Athletic Director accepts position as football coach

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

It took SIU Athletic Director Doug Weaver three days to make up his mind to become the 10th head football coach at Southern Illinois University.

Weaver, a 42-year-old native of Chicago, succeeds Dick Towers who resigned last week following seven seasons as SIU's head football coach. Weaver was appointed athletic director Feb. 2, 1973 by T. Richard Mager, vice president for development and services at SIU.

"I made the recommendation to combine the positions of football coach and athletic director after considering the situation the past three days," Weaver said.

"For the good of the University, the athletic department and the football program, the combination of athletic director and head football coach would be a wise one at this time," Weaver said.

Weaver has a football background which includes 16 years as an assistant and head coach in the Big Eight, Big Ten and Pacific Eight Conferences.

Weaver began his associations with collegiate football as a linebacker for Michigan State from 1950-52. In 1952 Weaver's Spartan squad were the National Collegiate Champions. Weaver also spent two years as an assistant coach at Michigan State following three years of service in the Air Force.

In 1958 and 1959, Weaver was an assistant coach under Dan Devine at Missouri. The 1959 Missouri team represented the Big Eight Conference in the Orange Bowl.

Weaver then directed a somewhat unsuccessful head coaching career at Kansas State University, known as the "graveyard of the Big Eight." Weaver only won eight games while at Kansas State.

"We weren't strong enough to compete in the Big Eight," Weaver said in reflection. "After my head coaching job at Kansas State, I started all over again as an assistant coach."

Weaver then became assistant coach under Pepper Rodgers at the University of Kansas and followed Rodgers to UCLA, where he was the defensive coordinator in 1971 and 1972. Weaver received a law degree while at Kansas.

Weaver says he is excited with the idea of becoming involved with coaching and said one of the first things on his list as the new head coach will be to call a team meeting.

"I feel strongly about Dick (Towers) and what he has done for the athletic program here," Weaver said. "Now that he has left I feel stimulated with the idea of coaching and working with young men. I am anxious to meet the team in a squad meeting as soon as possible."

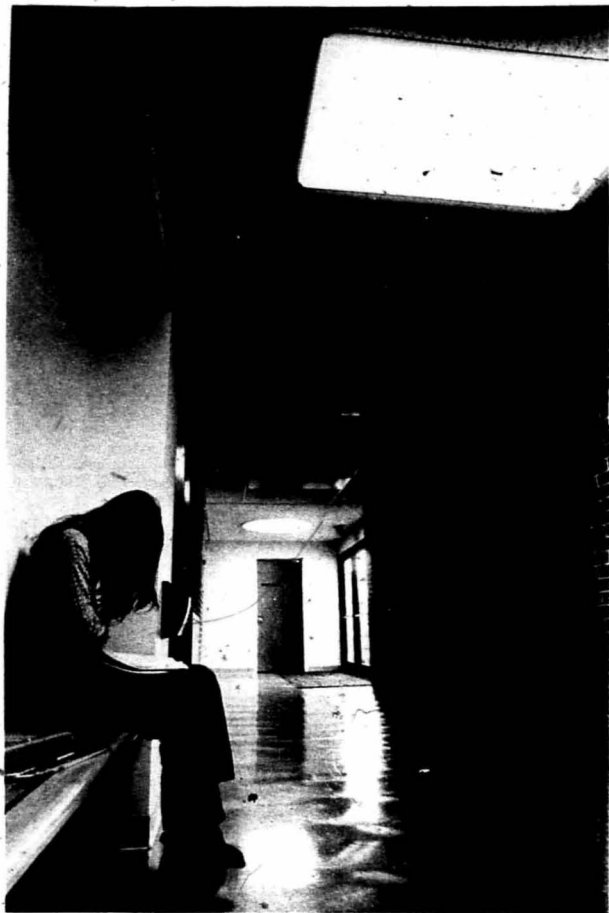

One of Weaver's primary responsibilities in the past ten months has been finalization of the McAndrew Stadium renovation plans. The Salukis will play in the rebuilt stadium next fall with a seating capacity expanded to 17,500.

Weaver has also carried on the drive to get SIU an invitation to join the Missouri Valley Conference following the withdrawal of Memphis State last June. SIU hopes to hear from the conference in early December regarding a bid to join.

As far as football goes, Weaver will have a large group of returnees. The Salukis finished 3-7-1 this year in their first season in the major college classification with as many as 17 freshmen among the teams top 50 players.

Conserving light in Life Science II

Some lights still burn

Cutbacks in energy cool, darken campus

By Rafe Klingler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Complying with SIU President David R. Derge's order, University officials in charge of building operations are planning to or already have put into operation energy conservation measures.

On the whole, heating and lighting across the campus have been reduced. In some places, such as in halls and on thermostats of academic buildings, the cuts are noticeable. Other lights such as those outside the Arena and on its giant marquee, and campus parking lot lights, are still burning but reductions are in the planning stages.

There also are places where decorative lights that could be extinguished continue to burn, such as Morris Library and the Student Center.

The University's conservation program began Nov. 8 with an order sent by President Derge to those in charge of energy use on campus. Derge announced that SIU would comply with President Nixon's request that the nation attempt to conserve energy in the face of fuel shortages.

In the order, Derge listed 10 ways the University would reduce its energy consumption. Some of these include reduction in hallway lighting, cutting building heat to 68 degrees, elimination of decorative lighting, and limiting University vehicles to a 50 m.p.h. speed limit.

Spot checks Tuesday and Wednesday revealed some of the energy conservation measures in operation.

In the corridors of the Communications Building, the Student Center and Lawson Hall, 50 per cent of the lights were out. In Life Science II, hall lighting was cut by two-thirds.

Heat regulators were set at 68 degrees in Communications and Life Science II.

Other checks uncovered areas where decorative lighting still burns.

All the entrance hall lights, including the five-lamp chandelier dangling from the vestibule ceiling, in the Student Center remain in operation. The fluorescent lights in the center's second floor hall also were on.

At the Arena, the lights ringing the building also were shining.

Bob Marlow, superintendent of building maintenance for all campus buildings except the Student Center, the Arena, Shryock Auditorium and University Housing, listed the energy conservation measures in effect.

Derge attacks support of 'elitist' schools

By Marcia Bullard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU President David R. Derge again attacked state government support of "elitist" universities Wednesday, warning that a lower budget for SIU might be fatal to the growth of the university.

He told a meeting of the Carbondale Rotary Club that the state is putting SIU "in a second class category" in budget matters. Derge accused the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) of favoring elitist institutions like the University of Illinois, Northwestern University and the University of Chicago.

IBHE budget recommendations for the 1974-75 will be released next Tuesday. SIU administrators expect severe cutbacks for this and other state universities.

Under Master Plan Phase III, SIU is to be developed as the second major comprehensive university in the state. Present IBHE budget policies have not allowed SIU to expand as earlier planned, Derge said.

"Some people in the state will no longer think of SIU as a major comprehensive university," he added. "We will be put back with other universities—still useful but not a major institution."

Derge also criticized the IBHE for rejecting SIU's move to cut tuition, saying higher costs favor elitist institutions. State government should support public instead of private institutions, he said.

"For every dollar that goes to an elitist or private institution, the state takes a dollar out of our budget," Derge said.

He commended the SIU faculty and staff for doing well despite budget cutbacks in the last two years.

"I'm going to call on them for the same type of innovation and sacrifice next year if the budget situation is grim," he added.

The speech Wednesday was the second Derge has delivered to the Rotary Club since he came to SIU two years ago. Reviewing changes in the university during that time, Derge often cited his support for the faculty in spite of tight budgets.

Among accomplishments he listed were the establishment of the schools of medicine and law, the Colleges of Science and Human Resources and the School of Technical Careers (an expansion of the Vocational-Technical Institute). He called the switch to semesters "a real money-saver in the long run" and told Rotarians the money would be "put into faculty enterprises."

Noting the abolition of textbook rental service, Derge said the system was "archaic" and "related to an institution of much lower calibre than what we have today." He promised to retain the Academic Excellence Fund as a "kitty to help us stay ahead of other universities."

Derge said the massive reorganization of the administration implemented in 1972 saved the university nearly $1 million which was "put to the academic side." He said he believes SIU is a pioneering institution with unlimited potential for growth.

"Academic affairs is the guts of any great university," he said.

Derge assistant spends second day testifying before discrimination panel

By Diane Mizialko
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Willis Malone, special assistant to the SIU President David R. Derge, spent another day Wednesday as a witness in the Illinois Fair Employment Commission (FEPC) hearing into former professor of technology Marisa Canut-Amoros' sex discrimination charges against SIU.

Sylvia Roberts, Ms. Canut-Amoros' attorney, completed questioning Malone around 3 p.m. After a short recess, SIU Legal Counsel John Huffman began cross-examination. The hearing adjourned at 6 p.m. so Malone could return to campus for a class.

During the recess, Ms. Canut-Amoros said she felt her case had "gained very much from Malone's testimony." Malone's testimony Wednesday strengthened her allegations that SIU at one time placed faculty wives in a special, although unofficial, employment category, Ms. Canut-Amoros said.

Asked about her special conference with FEPC Hearing Examiner William Regas on Tuesday night, Ms. Canut-Amoros declined comment. She said no more private talks were set for Wednesday night.

"Preliminary discussions," as Regas called them, were held Tuesday night at the request of the FEPC. The commission is disturbed by the inordinate length of the Canut-Amoros hearing, FEPC hearings usually last only three or four days, Regas said. The Canut-Amoros hearing has consumed about two weeks to this point.

During his cross-examination of Malone, Huffman attempted to rebut Ms. Roberts' questioning of Malone's authority to act in the matter of Ms.

Canut-Amoros' alleged 1971 resignation from SIU.

Huffman also questioned Malone about University documents introduced by the complainant.

At one point, Huffman and Ms. Roberts spent nearly ten minutes in a verbal sparring match over the form of Huffman's questions. Examiner Regas intervened sharply. "I hope both of you are finished now and we can proceed," Regas said.

At the time of the tense exchange between Huffman and Ms. Roberts, Huffman had been questioning Malone on Ms. Canut-Amoros' handwritten letter of resignation to Thomas Jefferson, Dean of the School of Engineering and Technology.

Huffman asked Malone to compare two resignation letters introduced as exhibit by the complainant to determine if they were identical. He also asked Malone to relate the contents of the letters to the "emotional state" of Ms. Canut-Amoros in May, 1971.

Malone said during a break in the proceedings he found his stint on the witness stand "frustrating."

"There's so many things I don't and can't know about," he said.

The FEPC hearing will resume Thursday morning in the Holiday Inn Regatta Room. The next witness called by the complainant will be Robert G. Laver, chairman of the Department of Economics and formerly Interim President of SIU.

S-Senate raps Menard officials

The Student Senate voted 6-5 Wednesday night to write Menard Prison officials a letter of condemnation for their refusal to allow Free School Chairman Randy Donath admission to the prison. Senator Mark Harris said "Donath was denied entrance because he thinks a certain way, and has been labeled 'radical' by SIU officials."

In lengthy debate Senator Garry Seltzer said, "It is only fair to invite a prison official to give the other side. We won't support freedom of political expression if we rush to judgment without hearing their side. We will only make hypocrites of ourselves."

Diane Johnson, proxy for Senator Larry Roth, said "Donath's constitutional rights are being denied." "Do we have any jurisdiction over Menard prison?" Seltzer asked. "We have a right to protect free speech," Senator Marc Kamm said.

Four other bills were passed, including approval of an expanded teacher evaluation system in conjunction with the "Mirror." The bill will allow students to fill out teacher evaluation forms in the "Mirror" offices if not given the opportunity in class.

The bill also recommends that "Mirror" files be accessible to all students.

Kol Shalom, a Hillel Foundation sponsored newspaper, received unanimous recognition as a campus organization by the Senate.

In other action, the Senate approved Student Body President Mike Carr's Campus Judicial Board recommendations. Thomas J. Leisz, William Wayne, Joe Kostik, and Mike Badger were sworn in by Carr following their approval to the Board. A fifth member of the board, Mary Hartzell was not present.

The fifth bill allocated $260 to the Home Economic Association for a national convention trip.

Garry Seltzer, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, told the Senate the committee hopes to hear testimony from Howard R. Long, fiscal officer of the Daily Egyptian as a final witness. The hearings were authorized Oct. 10 after Assistant Professor of English Fred Whitehead complained that a letter he wrote to the editor was refused for publication.

"The Academic Affairs Committee believes that if Dr. Long will talk with us and answer our questions we can begin to make some progress toward resolving the controversy over whether or not subtle pressures are influencing the editorial policy of the Daily Egyptian," Seltzer said.

Senator Ron Adams moved that the Senate not meet next Wednesday "because it is election night."

Students need 3,600 soup labels for projector

Student Government is conducting a drive to collect 3,600 Campbell Soup labels to help a grade school acquire a projector, Mike Carr, student body president, said Wednesday.

Carr said he was contacted by Thistlewood Grade School in Mounds which he said is in desperate need of a projector for the entire school.

"The school needs the labels by Dec. 16," Carr said. "Campbell Soup Corp. told the school they'd purchase the projector if 3,600 labels were collected. The labels have to be soup labels though."

Carr said a box is located in the Student Government office where students may contribute labels.

Deadline Friday for applications for special funding

Friday is the final day to apply for project funding through the Academic Excellence Fund for 1974.

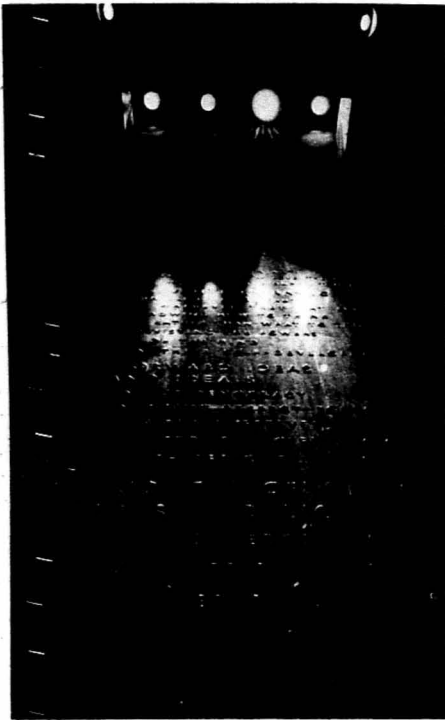

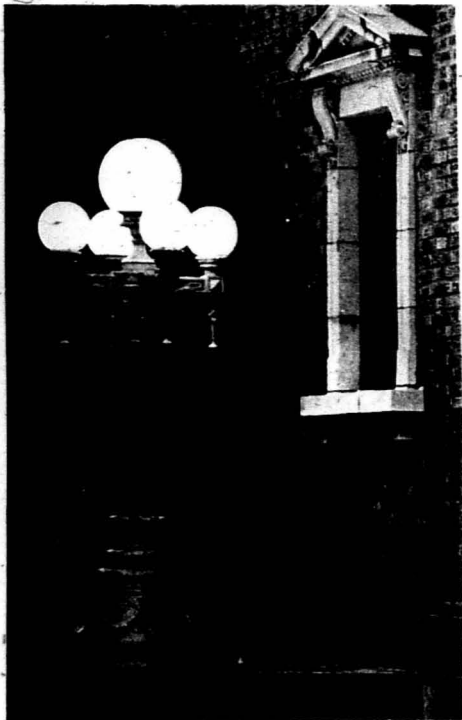

Proposals for projects which may qualify for funding must be submitted to Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs. The proposals will be reviewed by Dec. 17 and funding should begin by the first of the year.

The Academic Excellence Fund is used to finance projects which exemplify academic excellence but for which no regular funding is available. To be considered for the fund, projects must be able to be implemented within present space limitations of the University, must cost less than $137,500 per six month period and must contribute to the academic quality of the institution.

Discussion 'pleasant,' Elliott says

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Board of Trustees Chairman Ivan Elliott Jr. said Wednesday's discussion with SIU's constituency heads about methods of communicating with the Board was a "very pleasant" one.

No formal lines of communication between the Board and the Advisory Panel made of constituency heads, were set up said Elliott.

If other Board members agree, Elliott said, the Advisory Panel members will be allowed to speak to items on the Board agenda. With Board approval, the members panel may request time for statement prior to the meeting, or possibly during the course of matters during the meeting, he said.

JoAnne Thorpe, chairperson of the Faculty Senate, said the constituency heads "more or less agreed" to limit responses to the Board to "appropriate" matters.

"It seems to me we've moved into a new era of communications," Ms. Thorpe said. Speaking particularly of faculty members, she said she was pleased they now have a chance to respond to issues coming before the Board.

Ms. Thorpe said Elliott indicated the Board was "eager" to have the advice of the panel. Elliott agreed, saying the Board had been discussing the representation of constituencies to the Board for quite some time.

Elliott agreed to meet with the panel before the January Board meeting to arrange liaison for the session. Such preparatory meetings, he said, would not necessarily be the rule, but would be called when needed.

The unstructured nature of the proposed panel-Board liaison was agreeable to both Elliott and the constituency heads, said Sharon Yeagain, Graduate Student Council executive secretary. She mentioned the Board will be watching to insure the panel members do not use the Board meetings as a "sounding board" for problems.

Other constituencies on the panel are: Graduate Student Council, Student Senate, University Senate, the Civil Service Employees Council, the Administrative and Professional Staff Council and the Council of Deans.

Campus cooled, darkened by cuts in energy use for lighting, heating been reduced, by as much as 50 per cent where possible," he said. All decorative lighting has been eliminated.

Areas where no lighting cuts will be made are in classrooms and in the study rooms of Morris Library, he said.

Concerning heat, temperature controls in all buildings have been lowered from 72 down to 68 degrees, Marlow said. The cooler temperatures will not be noticeable until the temperature drops outdoors, he said, since most of the buildings have sealed windows and retain the heat.

Still being studied is possible darkening of campus street and parking lot lamps. Marlow explained a safety factor is involved and the security police are being consulted before any of these lights are eliminated.

Clarence G. (Doc) Dougherty, director of the Student Center, explained the energy reductions he has made.

Building heat has been lowered to 68 degrees, except in non-public areas where the temperature was cut to 60 degrees, Dougherty said. Hall lighting has been reduced 50 per cent, hot water has gone from 140 to 110 degrees, decorative lighting has been eliminated and the escalators are shut down at 7:30 p.m. on weekdays.

Dean Justice, Arena manager, said major energy conservation measures are still in the planning stages at the Arena because cuts in heat and light might present safety hazards.

The wrestling and basketball teams use the Arena for workouts, Justice said. Since lowering the temperature could result in the athletes cooling off and injuring themselves, the athletic director and other physical education people are being consulted before any change is made.

The outside lights ringing the Arena and the marquee also provide illumination for the sidewalks, he explained. These lights will probably be reduced, but the safety factor here is also under discussion.

Meanwhile, Justice said, 50 per cent of the hall and amphitheater lights have been turned off.

Joe Gasser, assistant to the housing director, said the heating has been reduced by two to four degrees in the dormitories and the hot water temperature lowered by five to ten degrees, and all dorm lights, except safety and security lighting, are turned off during breaks and during holidays.

Dorm residents have been asked to turn off lights when leaving their rooms, conserve hot water, turn down heat instead of opening windows, and shut off electrical appliances when they are not in use.

"We are apparently getting good cooperation, because there have been no complaints from students since the heat was turned down," Gasser said.

Election commission has another dropout

By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

For the second day in a row, an election commissioner for the student trustee election has resigned.

John Deichmann, graduate appointee on the commission resigned Wednesday because "Steve (Nuckles, undergraduate commissioner) considered John unrepresentative of graduate students because he also holds a faculty appointment in the College of Education," Lynn Kinsell-Rainey, Graduate Student Council (GSC) president said.

An undergraduate commissioner, Bill Wesely, resigned Tuesday because of his affiliation with Action Party. The Student Senate and GSC recently agreed that no party affiliations would be allowed in the trustee election.

"Steve Nuckles and Jay Berno (graduate commissioner) wouldn't be so 'overloaded' as election commissioners if Steve hadn't overextended his important and appropriate duties as student senate appointee by deciding that the second GSC appointee was ineligible," Ms. Kinsell-Rainey said.

"At the GSC meeting Thursday night, I shall again ask for volunteers to accompany Jay (Berno) in representing graduate students on the election commission but I expect Steve Nuckles to refrain from making GSC decisions for GSC," Ms. Kinsell-Rainey said. "I'm sure that he (Nuckles) has enough work to do to make some additional help valuable."

All student trustee candidates petitions were declared legal by the election commission, Berno said Wednesday.

Commissioners Berno and Ralph Rosnyek said the method of validation consisted of checking j's, r's and s's throughout each of the petitions, academic standing through the registrar's office and whether each of the candidates was registered three of the last four quarters, through Student Life.

"The only petition questioned was Joanne Brand's because of an obvious forgery," Berno said. "When it was checked into, it was found out that one guy signed for his roommate because he was fixing his car and his hands were dirty," Rosnyek said.

Berno said the commission has formulated the two remaining "mandatory events" each candidate or proxy must participate in. The first two included statements for publication in the Daily Egyptian and a press conference at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Student Center Auditorium.

"On Monday, there will be a table in the union (Student Center) where each candidate is required to sit and answer questions for at least an hour," Berno said. "The fourth event consists of requiring each candidate providing a written reaction of the campaign to the commission by 5 p.m. Tuesday so we can improve the procedure of following elections."

Each of the 13 candidates will be allowed two minutes to state his platform followed by an open question period by the press and public, Rosnyek said. James Brown, chief of board staff, is scheduled to discuss extracts of the March 1973 report concerning relations of the Board of Trustees and its executive officers, he said.

The press conference is open to the public.

The times and polling places for Wednesday's computerized trustee election were also announced by the commission.

Students may vote at any of the polling places from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Rosnyek said.

Polling places will be located at the Student Center, Leptz Hall, Morris Library, Home Economics Building, Wham Education Building, Grinnell Hall, Truebook Hall, Wilson Hall, School of Technical Careers, Air Technology Building and Small Group Housing.

Candidates in the order they will appear on the ballot are: Ronald Ruskey, Daniel Schuering, Duncan Koch, Allen Maser, George Kocan, Gary Sostrin, Larry Rafferty, Candace Richards, Guy Zajonc, Joanne Brand, Larry Weiler, Matthew Rich and Wayne Oates.

Time to stop wasting student time

If all the pointless term papers SIU undergraduate students write were gathered and burned in the Physical Plant, the amount of heat generated would be enough for the University to consider cutting back on its fuel budget.

Most academic departments at SIU have openings for independent study in the form of readings, practicum, honor study and similar labels. The work required for these course offerings frequently takes up much student time and energy.

But all too frequently the research done in independent study meets an untimely end as a term paper filed with an instructor. The time and energy that went into compiling the research is plowed under without an attempt to harvest something usable from it. Surely this university can think of more creative ways to use the resources students expend in independent study.

The Hartigan study on youths and students, a joint project of the lieutenant governor and the Association of Illinois Student Governments, recommends matching students and legislators to research a topic of mutual interest. The student would receive academic credit, and the legislator would gain needed research.

Such an arrangement would fit right into the independent study niche, and would transform an academic exercise into a practical student experience. The due date of the research project might mark the end of its immediate worth to the student, but it would also mark the beginning of its worth to someone who needs the practical information uncovered after a quarter (or starting next year, a semester) of digging.

Projects of this nature need not be limited to the needs of legislators. The Carbondale area has practical equivalents of nearly every academic discipline offered at SIU. Research needs of city councilmen, school administrators, store owners, environmentalists and countless other community agents could be met at no cost by students in corresponding academic fields.

Aside from the practical knowledge gained by both researcher and recipient of the research, a mutual-interest program between SIU and Carbondale would draw the town and University closer together.

SIU academic department heads need not wait for the Hartigan study to be completed to consider the positive effect mutual-interest research would have on community betterment and student preparedness for a chosen career. The time to develop these programs is now, because students and townspeople need them now.

Redeem University House

Now that the residents of the University House are planning to move out the University has an excellent opportunity to turn the building into an actual asset. As large as the house is and with the many rooms it would make an excellent gallery or museum. It would provide a pleasant surrounding for the display of art or historical items.

Other than Mitchell Gallery the University does not have any areas set aside for the display of any work. Some of the large rooms could be used by the University Museum to display some of the many items that they own. This would be a much nicer setting for displaying items than the Mobile Museum provides.

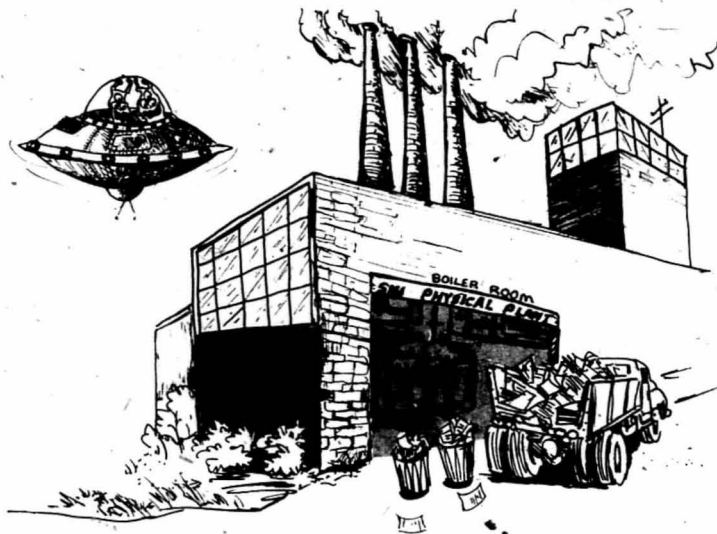

The University has to face the fact that they have this so called house. The only hope is to do something with it that will be productive and at the same allow citizens to get into the home and see what controlled spending can do.

Spiritual beings in a spiritual world

To the Daily Egyptian:

My friend, you and I and all people are spiritual beings living in a spiritual world whose ruler, at present, is bent upon the destruction of us all. We do not have to look too hard for evidence of his work, like the messed up lives of Watergate or men warring with each other. Wherever we are weak, be it temper, money, alcohol, sex, drugs, power, health, etc., he will attack us and try to destroy us by perverting our minds, our bodies, and our destinies. This enemy is as real as, and far more destructive than an invasion of rats into our homes. Yet if we had such an invasion of rats into our homes, we would not hesitate to label them as an enemy and immediately begin to do something to destroy them. Why is it we do not do the same with an invasion of destructive thoughts? It is because our enemy, Satan, has also seized our consciences from our recognition of these thoughts as enemy, and replaced it with the thought that whatever I want for myself is fine no matter how I get it, whether by crass or subtle means. Not a one of us has escaped the enemy's snare.

But the power of the enemy can be broken by having as our helper another and more powerful spirit, God's Holy Spirit. Through the life of Jesus, God demonstrated His power and authority over the ruling spirit of this world. This same power is available to us today, for it is the same Holy Spirit operating today through the same Jesus Christ. For example, every time I walk into one store here in Carbondale, I am bombarded with the thought to shoplift. It does not happen elsewhere, so it is not a thought I have within me. But had I not the help of the Holy Spirit to recognize these thoughts as from the enemy, and were I myself weak in this area, how easy it would be for me to become a shoplifter. For once the first temptation is yielded to, the next becomes easier and easier until we are hooked. Am I or anyone else a shoplifter by nature? No; but the thought can be implanted in us if we receive it. Are you or anyone else a homosexual by nature? No; but we become whatever spirit we receive or listen to.

In a new book by Pat Boone, called JOY, Barbara Evans shares a homosexual's search for fulfillment. It is a moving story of immense struggle between these spiritual forces. She asked for help and God did not let her down. Neither will God let you down, for "the word of the Lord is true."

You are right, Mr. Bateman, Christ does weep for you and for me whenever we fail to live up to all he will have us be.

Thank God for scholars

In reply to Mr. Rohr, in this era of Soviet-American detente, we would do well to be xs clear and correct as possible about these Russians whom we are only beginning to understand. The immediate problem is a tiny phonetic one, part of a dilemma that has plagued Slavists for years—the transliteration of Russian consonants and pure vowels into English that, in many cases, has no phonetic equivalents. At times we have gone mad and Germanized-Polonized spellings have been the result (for example, Tschaikowski).

What after all, is the standard spelling of Stravinsky's Ballet? Mr. Stroud's spelling "Petroushka" (see the Stroud vs. Stearns newspaper debate of recent weeks) is the version that harks back to the premiere of the work at the Theatre du Chatelet, Paris, June 13, 1911 (see Boris Kochno, Diaghlev and the Ballet Russe). This French transliteration has been retained in several works on the Russian ballet, among them Adrian Stokes Russian Ballets, A. E. Johnson, The Russian Ballet, Alexandre Benois, Reminiscences of the Russian Ballet. But in the French the "ch" of the title is a "sh" sound (close to, but not identical with the Russian retroflex "sh"). By no stretch of the imagination do we get "sh" from peading "ch" in English. Stearns' spelling in the review, by the way, is "Petroushka", a French-English hybrid. The Celebrity Series program used "Petrushka", an accepted transliteration based on the modified Library of Congress system.

Among available sources, only Sister Mary Grace Swift's Art of the Dance in the U.S.S.R. used this spelling. But even this "Petroushka" has a medial syllable that wants to be pronounced "trush". The truth is, no ideal pronounceable transliteration exists.

The word, by the way, in addition to being the name of the Russian Guignol, Harlequin or Punch, is, more basically, the common garden parsley. At least that's simple.

Gold

The value of the gold in Fort Knox just about doubled yesterday as the government and six European nations faced today's economic realities and ended their agreement to fix their "official" price of gold at $42.22 an ounce—less than half the current market price of about $90. As a consequence the United States gold reserves are now worth more than $20 billion as compared with $10 billion on Tuesday.

Such accumulations of gold originally were intended to back the nation's paper money with something of value. This concept has been downgraded in recent years. Currency should reflect a nation's economic strength, it's argued, not its gold supplies. There isn't enough gold in existence to back up all the currencies, at least at the current price of gold. This concept regards gold as merely a metal.

It was hardly in consonance with this theory, therefore, for governments to tie their currencies to an "official" price for gold as they have done in the past, even clinging to that price when the market price passed it.

Now the seven governments will trade gold among themselves, when they do, at the market price. They will be free to sell their reserves at the market price. The immediate reaction is a strengthening of the dollar; if Washington wanted to, it now could use some of that Fort Knox gold to soak up some of the billions of dollars held abroad that depress the buying power of the dollar.

It doesn't have to do that now; the new move bolstered the dollar and besides the balance of trade is improving. A big sell-off by the governments, which own half the known supply of gold, would depress its price. That threat sent the price down yesterday, but now it's in the U.S. interest for gold prices to stay put. And if gold is no longer a factor in the currency, there's no longer any reason to bar Americans from owning gold bullion. President Nixon has the authority to restore that right, taken away in 1933. Those who don't trust paper money should have the right to own gold.

Mr. Nixon splits

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

How the President rose from the muck of Watergate to achieve true greatness in his final three years in office can now be revealed. The key, of course, was his firing of Mr. Nixon.

The President had won universal admiration for his courage and wisdom in handling foreign affairs. But as Mr. Nixon's chicanery and deceit in dealing with domestic matters dragged the President down into the mire, the rift between the two men widened.

Things culminated one weekend in November as the President read a good book to improve his noble mind while Mr. Nixon sat idly watching the Redskins on television.

The President: Listen to this, Dick: "He is such an incarnate hypocrite, that whatever object he pursues, he pursues crookedly. . . Creeping along the ground to some small end, he will always magnify every object in the way and consequently will hate and suspect everything that comes, in the most innocent manner between him and it. So the crooked course will become crookeder. . ."

Mr. Nixon (humbly): They shouldn't say that about us, sir. I'll attack the press again immediately.

The President: That's a description of Uriah Heep, Dick, from David Copperfield.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, it's nothing to do with us, then.

The President (thoughtfully): I'm not so sure. Anyway, I've decided to come clean with every Congressman and cooperate fully with the courts. You may have destroyed the tape of my conversation with John Dean, but I'll give them my recollections of it that I dictated into my Dictograph.

Mr. Nixon (smiling secretively): Gosh, I can't find them anywhere, sir.

The President: It's good I didn't trust you and also wrote down my missing recollections of that missing tape in my diary.

Mr. Nixon (stily): If I'd known that sir, I'd have used something else to start the fire.

The President (angrily): At last I see through you, you fiend! It was you who hired those Watergate bumblers, blackmailed the milk industry, pulled off the Vesco deal.

Mr. Nixon (fawningly): Only to assure your reelection, sir.

Mobs as censors

The disruptive demonstrators who prevented Dr. William B. Shockley from addressing a public forum at Staten Island Community College are guilty of subverting the Bill of Rights and academic freedom.

Dr. Shockley's theories about intelligence and race are subject to serious question and have been challenged by many scientists whose background in these areas of research are far more impressive than his. None of these facts can justify what has become a concerted nation-wide campaign to silence the physicist and to deprive those who want to hear him of the opportunity to listen.

The Staten Island incident followed closely the cancellation of a scheduled debate between Dr. Shockley and Roy Innis, the black nationalist, at Harvard and a refusal at New York University to let Dr. Shockley take part in an academic forum. Dr. William Birnbaum, president of Staten Island Community College and long a staunch defender of civil rights and liberties, has eliminated any risk of one-sided presentation of a questionable doctrine by also inviting three highly qualified speakers whose views clashed with Dr. Shockley's. The fact that the mob nevertheless silenced Dr. Shockley is a grim reminder that academic freedom can still be trampled on by the inexcusable forays of self-appointed censors.

The Christian Science Monitor

The President: It was you who bugged and burglarized innocent citizens.

Mr. Nixon (cringing): Only to protect your security, sir.

The President: It was you who advised me to defy Congress and the courts.

Mr. Nixon (desperately): Only to preserve your Presidential powers, sir.

The President: No! You were trying to ruin me. Why?

Mr. Nixon (his humble mask dissolving): Because everybody always loved and admired you, while they loathed and despised me! I couldn't stand it! I had to drag you down to my level!

The President (grimly rolling up his sleeves): Well, they're not going to have Dick Nixon to kick around any more.

The deed done, the noble President lived happily ever after, dealing openly and honestly with all. As for the disgraced and slithering (cq) Mr. Nixon, he last surfaced in Tijuana, where he ran a used car lot until run out of town by the Better Business Bureau.

Is inflation here to stay?

It must be apparent to Americans that despite more than two years of economic-control programs, inflation is threatening to become a permanent fact of everyday life. One doesn't have to decipher the regular government price-index reports to know it, either.

The City Colleges of Chicago are levying their first tuition charge ever because of increased costs. Gasoline dealers now are free to raise prices once a month, and the betting is they'll do it regularly for months to come. Landlords facing higher fuel prices are talking of higher rents. The Cost of Living Council has raised the amount by which doctors may increase fees from an average of 2.5 per cent a year to 4 per cent. Chicago's water rates are going up 34 per cent. Commuter railroads no sooner get a fare increase approved than they line up with applications for another.

Responsible economists and government officials are no longer promising quick relief from price hikes that have averaged 7.5 per cent this year. A recent report from Chicago's Harris Bank cautioned that attempts at "quick and simple solutions to the current inflation problem... generally lead to even higher prices at some later date." To reduce the inflation rate quickly, the bank said, "would require a severe recession," which is a price Americans are unwilling to pay.

Instead, more and more people are trying to adjust to living with inflation. Social Security payment increases have become almost an annual affair in Congress. Cost-of-living escalator clauses and so-called "non-wage" fringe benefits have become more important than straight wage increases for many union negotiators. There are now about 4.5 million American workers covered by escalator clauses, compared with fewer than 2 million only 10 years ago.

While the desire for price-rise protection is understandable, economists and most labor leaders would agree that the protection itself contributes to the inflationary cycle. There is ample evidence, too, that controls have served to institutionalize a pattern of rising prices: Given the erratic history of controls, prudent businessmen have learned to raise prices when the chance appears.

Americans long taught to believe that inflation was a temporary aberration may have to revise their thinking. Many economists are predicting an economic slowdown—possibly a recession—because of the energy shortage. But as we learned in 1969-70, inflation can coexist with recession.

Looking at the worldwide shortage of many key resources, and at the inflation raging elsewhere at higher levels than our own, it's hard to disagree with Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur F. Burns' sober—if somber—assessment: "We must recognize, I believe, that it will take some time for the forces of inflation which engulf our economy and others around the world to burn themselves out."

Learning to live with inflation doesn't have to mean learning to like it. Efforts at restraint must continue until the present pace is slowed. But in the meantime we may have to fall back on the small comfort Grandma used to offer: "What can't be cured, must be endured."

A student loan fund in memory of Benson B. Poirier, who died on Thanksgiving Day, has been established by staff members in the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance at Southern Illinois University.

Poirier, 54, was assistant to the director of the office and also an assistant professor in the department of guidance and educational psychology. He had worked closely with SIU's revolving loan fund for students.

Friends and associates of Poirier are invited to send donations for the Benson B. Poirier Memorial Loan Fund to the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, Building B, Washington Square. Checks should be made payable to Southern Illinois University with a notation that the donation is intended for the Poirier fund. Donations should be marked to the attention of John D. Barnes.

Poirier joined the SIU faculty in 1958. He was a native of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and received his bachelor's degree at Bowling Green (Ky.) College of Commerce. He earned the master's degree at Indiana University, Bloomington, and the doctorate at the University of Wyoming, Laramie.

Before coming to SIU he had been a faculty member at New Mexico State University, Las Cruces, and at Kansas State University in Manhattan.

School of Medicine attracts doctors to Southern Illinois

By Randy McCarthy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU School of Medicine already has attracted many physicians to Southern Illinois and may aid in keeping more doctors in the area, Dr. Eli Borkon, assistant dean of the school, said Wednesday.

Borkon spoke to the Lunch and Learn audience in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

"The role of the School of Medicine is to assist the people of Central and Southern Illinois in getting better health care," Borkon said. "Our program is built around this."

Borkon said 10 new doctors have come to Carbondale to practice in the last year. He said in 1940 there were eight doctors in the city. Now there are 40, he said. "Eight hundred persons are employed in the field of health in Carbondale, amounting to a $6.6 million payroll, he said.

Borkon said the SIU School of Medicine was started as one way to lower the ratio between doctors and patients in Southern Illinois. Before the school opened, there was one doctor for every 1,700 persons in Southern Illinois, he said. The ratio in Cook County was only one doctor to 600 persons, he said.

Findings of two reports on ways to correct the deficiency recommended "going to the community and training doctors there instead of the urban areas," Borkon said. "We had no community medicine," he said.

Borkon said there was no guarantee a student taught medicine in Illinois would practice in the state. Illinois exports 70 per cent of the medical students educated in the state. He estimated the cost of educating each medical student was $80,000.

When internship programs for medical students are dropped in 1975 more local residencies will be established and more students may remain in the state and practice, he said. Borkon said 100 applications have been received for the six possible residencies in Carbondale.

The School of Medicine has campuses in Carbondale and Springfield, "connected by a bridge 160 miles long," Borkon said. Springfield was selected because of the two large hospitals and the 150 doctors there, he said.

A campus was opened in Carbondale because of "the big campus, the fine school, the laboratories and the teaching staff" already available, Borkon said.

Starting a school of medicine usually requires $200 million to $250 million in capital investments, he said. The SIU school of medicine was started for under $20 million, Borkon said, because of the existing facilities.

Borkon listed three goals of the new school: To train medical students.

—To establish residencies in the area.

—To continue education in medicine.

While seeking new faculty members search committees were "looking first for doctors who could teach," he said. "Research was secondary."

Priority for acceptance to the school is given to applicants who live in Central or Southern Illinois. "We give brownie points (to these students)," Borkon said. Although most applicants come from Cook County, few are accepted into the SIU school of medicine, he said.

Applications from 1,600 students were received but only one out of every 20 was accepted. Borkon said a student's grades are not the only factor effecting who was accepted to the school. Before a student is accepted he is interviewed three times, he said.

Borkon said faculty members try to instill their students with a feeling of empathy for the persons in their communities. "We want students to have compassion," he said.

How GM is responding to the energy problem.

Over a year ago, we asked our plant engineers to establish an energy conservation program to cut waste, improve utilization and generally increase the effective use of our energy resources.

In our plants we're instituting programs to salvage oil and other combustible materials that were once thought to be waste materials of the manufacturing process. Then we're using those former waste materials to fire boilers in some plants and in others we're cleaning the oil and selling it to local power generating stations. It's a method that has been tried and tested. It works. It's even economical.

A system developed by General Motors engineers for "scrubbing" the sulfur dioxide out of coal smoke is moving at an accelerated pace. As the technology is proved out, we're making it available to anyone who can use it. There are large deposits of coal in the United States that will become immediate substitutes for oil when we can make sulfur-bearing coal an environmentally acceptable fuel.

We are working toward improving the gas mileage in the cars we design and build. Wind tunnel experiments, weight reduction programs and major programs for the development of more efficient engines are all being pushed ahead.

And we are preparing ourselves to satisfy any increased future consumer demand for smaller, more energy-efficient engines and cars.

Properly utilized, mass transportation systems are also highly efficient users of energy. GM is engaged in major research and product development programs to improve bus transportation, the most flexible, easiest and quickest to implement of mass transportation systems. Those programs include the design of buses, new methods for the efficient operation of buses on reserved or exclusive lanes into and through downtown areas or central business districts, and the automated control of rubber-tired transit vehicles on special guideways. Long range plans for mass transportation developed by GM were displayed in Washington at Transpo 72.

In addition to building standard rail commuter diesel electromotives, we have initiated efforts to produce locomotives powered only by electricity. GM, over many years, has done creative research which has been utilized by government agencies and transit operators in improving public transit. As urban transportation systems are designed and approved by the various levels of government, GM will be ready to build the hardware.

Energy can also be conserved by the more efficient use of the cars and trucks now on the road. It is in everyone's interest to get maximum gas mileage by maintaining cars and trucks in good order, avoiding excessive speeds and quick starts, and by sharing the ride whenever convenient and practical. For instance, driving at 50 mph rather than at 70 mph could increase gas mileage by about 20%. We are taking steps to remind our customers of these good driving practices.

GM is determined to do its full share in the resolution of the energy problem.

We also pledge our complete support for all reasonable government efforts to increase available energy and maintain maximum consumer choice.

Nominees for vice president so far include: Sharon May, foreign languages and literature; Tom Stewart, educational administration and foundations; Dick Davenport, higher education; and George Lombardi, higher education.

Nominations for secretary include: Don Vanover, higher education; Jackie Oxford, higher education; and Sylvia Zei, theater.

Brendan Gill, The New Yorker magazine's drama critic, will assume the role of host when "Behind the Lines" opens its second season at 7 p.m. Thursday on WSIU-TV, Channel 8. The monthly hour-long media review is the only regularly-scheduled program of its kind on American television.

Fee deferment to start Monday

The bursar's office will begin deferring fees Monday for students unable to meet winter quarter costs by the Dec. 12 deadline.

Students may defer tuition and fees amounting to more than $50 at window 13 in Woody Hall C. Students must appear in person to request fee deferment.

Students who wish to pay winter quarter fees may either make out a check for the amount of fees along with the fee statement or drop the check and statement in a "drop box" provided at window 18 in the bursar's office. Checks and statements will be processed and students may pick up validated fee statements when they return to campus winter quarter.

Even if no fee is shown on a student's statements, he must take it to the bursar's office for validation before Dec. 12.

Action Party still recognized; others fail to present forms

By Debby Ratermann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Only one student political party is currently recognized at SIU. Joel Blake, administrative assistant to Student Body President Mike Carr, said Wednesday.

That is Action Party, which has nine candidates in the Dec. 5 Student Senate election. Action Party is the banner both Carr and Student Body Vice President Jim Kania ran under last spring.

Blake said active parties during the past two years, including Unity, Reform, Apathy and Majority, "are no longer valid."

"All campus organizations must present a form listing their faculty adviser and student officers each year," Blake said. "Action is the only party to have done so this year."

The Alliance of Radical Students, which was listed as a party affiliation by three candidates in the Dec. 5 election, "was recognized by the Student Senate as a political party, but was not recognized by the Student Activities Center," Kania said.

"The Alliance refused to sign a statement required by the Board of Trustees for all campus organizations," Kania said. "The statement declares that the organization 'does not advocate violent overthrow of the United States government.' They refused to sign because they believe such a requirement violates their constitutional rights."

Garry Seltzer, the only candidate to list Reform Party as his affiliation, said, "Reform may still be a viable party. The only purpose of a party at SIU is to combine funds for advertising; there's no cohesive party platform."

Although Reform has been recognized by the Student Senate as a campus organization, its faculty adviser has resigned, Blake said. The remaining 21 candidates for Student Senate are running as independents. Blake said the three Alliance members, plus Reform candidate Seltzer will probably bring the total number of independents to 25, with nine Avion candidates bringing the total to 34 contenders for 24 Senate seats. Blake said Action Party "was organized for more than the monetary aspect. Action has a definite idea of what the Senate is all about and what sort of person functions best there. Our executive board screens candidates to make sure they'll present a proper image and represent the students."

How you express yourself depends upon your camera.

Today almost everybody is getting into photography. And it's not the snapshot variety. People are doing sports stories, nature stories, portraits—you may even have a friend who's doing photographs through a microscope. Or a telescope.

You also know that everybody has his own idea about which camera is best. That's why it's important for you to know about the Canon F-1. Because it's the system camera that's fast becoming the favorite of professionals. And the new status symbol among photography enthusiasts.

Canon

Canon USA, Inc., 10 Nevada Drive, Lake Success, New York 11040
Canon USA, Inc., 457 Fullerton Avenue, Elmhurst, Illinois 60126
Canon Optics & Business Machines Co., Inc., 123 East Paulirino Avenue, Costa Mesa, California 92626
Canon Optics & Business Machines Canada, Ltd., Ontario

The whole F-1 system includes over 40 lenses and 200 accessories. It's capable of doing virtually everything in photography. So whatever idea you have for a picture, the F-1 has the equipment to make sure you get it.

Because it was conceived from the beginning as a system, it works as a system. All the elements are quickly and easily interchangeable. No matter which lens or accessory you use with the F-1 body you won't have the feeling that something has been "tacked on."

What's more the F-1 is comfortable to handle. Years of research went into the design of the F-1 body and placement of controls so your fingers fall naturally into place. You'll appreciate this comfort when you're on assignment. It's also an important thing to keep in mind if you're investing in a camera you plan to keep a long time.

Canon has been in the optics industry over 37 years. We make microscope equipment, amateur and professional movie cameras and TV lenses. It's this experience that helps make our still cameras the best selling cameras in Japan. In America, it's just a matter of time.

See your dealer for more information. He'll also show you Canon's other SLR cameras, like the FTB and TLB. Both of which offer accurate metering, easy film loading, a wide range of lenses and the same standard of engineering that goes into the F-1.

Job Search expands service to help handicapped students

By Randy McCarthy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A program aimed at teaching individuals how to find a job is expanding its services to include helping the handicapped students with their special job problems.

The Job Search Project wants to assist disabled persons in learning the techniques needed to get a job. Theresa Flores, the project's director, said Tuesday. The project is funded by the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health.

Project personnel are working with Specialized Student Services on campus to publicize the project among handicapped students at SIU.

"We're trying to spread out and get handicapped persons interested in the program," Ms. Flores said. A plan for a separate group dealing with handicapped persons was dropped because of poor turnout, she said.

Cindy Kolb of Specialized Student Services said the biggest obstacle facing a handicapped person seeking employment is finding a job which is physically accessible to a disabled person.

"Unless the employer has made some accommodations—which he is supposed to do—it's difficult," she said.

Any person who is seeking a full-time job and is available to start work may enroll in the program.

Job seekers are taught where to look for job openings and what to say on the telephone or during a job interview, Ms. Flores said. Help also is given in writing a resumes and applications.

Project workers help the person evaluate his skills, define his strong and weak points, and help expand the variety of jobs acceptable to him, Ms. Flores said.

Once a person enrolls in the program he receives advice until he finds a job, Ms. Flores said. The average time spent in the program is 13 days, she said.

"Most people find a job within two weeks," Ms. Flores said. "Everyone who has stayed in the program has found a job. Some take longer than others, depending on the type of job wanted."

"Many people don't know how to look for a job; no one ever taught them," she said. "It's nice to know the practical skills."

The project provides motivation and transportation to job interviews for handicapped students, Ms. Flores said. Help is also given in typing resumes and applications. The project pays the cost of copying the forms, she said.

"If a person has a skill and the interest to look around, it's not much more of a problem for a handicapped person," Ms. Kolb said. "More time and effort is needed. Almost everything can be worked around."

Ms. Flores said she was optimistic the project will overcome any new problems. "It's important to know (the Job Search Project) is available," she said. "Students can get an extra insight."

Persons wishing to enroll in the program should contact the project at 103 S. Washington St. or call 549-411 or 549-4451. Information also may be obtained at Specialized Student Services, Woody Hall, Room 164B or by calling 453-5738.

'Graffiti' journey through 50's offers more than nostalgia

By Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

There are a few films that can't be contained within a usual rating system—films so intelligently conceived and flawlessly executed they surpass the standard criteria for cinematic excellence.

In a good year—and the way things have been going, a good year comes about as often as Halley's Comet—there are two, perhaps three such films. "American Graffiti," at the Saluki Cinema, is one of them.

To call this the definitive film on adolescence in the 1950's and 1960's would be doing it a disservice. Of course, those now in their 20's and 30's, who lived through the film a decade ago, will undoubtedly be turned on by the rush of memories it rekindles.

"American Graffiti" is, happily, much more than just a nostalgia hallucinogen. It is both an unerring accurate historical document and a thoughtful, unpretentious look at a small group of people at an important moment in their lives.

The moment is actually one long, late night in the summer of 1962. The place is a small town in Southern California, but it could be almost anywhere across the country.

Curt and Steve are scheduled to leave the next morning for college in the East. This is the last night of their high school summer, the night of their last dance at the hop, their last cruise on the strip and their last shake at Mel's Burger City.

"American Graffiti" lets us tag along with them, their buddies and their girls as they fill the hours between dusk and dawn with the minutiae that made up the life of the American teenager from the moment he left the house at night, telling his parents he was "just gonna bomb around for a while," until the moment he set foot back on the doorstep again.

We see the cruising and the dragging, the endless consumption of chili burgers and cherry Cokes, the picking up and making out and the breaking up and making up that were the staples of young love back then.

Everything is included—the innocuous mischief that passed for

'Probe' to focus on economics of energy crisis

How will the energy crisis affect you personally? Your job? Your business? Your livelihood? WSIU-FM producer Bob Blakesley explores this issue on "Probe," a half-hour radio documentary, at 7 p.m. Thursday on 91.9.

Milton Russell and Douglas Bohi of the SIU Department of Economics and Jack Armstrong, vice president of Martin Oil, will discuss the economic aspects of the energy crisis.

badness in an era when the two most daring things you could do were to talk back to a cop or get drunk-sick on wretched mixtures like sloe gin and lime vodka.

"American Graffiti" is George Lucas' second film (after the so-so science fiction thriller "THX-1138"), and it is obviously an intensely personal one. His recall for detail is unerring.

A Review

All the nuances of the period's styles are painstakingly recreated—the madras shirts and the Villager dresses, the greasers' ducktails with the mandatory two stray locks falling onto the forehead and the glasses with clear-bottomed frames that stigmatized anyone who wore them as a jerk.

Lucas' real achievement in authenticity comes out of his understanding of the two most important elements of this subculture—cars and music. (Not even sex had their stature, although its futile pursuit was a big time-consumer.) Cars were their freedom and status; rock was their bond. It unified them and excluded everyone else.

The music in "American Graffiti" pours out of car radios all tuned to the same station. From beginning to end, the film's soundtrack is saturated with golden oldies. Ever present but never obtrusive, the Top 40 is the oxygen in their air. Most of the characters are types—Curt the intellectual, Steve the young man on the way up, John the tough-guy softie, Terry the creep. This isn't so much a flaw in the film as it was a fact of the times. In that cliché, tightly structured and highly ritualized society, everyone was a type. Individuality was just the small price they paid for the ultimate security of fitting in.

Not very far beneath the types, we see the real kids with all their insecurity and naivete. It's their emotional growing pains that give "American Graffiti" its depth and make it more than just a kneejerk exploitation of our memories.

We are with them as they face making the passage into a foreign, frightening world of adults, leaving behind an idyllic one they invented. The smart ones know they must move on, though, or risk being trapped by the idyll into a lifetime of atrophy.

As Curt's plane takes off in the morning, he clings to his radio until the signal fades. For him, as for everyone who lived through that period, there had to come a time what Don McLean calls "the day the music died."

Job outlook for winter graduates
'very good,' placement center says

By Gary Houy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Job prospects for students graduating this winter look "very good," Herall Largent, associate director of the Career Planning and Placement Center said recently.

"The interviews are really coming along now," Largent said. "There is a definite need for mid-year graduates." In October, 1973, there were 86 recruiters on campus representing 48 companies and conducting 734 student interviews. This compares with 52 recruiters representing 30 companies and educational institutions who visited SIU in October, 1972.

Anyone who wishes to be considered for an interview with a business, industry, government or educational institution can sign up for appointments at the placement center in Woody Hall, Largent said.

"There are three packages available to registrants," Largent said. "There's one for those with a bachelor's degree in education, one for non-teachers, and one for those with a masters degree."

The packages include forms for a resume, information concerning teacher's certification and instructions for using the placement service.

"By registering with the placement service, each student gets a copy of the College Placement Manual," Largent said. The manual explains how to communicate with employers through letters, the proper form for a resume, and a list of national employers with a description of the company.

Students are urged to register with the service during the fall term prior to graduation.

Student Senate hopefuls offer campaign platforms

Sophomore, Public Relations, 1101 S. Wall, Carbondale.

In seeking re-election, many ask for an evaluation of my first five quarters as a student senator. My response is thus, since I took office, student government has started an uphill trend, both in action, and in the quality of that action. I feel I have contributed to those improvements and will continue to do so. I have led a very active role in student government. That role is soon to increase very drastically for what I believe to be the best interest for all concerned.

Yogesh M. Desai

Pre-Med, Pemb., Zambia, East Side Non-dorm, 1000 E. Park No. 28, Carbondale.

We need a representative and a working student government which would benefit all the students. It should directly represent foreign students as well. The recently eliminated foreign students' seat should be reinstated. Student government should work more efficiently. It is extremely important that we have people willing to work for such programs as the student cop, bookstore and the allowance of alcohol on campus. My main project is to form a student health advisory organization to lobby for better health.

Eric Elrod

Freshman, Pre-law, Skokoi, Brush Towers, 219 Schneider.

I am running for Student Senate because I feel it is an open avenue for student opinion and comment to be heard by the administration. I will do the best I can to represent the people of Brush Towers. If you let me represent Brush Towers in the Student Senate I will always be available for suggestions, complaints and opinion and make certain that I will make the voice of Brush Towers heard.

Elyse Flicher

Junior, Speech Pathology, Highland Park, 511 E. College, Carbondale.

In view of current issues, an upward slope of rape victims on college campuses is of great concern. With the help of male escorts, walking to and from campus buildings at night won't become a nightmare.

Library funding is also an important issue. Increased funding may allow library hours to be lengthened and provide for the purchase of additional books.

If elected to Student Senate, I will organize committees to combat aggravation caused by fear of rape and unsubstantial library funds.

Phillip Hone

Sophomore, Accounting, Glen Eilyn, University Park.

I am an independent seeking the office of a student senator from University Park. I ask for your votes in order to serve as a connection between the Student Senate and the residents. I wish to contribute opinions to the Senate body which have widespread support among the residents. As for my personal qualifications, I lack previous experience in an elective role, but I do feel qualified in my excess desire to get deeply involved through time spent and personal interest in the position. I again ask for your vote and thank you.

Robert Hughey

The function of a student government is to give the student a voice in government. Simple statement? Yes. But our Senate and student government seems to be standing still. I am not out to change SIU, but I am realistic in thinking that the Senate members can do more than bicker between themselves. I hope that the future Senate can do more than the last.

Diane Johnson

Sophomore, Sociology, Rockford, East Side Non-dorm, Lynda Vista No. 7, Carbondale.

I am running for Student Senate to help initiate more programs that work toward creating a less dehumanizing and oppressive society. In working towards the elimination of sexist practices (fighting the Miss Southern Contest) many feminists expressed interest in establishing a women's group on campus. I would like to continue the fight against sexism and racism. The Chicago Women's Liberation Union stated that we as women cannot be made free in a capitalist government. Therefore, economic and social equality for all individuals involves a socialist alternative.

Richard H. Johnston

Junior, Administration of Justice, University Heights Trailer Court No. 87.

Due to the lack of concern of the Student Senate toward the University and its constituency I have decided to try to do something about it. I am not running for student senator because I have time to waste on absurd ventures (which it may be), but because I feel that the student body—through its choices of capable candidates can and will put responsibility back into the Student Senate.

Mark S. Kromer

Junior, Biological Sciences, Mt. Carroll, West Side Non-dorm, 507 W. College, Carbondale.

I have observed the Student Senate in "action" several times. After a few meetings where there were not even enough senators present to act on any issue, I decided the students deserved a much better deal. Therefore, I am promising, as a senator, to attend every meeting. On the senate, I would also support beer on campus, revision of the conduct code, senators without pay and fairer appropriation of funds for campus organizations. My greatest responsibility would be to act on future issues in the best interests of the students of the West Side, Non-dorm district.

A year ago I volunteered to work in student government because I believed it could be an avenue for students to help themselves and the University community. I became involved in fee allocations, I learned about the discipline worked in the Association of Illinois Student Governments. These jobs have been coupled with other duties. Now I want to be a student senator because I have ideas supported by an education of the system. I feel ready to speak on those ideas.

Maurice Richards

Sophomore, Philosophy, Chicago, West Side Non-dorm 415 Oregon St., Carverville.

The Alliance for Radical Students has been established to provide a real alternative for concrete political action. We are the true representatives of both students and workers, and unfailingly serve their needs. Our program is one of solidarity with the poor and oppressed people of the Southern Illinois community. We intend to extend ourselves to them by establishing food co-operatives for the hungry, health clinics for the sick and reading programs for the illiterate. Together we will win!

Larry I. Roth

Design, Skokie, East Side Non-dorm, Ambassador Apts. No. 3.

My purpose in running is to get out the program of the Young Socialists. That being student, faculty and worker control of the University, rather than the capitalist Administration. We should have control over our lives while at this institution. This involves student control of student funds, regulations for landlords, not students, and NO TUITION. By, no tuition, I do not mean in the sense that David Dege means it. His administration should be paying us to get what he calls 'academic excellence.' I also support a Woman Studies center to be established on campus. I will be on the ballot under the party of Alliance for Radical Students.

Garry Seltzer

Senior, Government, East Side Non-dorm, Lynda Vista No. 10, Carbondale.

Beginning in February, 1974, the Student Senate will provide long distance (WATS line) phone service within the state of Illinois for SIU students, at no charge. When consideration was being given to scrapping academic advisement to buy library books the student senate unanimously voted to maintain academic advisement. It now appears the administration will keep advisement. Since Spring, 1973, a controversy has continued over whether the Daily Egyptian is "censored" or not.

In one way or another, as a concerned member or as chairman of the academic affairs committee, I have tried to be involved in issues affecting students. I hope you will return me for another term.

The remainder of the statements will appear in Friday's paper.

Energy crisis may leave golfers sitting at home out of gas, money

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP)—"I think we're in for the worst time we've ever had in the next three or four years," said Frank Beard.

"I'm not sure what's gonna happen, but I'm sure of one thing—I'm getting scared," said Gibby Gilbert.

"I'm afraid it's going to get awfully sticky trying to get from one tournament to another," said Bobby Nichols. "It could have a real bad effect on the tour."

Those are sample comments from touring golf pros whose gypsy lives face severe complications and disruptions because of the energy crisis.

Regular tournaments end Sundays, with the players leaving immediately for the next stop. They usually drive at least part of the way that night, then complete the trip the next day. That's out.

President Nixon has called for the closing of all service stations from 9 p.m. Saturday until midnight Sunday. He also has asked that speed limits be reduced to 50 miles an hour.

The President has ordered a 25 per cent cutback on fuel allocations for the airline industry. Most major domestic airlines already have announced major reductions in their flights.

"I haven't really noticed too much trouble yet," said the veteran Beard. "Maybe the flights are a little more crowded, that's about all."

"But I think we're in for a bad, bad time. Nobody knows what they're doing. They think it was tough during World War II? Just wait for the next few weeks and you'll see what tough really is."

All the players interviewed anticipated major travel difficulties for the 1974 season. The vast majority of the 250-300 players who follow the pro tour play 30-35 tournaments a year. Some compete in 40 or more. That's 30-40 weeks a year that they're on the road, traveling from tournament to tournament.

The tour criss-crosses the United States, from coast to coast, six times a year in the average season. Occasionally it's eight times. There's a great deal of north-to-south travel. The complete tour goes about 50,000 miles a year in this country.

As opposed to team sports—baseball, football, basketball, hockey, in which traveling secretaries make the team travel arrangements—each golfer handles his own travel plans. About half of them fly from tournament to tournament. About half drive.

"If they put in that 50 mile per hour speed limit all over the country, it's going to take us forever to get from one place to another," said Kermit Zarley. "We make a lot of trips that are 800 to 1,000 miles. How long is that going to take at 50 miles an hour?"

Bowlers to travel to Indiana tourney

The SIU Bowling Club will travel to Indiana State University Dec. 8 to 9 to compete in a weekend tournament. Team doubles, singles and mixed doubles championships will be awarded.

Currently, the team's top five

Jones takes lead in Disney golf

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP)—Veteran Grier Jones and longesth Larry Wise matched five-under-par 67s and tied for the first-round lead in the $150,000 Walt Disney World Open golf tournament Wednesday.

Jones and Wise, a longtime club pro making a second try at the tour, both played the 7,162-yard par-72 Magnolia Course, one of two layouts at Walt Disney World being used for this, the last tournament of the season.

They shared a one-stroke lead over Bobby Mitchell, Bob E. Smith, Craig Dear and Rookies Larry Nelson and Jim Masserio, all tied at 68. The large group at 69 included 61-year-old Sam Snead and rookie sensation Ben Crenshaw.

bowlers are Wayne Carter, Ken Gilbert, Dave Blank, Dan Smith and Oleg Konstantinow.

A roll-off will be held by the club Dec. 6 to determine who will represent the club in a tournament to be held Jan 19 to 20 at Eastern Illinois University. In order to enter the roll-off, students must be a club member.

Those interested in joining the club may attend a meeting at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 3 in Room A of the Student Center.

Soccer club to meet grads for free match

The SIU International Soccer Club will meet a group of graduate students, some of which are former players of the SIU-Edwardsville soccer team at 1 p.m., Saturday in McAndrew Stadium.

A practice for the SIU team will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the stadium. Admission to Saturday's match will be free.

Saluki gymnastics team rebuilding

By John Morrissey
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU gymnastics team makes its first official appearance Friday in a big way. The Salukis are entered in the annual Windy City Invitational in Chicago, a contest that will include defending NCAA champion Iowa State, third place finisher Indiana State, and Big Ten powers Iowa and Michigan in its 18-team lineup.

Last year's Salukis scored consistently high throughout the season, but lapsed at the regional qualifying meet and failed to earn a trip to the NCAA finals to defend their 1972 title.

This year Coach Bill Meade will field only three returnees from the year past, filling vacant positions with freshmen and junior college transfers.

Conspicuously absent are All-American-Gary Morava, Jeff Farris and Steve Holthaus.

Morava underwent an operation on his shoulder last September to anchor his biceps muscles, which had been partly severed from his shoulder the past three years. Assistant Coach Jack Beisterfeldt, who is filling in as boss while Meade leads a U.S. gymnastics delegation to South Africa, said Morava is tentatively out for the season while he recuperates from the surgery.

Farris, a freshman regular last year, is also out for the season because of an injury. Holthaus, who qualified for the NCAA finals last year in vaulting, left the team shortly after the start of this year's practice. Beisterfeldt said Holthaus told Meade he had lost interest in intercollegiate competition. He added that Holthaus and Meade parted on good terms.

Faced with a high team turnover and a dependence on inexperienced freshmen, Beisterfeldt was hesitant to come up with predictions on how close SIU will come to this year's NCAA finals.

"I expect to have more fluctuation this year than I've ever seen before," was the only prediction he could make.

"Because we are dealing with young performers, we are going into every meet with risks," Beisterfeldt said. "There isn't any event we can count on to always do well. On the other hand, the potential is there to have a great season."

"With Morava out of the lineup, security just doesn't exist," he went on. He said Morava could always be counted on for a consistent 55-point all-around performance, which acted as a stabilizer if the rest of the team had an off-night.

Beisterfeldt expects some 54-point nights out of this year's all-around roster. "But there's a difference between a reliable 55 and an unreliable 54," he explained.

Jon Hallberg, a freshman from Delaware, is Beisterfeldt's candidate to anchor SIU's all-around showing. Other all-around newcomers, freshman Kin Wall of Rochester, Pa., and Glenn Tidwell from Long Beach Junior College, are better than Hallberg in some events, but Hallberg is judged by Beisterfeldt to be more consistent.

Jack Laurie is back on rings, and should be one of SIU's most consistent performers (See adjoining story). But the rings, along with the horizontal bar, may emerge as weak spots in SIU's team performance. Beisterfeldt sees no back-up 9-point efforts on the rings, and no great performers on the high bar except for Wall, who could improve to a 9.3 at his best.

The Salukis may compensate for these weaknesses when they get to vaulting and free exercise. Jim McFaul from Golden West Junior College in California, is considered SIU's best man in both events. He is expected to get a solid 9-point backup in free exercise by freshman Steve Shepard of Hinsdale, Hallberg and Andrew Karl, a junior in his first season in SIU's regular lineup. Wall, Hallberg, Karl and returnee Lance Garrett should assure team depth in vaulting.

Returning regular Ed Hembd holds down the number one spot on the horse, and should get 9-plus help from Tony Hanson, a freshman from Hinsdale.

'L' is for Laurie

Jack Laurie displays the form that carried him to a first place tie on still rings in last weekend's Midwest Open gymnastics meet.

Orienteering club to sponsor meet

An orienteering meet will be held at SIU Saturday, Dec. 1, sponsored by the Southern Illinois Orienteering Club.

John Voelz, president of the SIOC, said participants are to meet at the Arena at 10 a.m. Contestants will then travel to Little Grassy, where the meet will begin at about 11 a.m., Voelz said.

The meet, which will last about two hours, will have two courses; the white course for beginners and the yellow course for advanced orienteers.

The entrance fees for the event are: SIOC members free, SIU students, faculty and staff members 25 cents, and the general public $1.

Protege Laurie matches teacher in Midwest Open gymnastic showing

SIU gymnast Jack Laurie has come of age on the still rings this year—and the season hasn't even started yet.

Last Saturday the junior athlete tied, for first on the rings in the Midwest Open in Chicago, tabbed the premier open meet for gymnastics by Laurie's assistant coach Jack Beisterfeldt.

"To win the Midwest Open means more than to have won the National Collegiates," Beisterfeldt said.

The circumstances surrounding Laurie's finish attest to Laurie's entrance into the national spotlight. He was the tie was Charles Ropiequet, SIU graduate and NCAA champ in 1971.

Ropiequet was the man responsible for bringing Laurie to SIU, three years ago, just in time to steer the Venice, Calif., native away from his intended enrollment at nearby UCLA.

Ropiequet showed up to watch practice at Laurie's high school on a day Laurie said he "had a really good work out." Ropiequet liked what he saw. "He said he would recommend me to Coach (Bill) Meade," Laurie remembered.

Two days later he got a call from Meade during practice inviting him to SIU. It didn't take him long to find out why he was invited. "As soon as I got off the plane he offered me a scholarship," Laurie related. "He said he had coached four (NCAA) ring champs and I would be the next." Meade had never seen Laurie until he walked off the plane, but apparently Ropiequet's word was good enough.

Beisterfeldt said Ropiequet was, and still is, the living standard of performance on the rings. Laurie agrees.

"He doesn't do that much in tricks," he said, describing Ropiequet's style. "In what he does he's just flawless. He has the straightest handstand in the world."

Ropiequet's style complements Laurie's type of routine, which depends more on difficulty than on execution in shooting for the high score. Laurie said they are still close even though Ropiequet is graduated, and they help each other with routines. Laurie helps Ropiequet with tricks, and gets execution instruction in return.

Laurie said he took a positive attitude into the Midwest meet that developed over the past season. "I just had a feeling I could beat anyone except Charlie," he said.

That was a tall order for a relative newcomer like Laurie. He had to compete against an estimated 150 individuals in the still rings apparatus, and when he finally got through the preliminaries and into the finals, he was the only finalist who wasn't an All-American.

Laurie's performance against the nation's best, however, indicated he could be the man to beat this year in his specialty.

This winter will be a busy time for the pre-med major, because he says he intends to maintain his 4.5 over-all average through a season that will put the Salukis on the road for 12 of its 15 regular season meets.

"A lot of times I get laughed at by the team when we go some place really nice, like to Colorado," he said, explaining his tendency to study through road trips.

Gymnastics followers may be studying Jack this season as much as he studies his books, judging from his performance in the Midwest Open.
