Economic growth may bolster Bush

Newsday

WASHINGTON—The U.S. economy, long an albatross hanging over George Bush's re-election hopes, grew at an unexpectedly brisk 2.7 percent annual pace between July and September, the Department of Commerce reported Tuesday, sparking elation in the president's campaign but doubt among some economists that the tempo would be sustained.

The third-quarter figures on gross domestic product, the last overall report card on the U.S. economy before the Nov. 3 election, showed that it grew almost twice as fast as most private analysts had forecast, with a helpful boost from consumer spending and business investment, along with continued low inflation.

Immediately, Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle seized on Tuesday's news as evidence of a long-awaited turnaround, and trumpeted the findings at their campaign stops. The U.S. growth rate came in marked contrast to the meager 1.5 percent pace in the earlier, April-June quarter and suggested at least some economic vitality, despite continuing high unemployment and anxiety among consumers.

"We have now six straight quarters of growth in the United States, and yet the Democrats keep telling us that everything is going to hell," Bush told a cheering crowd in Des Moines, Iowa. "And they're wrong. They are wrong."

But the Clinton campaign fired back with a much harsher critique of U.S. economic performance.

Gene Sperling, economic coordinator for the Clinton campaign, said that the Bush team must have "awfully low

GPSC to review first long-term plan report

By Christy Gutowski
Administration Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will review tonight the first report on long-term planning for SIUC compiled by a 12-member committee.

Susan Hall, president of the council, said GPSC will have formulated its final response by early spring.

"There is plenty of time to complete our response because the committee of 12 does not plan to meet before the end of spring," she said.

The document is an assimilation of reports representing SIUC's internal planning process that began almost three years ago. It offers an alternative proposal to the 24 cuts that the Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended Oct. 6 because of Illinois' budget problems.

GPSC members, as well as the rest of the University community, are responding to the document before it is presented to SIU Board of Trustees a day later to IBHE.

President John C. Guyon said he is not setting an exact date for University groups to respond to the committee's report because of the difficulty involved in completing the task.

But SIU Board of Trustees should have

Committee to recommend choice for security director

By Chris Davies
Administration Writer

With interviews finished for the final four candidates for SIUC security director, selection committees will report Friday with a final recommendation for the position.

Interviews for the director's position began Oct. 14 and ended Monday. A decision is expected to follow soon after the reports are turned in.

Candidates for the position were interviewed by President John Guyon; Harvey Welch, vice president of student affairs; a committee from the Chancellor's Office; and a selection committee chaired by Harry Wirth, director of Service

Poll: Clinton in command of race

Perot, Bush close gap, but Arkansas governor keeps double-digit lead
Los Angeles Times

Heading into the final turn, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton remains in command of the presidential race, a new Los Angeles Times Poll has found.

In the nationwide survey, Clinton leads with 43 percent to 32 percent for President Bush and 19 percent for independent Ross Perot. Since the last Times Poll in early October, Perot has roughly doubled his support, while Clinton's lead over Bush has slipped from 14 points to 11.

Among a smaller sample considered the most likely voters, the margin is essentially unchanged: Clinton leads with 44 percent to 34 percent for Bush and 18 percent for Perot.

Still, there are some worrisome signs for Clinton: The survey shows that voter doubts about his honesty are rising, and their overall assessment of him is diminishing.

The poll also suggests the possibility of more turbulence in these final days: Though only 5 percent of voters still describe themselves as undecided, another 16 percent say they're not certain to vote for the candidate whom they currently prefer.

The poll was conducted from last Saturday through Monday night, and thus, only partially reflects the tempest of controversy that erupted after Perot said Sunday that he quit the race last summer; because of reports that the White House plotted dirty tricks against his family.

It's not yet clear what effect this will have on Perot's campaign.

SIUC hoops tops MVC poll

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

Hungry is the word to describe the Salukis this year and it is not food they are hungry for, but a MVC championship and the chance to go to the NCAA tournament.

The SIUC men's basketball team got a chance to shoot around with the media before practice starts Nov. 1 Tuesday at the arena.

Head coach Rich Herrin said it will be nice to go to the NCAA's, but the Missouri Valley Conference will have to come first.

"We want to go to the NCAA tournament in the worst way, but before we can do that, we have to win three games at the MVC tournament in St. Louis," he said.

Junior sixth man, forward Mirko Pavlovic, said he is focused on the chance to go to the NCAA tourney.

"It's tiring to hear people talk about the tournament, and how we should have been there the past couple of years," he said. "We need to prove that we are No. 1 in the MVC, and we will be."

Senior forward Ashraf Amaya said SIUC has the capability to win it this time around.

"Last year, we lost in St. Louis and didn't achieve our goals; this year we are hungry for it," he said. "We have the capability now with five returning starters, who are more experienced, and a good recruiting class to back us up."

The Salukis were marked as the team to beat this season at the Missouri Valley Conference media day in St. Louis Monday.

The 1992-93 preseason MVC coaches' poll ranks the Salukis No. 1. SIUC racked up 71 points in the voting, earning seven first place votes. Other first place votes went to Illinois State and Southwest Missouri State.

SIUC returns to the top after breezing to a record of 22-8 last season that won them the MVC title and a trip to the NIT. Illinois State shared the MVC championship with SIUC.

Herrin said his team is capable of defending its first place title.

"We are going to do our best to be the best team we can be," he said. "It is nice to be ranked at the top, but our league is going to be a lot stronger this year, and it may be tough for us to repeat as conference champions."

Illinois State returns four starters to the court and was ranked No. 2 after MVC coach of the year, Bob Bender, brought the Redbirds from last place to first last season to tie them for first in the MVC with the Salukis.

Bender said there are benefits to not winning it all last season.

"After losing two to SIUC last season, and coming up short at the MVC tournament, it just builds up and creates a lot of hunger within our team," he said. "This year we are more mature and it will be important for us to get off to a good start."

Southwest Missouri tied for second in the polls with ISU as both teams earned 58 points.

SMSU is coming off a NCAA tournament appearance last season and is led by new head coach Mark Bernsen. Bernsen takes over for former SMSU coach Charlie Spoonhour, who is now head coach at St. Louis University.

Rounding out the top four teams is the Golden Hurricane of Tulsa.

SIUC offense exceeds Smith's expectations

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

SIUC HEAD COACH Bob Smith said the Saluki offense has exceeded his expectations for the season, but the strength of the defense has been a disappointment.

The Salukis lead the Gateway Conference in total offense averaging 450.2 yards a game. The defensive Dawgs are seventh in the conference giving up 385.4 yards a game.

"We are way ahead of where I thought we would be right now offensively," Smith said.

"I'm disappointed that we are not stronger defensively, but we are competitive with other teams in the conference."

SIUC STRONG SAFETY
Clint Smothers, who recorded 18 tackles against Illinois State last Saturday, leads the team with 67 tackles.

Linebackers Joe Estes and Jim Murphy are second and third with 64 and 60 tackles respectively.

"Clint is playing better than anyone on our defensive unit at this moment," Smith said.

Men's tennis ends season on low note

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The SIUC men's tennis team concluded its fall exhibition season with bad luck at the NCAA region five Rolex qualifiers, sophomore Andre Goransson said.

"Unfortunately, all of us got fixed up with very tough matches in the first round," Goransson said.

The young Salukis faced top seeded Big Eight and Missouri Valley Conference players this weekend to determine who would compete at the national indoor competition this winter.

No Salukis could make it past the first round of singles play and only one doubles team won a match. None of the Dawgs qualified.

In singles play, senior Tim Derouin lost to the Missouri Valley favorites Southwest Missouri State 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Freshman Juan Garcia lost to the tournament's No. 6 seed 6-3, 6-0. Senior Jay Merchant lost a member of the Tulsa team 6-3, 7-6. Sophomore Andre Goransson lost to the No. 2 seed from S.W.

Women's tennis team underestimates competition

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The level of competition and depth of the opposition was underestimated by the SIUC women's tennis team at the Memphis State Invitational, coach Judy Auld said.

Auld said she was a little surprised by the quality of the overall competition at the tournament this weekend.

"I anticipated doing better in the singles than we did," Auld said. "But the opposition teams,

Auld: Memphis State Invitational not disappointing to team

some of whom we did not know were going to be there, surprised me."

She said the University of Arkansas-Little Rock, always a good team, was a surprise entry while the University of Tennessee was much stronger than the past couple of years.

"We truly had some great matches though, with the better quality of competition," Auld said. "It wasn't disappointing altogether."

Lori Gallagher, 1-1 for the tournament, progressed to the semi-finals of the competition even though this was only the second time in the fall she has played singles.

"She is still not at the top of her game yet," Auld said. "But I am really happy with her weekend performance."

Wendy Varnum, No. 1 singles for the Salukis, played in a more focused and confident manner at the invitational, Auld said.

Varnum, who was 0-2 for the invitational in the singles category, is always in a tough position playing at the No. 1 spot, Auld said.

Varnum said the No. 1 position meant she always played tough competition and never got easy matches.

"I feel I played very well this weekend considering my tough opposition," Varnum said. "I was confident in my serve, but I have to work more on my consistency."

Varnum also combined with Leesa Joseph in Flight 2 doubles, which the duo won.

Varnum said she was pleased with the way the duo have been working together and looked forward to further competition with Joseph in the spring season.

"We have two different styles of play that complement each other," Varnum said. "I am more aggressive while Leesa is more consistent. We play great together."

MIDDLE EAST DELEGATES CONTINUE TALKS — Israeli, Lebanese and Syrian delegates to the Middle East peace talks informed the State Department Tuesday they will remain at the negotiating table despite the rising tide of violence in Lebanon. The American hosts of the peace conference urged "maximum restraint" on all sides. The head of the Lebanese delegation told reporters that he had informed his Israeli counterpart that the Lebanese understood the Israeli concern with loss of life.

YELTSIN DEFENDS HIS POSITION — Russian President Boris Yeltsin's advisers are considering the possibility of imposing a state of emergency to cope with growing tensions between Yeltsin and former Soviet president, Mikhail Gorbachev. The communist majority in the Russian parliament wants the next congress of People's Deputies to be convened in December as planned, while Yeltsin has pressed for a postponement until next spring so as to have more time to carry out and defend his reforms.

PROSECUTOR ATTEMPTS HITLER SALUTE BAN — A German prosecutor Tuesday began moves to outlaw an Adolf Hitler-style salute used by neo-Nazis to circumvent existing laws banning the real Hitler extended-arm greeting. The so-called "Kuehnen greeting" - named after Michael Kuehnen, a neo-Nazi who died of AIDS last year - is an exact replica of the Hitler salute except that only a thumb and two fingers are extended, instead of the entire hand.

UNEP TRIES NEW PAPER METHODS — An international conference sponsored by the U.N. Environment Program (UNEP) chose Egypt, Senegal and Zimbabwe Tuesday to try out new, environmentally safer methods to produce paper and cement. UNEP executive director Mostafa Tolba said the three countries had been picked as "ecolaboratories" by a meeting between environment ministers from several countries and industrial and ecology representatives.

CLINTON CHANGES STYLE TO SUIT VOTERS — Her husband has a good shot at being the next President of the United States. That means Hillary Clinton may be months away from being one of the most influential people on earth. Mrs. Clinton has been simply inscrutable for quite some time now. Chastened by criticism last spring, Clinton seemingly softened her style. The change worked. In the waning days of this campaign, most people say they like what they see.

TRANS UNION REACHES AGREEMENT — The Chicago-based Trans Union company has reached an agreement with Illinois and 16 other states on how to handle complaints over its credit reporting services. Trans Union is one of the nation's three largest firms that report on people's credit history. The new agreement, which came as a result of court action in Chicago, calls on Trans Union to establish a toll-free telephone line to solve credit disputes.

COST OF MEDICINE KEEPS PATIENTS AWAY — A new survey reveals that more than one-half of the adults under 40 in Illinois have put off going to the doctor because they can't afford the high cost of medicine. Officials of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Illinois conducted the survey and found that 54 percent of the people between 21 and 39 have delayed getting medical care because of the costs. The report said that overall, 44 percent of the adults in Illinois have avoided seeking health care for the same reason.

IDCFS LAYS OFF WORKERS AFTER AGREEMENT — The Illinois Department of Children and Family Services laid off 150 workers at downstate offices Monday following an agreement with union officials on the layoff procedures. The agency also plans to lay off another 200 workers in the Chicago area, but those layoffs are not expected until next month. The IDCFS is continuing to talk with the unions over how the Chicago area layoffs will be handled.

Poshard trying to win new seat

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

Democrat Glenn Poshard is campaigning on his experience representing Illinois to land him another term in Congress.

Poshard, 47, will be running for re-election to Congress, but this time for a different district—the 19th.

Poshard was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in the 22nd district in 1988 and was re-elected for a second term in 1990. As a result of the 1990 census and redistricting, the 22nd district was erased because Illinois lost two House seats. Poshard won the Democratic primary in March for the redrawn 19th district.

The issues of higher education, the job market and health care are major platforms for Poshard.

Poshard said his background in teaching has given him experience in education.

"I have a background in teaching, and I know the affect the higher education schools have on the district."

Poshard said he is concerned with many aspects of education, ranging from elementary to higher education.

"I worked with higher education administration," Poshard said. "I've held meetings at SIUC to see what was needed.

"I am for full funding of Head Start preschool to get kids started off right," he said. "I also have taken steps toward the expansion of the Pell Grant, especially for the middle class because many times the programs have gone to the lower class."

The changes in the coal mining industry is an important issue for workers in Illinois, Poshard said.

"We've lost 60 percent of the coal industry because of the Clean Air Act," he said. "We have to keep with the clean coal technology and achieve the goals to keep the industry."

Poshard said the infrastructure, such as transportation, of the state needs to improve to support industry.

"We have severely fallen behind as a nation in our support of our basic industry," he said. "It's my job and responsibility to bring in funding for industry such as the four-lane (toll) highway. We have to work on our infrastructure needs."

Poshard said the emphasis the Clinton/Gore ticket puts on health care is important to rural Illinois.

"We have to continue to fight for health care, especially in our rural areas," Poshard said. "Any country that doesn't prioritize health care will fail.

"For some time I've believed that health care should be more affordable to the people," he said. "There is a change that has to take place. In the present system, there is no cost control."

Student voting is a priority, Poshard said.

"I always hope that we can get young people involved with government, instead of turning young people away from it," he said.

"Their ideas are important, and I want them to try and understand the role we play in government."

Poshard said he has had to travel more in the 19th district to get name recognition because 70 percent of the district is new territory for him.

Poshard was elected to the Illinois State Senate in 1984 and was re-elected in 1986.

He lives in Williamson County with his wife and two children, Dennis and Kris.

Challenger cites need for change

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

Republican Douglas E. Lee is campaigning for Congress on a life-long interest in politics and a plan to set Illinois in a new direction.

Lee, 30, of Decatur is running for U.S. House of Representatives for the 19th District. Lee said he believes it is time to find solutions for Illinois' problems.

"We need a change in Congress," Lee said. "Southern Illinois is in a stranglehold; the population is due for a change."

In recent years, the politicians who have been elected to office have accomplished nothing, he said.

Lee said he has targeted education in his platform because of the importance he places on it.

"There have been a lot of cuts unnecessary for education," he said. "Education has to be a priority."

Training for faculty and partnerships in schools will improve the educational system for Illinois, Lee said.

Illinois has some good faculty, but we need to renew their interest in the profession, he said. The state needs a partnership at our schools where volunteers like plumbers or doctors come in and teach about their trades.

Health care costs and benefits is a major issue for the election, Lee said.

"This big question is how we are going to pay for it," he said. "We must have health care so those in the middle class can afford it."

Businesses in Illinois needs a strong leader in Congress who understands the importance of business growth, Lee said.

"A congressman has to be an ambassador for business," he said.

Lee

Lee said his age is not far from those of college-age students, and he wants more opportunities for those coming into the job market.

"A lot of generations have had opportunities, and the future generations will be suffering," he said. "We're the ones being affected."

Lee said he is looking forward to a change in Congress.

"I'm praying for a radical change in Congress," Lee said. "We need a whole new breed of congressmen with fresh and new ideas.

"It's not the system that's bad," he said. "We've got to stop electing career politicians."

Lee said he has taken time to travel across the new 19th district, 70 percent of which is new territory, to get his word out.

"I've had to go around most of the district to get some name recognition because Illinois is such a small state," he said. "We've passed out some literature and phoners have worked hard, but I believe I have had less promotion than anyone in the state."

Lee graduated with a double major in political science and history from the University of Illinois. He then went to the graduate school of business at DePaul University and received his master's in Business Administration.

Lee said even at the age of 9, he was interested in politics.

"At 9 or 10 I was passing out literature," he said. "I've always tried to get people elected."

Lee is a lawyer in Decatur, where he also owns a small property management business with his wife, Julie.

Candidates of 1992 sleazy campaigners

THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS OF 1992 have been the raunchiest in recent memory. Defamation of character, the hurling of outrageous claims and general wallowing in sleaze have been played out as common tactics in races for political office.

And as Nov. 3 steadily approaches, candidates have finally hit the depths of how low they can go.

Political analysts say that people wanted issues-orientated campaigns, and yet the politicians continue to feed them half-baked claims, proving that as long as the public hungrily devours their rumors and twisted truths, candidates will continue to happily provide them.

THIS WEEK, ROSS PEROT ALLEGED that Republicans had attempted to smear the image of his daughter Carolyn by trying to portray her as a lesbian through the use of doctored photographs.

Perot also claimed the party had bugged his phone and tried to disrupt his daughter's wedding. He cites all of these supposed interferences as the reasons for his initial withdrawal from the presidential race.

Spokespersons for George Bush staunchly deny Perot's claims, and FBI investigations have turned up nothing. Indeed, Perot's unprovable attacks seem more grounded in paranoid dementia than reality.

REPUBLICAN RICH WILLIAMSON'S tactics in the U.S. Senate race rival Perot's for ferocity and triviality.

Williamson claims that Democrat Carol Moseley Braun's supposed alliance with Rep. Gus Savage, D-Chicago, an avowed anti-Semite, make her a racist.

But Williamson's race-baiting attacks have not helped his ever-widening gap in the polls, and have served only to further alienate him from the public. Even the traditionally Republican Chicago Tribune failed to endorse him.

This week, his criticism of Braun's "silly liberal ideas" and the astounding claim that he is more of a Democrat than Braun sounded more like a last-ditch attempt to heave sleaze on Braun's character than a well-thought-out campaign plan.

Smear campaigns have infiltrated state politics as well. Democrat Kenneth V. Buzbee and his Republican opponent in the state senatorial race, Ralph Dunn, have traded barbed insults throughout the campaign.

Buzbee has been accused of being loyal to big businesses in the Chicago area and Dunn claims Buzbee made phone solicitations to area residents, asking if they wanted a 78-year-old man representing them in the state Senate.

THE POLITICAL CLIMATE HAS SHOWN spots of brightness, however. The presidential campaign took a turn towards real issues during the second debate in Virginia, when a member of the audience expressed weariness at the constant criticizing of character. But this was a faint glimmer of hope in an otherwise murky campaign.

Negative campaigning has traditionally been a tool of politicians who is fall in the public opinion and who wish to attract massive voter interest in a short period of time.

Some of this year's candidates' pathetic, last-minute attempts to rob their opponents of credibility echo this philosophy. In the end, the only ones who are cheated are the voters, who are forced to choose between the politicians who tell the least amount of lies.

In 1992, politicians have picked up on these influential smear tactics to win votes. But these tactics would not exist if the public did not willingly participate in them.

Voters should send a message this election year to candidates who use smear tactics — all is not fair in politics. The public wants to see important issues presented, rather than a mud wrestling match.

Letters to the Editor

Dying gays cash in on corruption

Homosexuals don't consider the rights of Christians to be free from the homosexuals. I don't consider myself to be left or right wing on morality either. (As if morals are politics). I am only true North determined. Christians don't coin the word straight usually. Straight is the minority- if there is such a thing. A gay person cashes in on corruption when he dies because he lived against God's say so. I am not homophobic but Godphobic and fear of God begins wisdom. This suggests that fear of anything else is stupid. It was not the plan of God to start Father Abrahams Nation business with gays or else you're not really sure what God defines as being a nation of his. But, then again, I guess you'd have to know God to know what I'm talking about.

If you knew God, you'd know his plan. Like the plan, "created he them male and female." If you rape Christian rights by hoolah, gaiety, and mismorals, then one day, you may discover that you, yourself don't have any rights either because you've made yourself outlawed.

Now here is the politics that I see on morality: People have abortions (human sacrifice) because they are afraid that gays will grab their babies. This is an example of putting the 10 commandments on the back burner, you know, the one that says "Thou shalt NOT kill." And, no one in reality needs a man or woman so bad as to condemn their own soul to hell by going against God's grain by "graven images" (that other commandment)... and believe me, they are "graven" indeed. The plan of God is minus the grave to give life in his son. And before anyone judges another, remember, love and judgment is clearer in the mirror. —Mary A. McWhorter, sophomore, Carbondale

Denying rights makes poor AJ student

It seems that Brad Striegel is a very confused individual. The Oregon law concerning homosexuality has no basis on reality, as he would like to believe. This law discouraging homosexuality and stating such a lifestyle as immoral is deeply rooted in Christianity. It seems that the state of Oregon is paying too much attention to individuals than the Constitution of the United States. The constitution is extremely specific with it's clauses concerning the separation of church and state. It is obvious that this law being proposed by Oregon is purely based on Christian belief, total disregard to the Constitution. I would like to notify Mr. Striegel that this country is not comprised solely of Christians, and that the beliefs of other religions should be respected.

The most frightening element of Mr. Striegel's character is the major which he is pursuing. Administration of Justice is a respectable field, but one with many responsibilities. How can one justly serve their community when they deny rights of certain citizens based on their sexual preference. I think that a person pursuing a career in the field of Administration of Justice has to have an open mind and respect all citizens in this country, and not be prejudice towards one's own culture. It is more than evident that Mr. Striegel does not have these same views of a citizen's rights. I would then question Mr. Striegel's capability to serve his community in a just and fair manner with the views that he holds of it's citizens. It is then that Mr. Striegel becomes a part of the problem and not it's solution. —Derek Glaser, freshman, Cinema and Photography

Neo-Nazi letter far from Christian; stereotypical

This letter is in response to the two-faced, Neo-Nazi editorial submitted by Brad Striegel concerning homosexuality in the Oct. 22 edition of the D.E. First of all, I'm surprised that you signed your name to that shallow, prejudiced piece.

Do you actually consider yourself a Christian? You obviously don't know the first thing about Christianity. You said that you wouldn't care if every gay person in the world dropped dead. Well I'm sure that the millions of families of those gay people would care. And then you went on to say that most Americans who call themselves Christians don't care(of course) about gay rights. You obviously haven't done a shred of research. What gives you the right to speak for Christianity anyway? Not only do you condemn homosexuality but you blaspheme Christianity—perhaps you will be the one to pay when you die.

You say you don't hate gays but your editorial is filled with hate from word one. Your reference to gays as having limp wrists and lips just goes to show how far out of touch you are with reality. This is as stereotypical (ignorant) a comment as I have ever heard.

Your commentary is nothing more than a shallow-minded, hateful attack on gays. You're scared to death of gay rights and it shows. I'm not sure what religion you are but it sure isn't Christianity.

I think that the true abomination to society is that you are an administration of justice major.—John Burhop, junior, english.

a preliminary reading of the report in July, he said. The final report then will be given to IBHE in October 1993 so the University can respond to the second part of IBHE's priorities, quality and productivity process.

The PQP process asked state institutions to strengthen quality, sharpen focus and use resources more wisely, requiring reinvestment of funds from lower to higher priorities.

Hall, one of the 12 members of the planning committee, mailed the report to GPSC representatives Oct. 9. Representatives then reviewed the proposal with their departmental groups and tonight will bring their concerns to the council.

GPSC first must decide if it will form an ad hoc committee or allow its executive board to write its draft response to the committee's document, Hall said.

Enterprises and the Physical Plant. Wirth said the committees will report Friday to James Tweedy, vice president for administration, for a final decision.

"I am sure Vice President Tweedy will make a decision relatively soon, and SIUC will have a new security director," he said.

Two of the candidates are from Southern Illinois: Bill Kilquist, the Jackson County Sheriff, and Andrew Smith, a lieutenant for SIU police.

The other two candidates are Samuel Jordan, a lieutenant at the University of Illinois in Urbana, and Richard G. Woods, security director at Sequoia University in Pennsylvania.

Kilquist, a resident of Murphysboro, said the main issue he would be concerned with would be making sure the University and the community feel a sense of safety "Student, faculty and administration should have a safe environment to pursue an education and work in, without the worry of being assaulted, attacked or raped," he said.

Kilquist said there are other issues to be recognized such as the international students and the gender issues on campus.

"SIUC has a large international population, and we need to be sensitive to that issue," he said. "They come from different backgrounds presented to the full council before it becomes final.

GPSC already had formed an ad hoc committee to respond to IBHE's recommendations of cutting several graduate-level programs at SIUC.

The committee's statement will be included in GPSC's final response.

Hall said the group hopes to show the close relationship between graduate and undergraduate-level education.

"By eliminating the graduate-level component (of higher education), you're downgrading the quality of undergraduate programs because the two are integral parts," she said.

In other council matters, GPSC will review the proposal to make the two staff lawyers of the Students' Legal Assistance Office employees of the University Division of Student Affairs. The and have different acceptable behaviors, but they need to be treated fairly and be aware of those cultural differences."

Kilquist said he will also address the issue of sexual assault and date rape on campus.

"These should be our number one issues," he said. "Women are afraid to walk to classes at night and to the parking lots. They need to be assured of their safety and understood."

Sexual assaults also need to be handled with care and the victims need to be provided for in a sensitive manner, Kilquist said.

"I feel officers need to understand the situation of the victim and make sure that person is cared for and treated as a person," he said.

Smith is a Carbondale resident who has served on the force for 22 years. He has been a lieutenant for the campus police for eight years.

Smith said the first order of business for him if he becomes director would be to restructure the entire SIUC police department.

"I would like to see more foot patrol officers in the areas of high activity," he said. "I want to go back to a more community-oriented police department."

Smith said the main objective of the police is to make the community safe for everybody, not to force law enforcement upon the students.

two attorneys now are independent contractors and are supervised by a student-chaired board.

Hall said the two lawyers' employment status was suppose to remain separate from the University so there would never be a conflict between student and administrative interests.

However, Internal Revenue Service guidelines have led University officers to conclude that the two lawyers should be treated as employees because of federal and state tax liabilities.

GPSC will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the Kaskaskia/Missouri Room of the Student Center.

SIUC Student Wind Ensemble to play Shryock

By Melissa Willis
Entertainment Writer

SIUC's Student Wind Ensemble will take the stage tonight in Shryock Auditorium, performing everything from march tunes to American classics.

Conductor Michael Hanes said the performance will be an exhilarating one with many familiar songs.

Selections for the concert include "Celebration Overture," by Gordon Jacob; "Chorale Prelude in E Minor," by Alfred Reed; "Divertimento for Band," by Vincent Persichetti; three movements from "Suite of Old American Dances," by Russell Bennett; excerpts from "Sebastian Ballet," by Gian Carlo Menotti; "Freelance March," by

Performances include march tunes, medleys, American classics

John Philip Sousa; and "Concord," a medley of early American tunes- by Clare Grundman.

Hanes said this year the band contains 45 members instead of the customary 60 to 100 members concert bands usually have, because it would give members a greater responsibility.

"It is the same as a regular band, but on a smaller, more demanding scale," Hanes said. "Because of the abstract number of students we have, each one has more of a responsibility put on them."

Hanes, director of bands for the School of Music, said that most of the members are students who are music majors, though some are in other majors.

"It is the same as a regular band, but on a smaller, more demanding scale...each (student) has more of a responsibility put on them."

—Michael Hanes

"Those students who are not music majors are still interested enough in music to perform," he said.

The band practices three days a week, Hanes said, and when they do, there is a feeling of electricity in the air.

"My students are really looking forward to this performance and in practice they give it all they've got," Hanes said. "We are one of the most active groups in the School of Music."

Aaron Richardson, a sophomore in music education from Marion, said this is his second year in the Wind Ensemble.

"I enjoy playing contemporary music as well as old favorites, and that is what the concert includes," Richardson said.

Richardson said that he hopes the audience enjoys listening to the music as much as he enjoys performing it.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door and are $3 for the general public and $2 for students. Proceeds support SIUC music scholarships.

Agreement to strengthen national economy

By Vincent S. Boyd
Business Writer

A research agreement by the U.S. Department of Energy and three electronics companies will help strengthen the nation's economy, a College of Business and Administration official said.

Michael Haywood, faculty adviser for Blacks Interested in Business, said advances in technology will result in the creation of new jobs.

"Technological advances in the computer industry will create a trickle-down effect of jobs," Haywood said. "Innovations in technology usually means new jobs."

In an effort to help businesses develop new technologies, the U.S. Department of Energy has signed a collaborative research pact with three electronics companies.

The DOE Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, in conjunction with Intel Corp. and Ultratech Stepper, both of Santa Clara, Calif., and Jamar Technology Co., of San Diego, agreed to the pact that may lead to important advances in manufacturing microelectronic components.

David Markle, vice-president of Ultratech Stepper, said the advances in technology will ultimately lead to new jobs in the near future.

"The advancement in our technological base will lead to many complementary jobs in the industry," Markle said.

The pact, a four-year Collaborative Research and Development Agreement, was signed at the National Technology Initiative conference in Santa Clara earlier this month.

Valued at $25.2 million, the agreement is the largest signed by Livermore Laboratory to work with U.S. businesses to develop new technologies.

The agreement is part of a broader national program in soft X-ray projection lithography. The technology to be developed represents a new way to manufacture computer chips.

Lithography is a technique for mass producing images or patterns of any type.

Nat Ceglie, senior scientist of the Livermore Laboratory, said the pact represents an opportunity for advancement in computer chip production.

"This technology potentially offers an approach for U.S. companies to leapfrog their foreign competitors in producing computer chips," Ceglie said.

He said that while U.S. firms once dominated the electronics industry, much of that technical edge has been lost to overseas companies during the past decade.

"It is vital that America recapture its leadership role in microelectronics because this industry is expected to be worth more than $1 trillion by the turn of the century," Ceglie said.

Under the national lab-industry collaboration, the DOE Office of Defense Programs will contribute $12.6 million, while the three electronics companies will invest a similar amount on research.

James Glaze, president of Jamar, said the agreement will help lead the way in government and small businesses combining their efforts to re-shape the nation's economy.

"It will help leverage our unique technologies to play a key role in a program of national significance," Glaze said. "In doing so, the economy will begin to strengthen."

The microelectronics industry is a $750 billion-a-year business. About 2.6 million Americans are employed in the industry, more than double the number of Americans who work in the auto and steel industries combined, Glaze said.

In manufacturing computer chips, companies have traditionally used visible light and more recently ultraviolet light to transfer circuit patterns from a master pattern onto a resist-coated silicon wafer.

Under the envisioned technology, X-rays would be substituted for ultraviolet light, since X-rays have shorter wavelengths and would permit the production of patterns with much smaller feature sizes.

Gerry Parker, senior vice-president of Intel, said the new technology will put more Americans to work.

"The industry will require new processes that will call for new people to perform different tasks,"

Pact to bring companies together to boost revival

By Vincent S. Boyd
Business Writer

A U.S. Department of Energy scientist said a new research agreement will bring together different aspects of the three companies involved.

Nat Ceglie, senior scientist at the DOE Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory said the companies complement each other.

"Each company has a special quality that makes its involvement in the project special," Ceglie said. "They really complement each other well."

Intel Corp. is an international manufacturer of microcomputer components, modules and systems. The company has 25,000 employees and had revenues of $4.8 billion in 1991.

Founded in 1979, Ultratech

Stepper designs, manufactures and markets the industry's only 1:1 projection wafer steppers used in the manufacturing of all types of semi-conductor devices and thin film heads.

The company currently employs about 250 people, but estimates the figure will increase 10 percent in the next quarter.

Jamar Technology is a wholly owned subsidiary of California Jamar Inc., which specializes in the development and manufacturing of high-intensity laser systems for medical, industrial and defense applications.

Ceglie said the combination of the companies are evident of the government's commitment to technology and economic revival.

Parker said. "Consequently, more jobs will be created."

During the past two decades, the Livermore Laboratory has built a strong technical base in X-ray technologies because of research in its defense and laser fusion programs.

Ceglie said the Livermore Laboratory's world-class technology will have an impact on the economy.

"The technical infrastructure in high-power lasers for X-ray production and optics is unmatched in the world," Ceglie said. "Now these resources are going to be accessible to help U.S. companies regain a competitive edge."

New Nine Inch Nails release gets harder, more industrial

'Broken' exchanges synthesizers for guitars; keeps mood

By Dave Kazak
Entertainment Writer

Warning: This is not your father's Nine Inch Nails.

Trent Reznor, the man responsible for the steel blade cynical music and lyrics on Nine Inch Nails' first release, "Pretty Hate Machine," released a new EP last month.

With the exception of one song, the EP "Broken" burns with different music styles not heard before on NIN's previous release. Receding into the background are the dance beats and techno styles. Advancing forward are the guitars.

The first full song on the release, "Wish," is a mix of high speed dance and high speed thrash. Reznor arranges the song to give the impression the two styles are fighting for the listener's attention.

"Last" takes a sharp turn away from earlier NIN precedent. The listenable song features a weighted guitar playing a grunge sound. The style is so different from "Pretty Hate Machine," a listener might wonder if they have the right CD in their player. It's Nitzer Ebb meets Alice in Chains.

Except for Reznor's primal screams, the song "Happiness is Slavery" falls back on the pop industrial style which made up NIN's last release. The last track, "Gave up," is a throw-back to early eighties punk.

Music Review

Lyrical, Reznor has shown listeners a dark side of human nature, and on "Pretty Hate Machine," his lyrics try to explain the dark side or shout it down. Songs like "Sanctified" and "Kinda I Want To," even have an air of optimism about them.

On "Broken," the reasons why and the desire to shout down the dark side are gone. All that remains are the cries of a soul that has given in to a dark night of pessimism and cynicism.

"Wish there was something real in this world full of you/I'm the one without a soul/I'm the one with this big f---ing hole," Reznor writes in "Wish."

"Gave up" summarizes the mood of the entire EP. Reznor writes "Give it to me/I throw it away/After everything I've done/hate myself for what I've become/I tried/I gave up/throw it away."

Reznor's experimentation with his music is an approach that has worked for other groups trying to keep one step ahead of a music genre that gets old fast.

Ministry has increased the amount of hard-edged music with each subsequent album since their first. Their recent hit, "Jesus Built My Hotrod," cannot even be put in the same category musically as their earlier hit a few years ago, "Everyday is Halloween."

Nine Inch Nails have also pushed their music into new areas that do not resemble previous achievements, and these experiments have worked.

The darker music and lyrics work well together in almost every way. The short, cut-off style of the writing fits well in the faster, heavier music style. Reznor sings fast, however, and the shorter lyrics make it harder to understand what he is saying.

"Broken" also features two bonus tracks, a cover of an Adam Ant song and a Pigface cover.

The covers stay with the heavier format chosen for the rest of the EP, and come on a separate 3 inch disc.

Discount Den record manager Steve Garipey said some EP's may not come with the smaller disc.

"The people who don't have the 3-inch, they can find the two bonus track hidden in the later tracks on the CD," he said. "Those would be tracks 97-99."

Garipey said any CD player will track that far, but it has to track through all the other numbers first, and by that time, most people have shut the player off.

Garipey also said another new Nine Inch Nails album is scheduled for release sometime next spring.

Series of films from female view to deal with women's experiences

By Angela L. Hyland
Entertainment Writer

Tonight, out of the darkness of the Student Center Auditorium, a light of diversity will shine.

A series of films from a women's perspective will begin at 7 p.m. They will deal with a range of cultural, sexual and racial experiences.

The series will deal with subjects generally ignored by mainstream media, said Jeannie Zeck, research assistant at Women's Studies. The Tiananmen Square massacre, a Japanese internment camp, menopause and lesbian relationships will be dealt with in the showing.

The screening will include eight short films ranging in time from three to 32 minutes. The series is being presented by Women in the Director's Chair, a Chicago-based company that promotes women artists. The program is a shortened version of a week-long film festival held March 5 - 8 in Chicago, said Gretchen Elsner-Sommer, program director for Women in the Director's Chair.

The show will deal with a wide range of topics in a variety of formats, she said.

"We tried to make the selection representative of the works, to show the diversity within the diversity," she said.

The show tends to draw a lot of people, Elsner-Sommer said.

"Last year, the room was full. In Urbana this year, we had to turn people away. There was no more sitting or standing room," she said.

Part of the attraction of this series is that most of what is currently on the screen is both made by and features men, Zeck said. "Very rarely in mainstream film will you get a woman's perspective," Zeck said.

"Most often, when you see a woman in film, she's a love interest. She'd be pretty, but have no brains," she said.

"Very rarely do you see anything from a lesbian perspective," Zeck said. "It's just not acceptable."

The series will last an hour and a half and will be followed by a reception in the International Lounge.

This is the second year the program will be held at SIUC. Sponsors hope to make it an annual event.

Carbondale police search for suspect in parking lot crime

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

Carbondale police are investigating a robbery that occurred in the 500 block of South Illinois Avenue last night.

The victim, Bianca Truitt of Champaign, 24, was entering her car on the parking lot of the First National Bank at about 8:30 p.m. when she was approached by the assailant, who demanded her purse in a threatening voice, police said. Truitt surrendered her purse, which had about $85, and the suspect fled on foot.

The suspect is described as a black male, 17 to 18 years old, about 5'10" tall and weighing 150 to 165 pounds, police said. At the time of the robbery he was wearing a backward red baseball cap, dark shirt and pants, and a white windbreaker. He was apparently not armed during the robbery.

Finding ways to avoid pain besides medication better

To Your Health

By Rob Sepich
Wellness Center

"I don't feel well—what should I take?"

How many students respond to the first sign of discomfort by reaching for a pain reliever? Americans spend more than $400 million each year on over-the-counter pain medicine, according to the January 1992 edition of In Health magazine.

In our culture, people often believe that the medicine cabinet is the first place to turn when any physical or emotional stress occurs.

I recently received a sample for a combination pain reliever/antacid in the mail. Attached to the pills were examples of situations for which the drug was designed to help. These included "spilled coffee, out of doodorant, broken shoelace and bad haircut."

Pain relievers have their place, but many experts suggest that we may be masking some useful information about ourselves if we try to medicate our physical and emotional symptoms as soon as they arise.

Staying healthy and minimizing pain involves maintaining balance in many areas of life. One student might be socially skilled but be on academic probation. Another might be physically fit but spiritually alone. The next time you are in emotional pain, you could examine your current situation for areas that may be imbalanced.

Jon Kabat-Zinn, director of the Stress Reduction Clinic at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center, suggests that people maintain balance between emotions and actions by attending to both.

OFFENSIVELY. Anthony Perry leads the Salukis in rushing with 710 yards on 143 attempts an average of 5 yards a carry. Perry is averaging 88.7 yards a game which is third in the Gateway.

Yonel Jourdain is second with 588 yards on 95 carries and Greg Brown, who has amassed 377 yards on 73 attempts, is third.

THE SALUKI KICKING game is a picture of contrasts. Place-kicker John Bookout has converted 6 of 8 field goals and 21 of 26 extra points attempts, while SIUC punter David Wargo is last in the Gateway averaging only 30.1 yards a punt.

Wargo had a punt of 14 and 15 yards into a 15 mile per hour breeze at Illinois State last Saturday.

THE SALUKIS will have the their work cut out for them when they travel to Western Kentucky for a rare Thursday night contest. Last Saturday the Hilltoppers topped 16th-ranked Central Florida 50-36 in Bowling Green.

The Hilltoppers set four school offensive records against Central Florida.

Western Kentucky established a new total offense record with 593 yards in the game, a new record for number of points by both teams-86 points, rushing yards by a quarterback-205 yards, and points by a kicker-14 by Chris Pino.

Western Kentucky head coach Jack Harbaugh is the father of Chicago Bears quarterback Jim Harbaugh.

The senior Harbaugh, who has a 13-25 record at Western Kentucky, was head coach at Western Michigan and an assistant at Iowa, Pittsburgh, Stanford, Bowling Green State, and Jim's alma mater, Michigan.

THE GATEWAY PLAYER of the week on offense is Western Illinois quarterback Donny Simmons who completed 29 of 33 passes for 401 yards and two touchdowns in the Leathernecks win over Indiana State.

The Phoenix, Ariz., senior's 401 yards was fifth-best in Gateway history and the best total in a league game. His 87 percent completion percentage set a school record.

The Gateway defensive honor went to Eastern Illinois defensive tackle Dan Dee. Dee collected 12 tackles and two sacks in the Eastern's 13-10 loss to Southwest Missouri State.

standards" to be upbeat about such an anemic recovery.

"It's a poignant sign of how little they have to talk about that the president and his people would consider this something to brag about," Sperling said.

Separately Tuesday, the Conference Board announced that the confidence of U.S. consumers dropped for the fourth month in a row, a development that undercut a brief rally in the stock market that had followed the new figures on growth.

By day's end, the Dow Jones industrial average had closed down 8.38 points, at 3,235.73.

Also, the Department of Labor said that American workers' wages, salaries and benefits rose 3.5 percent in the year ended Sept. 30, the smallest increase in five years.

Many economists believe that the recession technically ended in the spring of 1991.

But they have been disappointed by the stop-and-go pace of growth ever since, a sluggish, frustrating pattern that contrasts sharply with the ebullient recoveries that have been typical since World War II.

Consumer spending picked up in the third quarter, growing at an annual rate of 3.4 percent, after having slipped into negative territory earlier this year, according to the Department of Commerce.

Spending on big-ticket items, such as furniture and appliances, jumped to an 8.6 percent rate, and rallied more modestly for services and less-expensive products.

Government spending, led unexpectedly by defense, rose at a 2 percent rate, the largest gain in almost two years.

Business investment, meanwhile, was up at a 0.3 percent rate, due to a substantial, 8.5 percent increase in spending on capital goods such as machinery and computers; spending on buildings for business plunged 17.7 percent.

Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki hindered third-quarter growth, Department of Commerce officials said, cutting personal income by $14 billion, because people suffered uninsured losses to property, work interruptions and crop damage.

Would you help
a woman being raped
by a stranger?
How about
a woman being raped
by a friend?

You're at a party. There's lots of drinking going on. Some guys are having sex with a young woman whose drink they've spiked. You don't interfere, thinking it's no big deal.

Well, the law sees it differently. Because if she's unable to give her consent to having sex, it's considered rape. A felony. Punishable by prison.

It benefits everyone for you to stop it from happening. You'll be keeping a woman from tremendous emotional pain if you do. And you could be helping your friends commit a crime if you don't.

Women's Services provides rape prevention programs to classes and residence halls.

We also offer support services for victims.

TENNIS, from page 16

Missouri 6-3, 6-4 and sophomore Alaf Merchant lost to Colorado 6-2, 6-1.

In doubles play, Jay Merchant and Goransson defeated a team from Indiana State 6-2, 6-4 in the first round, but proceeded to lose in the second round to a team from Nebraska. Derouin and Garcia lost in the first round to Indiana 6-2, 6-4.

"Like all the other fall tournaments, this was just good experience, no team scores are counted," coach Dick LeFevre said.

"Because half are team is freshmen, we need experience before the regular spring season begins."

NETTERS, from page 16

She said the results for the invitational, with the high level of competition, would make them a tandem to reckon with in the Missouri Valley Conference in April.

Auld said both Irena Feofanova and Catherine Pietsch were not at the top of their individual games at the invitational.

"Catherine was still down with the flu and was defaulted in her second match because of this," Auld said. "Irena was ill as well, and I think the 84 degree heat did not help either player."

With some slots open in the schedule, Auld moved Lucy Steele up to the No. 5 flight in the singles where Steele won the consolation finals.

Auld said she was happy that all players got playing time and competition exposure.

"Steele combined with Anna Tsui in the No. 4 doubles and won in the finals," Auld said. "Unfortunately, the match could not be listed because the opposing team came from different teams."

Auld said it would have been nice to have been at full strength for the invitational, but overall it was good competition at this stage of the game.

"We need to stay motivated and focused for the spring season now," Auld said. "I feel that we can have an excellent spring season ahead and this includes being strong contenders for the MVC title."

Bonds, Drabek file for free agency

Newsday

Russell—also filed.

Call it restructuring or scaling down or forced dismantling. The process appears to have resumed for the Pittsburgh Pirates and begun for the Oakland Athletics. Nearly one year after Bobby Bonilla took his first step away from the Pirates, Barry Bonds and Doug Drabek did likewise Monday and filed for free agency. Meanwhile, four of the 13 Athletics eligible for free agency—Mark McGwire, Ruben Sierra, Terry Steinbach and Jeff Sierra, Boston Red Sox third baseman Wade Boggs and Chicago Cubs pitcher Greg Maddux were the most attractive among 26 players who filed on the first day of the process, now in its 17th year.

Ninety-four other players are eligible for free agency.

The filing period runs through midnight Nov. 8. Players with the right to demand trades must make their demands during the same period.
