University Core Curriculum gave the impression that all Core Curriculum classes will be taught by graduate assistants.

While this may be true for some courses, it is not the case for the new FN 101, Nutrition: Contemporary Health Issues. All sections of this course are taught by faculty with expertise in the areas of nutrition and health. For a more in-depth look at what this course has to offer, look at the Internet at <http://www.siu.edu/departments/cogar/animal/chausolc/rfn101hp.html>.

The intent of the new curriculum was to introduce students to established experts in the field and challenge them to incorporate this new knowledge into their daily lives. Although the "old" general education nutrition course has always been taught by faculty and has incorporated diversity and interdisciplinary aspects, the animal science, food and nutrition faculty is looking forward to the new core curriculum.

Lambert should not rain on vets' parade

I am writing in response to Mr. Lambert's letter in the Feb. 20, 1996 Daily Egyptian.

I too am amused and perplexed, not by the media coverage that the reservists received, but more so by your letter.

I do not even understand the purpose of your letter. Are you still lacking the 15 minutes of fame that everybody is supposed to get, or are you just plain bored?

I am a Gulf War veteran, and I for one am very thankful for the support that we received from the reservists. I was on a hospital ship, never carried a gun, and thank God I never saw any "action." Who cares, besides you, that the reservists received media coverage? As far as I am concerned they deserve it. Do you not realize it is harder for a reservist receiving "the call" than it is for regular military personnel?

Put yourself in their shoes. Find somebody to pay your bills, take care of your kids and your pets.

I am not a reservist, nor was I in the clerical aspect of the military, so I am not writing this out of defense, but out of anger. Give me a break Mr. Lambert. Obviously you have never been in the military, because you would know that nothing gets done until the paper work is done.

You need to realize that people deserve credit where credit is due. Just because you haven't received it yet doesn't give you the right to rain on somebody else's parade. Quit wasting my time with your elementary jealousy.

Complacency may kill the Shawnee

For those of us concerned with the ecosystems of Southern Illinois who greeted Judge Gilbert's ruling on the forest service's plan for the Shawnee National Forest with satisfaction, now is a very important time. This battle is far from being over, and complacency today may well result in the loss of everything we have fought so hard to save.

Even interested persons who made no overt protest should now amply fulfill the forest service's request for public comment.

We must write letters, attend meetings and continue to raise scientific arguments to counter those who would ruin our heritage. When we contend with minds as closed as Professor Emeritus Clark Ashby — who implied by his own words that he worships the forest service's plan as Christ (considering those conscientious ecologists who bring thoughtfully considered objections before the public as Pharisees and crucifiers) — we are dealing with dangerous ignorance.

No one, Professor Ashby, "understands the truth about forest ecology." If there were nothing left to learn and no questions unanswered, there would be no debate.

But those who wish to cut trees insist on characterizing all environmentalists as emotional "tree huggers," while ignoring or rejecting the specific issues we have raised.

Anyone who has an interest in this debate or has been to the forest and seen the damage should do something! Write, organize, study the science! Remember, our opponents will do their best to sway the argument so they can continue their habit of profiting from the consumption of our community property.

Those of us who care and want to leave something special for our children must fight today.

Softball pitching coach, former DE press superintendent, dies

By C. Kuhlmeiy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Gary D. Buckles, 51, former press superintendent for the Daily Egyptian and pitching coach for the SIUC women's softball team, died Monday of an apparent cardiac arrest at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Buckles had worked at the Southern Illinoisan for 21 years before coming to the DE as print shop superintendent in 1988. He also worked as pitching coach for the softball team for nine years until 1994.

Friends of Buckles said that he had been suffering from diabetes and kidney problems for a while, but until recently, he remained very active. Buckles took a medical leave of absence from the University in the summer of 1995.

Walter Jaehnig, associate professor of journalism, said one of Buckles' best traits was an ability to train and work with students.

"Even though he worked well into the night with students, they still intensely followed and respected him," Jaehnig said. "One of the hardest things to do at the Daily Egyptian is to train a new crew of students every semester. Despite that problem, he still ran the press room effectively."

Jaehnig said Buckles did not let his health problems keep him from coming to work regularly.

"Gary was somebody who hated excuses and didn't like to make them either," he said. "There were times when he looked too sick to be here, but Gary didn't want to let his health problems get in the way of him doing something he loved."

Cathy Hagler, associate director of finance for Plant and Service Operations and former DE business manager, said Buckles was an inspiration for everybody he worked with.

"Gary was a role model for students and faculty alike who wanted to make the Daily Egyptian a respected publication that everybody could be proud of," Hagler said. "Everybody admired Gary because he always had a kind word for everyone and was a team player. Those are two rare qualities for a person to have."

Kay Brechtelsbauer, head coach of the SIUC women's softball team, said every player Buckles coached had both admiration and respect for him.

"The players liked and respected Gary," Brechtelsbauer said. "He made everyone feel special and touched the lives of everyone who came in contact with him."

Kay Lawrence, accounting technician for the DE, said she admired Buckles as a friend and a co-worker.

"I counted him as a friend and saw him as a person who cared about his family very much," Lawrence said. "The only thing I can say about him is that he was special to us all."

Visitation services for Buckles are scheduled for Wednesday at the Meredith Funeral Home, 303 S. University Ave., from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Funeral services are scheduled for Thursday, 11 a.m., at the Meredith Funeral Home.

Buckles is survived by his wife, Nancy; his three sons, Kent, Bob and Keith; and his daughter, Krista.

Group to discuss slavery reparations

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If African Americans could receive reparations owed to them because of slavery, then the welfare system and the endless cycle of poverty present in some black communities would end, the Black Togetherness Organization said.

Students are invited to the BTO-sponsored "40 Acres and a Mule: Justice or Nonsense" at 7 p.m. tonight in the lower level of Grinnell to discuss whether or not African Americans are entitled to reparations stemming from slavery.

Brian Clardy, a teaching assistant in black American studies and a doctoral student in history, said blacks could become more integrated into the capitalist mainstream if the reparations were carried through.

"If the reparations were passed,

Priddy said Settles allegedly stabbed Michael R. Delisle, 30, of Carbondale. "Settles and two other guys were ejected from a party," he said. "The victim went outside in an alley by the party and got into an argument with the three guys. One of the guys held onto the victim while Settles allegedly stabbed him."

Phillip B. Rowan, 20, of Makanda, was arrested on a charge of aggravated battery for allegedly holding Delisle's legs down while he was stabbed.

Jason M. Tharp, 21, was also allegedly involved in the altercation, police said. He was arrested and charged with possession of drug paraphernalia.

Memorial Hospital of Carbondale officials said Delisle was discharged Feb. 22.

was a proposal for a $1 increase for Mass Transit, but that has been dropped because it is not needed. The proposal includes $3 for the Health Center and $7 for student health insurance."

Juhlin said the board will have two meetings to discuss and vote on these student fee increases. He said the increases will most likely be discussed at the April and May board meetings.

Jean Paratore, associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said the board is looking at funding increases two years in advance because of a recent Illinois Board of Higher Education decision that limits universities from increasing student fees by more than 3 percent each fiscal year.

"We're (SIUC administration) looking at not increasing fees beyond 3 or 4 percent," Paratore said.

Another proposed student fee increase of $2.25 to be paid in a two year period starting in the fall of 1997 is the main focus of tonight's Undergraduate Student Government meeting.

Eric Bottom, USG Finance Committee chairman and College of Business senator, said the resolution needs to be passed because it would help student organizations keep up with the rate of inflation and satisfy student needs.

David Vingren, Finance Committee member and Thompson Point senator, said the resolution would lead to better registered student organization funding.

"We (USG) see these priority two organizations coming in to request money during general fee allocation time and getting shortchanged," Vingren said. "They are only getting $400 to $500 when they need three times that to fund their events. It's obvious the student activity fee of $18.75 is not enough."

Bottom said the resolution will be important to SIUC students in future years.

The senate meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

The SIUC Board of Trustees will decide on the student fee increases before the end of fiscal year 1996.

Project

Brown said the agreement is needed for safety reasons.

She said construction needs to meet special codes and safety orders.

"There are a lot of matters to be considered," she said. "For example, anything regarding electrical work should be done by a trained electrician."

James Tweedy, vice chancellor of administration, said infringement problems are usually worked out before an academic unit duplicates the work of a particular craft for a class.

"A number of things are worked out in advance so complications do not arise," Tweedy said. "We sit down and work them out together." Hampton said unions monitor possible infringements on their work frequently.

"It's rare a project gets this far without them hearing about it," Hampton said.

"But it's partly because of the isolation where the work was performed," he said.

According to the collective bargaining agreement, if the class project is found in violation, the estimated costs will be "charged back" to the department.

The union stewards for the electric and carpentry unions were unavailable for comment.

blacks will be given land and will be able to access capital cash and credit," he said.

He said that in the 1870s, Republicans including Rep. Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania and Sen. Charles Sumner of Massachusetts opposed this legislation to divide the confiscated lands from former slave owners into 40-acre lots.

As a result, black men who were 21 and over could own the land, but they had to rent the mules.

Clardy said once the slaves became free, America became more prosperous.

"Former slaves began to make demands upon the federal government," Clardy said.

"They wanted to be treated fairly by owning their own property and being their own citizens," he said.

Tanya Price, a professor in anthropology and black studies, said that around 1877, the South failed to fulfill its promise to the blacks because the federal government passed the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments, which set the slaves free and gave them citizenship and the right to vote.

"These acts were supposed to make black people citizens in the U.S.," Price said.

"But the U.S. government stopped protecting the blacks. It allowed the political interests of the South to dominate the blacks and put them in the state of virtual slavery," she said.

Price said if African Americans received 40 acres and a mule, there would be more African Americans in the middle and upper classes in today's society.

"If the government paid compensation to the former slaves for their hard labor and no pay, it would at least give them somewhat a start," Price said.

"After slavery, they started with no land, no home and no money, whereas the mainstream America, for the most part, had some capital," she said.

Jody Moore, executive chair of communications of BTO and a senior in political science from Decatur, said the discussion will reflect on whether African Americans should move on or find a way to receive reparations.

"If African Americans receive reparations, the discussion will consider what blacks will do with the reparation and how it should be used," she said.

Price said this discussion is for the benefit of America because it is based on economic empowerment.

"We (African Americans) would have more people in the middle class if we would have started on an equal economic footing in this country," she said.

Price said she will allow people to debate what they think is the best course to follow, and she will decide at a later date how to take tonight's discussion further.

Men carry more bags traveling than women

Who carries more baggage on trips — the real, not the emotional variety? Men carry twice as many bags — averaging two to a woman's one, for the typical two-night stay, according to the new Novotel New York Guest Report.

Women, however, use twice as many towels and aren't as neat and clean as men, according to the hotel's housekeeping staff. As for food: Men ordered hamburgers; women, club sandwiches.

And, according to Guest Services, the most frequently asked questions:

eventually transfer to SIUC.

"Chances are we'll get a high proportion of those students when they transfer," Keim said. "We look at them as being the institution that gives us a large number of transfers. In many ways, their enrollment is good for us. Keeping them in this area assists this University."

However, Keim said there is a little competition between the schools for high school graduates.

Hancock said about 90 percent of Logan students who plan to transfer to a university will transfer to SIUC.

"We are SIUC's largest transfer institution," Hancock said. "We have a very good relationship with SIU."

Hancock attributes the college's rising enrollment to several factors.

"We have a reputation for quality programs and instruction," Hancock said. "We have low cost tuition. We are doing a number of creative programs in the regular programs and in workforce training."

"We have a lot of people coming back for an education because they are unemployed in the Southern Illinois economy. We've studied it as close as we can, and this is what we've found."

Terry Crane, Logan director of Admissions and Records, said he thought Logan was experiencing increases in enrollment because the college meets the needs of the community.

"I think Logan has always been a place where the local community can get a good quality and economic start on education," Crane said.

"I think Logan is always adding new courses to meet the needs of the local community."

GPSC still debating advisory board resolution

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"The first issue is whether or not GPSC is adequately funding SPC."

Mark Terry

GPSC vice president for graduate affairs

A resolution calling for a Student Programming Council advisory board has general support among Graduate and Professional Student Council members, but there are still problems, council members say.

The resolution asks for $3.60 per student each semester to be taken out of the student activity fee and be given directly to SPC. It also asks for an advisory board made up of USG, GPSC and faculty members to monitor the funding of the organization.

Doug Phebus, GPSC vice president of administrative affairs, said the council should decide on the SPC resolution at tonight's meeting.

"There is some general support from the council in forming an advisory board for SPC," Phebus said. "But there is definitely some debate over having to fund the group right off the top because that cuts into some of the events we fund. And we won't be able to do quite as much if this passes."

The resolution facing GPSC passed the Undergraduate Student Government last week and is now awaiting a GPSC vote before going to the SIU Board of Trustees.

Mark Terry, GPSC vice president for graduate affairs, said the resolution will be presented to the council tonight in a team effort to explain its impact.

"As a team, four of us will present the background of the resolution and where we stand right now on it," Terry said. "Then the council will make an informed vote on the matter."

Terry said the four team members making the presentation tonight are Fred Jacobs, GPSC representative; Ed Ford, GPSC representative; Phebus and himself.

Jacobs said there are two overall problems the council will have to address with the proposal.

"The two problems I see with this resolution is the fact they (USG) dialed it all up into one issue," Jacobs said. "And two is the way it was presented to GPSC. Basically, it was a gun to our head."

Jacobs said USG gave GPSC the resolution asking for an advisory board and a decrease in the council's funding all at once. And he said the council is feeling pressure from the SIUC administration that the council should vote for the bill or have the money taken away anyway.

"I have been working on an implementation proposal acknowledging the credible threat of this resolution," Jacobs said.

"The administration can do whatever they want and take the political heat."

Terry said there are three important issues facing the council on this resolution.

"The first issue is whether or not GPSC is adequately funding SPC," Terry said.

"Second, is whether allocating funding to SPC is the best funding structure for them and GPSC.

"And third, is there an oversight that relates to the need of forming an advisory committee for the group?"

The GPSC meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Student Center Illinois Room.

BIG MUDDY FILM FESTIVAL '96
FEBRUARY 23 - MARCH 3, 1996

GUEST ARTIST PRESENTATIONS

ANNE CRAIG—New York-based documentary filmmaker
Wednesday, February 28, 7pm, Student Center Auditorium, Free
A native Louisianan, Anne O. Craig has been working in film production for the past decade. She is currently producing Storyville—The Naked Dance, an hour-long documentary film about New Orleans' turn-of-the-century red-light district. Her credits include a duPont Columbia award in broadcast journalism and an Emmy nomination for Louisiana Boys: Raised on Politics—a slightly irreverent examination of Louisiana politics, and the Emmy award-winning series of Smithsonian World, NOVA, and The American Experience.

PAULA FROEHLE—Chicago-based experimental filmmaker, Thursday, February 29, 7pm, Student Center Auditorium, Free
Paula Froehle is an experimental/independent filmmaker living in Chicago, as well as a part-time instructor at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. Her films have screened at the Tampere International Film Festival, Finland, the London International Film Festival, the Ann Arbor Film Festival, IMAGE/Atlanta Film Festival, and the Pacific Film Archives. In addition, she directs music videos and music-related films for Auvistic, a Chicago-based production company.

CAVEH ZAHEDI—Los Angeles-based narrative filmmaker, Friday, March 1, 7pm, Student Center Auditorium, Free
Offbeat is the word that comes to mind when thinking of Caveh Zahedi and his films. Caveh Zahedi is a filmmaker that isn't afraid to laugh at himself. His films have premiered at the Sundance Film Festival to rare reviews, The Rotterdam Film Festival. Caveh is currently working on I Am A Sex Addict, a painstakingly honest account of his ten-year addiction to prostitutes. To his astonishment, he received funding for the film from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Richmond Ballet to perform at Shryock

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"...the show will offer a diverse taste of classic and contemporary ballet."

*Beverly Townes
Public relations manager
Richmond Ballet*

The state of Virginia delivers one of its most artistic resources to SIUC tonight as the Richmond Ballet leaps into the Shryock Auditorium.

In conjunction with the annual SIUC celebrity series, the Richmond Ballet will bring their beauty to the Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m. tonight.

The Richmond Ballet is in its 12th season and is currently completing a Midwest tour. Sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, HealthSouth Medical Centers and the Virginia Center for the Arts, the ballet has had many prosperous seasons.

Beverly Townes, public relations manager for the ballet, said the Carbondale performance will feature three diverse ballets to give the crowd a thorough feel of the companies' talents.

"From the tragedy of 'Giselle,' to the pulsating rhythm of Val Capriopoli's 'Bow Out,' the show will offer a diverse taste of classic and contemporary ballet," she said. "Bow Out" will be particularly pleasing since it was written specifically for the Richmond Ballet."

The first act will feature "Giselle," a story of a beautiful German peasant woman who falls in love with a man named Albrecht, thinking he also is a peasant. She eventually finds out that Albrecht is really the Duke of Silesia. Upon the discovery of Albrecht's deception, Giselle goes mad, eventually dying of a broken heart.

Jose Limon's "The Moor's Pavane" will be the middle piece of the evening's production. The story recounts love betrayed and jealousy. "Bow Out" will round out the evening of dance with a style of flash being experimented with in modern ballet. To add a taste of something different, "Bow Out" will feature the dancers shedding their traditional ballet leotards for Armani suits and the traditional classical music for a saxophone quartet.

The Richmond Ballet performs tonight at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium. Tickets are $13.50 and $15.50. Students can buy half-price tickets one half hour before curtain call at the ticket office by showing a valid SIUC student ID.

The Richmond Ballet will perform tonight at 8 p.m. on the stage of Shryock Auditorium. The Ballet is in its 12th season and currently is finishing up a Midwest tour that includes cities such as Columbia, Mo., and Madison, Wis. The troupe will present a variety of ballet styles this evening, including an experimental piece featuring a saxophone quartet.

University Police

A fire at an Evergreen Terrace apartment was extinguished before police arrived at 3:50 p.m. Feb. 26. There were no injuries.

A 19-year-old student reported that someone allegedly obtained a credit card he applied for in September and used it without his knowledge in October. The loss is unknown, and the investigation is continuing.

Thomas D. Shannon, 21, of Carbondale, was arrested Feb. 27 for alleged possession of 2.5-10 grams of cannabis. He posted $100 bond and was released.

Savvas Lopez-Ioakim, 27, of Carbondale, was arrested Feb. 27 on an outstanding Williamson County warrant on a charge of fraud/insufficient funds. He posted $100 bond and was released.

103 W. Walnut St., allegedly was burglarized between 5:30 p.m. Feb. 26 and 7:30 a.m. Feb. 27. The owner, Somsak Thiphkositkhun, 38, of Makanda, reported that $65 in currency and five bicycles were missing. The northeast window of the building was shattered. The loss is $3,290. There are no suspects.

JUMBLE

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME by David Amiel and Bill Spang

Unscramble the letters and use one letter to each square, to form the words in the grid.

NOGGI O _ _ _

DOREL _ _ _ _

TARIBB _ _ _ _

TIPEOA _ _ _ _

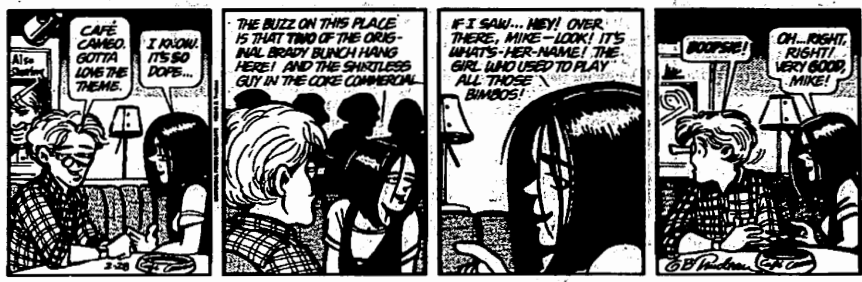

Now arrange the circled letters to form the picture across, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Answer: O _ _ _ or _ _ _ _

The corporate contracts given to the 1996 women's Olympic basketball team also makes the NBA's idea more credible.

Sheryl Swoopes, a star player on the '96 Olympic team, just signed a contract with Nike.

Spalding, another sporting goods manufacturer, is marketing a basketball autographed by Rebecca Lobo, former member of the University of Connecticut women's basketball squad and teammate of Swoopes on the Olympic squad.

Though amateur women's basketball is growing, it will take more than a concentrated effort to ensure the success of a professional league, SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said.

"There have been so many upstart leagues that have failed. I think the most important thing to make one succeed is corporate sponsorship," she said. "If the money isn't there, it'll fail."

NBA involvement and product tie-ins will help draw attention to the women's league, but sports fans will need to be able to find games on television networks or cable channels like ESPN in order for the new league to draw the fans necessary to keep it going.

Blinde said television would be the biggest determining factor holding the fate of the proposed league.

"The problem with any new sport league is getting a media contact," she said. "From a financial and marketing perspective, it may be a hard thing to sell."

Lisa McClung, a graduate student in physical education from Sacramento, Calif., who is studying gender issues in sports, said the other women's leagues failed because they did not consult women about marketing, rule changes and those "horrible" pink uniforms.

"Input needs to be taken from women's coaches and professional players in Europe," she said. "A critical component is female input."

"It'll be interesting to see how the NBA will organize the league. If they're going to employ the same sort of things — only thinking of how to get men to watch it, — then it'll fail."

of SIUC hosting the NJCAA Championships.

DeNoon said there will be close to 400 athletes participating in the events this weekend.

He also said there will probably be about 150 parents and other loyal observers traveling to the meet.

DeNoon said SIUC received the opportunity to host the meet after the University of Missouri had to cancel because of prior scheduling events.

"It was a gift to us in some respects," DeNoon said.

"The junior college track hierarchy started looking around (after UM canceled) and someone suggested SIUC."

Among the colleges in attendance will be Cloud Community College of Concordia, Kansas.

CLCC track and field coach, Harry Kitchener, is the president of the Junior College Track Coaches Association, and is in charge of selecting the site for the national meet.

Kitchener said that Ron Buss, the assistant track and field coach at St. Louis Community College at Florissant Valley and the former president of JCTCA, went to the Seluki/USA Open on Feb. 16-17, and recommended SIUC as the site for the 1996 Championships.

"I didn't bring our team down to the meet (Saluki/USA Open) they had this season, but Ron Buss went out and vice-president of the Coaches Association, David Burgess, from Johnson County (Community College in C-verland Park, Ks.) took some of his team to the meet.

"They were very satisfied with the way they ran the meet," Kitchener said.

The NJCAA Indoor Championships will bring some of the top collegiate track and field athletes together in one building. As DeNoon explained, this is an excellent opportunity for the NCAA and other four year programs to get a good look at the field of athletes.

Although DeNoon said he has rarely actively recruited junior college athletes, other Division I schools view the junior college ranks as a prime area for recruiting.

"I never really have actively recruited junior college athletes," DeNoon said. "There are a lot of schools like ourselves in Division I, who don't really have the coaching staffs to coach their athletes while someone goes off recruiting."

Kitchener agreed that the meet is a good way for junior college athletes to get exposure to a larger four year school and a way for SIUC to receive exposure as well.

"It (the meet) promotes the sport of track and field in their (SIUC's) area," Kitchener said.

"As far as recruiting, a lot of universities have talked to us about wanting it (the meet), they want to get the kids on campus. Getting the kids on campus is a plus for the institution," Kitchener said.

Admission for each day of the meet is five dollars for adults and three dollars for students.

SIUC students with a valid ID will be able to view the festivities at no charge.

respectable."

Against SEMO March 29 last season, the Salukis were defeated soundly 17-2, and were down 5-0 after the first inning.

Even with Stetson being a stronger team on paper than SEMO, according to Callahan, and with the promising offense and improved defense this season, the Salukis will not take anything for granted today in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"We didn't get a beating by anybody like we did last year against SEMO," Callahan said.

"They came out and pounded us, and hopefully we can even the score a little bit. It wasn't a situation where they ran up the score or anything, they just came out and beat the hell out of us."

"I think we played half-way respectable at Stetson, and hopefully we can carry that into tomorrow's game."

Callahan said he was not looking for a perfect performance from his team, but some improvements will have to be made for the Salukis to become successful this season.

"You can't expect perfection in the game of baseball, but the closer you can get to perfection, the better off your going to be as a team."

NBA responds to J. R. Reid's flagrant elbow

Newsday

INGLEWOOD, Calif.—The day after J.R. Reid's attack on A.C. Green, the NBA struck back, nailing the New York Knicks' forward with the stiffest penalty the league ever has handed down for throwing an elbow.

Rod Thorn, league vice president and director of player operations, fined Reid $10,000 and suspended him for two games—the equivalent of one game for each of the lower teeth Green lost when Reid walloped him in the mouth Sunday during the fourth quarter of the Knicks' 113-105 loss to the Suns in Phoenix. Thorn said it is the first time a player has been suspended for more than a game for throwing an elbow.

"We felt it was egregious, that Green was looking in the air and Reid gave him a flagrant elbow in the mouth that was tantamount to a punch," Thorn said. "We were seriously considering making (the penalty) more than two games. That's just how we felt about the act itself."

"I'm very sorry that it happened but sometimes these things happen in the heat of the game," Reid said.

Johnson leading Lakers on playoff charge

Newsday

INGLEWOOD, Calif.— Showtime has paused for a brief commercial break. Magic Johnson temporarily is back to being a court-side cheerleader.

He ignored the condition of his body last month and decided to play basketball, and it has turned out to be a pretty smart move. This time, however, Magic will resist the urge. Rather than risk further harm to his injured right calf, Johnson sat out Monday night's game against the New York Knicks and may rest a week before returning to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Sore muscle aside, all other signs of Johnson's dramatic comeback have been extremely healthy. Despite a 4½-year layoff, he still can impact the outcome of a game. The Lakers are headed north in the standings. The beautiful people are back at the Great Western Forum. And everyone in the NBA is worried about playing against Magic.

No, this is a different kind of worry. It's the kind that's felt in places such as Seattle and Houston and San Antonio. It's the concern that championship-hopeful teams have about the Lakers, ever since L.A. made a midseason move and signed a 36-year-old backup power forward who just might determine the balance of power in the Western Conference.

For those transfixed by the way the Bulls are stampeding through the East, have you noticed how the Lakers are creeping up in the West? Before Monday night's tipoff against the injury-crippled Knicks, the Lakers were 9-2 since Magic's return. Those nine wins

"He has heightened the desire on this team to make the extra pass. His love of the game is evident. It's something our young players needed to see."

Jerry West

Los Angeles Lakers' executive vice president were wipeouts, by an average margin of 11.2 points. The Lakers lost to the Bulls (like everyone else) and the two-time defending champion Rockets (without Magic in the second half).

There were fears that Magic would disrupt team chemistry, but in hindsight that's pretty absurd. Johnson is the ultimate team player, maybe in sports history, and his whole purpose is to be the league's most valuable role player.

He intended to make the Lakers better and all of a sudden, a good team now looks great. The Lakers' scoring average is up five points. Their shooting is up from 47 percent to 50 percent. They're handing out nearly five more assists and committing one fewer turnover a game. They have depth. They can run the floor or play halfcourt. They can use Johnson near the basket or have him lead the break.

What they've managed to do is force teams to rip up those old, outdated scouting reports on the Lakers.

"How are teams going to figure us out?" Johnson asked. "We're still trying to figure us out. Do I play power? Small forward? Point? I play four positions. We can go so many different ways. That's why the Bulls are so dangerous. They give you so many different looks. Who are you going to guard? Scottie? Michael?"

As a reincarnated, rebuilt post player, the 6-foot-9 Johnson is no easy assignment himself.

In a sense, his comeback is shaping up to be more remarkable than Michael Jordan's. Not counting the two games he played with the sore calf, Johnson is averaging 19.1 points, 9 assists and 7.7 rebounds. Remember, he missed 56 months, not 17 like Jordan. Remember, he added 35 pounds and plays a new position, unlike Jordan. Going from point guard to power forward is more of a challenge than switching from outfielder back to two-guard.

Johnson's biggest contribution to the Lakers is in the cerebral department.

He coached the same core of players two years ago during his three-month stint on the bench, and quickly grew frustrated by their poor work habits and tendencies. At one practice, he snatched a live bopper from center Vlade Divac and crushed it in disgust. Then he delivered a stern sermon about the lack of focus of today's player.

Now, the player from the Old School is giving history lessons.

"He has heightened the desire on this team to make the extra pass," said Lakers executive vice president Jerry West.

"His love for the game is very evident. It's something our young players needed to see."

Thanks to West, Johnson had the luxury of returning to a decent team.

During Johnson's absence, West drafted Nick Van Exel and Eddie Jones and traded for Cedric Ceballos. All three are starters and borderline stars, and on any given night, any one of those three can rescue the Lakers.

"My teammates have accepted me, and the main thing about me coming back was how they'd respond," Johnson said. "It's nice to be accepted and wanted."

There have been few, if any, conflicts stemming from Magic's return.

The most likely scenario suggested a "Who's the man?" battle between Johnson and Van Exel, the Lakers' starting point guard. Or between Johnson and Ceballos, the club's leading scorer.

"We're here to win," Johnson said.

"We don't get into who's going to take the last shot. If Nick wants it, he takes it. The other day against Dallas I had 18 in the fourth quarter, but late in the game when the double-team came, I kicked it to Ceballos.

"When I came here I told them that all of those egos have to go. It's all about winning. I don't have time for all that other stuff."

A.L. president pays Orioles spring training visit in Florida

The Baltimore Sun

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.— The middle-aged man wearing the blue baseball cap and jacket and watching the Baltimore Orioles' workout Monday could have been confused for any of the Cal Ripken devotees who turn out at Fort Lauderdale Stadium.

Except this man is, in some ways, Ripken's boss. American League President Gene Budig stopped by the Orioles' camp Monday, part of his tour through Florida, and chatted with reporters about myriad topics.

—The match of Ripken and Roberto Alomar in the Orioles' infield. "It's exciting. They are two giants of the game. ... Baltimore has put together a very good baseball team, and that's evoking fan interest that's reflected in very strong season-ticket sales."

—The progress of the labor talks between owners and players: "From what I'm hearing, I'm optimistic on those fronts."

—How interleague play may affect the individual integrity of the two leagues in general, and his office in particular: "It was the right thing to do. It was in response to the fans. ... I think it will help the two leagues. We still have the All-Star Game, we still have the World Series. I'm confident both leagues can be protected."

Budig, well-liked by most players and managers he meets, stood and chatted with Orioles manager Davey Johnson and shook hands with B. J. Surhoff and Alomar, before leaning against the cage and watching batting practice.

Abbott heeds warnings after scorpion attack

The Los Angeles Times

TEMPE, Ariz.—The warnings are posted all over the California Angels' Tempe Diablo Stadium clubhouse:

"Attention! Look out for scorpions. Check all your gloves, shoes and gym bags."

Pitcher Jim Abbott never paid much attention to the signs ... that was until Monday, when he found an inch-long scorpion in his sneaker.

"It was scary," said Abbott, who found the poisonous arthropod as he pulled tissue out of a new shoe.

"I'd been taking the warning for granted. I was lucky. If it wasn't a new shoe, I just would have put it on without even looking."

The incident brought to mind the time triple-A Manager Don Long was stung by a scorpion at the Angels' old training facility in Mesa a few years ago.

An obviously frightened Long rushed to trainer Rick Smith, screaming, "Am I going to be all right? Am I going to be all right?"

Deadpanned Smith, "We'll know in about five minutes."

Manager Marcel Lachemann, criticized in 1994 for overworking some players, said he will try to give regulars a day off every 30 days or so, whether they like it or not.

Already, some don't like it.

"You may be playing well, feel real locked in, and a day off disrupts your rhythm," first baseman J.T. Snow said.

Dawgs seek revenge for 17-2 loss to SEMO

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

After coasting its way to a 1-2 record during the season opening series against Stetson University in DeLand, Fla. Feb. 23-25, SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said he is looking for more consistency from the Saluki pitching staff and outfield at Southeast Missouri State today.

The main area of concern is SIUC's starting pitching, which the team hoped to improve over last season.

At Stetson, starting junior pitchers Brad Blumenstock and Mike McConnell both were battered by the Stetson hitters, and knocked out of the games after only a brief outing.

Blumenstock, whose earned run average is 15.00, worked three innings and gave up five earned runs on nine hits, and only struck out one and gave up a home run.

McConnell lasted only 1.2 innings, and gave up four earned runs on four hits to put his ERA at 21.60. He also struck out only one and walked two, while giving up a home run.

Callahan said there was no reason to be alarmed at this early point in the season, but he was not happy with the performance of the starting pitching in Florida.

"There comes a time when you can talk about potential and ability

"Brad gave up two 0-2 hits, and that's inexcusable at this level."

Dan Callahan

until your blue in the face, and after a while guys have to produce; but at the same time I don't think there is any reason to panic," Callahan said. "Neither Mike nor Brad finished very strong last year, and I hope their outing in Florida is an isolated incident, as opposed to a sign of things to come."

Callahan said he was pleased with the relief pitching of sophomores Chris Schullian and David Piazza at Stetson, who threw 7.1 scoreless innings between them, but said the starters were going to have to become more effective at SEMO then they were at Stetson.

"It was a case of falling behind hitters and pitching up in the strike zone," he said. "Brad gave up two 0-2 hits, and that's inexcusable at this level. Those are things that good pitchers don't do."

"With Brad it once was a case of throwing strikes, but as you progress and have the ability to start throwing strikes, then you have to concern yourself more with location and having greater command of a second and third pitch."

Even with pitching becoming an early season concern, Callahan said he was pleased with the offense and infield defense in Florida, and said those areas are improved over last season.

"We saw some things we liked in Florida," he said. "I thought offensively we did a pretty good job, I thought our infield defense was good, and with the exception of the first game I thought our catching was

SIUC to host NJCAA track championships this weekend

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

This weekend, several of the nation's top track and field athletes will pace their way to the SIUC Recreation Center.

The Recreation Center will be the site of the 1996 National Junior College Indoor Track and field Championships.

The events which take place at the Recreation Center's indoor track facility March 1-2, will mark the first time SIUC has ever held a national collegiate track and field championship meet.

The meet will kick off with the pentathlon at 9 a.m., Friday morning and conclude Saturday after the women's 4x400-meter dash, which begins at 3:55 p.m.

Women's track and field coach, Don DeNoon is the coordinator of the event and said several hundred athletes will converge at the Recreation Center's indoor track facility to compete.

This is the first time SIUC has ever hosted a national track and field championship and DeNoon said it should help bring notoriety to SIUC and Southern Illinois.

"This would be a very positive thing for SIUC," DeNoon said. "People will go back and say, 'what a beautiful campus and what a top notch athletic facility'."

DeNoon said the facilities SIUC has to offer will be seen by coaches and those coaches, in turn, will pass the word to other coaches. He said the meet will probably enhance recruiting for all sports at SIUC.

DeNoon said he has heard from universities such as: Illinois, Alabama, Syracuse and Purdue, who have all expressed interest in watching the competition.

According to DeNoon, virtually every motel in Marion and Carbondale is booked full as a result

NBA's idea for women's pro league long overdue

By Jennifer Camden
Special to the DE

Five years ago, the only professional women's basketball players in the United States were made to wear tight pink uniforms. Then the court was shortened, the baskets were lowered and the players were not consulted.

Dr. Elaine Blinde, SIUC physical education professor, still winces at the memory of the now defunct Liberty Basketball Association. She shows videotape of a game in her Gender and Sport class to demonstrate how women's basketball has been mismanaged.

But if the National Basketball Association acts on its plan to introduce a professional league for women in 1997, Blinde said it might succeed where other associations have failed.

"It's the perfect time to at least give women a shot," she said. "I'm anxious to see how it develops."

Women's professional leagues have long been successful in Asia and Europe. In fact, former SIUC player Anita Scott is now on a team in Greece and ex-Saluki Amy Rakers once played on a Japanese team.

However, plans by the Women's Basketball Association and the American Basketball League to begin leagues in the United States have been delayed for years. Other leagues have failed outright.

With an eye on the sport's growing market, the NBA is ready to step in.

Over the last 10 years, ticket sales at women's NCAA basketball games have almost tripled. The television ratings for the 1995 Women's NCAA Championship game were higher than professional hockey, and men's basketball games aired on other networks.

SIUC basketball standout Troy Hudson has been named to the Missouri Valley Conference's all newcomer team while receiving honorable mention in both the media's and coaches All-conference team.

A coroner ruled yesterday that University of Dayton basketball star Chris Daniels' sudden death earlier this month was due to natural causes.

Doctor James H. Davis of the Montgomery County (Ohio) Coroner's Office said the 23-year-old Daniels died a natural death due to cardiac arrhythmia.

Daniels collapsed and died on February 8th.

Davis said his post-mortem exam showed that the 6-10, 238-pound Daniels had a slightly enlarged heart, a condition common in athletes of his stature, but showed no other abnormalities that could have contributed to his death.

Tony Phillips, who signed a two-year free agent contract with the Chicago White Sox and predicated the team's trade of Tim Lincecum, retired Tuesday.

Phillips, who turns 37 on April 25th, cited family matters for the retirement. Phillips, one of the most versatile players in baseball, was coming off the best season of his 14-year career, hitting .261 with 27 homers, 61 R.B.I.'s 119 runs and 113 walks.

The National Basketball Association fined Juwan Howard of the Washington Bullets

$5,000 for making an obscene gesture in a game against the Charlotte Hornets last Friday.

Howard was fined for making the gesture following his ejection with 2:49 left in the Hornets' 100-96. The ejection also carries an automatic $1,000 fine.

Shawn Kemp of the Seattle SuperSonics has been named the National Basketball Association's Player of the Week.

Kemp averaged 22.5 points, 13.0 rebounds and 1.25 blocked shots in leading the Sonics to a 4-0 record last week.
