Power plant continues polluting

12-year effort to filter ash awaits finish

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

Twelve years ago the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency told the University to clean up its act. The state is still waiting.

In 1974 the state EPA instructed the University to install a device to remove ash and soot particles emitted from the smokestack at the power plant. Construction of the device, called an "electrostatic precipitator," began in 1981 but a series of delays have left the job unfinished.

Meanwhile, the University remains in "apparent violation" of state EPA regulations intended to control particle emissions, said John Justice, regional manager for the IEPA Division of Air Pollution Control.

"We have put them back on notice," Justice said. "They have been notified within the last 30 days as being in apparent violation of the regulation."

The smokestack at the power plant releases 850 tons — 1,718,000 pounds — of ash and soot particles from the coal-burning boilers in one year, according to 1984 IEPA figures.

Based on the IEPA data, the University power plant averages 33,036 pounds of ash per week, 4,719 pounds of ash per day, 197 pounds an hour and 3.3 pounds every minute.

Park have complained to the IEPA about the smoke, an agency spokesman said.

Justice said emission amounts are consistent each year based on coal-consumption data and an inspection of smokestack gas completed in 1974. EPA regulations confine ash and soot emissions to no more than 110 tons of particles per year.

Since September 1981, the state Capital Development

Board, the University and a contractor have been working together to get the $5 million precipitator system installed and working at the plant. But University officials say numerous construction and contractor problems have pushed the completion date to March 1987. The original completion was set for fall 1982.

Since 1984, three of the power plant's four boilers have undergone major repairs. Each boiler has been shut down for an average duration of four months.

The precipitator system has not operated for more than 10 days without malfunctioning, said Allen Haake, University supervising architect. Another part of the system, an economizer, has required redesigning on some of its

Workmen's comp at issue in 116th District race

By Patricia Edwards
Staff Writer

Republican Herman Wright, of Anna, said he would work to lower the rate of workmen's compensation in the state if he were elected as state representative for the 116th District — the office Bruce Richmond, D-Marion, has held for the past four terms.

Richmond was unable to attend but sent a representative to the free forum area

Monday where the two were scheduled to square off. His representative, Gene Dybvig, said that he did not know why Richmond was unable to attend, only that Richmond said that he had made a previous engagement.

Illinois is losing too much business because insurance rates for workmen's compensation are so high that businesses look to other states to increase their profits, Wright said. He said Illinois workmen's compensation insurance rates rank in the top third in the nation.

Insurance rates have increased up to 1,000 percent for some businesses recently, Wright said.

Richmond's representative spoke of Richmond's experience in office as the "most important factor in the upcoming election. He said Richmond has consistently supported all SIU-C appropriation legislation.

Richmond sits on the Higher Education Committee — which is important to the University, and the Agriculture Committee — which is important to agriculture-oriented Southern Illinois.

Dybvig cited Richmond's support of a bill that passed to eliminate special taxes on farm machinery. He also cited Richmond's successful effort to bring $6 million of Build Illinois funds to SIU-C for coal research.

Wright also said his efforts as chairman of a committee to bring General Motor's Saturn auto plant to Union County marked his interest and dedication to bringing business to the area. Union County was the fifth site choice nationwide, he said.

The event was sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Organization. A representative of the USO estimated that 250 voters were registered.

Daniloff free at last, leaves Soviet Union

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — American journalist Nicholas Daniloff, held in the Soviet Union 31 days on espionage charges, flew to freedom in the West Monday after high-level negotiations for his freedom, removing an obstacle to a superpower summit.

Daniloff and his wife, Ruth, arrived in Frankfurt at 8:55 p.m. aboard a Lufthansa airliner.

"I was arrested without a warrant with a narrow political purpose. The KGB did not punish me. The KGB punished itself," Daniloff said on arrival at the Frankfurt airport, referring to his arrest by the Soviet secret police.

"I am very grateful to the president of the United States, the U.S. secretary of state, to Richard Combs of the American Embassy and to the countless officials in the State Department for working very long hours, for dotting all the Is and all the Ts, which has permitted me to be here tonight.

"I cannot tell you anything about any other arrangements," he said. "All I know is that I am free in the West, very grateful, delighted to see you."

Before boarding the plane in Moscow, Daniloff, 51, the Paris-born son of a Russian emigrant father and American mother, flashed the "V for victory" sign.

President Reagan told a cheering crowd of Republicans at a campaign stop in Kansas City, Mo., that Daniloff and his wife, Ruth, had left the Soviet Union.

The Soviets had tried to link the release of Daniloff to the freeing of Soviet spy suspect Gennadi Zakharov, who is in the custody of the Soviet U.N. mission in New York.

"I am leaving more in sorrow than in anger," Daniloff said.

Daniloff, who speaks fluent Russian and whose ancestors were imprisoned for fighting Russian czarist autocracy, read a farewell poem by the 19th century Russian writer Mikhail Lermontov before boarding his flight on a snowy Moscow afternoon.

"Farewell, unwashed Russia," he quoted. "The country of slaves, the country of masters ... I'll hide from your pashas, from their all-seeing eye, from their all-hearing ears."

Botha speaks on reforms, praises Reagan, Thatcher

EAST LONDON, South Africa (UPI) — President Pieter Botha said Monday he is committed to reforming apartheid laws but ruled out any form of government that would allow South Africa's blacks to dominate whites. In a speech to a National Party provincial congress in East London, Botha denounced outside interference in South African affairs and praised President Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for their opposition to economic sanctions.

Philippine officials suggest possible cease-fire

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Government negotiators said Monday their differences with representatives of the communist-led New People's Army are narrowing and that a 30-day cease-fire might be declared this week. Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra and Teofisto Guingona, chairman of the Commission on Audit, told reporters a cease-fire would take effect at midnight the day of the signing and could be extended. President Corazon Aquino has insisted on a cease-fire before further negotiations on ending an insurgency that burgeoned under the regime of Ferdinand Marcos from a few dozen intellectuals in 1969 to 17,000 rebels.

Deng says socialism must prove itself

PEKING (UPI) — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping told Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski Monday that after three decades of communist rule, China has yet to prove socialism is better than capitalism. In an extraordinary statement described by one Western diplomat as a "very bold way of putting it," Deng said China must build a wealthy society or "we will not be qualified to talk about the superiority of socialism."

Worldwide atomic production up 14 percent

VIENNA (UPI) — Worldwide production of nuclear power increased 14 percent last year and atomic reactors have become an indispensable source of energy, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency said Monday. Director General Hans Blix, opening the 30th general conference of the 113-member advisory body, said the increase from 1984 to 1985 follows a 19 percent increase in nuclear power from 1983 to 1984.

House overrides veto on S. African sanctions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted overwhelmingly Monday night to overturn President Reagan's veto of tough sanctions against South Africa and Reagan made a last-ditch bid for Senate support by offering to stiffen his stand toward Pretoria. "I believe we have an opportunity to provide a moral and diplomatic wakeup call" to Reagan, said Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., a leader on the sanctions issue.

Administration criticized in Daniloff release

BATAVIA, N.Y. (UPI) — The sister of an American hostage in Lebanon denounced the Reagan administration Monday for negotiating the release of reporter Nicholas Daniloff from the Soviet Union while refusing to bargain with her brother's kidnappers. Peggy Say, who has continually criticized President Reagan for his refusal to negotiate with her brother's captors, said the decision to seek Daniloff's release was a chance for the administration "to score political points." Her brother, Associated Press Middle East correspondent Terry Anderson, 38, was kidnapped from a Beirut street March 16, 1985.

Lockheed denies price overcharge violations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Lockheed Corp. denied allegations Monday that it overcharged the Air Force up to $500 million for 50 C-5B transport planes, challenging a Pentagon audit it said was "flawed" and "totally lacking merit." Earlier, the Air Force said it intends to renegotiate a $2.4 billion contract with Lockheed for 21 of the giant aircraft to get a lower price for them. A month ago, the Defense Contract Audit Agency accused the firm of overcharging between $400 million and $500 million for all 50 aircraft.

Banks, Mexicans approach loan deal deadline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairmen of major U.S. banks met Monday with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker as a deadline approached for agreement on a $5 billion loan package for Mexico. As Volcker met with the chairmen to discuss the package, the 13-bank committee representing Mexico's creditors continued to negotiate with the Mexicans in a closed Washington session. The banks faced what one executive called an "artificial" deadline of midnight Monday to reach agreement.

Activist says cities feel farm crisis

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

To most city dwellers, empty farm houses may seem like just another feature of the rural landscape. And the current farm crisis may appear to be a distant problem, affecting mainly rural areas of the United States.

But if the crisis continues much longer, the ripple effects could reach into every home in the nation — urban as well as rural.

THAT WAS the message of "Understanding the Farm Crisis," a seminar sponsored by the Illinois South Project, a Carverville-based farm advocacy group. About 25 people attended the seminar, held Sunday at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale. The seminar traced the history of the farm crisis and warned of graver problems to come if the tide of farm foreclosures and buy outs is not stemmed.

The farm crisis is something that people other than farmers know little about, ISP activist Ralph Coolman said. The seminar was intended for people "far removed from the farm crisis," he said.

ISP MEMBER Kate Duesterberg cited statistics showing that for every seven farmers that go under, one local business is forced to close its doors. In Illinois, Duesterberg said, 10,000 farms have failed in the past two years. That equates to roughly 1,428 retail businesses shutting down in the state.

The state's problems could get worse, Duesterberg said. It is predicted that Illinois will

Speaker says radicals drain farmers

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

Political extremists often attempt to sidetrack farmers and channel their energies away from finding peaceful solutions to the farm crisis, says Susan Denzer, an Illinois South Project activist.

Although farmers have traditionally been apolitical, Denzer said, extremist groups are taking advantage of the farmers' frustration, promising easy explanations and quick solutions to the farm crisis. Such groups are often associated with the far right, and preach conspiracy theories that blame the crisis on Jews, bankers and the federal government, she said.

"The attraction to the conspiracy theory is that it's very simplistic," Denzer said. "It offers them (farmers) simple answers to very, very complex problems. And as people get more and more frustrated with their own financial situation and more and more isolated from their community, from their potential support systems...they are more and more susceptible to believing in the conspiracy and to the paranoia that goes along with it."

Often, the extremists are outside agitators who come in from areas where right-wing groups are strong, particularly the far western United States, Denzer said.

Denzer told a story about a South Dakota man who showed up at a local farmers' meeting and promised to explain the farm problem in less than 10 minutes. The man distributed photographs in which he appeared bloody and beaten. He claimed to have been beaten by his bank loan officer.

"The audience was spellbound," Denzer said. A few weeks later, a small group of farmers met to discuss the man's assertions. In this way, the paranoia and fear are spread, she said.

The extremists are becoming increasingly identified with white supremacist groups, Denzer said, such as the Posse Comitatus, a group that opposes all forms of taxation, preaches that the county sheriff is the highest government official in the nation and refers to the federal government as the "ZOG," or Zionist Occupation Government.

"The anger and volatility building out there is very real," Denzer said, "and it could explode."

lead to soil erosion, expanded use of often dangerous chemicals and fertilizers and intensive irrigation.

DUESTERBERG ALSO targeted large grain traders as contributors to the farm crisis. Five major grain trading companies control 70-80 percent of the U.S. grain trade, both domestic and foreign, she said, and these companies benefit from the instability of the farm economy.

"As they increase production, farmers are the ones hurt by the instability of prices. But the big grain companies have the opportunity to do the speculating so they can profit from this instability," Duesterberg said.

SOMETIMES IT seems as if the farm crisis just appeared out of nowhere. But Coolman says it was a long time in coming.

Coolman said economic trends that developed over nearly two decades foretold a crisis in the farm economy that the nation has not experienced since the depths of the Great Depression.

Throughout the 1970s, Coolman said, the economic climate of the nation was ripe for the expansion of the family farm. Low interest rates and high land values encouraged borrowing. Land could be used as collateral for loans that went mostly toward mechanization and further land purchases. The value of the dollar abroad was low, so export markets were thriving.

lose up to one-third of its farms by 1987.

"The trend is going to continue," she told the audience. "What we're going to see is middle-income farmers who do not have a source of outside income going out of business."

SINCE 1981, Duesterberg said, the average net worth of Illinois farmers fell nearly 40 percent, seriously eroding the tax base of many rural communities. Coupled with the decline in state and federal farm aid, "the regions are losing essential services — fire and police protections, schools, roads — and social services, things like farm counseling, substance abuse counseling, job retraining."

FOR THE nation as a whole, Duesterberg said, 10 percent of all farmers are expected to be out of business by 1987. Those farmers would default on over $25 billion in farm loans, causing a dramatic increase in interest rates, a $30 billion to $50 billion decrease in the gross national product, a $12 billion loss in annual farm income and the loss of 300,000 jobs over the next decade.

What happens to farms that fail? According to Duesterberg, a growing number of them are being bought up by large corporations. This can have disastrous effects on the environment, she said.

"THESE CORPORATIONS are mining the land, not farming it. What we're seeing now is the loss of a whole generation of farmers...And they're being replaced by managers who, while they may have a college education, do not have the traditional ties to the land that farmers do," Duesterberg said.

Duesterberg said the intensive farming methods employed by the corporations

Good press comes when it's deserved

THE D.E.'S REPORTERS AND EDITORS don't aim to ruffle people's feathers.

But the University administration thinks otherwise.

Apparently, the administration would like "favorable press" more often. That information comes from a University college dean. It also comes from a representative of a national teachers union, who said he heard similar reports from at least two School of Journalism faculty. Both sources wished to remain anonymous.

The administration has never pressured the D.E. to withhold a story. Our concern is with a more subtle kind of hindrance.

FOR EXAMPLE, D.E. REPORTERS don't have direct access to Institutional Research, the University's storehouse for campus statistics. Requests for information must be channeled through Jack Dyer, University Relations director.

The administration also has tried to go around the D.E. by creating, five years ago, the SIU courier, a weekly newspaper published by the University News Service.

These actions don't reflect favorably on the administration. Neither do some other recent occurrences.

For one thing, the University is contending with a number of union organizations to represent its own employees in possible future labor negotiations. More press attention has gone to the traditional unions because they've been working harder to obtain employee support.

ALSO, THE ADMINISTRATION APPEARS to have abandoned affirmative action in favor of budget balancing. University President Albert Somit already has taken funding away from the program. This doesn't seem prudent at a time when affirmative action is a serious national issue.

Then there's the administration's less-than-centralized bookkeeping system for Stone House, Somit's home. Reports on Stone House funding expenditures were found scattered throughout the University's files.

The D.E. was made independent of the administration in 1962 by the late University president Delyte Morris to ensure news-gathering and editorial independence.

We'd like to keep it that way.

S. Africa not a joking matter

To divest or not to divest is the question. Increasingly, it is becoming fashionable to express an opinion on South Africa and the moral issue of whether or not to pull out American investments there.

South Africa is not a joking affair. It is ultimately a matter of how high a plateau the human race is willing to place the question of the dignity of man be he white, yellow or black.

The comment from the Wall Street Journal published in the D.E. is indicative of only some of us who are perennially oblivious to the lessons of history. In 1965, the English settlers in Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) proclaimed a unilateral declaration of independence. They took control of the territory and named it the Republic of Rhodesia. Like South Africa, the black majority was reduced to servitude.

After many years of black struggle, the heat was felt in the West's capitals. Sanctions were imposed and the pressure mounted. Ian Smith, leader of the settler rebellion, exercised his "white diplomatic skill" and stepped down in favor of the black bishop Abel Muzorewa. The struggle of the nationalists, however, only intensified. Clearly, a man whose skin was black was not what the people of Zimbabwe had been fighting for. They wanted legitimate leadership. Their cry of "moderate"

South African black leaders being undermined by divestment is reminiscent of the Rhodesian scenario. For the U.S. to engineer her investment policies in South Africa so that certain black leaders would rise to positions of national leadership is not helping the situation.

South Africa's blacks have suffered for decades. They hardly need the sympathy of the Wall Street Journal suggesting that black jobs be maintained. Or is it suggested that "white diplomacy" be exercised to sustain the life of apartheid by lubricating the wheels of South Africa's economy? — Osob Warsame, sophomore, Business.

U.S. 51 overpass will be well worth the costs

By Tom Mangan
Staff Writer

The concrete beams casting a shadow across U.S. 51 near the south end of campus — soon to become a pedestrian overpass — no doubt raise questions in the minds of those concerned about prudent use of public funds.

The overpass, part of the city's Railroad Relocation Project, is an easy target for anyone who drive north on U.S. 51 and see a smattering of pedestrians waiting to cross the highway beneath the concrete arches. Why spend $2.4 million to build a bridge that few, if any, are likely to use?

How many people actually use the east-west Ho Chi Minh trail, which would be replaced by the overpass?

ELDON GOSNELL, city railroad relocation director, says city studies predict that about 5,000 per day will use the overpass. That comes to $480 per pedestrian. Still sounds pretty expensive.

But broken down further, the overpass starts looking like a better deal.

Consider 5,000 people using the overpass twice a day, seven days a week, during the 32 weeks they are living on the east side of campus in one school year. That's 448 trips, equalling 2.24 million crossings per year, at a cost of about $1.08 per pedestrian, per year.

Anyone unwilling to shell out a dollar plus change for the convenience of a year's worth of avoiding traffic on U.S. 51 can look to the future for comfort. If the overpass cost is spread over five years, barring a natural catastrophe, the individual price drops to 20 cents per pedestrian, per year.

Viewpoint

CRITICS WILL say such a comparison could easily be attached to any public works project. Of course, maintenance, repairs and salaries of those who will perform such tasks have not been factored in.

But even if such costs add another $2.4 million to overpass maintenance throughout the next five years, the price is still about 40 cents a customer.

For what you might spend on a Snickers bar, you get safe passage over the cars and trucks barreling down Highway 51.

Casting aside the travails of pedestrians versus cars, safety along the Ho Chi Minh Trail is another consideration. Let's not forget about the 21-year-old coed who was found murdered near the trail in August 1981.

CAMPUS LEADERS moved to place signs discouraging use of the shortcut, and we've been fortunate that the murder has not been repeated. Nonetheless, who's to say it won't happen again? Any person using the trail at night is at risk.

The overpass project suffers from being attached to the Railroad Relocation Project. The so-called "big ditch" would require digging a 30-foot deep, 70-foot wide trench through about two miles of the city's center, where the Illinois Central Gulf tracks split the town in two.

Construction of the ditch requires relocation of steam and utility lines crossing from the Physical Plant to east campus. Those lines will be carried through the overpass.

IN THESE DAYS of budget-balancing acts in Washington, D.C., with cuts being made to social and educational programs, it's arguable that the $51 million needed to finish the ditch could be better spent elsewhere.

U.S. Rep. Ken Gray and U.S. Sen. Paul Simon have long lobbied for the project, starting in 1974 when Gray co-sponsored legislation making the whole plan possible. However, that was in the days when the government was not faced with $200 billion deficits.

Apart from the big ditch plan, the overpass stands on its own merits. Considering its low per-use cost and advantages the new bridge will bring to east campus dwellers, there's no need to fear that our tax dollars are going to waste.

parts. Breakdowns in the 25-year-old boilers were unavoidable, Haake said, but those breakdowns further stalled completion of the precipitator system.

The project will not be accepted by the CDB until it is complete, working and has been inspected, he said.

In December 1983 the CDB fired the initial contractor because the company was one year behind schedule, not paying its sub-contractors or their suppliers and not receiving supplies, said Melissa Skilbeck, public affairs officer for the CDB.

THE PROBLEMS with the precipitator did not develop until the new contractor took over, Haake said, and added that it is the new contractor's responsibility to get the system back on line when it malfunctions. The University did not pressure the contractor to fix the precipitators immediately because boiler problems had stalled construction, he said.

"Until we got everything worked out properly — fixed — we didn't really push it because we knew other things had to be done before it could be checked out and come on line," he said.

HAAKE SAID he hopes the problems with the precipitators will be cured when the manufacturer checks out the system in the spring.

Theoretically, the precipitators have not been turned on because they have not been approved for operation, Haake said.

The University has dragged its feet in pursuing faster construction of the precipitators, while the CDB was mismanaged the project, said Pat Dennis, analysis engineer for the IEPA Air Pollution Control Division.

"OVER THE last two years there has hardly been anything done," Dennis said. "You don't just shut down the system because it doesn't work and not try to get it fixed."

Even after the manufacturer tests the system, it "will only tell us what it can remove at that point and it won't show what it can do in the long run," Dennis said.

In the precipitators, smoke passes around electrically charged metal plates and wires. Static electricity from the plates attracts the ash particles to the plates and wires. The wires and plates are then vibrated to shake off the particles, which fall into a collection bin holding remaining ashes produced by coal combustion.

PHYSICAL PLANT administrators are looking forward to a conclusion of the project this spring, said Dale Reiman, assistant plant director.

Reiman said he and Physical Plant Director Tom Engram "are a little aggravated. Everybody wants to get the project finished. A project shouldn't go on this long."

But although the IEPA has requested that the University install a pollution control system, there is some question at the University about the system's benefits and necessity.

"I'M NOT sure that in terms of the ambient air quality that exists in Southern Illinois, that (by) putting on these precipitators and paying the necessary money to operate them, we are going to see any significant increase in air quality," said John Meister, University pollution control director.

The precipitators will cost between $250,000 and $400,000 per year to operate and maintain, Meister said.

The problems with fly ash emitted by the power plant, he said, are that "what goes up must come down."

IEPA INFORMATION lists lung irritations, clouding of the air and changing the tint of car color as major problems of fly ash.

Haake said, "I think it's a good idea in a metropolitan area where you have a lot of polluters. But here I sometimes wonder about the value of it."

Future costs aside, the precipitator project has had more than its fair share of problems, Haake said.

Those problems began with the bidding process in 1980, when the lowest bidder, Paragon Energy Corp. of Kansas City, Mo., made a $850,000 error in its bid. The CDB chose to repeat the whole bidding process and Paragon was again selected.

In 1983, when the project was 85 percent completed but a year behind schedule, Paragon was fired. J & L Robinson Construction Co. of Carbondale was selected to complete the project in the summer of 1984.

Problems with the precipitator may have arisen because the system has not been checked out and approved by the manufacturer, Precipitair Pollution Control Co. of Longview, Texas, Haake said. That checkup is scheduled to begin Oct. 20.

POWER PLANT emissions aroused the interest of the IEPA in 1970 when the agency was formed, Dennis said, but the agency did not take serious action until 1974. After 48 samples of smokestack gas were analyzed that year and

Display booth burglarized at tailgate party

Two plywood penguins and two fire hydrants were stolen from a display booth east of McAndrew Stadium at the Saluki Tailgate Saturday, according to SIU-C police.

Paul Bryant and Tom Schwartz, both of Carbondale, reported to police that the items were stolen from the booth sometime between 1:30 and 4:45 p.m. The booth was set up for patrons to shoot water pistols at the penguins. Police said the fire hydrants were borrowed from the city.

Police said they have no suspects.

found to contain particle levels in excess of the legal amount, the University was issued a one-year variance by the EPA. The variance allowed operation of the power plant at unlawful pollutant levels and protected it from fines or litigation for one year.

THE VARIANCE was extended for another year and in 1976 the University reached an agreement with the IEPA that said as long as an attempt was being made to solve the pollution problem, the EPA would take no legal action.

The electrostatic precipitator system would remove 95 percent of the ash from the stack gas, 3 percent more than is required by the EPA. Those regulations require that 92 percent of the ash produced by steam-producing boiler systems be removed before the gas is released into the atmosphere.

In 1977 the EPA rated the power plant one of the top 50 polluters in Illinois and said that at medium loads, the boilers emitted two to three times the standard of particulate emissions.

The University began requesting state funds for the project in 1970, although the project was considered a low priority. The project gained top priority status in 1978 and $159,000 was released by the CDB for planning. Another $389,000 was released for planning in 1979.

THE BOILERS burn about 50,000 tons of Southern Illinois coal each year to produce steam that is piped to campus buildings for heating and air conditioning. Although the coal has an average 3.5 percent sulphur content, high by some standards, the sulphur dioxide emissions fall within IEPA regulations.

BUT IN 1981, land values began a steady decline, interest rates shot up, and the wealth of credit began drying up, Coolman said.

By 1985, land values had decreased by 49 percent, and farmers who were by then dependent on short-term credit were being denied loans. An increasing number of farmers were defaulting on their loans, and the banks began foreclosing on their land. It was apparent something had to be done to help the farmers.

To make matters worse, Coolman said, the value of the dollar shot up to an all-time high, drying up foreign markets.

THE FEDERAL government responded with the Food Security Act of 1985. Under the terms of the act, farmers were guaranteed a certain price for their grain. If within a period of nine months market prices rose above the target price set by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, the farmers were free to sell their grain. If prices remained below the target, the farmers would sell their grain to the highest bidders and the government would make up the difference.

Such a policy was doomed to failure, Coolman said, because it did not encourage farmers to decrease production. In short, there was no supply management mechanism included in the bill.

One member of the audience suggested that the government should bail out farmers in much the same way the Chrysler Corp. was bailed out when it was in danger of going under. "If the government can recognize the problems that would be caused by one business shutting down, why are they so short sighted that they can't realize the effect of a hundred thousand businesses shutting down?" he said.

Violence, horror of rape examined in 'Extremities'

By Mary Wisniewski
Entertainment Editor

"Extremities," a Robert M. Young film now playing at Varsity Theater, is a horribly and relentlessly violent story about an attempted rape and its consequences. The violence, however, has purpose.

The purpose for the knifings, beatings and grisly humiliation portrayed in "Extremities" shows the horror of rape and explains why the victim makes the choices she does. Despite some rather simplistic symbolism "Extremities" makes a powerful statement about the law's abuse of rape victims and the motives behind violence.

BASED ON a play and screenplay by William Mastrosimone, "Extremities" stars Farrah Fawcett as Marjorie a young museum curator and amateur sculptor. In the opening scene, Marjorie is just ending her shift at the Field Museum in Chicago.

Marjorie is attacked in her car and though she manages to escape the rapist, played by James Russo, he takes her wallet. When Marjorie goes to the police to report the attack and ask for protection the police tell her that without witnesses or fingerprints, there is nothing they can do.

TRUE TO Marjorie's angry prediction to the police, the rapist finds her house through the address in her wallet and demands with inhuman menace that she fix him lunch, dress up in black lace, and say that she loves him. But just as he manages to pin her to the living room floor, Marjorie sprays his face with bug spray and takes control of the situation.

Film Review

When Marjorie's roommates return home, they find the rapist imprisoned in the fireplace and Marjorie digging a grave between the tomatoes and the geraniums. Marjorie tells them with indisputable logic that if she lets him go, he will kill them and that the only solution is to make him disappear.

Marjorie's righteous logic and the clear-cut situation of a victim turned avenger makes "Extremities" seem to be a well made but simplistic film. But through the two roommates and Marjorie's terrible violence toward her assailant, "Extremities" builds a layer of arguments and perspectives that make it thought provoking and complex.

THE MOVIE is filmed exclusively through Marjorie's and the rapist's points of view. The rapist's perspective is animalistic—it is easy to read his thoughts as he scans a parking lot for a woman alone.

Marjorie's thoughts and reactions are centered on fear. As she sits alone in her house, for example, her vision seems to rest too long on a fish tank, and then she jumps up to search the room for the enemy.

The film's sympathies are with Marjorie from the beginning, as shown by the murmurs of "kill him" from audience members of both sexes.

MARJORIE'S ROOMMATES acted by Alfre Woodard and Diana Scarwid, contrast as a realist and a cynic against Marjorie's emotionalism. When Woodard's character protests, "He's a human being just like you were," the question about what to do with the rapist becomes more difficult.

The movie's animal imagery, though a little obvious, is interesting. The bestial stalking and violence of the first part of the film make a neat contrast to the human questions that surface.

"EXTREMITIES" MAKES a number of feminist statements. Indeed, one problem with the film is that all of its male characters are insensitive beasts. This may be a result of the consistent use of Marjorie's point of view, and if Marjorie sees men as animals, the film will see them as animals, too.

"Extremities" is a suspenseful, horrifying film which keeps careful control of audience emotions and sympathies.

Dorsey band swings down memory lane with Morrow

Concert Review

By Debra Keen-Cooper
Staff Writer

Shryock Auditorium hosted an evening of memories Saturday when a near capacity audience was treated to the big band sounds of The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra.

Conducted by Buddy Morrow and fresh off the plane from a tour of Canada, the 17 member orchestra came on stage full of energy. The performance was a show filled with beautiful melodies from the Tommy Dorsey library and other great jazz composers.

Beginning and ending the show with Dorsey's "Opus 1," Morrow delighted the crowd with his melodic trombone style. His easy-going manner and condensed wit kept the show moving from song to song and mood to mood.

The orchestra performed Dorsey hits such as "Goody-Goody," "Song of India" and "Boogie-Woogie."

Vocalist Steve Calafato was aided by the band members in singing "Marie," one of Dorsey's biggest hits.

Calafato exercised his vocal chords on several other pieces, including "Come Fly With Me" and "I'll Never Smile Again" originally performed by Frank Sinatra.

In tribute to the accoustics of Shryock, Calafato had the microphones switched off, and sang "Polka Dots and Moonbeams" with piano accompaniment only. It was a very touching performance. "Night Train," the biggest hit by Morrow's own orchestra from the 1940s, brought a strong approval from the audience.

Morrow, during an interview on the bus from Lambert International Airport in St. Louis to Carbondale, said he came out of retirement to conduct The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra about 10 years ago, with full intentions of handing the job over to someone else within 3 months.

"However," he said, "When I got back into the swing of things, I found that I had missed it so much, I decided to continue."

New role of religious Right challenges political system

By Charles J. Abbott
United Press International

The religious Right, after providing some of the muscle for the resurgence of the Republican Party, is starting to ask what role it is going to get in political decision making.

The issue affects Republicans directly, since fundamentalists tend to vote for conservatives, but it is a question for everyone. After all, part of the religious Right has Southern Democratic roots and a motivated faction can provide the swing votes in a close election.

Religious broadcaster Pat Robertson's interest in running for the presidency also puts a sharper point on the issue. A Robertson campaign would demand a public debate of the social issues the religious Right promotes and the broader question of religious influence in government.

For the moment, one leader says the religious Right is not being well treated by the GOP. "Unfortunately, we in the conservative Christian community have seen increasing examples, some specific, some general, of what has become known as 'Christian bashing' (attempts to alienate or exclude fundamentalists) by Republican candidates and organizations," the Rev. Robert Grant, chairman of the religious lobbying group Christian Voice, said earlier this month.

"If nothing else ... we must make it clear that the Christian Right can no longer be counted upon to man phone banks, stuff envelopes, get out the vote and do all the things that help ensure Republican victories, while also being relegated to a seat on the back of the GOP bus."

Grant and political consultant Gary Jarmin warned the religious Right may abandon the GOP if it is not made welcome.

One example Jarmin cited of "Christian bashing" was the distribution of a flyer headlined "Help Keep Religion Out of Politics" in a least one neighborhood during voting last Aug. 5 for precinct delegates in Michigan.

Oldline Republicans may feel a bit uneasy about the religious Right since it tends to emphasize issues like school prayer, opposition to abortion and teaching creationism in public schools. There are questions of how much those issues appeal to mainstream voters.

"We must welcome them, not be hyper-critical," says Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., whose campaign to limit federal funding of abortion is an example of applying a moral view to government.

In an interview, Hyde said religious values have a role in politics — they "go to defining what human beings are" — but he is a proponent of church-state separation "as historically understood." To him, that means being hospitable to religion but not giving dominance to any denomination.

United Way sets $141,000 campaign goal

The Carbondale United Way has set a goal of $141,000 for its 1986 fund-raising campaign.

The campaign, which started Thursday at the Student Center, will run until Oct. 31.

In a pre-drive campaign, the group collected $63,005, the largest amount ever raised before the start of the regular campaign.

The amount raised in the 1985 drive was $145,000.

"We always anticipate raising more money than our goal," said Debbie Moore, United Way executive director.

She said the group never projects raising more money than in previous years.

The campaign theme is: "Take pride in the House Team." Two focus phrases are: "Community dollars meet community needs" and "This is your United Way."

United Way has a referral service that Carbondale residents can use to find out where out-of-town relatives or friends can receive help.

U.S. students more fun-loving than Chinese students, prof says

By Ed Smith
Staff Writer

Hu Huainian, a professor from the People's Republic of China, says American university students are more independent and fun-loving than Chinese students.

Hu, of the Beijing Language Institute, is currently an SIU-C Scholar in Residence attached to the Graduate School and the Foreign Languages and Literature Department.

Hu said the differences between American and Chinese students reflect the educational systems of the two countries and that young people are the same in both countries.

Chinese students are becoming more independent and well-rounded as China emerges from the influence of Mao Tse-tung and the cultural revolution, he said.

Political considerations still influence Chinese education, Hu said, but are not the life and death issues they were under Mao. It is good that students are aware of their responsibility as educated people to serve the people and the country, he said, but bad that they must still take care to be "politically correct."

As a developing country, China cannot devote many resources to education, Hu said. The American educational system is so wealthy that it is difficult to compare American and Chinese facilities, he said.

Chinese students compete for admission to universities on the basis of a test taken after high school graduation, Hu said. Because resources are small, only those with the highest scores are admitted, he said. Everyone who completes college is assigned a job by the government, he said. However, high academic achievement does not guarantee a good assignment because political attitudes and family backgrounds influence decisions, he said.

Under Mao, Hu said, educated people were distrusted as members of the "stinking ninth category" — not enemies of the people, but suspect. Older professors who were educated before the 1949 revolution or in foreign countries were badly mistreated during the cultural revolution of the 1960s, he said, although those educated after 1949 were in no danger unless they spoke out in public.

These attitudes still have influence in the Chinese countryside, Hu said. Rural students tend to end their education after primary school, he said, and working class families do not intermarry with educated families.

Hu will speak on changes in the Chinese educational system at 4 p.m. today at Morris Library Auditorium.

Car, behavior programs set

Assertiveness training and preventing automotive problems are the topics of two workshops Women's Services is sponsoring this semester.

The Assertiveness Training Workshop will be Tuesday from 3 p.m. to 4:50 p.m. in Quigley Lounge. Kelly O'Shea, counseling and administrative assistant for Women's Services, will lead the group.

The Automotive Workshop will be held Oct. 8 and Oct. 15 from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Safety Center, Building 56, behind the Physical Plant. Lana Rizzo, a junior in Automotive Technology, has practical work experience and will explain basic car repair and discuss concerns car owners may have, O'Shea said.

Registration for the workshops is not required, but interested persons can reserve a space or direct inquiries to Women's Services, 453-3655.

Smith and Hyrn top GCAC players

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Despite a pair of 133-yard running performances by SIU's Mel Kirksy and Anthony Vaughn, Northern Iowa's Mike Smith has taken the Gateway Conference's offensive honors of the week.

In less than three quarters of action, Smith completed 14 of 18 passes for 335 yards and two touchdowns in UNI's 45-3 thumping of GCAC foe Southwest Missouri State. The 5-10, 175-pound junior also ran for two scores.

As a second-team All-Gateway selection and the GCAC offensive player of the year last season, Smith completed 57 percent of his 358 passing attempts in '85 for 2,894 yards and 18 touchdowns last season, leading UNI to the NCAA I-AA playoffs. His efforts also earned him Associated Press honorable mention All-America status.

So far this season, Smith has taken up last year's pace he's guided UNI to second in the Gateway in scoring and passing offense while taking the second spot in the same individual categories.

Saluki fans will get a chance to see Smith and the rest of the Panthers when UNI comes to McAndrew Stadium for SIU's homecoming on Oct. 18.

For the second week running, linebacker Mike Hyrn of Western Illinois has been named the GCAC's defensive player of the week.

Hyrn, who becomes the first player in the GCAC's two-year history to take the honor two weeks in a row, led the Leatherneck defense with 17 total tackles in a 10-0 shutout of Northern Illinois.

Last week, Hyrn had five solos and five assists in WIU's 27-10 victory over Southwest Missouri.

Saluki linebacker Rick Spielman led SIU's defensive efforts against Youngstown State in a 24-17 SIU win with 18 tackles.

One bright spot for Kirksy and Vaughn — their efforts may not have landed any players of the week accolades, but the 266-yard combined effort did help guide SIU's rushing offense to the best in the Gateway.

In five games, SIU led the list with 219 rushing attempts for 1,060 yards for an average of 212 yards per game and 4.8 yard per carry average. The next nearest Gateway team in the category is Western Illinois, with a 183.5 yard per game average.

In other Gateway news, UNI moved up to 10th in the NCAA Division I-AA poll while Eastern Illinois dropped from 15th to 16th. SIU's season-opening opponent Arkansas State remained at No. 2. Western Illinois moved into the "received votes" category of the poll.

In the Football News weekly poll, UNI was ranked No. 5, EIU was ranked No. 14 and Western was ranked No. 28. SIU ranked No. 25 in the poll.

Women netters beat Ball State, downed by SIU-E

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

Things just didn't go right for the women's tennis team Friday and Saturday.

To start off, the Salukis were facing defending NCAA Division II champs SIU-Edwardsville in their first match and the No. 1 singles Saluki, Ellen Moellering, was sick and unable to play.

With Moellering out, coach Judy Auld had to move every singles player up a spot in the lineup, meaning each player would be playing a tougher opponent.

The netters lost to the Cougars 7-2. The Salukis had one win in singles and one win in doubles play.

Freshman Beth Boardman, moved up to No. 2 singles, won against Christina Bokelund 6-3 and 7-5.

Dana Cherebetiu and Julie Burgess, No. 2 doubles, defeated Jenny Reuter and Nicky DeMuro 7-5 and 6-4.

On Saturday the netters faced Ball State, and rain forced the netters to move into the Egyptian Sports Center to play the Cardinals. Auld didn't play Moellering in singles on Saturday, but did in doubles at the No. 1 spot with Boardman.

The Salukis split the six singles matches 3-3, but were able to win two of the three doubles matches and beat the Cardinals 5-4.

Sherri Knight, No. 5 singles, suffered from heat exhaustion and Auld defaulted the match. Knight recovered and teamed with Sue Steuby at the No. 3 doubles to win their very first match of the season. Auld said that the win by Knight and Steuby was important because it enabled the Salukis to beat the Cardinals.

The netters then faced Arkansas State and lost 5-4. "Confidence wise nobody gave up, but we didn't win the crucial points," Auld said.

The netters finished with a 1-2 record and now have a season record of 4-2.

For the weekend Cherebetiu, No. 1 singles, finished with 2-1 record. "Dana played very good at the No. 1 spot," Auld said.

Boardman was the only Saluki singles player to go undefeated for the weekend

Tourney teams compete despite tragedy

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

Competition can sometimes be a double-edged sword. Just ask any member of SIU's Full Tilt ultimate team. Or a member of Palatine's Burn.

The two teams met behind Abe Martin Field in this weekend's informal ultimate frisbee tournament bound by a common tragedy that could have dulled the spirit of competition.

The death of former Full Tilt member and SIU-C graduate Dennis Drazba about a week ago was a serious blow to local team members, many of whom were close friends with the deceased.

And Burn members were certainly equally effected by his death, since he was a member of their team at the time of his accident.

Out of respect for Drazba, both teams wore commemorative armbands — Tilt's were purple, Drazba's favorite color, and Burn's were black.

The match between the teams was one of controlled tension on both sides, and the action was never dull from start to finish.

Harsh words were exchanged between players from both teams, but the excited parties were continually called down by team members shouting "come on guys, this is a fun game."

Action in the "fun game" climaxed when Burn scored the deciding goal to break a 12-12 tie in the hotly contested match. The teams agreed to play only to 13 points instead having to win by two points under ultimate rules.

After the match, Tilt team member Mike Higgins detailed plans for a Dennis J. Drazba Memorial Fund, in memory of his friend.

Money contributed to the fund will support the Dennis J. Drazba Invitational ultimate tournament, Higgins said. The proposed spring tournament should become a self-supporting yearly event, a legacy left by Drazba's friends at SIU.

Contributions for the fund can be made at the First National Bank of Carbondale. Further inquiries about the fund should be directed to Mike Higgins or Dave Buchanan by calling 549-7895.

with a 3-0 record.

At No. 3 singles, Steuby was 0-3, Julie Burgess, No. 4, finished 0-3 and Knight, No. 5 was 0-2.

Freshman Patsy Hoskins played two matches at the No. 6 singles spot and played at No. 5 against the Tomahawks. Hoskins compiled a 1-2 record for the weekend.

Another freshman, Leslie Jones played at the No. 6 singles position against Arkansas State and lost.

In doubles No. 1 Moellering and Boardman finished 1-1.

Pitching unlikely key to Red Sox pennant

BOSTON (UPI) — Fighting off every challenger and fans' fears of yet another late-season fold, the Boston Red Sox won the American League East in a most uncharacteristic way — with pitching.

The Red Sox traditionally pump out hundreds of home runs while other teams win the division. This year, pitching rather than power carried Boston to its first crown in 11 years.

Roger Clemens, the major leagues' winningest pitcher at 24-4, led the Boston staff. Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, despite his mid-season problems, won a career-high 16 games and Bruce Hurst posted four shutouts among his 13 victories, the best of his career.

The Red Sox are No. 3 in AL pitching with a 3.87 ERA despite half their games being in the hitters' paradise of Fenway Park. The staff ranks second in strikeouts and complete games.

"Pitching is the name of the game," said right fielder Dwight Evans. "And we have it."

Carl Yastremski, who spent 23 years with Boston, was on the 1967 and 1975 teams which lost in the World Series.

"In all the years I was with the Red Sox, we never had pitching like this," he said.

Manager John McNamara, is his second year with Boston, gives much of his attention to the pitchers.

Five tankers get academic honors

All-America feat probably unequalled in nation, coach says

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

Five Saluki swimmers garnered academic All-America honors for the 1985-86 season, a feat probably unequalled in the nation.

Women's swimming coach Bailey Weathers estimates that the five Salukis — Claudia Zierold, Sue Wittry, Iris Von Jouanne, Lori Rea and Jackie Taljaard — comprise at least 30 percent of the country's swimming All-Americans. Of the nine Salukis to compete in the NCAA's, the total of academic All-Americans is also a fantastic percentage.

"I'm not sure that high a percentage has ever happened at any school — it's an incredible percentage," Weathers said. "I'm not sure if there's anything that would compare."

NOT ONLY DID the Salukis swim to a fifth-place NCAA finish for the second straight year in 1985-86, they have also repeated the five academic All-Americans accomplishment.

To achieve the status of academic All-Americans, the swimmers had to meet two criteria. First, they maintained a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 out of 4.0 per year.

Second, they qualified and participated on the NCAA tournament team.

Zierold, SIU woman academic athlete of 1985-86, graduated in food science and biochemistry.

Wittry returns to the squad as a senior and majors in accounting.

Of the three juniors, Rea majors in public relations, Taljaard in business and Von Jouanne in data processing.

"I DON'T THINK there's any higher achievement as a student athlete. It's incredible to be that strong as an athlete and to be so good academically," Weathers said.

At the NCAA meet last spring, the Salukis trailed UCLA heading into the final event, the 400 free relay. With fifth place on the line, Rea, Wittry, Zierold and Rene Royalty took charge with a school record 3:24.04 to place fifth in the event and return the Salukis to fifth in the 54-school meet, a single point ahead of the Bruins.

"It was a big accomplishment over some big teams," Weathers recalled. "UCLA will never get over us pounding them on that last relay."

The No. 5 finish marked the fourth consecutive year the Salukis placed in the top 10 at the NCAA's. The Salukis also captured the National Independents Championships in 1985-86. In addition, Weathers won NCAA coach of the year.

Harriers win tourney, Full Tilt a strong 1-4

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

The action was as hot as the weather Saturday at a six-team ultimate frisbee tournament held behind Abe Martin Field.

And when the action had subsided, the St. Louis Harriers emerged victorious, beating out a scrappy host Full Tilt team from SIU.

The Harriers finished 4-0 for the day, and "blew away everybody they played," according to Full Tilt member Rick Wendrow. One of the teams they blew away was Full Tilt, 13-1.

Full Tilt finished with a 1-4 tourney record, beating the Western Illinois Mad Platters 13-8 in the second match.

Tilt lost its first match to Palatine Burn 13-12. Other Tilt losses were to ISU, 13-10, and Chicago Czech, 13-9. Even though Tilt finished the tourney with a losing record, each match remained tight until the end, with the exception of the Terrier match.

Team co-captain Bill Byrnes said the informal open tourney was a "warmup session for the sectionals" to be held at Indianapolis Oct. 4-5.

Eighteen teams, including all but the Harriers from this weekend, will vie in two divisions for a chance to play in regional competition at Chicago Nov. 1-2.

Individual intramural sports are on upswing

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

Individual sports are on the increase, said intramural sports coordinator Buddy Goldammer. He theorized that people are looking at recreation more as an individual sport than a team endeavor.

This may be why aerobics is very popular, said Goldammer. Individual sports are more flexible. Goldammer said that students of today have many more commitments than those of the past.

"More students are working today than 10 years ago, so they can't get committed to playing a team sport," said Goldammer.

ONE INDIVIDUAL SPORT that "went really well," according to Goldammer, was the punt, pass and kick competition that the intramural sports department held Sept. 24 on the football practice field.

A total of 24 people participated in the event, which was originally scheduled to be held in McAndrew Stadium. Heavy rains the night before made the practice field too muddy for Saluki football practice, so the team had to move their practice to the artificial surface of McAndrew.

IN THE MEN'S DIVISION of punt, pass and kick, Mike Peterka took first ahead of Kurt Edmark. Dwayne Rouse placed third.

Lori Swanson took first in the women's division, while Carolyn Keith and Jackie Skryd grabbed second and third, respectively.

Badminton singles competition ended last week and Rocson Chang was the winner of the men's advanced division. Juan Chow Yong finished first in the intermediate division and Dave Flatt took the top spot in the novice section.

Aimee Fleming placed first in the women's advanced division of badminton singles and Terry Pitts grabbed first in the intermediate division. No novice division was necessary. Badminton doubles competition began Monday.

IN TENNIS SINGLES competition, Amanda Allen won the advanced section of the women's division. Jenny Yeow and Lori Swanson have yet to battle it out for first in the intermediate division.

Yow Yen Yong grabbed first in the men's advanced division of tennis singles and Stephan Masoncup took first in the intermediate section. John Feyereisen was the top novice player in the competition.

Entries for tennis mixed doubles and racquetball singles close Wednesday with competition for both sports slated to begin Oct. 6.

Floor hockey, a sport that does not usually attract many all-women teams, is scheduled to begin Oct. 8. Goldammer said that he hopes some women will form teams since no Co-Rec division will be formed.

FLAG FOOTBALL, A SPORT which will offer a Co-Rec division, is slated to start competition Oct. 12. It will be delayed until the end of playoffs for 12-inch softball, said Goldammer.

The intramural sports department is offering a cross country challenge called the Fall Classic. The race will be held Saturday at 11:15 a.m. The race will coincide with the women's cross country meet, the Saluki Invitational. Interested runners must sign up by 10:45 a.m. on the day of the race.
