Nitz to be sentenced today, vows: 'I'll be back'

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Convicted murderer Richard Nitz will be sentenced at the Williamson County Courthouse in Marion today following Wednesday's hearing where the judge said this case was the most clear cut he has ever seen.

"He (Nitz) is as guilty as any man I have seen tried," Judge Donald Lowery said, interrupting Public Defender Larry Broeking's plea for Nitz's innocence.

"There is not any doubt that he (Nitz) is a murderer," Lowery said.

Continuing his closing statements Broeking said Nitz "is not some kind of animal crawling on the ground" that should be killed.

In a plea against the death sentence, he said Nitz has serious problems if he committed the crimes he was convicted of but that there is still hope for the man.

State's Attorney Charles Garnati, advocating the death penalty, said Nitz compounded the crimes of first degree murder during a kidnapping and an armed robbery by then cutting off and hiding Miley's "head so the family can not

Gorbachev to release prisoners

MOSCOW (UPI) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Wednesday Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has agreed to release all political prisoners by the end of the year in exchange for Bonn's support for a human rights conference in Moscow.

Kohl, on the third day of a four-day visit to the Soviet Union, said Gorbachev's promise to release political prisoners was one of three conditions set by Bonn for supporting the K-remlin's desire to trumpet its improved human rights record by hosting an international human rights conference in Moscow.

"The German side expressed its readiness to support along with others after human rights conferences in Paris and Copenhagen also a human rights conference in Moscow if it follows the standard set by the previous meetings," Kohl said.

"In this context, the Soviet side stressed it would release by the end of the year all persons which are regarded in the West as political prisoners," said Kohl, making the first state visit by a West German leader in five years.

The other two conditions set by West Germany were increased emigration for ethnic Germans residing within the Soviet Union and an end to the jamming of German radio broadcasts into the country.

Moscow has moved to meet the conditions with stepped up emigration for the ethnic Germans to record levels in the past nine months and negotiating an end to the jamming. Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher said Wednesday his government was "satisfied" with the progress of negotiations on those conditions.

Barbara Bush, wife of presidential candidate George Bush, greets Jesse Richardson, a trainee at Mount Vernon's Comprehensive Services, a facility that rehabilitates disabled people into the work force, Wednesday afternoon during a campaign stop in Southern Illinois.

Barbara Bush to work for improved literacy

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

MOUNT VERNON — Barbara Bush said improving the country's literacy rate would be her main objective as first lady.

But she said her main purpose for coming to Illinois was "to get people to vote for George Bush."

She spent about two hours here before traveling to California. The wife of Republican presidential candidate George Bush spoke to reporters at Comprehensive Services, a facility to help the disabled become integrated into the work force.

"I'm not pushing just George Bush, I'm pushing the ticket," she said. "Every last vote counts."

"I came here to let you know we care about Southern Illinois, we care about your problems."

She said both she and her husband were strong supporters of the Head Start program, which is a nationwide effort to help children from low-income families gain social competence.

There are Head Start programs on Giant City Road in Carbondale; in the basement of the Shiloh Baptist Church, 418 S. Fifth in Murphysboro; and one in Johnson City.

Bush is meeting her husband this weekend in California, but she said, "You know, I don't know exactly where my husband is at right now," and then laughed.

She said his whereabouts had slipped her mind.

While at the Comprehensive Center, she met with the people working on projects there, spoke sign language with a group of people, and helped mix chocolate mint chip cookie dough.

Burris: State's leader at fault

Calls Thompson dismal leader

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

The situation confronting higher education in Illinois can be traced to poor management on the part of the state's chief executive, State Comptroller Roland Burris said.

"(Gov.) Jim Thompson has been a dismal leader and has not made education a top priority during his administration," he said.

Burris meets with local officials

Roland Burris

Burris was in Carbondale Wednesday taking part in a hearing where the state's responsibility in helping local government was discussed.

Burris disagrees that a tax increase is needed to lift primary, secondary and higher education out of their financial slumps, and blamed the Thompson administration for creating education's dismal situation.

"During his (Thompson's) 10 years in office, funding for education has gone down," Burris said. "The money has not been handled properly. I've seen it. I know it."

"Tuition has to rise here at our University because the universities have not been able to get proper funding from the state."

Burris, a native of Centralia, graduated from the University in 1959 with a bachelor's degree in political science.

Burris said many of the financial problems confronting the state can be dealt with by reapportioning resources already at the state's disposal.

Burris said Thompson is asking for too much money to come from the people of the state, and not using what they have already in a wise manner.

"No matter how much money you have, you'll never have enough to solve all the problems of the state."

Praise was given to Thompson's Build Illinois program, but Burris said "the program is so complicated it takes people with PhD's to figure it out."

Funding for the program has been a problem too, Burris said, with a large percentage of it coming from Illinois' general fund.

"This money could be going to education" instead being used to bail out various other state programs, he said.

Burris said with funding for education dropping at the state level, "the school districts have to begin tapping into the public" through an increase in property taxes.

Burris said there is documented proof showing with every decrease in state funding for education, there is an equal increase in the property tax.

"Real estate taxes have gone up proportionally to the drop in funding from the state," Burris said.

Burris called Thompson's proposed tax increase a "hodge podge," saying very little thought went into its creation.

"Who's idea was it to tax funerals and beauty shops and not tax the lawyers, doctors and accountants?"

Burris then attacked Thompson's staff and their part in creation.

"Thompson's staff put the budget together; his top man manipulated things back there so badly that it took my staff and my experts to find out what the hell they put together."

Israel bombards Lebanon with air raids on 6 camps

SIDON, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli jetfighters unleashed their biggest blitz this year on Lebanon Wednesday, pounding six Moslem guerrilla camps near Beirut and in the south as Israeli-backed troops pushed the insurgents off a strategic hilltop near the southern port of Sidon. Security sources and guerrillas said at least 19 people were killed and 40 others wounded, including women and children, in the air strikes and ground attacks.

Crews find 144 survivors from sunken ferry

TACLOBAN, Philippines (UPI) — Rescuers Wednesday plucked at least 144 survivors from a cluster of islands in the stormy Visayan Sea where a ferry carrying 481 people sank Monday at the height Typhoon Ruby's fury, Coast Guard and shipping officials said. The confirmed death toll was 32, the officials said.

Officials attempt to end massive farmers sit-in

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Government officials Wednesday met with leaders of more than 100,000 farmers occupying a mall in central New Delhi in hopes of settling the 2-day-old sit-in and clear the area before a huge rally planned by the ruling Congress Party next week. There was no word on progress in the talks between senior members of the Bharatiya Kisan Union — Hindi for Indian Farmers Union — and Home Minister Buta Singh and Balram Jakhar, the speaker of the lower house of Parliament.

Seven Latin presidents to meet on debt, drugs

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (UPI) — The presidents of seven Latin American countries began arriving Wednesday at a posh beachside resort for a meeting to chart ways to revive their failing, debt-strapped economies and curb international drug rackets. The seven presidents attending the meeting opening Thursday are being lodged in private homes in the neighborhood of San Rafael, one of the most luxurious districts of Punta del Este.

U.S. offers limit on 'Star Wars' defense test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fulfilling a promise President Reagan made to Mikhail Gorbachev at the 1987 Washington summit, the United States has offered to limit the number of satellites in any "Star Wars" space defense test, U.S. officials said Wednesday. The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S. negotiators at the nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva proposed Monday to limit to 15 the number of satellites used in any tests of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, as "Star Wars" is formally known.

Drought loss, exports slow economic growth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Slower exports and drought losses dropped total economic growth to a weak annual 2.2 percent in the third quarter, the lowest in two years, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. Growth in the real gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, was lower than most analysts had predicted, but economists and administration officials agreed the report was basically good news.

Elite pilots die in Marine helicopter crashes

YUMA, Ariz. (UPI) — Two Marine helicopters crashed in the Arizona desert while on night maneuvers for elite pilots practicing advanced tactics, killing all 10 men aboard, military officials said Wednesday. The CH-46 Sea Knight and UH-1H "Huey" were on a training exercise for a weapons and tactics instructor course when they crashed about 7:45 p.m. MST Tuesday on the Barry Goldwater Gunnery Range 125 miles southeast of Yuma.

Russian ships open freedom path for whales

BARROW, Alaska (UPI) — Two Russian icebreaking ships bashed a passageway through an arctic ice ridge Wednesday that ecstatic rescue workers hoped would soon send two once-doomed California gray whales finally swimming to freedom. The whales, splashing with new life, were apparently only a half-mile from open water after the Soviet vessels destroyed a section of the jagged wall at the edge of the ice flow in their first assault, rescue officials said.

SIU-C student wins writers' contest

Gets first place for original music and short story

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

Robert Quigley writes for his hobby.

Little did he know that this pastime would get him a $10,000 scholarship, a short story published and an album recorded.

Quigley, a senior in health care management, won the National Writers Competition sponsored by the National Center for the Endowment of the Arts. It is an annual, national contest open to people over 18 years old who are not currently under contract.

Quigley entered in two of the seven categories in the contest: original musical composition and short story. He won the national title in both.

QUIGLEY, FROM Shelbina, Mo., said he was notified previously that he had won the regional competition, including seven states in the Midwest, and his work was sent to a panel of five judges in the national competition.

Last week, he found out he had won and flew to St. Louis to be recognized in a ceremony with the other winners.

"There were 3,000 entrants in the two categories," Quigley said.

He said the person who

called to tell him he had won called his winning in two categories "unprecedented." "The categories are so diversified," he said.

"I NEVER believed in these contests before," he said. "I thought they were probably fixed."

But it was real and Quigley won a $5,000 scholarship for each of the categories, which he plans to use at SIU-C.

His non-fiction short story, entitled "The Mission," currently is being published. It tells of the first time he killed another human during his stay in Vietnam at the age of 19.

His song, "If I Only Had You," is described by Quigley as a pop rock ballad. He wrote the music and lyrics and performed the song, which he submitted to the contest on a video tape.

HE IS now working on an album at Soundcore in Carbondale, which will be recorded on Epic Records, one of the sponsors of the contest.

Making records is not a new experience for Quigley, after attending college in Hollywood for three years majoring in social and performing with bands to work his way through college.

Quigley, who had always written his own music, sent a tape of some of his work to a manager, and within a week, he was in the same rehearsal studio with Rod Stewart.

Quigley then played with the bands Ambrosia and Montrose before starting his own band, Borealis.

HE HAS recorded three albums prior to this one, and has toured with Journey and Loverboy, among others. One of his tours brought him near his hometown, when he opened for Van Halen at the SIU-C Arena.

Quigley said the lyrics of his music have always been different from that of others because he doesn't write about "sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll."

"You wouldn't believe all the things record companies want you to do to sell records," he said. "It's like selling your soul."

"I never lost my Midwestern values," he said, "and many people respect me for that."

Quigley tired of the Hollywood scene and decided to finish his education near his hometown, at SIU-C.

"EVERYBODY ASKS me, 'Why Carbondale?'" he said, "but I love it here."

"Any place with a building called Quigley Hall must not be too bad," he joked.

After graduation next December, Quigley plans to go to graduate school and keep writing on the side.

"I hadn't planned on going back (into music) after school," he said. "Things happen like this."

"I'll let nature take its course," he said, but added that he will always write.

QUIGLEY SAID he hopes to write a couple of books in his lifetime. He has already begun writing one about his experiences in Vietnam.

"Writing has always come easy for me," he said. He said he can write a song in 15 to 20 minutes.

Quigley said he hopes to give people in this area the chance to help out on his eight-song album.

"I learned from my peers. I went there and paid my dues," he said. "I don't mind sharing that with others."

Eddie Chappa, an SIU-C graduate in music, currently is helping Quigley with the pre-production of the album, which Quigley hopes will be out in late spring or summer.

BECAUSE OF his time in Hollywood, Quigley also is an anti-drug activist. He plans to give some of the proceeds of the album to a local facility, such as the Wellness Center, to help in the fight against drugs.

Committee wants fee lowered

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government Committee for Internal Affairs told the newly formed Alpha Chi Rho fraternity it will have to lower its local fees to become a Registered Student Organization.

At the committee meeting Tuesday night, Mike Putzek, East Side senator, said the University has a $35 ceiling on fees local clubs can charge. The fraternity had proposed a $40 fee for its organization.

Representatives of the fraternity agreed to lower the local fees to $35.

The committee also discussed bills for impeachment of senators who have not signed information release forms or who have missed more than four meetings with or without proxy representation.

The committee removed Brad Jeffers, a former senator who had resigned, from the impeachment list.

The committee also listened to a proposal for a revised constitution from a representative of the Air Force ROTC Wild Blue organization. Wild Blue, a cadet choir, is applying for RSO status.

Committee election scheduled for Wednesday was also discussed. There was one open seat on the committee.

A closed committee meeting to discuss senators' grade point averages followed.

Opinion & Commentary

Halloween ain't fun without the costume

WE SHOULD take this year's Halloween a step further. Carbondale already is years ahead of other college towns with similar celebrations. Safety measures developed at Carbondale have become a model for Halloween festivals as far away as Athens, Ohio.

Students, townspeople, businesses, police, city workers and University administrators have come up with a plan that has curtailed the violence that marred celebrations in the early- to mid-'80s.

The emphasis this year is again on safety. There is, however, one thing the celebrants can do to make the festival more enjoyable and possibly safer.

MANY OF THOSE on the Strip and Grand Avenue last year bemoaned the relative absence of costumes. Halloween once was a journey into a surreal world where a person might meet up with a dozen Richard Nixons, followed by three or four sets of Blues Brothers, walking just ahead of a whole funeral procession.

Costuming once was creative. Those who tried it on, found that it fit, and was a great deal of fun.

We have come a long way toward providing a safe environment for our revelers. This should be the year that we bring back the costumes.

WHY ARE costumes so important? For one thing, costuming can put alcohol in the back seat where it belongs. While we do not fault those who drink in moderation, drinking should not be the sole reason for coming to downtown Carbondale.

Heavy drinkers are likely to find themselves the center of attention among the many police who roam the Halloween crowds. Underage drinkers should take the recent police raids on downtown bars as a premonition of things to come on Halloween weekend.

Costuming is the most viable alternative to getting stone drunk and risking jail, injury or death in the pursuit of a good time.

THE VETERAN COSTUMERS plan their disguises well in advance. Many groups develop a theme in which everyone can participate. That's good advice. There's safety in numbers, especially in the large crowd that can be expected Friday and Saturday night.

Costuming also allows the participants to drop some of their inhibitions. This does not mean that costumers should use their disguised identities as an excuse for any kind of hijinks, illegal, immoral or otherwise.

Costuming is a lot like dreaming, though. A person can don a costume and become a world leader, a dastardly villain, an animal, vegetable, even a small household appliance. The only limit is the person's creativity.

Imagine how this will delight visitors, who come to see outrageous costumes, and disappoint critics, who say Halloween is just another excuse for the drunken students to go on a rampage.

This should be the year that Halloween comes full circle, back to the fun-loving days of an impromptu street party, where entertainment and creativity were the order of the day.

Thanks for safe Halloween

WE WANT to say thanks to all those who have worked over the past few years in general, and the last year in particular to make this year's festival a success.

The Public Relations Student Society of America, one of the premier chapters in the country, has evolved a safety campaign that goes beyond public service announcements and images.

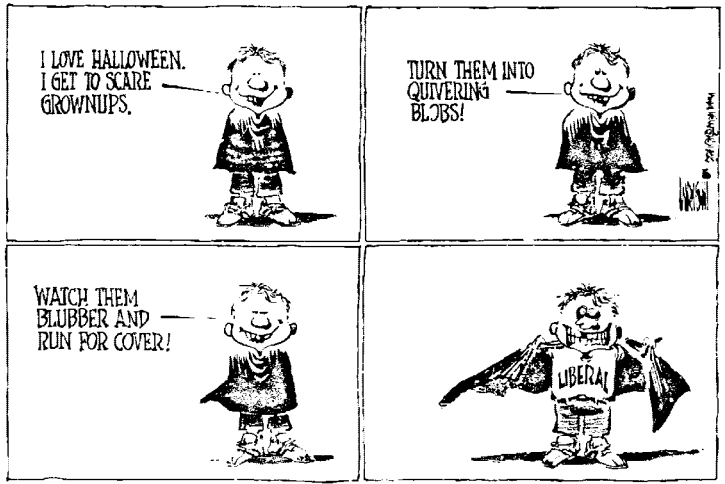

The students work hard each Halloween weekend, directing lost souls, comforting those who did not take their advice to drink in moderation, and generally provide a place for someone to get away from all the craziness of the celebration.

THE UNIVERSITY. Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau and the town's liquor distributors have donated the $10,500 budget for the safety and first aid tents and the safety campaign. The Chamber of Commerce and Theater Guild are sponsoring a Haunted House. The Chamber is providing prizes for the costume contest, and sponsoring two nights of musical entertainment on Grand Avenue.

Other students groups have been involved also. Campus Ministries, The Newman Center and the Wesley Center are providing alcohol-free events.

The city will provide a great deal of support, security and cleanup crews.

This shows that the whole community is coming together behind the celebration, not to stifle it, but to make it as safe as possible. These people and organizations should be commended for their efforts.

How gaudy! How vulgar! How cruel! Liberals distribute dirty propaganda

MY CONSERVATIVE friend Grump was scowling even more than usual. His skin was livid and his hands shook so violently that his martini spilled.

"An outrage," he said, "an absolute outrage."

What happened? Did the bartender forget to add the twist?

"Not my drink," Grump said. "It's those liberal, pinko Democrats."

What are the scoundrels up to now?

"This," he said, slamming a pamphlet on the bar. "Scurrilous campaign literature. Look at it."

I studied it and fully agreed with him. It was disgusting.

IT SHOWED a picture of a grinning George Bush, holding a squash racket in one hand, and a gin and tonic in the other. He was wearing a Yale cap and a t-shirt that said: "Beat Harvard, Boola Boola, Boola Boola!"

But even worse was the big, black headline above the picture.

It said: "The Lazy Rich Vote for Bush. Greedy Wall Street Tycoons Vote for Bush. Money Grubbing Bankers Vote for Bush. People Who Live in Big Mansions and Ride Limousines Vote for Bush."

And beneath it was a message that said:

"Friends: It is a known fact that almost all women who wear mink coats will vote for George Bush. Do you have a mink coat?"

"AND IT IS a known fact that the members of the most exclusive golf clubs, especially those who give cheap tips to their caddies, will vote for George Bush. Do you belong to an exclusive country club and stuff your caddy?"

"It is a known fact that most cruel factory owners who put cheap toilet tissue in employees' washrooms will vote for Bush. Do you prefer cheap toilet tissue?"

"If George Bush is elected president, rich women will have more mink coats, more caddies will be stuffed, and you will get an even cheaper grade of toilet tissue."

"Is this what you want for America? The choice is yours on Nov. 8."

Shaking my head in disgust, I handed it back to Grump.

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

It is a known fact that most cruel factory owners who put cheap toilet tissue in employees' washrooms will vote for Bush. Do you prefer cheap toilet tissue?

"Have you ever seen anything this low?" he bellowed.

NEVER. IT IS the depths of political mudslinging.

"It is worse than that," Grump said, waving it over his head. "It is garbage, garbage, garbage."

Exactly, I said. That's the word I was groping for, garbage.

"Total distortion. A squash racket. Can you imagine that? Everybody knows tennis is his game."

Absolute disregard for the truth.

"And that shirt that says 'Boola Boola, Boola Boola.'"

Are they implying that he speaks Swahili?

"No, idiot, that is Yale's fight song. But he never sings it during campaign appearances or while attending funerals of foreign potentates. Only while showering."

What a low blow.

"AND THE SHEER gall of liberal Democrats even mentioning mink coats. Do you know who owns most of the mink coats in this country?"

Who?

"Welfare mothers, that's who. They sell their food stamps and buy mink coats. Everybody knows that."

Yes, I've heard of such goings-on.

"And this nonsense about underdipping our caddies. An absolute lie. At my club, most of us ride golf carts. Do you know why? Because the lower classes have become too lazy to caddy. They prefer idling about and having babies to carrying our clubs and earning an honest dollar."

How true. This is the dirtiest campaign trash ever.

"As for the quality of toilet tissue, do you know what it costs these days? Besides, a coarser brand builds character and inspires ambition. Encourages a fellow to move off the assembly line and into the managerial ranks. You don't hear the Japanese workers complaining about their toilet tissue, do you?"

GREAT WORKERS. They're glad to make do with dry seaweed.

"Right. And what galls me most is that this kind of trash is being distributed by the party of liberal murderers, rapists and fiends."

Exactly. As well as liberal porch climbers, second story men and huocap thieves.

"Not to even mention the liberal smash and grabbers, pickpockets, shoplifters, gold chain pluckers and schoolyard flashers."

And don't forget the liberal pimps, panderers, procurers and philanthropers.

"Yes, and they are joined by the liberal bus station perverts, tree-climbing window-peepers, and the porno house matinee crowd."

Liberals all.

"But as low as they are, I didn't think they could sink to these depths. I am going to call upon Dukakis to apologize and denounce this material."

A DECENT MAN wouldn't hesitate. But I doubt if he will.

"Then Bush must come out and call it exactly what it is in the strongest of terms."

Garbage?

"Stronger than that. It is doo-doo."

You're right. He should kick a little bottom.

"I'm sure he will. Well, I'm off to my club."

Boola Boola
"And Boola Boola to you."

Police Blotter

Three University students were charged with underage possession of alcohol Wednesday and released with notice to appear in Carbondale City Court, Sgt. Robert Drake, SIU-C Security said.

Police said Martin Fullington, freshman in construction technology, Dean Jansen, freshman in architectural technology, and Arthur Williams, freshman in architectural technology, were charged with underage possession and were released with notice to appear Nov. 7 in Carbondale City Court.

SIU-C Security observed Fullington, 18, Jansen, 18, and Williams, 19, drinking, police said. The three were seen running and kicking a vehicle in Lot 106 on S. Wall St., at 1:35 a.m. Wednesday, Drake said.

Three University students were charged and arrested with criminal trespassing on state property Tuesday morning, Sgt. Robert Drake, SIU-C Security said Christopher Abbott, sophomore in pre-major, Steve Bylinowski, sophomore in finance, and Raymond Trepanier, junior in speech communication reportedly trespassed on state property at Small's Fruit Farm, west of Tower Road on Chautauqua Road, Drake said.

SIU-C Security responded to a call at 9 a.m. Tuesday that someone was trespassing on the property and was asked to leave but did not, Drake said. Officers found the three men in an orchard 800 yards east of a barn on the property, Drake said.

The men voluntarily allowed police to search their vehicle, Drake said. The officers found empty gun cases in the vehicle. Police then found two shotguns behind the barn, Drake said.

Abbott, 22, Bylinowski, 20, and Trepanier, 22, each posted $100 bond and were released to appear Nov. 16 in Jackson County Court.

give a proper burial for the man."

Miley's decapitated body was found April 9 in the trunk of his car near Rocky Comfort Road in Union County. The head has not been recovered.

Nitz's wife Rita also has been charged with three counts of first degree murder and one count of concealing a homicide.

Garnati said Nitz is "evil" for hiding Miley's head and for slandering Danny Walker who Nitz accused of killing Miley.

"Danny Walker has got to live with this accusation," Garnati said. "He's got to go around Southern Illinois" with the accusation hanging over him.

In the trial Nitz accused Walker of committing the murder of Miley a week after Walker and one other prosecution witness testified that Nitz told them he had killed a homosexual and cut off his head.

Garnati has based his case on the idea that Nitz was motivated to kill Miley because Nitz has a deep aversion to homosexuals.

Wednesday he brought this idea out more fully as he presented evidence not directly related to Miley's death, but which painted Nitz as the leader of the "Trog" club. Witnesses testified that the club was a motorcycle club that also persecuted homosexuals who congregated in the parking lots at Crab Orchard Lake near Nitz's trailer.

Michael Miley's brother Mark, Lawrence S. Weiss and James R. McClure testified that without provocation Nitz and two others threatened them with baseball bats and damaged their vehicles and radios on a May 1987 evening. Nitz was later convicted of a misdemeanor criminal destruction of property over the incident.

The hearing ended with Lowery asking Nitz if he wanted to comment before sentencing was passed.

Nitz replied, "No your honor I'll just save that for an appellate court," then more quietly added, "I'll be back."

Lowery left an expectant courtroom deflated when he announced recess until 10 a.m. today.

pledge on the release of political prisoners, President Reagan said in Washington he had heard the reports and, "I'm hoping that's true and will happen."

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said, "We welcome this report as evidence that the Soviet leadership recognizes the importance of releasing all political prisoners now held in the Soviet Union. We look forward to actual release of these prisoners."

Asked how many prisoners there might be regarded as political, Kohl and Genscher indicated there were lists in the West that would be consulted.

The Soviets claim to be holding less than a dozen people convicted of "political offenses," but the dissident Democratic Union says the number is closer to 400.

Redman said the State Department had a list of more than 200 Soviet citizens in labor camps, prisons and psychiatric institutions. The prisoners include those convicted of "anti-Soviet slander" and "trumped up charges," Redman said.

The Helsinki Watch group in New York says there are 234 documented political prisoners in the Soviet Union.

"But the deal will probably involve about 50 — those whom the Soviets regard as political prisoners, and they have a narrow definition of what that means," said Cathy Fitzpatrick, research director for the human rights group.

"The Soviets make these very splashy announcements, but really you have to monitor how they turn out," she said.

The West German chancellor, who promised to make human rights a major point of discussion during his six meetings with Gorbachev, underlined his concern for the issue by visiting with Nobel Peace Prize winner and human rights activist Andrei Sakharov Tuesday.

Kohl said the release of political prisoners in the Soviet Union was part of a Soviet effort to create the proper conditions and atmosphere that could allow Moscow to host a human rights conference in the early 1990s after similar sessions in Paris and Copenhagen.

Bush's campaign a slick media event

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

MOUNT VERNON — Barbara Bush walked through the door, past about 20 people from the media in a roped off area to her right, and went directly to sign a book for an admirer.

She began to work her way down a row of people making a hook rug at the facility, designed to help disabled people get into the work force.

The fourth person in line, A.J. Allen, showed the wife of the Republican presidential candidate a picture of them together at an earlier meeting.

Making sure to stand toward the cameras, but never looking at them, she said, "Here we are, old friends. When did we do this?"

"That's me," A.J. replied, pointing at the photograph Bush now held in her hand.

She smiled, almost laughed, and said, "And that's me." She gave A.J. a hug before working her way further down the line.

It's another example of the slick operation known as the Republican presidential campaign, the same campaign that transformed George Bush from a wiry without a personal personality into a fighter, a strong man with a vision and a dedication to making life better for the average man.

That same image is being projected onto Barbara Bush. Her entire visit here was extremely well choreographed and slick.

There were ropes keeping the media from interfering. A great deal of effort went into keeping the event from looking like what it was — an event prepared to make for good pictures and television spots.

Showing support for disabled

programs by visiting such a facility is good — good for the facilities and the campaign.

But in the process, she tried to make it look as though the media just happened upon her visit to the facility.

After greeting all the people working on the rug, she went to a table directly behind it where a sign language discussion was going on.

Making sure to stand at an angle convenient for the media, she spoke to the people in sign language.

Then she walked around to the opposite side of the table so she could sit facing the media and talked in sign language.

On the portion of the round table facing the media, no one sat, ensuring a clear opening for cameras to get shots of Barbara Bush having a talk in sign language.

She spent a little time talking to people reading the newspaper searching for jobs suited to them, and to people using a computer program in which pictures are matched with words.

Then she went into the kitchen to mix some dough for chocolate mint chip cookies.

It was all planned. Workers at the facility could tell you what she would do next. A bowl of already-mixed dough sat on a table for Bush to work until enough time had been given the media for pictures.

Then she left and went back to the airport, where she hugged a young child and boarded her plane, but not before turning around for one last wave — and one last photo opportunity.

Saturday lock-in at Rec

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Campus Ministries is providing a non-alcoholic alternative to the strip this Halloween with a Saturday night lock-in at the Recreation Center.

According to Campus Ministries president Karen Knott, the Rec Center will batten down its hatches at 7 p.m. Saturday.

"Whoever is outside when we lock the doors stays outside. No one will be allowed in after 7. We don't want people wandering in and out just to use the bathroom."

"Whoever is inside may stay as long as they like," Knott said. Students will be free to leave the party anytime they please.

All students, regardless of their religion, are invited.

Volleyball, racquetball and ping pong tournaments will highlight the evening's festivities, according to Bob Gray, activities chairperson for Campus Ministries.

The pool will remain open until 8 p.m., Gray said.

Students will not be allowed into the Rec Center after 7 p.m. Saturday night.

Buddy Goldammer, assistant director of Intramural Sports, said the Rec Center only will be able to staff the party until 10 p.m.

The Newman Center, one of the 13 organizations involved in Campus Ministries, will take charge of the inter-faith Halloween celebration.

From 10 p.m. to midnight, the Newman Center will offer chili, live music, dancing and fellowship, Gray said.

Dan Farroll of the Newman Center said certain groups in Campus Ministries might not wish to participate in the dancing and secular music because of religious beliefs.

Some groups may prefer to witness about Jesus to revelers on the strip, he said.

As for Friday night, organizations in Campus Ministries each will sponsor individual group functions, Knott said.

"This is the first year we've ever done this, so we want to see how it goes first before trying it both nights of Halloween," Knott said.

Reagan: Bush talking issues

President defends Bush's relentless campaign strategy

BALTIMORE (UPI) — In the bitter feud over the negative tone of Campaign '88, President Reagan rose Wednesday to the defense of George Bush, insisting that "Republicans are talking about the issues and the American people are listening."

On a mission to raise badly needed campaign funds for underdog Senate candidate Alan Keyes, Reagan dismissed Democratic charges that Vice President Bush's campaign has attacked Michael Dukakis with distortions and outright lies.

"You know," he said, "George took quite a shellacking when the liberals had their party in Atlanta this summer. But he stood the fire and all he did was cite the record — his and theirs. And now they're squealing. He's running a negative campaign."

"Well, I think they're squirming because George has shown America how far outside the mainstream they really are."

Consistent with the theme he has sounded for weeks on the campaign trail, Reagan hammered away at the issues of crime, drugs and patriotism in ripping into the liberalism of the Democratic ticket, from top to bottom.

The $1,000-a-person fundraiser, intended to bankroll a last-ditch effort by Keyes to upset two-term Democratic Sen. Paul Sarbanes, also saw Reagan caution against overconfidence in warning that "these last two weeks are critical."

With polls giving Bush an enlarged lead over Dukakis, even in Democratic Maryland, Reagan told the Keyes contributors, "Your financial support is important, but it's your blood and sweat and tears that will make the difference come Nov. 8."

Admonitions aside, Reagan portrayed the Democrats as on the run as a result of a relentless barrage of attacks from Bush and the GOP.

Dukakis ignores polls, Bush: Race not over

United Press International

Democrat Michael Dukakis, searching Wednesday for a new spark to his campaign, pleaded for the people, not the pollsters, to decide the election and Republican George Bush, insisting he does not have the race locked up, charged Democrats are wrong to say he only would help the wealthy.

With most polls showing the vice president holding a double-digit lead over the Massachusetts governor, Dukakis tried to shore up support among Hispanics, attending a Denver breakfast meeting with Hispanic leaders from 14 states.

"The pollsters will not call this election. The people will," Dukakis said after the breakfast. "We go forth for the next 13 days with a determination to work and to win."

But Dukakis had no comment when asked repeatedly to House chief of staff and treasury secretary, would run the State Department for Bush. However, the vice president refused to start naming names.

"I think it may be against the law; I'm not sure about that," Bush said. "There's a rule about promising appointments and all of this that I think is appropriate. Secondly ... to respond to questions of that nature conveys a sense of overconfidence that I do not feel."

"I will appoint someone as secretary of state in a broad qualifications sense who's had experience in international affairs and who understands the world as it really is," Bush said.

The vice president also rebutted charges from Dukakis that his economic policies, especially his plan to restore a capital gains tax break, would benefit the wealthy at the expense of the poor and middle class.

"Let's get beyond the rhetoric. Let's cut through the demagoguery. America is No. 1. The question is how to keep it that way," Bush said at a speech before the Economic Club of Detroit.

"Unfortunately, my opponent's only experience with business is regulating it and taxing it," he said. "He's never run a business. He's never met a payroll. He doesn't understand how when you're starting out, you need people to join you in taking a risk. So he paints my (capital gains tax) proposal as an effort to help the rich. Wrong."

Bush contends that restoring the tax break would spur investment and actually raise government revenue. Dukakis argues that only the very rich would benefit and the tax break would be paid by the middle class and poor.

"I believe ... that the link between low tax rates and economic growth is simply undeniable," Bush said. "But despite the certifiable success of our tax cuts in unleashing this longest recovery in our history, my opponent thinks they were a disaster."

The vice president argued that taking steps that would stall the nation's economic growth would mostly hurt the assess his performance on ABC's "Nightline" Tuesday. The candidate, who seemed stiff and broke no new ground in the appearance, is trying to use network television interviews to boost his effort in the waning days of the general election campaign.

Dukakis plans to be interviewed live on the "CBS Evening News" today, his running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, was scheduled to be interviewed on the same program Wednesday.

However, Dukakis — who unveiled another set of commercials with the theme "He's On Your Side" — appears to be having little success in gaining on Bush with only 13 days to go to the Nov. 8 election.

While nationwide polls show Bush leading in double digits and Electoral College surveys hint at a GOP landslide, new polls found a surprising Bush edge in two traditionally Democratic states — by 9 points in Maryland and by 5 points in Rhode Island.

Bush, in Detroit before heading to South Dakota and Montana, tried to guard against appearing overconfident when pressed about who he would choose as secretary of state if he wins.

It is widely rumored that the campaign Chairman James Baker, the former White House

Bush pushes campaign despite lead

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (SHNS) — George Bush claims he is running his presidential campaign like an underdog, but his schedule and st. Je show a candidate with a comfortable lead who is taking no chances.

Bush has been steadily increasing his lead in national polls since the Oct. 13 debate with Democrat Michael Dukakis, and most surveys now indicate his margin over Dukakis is in the double digits.

Bush's lead in the Electoral College, which actually elects the president — is even more solid because of his irrepugnable base in the South and West.

Privately, his aides — and all but the most partisan Democrats — think Bush has a lock on enough electoral votes to be elected, barring an event of unforeseen proportions.

Nevertheless, all week Bush has told audiences, "I'm going to continue to run like I'm 10 points behind across the country."

He's certainly not resting, but his schedule, speech topics and refusal to appear at forums that might be even the least risky show a candidate who has put his campaign vehicle in cruise control.

South Dakota, which has only three electoral votes, would not even be on the schedule if the race were close. Bush aides concede. As it is, Bush has several appearances scheduled this week in small states that would be skipped in a heated battle.

"As the polls trend better it gives us more flexibility to go into other states," explains Bush national field director Jim Wray. "These are states we... might not have been able to spend time in" if the race was closer.

"The numbers look so good in several (major) states. They are looking at another tier of states to try and capture," said Republican National Committee political director Chris Bowman.

Economic issues net Dukakis votes

Workers in Decatur ready for change

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Kathleen Best
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

DECATUR, Ill. — The Reagan Democrats of Precinct 64 may be coming home this November.

For two consecutive elections, this predominantly Democratic, working class neighborhood in Decatur has given slim majorities to Ronald Reagan while voting for Democrats seeking lesser offices.

But behind the doors of the one-story bungalows along Cushing and Center streets this year are a lot of worried — and frustrated — people.

A few say they are so turned off by politics and government that they won't vote at all.

"Me and my wife are going to skip this year," said a young, sandy-haired man who refused give his name. "Either way you look, there's not much to see."

Some are so turned off by politics and government that they won't vote at all.

BUT AMONG those who do plan to go to the polls and have already made up their minds, Michael Dukakis, the Democratic nominee, appears to be the candidate of choice, although a reluctant one.

"It's not that I like Dukakis, it's that I dislike (Republican George) Bush more," said Merle Waggoner, a retired grandmother.

Gary Meyers, a bearded man in his mid-40s, said his decision was simple: "I don't have a good job at all. I only get $4.50 an hour. That's why I'm thinking about Dukakis."

Waggoner, the 63-year-old retiree, said the "biggest issue" for her was the federal budget deficit and how the country will pay for it.

"THIS IS a terrible thing we're doing to our children and grandchildren," she said. "We're on Social Security to pay off that debt."

For Bessie Meece, employment, health care and child care are the issues of the day. "It irks me to have them spending so much money for defense," she said. "Defense is one thing, offense is another. I see so much poverty, so many people ill that can't have a decent life. I'm not excited about him (Dukakis.) But I'm probably going to vote for him," Meece, a widowed great-grandmother, said. "Something's got to change."

Linda Hector, a 46-year-old caterer, said she voted for Reagan in 1984. "But the economy has made me change back," the self-described Democrat said. "Unemployment really scares us."

THE ECONOMY of Decatur, a blue-collar city of 94,000 in central Illinois, is closely tied to the agriculture, automobile and construction industries. As a result, it was hit hard by the recession of the early 1980s and has been slow to recover.

In 1987, unemployment topped 11.5 percent. And though Caterpillar and other manufacturers have been on the mend in recent months, the jobless level in August hovered at 8.6 percent.

Ron Garrett, a 27-year-old welder, has a full-time job. But even working, he said, his family of four lives below the poverty level. He and his wife, Carol, used to tell their friends proudly that they voted for Ronald Reagan. But this year, they will vote for Dukakis.

"THIS WORLD is really in bad shape," said Carol Garrett, 25. "Look at the deficit. I'm not going to have to pay that, my kids are."

"And we need to control (foreign) trade. Even what they call American cars aren't really made in America anymore. We're buying everything from foreign countries."

"We need new ideas," her husband said. Bush is not the man to produce them, he said. "I don't trust him."

But the concerns of this neighborhood stretch beyond the economy. Crime is also on people's minds, and Bush seems to be doing well among those who cite that as the No. 1 issue of 1988.

"I'M A registered Democrat but I'm voting for Bush," said an elderly woman on Center Street who declined to give her name. "He's more for what I believe in," she said. "We need laws that take care of criminals, give the death penalty to murderers. Our prisons are full."

Her daughter, a childhood education worker who also declined to be identified, said Bush had more experience to lead the country. "He's been there. And between the two, he's a better choice," she said.

Education funding increase debated

Board considers new distribution of tax revenue

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

The effects of increasing state funding for education were debated Wednesday at a government advisory board meeting at Carbondale City Hall.

"A commitment has to come from the federal government to support education," Larry Woolard, Chairman of the Williamson County Board of Commissioners, said.

Although Woolard said that "income tax is a fair means of collecting school funds," he added that he doesn't want to see taxes raised in Williamson County because the tax burden on the people is heavy enough already.

Lowell Heller, Murphysboro Township Assessor, agreed with Woolard that education was taking a big bite out of the real estate tax.

Pinkneyville Mayor Joe Holder, representing the Southern Illinois Mayors Association, stressed that income tax should take a more predominant role in stabilizing city economies by offsetting the high real estate tax.

"A commitment has to come from the federal government to support education."

—Larry Woolard

Don Brewer, Regional Superintendent of Education for Jackson and Perry Counties, said it is up to the state legislature to fulfill its constitutional obligation by providing a majority of educational funding to the local levels.

Brewer cited a 1985 legislative move to increase state education funding by $250 million. The measure failed and actually resulted in less funding.

"Our local systems need the autonomy to administer school funds as we see necessary, without state interference. Don't tell us to add more curriculum on fewer dollars," Brewer said.

"Don't tell us to add more curriculum on fewer dollars."

—Don Brewer

The advisory board agreed with Brewer that, ideally, the state should provide for the basics of public education, while local governments have the responsibility to fund "frills" such as extra curricular activities and specialized classes.

Brewer noted that if Illinois would increase funding to an average of $5,000 per student, local governments would be able to shoulder the burden of funding extra curricular activities.

State Comptroller Roland Burris brought the hearing, the last in a series of four, to Southern Illinois in order to gather input on the issue of state funding for local governments.

Richard Loman, C.P.A., a member of the comptroller's Local Government Advisory Board, highlighted Burris' dedication in personally attending each meeting and confronting local government officials.

Upon returning to Springfield, the advisory board will compare testimonies gathered from around the state and propose legislative changes concerning how state funding and local revenue could be better distributed.

Diamond found in ovaries

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — A surgeon removed a cyst from a patient's body and found a diamond inside instead of the cancer that her family feared.

The patient, Virginia Argue of Roseville, guessed from her hospital bed Tuesday that the diamond may have been dropped into her reproductive tract by a careless doctor or nurse during the Caesarean birth of her daughter, Sharon, 52 years ago.

The four-faceted stone, one-eighth of an inch across, was removed from her ovary last week at Roseville Community Hospital.

Her husband, Rollo, agreed with the theory.

"That's when this jewel, whatever it is, fell in there," he said. "That's the only way it could happen."

He said since that 1936 birth in a Covina hospital, his wife's body has been building a cyst around it.

Rollo Argue said he will have the stone mounted on black onyx so his wife can wear it on a necklace.

Rollo Argue said he first heard about the diamond from Dr. Harold Burton when the physician emerged from the operating room.

"He was smiling and saying, 'There's no cancer but guess what? He held up this glass container with a diamond in it.'"

Burton said: "It's got to be real unusual. She was quite lucky not to have cancer, and she was extra lucky to have a diamond."

Hospital spokeswoman Barbara Little said gems have been found in patients' bodies before but "usually not in that area. A lot of times individuals will swallow or inhale foreign objects but not often are you going to find something of that nature in a cyst."

Dance show to feature jazz, ballet

An evening of ballet, jazz and modern dance will be held at 8 p.m. Nov. 4 in Shryock Auditorium.

Dance Expresso, sponsored by the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater of the Department of Physical Education, will feature student and faculty choreography.

Some of the performances of the night will include liturgical ballets, "Blues in Motion," and "Dedicated to Freedom."

The Susan Barnes Dance Company, comprised of young dancers from the area, will be guest performers at the concert.

Tickets for the performance are $4 and may be purchased at the Student Center ticket office or at the door the evening of the performance.

Astronomers find energetic pulsar wind

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A star that is spinning like a figure-skater, 3,000 light years from Earth, has given scientists their first evidence of a pulsar wind born of galactic shock waves, it was reported Wednesday.

The pulsar, a whirling star that makes a complete rotation every 1.6 milliseconds, is surrounded by a halo of hydrogen gas that scientists at the California Institute of Technology surmise is the luminescent evidence of the pulsar wind.

"This pulsar is giving off high velocity wind composed of very energetic particles. The star is pushing wind out of its way," explained J. Jeff Hester, co-author of the discovery reported in the current issue of the British journal Nature.

The wind itself is composed of the very particles of which "the solar system, all of the planets and even people are made," said Hester, noting the hydrogen, helium, nitrogen and carbon composition he and his colleagues detected.

The hydrogen, carbon and nitrogen components are the basic elements of DNA and amino acids, the basic building blocks of proteins in plants and animals.

Hester said in an interview the finding is significant because the pulsar is an ancient astrophysical object and part of a two-star system. The pulsar, noted for its characteristic radio signals that sweep across the heavens like a beacon, receives the extra torque that drives its spin from the companion star that continually dumps energy into it.

Because so little is known about pulsars, the new finding about the wind flow generated by the star adds yet another item in the growing catalogue of data on pulsars whose cores are estimated to be billions of degrees hot.

The first pulsar, Hester explained, was pinpointed by astronomers just 21 years ago.

AIDS risk low for health workers, study reveals

BOSTON (UPI) — Health workers face little danger of being infected with the AIDS virus by caring for victims of the deadly disease and could reduce their risk even further by taking more precautions, researchers reported Wednesday.

In a study involving 1,201 health care workers who were exposed to the AIDS virus by patients from 1983 through July, researchers at the Federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta found only four were infected with the virus.

"We conclude that the risk of HIV infection after exposure to the blood of a patient infected with HIV is low," the researchers wrote in reporting their findings in The New England Journal of Medicine.

HIV, which stands for human immunodeficiency virus, causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which destroys the body's ability to fight infection.

The researchers also found that more than a third of the incidents in which the workers were exposed to the AIDS virus, such as through accidental needle sticks, could have been prevented.

In an accompanying study, researchers followed a group of 2,002 workers at the Mama Yemo Hospital in Kinshasa, Zaire, from 1984 to 1986 and found that while a high percentage were infected, there was no evidence they became infected on the job, even though precautionary measures were lax.

Doctors look to cut down number of Caesarean section deliveries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors, reversing a long-held position, called Wednesday for fewer repeat Caesarean section births and advised women who have undergone the surgery to try normal delivery in future pregnancies.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists issued guidelines to the medical profession to end the dictum "once a 'C' section, always a 'C' section," which it said has been the rule in obstetrics since 1916.

"For the first time in 70 years in this country, it is no longer the routine that patients who had a Caesarean section should have a repeat Caesarean section," said Dr. Mary Jo O'Sullivan, a professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Miami in Florida.

Unless there is a pressing medical need, normal delivery should be attempted to cut down on unnecessary and somewhat risky surgery, medical costs and hospital stays, O'Sullivan told a news conference.

A normal delivery costs about $2,000 compared to $4,000 for a Caesarean section, medical experts said.

Of the more than 3.7 million babies born each year in the United States, public health officials estimate 24 percent are delivered by Caesarean, and one in three are repeat operations.

A Caesarean section involves making an incision in a woman's lower abdomen and into the uterus, through which the baby is delivered.

"Very frequently, women select 'C sections' because they want to avoid the pain of labor," O'Sullivan said.

These risks, common to any major surgery using general anesthesia, include infection and respiratory complications. Data also indicates a slight increase in the mortality of babies delivered by Caesarean section, O'Sullivan said, and a woman's recovery takes up to five days.

Firm withdraws abortion pill to avoid consumers' boycott

PARIS (UPI) — The French drug company Roussel Uclaf halted distribution of its abortion pill RU 486 in France and China Wednesday because of pressure from right-to-life groups threatening to boycott company products.

Family planning proponents immediately condemned the decision as a return to the Middle Ages.

The company, which began distributing the pill for testing in more than 100 certified abortion clinics in France last month, said it was halting distribution because of "a sector of public opinion in France and abroad, and the debate over its possible use to voluntarily interrupt pregnancy."

The firm said it also was stopping distribution of RU 486 in China, where it had been approved for marketing.

RU 486 is one of a group of drugs known as anti-progesterones that are being tested as possible abortion pills. Tested more extensively than the others, it was the only one approved for distribution anywhere.

RU 486 is one of a group of drugs known as anti-progesterones that are being tested as possible abortion pills.

"It's a product that raises a lot of moral problems," said Dr. Arlette Geslin, director of medical relations at Roussel's laboratory. "Certain people call it a killer drug."

The drug brings on abortion in 95 percent of pregnant women who take it along with the drug prostaglandine, Geslin said. It was introduced under strict controls after receiving the approval of the Health Ministry last month.

Geslin said RU 486 was being administered by the test clinics as a safer alternative to conventional abortions. The company had hoped to start marketing it after another few months of clinical tests, she said.

Dr. John Willke, president of the National Right to Life Committee in Washington, said he was pleased by the decision on the drug, which he called "chemical warfare on the unborn."

"I'm very pleased," Willke said. "It demonstrates the depth and commitment of the opposition to abortion worldwide. It will save a lot of babies' lives."

"I hope it's the end of RU 486," he said. "It would be a great and wonderful thing for the babies of the world and their mothers if this is the last we hear of it."

Willke said the company's decision was at least partly based on boycott threats and other pressure anti-abortionists put on the French government and Roussel Uclaf's parent company, Hoechst AG of Frankfurt, West Germany.

"Our director decided it was simply not worth the risk," Geslin said.

S. Africans share polls in election

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Blacks, whites, Indians and South Africans of mixed race voted on the same day for the first time Wednesday in heavily guarded municipal elections testing support for President Pieter W. Botha's policies of limited racial reform.

The extent of a church-backed call for a boycott of the elections was blurred by 10 days of advance voting and 5-year-old voter registration lists, but government radio said the turnout was "appreciably higher" among all race groups than in previous polls.

An estimated 1.4 million blacks and 1.6 million whites, more than 300,000 Indians and an undetermined number of "coloreds," or those of mixed race, were eligible to vote for the 1,126 municipal bodies.

Polling stations were scheduled to close between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m., with initial results expected before midnight (5 p.m. CDT).

Transport officials reported sporadic attacks Wednesday morning on buses and trains in the sprawling black township of Soweto and black areas of Durban by stone-throwing mobs supporting a national day of protest.

Department of Education officials also reported a boycott in Soweto that left schools virtually empty.

Cult activity rising in Illinois

Satanic rituals blamed for grave robberies, animal deaths

United Press International

Satanic cult activity, from so-called satanic graffiti to draining blood from animals, is on the rise in central Illinois, police officials and clergymen said Wednesday.

Perhaps sparked by the Halloween season and an increased awareness about the occult, law enforcement officials are beginning to re-examine seemingly harmless and unrelated events.

"We're paying a little more attention to things like fires set in churches and grave desecrations," said Juvenile Detective Kevin Kerwan of the Peoria Police Department. "Before, things were looked at as a prank. But now we're looking at these things as connected cult activities. We overlooked a lot of stuff in the past when we didn't know what we were looking at."

The Peoria Journal Star, in Wednesday morning's editions, carried a story estimating that up to 500 teenagers are believed to be involved in satanic cults in central Illinois.

The newspaper said at least one suicide and a number of grave robberies and animal deaths can be attributed to the cults. Police sources told the Journal Star animals have been slaughtered by cult members in Bureau, Mason, Menard and Schuyler counties. There were also reports of satanic graffiti on roads and overpasses in Fulton, Henry, Knox, Mason, Marshall and Woodford counties.

Detective Glenda Hollis of the Peoria Police Department said activities that could be attributed to satanic cults are nothing new to the small town just south of Peoria.

Last Halloween, a dead cat was found on one of Peoria's rural roads. The incident was commonplace, except that the cat had been skinned and its blood was completely drained.

"That cat was definitely not run over," Hollis said.

"Most of these kids are doing it as a form of experimentation," said Hollis. "It's fun for them. It mostly leads to problems in the family."

Father Steven Rohlf, Vice

Chancellor of the Peoria Catholic Diocese, said satanic cults differ from so-called personality cults. He said personality cults take some aspect of the truth to an illogical extreme. These cults are usually led by a strong, charismatic figure.

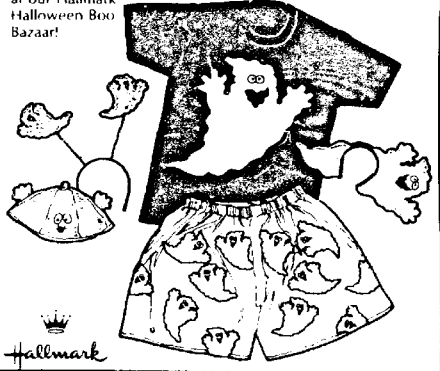

Satanic cults, Rohlf said, differ widely. While some believe in the actual being of Satan, others worship the symbol of evil that Satan conjures. The common ingredient of these cults, he said, is a "love for evil."

"It's a misguided search for happiness," Rohlf said. "They think Satan, or this type of cult activity, will bring them happiness. Most of them are confused and not really evil. And we pray for them."

Robert Simandi, head of the Chicago Police Department's Gang-Intelligence Division, recently spoke to about 200 police officers, juvenile workers and counselors at Illinois Central College.

Population growth slows as more migrate out of state

URBANA (UPI) — Out-migration — people leaving Illinois — is increasing as the young and college-educated seek jobs elsewhere while the state's population growth rate shrinks, a pair of University of Illinois sociologists said Wednesday.

Andrew J. Sofranko, who recently completed a population study of the Midwest with sociologist John van Es and Mark Plotow, also conclude that population growth during the first half of the 1980s was almost negligible.

"A consequence of these trends is the selective loss of persons in the young adult age groups and reductions in the formation of new households," van Es said. "While these conditions may be reversed over time, there is not much evidence that will occur in Illinois during the 1980s. We find that the trends are continuing to deepen."

Some relief has been provided by a natural increase in Illinois' population during the 1980s, which amounted to an additional 426,294 people between 1980 and 1985. Nearly half of that figure was in Cook County.

But between 1980 and 1987, Illinois lost 420,000 people due to out-migration. Sofranko said that total exceeded all 19 years of the previous decade by 40,000 people.

"These migrants are typically in the younger, working-age groups," he said. "They are better educated and have more marketable skills. It appears that the present high out-migration rate for Illinois will not subside until the state's employment climate changes."

New players blend in at practice

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

No news is good news for men's basketball coach Rich Herrin, who reports that the first week of practice ran very smoothly.

"Everything is going good and the intensity level is up," Herrin said. "We are picking up things quickly and things are going better than we expected. The players are working for playing time now."

Herrin said the Salukis are working on a lot of fundamentals right now.

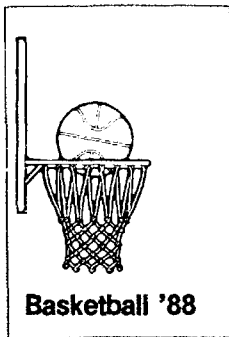

"The players have great talent but don't always rely on the little things. All the players have developed bad habits over the off-season so we have to drill and drill and drill."

The Salukis are focusing on their improved inside game, and Herrin said things are going well.

"There are times Kai (Nurnberger) kicks it in to (Tony) Harvey, who throws it back out until we can get it in again. It is a good pattern to have."

Harvey, the Salukis' 6-11 freshman, said he is working hard to adapt to the new surroundings.

"I knew there would be a lot more running than high school, but I am adapting and doing the best I can," Harvey said. "It is basically what I expected. Coach Herrin is a lot like my high school coach."

Basketball '88

The offense the Salukis are working on is not that difficult to pick up, Harvey said.

"It takes a little patience and you have to pay attention while Coach is teaching. (Randy) House, (Rick) Shipley and Kai have been a lot of help. If I'm not in the right spot they will send me to the right one."

Transfer guard Freddie McSwain, a 6-4 junior, said he really notices the level of competition at practice.

"Everyone is coming around," McSwain said. "It is getting more intense as time goes and we are beginning to respect each other more. It is always hard to learn, but we are gradually coming along. Everyone is doing what the coaches expect of them."

Saluki forward Jerry Jones, a 6-6 junior transfer from Texas-El Paso, said the going is a bit difficult since he sat out all last season while going through the transfer process.

"I'm kind of rusty, but I'm picking up on the plays and remembering more as I go," Jones said. "As you play, a lot of it becomes routine, and sitting out a year hurts."

Jones said assistant coach Bobby McCullum, who works with the Salukis' inside people, has given him a big boost.

"All the coaches have helped out, but Coach McCullum really works with me and picks up on my little mistakes and tells me about them."

Senior guard Kai Nurnberger said the team is coming together well considering the number of new people involved with the program.

"They are looking pretty good right now," Nurnberger said. "When you come into a new program there are always some adjustments, but they are catching on. This is not really a hard offense we are working with."

that fluke."

De la Sierra said Bookout's biggest problem is his tendency to kick too high.

"Actually, he gets under the ball. He is used to kicking it up high, but that gives up distance. We tell him just to drive through."

Head coach Rick Rhoades said Bookout has handled pressure situations well this season, thanks in part to his maturity.

"He is very mature,"

Rhoades said. "He has played in some big football games, which is beneficial to him."

Bookout was recruited by former coach Ray Dorr, and the freshman said he thought he had a chance to start considering how hard they recruited for him.

"I didn't think they would push as hard as they did if I didn't have a chance," Bookout said. "There were six coming in for the job and only one could start. They were all very good; I saw them all kick 50-yarders."

Bookout said it is a letdown to miss a kick, but he doesn't dwell on his mistakes.

"I don't worry long after I miss, but look at it and see what I did wrong. I just go with my concentration and think about what I have to do. I'm happy when I go out there. It's fun to try and kick a ball between two poles."

Field hockey finale at Midwest

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

A regular season record of 7 wins and 12 losses notwithstanding, field hockey coach Julie Illner says her team is capable of commanding the field at the Midwest Independents Championships.

The tournament starts Friday in St. Louis with the fourth-seeded Salukis taking on fifth-seeded Eastern Kentucky at 2 p.m.

"We're probably in the best shape we've been in all year," Illner said. "We should be ready to go."

The Salukis lost twice last weekend to Big Ten foes Michigan and No. 6 Iowa. Even so, the outcome of those two contests strengthened the team's desire, Illner, the team's coach of 20 years, said.

"I felt we played pretty well against Iowa, and I think we are the stronger for it," Illner said.

The tournament field is led by No. 20 Northern Illinois, which slipped by the Salukis 2-1 in double overtime in mid-September. Should the Salukis defeat Eastern Kentucky, they would meet Northern Illinois (13-3-1) in Saturday's 1 p.m. semifinal.

But Illner doesn't even want to think about a possible grudge match with the upstate rival. She's concentrating solely on Eastern Kentucky.

"We can't overlook them," Illner said. "Even though we beat them at home (1-0, Oct. 15), they've got good speed. We didn't blow them off the field by any means. One goal is not much of a cushion."

Eastern Kentucky is the defending tournament champion, and Illner has impressed the fact on her squad. "The older players realize how tough Eastern can be. We can't worry about anything else," Illner said.

The Salukis' biggest area of improvement has been offensive movement. Sunday's 7-0 shutout loss to Iowa was the first since early October.

"The forwards have done a good job of picking up a ball and moving it down field,"

Illner said. The team's offense has come from Cindy Oppermann (11 goals), Jenny Cordes (5 goals), Julie Mayor (4 goals) and Jodie Hamilton (2 goals).

Illner said the team needs to see scoring out of junior Klaudia Gorman, who is second in shots but is scoreless thus far.

"I would hope we could get scoring out of Klaudia," Illner said.

wards, the Salukis' backup quarterbacks).

"We don't spend a lot of time thinking about it because there is nothing we're going to do about it. Sometimes you find out the most about people when things go wrong."

Rhoades said one advantage the Salukis may have coming in is Kentucky's inexperience in handling the wishbone.

"There are not true wishbone teams in the Southeastern Conference," Rhoades said. "Vanderbilt runs it sometimes, but they don't run a triple option. I think it should be a great opportunity for us."

Aussie runner strives to succeed as Saluki

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

At first glance men's cross country runner Paul Burkinshaw could draw comparisons to Paul Hogan of Crocodile Dundee. Burkinshaw too, hails from the land Down Under, and he came to America not knowing what to expect.

"I had never been to America before deciding to come here to run," Burkinshaw said. "I was surprised when I got here and everything appeared to be very similar to back home."

Burkinshaw, a junior in agricultural studies, arrived at SIU-C this fall, so coping with the new environment, along with trying to do well in his running, has kept him hustling.

"I don't care too much for the early workouts (6 a.m.)," Burkinshaw said. "But as far as the school and the people, I like it here. Our values and customs are very similar."

Burkinshaw said it is the dream of many people in Australia, especially athletes, to come to America.

"Many people I talked to want to come here," Burkinshaw said. "But now that I'm here I really don't see that big of difference between the countries."

Burkinshaw, a 800- and 1500-meter specialist, had never run cross country before coming here.

"Coach (Cornell) wanted me to run to get in shape for track season," Burkinshaw said. "It has allowed me to focus on my running, and has helped teach me to devote myself to running."

Burkinshaw said he needed a little devotion to get through this season so far.

"I have been sick with the flu, which has drained a little energy from me," Burkinshaw said. "So what I've had to do is use mind over matter when I run. You have to learn to get over that pain barrier."

Burkinshaw had to do exactly that in the first meet of the season at Kansas, where he collapsed after crossing the finish line in third place.

"I was in pretty bad shape," Burkinshaw said. "Since then I've learned to pace myself a little better."

"I just want to make sure when I cross that finish line I have given it 110 percent, and have absolutely nothing left."

—Paul Burkinshaw

Even coach Cornell praised Burkinshaw's performance that day.

"He really showed me what he was made of by running himself to a complete standstill during the race, and still finishing," Cornell said.

Even though Burkinshaw likes it here, he said he plans on returning to Australia, immediately after graduation. He said oddly enough, that he has more time on his hands here, and is able to focus on his running much easier here than at home.

"We own 3000 acres where we grow wheat and raise sheep," Burkinshaw said. "It's only my dad and me so I don't have a lot of time, there are too many things to do all the time."

"I'll learn what I can here (agriculture) and take it back home with me."

Burkinshaw has known success in running long before he came to the States. He started running competitively at age 12, and his career peaked in 1984 as he became Australian 800-meter champ (1:52) in the 18-under age group.

Burkinshaw also toured Southeast Asia with the Australian National Team in 1984.

"When I run I just try to finish as high as possible to help the team win," Burkinshaw said. "Personal times really don't mean anything."

Burkinshaw will put that same work ethic to use this weekend in the MVC Conference Championship.

"We will need to finish three runners in the top ten," Burkinshaw said. "I just want to make sure when I cross that finish line I have given it 110 percent, and have absolutely nothing left."

Paul Burkinshaw warms up before practice. Burkinshaw, who is from Australia, is one of the Salukis' top seven runners for Saturday's Missouri Valley championships.

Burkinshaw said he will get ready for the race in his usual fashion, by getting alone with himself.

"I like to get by myself and listen to some inspirational music," Burkinshaw said, adding that he likes to listen to Australian music such as the popular group Midnight Oil. "It relaxes me and helps me focus on the race."

Burkinshaw said he is looking forward to running on his home course, which he said provides inspiration enough.

year. They finished ahead of both SIU-C and Illinois State.

The Salukis also will look to freshmen Vaughn Harry and Mark Stuart for support. Harry has been a consistent top 20 finisher with his best time coming at the Kentucky Invite (26:13). He also has a top 10 finish to his credit. He finished ninth in the opening meet of the season at Kansas.

Stuart has a season best of 25:51 at the Illini Strider Open, and he finished 11th at the Kansas meet.

Seniors David Beauchem and Paul Glanville also will compete. Beauchem has a season-best time of 25:24, and a second place finish at the Ole Miss Invitational.

Beauchem said he is looking to make a top five appearance in this meet.

Glanville has a 12th place finish at the Murray State Open, and a personal best time of 27:12 at the Kentucky Invite.

SIU-C will have a total of seven runners competing, with junior Paul Burkinshaw and sophomore Mike Kershaw rounding out the team.

The race will be run on SIU's cross country course.

SIUC student takes 2nd in tennis tournament

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

As a team, they're relentless. Individually, they're classic rivals.

Dexter Rheume and Terry Guess have been partners in crime since the summer. And whether it's tennis or pool, they have remained undefeated.

Rheume and Guess took first place in Division D doubles at the U.S. Open Championships of Wheelchair Tennis at Irvine, Cal., Oct. 10 through 16, but squared off in the finals of the singles.

Rheume lost to Guess 7-6, (7-3), 7-5, 6-3.

"If I'd had the correct mind game, I'd have beaten Terry," Rheume said. "The mental part of the game is 50 percent."

Both were familiar with the scene — they had faced each other in the final round of past tournaments. But this time it was different.

Guess had taught Rheume a few things, and the last time the duo played each other, Rheume won, 6-4, 7-6 (9-4). The win, which came in the final round of the Northeast Grand Prix in Champaign this spring, marked Rheume's first championship and Guess's first loss to Rheume.

"I taught him how to hold the racket properly," Guess said. "Then I taught him that it's more than just a physical game — that it's mental too."

Guess, once a professional tennis player, said he worked with Rheume for a few hours daily for two days.

"I noticed that most guys just hit the ball over the net and wait for a mistake," he said. "I showed him how to control the ball and put it where he wanted it to go."

"All that was left was to execute, and he does that really well now."

But not well enough to beat Guess twice in a row.

Rheume attributed his poor win-loss record against Guess to lack of experience.

"Other guys have an advantage over me," Rheume said. "They were playing before they got hurt and already know the strokes."

Rheume began playing in August, 1987, two years after a car accident that left him paralyzed from the waste down. Guess, injured in a car accident in January, 1986, played throughout high school and college at El Camino Community College in Torrance, Cal. Guess abandoned his amateur status to accept money for winning a professional tournament.

The pair, who met for the second time in June, 1988, won their first championship at the Southeastern Grand Prix in Atlanta, Ga., in July. Since then, they have given up only two sets in five tournaments.

"Dexter and I undefeated in tennis and in pool," Guess said. "We're not too good at ping pong, though. It's kind of hard to move the chairs around each other."

Tennis team to compete in Irish tourney

The men's tennis team will be at South Bend, Ind., at the Notre Dame Invitational. The tournament, which will feature players from 13 teams, begins Friday.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio State and Purdue and some Ivy League teams will highlight the tournament.

"It'll be very pleasantly surprised if we can win any matches this weekend," Coach Dick LeFevre said. "It'll be the luck of the draw. We're playing some pretty tough schools."

The tournament will include two singles draws and one doubles draw. Jairo Aldana, Joe Demeterco and Mickey Maulle will compete in the first draw for the Salukis. Fabiano Ramos, George Hime and Juan Martinez will compete in the second draw.

Doubles teams will be as follows: Martinez and Demeterco, Ramos and Hime and Martinez and Aldana.

"I think we're capable of beating Miami, Ohio, Ball State and maybe Notre Dame," he said. "If I had to rank us, I'd say we're somewhere in the middle — an optimistic look from the coach."

"It's almost a privilege to be invited to a tournament of this stature. It's already a feather in your cap. They're not going to invite anyone they don't think will do any good."

What You Should Know About Date RAPE

High Risk Factors:

SEX ROLE STEREOTYPES

Women - Be aware of stereotypes that prevent you from self-expression, such as "anger is unfeminine."

Men - Be aware of stereotypes that promote violence against women, such as "it is manly to use force."

IGNORING YOUR INSTINCTS

Know that you have the right to set sexual limits. If you feel you are being pressured past your limit, you are right. Trust your gut feelings.

INEFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

Communicate your limits. If someone starts to offend you, tell them. Tell them directly, forcefully, and don't worry if you have to be firm.

Protecting Yourself:

Say no when you mean no, say yes when you mean yes, and stay in touch with your feelings to know the difference.

Believe in your right to express your feelings and learn to do so assertively.

Be aware of stereotypes that prevent you from self-expression, such as "Being passive is feminine."

Be aware of specific situations in which you do not feel relaxed and in charge.

Hear what the other person is saying. Don't guess. Don't assume.

Remember:

You and your partner have the right to say no, at any time, without feeling guilty.

Stopping doesn't mean a loss of manhood or womanhood.

Stopping doesn't mean that something is wrong with you. It does mean people are people, not objects, and have a right to different opinions.

Alcohol and drugs interfere with clear thinking and effective communication.

Money spent on a date doesn't obligate either person to sexual favors.

Healing Yourself:

If you or someone you know has been raped, there are services available to you:

Women's Services (453-3655) provides short-term counseling and a Rape Survivors Support Group.

SIUC Counseling Center (453-5371) provides long-term counseling.

Rape Action Committee (529-2324)

is a 24 hours crisis intervention service providing emotional support, information, and advocacy for rape victims, their friends, and family.

League cross country meet to be held at SIU-C

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The men's cross country team will have home field advantage Saturday as it plays host for the 32nd annual Missouri Valley Conference Championships at 11 a.m. on the campus of SIU-C.

The Salukis will be vying for their seventh MVC cross country championship, and coach Bill Cornell said his team appears to be ready.

"We're underdogs," Cornell said, "but the training has been done and the talent is there. It's now up to the athletes to decide how much they want it."

Cornell said his team will need a super effort to win the conference and each runner will have to dig deep to find the winning edge.

"The mental factor now comes into play," Cornell said. "It is very important in distance running. It takes killer instinct to win and that comes from internal motivation."

Cornell said even though Wichita State won the meet last year, the toughest competition for the Salukis should come from rivals Illinois State and Indiana State.

"We'll have to have five men in front of Illinois State's and Indiana State's fourth man to win the meet," Cornell said.

"Both of these schools top three men are outstanding."

Illinois State already has beaten the Salukis. They finished ahead of SIU-C at the Illini Strider Open by 38 points.

Illinois State will boast the same three talented runners at the conference meet; Dave Wilson, a conference favorite at the beginning of the year, Tony Daniel and Don Shafer, who both ran conference last year finishing fifth and eighth respectively.

Wilson, who beat SIU-C's No. 1 runner freshman Jon Dennis at the water-logged Saluki Invitational, was in turn soundly beaten by Dennis at the Illini Strider Open. Dennis won the race in 24:20.29, a full 15 seconds ahead of Wilson.

Cornell said either Wilson or Dennis should be the favorites to win the race, and the matchup should prove to be interesting.

Indiana State will counter with the same team that helped it to place second at the Saluki Invitational earlier this Saluki place-kicker John Bookout attempts a field goal during practice at McAndrew stadium Wednesday. The freshman has hit six of eight attempts this season.

Mind games

Saluki place-kicker prefers using head instead of heels

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

The average football fan will tell you a kicker's game is all in his foot. But not Saluki place-kicker John Bookout. For him, it's all in the mind.

"About 85 to 90 percent of it is all mental," Bookout said. "The most important thing is concentration. Coach (Rod) Sherrill stands there and puts his hand in front of the tee when I'm warming up. That's how I work on it."

Bookout said kickers must constantly work on their trade, although game situations should come naturally.

"Some people ask why we go out and practice three hours just to kick a ball. We have to do a lot of drills and sideline kicks. We work a lot on those because the angle is incredible."

"When you do it for a long time it becomes natural, but you do have to prepare. During the game, I go down the field as our offense moves the ball, following them with the tee."

Bookout said having a strong leg and foot is important, but technique is really what counts when kicking.

"Sometimes I really run aggressive and kick it. Some think it is all power, but it's technique. An extra point should be just like a 50-yard field goal."

So far this season, Bookout has hit 14 of 14 point after touchdowns and six of eight field-goal attempts, his longest being 47-yards on two occasions.

"You really shouldn't miss a PAT," Bookout said. "You're right there in front of the goal. For the field goals, you just have to work at it."

"About 85 to 90 percent of it is all mental. The most important thing is concentration."

—John Bookout

Despite the fact that he is a freshman, Bookout said he really doesn't feel like one.

"Maybe school-wise I do, but not football. We are all one team and think of each other as a team. The other guys have accepted me like every other player. Why shouldn't they?"

Bookout admitted that kickers are usually loners on the high school level and at most colleges, but with the Salukis he is not.

"There is more team spirit here at college. It is not so much that the kicker is off by himself."

Bookout is no stranger to attention. After moving to Arlington Heights for his senior year, he helped carry his team to a 12-2 season, including the 6-A state championship.

"He is used to (the pressure)," said Ulises De la Sierra, part-time coach in charge of the Salukis' kicking game. "When he played at Arlington Heights he was put in the spotlight quite a few times. That is why he is so poised."

"He is getting more consistent. However, every now and then, he'll have a fluke. That is only natural, but if he really works he can work out

Rhoades stresses preparation for Saturday

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Saluki coach Rick Rhoades has added to his "play as hard as you can on every play" philosophy for Saturday's game with Kentucky. If it's out of your hands, don't worry about it.

Rhoades said despite that playing Kentucky is an uphill battle, the Salukis will prepare for the Wildcats like any other team.

"There will be a bigger crowd and a different atmosphere, but the last time I checked they only had 11 guys on the field at a time and four downs," Rhoades said. "We are aware of the quality of players they have, but it is still a football game."

The Wildcats are big favorites in Saturday's game, but Rhoades said the Salukis will not go into the game looking to lose.

"It looks on paper like we can't beat Kentucky, but football is a strange game. Stranger things have happened than us beating Kentucky. I don't think anyone here is ready to concede anything."

Taking into account the Wildcats' schedule, dubbed the toughest of any I-A team by the NCAA Statistics Service, Rhoades said the Salukis will have to play their best to be competitive.

"This may be the biggest challenge SIU has ever faced. We will have to play as well as we possibly can to hang in there. This is a great chance to grow as a football team, and I hope we take advantage of it."

"We talked a lot about game preparation, and there'll be a time when we're on the other side of the stick. We can't do anything about what they have, but we can control ourselves. We're just going to try and play well and live with the results."

To further add to the Salukis' problems, SIU-C will take the field without quarterback Fred Gibson, who is out for at least a week with a knee injury.

"As coaches, we have to deal with injuries, although you especially hope your quarterback doesn't get hurt," Rhoades said. "I decided a long time ago that injuries would not play a factor here, and I'm excited about Scott (Gabbert) and Reggie (Ed-
