USO promotes safe Halloween through mail

By William Jason Young
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization has sent letters to eight colleges in Illinois promoting safety during Halloween in Carbondale.

Lisa Muenzer, USO public relation commissioner, said letters, sent Tuesday, will "hopefully discourage so many people, especially those from out-of-town, from coming down to Carbondale during the Halloween weekend."

The letters were sent to Illinois State, Northern Illinois, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Sangamon State, the University of Illinois' two campuses and SIU-Edwardsville.

"Statistics obtained from the police department showed that most of the problems seemed to be caused by people from out-of-town in last year's Halloween," Muenzer said.

The letters cited statistics on arrests and damages during last year's Halloween in Carbondale, which included two stolen vehicles, stolen property totalling $11,230, property damage totalling $7,638, an armed robbery, a rape, an arson and five batteries.

The statistics also showed that of 32 persons arrested in Halloween 1981, 23 were from out of town, six were from SIU-C and three were local residents.

Muenzer said in the letter that since 1975, the University of Carbondale has been the reluctant host to thousands of people for a Halloween party.

"These 'parties' have caused a great deal of concern and, now the concern lies with SIU-C students," she said.

USO President Jerry Cook was quoted in the letter as saying the problems from Halloween weekend stem from people who have no stake in Carbondale - the "out-of-towners."

Muenzer said that this year's letters are different from those sent out last year. Last year, a senator used USO letterheads to state his opinions.

"This year, it is the official statement of USO, whereas last year it was the opinion of one senator," she said. "The senator took upon himself to use USO letterheads to present his opinions as that of USO's, but it turned out that his opinion did not represent USO's stance."

In response to statements made in the media that USO seems to be advertising the Halloween celebration in Carbondale, Muenzer said that she does not feel the letters as being advertisements.

"I consider last year's letters as more of an advertisement," she said. "I have discussed this matter with Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, and he said that he did not think the letters would appear as being advertisements."

She said that an advertisement would include more layout design and an invitational tone.

"The letters which we sent out have none of these qualities and, therefore, are not advertisements," she said. "They are almost cautionary in tone."

Copies of the letter were also sent to President Albert Somit, U.S. Sen. Frank Lautenberg, the Southern Illinoisan and the Daily Egyptian.

Muenzer said Somit and the City Council thought that sending the letters to the various colleges was a good idea, and had expressed their support.

She said that one of the reasons not to have organized Carbondale Cleanup Day after the Halloween celebration in Carbondale is that it will be much colder by then, and consequently would not attract as many people as it would before the celebration.

Another reason is that the city does the cleanup along South Illinois Avenue after the Halloween weekend.

Terrace deficit may be cleared

Board to hear fund proposal

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

A proposal to use $72,421 of revenue bond fee funds, on a one-time basis, to clear up a deficit in Evergreen Terrace Apartments operations will be presented to the SIU Board of Trustees at its Nov. 11 meeting, according to Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

The proposed shift of funds would eliminate the need for a rent increase in fiscal year 1984 by applying fiscal year 1983 revenue bond fee funds to the deficit, Swinburne said. "Basically, we are trying very hard not to have any housing increases next year," he said. "Evergreen Terrace is the one area that we continue to be worried about."

The board will not take action on the proposal until its December meeting, Swinburne said.

Normally, money generated by the revenue bond fee can be used only for the Student Center and University Housing, which does not include Evergreen Terrace, according to Lawrence Juhlin, assistant to Swinburne. The fee now is $46.20 and will increase to $52.80 next fall if a University proposal is approved by the board. The fee provides a fund to replace tuition that the University previously retained to support the Student Center and housing bonds.

"It would reduce the total amount available for other areas on campus," Swinburne said, "but it's out speculation that the other operations on campus would survive without it."

Chicago is issue in 58th Senate race

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Chicago has become an issue in a Southern Illinois race and both candidates for the Senate in the 58th District are bristling over it.

In recent television commercials, Wayne Alstat, a one-term Republican representative, has accused incumbent Sen. Ken Buzbee of spending Southern Illinois dollars lavishly on Chicago problems. Buzbee retaliated by accusing Alstat of distorting the truth and of buying an election with family wealth.

The Democrat also introduced a $3.36 slogan to counter the Chicago claim by showcasing the influence he wields for Southern Illinois as chair of the Appropriations II Committee. He says that Illinois spends $3.36 in the 58th District for each tax dollar raised in the district. Alstat says he does not know whether the statement is accurate.

As a result of the television commercials, Buzbee has announced plans for a truth in campaigning bill. However, Alstat said his ads did not say anything that was not true.

The ad accuses Buzbee of bailing out the Regional Transit Authority with downstate funds and of voting against a child pornography bill. The ad further states Alstat's opinion that

Wayne Alstat

Buzbee is the worst legislator in Southern Illinois.

Buzbee says the ads are distorted because every county

Kenneth Buzbee

contributes to mass transportation. He defends his no vote on the child pornography bill, saying a conference committee had amended the bill so that all home invaders would have been made non-prosecutable offenses.

He says he originally voted yes on the child pornography bill.

Both candidates agree that the Senate will be changed by school funding, the use of Illinois coal, the condition of Illinois roads and jobs.

Alstat says he thinks independently of Northern Illinois on everything from a coal severance tax to school funding. He says he won't give Chicago schools or Chicago's mass transit another dollar.

Buzbee says that his influence helps Southern Illinois and that without it, things would be

Tamper-resistant packaging may cause slight price hike

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government estimates that a proposed standard for tamper-resistant drug packages will cost industry $20 million to $30 million a year, adding about a penny to the price of the average product, sources said Wednesday.

The non-prescription drug industry, however, expects the new packaging to cost the consumer 2 to 10 cents per product, a different source said.

The Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday sent its ideas for drug packaging restrictions to the Office of Management and Budget where they will be screened.

FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. has said that in the wake of a nationwide "wave of me-too crimes," the agency will produce a packaging standard by early November.

FDA believes the government will meet that deadline.

The proposals FDA favors incorporate some recommendations made by a special industry panel - the Joint Committee on Product Security established after seven Chicago-area deaths from cyanide-laced Extra Strength Tylenol.

Industry would be free to decide which type of tamper-resistant packaging is appropriate for each type of drug.

But the regulations go further than the industry's recommendations by requiring that special packaging be on most drug products besides tablets in 90 days, one source familiar with the FDA ideas said. There would be a 15-month, phase-in period, after which all non-prescription drugs without tamper-resistant packaging would have to be removed from store shelves, this source added.

The government's cost estimates came from an FDA analysis which accounted for the estimated cost of new equipment to manufacture packages and of the special packaging materials.

The industry is working on a separate track to evaluate the costs of tamper-resistant packaging. Its preliminary analysis is that the cost will be considerably higher than FDA's estimate and linked to the product and the type of packaging used.

The two sides will meet on Friday.

FDA's proposal calls for the new packages to carry special label warnings to attract consumers' attention and advise that products with broken seals not be purchased.

News Roundup

Three policemen killed in bomb blast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Three policemen, lured to a lonely road by the IRA, were killed Wednesday by one of the biggest terrorist bombs in Northern Ireland's bloody history. 1,000 pounds of explosives, according to a police estimate.

A sergeant and two constables of the mostly Protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary died when the bomb, detonated by remote control, blew apart their patrol car on a rural road near Lurgan, 30 miles south of Belfast, police said.

The blast left a crater 60 feet wide and 40 feet deep and blew the armor-plated car into a field 30 yards away, police said. The bodies of the three officers had to be cut from the wreckage by firemen.

Polish leaders pledge improvements

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Communist leaders said Wednesday the breakdown in Poland's economy had reached an "unprecedented scale," and pledged to improve housing, food supplies, wages and health care.

The call to improve the plunging living standard was seen as part of a new effort to gain public support following imposition of martial law last Dec. 13 and the banning of the Solidarity union Oct. 8.

The failures of former leaders, including ousted Communist Party chief Edward Gierek and one-time Premier Edward Babuch, were underscored by the Central Committee, which portrayed Poland as fighting a rough, uphill battle against results of errors by former leaders and isolation by the United States.

If the board approves the amendment, he said, it would "totally eliminate the deficit situation we've had over there for years."

A preliminary draft of the proposed amendment states that delays in the rate increase approval process have caused the deficit.

Construction of Evergreen Terrace, which is owned by the SIU Foundation and managed by the University, was financed through the Department of Housing and Urban Development, according to the draft proposal.

"This arrangement has required a lengthy approval process before rate increases could be put into effect," the proposal states. "As a consequence of these delays during a time of inflation, an increasing deficit developed."

The deficit, which is currently about $73,000, was reduced from a $101,753 level of June 1981 through budgeting a portion of rental income and delaying some maintenance projects, Swinburne said.

The $73,000, Swinburne said, is about equal to the interest on the total revenue bond fund.

What's Really True About Senator Ken Buzbee?

- Fact: The Taxpayers Federation has described Senator Buzbee as our region's "strongest representative."
- Fact: The AFL-CIO gave him their highest rating (four stars).
- Fact: The Community College Trustees Association named him "the best Legislator of the year."
- Fact: The Southern Illinoisan newspaper says he is Southern Illinois' "most prominent Legislator."

Senator Ken Buzbee has been fighting and winning for Southern Illinois. Let's make sure he returns to Springfield.

Director of city tourism office named

By Mike Nelson
Staff Writer

Effective Monday, Kathleen M. Ratcliffe will be director of Carbondale's newly created tourism department.

Raul Ayala, president of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, announced the appointment Wednesday at a press conference at Southern Illinois Airport.

Ayala said that funding for the new position will come primarily from Carbondale city government, with lesser contributions from the chamber and the SIU-C Division of Continuing Education.

Ratcliffe, of Chicago, has extensive experience in advertising campaigns, design display and mail promotions, while working with a nationwide chain of women's clothing stores. She has worked in retail advertising and promotion the past eight years in the Northern Midwest and East Coast.

Ratcliffe said that her first priority as tourism director will be to attract conventions and conferences to Carbondale. "The first thing I will do is to apply for memberships to the necessary organizations so that we can get conventions in Carbondale," she said.

Ratcliffe said she has already begun negotiations with a firm interested in holding its convention in Carbondale.

According to Ayala, Ratcliffe's position is an outgrowth of activities performed by the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Council. "The responsibilities of the new director, with aid from the existing council, will be to promote meetings, conventions and conferences in the Carbondale area," he said.

Ayala said that another part of the new director's job will be to solicit the regular patronage of the business traveler as well as the holiday vacationer.

Ratcliffe said with present hotel facilities and the proposed downtown conference center, Carbondale could accommodate nearly 1,500 for a conference or convention. She indicated that when SIU-C facilities are available, such as in summer months, nearly 10,000 convention participants could be accommodated.

Ratcliffe said a major benefit of tourism is that it will help balance the Carbondale economy. "Tourism is a funny business in that it brings in money that was never in the city before," she said.

She said her long term goals as Tourism Director will be obtaining "about $2 million in tourist revenue for Carbondale over the next two years," she said. "I think Carbondale and Southern Illinois have tremendous potential for tourism."

worse. He decided early in his career to center his attention on education and energy. Those two areas mean economic relief for Southern Illinois, he says.

As chair of an appropriation committee in the Senate, he has aided funding requests for SIU-C such as the Law Library and Davies Gymnasium renovation. He says SIU-C will be a centerpiece for incoming high technology.

Buzbee says Gov. James Thompson was wrong to veto funds for SIU-C's Food for Century III Program that has funded dairy and beef farms.

Buzbee expects high technology, coal research and coal and grain exports to build a strong economy in Southern Illinois.

Alstat, a farmer, has keyed his campaign on agriculture, coal and education. He introduced a bill that eliminated the inheritance tax in Illinois, and he says the bill helps family farms and businesses.

He says Illinois already has export offices in Hong Kong and Brussels finding markets for Illinois grain and coal.

Alstat supports coal desulfurization research, but prefers that coal mine companies do the research. He says universities should send their scientists to the natural environment of the mines. Companies have the expertise and an interest in selling coal, he says. He wants to give companies tax incentives to do research.

Buzbee says higher education faces a tough road ahead because of growing opposition. He says, however, that he has enough power to get by the legislators who are not enthusiastic about higher education.

Alstat contends he would fight just as strongly for SIU-C funding. He says he would fight for funding for students and faculty and not administration. He also wants education supported by income tax rather than property tax.

"There's been too much growth in administration," he said. "When enrollment is rising, sure, but not otherwise. The staff's gotten out of hand in comparison to enrollment."

Buzbee pushed through legislation making SIU-C part of a $1.5 million desulfurization research effort. He says research will revive Illinois' coal market. He supports a coal severance tax, but says it may not be the best time to impose one with thousands of miners out of work.

Alstat also supports a coal severance tax, but only one that sent 50 percent of the tax back to the county producing the coal.

Buzbee says the Illinois Office of Commerce and Community Affairs has made headway developing foreign and domestic markets for coal, but he expects the region to shift to service-oriented industries. He wants a home or regional office, perhaps of an insurance firm, based in Southern Illinois.

Both candidates support an elected commerce commission. Alstat said he wanted a commerce commission with Southern Illinois representation. Buzbee said "I finally decided an elected commerce commission was the only way to get the utilities' attention."

Both candidates also hope to expand tourism in Southern Illinois. They contend too many Southern Illinoisans cross the state line into Missouri or Kentucky.

Opinion & Commentary

Richmond knows how the government works

"He listens", is what the advertisements say about Bruce Richmond, Democratic representative running for re-election in the 116th District including Jackson County. That is true. "Then he votes", it continues. That is true too. Many of Richmond's votes in the House have meant benefits for farmers, teachers, coal miners, students and a whole variety of people in Southern Illinois.

Richmond's farm sales tax exemption bill, for instance, made it easier for farmers to purchase new equipment. The pay raises he fought for and won for the University faculty have been welcome. He has proved a true friend of SIU-C, getting funding for the renovation of Davies Gymnasium, and construction of the new Law building.

Richmond is up for election to a fifth term. If elected, he stands the chance of a House chairmanship, making him an even bigger influence in the Legislature.

Besides his four terms as a representative, he has had experience as an alderman and mayor of Murphysboro. Richmond's Republican opponent, Larry Young, a teacher at Menard Correctional school and one time school board member, is short on experience.

Young says he knows how a government should work. Unfortunately, the harsh reality is that government seldom works how it should. Richmond says he knows how the government works. In these hard times we opt for experience. We opt for the one who knows how it works. And we endorse Bruce Richmond for the 116th District.

Buzbee best choice for State Senator

Both men are committed to education. Both men see school funding, Illinois coal, jobs and Illinois roads as the most important issues. They are running for the Senate in the 58th District. The two are incumbent Ken Buzbee, Democrat of Carbondale, and one-term representative Wayne Alstalt, Republican of Vergennes.

But many of their positions on these issues differ. With regards to coal, Alstalt wants companies to do their own research, while Buzbee has worked to let universities do most of the effort. He pushed through legislation that made SIU-C part of a $1.5 million research effort. There is more merit in including universities. It means less duplication, more money in support of education and research and opportunities for students. Moreover, Buzbee is a leader in the state's promotion of coal as a viable energy source.

Alstalt insists that Chicago and Northern Illinois should not be part of the consideration of a representative from the 58th District. He accuses Buzbee of paying too much attention to the north. But a State Senator needs to have the welfare of the whole state in mind while working for his district. The we-are-all-in-this-together philosophy of Ken Buzbee is a better one for the long run. Economic and socio-political systems are too interdependent these days for parochial and isolationist thinking.

Ken Buzbee's important post as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee is not one that we should sacrifice. His influence there and his known support for SIU-C would be valuable.

Finally, Alstalt's low shot at Buzbee's voting record regarding the child pornography bill in the latest round of advertisement is just that — a low shot. Buzbee had voted for the bill through all its stages except the final one, when a home invasions amendment on penalties that would send anyone breaking into a home, even children involved in a prank, to prisons was added to the bill. Buzbee was right. First-time offenders shouldn't be labeled as Class X criminals.

Our vote goes for Ken Buzbee.

Letters
Gays 'play Christian'

First, I would like to direct a comment to Pat Marnett, who wrote on Oct. 22 that to tag "Christian" on a thinly-veiled homosexual lifestyle is an insult to Christ's model of righteousness.

Second, I would like to direct this letter to those lesbians and gays who are sincere in their search for God and what "God's ways" are through His holy Word; not for those who are striving to rid themselves of their guilt and somehow tag "Christian" to their lifestyles.

"For my thoughts are not your thoughts neither are your ways," declares the Lord. (Is. 55:8).

I am declaring that I have attained the victory over homosexuality and the world through the power and strength of Jesus Christ my lord and savior. "For the kingdom of God does not consist in words but in power." (1 Cor. 4:20).

You too can receive this power and strength, so if you as a homosexual are tired of merely "playing Christian," I challenge you to take at look at "true Christianity" as Jesus calls us. "Therefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature ... new things have come." (2 Cor. 5:17). "But I say walk by the Spirit, and you will not carry out the desire of the flesh." (Gal. 5:16).

God speaks clearly through the Bible concerning homosexuality, both in the Old and New Testaments. "If there is a man who lies with a male as those who lie with a woman, both of them have committed a detestable act; they shall surely be put to death." (Lev. 20:13).

"The men abandoned the natural function of the woman and burned in their desire toward one another, men with men committing indecent acts and receiving in their own persons the due penalty of their error." (Rom. 1:27).

As a former lesbian, I am participating in a program Thursday, Oct. 28, from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the Illinois Room of the Student Center. I wish to extend my services to anyone who would like to talk to me further. I can be reached through Marantha Campus Ministries at 549-3711, or come to the program, where I will share my victory over homosexuality.

By the power and authority of Jesus Christ I proclaim, "I am free." — Bette Kidd, Senior, Physiology.

Gay love not 'unnatural'

I am responding to "In Bible, Jesus Did Condemn Homosexuals." (DE, Oct. 7) After checking the references you gave, I found no reference to gay love or to homosexuality per se. Unnatural acts are wrong. Love between members of the same sex, for gay persons, is not unnatural. (Please see Romans 14:14)

As far as Levitical law is concerned, Galatians 3:23-25 releases us from its clutches. That is why Christians may eat pork, lobster, clams, and oysters; and are allowed to cross-breed livestock.

I am not saying that all sex acts are permitted. Your references prove that false. I do insist that not all gay acts and loves are wrong. This position your argument does not allow. I substantiate my position with the following two quotes: 1) "Nowhere does the Bible condemn the life of love of a God-fearing, Bible-believing Christian who happens to love a person of the same sex." - Rev. L. Robert Arthur (doctoral candidate in Bible Languages, teacher at Samaritan Theological Institute, LA, CA) 2) "The Biblical appeal cannot be sustained no matter what the enemies of the millions of gay men and women in the world say." - Rev. Dr. Norman Fittenger (author, Professor of Divinity at King's College, Cambridge, Eng.)

It is not my purpose here to deny you your opinion. Nor do I discount the importance of the Bible in Christian life. It is my purpose to tell people that God does not condemn gays simply because they are gay. Christ died for our sins, not our lack of straightness. I am both Christian and gay and proud to be. — Glenn R. Evans, Senior, STC.

Christians hate sin, not those that sin

I would like to say that psychology student Pat Marnett (DE, Oct. 22), like many other people, has a misunderstanding of Christ and Christian concepts.

I am a Christian and I do not have a "holier than thou" attitude, and there are many of us who do not. However, it is important to note that as Christians we are compelled to have holy attitudes because we serve the most High and Holy God.

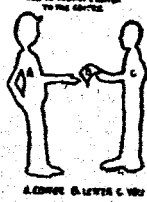

To be like Christ is to hate sin but not the sinners. Homosexuality is sexual perversion, which in turn is sin, as are lust, adultery, murder, theft, etc. In God's eyes all sin is a sin in itself. God does not hate people but hates sin, and does not want us to commit sin.

Christ, when He saved the woman caught in adultery, said "Neither do I accuse you. Go and sin no more." In other words, repent of your sin and forsake it... all of it. The Bible says, "Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind; it is abomination." Leviticus 18:22.

I would also say that just because someone points out to you, in a spirit of love and concern, that you have sin in your life and you should pray for the Lord's help and deliverance doesn't make them a hypocrite.

Please be honest with yourself and with God. Read God's word and honestly seek His will. If you do not, God may lay it on the heart of someone to point the sin out to you.

In closing, I would like to say that I'm not perfect, nor do I claim to be. I do, however, seek the Lord's will in all that I do. Christ would be at those homosexual events and He would love you all, but Jesus would ache for you to "Repent; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matthew 4:17. — Jeffrey K. Wilson, Junior, Opera Music Theater.

Better ties with China sought

Brezhnev urges arms buildup

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev, in an unusual meeting of senior military and Kremlin officials Thursday, urged a military buildup and better ties with China to counter what he called U.S. adventurism.

Brezhnev reassessed his role as commander in chief of the Soviet armed forces, heaped praise on Defense Minister Dimitri F. Ustinov and hinted that reorganization may be under way in defense industries — the responsibility of Andrei Kirilenko who has been rumored to have retired due to failing health.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Brezhnev called the meeting at the request of Ustinov, who was one of five members of the ruling Politburo attending. The 76-year-old Kirilenko, who had been considered a strong contender to succeed Brezhnev, was absent.

Two other possible successors, ex-KGB chief Yuri V. Andropov and Konstantin U. Chernenko, sat on Brezhnev's right; Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov sat at his left and Ustinov was seated behind him.

Western diplomats said they were unable to explain the timing and purpose of the meeting, but they said they believed it was to underscore the unity of Brezhnev's "collective leadership" and its close ties with the Red Army.

The speech lasted 10 minutes and was televised. The 75-year-old leader read the speech in a strong voice, but badly shuffed Brezhnev as he walked to and from the podium.

Brezhnev said that "Washington's aggressive policy ... is threatening to push the world into the flames of nuclear war." He called the U.S. policy one of "adventurism, rudeness and undisguised egotism."

Brezhnev asserted Moscow still seeks detente with the West, which he claimed is not totally lined up behind President Reagan's efforts to "isolate" the Soviet Union and its socialist allies.

Hinting that the Red Army may be experiencing problems matching U.S. arms technology and maintaining morale, Brezhnev said Kremlin leaders are sure "that the tasks facing our armed forces will be resolved."

"The Soviet army should be up to the mark in all respects: equipment, structure and methods of training," Brezhnev told the audience of generals and party leaders. "And you, comrades, are responsible for that."

Portrayal of priest distorted, makes 'Monsignor' unrealistic

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

"Monsignor" is advertised as a story of a priest who broke many vows.

To be successful dramatically, this film should have been about a priest's struggle to be both a man of faith and a man of action. Instead, ethical struggles are a thin veneer, too transparent to make this film very believable.

The Rev. John Flaherty, played by Christopher Reeve, is placed, with his faith and his cunning, in the midst of a crisis at the highest religious post in the world.

Before being called to the Vatican, he has a devastating experience while serving as an army chaplain in World War II. After comforting a dying comrade in a trench and hearing bitter words directed at God, he finds himself posed behind a machine gun firing at an enemy line.

His initiation to the Vatican sets the religiously exploitive attitude of much of the film. Upon entering the Holy Place, a flippant and irreverent archbishop immediately charges him with promoting the American Catholic Church in a power struggle being waged within the Vatican hierarchy.

Anxious to save the American Church's face in the Vatican, Flaherty proves he will do almost anything. Not long after he moves in next to the Pope, he is visited by an old army buddy who introduces him to his own fluid cash flow, a result of involvement in the thriving post-war black market.

His friend, Varese, portrayed by Joe Cortese, unwittingly finds himself leading a priest into black market dealings. Days later, a baffled Varese is introducing the worldly priest to his Catholic mafia friend, who is disgusted at the thought of working with a dirty priest.

Flaherty flirts his way into the market and ends up making millions for the Church, until years later when he is discovered by a Church spy and everything comes to a halt.

Flirtations more flagrant and unbelievable than this occur in Flaherty's romantic life with a woman almost ready to take her vows as a nun. More than any other failing in the film, this romance lacks tact and discretion.

It's not that anything sexually offensive takes place on the screen, but there is a casual attitude in how the two religious people break their vows of chastity and then deal with their lust.

Genevieve Bujold as Clara, gives a dynamic performance within the limits of her role. It's just that her dialogue and scripting is shallow.

Near the end of the film, there is a reference to the fact that Flaherty's priorities may be misplaced and the Pope orders him to spend time at a monastery to seek the Holy Spirit. It is here, also, that Reeve's interpretation of a priest becomes more realistic.

Throughout the film, Flaherty's mafia dealings are reminiscent of the Robin Hood legend, but they differ in their blatancy. Flaherty doesn't pretend to pull anything over on anyone and he gets away to a point because he does it for the Church, and not directly for himself.

In the process, he receives titles and promotions within the Church, leading up to his final role as Cardinal to the new Pope, who has supported him in his black market dealings.

That the very nature of Flaherty's assigned post, financial assistant to the Vatican, is more political than religious is an example of the way spirituality is trivialized.

One would assume that, when a matter of financial disaster occurs at the Vatican, it should be met with prayer preceding action. Or did the screen writer forget that in the Catholic view, the Vatican is the home of Christ's earthly representation?

Local campaign headquarters buzzing with focused activity.

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Marie Harrell has gotten the ability to run Jackson County Democratic Headquarters down to an art after doing it for 16 years.

The wife of County Clerk Bob Harrell has organized the headquarters and prepared candidates' brochures for distribution to 20,000 county residences.

In three weeks, the headquarters on Illinois Avenue in Carbondale was changed from an empty room to a junkyard of paper, posters, paperclips and envelopes.

Now it is being emptied again except for remaining posters, a table, chairs and a phone as precinct committee members come to collect packages of flyers for their districts.

The Republican headquarters, which officially opened on Sept. 30, has more space and the walls are lined with posters of state and county candidates. Jackie Miller, who runs the headquarters, said about 50,000 flyers and posters have been in and out of the headquarters since it was opened.

It is Miller's first time running Republican headquarters, located on Walnut Street in Murphysboro. Candidates do much of their own work with flyers, sometimes using volunteers rounded up by Miller, who makes a list of about 50 volunteers available to the candidate.

Miller is responsible for such things as news releases, public appearances and placing radio ads, she said. The Republicans are buying air time on four stations — WCLB, WTAO, WINN and WXAN.

Both Miller and Harrell use volunteers to go door-to-door for the candidates.

While the Republican Central Committee finances Republican headquarters, according to Susan Leavitt, a CCHS senior, aids the Democratic campaign.

Miller, party members donate funds for Democratic headquarters.

After 2.5 hours of telephoning party faithfuls, Harrell raised the $800 needed to run headquarters for five weeks. Almost immediately, she was on the telephone rounding up volunteers.

About 65 volunteers, about 40 of whom were students from SIU-C and Carbondale Community High School, bundled 20,000 flyers from county, state and national candidates by precinct.

In her years of running party headquarters, Harrell hasn't hesitated to call upon students. Some work for school credit; others walk in off the street to prepare packets for precinct committee members.

Harrell said she had been able to round up 15 volunteers on a Sunday, doing a day's work in little more than an hour.

Since the headquarters opened Oct. 1, volunteers have bagged all of the literature that the county committee has received. Precinct workers will be distributing the literature across the county before election day Tuesday.

Harrell requested 20,000 flyers from each candidate. Sheriff candidate Bill Kilquist's supply was the only one which came up short — by about 5,000 flyers — but that was quickly replenished, she said.

Some candidates have wound up stuffing envelopes alongside other volunteers. Harrell said the candidates comply with "my requests."

As the brochures are collected, Harrell intends to direct volunteer attention toward door-to-door work.

It's a video game invasion

Four arcades now in town

By James Derk
Student Writer

America's fascination with video games seems to have found a home in Carbondale's four video arcades, with numerous bars and stores which have coin-operated video games pulling in hundreds of dollars a week.

The video explosion began with pong, a simple game in which two players played a simple version of ping-pong. The current video games use microchips and sophisticated circuitry to make the player a participant in the game.

The current video games, such as Tempest and the famous Pac-Man, have started a worldwide craze that has people plunking quarter after quarter down the slot, only to lose again and again.

"I think they are a great way to take out your frustrations," said Brad Davis, a junior in political science. "Besides, it is fairly inexpensive if you get good at the games."

Video games vary in strategy and style, with the toughest of the games requiring great eye-hand coordination and reflex speed. One of the toughest games is Defender, where the player must manipulate four buttons and a joystick simultaneously against a barrage of attackers while concentrating on a radar screen and a playing screen.

"I find the challenge of these things very exciting," said John Crouch, senior, advertising, as he dropped another quarter down the slot of a Defender game. "I think they are very entertaining."

Most video games are programmed so they become progressively harder, so even as the player improves, the machine improves, making high scores difficult to achieve.

Good scores on games vary, but a score of over 100,000 on a tough machine is considered "awesome" by "vidiots," an affectionate term for people hooked on the games.

The games are popular with people of all ages and their competitive nature makes for interesting evenings at the arcades.

"I really want to beat this thing," said Kris Rothermel, sophomore, radio and TV, gazing at a Quix machine, a type of Etch-A-Sketch with a death wish. "I don't think I will Bill Arnold, junior in economics, battles the "Tempest" though."

Some games have raised controversy because of their themes of violence. One game, Death Race 2000, was criticized because the player had to drive a race car around and run down pedestrians to get points. When a pedestrian was struck, a shriek emitted from the machine and a cross appeared where the accident occurred.

One game for the home video market was taken off the shelves because of pressure from fire officials across the country. The game, called Firebug, gave players the instructions to "run through a building, pick up and drop gas cans to set it ablaze and get out alive."

A brochure for the games says that the player "starts out on the fifth floor, picks up gas cans and drops them down the walls. Your fuse will burn anything it touches, even you." Over 3,000 of the games were believed to be sold across the country.

One hand-held game still on the market is Niedenko's "Fireman, Fireman," where the object of the game is to catch babies being thrown out of a burning building with a fireman's net.

The player is allowed three misses and a scream emits from the machine and an angel appears in the corner of the screen when a baby is dropped. The same company has marketed a game where the object is to beat gophers to death with a large hammer, sparking outrage from animal protection groups.

As video games become more commonplace in homes across America, more and more cartridges are becoming available to widen the horizons of the players.

Halloween to be 'same,' police say

By Jeff Todd and Bob Welsh Student Writers

Carbondale Police Chief Edward J. Hogan said underage drinking on The Strip has always been a special problem until Halloween is over.

"After Halloween, the underage drinking begins to taper off and the time comes for the students to make their Bs and Cs," Hogan said in a recent interview.

Hogan had no statistics available to give a percentage of increase of underage drinking prior to Halloween.

Hogan, police chief since 1977, said that he expects this Halloween to be about the same as in past years.

"Compared to other years, last year's Halloween was fairly mild," Hogan said. "This year we'll be expecting about the same number of arrests as we had last year."

According to Carbondale police statistics, 40 people were arrested last year during the two-day celebration.

With Halloween approaching, Hogan commented on arrest procedures that some people will be faced with this Halloween.

The Chief appeared before a Journalism Reporting Class (Section Two, 311) press conference, and afterwards two reporters continued the conference in his office.

Two procedures are used when a person is arrested for underage drinking.

"One procedure is to arrest and give notice to appear, which requires no posting of bond. The other procedure is to arrest and incarcerate, which does require posting of bond," Hogan said.

Lately, Jackson County Circuit Court Judge David Watts has been setting fines at $100 for underage drinking.

Art Wright, public information officer for the Carbondale police, said there will be about 40 officers — some from SIU-C Security — walking The Strip.

Wright said that most of the arrests last year were made for "silly things," mostly when people's mouths got a little carried away.

The ban against glass bottles will also be in force again this year, Wright said. "The only liquor we will confiscate from The Strip is that which is contained in glass bottles," Wright said.

As far as future Halloweeners are concerned, Wright said there would probably be no major changes in police handling of the event. He said he thinks the occasion will eventually start to taper off and die. "It may take quite a few years for Halloween to die, but I think people will get tired of it and it will phase itself out," Wright said.

Gay and Lesbian Awareness 1982

- Today Oct. 28. BLUEJEANS DAY
 Support gay and lesbian lifestyles by wearing bluejeans. Bluejeans Day gives lesbian and gay men an opportunity to express their support existence and gives non-gays an opportunity to express their support for gayrights. Be proud, be supportive and say no to oppression—WEAR BLUEJEANS on Thursday Oct. 28!
- Today Oct. 28. 3-5pm. Mississippi Room:
A "Straight" Perspective on Gay and Lesbian Lifestyles.
 A panel of straight men and women discuss their views and reactions to the gay and lesbian experience. A question and answer period will follow the panel discussion.
- Today Oct. 28, 8pm, Ballroom B of the Student Center:
CHARLIE MURPHY and JAMI SIEBER in Concert.
 Openly gay singer/songwriter Charlie Murphy with cellist and vocalist Jami Sieber provide music that is at times gentle and quiet and at other times dynamic and provocative. Charlie Murphy's music touches on a number of subjects from oppression of native Americans, women, gay men and lesbians to environmental conservation and stopping the threat of nuclear war to expressions of love between men. His music challenges our ideals, encourages change and inspires us to heal ourselves and our world. For a warm and inspiring evening join Charlie and Jami on Thursday Oct. 28 in Ballroom B of the Student Center. Tickets are $3.00 and are available at all Gay and Lesbian Awareness events, a table in the Student Center on Oct. 26-28; Mainstreet East from Oct. 23-28, and at the door as available. Free drafts at Mainstreet East with purchase of a ticket.

More cities cancel Halloween

By David L. Langford
Associated Press Writer

Fear of the Tylenol killer and his macabre mimics is slamming the door on more and more kids anticipating a bagful of treats on Halloween, and city officials are likening themselves to the Grinch.

But with federal officials warning of a wave of "me-too" crimes following the cyanide deaths of three people in the Chicago area, many communities have decided the traditional "trick-or-treat" is an invitation to tragedy.

Among the cities banning the door-to-door solicitation is Vineland, N.J., a city of 53,500, about 35 miles south of Philadelphia.

"I would rather cancel this than have to go to a funeral for some kid who got something bad on trick-or-treat night," said Vineland Mayor Patrick R. Fiorilli. "We're living in a sick society."

But, Fiorilli added, "I feel like the Grinch that stole Christmas."

Parrotting his words, hundreds of miles away in Hammond, La., was Councilman Paul Sharp.

"We're stealing Halloween," Sharp said after the city fathers voted Tuesday night to keep the children off the streets.

As the holiday weekend approached, there was plenty of evidence that the trick-or-treat custom could be more dangerous than ever.

A needle was found in a pear in Arkansas, a nail in a cake.

Poisons, acids and cleaning fluids had turned up in products ranging from pain killers to soda pop to laxatives.

Commenting on the scattered cases around the country, Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, said Tuesday, "We are seeing a wave of 'me-too' crimes."

There was some indication that the "copycat" contaminations were hurting candy sales.

"Toward the end of this Halloween week we're usually down to hardly anything," said Mike Moniz at a Star market in Providence, R.I. "We have two displays that are still pretty full."

Richard Madison, vice president for merchandising of Weis Markets, which has about 100 stores in Pennsylvania and more in other states, said, "We've got to be hurt by this."

An association of candy manufacturers earlier in the week issued a statement urging consumers to buy only pre-wrapped candy.

Roy and Connie Witt of Anaheim, Calif., have taken a novel approach to the candy dilemma. They have posted a sign at their home that reads: "Halloween candy with our name on it. For your child's safety."

Robert and Deborah Myman in the Los Angeles suburb of Sherman Oaks said they will permit their two daughters to go trick-or-treating and then throw away all the goodies, just to be safe.

Yearbook fiction contest sets Nov. 15 deadline

The deadline for submission to the Obelisk II creative writing contest has been extended to Nov. 15, according to Kevin Eldridge, fiction editor.

The contest is open to all entries of fiction and new journalism, with no minimum length requirement and a maximum limit of 4,000 words, Eldridge said. Each entry should crystallize some aspect of college life.

Prizes will be awarded on Nov. 30 to the top three entries. First prize will be a $25 gift certificate from a local retailer and guaranteed publication in the 1983 Obelisk II. Second prize will be a $15 gift certificate and third prize will be a $10 gift certificate, with publication a possibility.

Voter registration increases

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — More Illinoisans are registered to vote next week than in any non-presidential election year in state history, the state Board of Elections said Wednesday.

Preliminary registration figures from the state's 102 counties and several city elections boards show 5.96 million people in Illinois are registered, said Ron Michaelson, state elections board director.

Only from 3.4 million to 3.57 million people are expected to

"The contest is particularly good for English and journalism students," Eldridge said, because, "there's a lot to be said about college life that can't be said in a feature or news story."

"Some students may consider the yearbook too sentimental or saccharine for their story, but the Obelisk II is not a regular yearbook," Eldridge said.

It is similar in format to Life Magazine, he said.

All entries must be submitted typed, double-spaced, with full name, local address, telephone number, year in school, major and student identification number on the first page of the manuscript, no later than 5 p.m. Nov. 15.

The contest will be judged by editors of the yearbook.

actually cast ballots, according to board projections based in part on past voter-turnout results.

Registrations for the election are up 150,000 over the last non-presidential year in 1978, figures showed. Voter turnout that year was about 57 percent of those registered — an increase over 1974's non-presidential election turnout of 52 percent.

Turnout tends to be less than in years when Americans elect a president.

Rookie deputy disarms hijacker

ALTON (AP) — A rookie deputy sheriff said his police academy training paid off early Wednesday when he disarmed the would-be hijacker of a TWA jumbo jetliner in Los Angeles.

Dennis Robinson, 23, was one of 97 passengers aboard TWA Flight 72 as it awaited takeoff shortly after midnight for St. Louis. Robinson, alerted by the captain of the L-011 Lockheed Tri-Star, wrestled a knife from the suspect and shoved him through a door.

"I thought he was playing a game," Robinson told the Alton Telegraph in describing his response to plane captain C.R. Baker's request via the jetliner's intercom for assistance.

"I waited about five minutes and casually got up, walked up the aisle toward first class and picked up a magazine," Robinson said. "I still hadn't seen the suspect yet. I looked around and saw a stewardess and asked, 'Where's the suspect?'" She said, "Here he comes now."

Confronted by the would-be hijacker, identified by authorities as William Hoffman, 25, Robinson was asked, "Are you the sheriff that's supposed to be on board?" He responded by saying, "No, I'm just trying to find out what's going on."

Robinson said he eventually occupied a seat next to one of the plane's passengers, acting as if he knew the man sitting next to him.

"This is the point I made up my mind I was going to 'do' the man," Robinson said. "I was going to get him down so I could disarm him. He came pretty close, and I said, 'Sir, do you think you could open the door, I'm really hot.' He looked at me pretty funny, but he complied. I just grabbed for the knife and pushed him out the door."

Robinson said airport security guards seized Hoffman following the suspect's 20-foot plunge to the landing strip through the door at a midships galley section of the jetliner.

Community Ambassadors find hometown students' problems

By Maria J. Shoop
Student Writer

When a student comes to SIU-C, he or she can experience problems that are found at universities across the country. Drugs and alcohol, schoolwork, roommates and landlord difficulties are only a few of the problems.

What most students don't realize is that there is someone in their hometown to help them.

The Community Ambassador program, sponsored by Area Services in the Office of Regional Research and Services, is a way for students to gain the help they need at SIU-C.

The program consists of "people throughout the area who will be the eyes and ears for the University," according to Boyd Butler, assistant director of area services.

The program's function is to be the University's representative in the community as well as inform the University of events in the community, Butler said.

The program provides speakers to the community and ambassadors help students who are having trouble adjusting to the community.

"To be a Community Ambassador a person has to be a friend and supporter of SIU-C," Butler said. Ambassadors are selected based on their work in the community.

More than 47 Community Ambassadors work throughout the state, including five in Chicago, two in Springfield, and one in almost every town in Southern Illinois, Butler said.

"We feel it is necessary to have ambassadors all over the state because the second number of all students at SIU-C are from the Chicago area and we feel it is necessary to represent them," Butler said.

Session to aid dissertation writers

A group session formed by the Career Counseling Center to help students work on doctoral degrees. "Me and My Dissertation" will begin at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Jazel Coffman, facilitator of the program, said it is intended to be a motivational tool. She said that students who work on doctorates have to be self-motivated and disciplined because it requires a lot of research and writing.

In this program, the students report back to each other about how much they have accomplished and keep each other on deadline, she said.

Coffman said that this will be the second time the program is offered. She said she received positive responses from those who participated in it.

"This is an on-going program and a support group for those who would like help in doing their dissertation," she said. "It is only open to those in the process of completing a doctorate degree and have to write a dissertation to finish it."

She said that those who have finished preliminary examinations and are no longer active in their department benefit most from the program. Although most departments have special workshops for doctoral candidates, she said that those who leave their departments may need the help from Career Counseling.

Coffman said that she will accept a maximum of 11 persons, but so far only five have registered for the program.

'83 and '84 are Gonna Be Tough

Rep. Bruce Richmond knows that Southern Illinois, and the rest of the country, is facing difficult economic problems.

We've got to get the unemployed back to work. We've got to find ways to increase production of Southern Illinois coal. We've got to pass laws that help keep farmers from going bankrupt. We've got to prevent declining state revenues from lowering the quality of public education. We've got to work harder to help the elderly live comfortably. The list goes on and on. The problems are enormous. The solutions will come with great difficulty.

And that's why you should vote for Bruce Richmond. He knows what the problems are. He is knowledgeable about how to use the legislature to help his constituents. He is well known and respected in Springfield. Republicans as well as Democrats, upstate legislators as well as downstate colleagues, the men and women who make the laws of Illinois all view Bruce Richmond as a man who can be believed.

If Southern Illinois is to survive the economic challenges of the next two years, it will need Bruce Richmond in Springfield to fight for its interests.

That's what he's been doing for eight years. And he gets better every year.

Doctors dispute copycat crime causes

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP)—The copycat criminals who poison medicine bottles may be emotionally immature people, desperate for a leader, who finally have an excuse to carry out their long-held grudges, psychiatrists say.

Since seven people died in the Chicago area from cyanide-filled Tylenol capsules, sabotaged medicines — and lately food — have appeared in stores across the United States.

Psychiatrists speculate that this bizarre series is the work of people who are unduly susceptible to the power of suggestion.

"People who have difficulty running their own lives who have relatively weak ego structures, to put it technically — will rely upon others to tell them what to do and what to be," says Dr. Richard Galdston of Harvard Medical School.

These are people who long for their childhood days when they always had someone to tell them how to act, he says. "It is, in that sense, a re-enactment of a childhood tradition."

Why copy a killing? Maybe they have longed to murder.

Many people scheme and dream about doing in an enemy, but they never come close to actual violence. But the copycat criminals have poor control of the urges that society forbids.

"Individuals who have a marginal adaptation of their aggressive impulses, assuming that they haven't killed anybody but have an inclination to, respond to the suggestive stimuli of the notoriety and infamy that surrounds the Tylenol case," Galdston says.

Dr. Thomas Guthrie, director of the Program in Psychiatry and the Law at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, said people may tussle for years with a yen to do something violent. Then they see somebody else do it.

"When certain phenomena happen," he said, "individuals who are struggling inside with impulses act as though one side of the struggle has been given the go-ahead and may act."

However, drawing a profile of the person capable of spiking a medicine bottle is difficult.

"If people are poised by certain inner forces that are accumulating, a wide range of different personality types could have this potential," says Dr. Arnold Robbins, a forensic psychiatrist at Tufts Medical School in Boston.

"It would be somebody who certainly has a great amount of aggression," he says. "He might carry it around for several years. Seeing the event, seeing the killer get publicity and seeing how hard it is to catch the person could just serve to precipitate some kind of violence of this type."

Some psychiatrists doubt whether they can figure out much about these people's motives before they are caught.

"I do not believe that psychiatry has a great deal to offer in characterizing these people in advance," says Dr. Peter Kramer, director of outpatient psychiatry at Rhode Island Hospital. "There's no scientific basis for making these predictions."

Some even question whether the copycat poisoners are suffering from neurosis, psychosis or any other degree of mental sickness.

"I think it's premature to say these people are mad rather than bad," says Dr. George Murray of Massachusetts General Hospital. "Putting them in that category makes people feel better, since they don't have to think that humanity can be so inherently evil. I don't think these people have psychiatric disease."

Among the tampering cases that have emerged since the Tylenol poisonings:

— A man in Aurora, Colo., was in critical condition after he took Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules that were tainted with mercuric chloride.

— Cases of contaminated eyedrops, nasal sprays and mouthwash have been reported in several states.

— In Minneapolis, a boy drank milk from a carton containing sodium hydroxide, a chemical used in industrial cleaners, but was not seriously hurt.

Such crimes seem random. But Guthrie says the poisoner probably fantasized about who would be killed by the doctored drugs and had a specific victim in mind.

"It's random in fact," said Guthrie, "but in their fantasy, it's a guided missile."

The intended victim, says Guthrie, is probably the killer's mother.

Adds Galdston: "If they have somebody they want to do in but can't, the next best thing is to kill somebody whom they don't know at all. That way they can imagine their enemy in his or her stead."

Robbins says the intended victim may also be the city where the killer lives, the world in general or American capitalism.

Galdston speculates that such pill poisoners may have committed similar crimes many times before.

"It feeds their megalomania," he says, "their sense of grandeur and omnipotence to be able to kill at random."

Faculty recital set for Friday

Two School of Music faculty members will perform contemporary music for trombone and piano in recital at 8 p.m. Friday in the Old Baptist Foundation Chapel.

Robert Weiss will perform on trombone and Donald Beattie will perform on piano, assisted by Robert Allison on trumpet and Michael Hanes on percussion.

They will perform works by Bozza, Bachelder, Moss, Dubois and Casterede.

One piece by Lawrence Moss, "B.P., A Melodrama," is an experimental work in the form of a mini-opera in which the protagonists play instruments rather than sing. By combining music, theatre and unconventional sounds of the featured instruments as well as an electronic tape, the piece tells the story of two Greek gods, Baucis and Philemon.

Wellness Center to develop new health programs for blacks

Monty Tyner
Student Writer

Blacks and certain international groups have specific health care needs that require special attention, according to Joyce Combes, coordinator of special lifestyle programs at the Wellness Center. Combes, a registered nurse, is planning to develop workshops directed toward priorities and international students for the 1983-84 school year.

"I understand that the greatest minority on campus is Afro-American," says Combes. "Seven or 8 percent of the students on campus are black."

"I am focusing on the Afro-American and some of the health problems they have."

Combes says she has personal insight into the problems of black students because she is black.

She identifies those problems as high blood pressure, diet and stress.

"Statistics have shown, in a significant fashion, that blacks are very much affected by high blood pressure," said Combes. "I said 60 million Americans suffer from high blood pressure and about 25 million are borderline cases."

The symptoms of high blood pressure, also known as the "silent disease" because it is so hard to detect, are dizziness, poor vision, light headedness and persistent headache.

Combes said all people should have their blood pressure checked yearly and blacks should have it checked every six months. High blood pressure can lead to stroke or heart attack, she said, but it can be treated by drugs, nutritional, low-salt diet and exercise.

"Students are already under a lot of stress," said Combes. "If you come from a group of people, culturally or ethnically, who are already involved in having high blood pressure, putting those people into a high stress area can create real problems for them."

"I want black students to know that services are available to them from a black person who may understand their perspectives," she said.

Combes is also in the process of meeting with a number of international groups. She says that because they come from different cultures, international students have their own special problems with health care.

"There are some real conflicts and barriers for international students," said Combes. "For instance, buying food. They eat Cream of Wheat in some parts of Africa. It's a staple, but they don't know it as Cream of Wheat. They come here looking for foods by their terminology and they run into a lot of confusion and frustration."

By attending lifestyle programs already set up, Combes says, blacks and international students can provide feedback and help in the development of specialized programs. She also encourages students to stop by the Student Assessment Center located at the south end of the Student Center for periodical check-ups.

Combes also has a column in the Black Observer, "Soul Food Safari," which gives tips on delicious and nutritional foods.

In her office at the Wellness Center, Combes also sees students on a one-to-one basis for counseling on nutrition, weight control, stress and smoking.

"Most of us have a level of wellness, but there are higher levels of wellness and we would like to achieve that," Combes said. And she is determined to bring better health care to students.

"God doesn't give up on me and I can't give up on anyone else," she said.

The Quality You Expect!

Tilters need ultimate defense to win

By Jackie Rodgers
Sports Editor

The SIU-C men's Frisbee Club has a chance to fly high this weekend.

Full Tilt will be participating in the Midwest Regional Tournament this weekend in Kalamazoo, Mich. The SIU-C club is one of 16 teams competing for a chance to go on to the national tournament.

The 16 teams are divided into four pools, said club president Dave Miller. The Kansas City, Mo., Ultimatooes, the Horizontals from Kansas City, Kan., and Michigan State will be SIU-C's competition.

"That's a really tough pool," said Miller. He pointed out that the Ultimatooes beat Full Tilt in the semifinals of the Springfield tournament, and that Michigan State is the No. 1 seed in the tournament.

Round-robin competition will determine the top teams in each pool. Those two teams will advance out for single-elimination games to determine the regional champ.

Miller said the Ultimatooes are a very disciplined team. The K.C. club beat Full Tilt by four points at the Springfield tournament.

"Their defense isn't very good," said Miller. "It depends on how well we start out. If we score the first three goals, then we can run as much as we want. If we don't start out good, well, that could be our downfall."

That would mean the Tilters would have to beat Michigan State in order to advance out of pool play. And that would be tough.

Michigan State took third place at nationals last year.

According to Miller, they are the team to beat again. Miller also said that playing in their home state will definitely work to MSU's advantage.

"They play the same style we do — run and gun," said Miller. "They are more disciplined than we are. They run the same patterns all the time, but they do it so well that it is hard to defend against. If we don't play great defense, we will lose."

Miller said the Tilters have a chance to beat MSU, though. The SIU-C club lost to the MSU by only one point two years ago. Miller is confident his team can also beat the Horizontals.

Full Tilt will be a "streamlined club," according to Miller. He said the full squad will not be traveling this weekend because of prior commitments.

Divine Wind shoots for top spot

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Sheryl Hirschbein may not exactly be a household word on the SIU-C campus, but if Ultimate Frisbee continues its present skyrocketing trend, all that might soon change.

The senior in industrial recreation currently serves as the president of the women's Ultimate Frisbee team, Divine Wind. According to Hirschbein, her SIU-C squad was the state's first women's Ultimate Frisbee club.

She has piloted her squad to a 6-2 season mark, and will lead them to regionals this weekend in Kalamazoo, Mich. There the Wind will be clawing to emerge unscathed from an eight team field from Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio and Illinois...

Should SIU-C happen to take the regional title, it will be one of five women's teams in the country to meet in a showdown in Austin, Tex., Thanksgiving week. But some mighty tough competition is going to be standing between Carbondale and Texas for the Wind.

Ohio University, Southwest Missouri and Kansas will be competing in the same division as Divine Wind. Saturday a three-game round-robin tournament will pit teams in each division against the others.

On Sunday, the top two teams in each division will advance to the semi-finals where the top team in each division will play the second place team from the other division. The two winners will then advance to the championship. The second division consists of teams from Michigan, Michigan State, Kansas and Chicago (Windy City).

"The team from Springfield (Southwest Missouri) beat us twice. We need to beat them," Hirschbein said. "Michigan State is real hot. They can throw but they can't run. They'll probably win their division. We have a good chance to win also, but I think Springfield is the team to beat."

Hirschbein pointed out seniors Kris Davis and Michele Blanchette, the team's top player, and junior Sara Lyter, as the Wind's biggest assets this weekend.

Braves' manager receives NL honor

ATLANTA (AP) Joe Torre, named National League Manager of the Year by The Associated Press on Wednesday, couldn't help but note the twist his baseball fortunes have taken in just a year.

"It's very satisfactory and kind of funny, too, going from getting fired one year to Manager of the Year the next," said the Atlanta Braves skipper, who was dismissed last year by the New York Mets.

The runner-up was Frank Robinson of the San Francisco Giants, who received 22 votes. Whitey Herzog of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals was third with 13.

"I never thought about it during the season. I had a lot of other things on my mind," said a smiling Torre.

"there's no way you're going to do well at all."
 And while Coach Bill Cornell drills the squad and gives them encouragement for upcoming meets, Keane said that mental preparation is something that must be done by the individual. "It's up to you," he said. "There's no way a coach can help you get ready mentally."
 It would seem that Keane has been good about following his own advice. The Orland Park native was SIU-C's top runner in three meets this season and was fifth in the Missouri Valley Conference in 1981.

Rugger take aim at tournament title

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

On the field action will only make up part of this weekend's festivities. A Halloween weekend spent in Carbondale wouldn't be complete without a little, or, if you happen to be rugby players, a lot of partying.

When SIU-C's rugby team entertains 14 other squads in the fourth annual All-Ghouls Tournament this weekend, they'll be showing their guests the real meaning of Halloween spirit off the field.

On the field, however, they'll be looking to show their guests just how rude they can be.

The ruggerers have never won their own tournament. Club Vice-President Rob Campbell hopes that will turn around this year, noting that last year's first round loss was all that prevented them from making a legitimate run at the title.

"Last year we lost our first game to Southeast Missouri," Campbell said. "It went through regulation and it was tied. Then it went through two overtimes and it was still tied. Then it went into two free-kick periods, and was still tied."

SEMO finally wrapped up the title in free-kick period No. 3, scoring a 3-2 heartbreaker over the ruggerers. Even that period had a chance to end in a tie, but, as Campbell put it, "we choked."

This weekend's tourney will be divided into two divisions. The Maroon sector, the stronger of the two divisions, will consist of SIU-C's "A" team, along with "A" squads from Southwest Missouri, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Iowa City, Springfield, Illinois State and Decatur.

The white division will be composed of "B" teams from SIU-C, EIU, ISU and WIU, as well as clubs from Paducah, Indiana and Northern Illinois. The field will be rounded out by a squad of former SIU-C players, the Old Loads.

"We're having a big bash Saturday night for all the teams," Campbell said. "Last year all the teams came in their costumes. It worked out pretty well. The next day people were showing up (at the games) with painted faces."

Partying hard is something that the ruggerers take pride in. After last year's 40-kg festivities, Campbell noted, the teams pretty much dispersed "and blended in with the crowd on the strip." They returned in the early dawn hours to finish the surplus beer at one of the Carbondale rugger's homes. Then they went to knock heads at the rugby pitch.

With the same agenda on tap for this weekend, Sunday's contests could merely be a survival-of-the-fittest showdown. Campbell thinks his club will be one of the fittest.

"We shouldn't be too bad," he said. "We've got a pretty good club. We've been going for seven weekends now. That's long enough that we should have it together."

The action is slated to start at 10 a.m. on Saturday at the rugby pitch. Three contests will be played simultaneously. The tournament will be held in double-elimination fashion, with first-round losers dropping into the losers' bracket. The championship will be held at noon on Sunday — Saturday night casualties permitting — preceded by a tentatively scheduled 11 a.m. consolation match.

West's recruiting lands a car

By Jackie Rodgers
Sports Editor

Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West is happy.

She has been trying to get one for about three years, she said. But now that it is here, she is "very happy. I couldn't be more pleased."

No, West isn't talking about a 6-4 center who can shoot with either hand. And, no, she's not talking about a pitcher who can hurl a softball 80 miles-per-hour.

What she is talking about is the fact that, for the first time ever, women's athletics has received a car from a local car dealer.

West said Men's Intercollegiate Athletics has been receiving cars from local dealers for a number of years. About three years ago West decided enough was enough, and tried to persuade local dealers to donate to the women as well.

Thursday, the women will receive their first automobile, courtesy of Beck Toyota.

"I did it because they deserve it," said Carl Beck, owner of the dealership. "All this time everyone has overlooked the women. I just feel that it was about time they were treated equally."

West said the car would be used as a departmental car.

"We'll allow the coaches to use it when making recruiting trips," said West. "No one will be allowed to use it just for their own personal use."

It is common practice for car dealerships to loan cars to athletics departments for use by the coaches and administrators. Men's Intercollegiate Athletics has a number of automobiles at its disposal.

Fielders await appearance of special team mascot

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Associate Sports Editor

Every Halloween, hundreds of visitors come to Carbondale and SIU-C. Among the visitors this year, according to members of the field hockey team, will be the Great Pumpkin.

The Great Pumpkin, a traditional mascot of the team, is due to make an appearance at the fielders' last regular home season game at 1 p.m. Saturday at Wham Field against Western Illinois.

"We had a message and it said that the Great Pumpkin will see us in Carbondale this weekend," said Coach Jules Illner.

The Great Pumpkin is not something which just pops up around Halloween. The idea takes form in different ways during the entire season.

"We put pumpkin candies in our goal and our opponents' goal," said halfback Barb Donahue. "It's like a blessing on us and a curse on them."

Pumpkins in various forms have appeared at games throughout the season. Plastic decorations have been placed by the bench, scorer's table and stands. Just before taking the field, the Salukis gather around a real pumpkin and place their sticks on it and chant their own version of a cheer to get psyched up.

"Even if you're saying you want this spirit to rise, everyone is concentrating on one thing, and it brings everyone into the game," said fullback Dore Weil.

"He's our mascot and we need him in the first game and all the way through the season," said forward Jennifer Bartley.

The players agree it is a good way to get ready for the game, but they admit they feel somewhat strange at time, and especially when they first joined the team.

"I was a freshman the first time he appeared," said senior Barb Smith. "Everyone else was yelling and I didn't know what to do. Then everyone knelt down and went 'Ohhhh Great Pumpkin' and I thought it was crazy."

"It's a lot of fun, though," she continued. "It's an annual event and everyone gets excited. We'd be disappointed if he didn't show up."

The pumpkin ritual is carried out on road trips, also. There was a special appearance in Iowa last weekend.

"I think it was one of his helpers or something," said halfback Jeanine Janos. "He was wearing an orange rain suit and poncho and had a little plastic pumpkin on top of his head so you couldn't see his face."

Although the Salukis appreciated the visit from their mascot, it gets a bewildered reaction from their opponents.

Harriers' key is mental preparation

Running distances and stretching — purely physical actions — are not the only forms of preparation SIU-C's top cross country runner engages in before a meet.

Since running involves the mind as well as the body Mike Keane believes that about 90 percent of cross country is mental while the actual physical aspects only 20 percent. For him, these mental rudiments take place before and during a meet.

After two years running for the Salukis, Keane has found that such preparation is done automatically.

The first thing he does before a meet is spend 30 to 45 minutes just thinking about the race and talking about it with his other teammates. "I just think about what I plan to do and hope to do during the race," he said.

After getting into the position he wants during the first mile of a five-mile or 10,000 meter event, Keane tries to relax for the next two miles. "You don't think about anything in particular," he said.

But after three miles, he begins to think about how he plans to finish the race.

Throughout the race there are certain things Keane tries not to think about. "The worst thing you could possibly do is to think about how bad you feel," he said. If he finds himself thinking about his aching body, he then tries to shift his thoughts to his running form.

More often than not, Keane finds himself ahead of the pack, with a sizeable lead, running alone. That is when boredom creeps in.

Boredom leads to a lack of motivation, Keane said, and is something he may have experienced during this year's Illinois Intercollegiate.

During that meet, Keane had about a 60-yard lead, but "got into a rhythm" which he said made him feel overconfident. In the meantime, the gap between Keane and the rest of the field steadily decreased and by the end of the meet, Keane had relinquished his lead to teammate Tom Ross and the first-place finisher, Illinois' Mike Patton.

But while overconfidence may prove to be detrimental, confidence is something Keane definitely thinks is needed to compete successfully.

"If your don't have confidence mentally," he said.
