Halloween chaos: 'Party' resurrected

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

What began as "just another Saturday night" on the Strip erupted in an outbreak of people flipping cars, taunting police and officers of the law macing the crowds in an effort to control them.

The annual Halloween celebration weekend in Carbondale resulted in 129 arrests ranging from public possession of alcohol to felony charges of mob action. As of late Saturday night, 2,500 people assembled on South Illinois Avenue.

Between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday, the Strip remained relatively calm with most business taking place at Carbondale liquor stores — not the bars.

By 4:30 p.m. doormen began to take their posts at Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave., and Gatsby's II, 610 S. Illinois Ave., and some costumed participants began to appear on the Strip for the Halloween festivities.

Visitor restrictions keep dorms quiet

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

Visitor restrictions on campus kept University housing areas quieter than a normal weekend.

Cynthia Perkins, coordinator of residence life at Brush Towers, said there were no problems in the towers over the weekend.

"From my perspective they were quiet," Perkins said.

Perkins said student resident assistants (SRAs) were stationed at the front doors to assist people coming in, but the staff did not do anything differently than usual.

Dana Hansen, an SRA in Brown

Hall, said he was on duty all weekend from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m.

"We doubled the people on duty and really stepped up in security. We didn't know what to expect. Hansen, a junior in business and administration from Allon, said.

Hansen said there were no more problems in the housing than an average weekend.

"We got word that things were crazy on the Strip (Saturday night), so we had a little more security, but everything went fine," he said.

Hansen said one option the staff considered was to send residents

Carbondale officials applaud police efforts

Strom said the mob was primarily the offense while the police acted as a defense.

"The actions of the mob were not provoked by police actions and clearly were led by individuals who were determined to act violently and with total disregard for the safety of other persons and property," Strom said.

"I believe the response by the officers was singularly responsible for limiting the damage and further violence," he said. "While I am saddened by this violence, I am very proud of the response by all the police agencies involved."

"I thought our police operated according to plan, and the planning

HAITI STRUGGLES TO ESTABLISH CIVIL ORDER — WASHINGTON — For American troops in Haiti, the easy part — reinstating President Jean-Bertrand Aristide — is over. Now under way is a far harder task: establishing law and order, the foundation of democracy, in a country with only a 50-man "interim" police force still in training and without a judiciary system or prisons worthy of the terms. The U.S. troops, bolstered by small contingents from four other nations, are temporarily in charge. But their mandate is limited to keeping civil order and protecting themselves. Though repressive violence has significantly diminished since the American occupation began on Sept. 19, law and order still seem far off. The Clinton administration admits that the process will take at least a year and probably longer. Meanwhile, U.N. officials, made wary by the Somalia disaster, are grumbling about the risks of taking over from the United States before order is established. The hand-over is tentatively scheduled for March of next year.

NATIONS MEET, DISCUSS HUMAN SMUGGLING — GENEVA — In Romania, greedy smugglers moving people to the West reportedly tell immigrants to take a train to Warsaw, Poland, where then they can buy a rubber dingy and row it across the Oder River to a prosperous life in Germany. Such do-it-yourself smuggling may sound comical. But the trips often end tragically. Desperate immigrants either sail right into the hands of waiting German police or drown in the Oder. "Guides" promised by the smugglers for the dangerous trip never show up. Smuggling people is dangerous and filled with con artists who prey on the hundreds of thousands of immigrants willing to sacrifice all they own to move illegally to another country. The human cargo business, which, experts estimate, racks up as much as $7 billion a year, was the focus of an unprecedented conference here last week. Representatives of 70 nations heard sobering reports of how the human traffic is growing, in the process fueling the powers of organized criminal groups, notably in the Far East and Eastern Europe.

SCANDALS PROVOKE DEMANDS FOR REFORM — ISTANBUL, Turkey — The accused — urbane, well-coiffed, very rich — drove away from court as usual in luxury sedans. But one recent afternoon, the television cameras stayed. They went home with the $700-a-month state prosecutor Sudi Gencer — on the bus — trying to learn more about this nation's seemingly endemic scandals. Power, money, sex, shots in the night — they're all just the most visible part of the "buy-anybody" scandals that have undermined public faith in Turkey's public institutions and are triggering widespread demands here for reform. Thus far, the scandals — unraveling more in the Turkish press than in the courts — show a pattern of collusion and bribery among business people, top politicians and directors of big state-owned enterprises.

NEW LEGISLATORS STRUGGLE TO KEEP SEATS — NORTH ROYALTON, Ohio — According to a recent study by Congressional Quarterly, first-term members of the House account for half the names on the "endangered incumbents" list, with 31 freshmen among the 63 House members judged to be in "competitive races." Democrats outnumber Republicans on the list, 23 to 8. Swept into office two years ago under President Clinton's battle cry of "change," first-term Democratic reformers are now finding themselves struggling against a wave of anti-incumbent sentiment among voters who are expressing disdain for Clinton and disgust for lawmakers who promise more than they deliver.

Man escapes arrest

Individual was involved in Student Center fight

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

An individual was taken into custody and later escaped after a fight broke out around noon Friday between a group of African-American individuals in the Student Center.

Corporal Donna Kuncie of the SIU Police Department, who supervised the controlling of the fight, said the altercation took place in the Student Center near the McDonald's and the University Bookstore where four walkways meet.

"Within a two-second time, there was a whole group of people fighting," Kuncie said. "Mace was used to disperse the crowd, and one person was taken into custody."

Reports issued by the SIU Police to University News Service state that the arrested individual complained of a cut on his head when he was taken to the police station.

While the SIU Police called an ambulance for the arrested individual, he fled from the station.

Amy Born, a sophomore in special education, said she was walking back to her job as a cashier in the bookstore while the fight was taking place, and she was hit in the face with mace.

"I was just coming back to work after I got a cookie at the bakery," Born said. "I took a bite of my cookie, and all of a sudden I felt strange and started coughing. At first I thought the cookie was poisoning me, and then I fell to the floor."

Born said she rinsed her eyes out later when she heard that was the proper procedure after being maced.

Jeff Ellebracht, sophomore with an undecided major, said he witnessed the fight while watching from his post as a worker at the University Bookstore bag drop-off counter.

"I looked around, and all of a sudden I saw these guys outside the window throwing punches and beating on each other," Ellebracht said. "All these people were going crazy."

Aviation banquet provides exposure, scholarships

By Kelle Huttes
Senior Reporter

More than 300 SIUC students, faculty, alumni and airline representatives were in the Student Center Friday night for the annual Aviation Management Society career day and banquet.

Craig Lofgren, AMS president, said the career day and dinner attracted 30 aviation companies, faculty, aviation alumni and students.

Lee Wallace, manager of flight operations divisions for the United Parcel Service, donated five mahogany airplane models, which were auctioned to raise money for the Victor Davis scholarship. Each plane was valued at $250, and more than $840 was raised.

By selling model airplanes at the banquet, the society took in $1,200, which will be donated to the scholarship and the SIU Flying Team.

Davis was an SIUC aviation student and president of the Black Aviation Association who died in 1993. Although the scholarship has not been endowed, money continues to be raised, Lofgren said.

The Jerry Kennedy scholarship, a $750 award given to a flight instruction student, was given to Michael Nelson at the banquet to offset the cost of flight fees.

Lofgren said the society gives aviation students exposure to the industry and experience in aviation management through internships, field trips and hosting professional speakers.

Saluki Sound Spectacular shakes Shryock

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

The lights at Shryock Auditorium dimmed Sunday afternoon as SIUC students in bands throughout the University played the Star Spangled Banner while the stage curtains slowly drew back to reveal a huge American flag.

This opened the 6th annual Saluki Sound Spectacular hosted by the School of Music.

First to perform was the SIUC Jazz Ensemble I, directed by Robert Allison, who teaches applied trumpet and jazz improvisation classes at the School of Music.

The 18-member band performs on and off campus and played "Mi Burrito," which sounded like something from the Lawrence Welk Show. "A Child is Born" and "Take the 'A' Train."

Michael Hanes, a professor in the School of Music, moderated the event and said it allows the school to spotlight the variety of talent at the school.

He said in the past, instruments such as clarinets, trombones and trumpets were featured, but this year the spotlight was on percussion.

"It wasn't until the 20th century that people began to accept and recognize the percussion ensemble," he said.

The group SyZyGy performed as part of that ensemble, using various instruments ranging from a skillet to xylophones to make the sounds.

The 5-member group performed "Kitchen Instruments," "The Comedian's Gallop" and "The Baby is Crying."

The 50-member University Wind Ensemble performed a range of sounds from a slow "Ave Maria" to a march called "The Purple Pageant."

Hanes said the wind ensemble has "the broadest repertoire of any of the ensembles performing today."

More than 350 community members and students attended the event, with most seeming to enjoy the show.

Murphysboro resident Richard Williams said the percussion band was "rather interesting" and he would like to see them again in the future.

SIUC student Kelli Davis, a junior in biology from Chicago, said she enjoyed the "pots and pans song."

"It's not the type of music I usually listen to, but I enjoyed myself," Davis said.

After the intermission, melodic flute sounds filled the air as the SIUC Flute Choir took the stage. The 9-member group, conducted by Hanes, played two songs.

The event ended with the SIUC Marching Salukis, the Saluki Shakers and the Saluki Color Guard.

The audience members were shaken out of their seats as the three groups dramatically marched in and took the stage.

Hanes said marching band tunes tend to be short to keep people's attention during football games, so the songs were performed in sets of three.

The Saluki Shakers and Color Guard added to the band's swinging, toe-tapping performance by dancing and marching to the music.

Grant puts Russian university in business

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

With the help of SIUC's College of Business Administration, a foreign university is building its own graduate business program.

With a $277,304 grant from the United States Information Agency, eight students from Vladimir, approximately 100 miles east of Russia, will be able to study business at SIUC. Charles Stubbart, associate professor of management said.

The students, the first of whom is expected to arrive in January, will earn master's and doctorate degrees in business administration from the University, he said.

Once the students complete their education, they will return to teach at Vladimir State Technical University, which currently does not offer business courses, Stubbart said.

Stubbart, who along with Linz Brown, associate director of International Programs and Services, arranged the grant for the program, said the project is another form of foreign aid.

"The United States doesn't want Russia going back to Communism," he said.

"So they're hoping that if they provide projects like this one that the Russians will learn enough about business so that they can have a market economy and not a command economy."

Stubbart said there are approximately 10 similar projects taking place between United States and Russia.

SIUC's part in the project is in keeping with its mission of education, he said.

"The University prides itself on its internationalism and this is a part of that," he said.

The two-year grant will also pay to send Stubbart, along with as many as three other professors to Vladimir to teach, he said.

Having returned from a week-long visit to Vladimir earlier this month, Stubbart said he observed the changes that have occurred since the fall of the Soviet Union.

"There used to be a lot of people standing in lines wanting to buy things, but they don't have that anymore," he said. "Now it's just the opposite. They have big inflation there, prices are going up real fast."

Brown said the project is another in a series of interactions between the University and Vladimir.

"We have had a relationship with Vladimir that dates back a few years," he said.

SIUC began working with the university, formerly an engineering school called Vladimir State Technical Institute, in 1987, Brown said.

The two universities participated in the Samantha Smith Memorial Exchange Program in 1991, he said. Also funded by USIA, the program involved the exchange of two students between the universities.

Solving Halloween problem starts now

IT WAS NO SURPRISE THAT THIS PAST weekend turned into a rowdy street party on the Strip. The community expected it, the Carbondale police department prepared for it and the partiers delivered it. Unfortunately, it took the city, and University to almost the last minute to plan restrictions.

City restrictions of closing the bars on the Strip at 10 p.m. this weekend apparently did not work, but instead caused the party to start earlier. The problems that help heat up this weekend was the waffling on what the restrictions would be by city officials. The city council ended up watering down an earlier proposal of closing all the bars at 10 p.m.

The poor communication by University officials and Undergraduate Student Government about the Housing restriction that prohibited visitors in the residence halls caused some tension almost two months ago. Plus, the student leaders started too late to plan alternatives and the friction between student government and Carbondale City Council heightened after the restriction to close the Strip bars at 10 p.m. was passed. Besides all this, there were still no alternatives to underage drinkers planned or looked into.

But, is hindsight better than foresight? Not in this case. People were expecting the worst and hoping for the best.

Today, or very soon, is the day for all involved—including the city council, University administration and student leaders—to sit down and decide what to do for next year. If everyone had sat down this time last year and made plans maybe more alternative activities would have been available to detour from "the Strip scene."

Just remember, if all else fails the University administration could just shut down the campus again. But hopefully all the parties involved will find better solutions than that.

Election time is here: Get ready with issues

QUESTION: WHAT IS ONLY A WEEK AWAY and will have an impact on your life? It is the Nov. 8 election and people should focus on the issues at hand. These issues—education funding, taxes, job development and crime—will help determine who gets what seat and why.

In this area, besides statewide races, there are many races to look at or follow. But as the clock ticks down to next Tuesday, there are a few races SIUC students should really be concerned about besides governor. One of those races is for the 115th legislative district between Democratic incumbent Jerry Hawkins and Republican challenger Mike Bost. This race will decide who will sit in Springfield to represent and get funds for SIUC.

Students, it is time for you to study the issues and decide who you will be voting on next week. Make your voice be heard: Vote in '94.

The Daily Egyptian's summary of major races begins this week.

Viewpoint

Censorship, DE cause controversy

The Daily Egyptian once again delivers the goods to the students.

SIUC's bastion of the truth spews forth claims of censorship in the paper's usual overly emotional style, mainly centering around Jay Thomson's "art" exhibit, "Labels: One Fag Bashes Back."

The Oct. 18, 1994 editorial claims that to truly showcase student art, SPC, the Student Center, and the University should have little or no input as to what is publicly displayed.

The editorial criticizes SPC for having a contingency plan to deal with potentially offensive material. Thomson claims the SPC is making policy up as it goes along to censor him specifically.

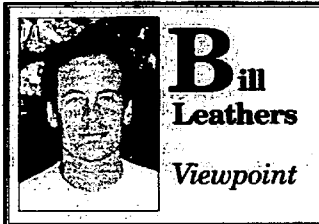

The editorial claims Art Alley, which falls under SPC's domain, "should not be turned into SPC's... interpretation of student art."

By the same token, it should not be a collection of committee approved "sanitized for the public consumption" artwork.... What SPC has attempted to do is determine what taste is, and that is something that must be exclusively determined by individual.

The D.E. plainly supports unabridged freedom of expression, in all forms, correct?

Below the editorial is the D.E.'s policies concerning editorials and letters. Published for every reader to see the D.E. itself has guidelines and restrictions for student expression.

The policy states in plain, if tiny, print "All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication." All letters are subject to editing. What editing? Do they refer to grammar, spelling, and punctuation, or will they alter statements by individuals expressing themselves publicly, like Thomson did? If I were to include George Carlin's seven dirty words, would they be considered for print? Considered, yes. Printed, no.

It would seem as though the D.E., in one column, criticizes the SPC for having established guidelines for public display of expression, yet the D.E. also has a policy in place to "edit" similar expressions.

"SIUC's bastion of the truth spews forth claims of censorship in the paper's usual overly emotional style, mainly centering around Jay Thomson's 'art' exhibit; 'Labels: One Fag Bashes Back.'"

If you compare the D.E.'s policy with the accusations hurled at SPC, it would appear that the D.E. is not well versed in its own established guidelines for publication. This seriously questions the credibility of the editorial staff, and the paper in general.

It is unfortunate that the issues of "taste" and "art" are completely overlooked in this specific matter. If anyone has seen the "art" exhibit, they walk away with their own impressions and interpretations. In my opinion, the whole exhibit was lacking in taste. Christ adorned in a condom is insulting. It seems shock value has replaced aesthetics in the art world.

Mr. Thomson acts as if he is a victim of oppression by the evil establishment moving to "censor" his Constitutional rights, and the D.E. is there, covering the story, smelling scandal the whole time.

If it wasn't for O.J., Wayne Bobbitt, Andrew Ensor, or Jay Thomson, the D.E. might have to resort to actually investigating the news instead of instigating it. It's called tabloid journalism. It's cheap. It's trashy. It's overdone. Spare us the gore, won't you?

SIUC is an institution for learning. The purpose of the Daily Egyptian, WIDB, Art Alley, and other organizations is to allow students to gain experience, and with that experience, knowledge....

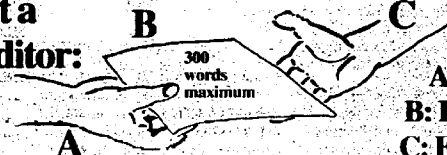

There are requirements and responsibilities of these groups to avoid potentially inflammatory situations. The D.E. has published advertisements in the past that has brought criticism on itself.

While I may or may not support questionable material, I applaud the D.E. for its representation of the First Amendment.

I would have to question, however, why the D.E. would print an editorial so blatantly biased and uninformed, and one that is contradictory to its own policies.

Kieth White, a senior in music business, said he saw the altercation from the Student Center Information Station where he works as a clerk.

"There were these two groups of black guys at the bottom of the ramp (near the University Bookstore), and when the two guys who were fighting really got going, everybody else took off," White said.

"The police were there in no time and used mace to break it up."

The police said they have no leads on which specific group may have been involved in the altercation at the Student Center.

exposed to employers and a great way for companies to get to know SIUC students," he said. "AMS is like a revolving door — employers tell us what they're looking for and we find a student that fits the bill for them."

Carolyn Witte, a senior in aviation management from Fond du Lac, Wis., said she received a semester internship this fall with Trans World Express, a regional commuter airline in St. Louis, partially because of her involvement with the society.

"The first thing I was asked when I got off the plane to go to my interview, was about my experience and extra-curricular activities," she said. "He (my employer) said, 'We don't look at education, other than the fact that you have a degree.'"

Witte said the career fair was helpful because she learned the specific qualities various companies look for when recruiting interns and employees.

"It's (the fair) really informative because you can look at each company and see what they are looking for so you can tailor yourself towards them," she said. "Most companies start out with interns because you can't just go in and get a $25,000 job."

Jim Tumbleson, a senior in aviation management from Buda, said he is serving a semester internship this fall at Delta Airlines in Atlanta.

Although Tumbleson heard about the position through the University, he said he was asked about his involvement with the Flying Team and AMS.

"A good thing about the internship is that I have a guarantee pilot interview — hopefully if all goes well I'll be flying there someday," he said.

He said by working for the chief pilot and helping develop recurrent training programs in Atlanta, he will bring back helpful information to teach private, instrumental and commercial pilots training at SIUC.

Lofgren also said members met with aviation administrators and officials in Washington, D.C., last April and have attended national conventions — that provide opportunities to network.

Morale among U.S. troops low

Los Angeles Times

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—As word finally reached Camp Dragon of President Clinton's dramatic visit to U.S. forces in Kuwait last week, a wave of resentment swept Sunday through the former swamp and garbage dump that now houses many of the 16,000 U.S. troops still in Haiti.

Against the backdrop of a military mission that senior U.S. officials confirmed may last longer than the Clinton administration had hoped and promised, the news could not have come at a worse time for combat troops in Haiti, whose morale already appeared to be plummeting.

Typical of the reaction was Pfc. Dan DeCristo, who sat shirtless, sweating and scribbling a script for a comedy skit Sunday morning while some of his colleagues in the 22nd Infantry Regiment of the Army's 10th Mountain Division played in a volleyball tournament nearby.

"I just wish people back home would realize we're still down here. And here the president goes and tells those guys in Kuwait to go do their Christmas shopping?"

DeCristo, a Rhode Island native, said with incredulity. "Look, I'm a big supporter of President Clinton. I'm always getting ripped for it from the guys. But I heard he said that, and I thought, geez!"

"I just wish people back home would realize we're (U.S. troops) are still down here."

—Pfc. Dan DeCristo

"Here he can go halfway around the world for a big peace signing, but he can't go 90 miles off the coast of Miami to see, 'Thanks?' To me, it looked like we've been forgotten."

It looked that way to Chaplain Dewane Stone too. The veteran Army chaplain of the 52nd Engineering Combat Battalion from Ft. Carson, Colo., has borne the brunt of the troops' resentment. Dozens of soldiers, he said, came to him to complain.

"But chaplain," they all said, "we came here first, and the president goes and visits them and not us. How come he's going to let them go home first when we've been here longer?"

"That swept through the camp," Stone said. "The feeling is unanimous. These are the forgotten soldiers."

And most of them will not be home by Christmas.

The sagging morale among a highly successful intervention force that Clinton has praised from afar and cast as a personal foreign policy victory comes as senior U.S. officials confirmed Sunday that Haiti's plodding political process is likely to delay the U.S. withdrawal here. The intervention force, they said, is now likely to remain in Haiti beyond the Clinton administration's worst-case target date of March.

The policy dilemma facing the administration, the officials said, is grounded in what are now two conflicting promises. The administration has vowed to withdraw from the mission by early next year and yet has promised to keep combat soldiers like those in the 10th Mountain Division in Haiti until after crucial parliamentary elections.

Shots fired at White House; Clinton safe

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Francisco Martin Duran, the young Colorado gunman who sprayed the outside of the White House with rifle fire, was formally charged Sunday with possessing a firearm as a convicted felon and damaging federal property. He left what one federal source called "a semi-suicide note."

According to a federal source, Duran — an Army veteran who served two years in the Fort Leavenworth, Kan., penitentiary for aggravated assault with a vehicle — apparently expected to die after firing 20 to 30 rounds at the White House on Saturday.

A rambling, handwritten note found among his belongings detailed how he wanted his affairs handled in the event of his death, the source said.

Duran instead was subdued by two tourists and taken into custody moments later by Secret Service officers.

Although at least eight shots

Officials say attacker may have been suicidal from his Chinese-made assault rifle struck the building, no one was injured in the shooting.

Clinton at the time was in a rear bedroom watching a college football game on television.

He was not close to any of the shots although he heard the crack of gunfire, aides said.

Duran's note eventually may shed light on a possible motive in the attack, but officials said Sunday they still were not certain what motivated him to fire the rapid shots from a public sidewalk in front of the White House.

The Secret Service, describing his demeanor as "completely flat," said the 26-year-old hotel worker was not cooperating with authorities.

Leon Panetta, the White House chief of staff, said, "At this point in time, there really is no indication as to what his motive was."

Duran was scheduled to be arraigned in federal court Monday. The firearms charge, upon conviction, is punishable by a maximum 10 years in prison and fines of $250,000.

The property charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years and a $10,000 fine.

Although officials said there is no evidence at present of any assassination attempt by Duran, Ronald Noble, the Treasury Department's enforcement chief, told reporters Sunday that such a charge has not been ruled out.

He said a criminal investigation is continuing with help from agencies including the Secret Service, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the FBI, the U.S. Park Police and the District of Columbia Police Department.

The Army reported that Duran was dishonorably discharged in September 1993 after serving 30 months in military prison on charges of vehicular aggravated assault, drunk and disorderly conduct, drunken driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

He recently had been working as an upholsterer at the posh Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs, Colo., but abruptly disappeared 30 days ago after saying he needed to buy supplies for target practice, according to a missing persons report filed by his wife in El Paso County.

in Saturday night's effort, and about 125 volunteers helped clean up the area surrounding South Illinois Avenue Sunday morning.

USG president Edwin Sawyer had said he only was expecting about 35 to 40 volunteers.

Mike Nolan, USG representative for Southern Hills, was in charge of the cleanup. He said he was impressed by the turnout.

"There's about 125 people here. It's a good turnout," he said.

"This is good, excellent. This is something all the student leaders have worked hard on."

The cleanup started at 8:00 a.m. and was completed by 9:30 a.m. The volunteers walked the streets surrounding the Strip, and cleaned up trash in the streets and up to the sidewalks of yards.

Before they began, Nolan told workers to only clean the area up to the sidewalks.

"Don't go up to people's doors — we don't have their permission," he said. "Clean from the streets to the sidewalks."

Sawyer said he was impressed by the turnout for the cleanup.

"I'm ecstatic — 125 people is way more than I expected," he said.

Sawyer also said he hopes to make the cleanup a tradition for years to come.

After the cleanup, volunteers were treated to a cookout at the pavilion on the corner of South Illinois Avenue and Main Street. Hamburgers, brats, chips, soda and potato salad were served.

Matthew Parsons, USG chief of staff, said he was pleased with USG's effort Saturday night.

"Well, I don't know if it helped in any viable problem solving, but I think students are understanding the problem," he said. "It showed a lot of ambition to try and make a difference."

Parsons also said he was anxious to help the situation.

"I was looking forward to talking to students and creating an atmosphere that's positive," he said.

Parsons said crowd members started asking USG officials where the Safety Committee members were. He said the job of the volunteers ended when the situation got out of hand.

"Our role wasn't to be a police force," Parsons said.

"It was to educate people on what the police could do. If it got unsafe, I wasn't going to jeopardize their safety."

Sawyer said the volunteers did their job on Saturday night.

"We did all we could do," he said. "It was amazing how many people were receptive to us."

During the effort, USG handed out about 100 pounds of candy in the first two hours, and about 300 condoms.

Parsons said the condoms were the first to run out after about an hour.

Organizations and businesses that contributed to the clean up were Delta Chi, USG, Panhellenic Council, Wal-Mart, Kroger West, Country Fair, the University, the city, and the Student Center.

U.S. Treasury Department criticizes flat-tax proposal

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A much-touted Republican proposal to replace the existing income tax code with a 17 percent "flat tax" on wages and corporate income would cost the government $244 billion a year in lost tax revenue, according to a Treasury Department analysis.

An internal administration memorandum summarizing the study, a copy of which was provided to The Washington Post, also suggests that any modifications to close or offset the alleged revenue gap would cut taxes for the wealthy at the expense of the middle class and poor Americans.

"As written, the proposal would either increase the deficit by $1 trillion over five years or require a flat rate so high it would raise taxes on everybody making under $200,000," a senior Clinton administration official said.

Disclosure of the Treasury study comes as Democrats are struggling to blunt the impact of a leaked memorandum prepared by White House Budget Director Alice M. Rivlin that Republicans are using to charge the administration is considering plans for higher taxes and deep cuts in benefits for middle class and elderly Americans.

A spokesman for Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, author of the flat tax proposal, denounced the Treasury document and its release in the midst of the congressional campaigns.

Armey claims his proposal would not cost the government more than $40 billion in lost revenue in its first year and that the gap would vanish in later years.

Annual Elie Wiesel essay contest puts emphasis on ethical society

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff Reporter

SIUC undergraduate students can participate in the 1995 Elie Wiesel Prize in Ethics Essay Contest, with awards totaling $10,000.

The contest is limited to full-time juniors and seniors. The theme for this year's essay contest is, "Creating an ethical society: personal responsibility and the common good." Only three essays from each university will be accepted.

First prize in the contest is $5,000, a second prize is $2,500 and third prize is $1,500. Two honorable mentions will also be awarded at $500 each.

The Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity, located in New York, N.Y., which Elie Wiesel, author of more than 20 books including "Night," "Legends of Our Time" and "Twilight," and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986, sponsors the contest.

Frederick Williams, director of the University Honors Program, said the contest reflects Wiesel's on-going dedication to improving upon the human condition.

"Wiesel spent a horrible childhood in the death camps of WWII," he said. "He survived and used the rest of his life, not for revenge, but in the service of humanity. This year's contest reflects the on-going achievements of Wiesel's life."

Rebecca Weiss, administrative director of the foundation, said this contest urges students to think about the ethical problems that confront our society.

"The Elie Wiesel Prize in Ethics challenges students to examine urgent, ethical issues which we face as individuals and as members of society," she said.

Cecily Wilson, administrative assistant for the Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity, said students can write on whatever topic they want as long as it relates to ethics.

"It's sort of like what you can do, personally, towards the common good," she said. "We encourage students to use as much personal experience and creativity as possible. They shouldn't feel restricted in what they write about."

Williams will decide, if necessary, which three SIUC entries will be submitted to the foundation.

"The foundation will only accept three submissions from any university," he said. "I'm the one whose supposed to decide, if we get more than three, which entries will be submitted. It's a task I'm happy to perform."

Wilson said the contest will be judged by a distinguished panel including Elie Wiesel himself.

"He is always one of the judges," she said.

Williams said Wiesel is an excellent judge for the contest.

"I can't think of a clearer mind or a stronger voice for an ethical society than Elie Wiesel," he said. "He's not only a man with a conscious, and an extremely ethical man, but he's also a scholar."

Williams said essays submitted should be thoughtful, informative and persuasive. They must be able to communicate an idea, he said.

"An essay, at its heart, is a vehicle of persuasion. It's not just to blow off steam, but to persuade others who may not have thought about it, or who may oppose it," he said.

"The successful essayist will not only have the honor of having persuaded Elie Wiesel, but a check for $5,000 as well."

Students must submit entries to Frederick Williams at the University Honors Program located at 3341 Faner Hall, by the end of the semester.

Two planes crash in Siberia

Weekend accidents provoke concerns about airline safety

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW.—At least 26 people were killed in two weekend airplane crashes in Siberia, authorities said Sunday, heightening concern over safety on Russia's newly privatized airlines.

The crashes Saturday brought the number of people killed in Russian air disasters this year to at least 287, compared with 221 deaths in 1993.

"The state has lost control over the situation," an officer of the Transportation Ministry's aviation department said Sunday.

"Privatizing Aeroflot (the former Soviet state carrier) was a colossal stupidity."

The two accidents came just as Russian and U.S. officials were reassuring frightened airline passengers that air safety was improving after a disastrous record in the past three years.

In one infamous catastrophe, black box tapes disclosed that an Aeroflot pilot's teen-age son was at the controls of a European-made Airbus 310 when it went into a tailspin and crashed in Novokuznetsk in March, killing 75 people. Expatriates have taken to calling Aeroflot "Scare-oflot" or "Aeroplop."

But, in a sign of reviving confidence, the U.S. government lifted a ban earlier this month on federal employees traveling on Russian airlines.

In July, the State Department had warned citizens of the hazards of flying here now that Aeroflot has broken up into about 320 different national and regional airlines.

U.S. government employees were instructed to stay off these "Baby-flots" except in case of emergency. At an Oct. 14 news conference, U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering rescinded that ban, announcing that a thorough review by about 30 Russian and 25 U.S. aviation experts had given Russia "minimally passing marks" for air safety oversight.

The experts' report, however, warned that "immediate steps must be taken to avoid slippage into unacceptable levels."

U.S. government employees are now permitted to travel on Russian carriers that are certified to operate internationally, meaning they must meet a higher safety standard than other Russian carriers.

Embassy officials could not say Sunday whether Yakutavia and Aeronika, the airlines involved in Saturday's crashes, were on the list of U.S.-approved carriers. But the Transportation Ministry spokesman said the airlines were not accredited for international travel.

In the first crash, an Aeronika Antonov AN-12 flying from Sakhalin in the Russian Far East bound for Yermolino in the European part of Russia crashed as it was trying to land for refueling in Ust-Ilimsk, about 385 miles north of Irkutsk.

The plane burst into flames about a mile from the runway and crashed into a mountain, killing all 21 people aboard, according to the Ministry for Emergency Situations.

The second crash Saturday involved a small AN-2 plane owned by Yakutavia that burst into flames during a crash landing in the remote village of Batagay in the autonomous republic of Yakut-Sakha. Five people were killed, including one child, and nine were injured, officials said Sunday. Details of the crash were not immediately available.

Officials, business leaders plan prosperity for nations in weekend economic summit

Los Angeles Times

CASABLANCA, Morocco.—With Israel and its Arab neighbors steadily chipping away at half a century of war and hatred, government officials and business leaders from more than 60 nations gathered Sunday at Morocco's royal palace to search for ways to convert peace into greater prosperity for the region.

"There is no reason why the economic miracles that are transforming parts of Asia, Eastern Europe and Latin America cannot also transform this region," Secretary of State Warren Christopher told the opening session of the Middle East and North Africa Economic Summit.

"I can foresee a day when the 300 million people of the Middle East and North Africa, so long held back by strife and hatred, can finally join the mainstream of international commerce," he said.

Christopher, seated next to Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, outlined a four-point U.S. plan to stimulate investment, trade and tourism in a region where war and hostility have often built impenetrable economic barriers between the closest of neighbors, costing billions of dollars a year in lost production. Although he did not include it in the four-point plan, Christopher also called for an end to the Arab economic boycott of Israel. He said the boycott has virtually collapsed and no longer has much economic impact but said, "We want to have a formal recognition that the boycott has come to an end."

U.S. officials said the conference probably will urge the Arab League to repeal the boycott.

With most league members represented in Casablanca, such an appeal would probably carry substantial weight.

The conference, attended by 10 heads of state or government, 60 Cabinet ministers, more than 400 other government officials and—probably, most important—more than 1,000 businessmen, amounts to a coming-out party for Israel, which only a few years ago was not welcome at large Arab-dominated regional meetings.

Kids benefit from BAC visit different youth centers to get in contact with the children.

"We're advocating a safe Halloween — going out, giving candy and spending time with the children," Brown said.

"We would like to encourage everybody to give back to the community."

BAC member Angela Barnes, a junior in mortuary science from Chicago, said she loves to volunteer and do things with the children. "I'd rather work with children because I have so much fun with them," she said.

A staff member at the Women's Center said the kids enjoy the attention from the volunteers, and it cheers them up.

"It's a nice thing to do — that's what childhood is all about."

A mother of one of the participating children and resident of the Women's Center said the volunteers give the children a chance to be around other adults.

Another parent and resident of the center said the volunteer service is wonderful, because children who live in the center are going through the crisis of trying to adapt to a new environment after being exposed to domestic violence.

"I like the idea of different organizations coming in and helping us. It's nice that they take time out to be with our kids because they've been through so much," she said.

Members of the SIUC Black Affairs Council took time Saturday afternoon to celebrate Halloween with children missing out on the opportunity to live in a traditional family setting.

Lamont Brown, chairman of community affairs for BAC, planned the visit to the Women's Center.

"We want to have community relations with the people," Brown, a senior in social work from Chicago, said. "One of my fundamental principles is helping out the community, going within and being a part of it."

Participating children ate candy, played on playground equipment and played with food coloring and shaving cream.

The visit to the Women's Center is one of many BAC committee projects they have planned, Brown said.

Rose-tint my world: 'Rocky Horror Picture Show' offers safe diversion

By Emily Priddy
Staff Reporter

Movie Review

While the revelers on the Strip overturned cars and wreaked havoc Saturday night, more than 250 SIUC students and visitors pursued a safer, cheaper, equally zany tradition at the Student Programming Council's showings of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Although the parking lot was virtually empty at midnight — presumably a result of the University's ban on visitor parking over Halloween weekend — the atmosphere in the building was electric.

In the words of the film's central character, Dr. Frank N. Furter (Tim Curry), one could almost see the audience "quiver with anticipation" as the lights dimmed.

From the initiation of the "virgins" — first-time "Rocky Horror" viewers who were invited to the front of the room, welcomed, ridiculed and sent back to their seats before the start of the show — to the closing credits, the audience was enthusiastic and exuberant.

As the 20th-Century Fox logo appeared on the screen, nearly 200 voices intoned, "A long, long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away, God said, 'Let there be lips.' And there were. And they were good."

As if on cue, a giant pair of velvety, ruby-red lips floated through a great black nothingness and began singing the opening song.

Although SPC, who sponsored the movie, sold props packages consisting of rice, toast and a newspaper for $1 each, many viewers also brought their own materials to supplement the show.

During the song "There's a Light" Over at the Frankenstein Place," dozens of cigarette lighters illuminated the dark ballroom, swaying to the music like fans at a Barry Manilow concert, and when Curry yanked a tablecloth off a table during a dinner scene, scattering dishes and silverware everywhere, paper plates sailed through the air like Frisbees.

The highlight of the show was the "Time Warp," a bizarre line dance that brought audience members to their feet and sent them scrambling to the front of the ballroom to join in taking "a jump to the left and then a step to the right-right."

Chris Thomas, chairman of SPC films, said about 120 people attended the showings Thursday night, and more than 250 turned out Saturday, with 186 at the midnight showing.

Thomas said he is not sure how long SPC has sponsored "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," but he said it has become a Halloween tradition at SIUC.

The movie was shown in Ballroom D at the Student Center at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Thursday and 9:30 and midnight Saturday.

was well done," Doherty said.

Strom said there were in excess of 80 police officers on duty Saturday night while the crowd on the Strip Saturday night numbered approximately 2,500.

While Carbondale and SIU police officers dealt with crowd actions, the Illinois State Police and Secretary of State Police assisted with calls for service and provided extra patrol to the city.

Doherty said behavior early Saturday night was somewhat the same as in the past, and he thought the crowd would thin out. When the crowd began to move is when he said things got out of hand.

Police used mace to break up members of the mob who did not comply with orders to disperse or who were running through areas causing damage.

Several members of the mob damaged vehicles, broke windows and tipped over street signs.

Preliminary Carbondale Police reports indicate that 55 persons were arrested Saturday night.

Among those arrested was Marlon A. Phillips, 21, of 614 W. Willow. Phillips was charged with felony mob action and felony criminal damage to property resulting from the incident in which the car was overturned on South University Avenue.

Anthony J. Rudis, 19, of 1715 Neely Hall was arrested and charged with felony mob action resulting from his actions on South Illinois Avenue.

Doherty and Strom both said they feel the members of the crowd were looking for something to happen.

"Some people wished for what happened to happen," Strom said. "There were members of the crowd who were bent on putting some aspect of society in danger, and that is a mentality that is beyond comprehension."

Doherty and Strom said they feel that mentality was instilled in the minds of the crowd before the weekend even began.

"Some media had built it up and so did some organizations by selling T-shirts," Doherty said. "The mentality had been created that something would go wrong, and people wanted to be there to see it go wrong."

Strom said the actions Saturday night were fueled by comments made prior to the weekend and by the sale of T-shirts promoting rioting.

He also said he does not blame the liquor restrictions for what happened and does not feel it affected the outcome one way or the other.

"I don't think anyone can say that it (the havoc) was done by people from out of town," Strom said. "You have to place the blame where it is — two people who were arrested. The person who led the car tipping and the leader of the mob that attempted to cause havoc were SIUC students."

Doherty said the revelers had a chance to prove themselves responsible, but instead they chose to break the rules.

"The policies were more or less a compromise," Doherty said. "People were allowed to show they could behave more responsibly, and they didn't take that opportunity."

Doherty also said the liquor policies were effective, because there was no alcohol in the crowd on the street.

He said the possibility of the liquor laws becoming more stringent is something the city will have to look at, and the situation overall is something the city and the University will have to review.

"This has long been of concern to the city and a major reason why we have tried several approaches to ending the Halloween street party," Doherty said. "Obviously, we must look at other alternatives regarding Halloween and seriously review our overall liquor policies."

Strom said he hopes the entire community, student body included, is just as disappointed as he is at the outcome.

"This is not what students want their campus to stand for, and it's not what we want the community to stand for," Strom said.

NOTICE FALL LEAF COLLECTION CITY OF CARBONDALE

The City's Public Works Department will offer a curbside, Loose Leaf Collection program during November and December. Calls for service will be accepted beginning October 26, 1994. Residents wishing to participate, should rake their leaves to the curb of street side and call the Environmental Services Office at 457-3275 between 8am and 4pm (closed 12pm - 1pm). Collection routes will be formulated according to date of call and area of service. A disposal fee of $15.00 will be assessed each time the residence is served. The Loose Leaf Collection program will terminate and the last calls for scheduling will be taken December 30, 1994.

Please note that the Landscape Waste "Bag and Bundle" Program will remain in place. Those desiring collection of bagged leaves and grass and/or bundles of brush may call the same number listed above.

Questions related to this program may be directed to the Environmental Services Manager.

Remember for collection service call 457-3275.

Business owners discuss effect of weekend revelers, restrictions

By Charlotte Rivers
Campus Life Editor

Businesses on and off South Illinois Avenue reported varying amounts of crowds through the weekend.

At Cousin's, on North Washington Street, there was little increase in business, said owner Bill Dick.

"It was business as usual," he said.

"We cater to the over-21 crowd. The under-21 kids don't come here anyway — they had their own private parties. We had a good crowd, a good time. It might have been a little higher than usual, but not much."

However, Jimmy John's, on South Illinois Avenue, had an increase in sales Friday and Saturday.

General manager Gene Josephitis said in spite of being forced to close their doors, business was up.

"Even though we were made to close, we never stopped taking deliveries," he said.

"Ninety percent of our business is from deliveries. We had two record-breaking days. It was spectacular."

Josephitis said drivers had trouble

ble getting through the crowd on the Strip from 9:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

"After it cleared out at 11:30, there was no problem. Before that, it was wall-to-wall people," he said.

La Bamba's owner Daniel Ramiraz said his sales were down compared to the same time last year.

"Business was okay basically," he said. "But we did 40 to 50 percent less than last year because the bars were closed."

Ramiraz said part of the reason for the loss of business was because police made him close for about 30 minutes.

He said police made him close so the street could be cleaned and the crowd dispersed.

"We probably lost about 30 percent of our business (for the evening)," he said.

"When the bars are empty, we're empty. Between 10 p.m. and 3 a.m., we usually do our best business."

There were no problems with the crowd and no damage, he said.

He said the city and business owners should make an effort to work together in the future to help each other.

"If we could get together for next year and get rid of nervous tensions, it's going to be better for everybody — the city, the students and businesses."

A representative of PK's said business was average Friday and down Saturday.

"It was absolutely terrible," bartender Stan Martin said. "It was the worst Saturday night in I don't know how long."

Martin said PK's best business is usually after 10 p.m.

"It was an average night, but since we don't fill up until about 10 or 10:30, we lost business. We were out of here by 10:30 with no problem."

directly to their rooms or to leave the building, in order to keep people from congregating in the halls.

"We didn't have a problem with that (people congregating)," he said. "It was something we considered to keep people away from each other, but people trickled in slowly all night. There wasn't a mass of people coming in at once."

Peter Blutreich, graduate resident assistant in Thompson Point, said the housing was "exceedingly quiet."

"We have two staff at each building, and when I left (Friday night) it was pretty quiet and secure. As a matter of fact, a lot of residents have gone home."

—Tony Earles

"It was quieter than a normal weekend and not too much of a hassle for people," Blutreich, a graduate student in the college student personnel program from Charlotte, NC, said.

Gene Stanford, an SRA at Schneider Hall, said the restrictions succeeded in keeping students away from the housing area.

Schneider Hall had eight SRAs on duty. The SRAs made five sets of rounds every hour-and-a-half, he said.

"It was totally quiet," Stanford, a junior in political science from Mt. Vernon, said.

Tony Earles, head of Thompson Point area housing, said movies were shown in most of the television lounges in Thompson Point.

"We have two staff at each building and when I left (Friday night) it was pretty quiet and secure," Earles said. "As a matter of fact, a lot of residents have gone home. The parking lots are pretty clear and we don't have a lot of people."

at 9:30 p.m., scattered firecrackers snapped, occasionally interrupting the crowd's chanting and cheering for women to expose themselves.

Svenska Lindroth, a freshman in forestry from Chicago and one of the first students to "take" the Strip Saturday, said the crowd was just a symbol of students having a good time.

"This is beautiful," Lindroth, who was dressed as Elvis Presley, said. "It's all about energy. It's not us that breeds violence. This kind of negativity (the police) are the craziness that causes the violence."

The crowd's "energy" level began to rise, however, into something that was less than "beautiful," according to students, residents and Carbondale business owners.

At 10:30 p.m. a female dressed in a red sweater removed her bra and threw it into the crowd. Her sweater was later torn from her body. She could not be identified or reached for comment.

Despite this sort of display, SIUC President John Guyon, who observed activity on the Strip Saturday, said around 10:40 p.m. that the festivities seemed calmer than years past.

"This is much better than I've seen in the past," Guyon said. "There is less people and less alcohol. This just seems like a typical Saturday night that we see in Carbondale during the spring."

The calm was broken at 10:45 p.m. when the crowd on the Strip pushed passed barricades that police had set up, pushing the police down South Illinois Avenue to the Mill Street intersection where more police wearing riot helmets were lined across the Strip armed with mace and clubs.

An officer raised his megaphone and told the crowd, "Stand back. Stand back or you will be maced."

Some participants in the riot taunted police, doing gymnastic flips in the small area of pavement separating police from rioters.

Then, at about 10:50 p.m., the crowd turned from the police and ran north on Illinois Avenue, turning left on W. College Street where some rioters flipped a car in the First National Bank of Carbondale parking lot chanting "SIU, SIU, SIU..."

While some rioters danced on the underside of the flipped car, an Olds Cutlass, others turned south on University Avenue and flipped another car that was parked on the west side of the street.

Residents of houses in the area rushed from their homes and fended off rioters who tried to flip more cars.

Some members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon ran from their fraternity house to chase rioters off of their lawn. Three members of the fraternity were maced by police, who thought the individuals were part of the rioters.

Niels Hoeghuldberg, a junior in business from Winetka, said he was working security for his fraternity house Saturday night, and was maced while asking people to leave the property.

"I was trying to keep people under control and they maced me," Hoeghuldberg said.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said the police department had a goal to achieve this weekend and it was not to go out and look for trouble.

Strom said though mace was used by the police in several instances, it was primarily because the crowd got unruly and did not heed police instructions or pleas to maintain distance.

"We were not going to provoke a confrontation — they would have to do it," Strom said.

Around 11:15 p.m., the crowd cut back to the Strip and ran to East Walnut Street where they were met by more police who began macing the crowd.

Some rioters ran south from Walnut Street along the Illinois Central Railroad tracks with officers in pursuit.

William O'Delle, an AMTRAK transportation manager, stood outside of the AMTRAK station on South Illinois Avenue to protect the property from passing rioters.

As O'Delle emerged from the station, mace was sprayed at him by an officer that mistook him for a rioter.

"I think this is bull," O'Delle said. "The damn police are macing innocent people who are just trying to protect property."

The unidentified officer who sprayed mace at O'Delle did apologize to O'Delle before pursuing rioters heading north on South Illinois Avenue. The rioters turned west around 12 a.m. and flocked to University Avenue where many more were maced by police.

By 12:30 a.m., most rioters had dissipated into the back streets of Carbondale. While riots erupted on the Strip, bars outside of the area restricted with a 10 p.m. bar closing ordinance that was approved by the Carbondale City Council last month, conducted business as usual.

Detours, 760 E. Grand Avenue, removed some tables and pushed others along the wall in order to make room for the anticipated capacity crowd. At its busiest moments, the bar had numerous pockets of empty space on both the main floor and the dance floor.

Patty's Place, inside Detours, had three live bands. No more than 100 people gathered to see a 300-pound man dressed as Barney sing about his favorite drugs as Vic Vacume and the Attachments performed its version of crossover punk and metal. The beer garden at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Avenue, remained half-full for much of the evening.

T-Birds, 111 N. Washington St., was also relatively quiet during last night's festivities, with a crowd similar to other Saturday nights.

Weekend Strip activities

These reports are a combined staff effort and are largely eye witness reports. The Daily Egyptian has attempted to report activities on South Illinois Avenue and surrounding student residential areas, Grand Avenue and the Town Square area.

Thursday:

■ 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. — Police seen patrolling on the corner of College and Illinois. No major activities seen

■ 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. — Police still on Strip, activity in bars appears to be less than other Thursday nights.

■ 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. — Police in more force on the Strip; male seen pulling a gun in front of Sideracks, runs into bar, police storm in and arrest him. Approximately 30 people on sidewalks on Strip and about 15 law enforcement officers.

■ 2 a.m. to 3 a.m. — People leave the Strip rather quickly, a few jump onto the street and yell, but for the most part, make their way to house parties and home. Only police left on Strip at 2:30 a.m.

Friday:

■ 9:30 p.m. — Five police officers seen patrolling the ABC liquor stores, two doormen seen outside T-Birds.

■ 9:30 p.m. — On the Strip, students "take" the Strip. Enough people on the Strip to cover the area from Old Town Liquor to intersection of College and South Illinois. Nothing uncommon from a usual Friday night.

People slam dance in a circle, and a few women on the shoulders of some guys expose their breasts to the taunting crowd.

■ 10:25 p.m. — Groups of people seen leaving Tres Hombres, T-Birds and Cousin's, seen walking towards Strip.

■ 11:10 Crowd trickles down at the Town Square area.

■ 11:30 Crowd dissipates on the Strip — house parties on West College, Beveridge and West Cherry Street. Police officers seen patrolling these areas very frequently, amid people walking in search of more parties off the Strip.

■ 1:30 a.m. to 1:50 a.m. — Bar patrons at Town Square area and Grand Avenue area leave the bars. The crowds are not very different from other weekends, in terms of numbers, but many patrons are in costume.

According to Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom, there were 60 people arrested, mostly for possession and consumption of alcohol.

Partygoers attended an after hours party held at 701 West College St., Friday evening. The event provided an alternative for those seeking entertainment apart from the Strip.

Crowd finds alternative to bars

By Jeremy Finley
Senior Reporter

House parties usually full of college students were inhabited by greek gods, drag queens and cows this Halloween weekend.

At a party on University Avenue, a nun smoked a cigarette and drank beer out of a plastic cup, a man dressed as a naughty nurse offered to take temperatures with an oversized thermometer and Charlie Chaplin danced in a strobe-lit room.

On the corner of Ash and Cherry Streets, Jay Elms, a senior in history from Des Plaines, had a party at his three bedroom, three story house. A crowd of 100 people filled the house, six kegs were ready to serve, five ex-presidents attended and police left them alone.

"Believe it or not, the police were very cool. I talked to them before the party, and we also had a sign in front of the house that said it was invitation only," he said.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said most of the problems were on the Strip and not with the house parties.

"Our intention was not to contain people to the Strip. If they want to go to their neighborhood, we let them go," he said.

Elms said the party lasted for seven hours and was better than other parties they have had in the past.

He also said $600 was spent on the party and although they did not make any money back, the party was worth the price.

"It was a great time. It was a true costume party, you couldn't get in without a costume and an invitation," he said.

But parties at a 503 College St. apartment had a different story. At their 20-person gathering on the deck, police told them to go into the apartment because of a riot situation.

Mark Sitar, a senior in engineering from Chicago, said half the crowd went into the apartment but police sprayed mace through the screen window. He said he was standing in front of the door nearly eight feet away from the window when it happened, and he is in the process of filing a complaint to the police department.

Jenny Mettendorfs, a junior in accounting from Effingham and a resident of the apartment, said when she opened her mouth to talk, she started sneezing and her eyes watered.

"I did not want to be a part of all those people who were going crazy (on the Strip). We thought it would be safe to stay here and have a few beers with our friends," she said.

Strom said he found it rather difficult to believe some of the accusations.

"Our objective was to clear the streets and neighboring areas where there was trouble," Strom said. "We were basically hoping people would return to their own neighborhoods and homes where they would be safe."

Strom said it would not make sense for a police officer to mace someone in the very houses where they hoped the students would stay.

Kyle Markley, a junior in radiology from La Grange, said he and four of his friends were sitting outside their apartment on 514 South Ash Street Saturday night when police came and told them to go inside their apartment. They went inside but left the door open, and the police came and told them to close their door or they would be arrested. Markley said they yelled at the police and closed the door, and as the police walked away they sprayed mace into the window.

Strom said he was rather suspicious of accusations like this.

"It makes me wonder 'What were the actions of the individuals before the police allegedly did that?'" he said.

Strom said one police officer had his personal vehicle damaged Saturday night and the police observed the vandal entering a residence.

"We did not do anything like spray mace into the house at all when this happened — why would we in the other instances?" he said.

Strom said if complaints of this nature were reported; however, it would be investigated seriously by the police department.

Bost, Hawkins disagree on taxes

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

The two candidates for state representative of the 115th Illinois House District agree jobs and education are the two dominant issues in this election, but voters might not have noticed because of the mudslinging that has become the hallmark of this race.

There is more to the campaign of State Rep. Gerald Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, and his challenger Mike Bost, a Murphysboro firefighter, than kickbacks to a family owned business.

Both have a mutual interest for increased state funding at SIUC and economic development in Southern Illinois.

Bost said he anticipates this election to be closer than his last attempt for the office in 1992 against Hawkins, when he lost by less than 6 percent of the vote.

Hawkins said since elected he has fought hard in the General Assembly to obtain an additional $13 million for SIUC.

"I held off for one week in signing this year's budget (fiscal year 1995) and obtained an additional $5 million to convert boilers at SIU so they can cleanly burn Southern Illinois coal," he said.

Bost said that he would like to see the state increase their funding to SIUC so tuition increases could be kept under control.

"In fiscal year 1980 the state funded 55.1 percent of this University's expenses...in fiscal year 1995 it has slipped to 36.6 percent," he said.

Bost said he would also like to earmark 40 percent of all new revenue growth the state receives for education, which would have amounted to $240 million this fiscal year.

Hawkins said he sponsored a bill known as Fund Education First that guaranteed one-third of all new revenue growth would have gone towards education, but it has not yet passed. The bill would have increased education funding by about $200 million, he said.

Hawkins said the state should continue funding schools by this method until it is paying 50 percent of the schools cost, which would shift the tax burden away from property taxes. He said property taxes have had to increase to compensate for the state's declining contribution to schools.

Both Bost and Hawkins think property taxes can be cut and education funding increased, but disagree on how the state will pay for it.

Bost is opposed to tax increases, especially an income tax increase, because he said it will stifle economic development in Southern Illinois.

"If we work to attract businesses to this area, then the state will see increases in revenue through corporate and income taxes."

Bost said taxes only discourage businesses from locating and expanding in Southern Illinois. Welfare reform and changes in workman's compensation insurance would also create a more pro-business environment.

"There are so many lawsuits filed in Illinois it is no wonder workman's comp is so high — businesses are moving to surrounding states because taxes and workman's comp is cheaper," he said.

Bost said the National Federation of Independent Businesses have given Hawkins a low rating because he has voted against small businesses 83 percent of the time.

Hawkins has said he is not opposed to an income tax increase if the money is used to equalize educational funding downstate.

"People that are considering locating businesses in Southern Illinois look at the quality of the school systems," he said.

Hawkins said the businesses are not leaving Illinois because of the cost of workman's compensation insurance or high taxes, but because other states are offering more incentives.

"The governor is responsible for offering businesses special incentives to locate in Illinois," he said. "It would be difficult for us to match incentives other surrounding states are offering."

Hawkins said his accomplishment include supporting the maximum security prison that will be built in Southern Illinois at Tamm, funding the pension system for state employees and obtaining $1.2 million to re-route state highway 51. It would bypass Unity Point School making the area safer for children.

Hawkins has said while debating Bost that it is not easy to cut government spending because many state agencies must be funded to comply with courts that mandate a specific level of service.

Hawkins said health care must be reformed at the federal level or the state will go bankrupts from Medicaid matching grants.

Bost has found himself defending his actions to voters at public appearances after Hawkins has chosen to attack his voting record.

Hawkins has distributed pamphlets, and aired radio and television spots that accuse Bost of voting 27 times as a Jackson County Board member to pay his family trucking business over $8,000. In addition to this, Hawkins has labeled Bost a quitter.

Bost said Hawkins does not understand the difference between voting on contracts involving Bost Trucking Services and voting for bills incurred by the county.

"The county used Bost Trucking Services, and still do, for repair parts for their trucks. These bills were incurred by no fault of my own. I simply voted with the rest of the board to approve paying the bills," he said. "He can label me a quitter, but I have been a public servant for the past 15 years."

to grow more aware of others," he said.

Hosin said the tournament was a good opportunity to use the game to bring people on campus together in a peaceful, healthy way.

"International students are not just here to be self-contained, but to interact and do something good," he said.

Sahab Mohammed, ISC vice-president, said a lot of Americans went to the games this year.

Mohammed said when Americans participate in international activities, everyone benefits, because they can compete on the field in an environment different from the classroom.

"This gives us a good chance to interact and leave behind the culture shock," he said.

Greek team players were unavailable for comment.

opened, but we just weren't into it today."

At the conclusion of the Palestine/Greek Originals contest, ISC handed out awards and trophies to the participants.

Klasek gave third and fourth place medals to United Africa and Malaysia International.

Dr. James Quisenberry, director of International Programs and Services, presented Palestine and the Greek Originals with championship and second-place trophies, respectively.

Upon receiving the International World Cup Soccer Trophy, Hosin kissed it, held it high over his head and passed it to his teammates, who promptly did the same.

The ISC charged $2 to enter the event, with the money going to charity. Wan Napi said the council raised $300 just through ticket sales at the game.

"From now on, when we sponsor an event like this, we'll try and do something for SIU in return," he said.

"I'd also like to thank everyone who came and donated their time and money to come and see this event. It is very appreciated."

Ryan finds humor in wreck

Los Angeles Times

NFL BITS

■ Buddy Ryan was asked about traffic accidents involving Dallas' Erik Williams and Shamie Carver, which occurred just hours after the Cowboys had defeated Ryan's Arizona Cardinals last Sunday. "Well, they were wrecked up a little bit before they left here, too, weren't they?" Ryan said.

■ While leaving work around 11 p.m. one recent night, San Diego Charger Coach Bobby Ross was reminded that the Rolling Stones were giving a concert on the stadium field behind his office. So he took a peek.

"That place was really jumping," Ross said later. "That Mike Jagger was really going."

■ Barry Sanders' 84-yard run for the Lions against the Bears last week was not his longest in the NFL, but his longest with both shoes on. His 85-yard run earlier this year against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers was accomplished after he had lost his right shoe near the line of scrimmage.

Palestine snags ISC Soccer trophy

Greek Originals goalkeeper Eric Merlyn makes the save as Palestine player Sodich Pirayeh runs for an attempt at a rebound shot. The teams competed in the final match of the International Student Council's World Cup Soccer league.

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

The International Student Council held the finals of its World Cup Soccer league on Sunday, and Palestine, last season's runner up, is this year's champion.

Palestine, after three rounds of qualifying play and two overtime playoff wins, defeated the Greek Originals 1-0 in the finals to win the title.

Fans on both sides of the contest came out in large numbers to support their teams. The bleachers on the north sideline were full. Others sat on the grass, while many chose to watch through the fence. Soccer diehards brought air horns, megaphones and flags to show their allegiance to their countries. Some even painted their faces in team colors.

Before the game began, the players on each side were introduced and both the Palestine and Greek national anthems were played. Dr. Charles Klasek, Executive Assistant to President Guyon, congratulated and wished both teams good luck.

There was a moment of silence in memory of Erick Enriquez, a former ISC member who recently passed away.

Both teams took the field, and the game began.

Sodich Pirayeh scored the game's lone goal in the first half on a break-away between two Greek defenders. The shot froze the Greek goalkeeper, who watched as the ball went low into the left corner of the net.

After the goal, Pirayeh ran towards the Palestinian section of the crowd, where he was engulfed by cheering, flag-waving fans. His teammates soon joined the celebration, and after a few minutes, Pirayeh emerged and play continued.

The rest of the game was a defensive struggle, as Palestine stifled almost every attempt by the Greeks to set up a shot on goal. When the Greek players tried to advance the ball up the field, there usually was a Palestine defender to take it from him.

Palestine team coach Moussa Hosin said, although his team won on the field, the game may have been over before it even began.

"Although the players have to play the game, I believe the game is won off the field. We practiced playing with two forwards, so that's what they (Greek Originals) thought we were going to play with today," he said. "They marked off on two forwards, because that's what they expected, but we started three. They weren't sure what to do."

"We also elected to defend that (east) end of the field (in the second half) for two reasons. The first was so that our goalkeeper wouldn't have to look into the sun in the second half. The second was that the field goes down that (east) way. If my players were tired, they would be running downhill, and they wouldn't have to run as hard."

When the game ended, Palestine and its cheering section ran to the midfield with their hands and flags held high over their heads.

Before the finals, United Africa squared off with Malaysia International for the consolation championship.

United Africa and Malaysia were tied 1-1 until late in the first half, when Chris McCarthy scored to give the Africans a 2-1 lead going into halftime.

Malaysia's Wan Kamal Wan Napi tied the score 2-2 early in the second half, but that was as close as Malaysia would get. United Africa added two second-half goals to win 4-2 and secure third place in the tournament.

Wan Napi said he expected a close game, but was surprised at Malaysia's lackluster performance.

"We just weren't in the mood to play today," he said. "I don't know what hap-

Game unites players, crowd

By Katie Morrissey

SIUC parties could learn a little about crowd control from ISC soccer players. This year, according to players and an official, there were no fights, no arrests, and yet players and spectators alike said they had fun. And some SIUC international students say soccer brings them together and allows them to give back to the community.

ISC's World Cup Soccer Tournament ended Sunday with Palestine scoring one point over Greece's zero.

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, ISC president, said the money brought in from tickets to the game will be given to support cancer treatment and to a fund set aside for the parents of a former ISC representative who passed away recently.

"We want to show the community how much soccer can be a benefit for them," Wan Napi said.

Palestinian team member Khaled Abdel-Jabbar said people have noticed the stir soccer has caused in the community. He said the increase in enrollment for local teams and the large number of elementary and high school teams demonstrate to him that Carbondale is catching soccer fever.

"I don't know if this is the right term to use, but to me, soccer is like a religion," he said.

Abdel-Jabbar said this year's ISC tournament was well organized and the referees were firm but fair. He said the crowd did not get out of control.

"This year there were no fights," he said.

Last year there were frequent outbursts between players as well as between spectators, he said.

"Maybe SIU should think of an international team," he said.

Regardless, Abdel-Jabbar said he foresees more American and international students playing soccer in the next tournament.

He said the Palestinian team was fortunate to have many different nations represented in its team.

Paul Mills, goal keeper for the Palestinian team from the Southern Illinois area, learned to speak Arabic when he was in the Gulf War.

"He's part of us," Abdel-Jabbar said.

Abdel-Jabbar said his team also had players from Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Iran.

Moussa Hosin, Palestinian team coach, said he appointed a team captain from Kuwait even though Palestinians and Kuwaitis were not known for good relations during the Gulf War.

"I think it makes it better to have different people together working game to 14-12, but the Sycamores couldn't hang on as the Salukis downed Indiana State.

SIUC came out blasting in game three and blew Indiana State off the court. Locke said the win was tough, but it was important to SIUC's chances to get to the MVC tournament.

"I knew this wasn't going to be an easy match," she said. "The win was important, because we proved we could beat a team twice in the season, and that is something we didn't do last year."

Golebiewski led the Salukis with 45 assists, three service aces and a 500 attack percentage.

Locke said SIUC's performance was good, but the Salukis have to be more confident to win the next few matches.

"Tomorrow against Bradley, we need to be more confident," she said. "It will be a whole different challenge, and our offense and defense will have to be more widespread."

"It will take a team effort for us to win."

Bradley came into Davies Gymnasium riding on a victory over Illinois State last week, and manhandled the Salukis Saturday night taking three of four games in the victory, 15-11, 8-15, 15-5, 15-6.

The highlight of the SIUC loss, if there is one, is senior middle blocker Deb Heyne's move to fifth place in the Saluki record books for all-time career kills over Nina Brackins.

Locke said the team still needs a lot of work, and the MVC tournament is not yet out of reach.

"What happened this weekend is over, and we just have to prepare for two road matches," she said. "Everyone of our players needs to put forth a conscience effort to push themselves to the goal of getting into the MVC tournament."

Hendricks made his first of two interceptions and returned it 60-yards for a score.

"We knew Darnell was a good football player way back in the spring," Watson said. "He made several big plays from the safety position, which isn't always easy to do."

Hendricks' TD was called back for an illegal use of the hands penalty against the Dawgs, but SIUC remained in possession of the football.

Four plays later, Saluki QB Dave Pierson threw an interception that Redbird defensive back Kyle Robinson returned 72 yards to the SIUC five yard line.

SIUC tailback Will Hill, who rushed for a career-high 108 yards, plunged in to give the Redbirds a 14-0 lead.

The Salukis did manage to score before the half when Pierson hit tight end Damon Jones for a 7-yard touchdown pass.

But ISU countered with a 1-yard paydirt burst from Hill to give the Birds a 21-7 halftime advantage.

SIUC stumbled out of the blocks on its opening drive of the second half, but Pierson found Jones again on the second Saluki drive for a 61-yard touchdown to bring the Dawgs within seven, 21-14.

Illinois State came roaring back, though, with a 30-yard air strike to go back up by two touchdowns, 28-14.

Duane Lawrence gave SIUC one last shot at a comeback when the junior defensive back intercepted a pass from Redbird QB Joel Bosman and returned it 39 yards to the ISU 24 yard line.

But the Dawgs failed to come away with anything more than a 35-yard field goal from Ryan Given to make the score 28-17.

The Redbirds then added a field goal and a scoring drive that featured 15 consecutive running plays to wind down the clock and put ISU ahead 38-17.

Watson said ISU keyed on the Saluki passing attack, but his team is improving in certain areas despite its losing record.

"We rushed the ball real well, but they loaded up on our passing game and we didn't get it done, he said.

"We're seeing improvement, especially in our younger players. You would have to live with us day to day to see some of these improvements, but our younger players are getting better and better."

Redbird head coach Jim Heacock said his squad rebounded nicely from its loss to Northern Iowa the previous week.

"I felt like we really needed to go out and win the football game and that's what we did, so I'd have to say we're pretty happy with that," he said.

SIUC will finish up its three game road swing Saturday at Southwest Missouri State.

said. "At the beginning of the year I didn't think I'd make the conference team let alone all-conference."

"It's totally unbelievable how this season has went and what happened at this meet."

Mark Russell finished 12th and Steve Folkerts finished 14th to round out the Salukis top-five.

Cornell said he is hoping that the team's performance will give the Salukis confidence in the District meet on Nov. 12.

"There are going to be more teams out there and we are going to have to get out fast, but if we can run like we did today and get Neil Emberton healthy we'll have a chance," he said.

Akal said winning the conference is motivation for the team going into District's.

"This meet is a confidence-builder for us and hopefully we can use this victory and maybe get third and an at-large bid of finish in the top-two and qualify automatically."

finished too far back compared to the schools that beat us," he said.

One of the bright spots for the Salukis was the performance of Kelly French. DeNoon said he was very proud of the way French ran in the championship meet.

"She has improved throughout the year and ran her best race when she needed to," he said. "She is definitely going to have a great career for us."

French, whose time of 18:00.3 was her best time of the year, said her performance was encouraging.

"I'm very excited about the way I ran and my time," she said. "I hope I can continue to improve and help the team."

Even though the Salukis finished fourth, DeNoon said his team will still run in the District Championship on Nov. 12.

Dawgs tear up MVC Championship

By Doug Durso

A season of expectations became reality as the SIUC men's cross country team ran away with the Missouri Valley Conference Championship, Saturday.

The host Salukis placed three runners in the top-five to stay ahead of Southwest Missouri State in the 11-team field.

Stefios Marneros won the individual conference title running the 8k course in a time of 24:23.9

knocking 26 seconds off his personal best time.

"I've been sick for a couple of weeks coming into this meet, but I felt really good and I had a lot left," Marneros said.

Southwest Missouri State went out as a group early and had several runners in the top group for half the meet, but SIUC put on a late rush to win.

SIUC men's head coach Bill Cornell said his team ran its best meet of the year.

"The top five men really went after it," he said.

"I was really concerned when Southwest Missouri State had eight men ahead of our fifth at about the two- and-a-half mile mark, but our guys really picked it up from there on out."

Garth Akal finished second in the meet running a time of 24:35 and Martin Fysh ran the course in 24:41.9, good enough for fourth place.

Cornell, who was named MVC coach of the year, said getting three runners in the top-five could be a preview of things to come.

"I am extremely excited about getting three men that high," he said. "I hope that happens in the district meet."

Akal, who is SIUC captain, came from behind to beat Indiana State's George Condy for second place.

"I usually make my move on the last 1,200 meters but I really didn't know how he (Condy) felt when I passed him, which you usually should."

"So, I just bit the bullet and said I have to go now and went right by him, and thank goodness he didn't have anything left because I was dead tired."

Akal said he could not believe how well the team ran especially Fysh.

"About two weeks ago, coach came to me with about three guys we had to choose to run at the meet and Martin Fysh was one of the guys," he said. "I'm just glad we chose Martin as one of those guys to run."

Fysh, who has been battling injuries throughout the year, said this was a great feeling.

"This is really awesome," he

Harriers place fourth in MVC; Horner wins conference title

It was a bittersweet day for the SIUC's women's cross country team as the Salukis had their first Missouri Valley Conference Championship runner since 1987, but lost the team title finishing fourth.

Jennie Horner won the individual title Saturday, as SIUC hosted the championship, by setting a collegiate course record running the 5k course in 17:28.3.

Horner, who also runs track for SIUC, said that this meet was her biggest accomplishment in this sport.

"In cross country I never thought I would do this good," she said.

Sue Daggett from Illinois State, who finished second in the meet, battled head to head with Horner until the end.

"Sue Daggett and I were head to head all the way and she would not give me an inch," Horner said. "At the end I knew I could beat her because of my kick."

Drake emerged as the dark horse, who was picked fourth by the coaches, won the team title followed by Indiana State, Illinois State and then SIUC.

Saluki women's head coach Don DeNoon said while Drake ran well, "Drake ran a good race and deserved to win the conference title," he said.

SIUC had three women in the top-10 with Jennie Horner, fifth place finisher Debby Daehler, and freshmen Kelly French, who finished tenth.

DeNoon said the team just could not get its fourth and fifth place runners high enough.

Special teams stumble against State, lose 38-17

Reality bites.

The Saluki football squad was unable to ride the crest of its Oct. 22 upset of No. 16 Western Kentucky and got dumped by Illinois State Saturday in Normal, 38-17.

SIUC (1-7, 0-2) managed just three points on three Redbird turnovers and gave up an average of 42-yards per kickoff return to help fuel the ISU victory.

Saluki head coach Shawn

Watson said the special teams break downs came as a surprise after his team performed so well in the area during previous weeks.

"We experienced a major letdown in an area that had been consistent," he said. "We didn't do a good job of covering kicks and it was real discouraging after playing so well the week before."

It didn't take long for Illinois State to get the ball rolling as Kevin Dixon returned the games opening kickoff 88 yards to the SIUC 10 yard line.

Three plays later the Redbirds were on the board, 7-0, and the game was just over two minutes old.

Salukis drop out of 2nd place

ISU, Bradley stop home-win streak at nine in Davies

The Saluki volleyball team lost its first two home matches of the season this weekend with losses to Illinois State and Bradley as SIUC dropped out of second place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Illinois State came into Carbondale Sunday tied with SIUC for second place, but left with sole possession of the slot in the Valley with a three-game victory, 19-17, 15-8, 15-9.

The first game set the tone for the match as both teams traded points and momentum shifts. The game lasted 45 minutes, and the Redbirds finally held on to win.

Redbird head coach Julie Morgan said the first game determined the entire match.

"The first game was crucial in setting the tone for the match," she said. "We knew we were in for it when we came to Carbondale, and the first game proved it."

In game two the two teams swapped points, but with the score 4-3 in favor of SIUC, the Redbirds made their move and scored seven straight points and bring the score to 10-4.

Illinois State remained ahead for the remainder of the game, and put SIUC down two games to none with one game left.

SIUC came out charging in game three led by junior Heather Herdes' two aces in a four point run, but again, the Salukis could not hang on and dropped game three for an ISU sweep.

SIUC head coach Sonya Locke said the Saluki passing aided in the loss.

"Our passing was non-existent," she said. "You can't run an offense without good passing."

Morgan said the win was big for the Redbirds, but every match counts from here to the end of the season.

"Every match for us and Sonya is big now," she said. "There is no time to dwell on a win or a loss, we just have to be prepared for the next match."

In the Friday night match-up with Indiana State, the Salukis started out slow, but gradually came back to sweep the Sycamores, 15-10, 15-12, 15-6 to start the weekend line-up.

In game one, SIUC was behind 9-2 at one point, when outside hitter Beth Diehl served four straight points to include one of her three service aces in the match and bring the Salukis back into the game. Late in the game, setter Kim Gulebiewski took charge, and served six straight points and give SIUC a 14-10 lead. Then after six side-outs, SIUC put the Sycamores away in a game that lasted 29 minutes.

Game two saw the Salukis get down 6-0 early, and then battle back to get the victory. Junior Alicia Hansen had two aces in the late in the game to give SIUC the lead at 13-10. Indiana State and SIUC traded points to bring the
