Volunteer spirit

ANNETTE BARR — The Daily Egyptian

Student devotes time to help at children's camp

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

In a time of concern over an increase in student apathy, one SIUC student displayed hope for the next generation.

Jessica Peck, a junior in outdoor recreation from Rockford, volunteered her time Saturday at the first Southern Illinois Camp for Burned Children at Touch of Nature.

Peck said she received a phone call from the fire department asking for donations for the camp and for a country-concert fundraiser for the fire department. She said she was broke, so she volunteered her time in place of money.

"I said I didn't have any money, and I don't like country music," Pecks said. "So I asked if I could volunteer my time. My dad is a firefighter, and he told me it was a great idea. So I went."

In the confines of SIUC's Touch of Nature campgrounds, about 12 burned children participated in the first Southern Illinois Camp for Burned Children.

The camp was sponsored by area firefighters and the Shriner's of Metro East.

The participants had an opportunity for self-discovery and social interaction in an outdoor recreational setting. The group experienced life in the outdoors by taking hikes and rock climbing. The ages of the children ranged from 5 to 17.

Peck got up at 6 a.m. with her boyfriend to help volunteer with the event. With her bright pink hair, Peck looked intimidating to strangers. But she quickly made friends and was comfortable

Democrats hold rally for Durbin

By Shawna Donovan
DE Government/Politics Editor

Bob Enger and 50 other SIUC students spent Sunday afternoon in the sun picking up trash and serving drinks at a picnic at the Makanda residence of U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Enger, a sophomore in radio and television from Al Franken Gurnee, meets with Simon and Durbin to volunteer at a local Democrat show support function and welcomed local, state and national politicians to Simon's house for a family-style picnic.

The picnic, with guests that included U.S. Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., and political comedian Al Franken, also included a score of local candidates and party voters aiming at one goal — getting Democrats, and especially Congressman Dick Durbin, elected in November.

Durbin is a candidate for the Illinois U.S. Senate seat that Simon is vacating.

More than 500 people attended the event, including 50 SIUC students who cleaned tables, drove golf carts and directed traffic.

Hamilton Arendsen, College Democrats president, said students came out to volunteer and network with fellow Democrats.

He said students were able to speak with local, state and national candidates on issues that affect them including abortion, financial aid and education.

"This is a big boost for us and the University," Arendsen said.

Sarah McGhee, a member of the SIUC Voice for Choice group, said she talked with local candidates and other women who are involved in the pro-choice movement.

"It's a good opportunity to talk to people and really network," McGhee said.

"It's a good time to let the candidates know we don't just give out literature and that we can get the word out by talking with other students."

This is the second year Simon hosted such a party for Durbin, but this year's picnic was larger in attendance, coordinators said.

Sam Goldman, a coordinator, said people came out to listen to the candidates and to see Franken's humor.

"This is a really good time to get them (Democrats) ready to go," Goldman said.

Franken mixed politics and comedy by wearing a bow tie like Simon and Durbin.

Franken, who made jokes about Simon's voice, said he attended the event on behalf of Democrats.

Durbin, at a small press conference, said his campaign is going well, and he and his opponent, Al Salvi, debated Saturday night in Charleston.

He said he enjoyed the debate format, which featured 20 minutes for both opening and closing statements.

Al Salvi was campaigning Sunday in Woodstock and Effingham.

On his campaign trail, actor and Republican supporter Charleton Heston appeared at press conferences with Salvi on Sunday and Monday.

Durbin said one of his main goals is to make education effective.

He said he does not want to abolish the Department of Education, but would make it more efficient. The election is Nov. 5.

Simon, with wife Jeanne, Durbin and Moseley-Braun, welcomed supporters and thanked them for coming to the event.

"I'm pleased to have all of you here," Simon said.

Simon said he is preparing to start teaching at SIUC next semester after having served in the Senate since 1984.

Simon, who will be teaching courses in journalism and in political science, said he is looking forward to relaxing and spending more time at home.

Ex-Student Center director wins award

By Shawna Donovan
DE Government/Politics Editor

It was closure for John Corker Thursday night as he was handed the Administrator of the Year award.

For Corker, the former director of the Student Center, the award was closure on a time in his life, from one career to the next.

"People change their careers two or three times before they retire," he said. "But this was a major change in my life."

During his 19 years at the Student Center, Corker helped create Sunset Concerts and many other programs. He said one of his main accomplishments as director was making the center seem more warm and comfortable for students.

Corker, who now is a visiting professor in food and nutrition, said he felt drained and exhausted Friday morning after having received the award.

Despite the fatigue, he was on campus early to prepare for his 9 a.m. class. It was just another day, he said.

"I'm elated. It was probably the most meaningful award of my career," Corker said. "But life goes on, and I have a job to do. You just go on."

John Corker

Corker resigned from his position in May 1995 and began teaching in fall 1995. He said he was given notice in January 1995 that "a change would occur" and was asked if he was interested in teaching.

Last fall, Corker began teaching in Food and Nutrition, a department of the College of Agriculture.

Corker said he resigned because of political pressure. He said the transition to teaching "was a compromise." This semester, Corker has more than 200 students in three different courses, two of which are upper-level courses.

Corker said part of the political pressure

■ Quentin L. Banks, 22, was arrested for forgery Thursday after he allegedly used a debit card which did not belong to him. On Sept. 17 at 3:32 p.m., someone reported that a customer left his debit card in the ATM machine at First National Bank, 509 S. University Ave. Police said Banks allegedly exited the bank and seeing the card, he withdrew $50. He allegedly kept the card and used it for cash transfers and to purchase merchandise in different locations in Marion for a total of about $900. He was arrested on Friday. He returned some of the merchandise and was released on his own recognizance.

■ Stephanie Love, 37, was arrested at 117 N. Wall St. after police responded to a domestic dispute between Love and Rodney Morris, 45, at 9:39 p.m. Saturday. When police arrived, no crime had been committed but as officers were leaving, police said Love struck Morris while Morris was standing on the sidewalk. Officers took Love into custody and said because she allegedly was uncooperative, they took her straight to Jackson County Jail. Morris initially claimed he had been stabbed by Love with a pocket knife, which she threw down as she was arrested. But later, Morris said he had not been stabbed and did not want to press charges.

The first SIUC Women's Caucus membership drive meeting of the year took place Friday in the Illinois Room of the Student Center.

The meeting began with a presentation titled "You've Come a Long Way, Baby," which outlined the rise in women's employment on campus.

The speaker, Marsha Phelps, told an audience of about 50 that women are not represented equally in the workplace, especially in executive positions.

The Women's Caucus was formed in 1971 with the goal of spreading education about women's issues.

Franken works on Durbin impression

By Annette Barr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sitting on a stool between Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Dick Durbin in a receiving line at the edge of Simon's driveway, Al Franken was humored by a fellow Democrat as the man tried to impress Franken while they shook hands.

"What is the difference between Rush Limbaugh and the Hindenburg?" asked Gary Gaines, a Granite City resident. "One is a fat Nazi gas bag, and the other is a blimp."

Franken, who is known for his roles as Stuart Smalley and Sen. Paul Simon on "Saturday Night Live" and who also is known for his recent best-selling book, "Rush Limbaugh is a Big Fat Idiot and Other Observations," was in Makanda for a Democratic fundraiser at Simon's house.

After being a fan of Simon's for years, Franken is now supporting Dick Durbin, an Illinois Democratic candidate for United States Senate.

"Paul asked me to come here," Franken said at a press conference at Simon's house Sunday afternoon. "I'm a big admirer of Paul's. He's a hero of mine."

Franken has been doing a lot of public speaking since his book became famous.

"What I do is, I speak free to Democrats and charge Republicans," Franken said. "I just say basically the same things, and they actually pay me."

During his early years at "Saturday Night Live," Franken's impersonation of Simon helped to launch his career.

"Before Paul Simon, I was nothing," Franken said. "Now I'm working on my Durbin."

Although he still has some work to do on his Durbin impersonation, some may think he needs some work on his Simon as well.

"He's terrible," Simon said with a laugh. "He doesn't sound like me at all."

When Franken addressed the crowd of Democrats gathered in Simon's yard, he talked about what it was like covering the presidential primary elections for Newsweek. He shared some of the questions he had prepared for the candidates with the crowd.

"I said, 'Mr. Forbes, you grew up in a home called Timberfield,'" Franken said. "I'm thinking of naming my apartment. Do you have any suggestions?"

"I also asked Pat Buchanan, 'Have you ever had a homo-erotic dream?'" Franken said, drawing laughs from the crowd.

Franken, who is definitely not a fan of most Republicans, said he

Royal stallions demonstrate intricate stunts

By Lisa Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With a mystical air about them, seven horses paraded into the SIU Arena Friday night. "The Wonderful World of Horses" seemed to make an impression on all in attendance.

"The Royal Lipizzaner Stallions" were the supposed stars of the show, but the riders of the horses deserve the most credit.

The riders sat with their heads held high, the mastery of performance in their eyes and nothing but a show-business grin on their faces.

The riders, upon their horses, showed no effort at all while directing the gleaming horses to do intricate stunts.

The first piece showed off the Lipizzans' ability to "dance" to music.

To the sound of Mozart's "Symphony No. 40," two stallions performed a mirror-image production that incorporated a stunt called a half pass.

The half pass, where a horse crosses its legs to move diagonally, was proven to be completed in any of the three gaits: walk, trot or canter.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the show was the "Airs Above the Ground." This section showed the ability the Lipizzaners are bred for.

The master of ceremonies, David King, reminded the crowd of about 800 that all Lipizzaners have the ability to complete such feats as jumping straight up in the air and rearing up on their hind legs while balancing a rider.

King illustrated the Lipizzaners' natural instincts by saying the horses can be seen doing each of the stunts when they are young and at play. However, he said it takes a trainer to perfect the stunts.

There were many horse lovers in attendance, but many other people also came to admire the beauty of the stallions.

David Bartels, a senior in agriculture education from Carbondale, said he had previously seen the horses but wanted to see them again.

"I saw them in New York about five years ago," he said. "I work at Brehm Prep School (in Carbondale), and there were some kids interested in seeing the horses. I knew they would like them, so I am kind of like a chaprone."

Sandra Gully, a Royalton resident, said she came to the Arena because she wanted to bring her grandson.

"I saw 'The Royal Lipizzaner Stallions' years ago," she said. "They are so beautiful and talented that I wanted to bring my grandson to see them. I wanted him to enjoy what I had."

The traveling showcase would never have been possible had it not been for a U.S. general.

The Lipizzans became nearly extinct after World War II, but U.S. Gen. George Patton rounded up most of the endangered horses and secluded them.

"The Wonderful World of Horses" has been traveling and performing for more than 25 years.

This year's theme is a salute to the world-famous Spanish Riding School in Vienna, Austria.

Restructured class should set example for all departments

IT IS NOT DIFFICULT TO SEE THAT THERE ARE problems with a class when 40 percent of the students who take it either drop out or fail the course.

This is what the SIUC School of Accountancy realized about its Accounting 220 course when officials decided the course should be restructured so students who happened to fall behind in the class would not be doomed to failure.

The school has set a great example with the changes officials made to the 220 class — an example other schools and departments across campus should take note of.

Class work in accounting, much like calculus and chemistry, is based on material presented earlier in the class. If a student is confused in week two, he or she has almost no chance of mastering the material of week six. School of Accountancy officials brought this reasoning into the restructuring of the 220 course.

ACCOUNTING 220 IS NOW DIVIDED INTO three levels. Students must have a cumulative grade of "C" on the tests and quizzes of a particular segment before advancing to the next level. Now students who fall behind will repeat a segment of the class instead of trying to catch up and failing or simply dropping the class. Students have two semesters to pass the three segments or receive an "F" for the course.

This semester, it appears that 25 percent of the students will have to repeat segment one. This alone is proof that the new restructuring is working. The 100 students repeating segment one will be receiving instruction they need instead of lingering on in a lecture hall being confused.

This is what college is about — learning. Before the restructuring, it is debatable whether the class was accomplishing this objective because only 60 percent of those who enrolled actually passed the course. The money that students — and their parents and the government — spend on higher education is wasted when this happens.

A course with such a high dropout/failure rate also keeps students in school longer. When a student simply falls behind, he or she often drops the class — a wise choice when the chance of passing is slim. But that is wasted time and money for the student and can lead to an extra semester in college.

THE SCHOOL OF ACCOUNTANCY'S REACTION to a classic complaint about certain undergraduate courses is a great idea. The restructuring approach has the potential to work in other courses, especially math and science, because these fields also base new material on what was previously taught. Administrators in these departments should review their classes to see if restructuring could enhance the learning process in subjects besides accounting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student contradicts his ideas

Chris Edmonds' letter in the Daily Egyptian contrasted itself in the most elementary ways and demonstrated that he had not thought clearly or critically about the issue.

After lacing his letter with "whites" and "blacks," Edmonds ends his letter asking not to be called "white." Near the beginning of his letter, he states that he only wants to be treated as an individual, but his letter is filled with references to whites and blacks as groups — an implication that they are all the same. How can you ask for something that you don't practice your own self?

I cannot agree with your speculation that there are as many racist black individuals as there are white individuals. I ask you, Chris Edmonds, how can there be more racist black individuals in a society where they account for barely 12 percent of the population? Whatever racism a black individual exhibits can never amount to the 400 years of discrimination used against him. As a black individual, I do not blame you for what you term your "ancestors' stupidity." I think the real issue is white individuals in today's society feeling that racism against black individuals has ended. And that is a true misconception.

It is not racist of black individuals to unite in all-black organizations as long as they are not promoting violence or hatred among the races. Most all-black organizations advance their people. The largest "all-white" groups in this country promote hatred of other races and have a history of using violence to "advance" their people. This is the only reason all-white groups have been seen in a negative light. The reason why there are all-black organizations, Mr. Edmonds, is not because black individuals are being racist. Minority groups must unite among themselves before they can begin to unite with other races.

Mr. Edmonds, that if "white devils/crackers" used in some rap music upsets you, listen to different types of music. Rap artists represent but one voice in the black community. There are many others. And instead of writing a letter in which you feel you won't change any minds, write one that will.

Jeremy L. Griggs

Columnist naive over race tension

I just happened to thumb through the Sept. 18 Daily Egyptian when I stumbled across Neil Romney's article entitled "Race relations made simple."

Mr. Romney's satire is typical of white males who have not experienced discrimination further than not having any rhythm or being able to jump high enough to dunk a basketball on a children's Michael Jordan basketball rim.

Maybe if Mr. Romney would take a closer look at history, he would understand why blacks have a distrust of whites. I'm not saying that all whites are bad, because I haven't interacted with every white person yet. There are some blacks who aren't mad about their situation in life. But what I will try to do is explain why the blacks who are mad are mad.

In 1603, James I commissioned Sir Thomas Smith to establish the Virginia Company to grow and export tobacco. Guess who was to grow and field the tobacco?

In 1611, King James ordered a new translation of the Bible from Latin called Textus Receptus. Textus Receptus was an awful translation from Koine.

When King James had the translation done, he added a few wrinkles. The main wrinkle was the Curse of Ham. Somehow this was not in any other translation of the Bible except the English one. American preachers used this Curse of Ham to convince blacks that it was their destiny to be slaves and that they would be rewarded for their suffering in Heaven.

In 1661, Virginia passed legislation that recognized slavery as an economic institution. In 1667, Virginia passed a legislature that slaves could be baptized Christian but could not congregate without a white person being present. A slave needed a pass book to authorize him to be on the street.

In 1720, 34 slaves were burned at the stake. In 1837, Rev. Lovejoy was killed in Alton for speaking out against slavery.

By 1863, 200 million Africans had died in the slave trade. In 1921, 104 black were lynched in Mississippi.

In the South, pregnant women were tied to tress by their hands and their stomachs were beat on until their unborn babies fell between their legs.

Just so Mr. Romney won't think I am living in the past, I would like to mention the countless number of brothers who get harassed, beat up, or drugs planted on them in our inner cities. So if descendants of slaves are still suffering, then descendants of oppressors are to be held responsible.

But if Mr. Romney has "never discriminated against blacks" like he said, then why is he writing to the DE? Are you feeling guilty?

If anyone wants to check my facts, enroll in any Black American Studies class or visit the Morris Library.

Positive language needed in rap

Because what we think about ourselves influences our culture, the role of language and the control of the mind is more important now in a media-saturated society than ever before in history.

OFF THE CUFF

by Kyle Isma'il

Any sociologist, linguist or anthropologist will concede that culture and language are essentially inseparable. Language, as a product of environment, forms human psychology and even governs behavior. In viewing the life and death of popular rap stars, we cannot resign them as "only artists" or "just entertainers." It is much more in favor of justice to acknowledge the effect that the language of music, particularly rap music, has on the minds of youth.

If we reflect on the daily evolution in urban language, it is specifically governed by the trends of rap music and how rap artists interpret reality. Maybe some do not wish to admit that the thoughts and ideas of a certain few affect so many. Why do some think that music is just entertainment when so many of our youth of every color parade around with their pants halfway down and their waist dancing across their middle gluteus region, using the latest MTV-conveyed lingo, wearing Timberland boots? On the contrary, music is very effective in transferring to the mindful and unmindful alike a certain state of mind.

Those of us who are from the inner city can recall a time when rap music was a local expression of African-American struggle, rage and endeavor. One could observe a friendly or sometimes not-so-friendly, free-style rap competition in the park after playing basketball. Since then, many have identified it as a way to make money. It is no longer ethnic art; it is capitalist industry.

With mainstream appeal, it has the minds of many. Maintaining the bass and rhythmic nature of West-African tribal ritual, it has become the mockery of many. In the recent deaths of Tupac Shakur and Eazy-E, we see how the cultural art of the mid-1970s is being used by the powerful but ignorant to convey a message of disparagement. There are few cultural pioneers anymore like KRS-1 (Kris Parker) or Public Enemy. More often, there is linguistic abuse of human beings under the guise of "niggers and bitches."

This column is a call for an uncompromising critique of rap music on behalf of its listeners. In the midst of the psychological bombardment of rhymes and rhythm, our youth are in need of an enlightening interpretation of urban reality — one that doesn't glorify sex in the age of AIDS, one that doesn't glorify drugs in a time of drug addiction and one that doesn't degrade human beings in a time of racism, sexism and classism.

We have, in culture, the capacity to shape and influence the environment around us. After all, the mind and the environment are part and parcel of one another. Our expression can be just a reflection of what is, or it can be a proactive force that shapes what can be. In the struggle for education in an educationally faltering society, conveyance of knowledge is not limited to the classroom. Knowledge comes from every aspect of culture, which brings us back to the idea that language confronts us as the key in determining human behavior. I specifically mentioned Tupac and Eazy-E because they are clear examples of how language can affect us. Both men died from the psychology present in their own language.

America's need is to examine education and miseducation in popular music to confront the fact that this society will continue to oppress itself as long as money is more important than lives and material things more valued than people. As long as it is just Tupac or Eazy-E, we can accept it. But when its psychology prevails over the nation's youth, the future is threatened. The shame of Tupac's death is that he died before he realized his unlimited potential. Unfortunately, he couldn't see past the false reality that he created with his own language.

2 CENT WORTH Presidential phone votes wanted

by James Lyon

I was watching the Ms. America pageant a couple of weeks ago, or maybe it was the Mrs. America pageant. Like it really matters anyway. I don't have a chance with either group. Anyway, I noticed they were doing something different this year.

This time around, people at home could call in and vote for their choice. While the "pageants" may open up career choices for the winner, for the most part, they are pretty much a waste of time — except for the swim-suit category. Now that is quality entertainment. But that is another article all together.

If you've seen one woman with 12 inches of makeup and a six-cans-of-hairspray hairdo answer questions, you've seen them all.

"Well first, I would like to bring world peace and feed all the hungry children," they say. "And then I want to get my own apartment."

But then I began to think about this voting at home thing. Now you must understand that I did not call in to vote. To do something like that would mean that I have absolutely no life whatsoever and have become a waste of oxygen. But that voting system is a good idea for something else.

The presidential election is right around the corner, and every year we hear on the news about the low-voting turnout. Well, gosh darn it, I think we should vote for it by phone. Just think about it. During election hours you could call in, plug in your Social Security number and then press the number for your selection. There would be no more going across town to do it. You could elect the most powerful person in the free world right from your living room.

I think this would work, and if someone wants to make a few calls to get this thing going, then hey, let me know; I will help. If it is good enough for beauty pageants, then I think it is good enough for presidential elections.

The only problem with this is it might actually work, and people would actually start to vote more. And while it looks like a good idea from our standpoint, it probably will scare the hell out of presidential candidates. I mean, my god, people might actually start to have some kind of real control over what idiot they put in the White House.

to resign was a result of his outspoken nature on controversial issues like a formerly proposed hotel on campus.

He said he supported the hotel but raised questions about sacrificing student services to accommodate the hotel. Since 1994, the proposed hotel issue has been tabled by the University administration.

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs and Corker's former supervisor, said he had no comment on why Corker resigned or the political pressure Corker received.

"I see no need to comment about it," Welch said. "I'm glad he won it (the award). He did a wonderful job as director, and he got recognized for it."

Carolyn Donow, chairwoman of the Administrative/Professional Staff Council, the organization that sponsored the award, said Corker was a wonderful choice because of his hard work and dedication to the University.

As the recipient, Corker received a $500 check and a preferred parking space on campus, she said.

Corker was nominated last year for the same award. People who worked with Corker nominated him both this year and last year.

Corker said he has kept his head up and has "tried not to dwell on the negative" from since he resigned his Student Center post.

"I focused on the positive, and I kept plugging away," he said. "I'm finding success in what I like to do — helping students.

"Even though I did not like the change, it was positive that I went back to teaching." In November, Corker will receive the Service to Southern Illinois, an award given by the Jackson County chapter of the Alumni Association.

Before coming to SIUC, Corker was student center director at the University of Illinois, at University of Massachusetts and at University of New Mexico.

"The kids were quiet in the beginning, but we split up and heard everyone's names," she said. "No one was uncomfortable about their condition. I've made a lot of new friends.

One of the children took a liking to was Pete Smith, a 5-year-old boy from Hudsonville.

When he was 2 years old, Pete Smith was scarred on his arms, stomach and legs by grease from a kitchen appliance that was left out on a counter top. Pete Smith had climbed the counter and accidentally tipped the pot. The grease fell on him, and he had to be rushed to the hospital.

When Pete Smith came to the camp he was dressed in a concealing long-sleeved flannel shirt and jeans.

By the end of the day, he had a T-shirt on and was covered in mud.

Vernica Smith, Pete's sister, was at the camp with their grandparents, sister and father. She said she was glad that Pete had the chance to be around other children who are burn victims.

"In school, people ask him about his stomach and legs," she said. "He wears long sleeves and pants because he gets aggravated. Now he's around people who are burned. It's nice to be in a setting where no one will do that (ask Pete about his burns)."

Dennis Palmer, chair of the day camp project and a fireman in Carbondale, said the camp is a chance for children to meet and build up their self-confidence.

"I try to put myself into this personally, but I can't," he said. "These kids see the healing process in other kids and say, 'Hey this is going to be okay.' It creates and gives a sense of ease to see other kids in the same situation having fun and not being ashamed."

Palmer said the camp was a one-day pilot program, but with its apparent success, the program may run a whole week next year.

Palmer said he was not surprised when Peck asked to volunteer. He said she played with the children and brought a different aspect to the camp.

"Some parts of the population would do anything if asked," he said. "But I was glad she was there. She played with kids and helped brighten up everyone. She said she would come again next year."

Pete Smith also said he enjoyed Peck's company, even though he did not like her hair.

"We had a lot of fun, but I don't like her hair because it's colored," he said.

Peck said she was glad that she spent the day out at the day camp.

"It's really a good thing," she said. "It makes me feel good, and I smile when I think about it."

Assisted suicide gets grassroots boost

Los Angeles Times

SEATTLE—The Pacific Northwest, which has spawned consumer revolutions from personal computers to gourmet coffee, has become home to the latest upheaval in individual rights: a terminally ill person's right to "hasten death" with a fatal dose of medication.

While maverick Michigan pathologist Jack Kevorkian has made headlines for helping dozens of patients die, a small group of activists in Washington and Oregon have moved quietly — and, so far, successfully — to make the practice legal.

In March, the Seattle-based group Compassion in Dying won a landmark federal appeals court ruling that declared "a mentally competent, terminally ill adult" has a right to obtain medical help to end his or her life.

That means people like Alice Haghi, a 70-year-old widow whose lung cancer has spread to her breast and throat. Five years ago she cared for her husband as he died of cancer, an ordeal that convinced her she

"I don't want to live in agony and pain. What's the point?"

Alice Haghi, Cancer victim does not want to linger for agonizing weeks.

"I want to live," she says. "Who doesn't? But I don't want to live in agony and pain. What's the point?"

This week, the U.S. Supreme Court will consider an appeal of the right-to-die ruling filed by Washington's attorney general. If the justices reject the appeal, assisted suicide will be legal in nine Western states.

More likely, the high court will hear the case and use it to set a national precedent on the right to die.

Meanwhile in Oregon, another small group of retirees, AIDS activists and physicians won a state ballot initiative that permits dying patients to obtain medicine to end their lives. A federal judge in Eugene has blocked the law from taking effect, but the same U.S. appeals court that ruled in the Seattle case is expected to overturn his order.

If it does, Oregon will become the first state where assisted suicide is legal.

The battle, however, may be just beginning.

"This is the abortion issue of the 1990s," says Susan Dunshee, who heads both the Seattle AIDS Support Group and Compassion in Dying.

She and other advocates call it a matter of personal choice, the right of dying persons to control their final days.

Under its guidelines, Compassion in Dying and its volunteers work only with patients who are likely to die within six months. The patients must request help to end their lives on at least three occasions, and their close relatives must agree with the decision.

named his book "Rush Limbaugh is a Big Fat Idiot" for two reasons. "First of all, he's very fat," he said. "The other reason is I just hate him. I hate him so much."

Rhonda Boehne, a first-year law student from Carbondale, said she enjoyed Franken's book and was hoping he would sign her copy.

"I'm a fan of his political satire," Boehne said. "It's a big deal for people down here who know who he is."

One of Simon's Makanda neighbors said he was excited about Franken coming to town.

Steven St. Julian had signs out in his yard welcoming Franken to Southern Illinois. One of the signs read "Stuart Smalley for president '96."

"Al Franken actually stopped by for directions," St. Julian said. "He said he'd stop by on his way back."

Anderson inside the Salukis' own 15-yard line to prevent a driving ISU offense from scoring and gaining the upper hand.

Then, late in the third quarter, SIUC's defense came through again when free safety Willie McDonald picked off Anderson deep inside Saluki territory to stunt another ISU drive and preserve a 38-27 lead.

Watson said both interceptions were big.

"It was huge," said a relieved Watson. "That would have given them the momentum going into halftime. Those players (Rogers and McDonald) are some young football players in a big football game."

"It just thrills me to see them play like that."

But the Redbirds were the ones supplying the thrills early on when they jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the first five minutes of action.

On the first play of the game, Anderson hit wide receiver Rick Garrett for a 45-yard gain, which set up a 28-yard touchdown run by Chris Moore. The drive took a mere 29 seconds to complete and covered 78 yards.

On SIUC's first possession, wide receiver Johnny Thomas fumbled, which led to an ISU field goal and a 10-0 lead.

However, Bonner got the Salukis on the board in SIUC's next series when he danced in from nine yards out for one of his three touchdowns.

ISU's defense answered by picking off Saluki quarterback Phil Shellhaas on SIUC's next series, which set up another Redbird touchdown and a 17-7 lead.

But Shellhaas and Thomas atoned for their turnovers on SIUC's next possession when the former found the latter in the end-zone to cut ISU's lead to three. ISU kicker Todd Kurz showcased his kicking abilities with a 50-yard field goal to put the Redbirds up 20-14.

Shellhaas added a touchdown and kicker Matt Simonon booted a field goal to give SIUC a 24-20 lead. Rogers capped off the half with his interception at SIUC's own 6-yard line to preserve the lead.

Watson said the Salukis showed Saturday that they deserve respect.

"We passed the test today," he said. "We're starting to become a really good football team. I'm not going to get all happy and full of myself, but I think we are showing people that we've got a good football team here in Southern Illinois."

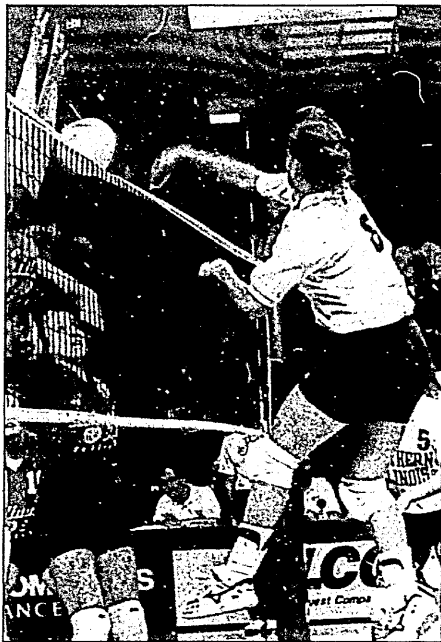

ISU forced the Salukis to punt on their first possession of the second half, but gave the ball right back with a fumble at their own 15-yard line, which led to Bonner's second touchdown to give the Salukis a 31-20 lead.

Bonner capped off SIUC's scoring chart with his third touchdown late in the third quarter. The Redbirds threatened to score late in the fourth quarter before McDonald ended the drive with his big pick deep into Saluki territory.

"I think it was a great win for us and a nice road victory that we needed to have," tight end Damon Jones said.

Saturday's win meant a lot in terms of the Gateway Conference race. It was equally important for other reasons.

"Yesterday's win was pretty great," Bonner said. "If people don't know who we are now, they will."

kills against Indiana State. Outside hitter Michelle Kuther led the Redbirds with 16 kills and 10 digs in the match. SIUC hit only 110 and had only five blocks while Illinois State hit 404 and had seven blocks.

Concentration was what the Salukis lacked in the match against Illinois State, Revoir said. "We lost some of the focus we had against Indiana State," she said. "Then once we got down and decided we wanted to play, we had already lost."

Moreland said Illinois State's reputation of beating SIUC also played a big part in the loss.

"We laid down to them because of their name," Moreland said. "They usually beat us, and we didn't even try to fight."

The Salukis' next match is at home against Drake Friday at 7 p.m. in Davies Gym.

SPORTS BEAT

TENNIS

Women's tennis splits weekend matches

The SIUC women's tennis team won its match against the University of Memphis Friday 6-2 but turned around and lost to the University of Louisville 4-5 Saturday. The Salukis' top four seeds won their singles competition and carried their winning ways over to the doubles by winning the one and two seeds Friday. But on Saturday, the Salukis struggled in singles with the only winners coming from No. 2 seed Molly Card, 6-3 and 6-2, and No. 3 seed Sanem Berksoy, 6-1 and 7-5.

SOFTBALL

SIUC ties for third place in tournament

The softball Salukis ended its fall season Sunday with a 9-6 record. The team's most recent success occurred in the "Fallball Festival" in Decatur Saturday and Sunday. The Salukis opened the tournament Saturday morning with a 2-1 win over Indiana State University, before falling to Southern Indiana 2-1. Saturday night, SIUC cruised to a 6-1 win over Butler University.

In Sunday's action, the Salukis dropped Southeast Missouri State 3-1, then suffered a 1-0 loss to DePaul, who finished first in SIUC's pool. SIUC fell to the University of Missouri 2-0 in semi-final action, good enough for a third place tournament tie with Western Illinois University.

BASEBALL

Alomar gets suspended, keeps playing

Roberto Alomar, the All-Star second baseman for the Orioles, has received a five-game suspension for spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck, American League President Gene A. Budig handed Alomar the suspension, which only can be applied to regular-season games. But Alomar appealed the suspension in order to play in Saturday's game against Toronto. It was a good thing he did because the Orioles clinched the wildcard spot off a two-out, 10th-inning home run by the spitting wonder. The five-game suspension cannot take a player out of a playoff game, so it will take effect next season.

Ryan's jersey retired by third team

Nolan Ryan became the first player in Major League history to have his jersey retired by three teams Sunday at the Astrodome. Ryan, now 49 years old, had his jersey retired by the Texas Rangers Sept. 15 and by the California Angels in 1992. During Ryan's 27-year baseball career, he recorded a 324-292 record while striking out 5,714 batters. He ranks in the top 20 in 10 Major League categories and holds more than 50 records. With his Astros jersey being retired for his outstanding play in the National League, Ryan became one of only three players ever to have his jersey retired in both leagues. The other two are Hank Aaron with the Brewers and the Braves and Casey Stengel with the Mets and Yankees.

SIDELINES

SIUC defensive back Cornell Baker (3), a senior from St. Louis, eyes the loose football after linebacker Greg Harrison (35), a junior from Columbus, Ohio, knocked it out of the hands of Illinois State wide receiver Ray Fouchea (28) on a failed attempt at a reverse during Saturday's game in Normal.

FOOTBALL

Salukis edge out Redbirds

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

The rushing game put up the points, but it was the defense that saved the day in the football Salukis' thrilling 38-34 conference win over Illinois State Saturday in Normal.

Saluki running back Coe Bonner carried the ball 32 times for 185 yards, including three of SIUC's five touch-downs, to push the 4-1 Salukis past the Redbirds and onto its first Gateway Conference opening win since 1992.

It was a win that Saluki Coach Shawn Watson will savor for quite some time. It also was a win that should raise a few eyebrows.

"This game meant a bunch," Watson said. "Going on the road was a huge, huge must. We needed to go out and solidify ourselves as a real contender by going out on the road and getting the win. I think people need to start taking notice."

Rest assured, people took notice of SIUC's defense, which came through in a pinch to prevent a change of momentum.

Holding on to a 24-20 with under 20 seconds remaining in the first half, Saluki strong safety Orlando Rogers picked off ISU quarterback Lester

VOLLEYBALL

Lack of consistency hampers Spikers

By L. Bruce Luckett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC Women's Volleyball Coach Sonya Locke says her team split two matches on the road this weekend against Indiana State University and Illinois State University because of a lack of focus.

The Salukis ended a two-match losing skid by beating Indiana State in four games in Terre Haute, Ind., Friday night, but slipped against Illinois State at Redbird Arena in Normal Saturday.

Locke said the Salukis, who are now 3-3 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 6-9 overall, have been unable to show consistency this season.

"We have to maintain a certain level of competitiveness and consistency," she said. "We haven't shown it yet."

SIUC crushed Indiana State 15-6 the first game, but the Sycamores bounced back to win the second game 15-8. Indiana State kept the third game as close as possible but lost 16-14. The Salukis won the match 15-7 in the fourth game.

Mario Moreland, a sophomore middle-blocker, led the Salukis by posting personal career and match highs of 27 kills and 21 digs, while freshman outside hitter Wendy Uhls had her own career-best game with 15 kills and 14 digs. Jodi Revoir, a senior middle blocker, helped out with 11 kills and 13 digs while freshman setter Debbie Barr dished out 60 assists.

"We had a good attack performance," Locke said. "I've always told the team that if we hit at least 20 percent for the match, we'll be in it. Our blocking also came around and frustrated them."

After the victory, Locke said Indiana State is not at all the poor team everyone, including preseason conference polls, has it pegged to be.

The Sycamores were picked to finish in the No. 7 spot in this year's MVC preseason poll.

"They are going to turn some heads come the second round of this conference," Locke said.

The Salukis did not perform as well against Illinois State (4-1) Saturday night in Normal. The Redbirds won the match by sweeping SIUC 15-9; 15-4 and 15-6. SIUC totaled only 25 kills against the Redbirds as opposed to Moreland's 27
