Lt. Gov. George Ryan talks to the media Tuesday during Foreign Language Day.

Ryan proposes mandatory foreign language education

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Illinois' lack of "language literacy" could leave its business and economic community tongue-tied in the world marketplace unless statewide foreign language education is made mandatory, says Lt. Gov. George Ryan.

But Ryan wasn't adressing a crowd adorned in two-piece suits and silk ties. He was speaking Tuesday in the Student Center to about 1,000 fashionably dressed high school students who were more concerned with having fun than dealing with potential economic blight.

"How can we hope to sell American products in Japan and help erase a $58 billion trade deficit with that country if our businessmen and women can't speak Japanese or understand their culture?" Ryan asked.

The students and their instructors were participants in "Foreign Language Day," a 5-hour language fest sponsored by American worker slain in Nicaragua by Contra forces

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — An American working with the Sandinista government on a hydroelectric project was killed Tuesday in an attack by U.S.-backed Contra rebels in a northern hamlet, the government said.

His U.S. sponsor said the rebels had been ordered to "execute" him to scare off other foreigners working with the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Presidential spokesman Manuel Espinoza, speaking on the state-run Voice of Nicaragua radio, identified the dead man as Benjamin Ernest Linder, 27, of Portland, Ore., who designed hydroelectric plants.

Six Contras attacked the hamlet of Camaleona in the northern Jinotega province at about 8 a.m. Tuesday, killing Linder, Espinoza said. He did not give further details of the attack or how Linder was killed.

Linder was believed to be the first American working with the Managua government to be killed by Contras. Several Europeans have been killed in Contra attacks. Two American pilots shipping guns to the Contras were killed on Oct. 5 when their plane was shot down over Nicaragua.

In Bellingham, Wash., Tom Voorhes of the Nicaraguan Appropriate Technology Project said his group was Linder's sponsor in Nicaragua and that he learned of the man's death from one of Linder's bosses.

"Evidently the six Contras had been waiting for him specifically at this site where he had been before, where he had been doing investigatory work for a hydroelectric

Lyons emerges victorious in student trustee race

By Tracy Bartoni
Staff Writer

Phil Lyons received 209 votes in the student trustee election Tuesday to win the post. Lyons, a senior in speech communication, defeated three competitors, the closest being Mark Lauburg, who got 171 votes.

Lyons will begin his one-year term as trustee July 1. He replaces Ed Lance.

Lyons said he feels the student trustee's job is to act as a watchdog over state-appropriated funds and student activity fee increases. He said his familiarity with the Board of Trustees and the University's financial operations will be big assets in representing the students. He has attended the Board's meetings during the past year.

Lyons said he favors the oral English proficiency test, which will be implemented this fall, that is required of all University professors and teaching assistants.

Lyons said he also favors a formal written policy that supports the current SIU-C policy prohibiting smoking in classrooms, but is against an extended smoking policy because of enforcement

Lyons is finishing his term as Undergraduate Student Organization president and is a member of the Sphinx Club. He has been a member of the American Marketing Association, Delta Chi fraternity and the campuswide judicial board.

Lauburg, a graduate student in health education, said his main priority as student trustee would have been to represent the opinions of the students.

He has been a member of the USO, the Akido Club and the University Park Program Board. He also has been a member of the committee that hears student worker grievances.

Glassford, a senior in education and political science, received 132 votes. He said he favors keeping student

Students laud Condom Carnival

By Tom Whelehan
Staff Writer

Last weekend's "Condom Carnival" at Thompson Point was praised by residents who responded to an informal survey taken Tuesday.

Twenty-five students from throughout Thompson Point were asked if they had attended the festival, and how they felt about the presentation of social issues — condom use, for instance — at such events. All but a few said they attended the event, and that they favored having future festivals with a specific social issue as a theme.

"It takes away a lot of the fear people have about sensitive topics," said Jarvis Alexander, sophomore in automotive mechanics. "They should definitely cover another subject next year."

All of those questioned said they hadn't learned anything they didn't already know about condoms. However, they agreed that their attitudes toward condoms have changed.

"Before, it was always a joke," said Jan Barker, Kellogg Hall, referring to the public's embarrassment towards condoms. "Now, it's really no big deal."

The carnival was part of Pointfest, an annual event held by the residents of Thompson Point. This year's event was intended to take advantage of the carnival atmosphere by raising public awareness about prevention of sexually transmitted diseases.

Representatives from the Wellness Center were there to offer advice and distribute free condoms in an effort to educate and desensitize the public about using condoms.

Campus vehicle accidents hit 15-year high

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

There have been 15 traffic accidents involving University vehicles in April, which is more than have occurred in any one month in more than 15 years, says Joseph M. Yusko, director of Risk Management for SIU.

At least four accidents were reported Tuesday "and we still have three days left in the month," said Yusko.

University Risk Management handles insurance for the SIU system.

Yusko requested that those driving take more care to drive safely.

Richard Davis, SIU-C insurance manager for Risk Management, said: "The last couple of days have been really bad."

Davis said the accident on Monday was the only one of which he was aware in which a person was sent to the hospital. He said that in another accident which occurred during April a person said his back was in pain but did not go to the hospital.

"People are not looking where they're going; they're letting themselves be distracted; they're not paying as much attention to their driving as they should," Davis said.

The average number of accidents per month involving a University vehicle is between four and six, Davis said. He said the University has 625 vehicles, excluding farm equipment, riding lawn mowers and other unlicensed vehicles.

"When you have that many vehicles doing that many things, you're bound to have a few accidents, but nothing like what we've had this month," he said.

S. Africa court: Campaign to free prisoners is legal

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A Durban court Tuesday overturned a police ban on campaigns for the release of political detainees, saying the decree violated freedom of expression. Judge Ramon Leon ruled in favor of the United Democratic Front, which claimed the April 10 ban — invoked under 10-month-old state of emergency powers — constituted an unreasonable attack on freedom of the press and freedom of speech.

Soviet negotiator: U.S. demands were met

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union included "the most rigorous verification" provisions in a proposal to remove medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe, apparently meeting U.S. demands, a Soviet arms negotiator said Tuesday. The negotiator, Alexei Obukhov, said the Soviet draft treaty, like a U.S. text presented March 4, is based on eliminating all medium-range missiles from Europe and allowing each side to base 100 such warheads on national territory.

Waldheim tells Austrians he's trustworthy

VIENNA (UPI) — President Kurt Waldheim told Austria Tuesday "you can trust me" and promised to produce proof refuting allegations he committed war crimes as a German army lieutenant in World War II. Waldheim, whose post as president is largely ceremonial, made the promise in a five-minute speech on nationwide television in response to a U.S. Justice Department decision Monday to place him on an immigration "watch list, a move that denies him entrance to the United States as a private citizen.

Italian president forced to disband Parliament

ROME (UPI) — Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani's 46th postwar government Tuesday lost a vote of confidence in Parliament, forcing President Francesco Cossiga to dissolve Parliament. Fanfani's defeat on the vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies was engineered by his own Christian Democratic party. The vote and his resignation were the latest developments in Italy's 8-week-old government crisis.

$1 trillion spending plan clears 1st hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Budget Committee's $1 trillion spending plan survived its first challenge Tuesday in a near party-line showdown between Democrats and Republicans. The Senate voted 50-46 in favor of a request by committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., to set aside the challenge led by the panel's ranking Republican, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico.

Israel wants immunity in Iran-arms scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israel is demanding immunity from prosecution for any of its citizens involved in the U.S. arms sales to Iran before giving investigators any more information on the clandestine financial transactions, a source close to the probe said Tuesday. The source said Israel, which says it is blameless in the Iran-Contra scandal, has balked at giving U.S. investigators a report tracking the millions of dollars funneled into

House speaker urges support for trade bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Calling a major trade reform bill the first step in halting the erosion of American jobs, House Speaker Jim Wright urged support for legislation Tuesday that opponents warn would invite retaliation. The United States posted a record $170 billion trade deficit last year, the fifth consecutive record, and moved from being the world's largest creditor to the world's largest debtor within the last few years.

Navy guarding North from terrorist threats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy has begun guarding the home of Lt. Col. Oliver North around the clock because of threats from terrorists, the Pentagon said Tuesday. A Pentagon official, who commented on the grounds he remain unidentified, said around-the-clock guards had been stationed at North's suburban home recently because of terrorist threats against the former member of the White House National Security Council.

English proficiency panel to make recommendations

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

A task force for establishing guidelines on oral English proficiency at SIU will make its recommendations to Chancellor Lawrence Pettit in Edwardsville Friday, according to Thomas Britton, executive assistant to the chancellor and task force chairman.

The task force, made up of faculty members, student representatives and administrators, was formed by Chancellor Pettit in February to make recommendations for implementing Public Act 84-1434, a new state law dealing with oral English proficiency.

The law says the Board of Trustees must establish a program to assess the English fluency of all instructors at each campus. "Each person who is not orally proficient in the English language shall attain such proficiency prior to providing any classroom instruction to students," the law says.

The policy must be administered by the beginning of the 1987-88 academic year.

Concerns were raised at a Faculty Senate meeting

Tuesday that the law does not define "oral proficiency," said Elaine Alden, director of advanced technical studies and task force member.

Gov. James Thompson vetoed the act when it was a bill last September, saying it was a "travesty to free speech" and threatened education and interaction with those of other cultures. His veto was overridden in December.

"The law also does not establish a policy of what to do if an instructor is not proficient, Alden said.

According to an April 22 task force report to the chancellor, the presidents of the Carbondale, Edwardsville and Springfield campuses would appoint special review committees including one student, one faculty member and an individual knowledgeable in proficiency assessment.

The committees would be called upon by department heads to assist in assessing instructors of their English fluency. If the committee did not deem the individual proficient, it would recommend an appropriate course of action to the dean of the individual's school or college."

Reagan retreats to his first story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, retreating to his original position, insisted Tuesday he did not believe he was trading weapons for American hostages in Lebanon during the clandestine sale of arms to Iran.

In a 26-minute Oval Office interview with six reporters, Reagan also defended former national security adviser John Poindexter as "an honorable man."

Poindexter quit Nov. 25, the day it was revealed that money from the arms sales had been diverted to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Panel disallows Lions Club to sell food at Springfest

By Catherine Simpson
Staff Writer

A committee formed by Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, prevented the Lions Club Pancake Breakfast from being held on campus this year during Springfest, Swinburne said Tuesday.

A number of Carbondale businesses and campus groups had said that Marriott Corp., the University's primary food-service provider, was responsible for the move. Swinburne refuted that stance.

THE COMMITTEE met in early March to discuss activities for the Great Carboard Boat Regatta Weekend, specifically to decide whether to allow outside vendors to serve food at Springfest, Swinburne said.

The committee was composed of University officials including Sam McVay, acting director of housing; Bill Egan, director of Marriott Corp.; Jack Dyer, director of University Relations; John Corker, director of Student Center; representatives from the Student Programming Council; and Sandra Moore, University Programming Office Coordinator and coordinator of the Great Carboard Boat Regatta Weekend.

THE COMMITTEE chose to move away from morning programs for the weekend. An inter-squad Saluki football game is traditionally played about 10 a.m., and the Lions Club event originally was seen as a way to attract people to the morning game, Corker said. This year, the game has been moved to 1 p.m.

In an effort to be consistent, the committee decided not to allow outside vendors to cater on campus during the weekend, Corker said.

"We either have to say yes to everyone or let no one in," he said.

THE UNIVERSITY signed a contract effective June 1, 1986, that gave exclusive rights to Marriott Corp. to cater in the Student Center, anywhere on campus, Rainbow's End Day Care, School of Technical Careers Cafeteria in Carterville, and the athletics and Arena concession stands.

Swinburne said the problem in signing a food service contract is "how to attract a quality food service operation to come on campus and be profitable." A solution is to grant an exclusive contract, Swinburne said. The previous food service operator, Interstate United, also held an exclusive contract, but exceptions were made frequently, Swinburne said.

BILL EGAN of Marriott Corp. said "We look at each individual situation" in determining whether a group can serve food on campus. "I cannot recall anybody that we have turned away," Egan said. The Lions Club never contacted Marriott about the breakfast and Marriott did not make the decision, Egan said.

Swinburne said his opinion was that the Lions Club should have been invited back, and other groups excluded.

Lions Club President Larry Good said "I'm not bitter about this thing at all." The Lions Club was told by Corker in March that it would not be invited back, Good said. The Lions Club will hold its pancake breakfast May 9 in Turley Park, Good said.

Walsh laments immunity grants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, in his first public report on the Iran-Contra scandal, warned Tuesday that further grants of immunity could jeopardize attempts to prosecute high U.S. officials for defrauding the government.

In a broad description of his investigation to date, Walsh also said his grand jury probe is "accelerating" and already had turned up evidence that could result in conspiracy charges. He added, however, that it was unlikely there would be any indictments until congressional hearings on the scandal were well under way.

"Most lines of inquiry are proving fruitful," he said. "None has yet been abandoned. ... Accordingly, this is not the time to narrow or conclude the grand jury process."

Walsh also revealed, "The allegations in the investigation concern possible violations of public trust and possible misuse of position by high government officials and their manipulation by former government officials."

He did not name any of the officials involved nor specify whether any still remained in high government jobs.

But at a brief news conference later, Walsh said he was hopeful that the House and Senate select committees investigating the scandal would not grant immunity from prosecution to Lt. Col. Oliver North, who was fired from the National Security Council for masterminding the arms sales to Iran.

FROM A STORY TOLD BY GIBERT RYLE IN HIS ESSAY
"THE WORLD OF SCIENCE AND THE EVERYDAY WORLD"

According to the story, a young university student is given the opportunity to meet the auditor of his college's financial accounts and have the accounts explained to him. Immediately upon arriving at the auditor's office the auditor launches into a long-winded explanation of the wonders of accounting with double-entry precision. The student is only mildly interested, but, in spite of the auditor's monotonous drone, the student becomes gradually more interested and very impressed by the order, systematic precision, susceptibility to verification, and exhaustiveness of the accounts. As the auditor becomes ecstatic about the scientific rigor of the principles of accounting, however, the student becomes suspicious and comments to the effect that the accounts still only give a partial picture of the college. To this the unsuspecting student is emphatically told by the auditor that this is not the case. "Everything is covered" by the accounts. What it more,

No speculations or hypotheses are admitted; our results are lifted above the horizons of opinion and prejudice by the Sublime Principle of Double Entry. These accounts tell the objective truth about the entire life of the whole college; the stories that you tell about it to your brothers and sisters are only picturesque travesties of the audited facts. They are only dreams. Here are the realities.

Needless to say, the student is left speechless. He sees quite clearly that the auditor has become deluded about the real nature of the college. He has been carried away by the comprehensiveness and precision of his financial records to the remarkable point that he no longer realizes that the books in the library have contents as well as prices, that lecturers teach in addition to receiving salaries, and that students (occasionally) study and learn besides paying tuition and receiving grants. The auditor has been blinded to the reality of the academic and social life of college by the theoretical approach which he has adopted to understand it. The accounts do, undoubtedly, "cover" all aspects of the college; but they do not, thereby, exhaustively "describe" it.

Holocaust's legacy survives in trials

ON SUNDAY, JEWISH communities around the world held observances commemorating the six million Jewish victims of the Nazi Holocaust. The observances held a special significance this year, for several recent occurrences suggest that not all of those responsible for the wholesale destruction of European Jewry have been brought to justice.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim has been barred from entering the United States on grounds that as a German army officer in World War II he aided in the deportat'ion and execution of thousands of Jews. John Demjanjuk, a retired Cleveland autoworker, is standing trial in Israel on charges that he is the infamous "Ivan the Terrible," a sadistic guard who operated the gas chambers of Treblinka. And just last week, Karl Linnas, a naturalized American citizen, was deported to the Soviet Union to face a death sentence for supervising concentration camp executions in the East European nation of Estonia, now part of the USSR.

In all of these cases, there is bitter debate over the guilt or innocence of the accused. This is only natural; such charges should not be taken lightly. But the cases also have pointed up widespread insensitivity to the continued suffering of Holocaust survivors, and perhaps a fundamental lack of historical perspective.

IN WALDHEIM'S CASE, the Austrian electorate chose to ignore inconsistencies in Waldheim's military record and his own account of his activities during the war. It voted overwhelmingly last year to elect Waldheim president. Many political analysts attributed Waldheim's victory to the desire of the Austrian public to forget about the country's part in the Holocaust. Whatever the case, Waldheim's election was a vicious insult to Jews everywhere.

About the time the Justice Department was preparing to deport Demjanjuk to Israel, then-White House Communications Director Pat Buchanan suggested that the world should stop hounding aging relics of Nazism such as Demjanjuk. Prior to that, President Reagan, ignoring an international outcry, paid a visit to a cemetery in Biberg, West Germany, where 49 members of Hitler's elite S.S. are buried.

The insensitivity of the Reagan administration was exhibited anew in the Linnas case. The Justice Department made arrangements to find Linnas safe haven in Panama. This despite evidence submitted by the Immigration and Naturalization Service that Linnas had hidden his true identity and entered the country under false pretenses. Panama called off the deal after it was disclosed by the World Jewish Congress.

It is true that Linnas was tried and convicted in absentia by the Soviet court system, which is not renowned for its fairness. But neither is the Soviet Union known for its sensitivity toward its Jewish population, or even its willingness to admit that a Holocaust took place.

IN FEBRUARY, renowned Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal released a revised list of Nazi war criminals believed to be alive and at-large. Among the 72 names on the list were those of Alois Brunner, a former deputy to Holocaust architect Adolph Eichmann who is reputed to be in Syria, and Walter Kutschmann, a former Gestapo leader who has been spotted in Argentina.

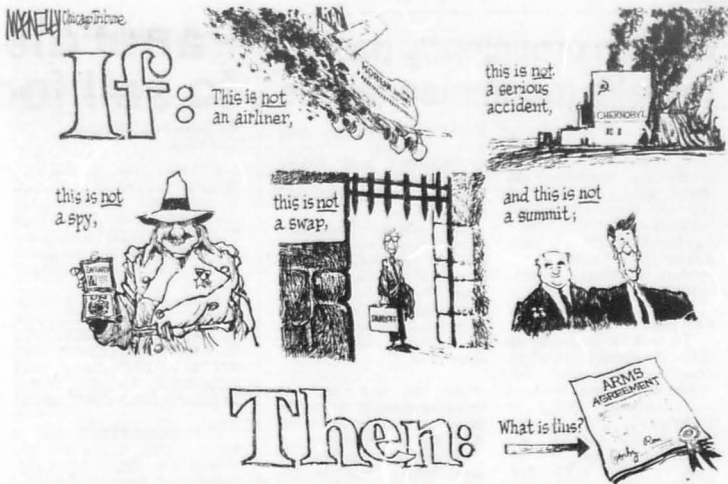

Some believe that the continuing search for Nazi war criminals is vindictive and keeps old wounds from healing. Better to forgive and forget, these people argue. But the crimes against humanity perpetrated by the Nazis are unforgivable, no matter what the age of the perpetrators. And those who would forget the Holocaust would do well to remember that those who ignore the lessons of history are doomed to repeat them.

In this respect, the Waldheim, Demjanjuk and Linnas cases are serving a valuable dual purpose. Not only are they serving as attempts to bring suspected murderers to justice, but they also are raising the world's awareness that the legacy of the Holocaust is still very much with us.

Quotable Quotes

"(Edwin Meese) has sent a clear message: Nazis are not welcome here...Kurt Waldheim is and remains the symbol of deception and deceit in the world." — Edgar M. Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress.

Letters

Music performers need respect

I am writing this letter to people who attend the recitals and concerts at SIU-C and detract from the performances by conversing with friends, listening to their Walkmans, or shuffling pages of homework reading materials. I work in the Music Office and the people who perform in these recitals are friends of mine. I attend several of these events each year.

You may not realize what goes into these performances.

Have you ever performed on stage? It is not an easy thing to do. These people have probably been working on these particular pieces for over a year. They have had to give thought to each note they play, and probably have dedicated hours of practice every day, not to mention heart and soul, preparing for this one event. How would you feel if you had worked that hard on a project only to have people show such little respect for you and your work? It is very distracting when even one person starts talking or whispering in a very quiet auditorium.

If you don't appreciate the music being performed, at least try to show a little respect for the performers and their many hours of hard work, as well as those of those people in the audience that are interested in what is going on.—Jo Ellen Smith, secretary, Carbondale.

Christian bigots did not create democracy

Piul Hopper has no room whatsoever to be critical of others who have written on abortion for "displays of emotion or ignorance". His statement that "Abortion is by definition murder" is a complete fabrication of fact if one feels that dictionaries are proper sources of definitions. Not one reputable dictionary carries such a definition, nor does Roget's Thesaurus list them as being synonymous.

This statement by Mr. Hopper is no more than an opinion based on subjective judgement arising from religious prejudices, and inflammatory in nature, thus making rational discussion difficult, if not impossible.

The issue of when, if ever, to remove life support from gravely ill or genetically impaired individuals is a complex issue which has nothing whatsoever to do with the abortion issue. Mr. Hopper's attempt to use the handicapped stuents at SIU to promote his views was a shameful exhibition. In the case he mentioned, the baby had no chance to reach the level of achievement of the handicapped students, but was doomed to an early death with continued suffering so long as its life was preserved.

As for the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution being religiously oriented, it must be pointed out that their authors included the atheist Tom Paine, as well as persons with low level religious intensity such as Thomas Jefferson. Nowhere in these documents is the Christian deity alluded to. It may be also pointed out that the democracy of ancient Athens was not Christian oriented, but had a religion with multiple gods and goddesses. It may be also pointed out that when this nation was being formed, before the American Revolution, Christian bigots performed such outrages against human decency as the Salem Witch Trials; and there is no doubt in my mind that, if they achieved power, people such as Jimmy Swaggart, Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell, etc. would perpetuate such things again, on television of course.

As a pagan, I try to remain aloof to the battle between fundamentalist Christians and secular humanists. On one hand, I feel that these Christians have tunnel vision, being bound to their particular social prejudices. On the other hand, we have those who defy science, although never admitting it, and seek to force the belief in such theories as Evolution, even though these theories are based on "scientific" interpretation rather than observable fact.

The Second Law of Life of my religion states "I will seek to hold power over no other, nor will I let another hold power over me. The only acceptable means of influencing another is reason". It sickens me to see fundamentalist Christians and the followers of the Catholic hierarchy behaving like street hooligans and vandals in their attacks on abortion clinics and their patrons. I can but remember how they talk of a "loving God", and wonder what ever happened to "Him".—Robert T. Philips, resident agent, Church of the Outlaw Confederation, Inc.

Protestors in last Saturday's march against U.S. foreign policy in Central America and South Africa move down Pennsylvania Ave. toward the Capitol Building. Heavily represented by churches, schools and organized labor, the crowd was estimated at 75,000 by local police and 150,000 by march organizers.

Today's global village has placed global responsibility on ourselves

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

WHEN PEOPLE asked why I wanted to go to Washington, D.C. for last Saturday's march against U.S. policy in South Africa and Central America, I would grin and say, "For the cherry blossoms." It was the safest answer a hard-boiled, realistic, 1980s college student could give.

Everyone knows that the two dozen SIU-C students who attended the march are merely 1960s re-treads trying to recapture fifth-string fragments of those golden days. I was just going for kicks and maybe a story, but certainly with no hope of changing the world.

But the "cherry blossoms" reasoning could not hold up through the rain, the mud, the soggy peanut-butter sandwiches or the caffeine-charged night-drive through West Virginia. Committing yourself to a difficult action requires you to justify that action to yourself. The trip to Washington forced some thinking about the power of demonstration as a force in democracy — about how much impact such a march can have on the news, the government, and on the people who participate.

The meaning of demonstration has changed dramatically since the founding fathers guaranteed freedom of assembly in the Constitution. In the enlightened days following the Revolutionary War, democracy was absurdly limited with the vote restricted to white, male property-owners.

IN A COUNTRY without public education or a national media, an individual could afford to isolate himself from government's private club. As the United States isolated itself from Europe, the average cabin dweller could live and die without ever hearing a politician or reading a newspaper.

Long-haired communists like Henry David Thoreau helped change the power of the individual. With his refusal to pay taxes to protest the Mexican war, he proved that one citizen can create his own political theater. Thoreau, the abolitionists, the suffragists and the early unions created a new political passion play that showed democracy means more than one man-one vote.

"Committing yourself to a difficult action requires you to justify that action to yourself."

Education and voting rights for Blacks and women brought power to the people. Now the individual, though still bound by his economic situation, could read the papers, know the issues and feel the effect of politics on his life.

Politicians who had made decisions in Congressional throne rooms were suddenly bound to new, broadening constituencies. The politician fighting for office became the malleable tool of lobbyists and demonstrators, and public opinion began to really matter for the first time.

BUT AS THE Constitution could not anticipate Thoreau and Susan B. Anthony, Thoreau and Anthony could not anticipate mass media, the Cold War, the Bomb or the million other frightening complications of the 20th century. Lies can be beamed onto television sets in less than a second and a religious dispute in Beirut can become a nuclear war. The individual may feel that his vote cannot matter, that he cannot possibly comprehend the issues that fill the news, and that a letter he sends to his representative will be answered by computer and considered not at all.

But just as we may feel more powerless in world politics, world politics are affecting us more deeply. Now that the globe has shrunk and power has become more diffused, responsibility for political policy has shrunk back to the individual. As long as our taxes and lives are being spent to support some form of foreign policy, we must be responsible for that foreign policy. It is impossible to ignore the news, and it is irresponsible to believe that voting for one jingoistic-pork seller over another is fulfilling our civic duty. These days, writing a letter to the editor or breaking a police barricade means more than a vote.

"THE PRINCE," Niccolò Machiavelli's 15th century guidebook for kings, may seem obsolete in this complex and dangerous modern world. But in an essay called "The Interior Prince," Richard M. Adams claims that the global village has given every individual the responsibilities of Machiavelli's ideal ruler. Pluralism, Adams writes, "is the rule in all government decision making, and if this seems to blur and diffuse... the responsibility which Machiavelli would locate in the Prince alone, it also means that we are involved, that there is no longer much excuse for anyone to adopt the role of the aggrieved and betrayed innocent. If the making of princely decisions is diffused through the society, so too should be — must be — an awareness of the basic conditions, hard as they are, under which decisions have to be made."

The people marching on Washington Saturday may have been a rag-tag bunch of idealists with limited political knowledge. But they based their action on the only judgment that makes sense any more in this confusing world — a personal sense of justice. Their participation in the march renewed their sense of commitment and added vigor to their campaigns at home. They also got news coverage and inspired commentary, and in this way tapped into the greatest political power the 20th century has to offer.

Rushing, 22-year veteran becomes city fire chief

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

Everett Rushing, a 22-year veteran of the Carbondale Fire Department, has been appointed as the city's new fire chief.

The appointment was announced by City Manager Bill Dixon at a press conference Tuesday.

Rushing is filling the vacancy created by Charles McCaughan's retirement last June. Four persons within the department were considered for the job, Rushing said, including one assistant chief and three captains.

He said he was pleased to receive the appointment but added that the other three candidates also were qualified.

Rushing first joined the department in 1963 as a volunteer and became a full-time firefighter two years later. He has been an assistant chief since 1977.

"I don't think that when I first started chief was on my mind, but certainly after I became assistant I started considering it," he said.

As chief, he is looking forward to implementing several ideas that he feels will improve the department's operations, he said. Among those ideas is to expand the training program so it "won't have to rest on one person's shoulders" as it has been in the past, he said.

For the past 10 months, since Rushing has rotated as acting chief with assistant chief Robert Biggs, there have been no major departmental changes, Dixon said.

"While we had two individuals acting as rotating chiefs, I had asked both of them not to initiate any significant changes because it was unclear over that 10-month period who the new chief would be. I wanted the new chief to make what changes he feels will be appropriate over time, so the two acting chiefs were somewhat constrained in what they could do," he said.

Rushing said he is looking forward to being chief because, in part, he enjoys and believes in what he does.

"To me it is a feeling you could help people," he said. "Every call is different, you just get your adrenaline going when the call comes in."

The appointment will become effective Monday.

GPSC to decide its position on increases in health fees

By Tracy Barton
Staff Writer

A resolution supporting an increase in student health benefit fees is expected to be discussed and voted on by the Graduate and Professional Student Council at 7 tonight at their meeting in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

The proposal seeks a $4 fee increase in the fall and spring semesters, and an increase of $2.25 for summer semester. If approved by the GPSC and Undergraduate Student Organization, the increase would go into effect the summer semester of 1988.

In other business, GPSC is expected to elect members to the graduate council. Peter Frederick, Marilyn Karaffa, Joe Phillips and Barbara Jahn are nominees for the four-member graduate council. Council member Eric Landrum said nominations for graduate council can be taken at the meeting tonight and those nominated will be written in candidates.

Kegs, glass at Springfest are no-nos, SPC chief says

Glass containers and beer kegs are not allowed at Springfest, said Sandra Moore, University Programming Office Coordinator.

This has been the policy for several years, but it will be enforced this year. SIU Security Police will confiscate kegs or bottles, Moore said.

A drawing of a life preserver with a logo saying no alcohol abuse, no underage drinking, no drink and drive, no kegs and no glass containers will appear on all flyers and posters for the Great Carboard Boat Regatta, the annual Maroon-White Football Game and Springfest.

The purpose of the life preservers is to "make people more aware and more knowledgeable" about the problems with people "drinking too much and getting out of hand," Moore said.

Police get raises, lose unused sick pay

By JoDe Rimar
Staff Writer

Carbondale police officers no longer will be paid for not taking sick leave, but they will get a 31 cent-an-hour pay increase, which goes into effect Friday.

The City Council approved Monday an agreement that modifies the Annual Sick Leave Buyback provision, a program allowing city employees to get paid for not taking sick leave, as it applies to police officers.

The officers give up the right to request cash for good attendance and in return receive a two-year labor agreement from the city.

Along with the raise that goes into effect Friday, the beginning of fiscal year 1988, the agreement also gives officers another increase of 32 cents May 1, 1988. Officers who are paid $10.42 per hour will be paid $11.05 by fiscal year 1989.

The city had a potential liability to the officers of up to $8,500 in "buyback" money, said City Manager Bill Dixon.

Because some officers don't request the reward, the city rarely paid the full amount, Dixon said.

The agreement "is favorable to the city," Dixon said in a phone interview Tuesday.

In other business, the Council made a tentative decision to recognize the Coalition for the Coordination of Human Services, a group organized to work toward a regional support system for social services.

The coalition includes representatives from such social services as The United Way, Jackson County Emergency Food and Shelter Board and Comprehensive Health Planning in Southern Illinois.

The Council will act on the proposal at its May 4 meeting.

- The council also:
- annexed the 4.25 acres of Parrish North Subdivision on Carbondale's northwest side;
 - elected Councilman John Yow as mayor pro tem; and
 - approved a request by Patsy Lorenz to vacate an east-west alley on Washington Street.

Condom quiz results: 'Games' were effective

By Catherine Simpson
Staff Writer

Students responded positively to a survey given at the Condom Carnival at Thompson Point's Pointfest, said Mike Bryant, organizer of the event.

The survey was designed to test how effective the carnival was in making students feel more comfortable with buying and using condoms to prevent STDs, said Bryant, graduate assistant in higher education. "The program was not at all meant for birth control."

Out of the 23 people who responded to the survey, 70 percent said the carnival made them feel more comfortable with condoms, Bryant said.

A total of 71 percent surveyed said the carnival made them more likely to use condoms to prevent STDs, Bryant said.

The survey also asked the sex, age, year in school, whether respondents are sexually active and whether they currently use condoms. The ages ranged from 18 to 19 and the year in school ranged from freshman to junior. Of the 78 percent who said they were sexually active, only 28 percent used condoms, Bryant said.

Housing official praises Condom Carnival

By Catherine Simpson
Staff Writer

The Condom Carnival held at Thompson Point's Pointfest helped to educate students, said Sam McVay, acting director of housing.

"I was pleased with the creativity of the group that put this thing (the condom carnival) together," he said.

McVay approved the carnival, which included the games "Water Filled Condom Toss," "Pin the Condom on the Stud," "Condom Dart Throw," "Strong-Man Condom Stretch," "Water Capacity Contest," and a quiz on sexually transmitted diseases. Pointfest was sponsored by the Thompson Point residence area. The residents in Brown Hall organized the Condom Carnival in cooperation with the Wellness Center.

"I am very nervous that this program or another like it is going to offend the sensitivity of people in power in such a way that we are going to have difficulty in programming these types of programs in the future," McVay said.

His first reaction to the carnival idea was that it was a "flip way to deal with a serious subject," he said. After considering advice from the Wellness Center staff, McVay concurred the carnival was a reasonable way to approach the problem of STDs.

McVay said he wants "to have condom education in a way that is most acceptable to most people." Helium filled condoms and a blow up the condom game were cut at the last minute because they might be offensive, McVay said. "I have not had significant negative responses from the leadership of the University," McVay said. "There's nothing that works with everybody" in influencing people to use abstinence or condoms to prevent STDs, he said.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for academic affairs, added that he found some approaches to educating the public about condoms semi-embarrassing, but worthwhile if it "reaches out and helps the consciousness of one person."

"I take the whole matter of STDs very seriously," Swinburne said.

"I don't know what the appropriate way is that we get people serious about accepting the responsibility for their own sexual behavior," Swinburne said.

one person who said the carnival atmosphere was inappropriate, Bryant said. The program was formed because "students wanted to educate students" about STDs, Bryant said. The purpose was to teach people they might end up saving a life by taking responsibility, said Chris Paveza, freshman in cinema and photography and an organizer of the event.

The group organizing the program spoke with the Wellness Center to ensure the carnival was the best way to educate people, Paveza said. The program also included the film "Condom Sense" and guest speaker Janice Kulp from the Wellness Center. Official calls for fewer summer flights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the National Transportation Safety Board called for a cut in summer airline flights "in the interests of public safety" in an interview published Tuesday.

The interview in The Washington Post sparked a sharp rebuke from the head of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The issue is what level of protection should the American flying public have this summer, and what can they expect to have with the system we have, and how serious is the gap between them," said Safety Board Chairman Jim Burnett.

Burnett said a forced reduction in the number of flights is a necessary short-term step to offset the recent rise in air traffic controller errors and near collisions.

Citing FAA statistics, Burnett said operational errors by controllers increased 18 percent and midair near collisions increased 13 percent in the first three months of this year compared to the same period last year. The "remedy is going to be unpleasant," he said. "It will be a bitter pill." "One real danger this summer," Burnett said, "is that the demand to reduce delays may overwhelm the counter-pressure to maintain the public safety."

In a response to Burnett, outgoing FAA Chairman Donald Engen told the Post that if Burnett "wants to restrict air commerce, he better talk to the president of the United States."

Engen said Burnett does not understand the traffic control system.

CBS president defends massive cuts in budget

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS President Laurence Tisch Tuesday defended massive budget cuts and layoffs in the news division as necessary evils during times of unprecedented change at the networks.

Tisch appeared at the Gannett Center for Media Studies forum on the Changing Economics of News and used the opportunity to defend his actions since taking control of the communications giant last year after a boardroom showdown.

"When I first took this post at CBS, I had no intention of cutting the news budget," Tisch told the audience. "I was committed to treating news differently."

But after Tisch and CBS News President Howard Stringer took a survey trip overseas to study operations, it "became abundantly clear to me that there were significant inefficiencies and redundancies," Tisch said.

"It was apparent that our current level of spending was not necessary to maintain the quality of our broadcasts," he said.

He said he discovered the news budget would jump every two years to gear up for elections but that after the elections, the budgets did not drop back to normal.

"The news budget almost always went up," Tisch said.

Falwell discontinues Bakker's salary

FORT MILL, S.C. (UPI) — Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell cut off fallen PTL leader Jim Bakker's $1.6-million salary Tuesday, sweeping his supporters off the board of directors and said the man who fell from grace in a sex scandal cannot return to power.

"We indicated that his ministry here has ceased," said Falwell after a morning-long and evidently stormy meeting of the board he appointed to run PTL when Bakker resigned and asked him to take over five weeks ago.

Falwell said before the meeting that Bakker was trying to wrest back his power, threatening a "holy war" if Falwell resisted.

BUT AFTER receiving the resignations of Bakker's right-hand man, PTL President

"When you're up to your hips in alligators, it's hard to remember that what you are trying to do is drain the swamp."

— Jerry Falwell

Richard Dortch and the Rev. Rex Humbard, like Bakker an Assemblies of God television evangelist, Falwell appeared Tuesday to feel Bakker's return was virtually impossible, although he refused to say that directly.

"When you're up to your hips in alligators, it's hard to remember that what you are trying to do is drain the swamp," he said. He did invite Bakker to face those who are accusing him of homosexuality and patronizing prostitutes.

BAKKER'S WIFE Tammy told reporters outside the Bakker mansion in Palm Springs, Calif., "We just would like to tell the people we really love them. We're very sad right now. We're going to miss them. Jim will be back soon and he's going to give everyone a statement. He'll come down and explain our side of what happened."

Asked where Jim Bakker was, she said only: "He'll be back soon."

Asked when he would speak, she said: "Not today, but sometime ... well this week for sure."

Falwell appealed to the "church in America to join us on May 7 in a day of repentance and prayer. These dark and turbulent days can be turned around."

"NATIONAL CREDIBILITY in the cause of Christ is at an all-time low," Falwell said. "I can't imagine another time when people would be sitting in a restaurant laughing at us."

"I have nothing but love and appreciation for the Bakkers," Falwell told 175 reporters gathered at a news conference in the luxurious Heritage Grand Hotel at the PTL's Heritage USA resort here. "I look around and see so many good things that they have done."

"In order to have a holy war, there must be two hostile combatants. I know where one does not exist. There will be no warfare from our side, from anyone," he said.

BUT HIS love for the Bakkers did not extend to continuing their enormous salaries.

Margaret E. Winters, associate professor of foreign languages at SIU-C, has been named chairperson-elect of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, effective Aug. 16.

The announcement came from John S. Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. The appointment, made by Acting President John Guyon, will be submitted to the SIU Board of Trustees for ratification.

Winters will replace Helmut Liedloff, who returns to teaching this fall. Liedloff, the department's chairman since 1981, also will take a six-month sabbatical in 1988.

Winters, who has been at SIU-C since 1977, received a doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania, a master's degree from the University of California-Riverside and a bachelor's degree from Brooklyn College. Her language specialty is French. She previously taught at the University of Pennsylvania.

She is the author of two books, "The Lai de L'ombre" (1986) and "The Romance of Hunbaut" (1984), and has won grants from the American Philosophical Society. She was chosen to attend a National Endowment for the Humanities Seminar in 1981.

Margaret E. Winters

She and her husband, Geoffrey S. Nathan, live in Carbondale.

Forestry gets new chairman

Dwight R. McCurdy, professor of forest economics at SIU-C, has been named chairman of the Department of Forestry in the School of Agriculture.

The appointment was announced by James A. Tweedy, dean of the School of Agriculture. McCurdy had been serving as acting chairman of the department since September, when former chairman George T. Weaver resigned to take a position at the University of Tennessee.

McCurdy, a native of Wheeling, W. Va., has been at SIU-C since 1965. He previously worked at the U.S. Forest Service Central States Forest Experimental Station at Columbus, Ohio. He has bachelor's and master's degrees from Purdue University and a doctorate from Ohio State University.

McCurdy has written several books on park management and forest resources. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Illinois Wood Products Association, the National Parks and Recreation Association, the Illinois Parks and Recreation Society, the Society of American Park Educators and International Union of Forest Research Organizations.

Zoology major bit by snake charms

By Sharon Waldo
Staff Writer

David Grimm has 25 roommates: one human, 11 snakes, two snapping turtles, two lizards, one tiger salamander, one southern leopard frog, two crayfish and five tropical fish.

Grimm, a senior in zoology, owns all of the not-so-common pets, except for one snake, which belongs to his human roommate, Tom Burckhardt, a senior in wildlife management.

Grimm said he can't pinpoint his obsession with the slithering creatures, but said he's simply "fascinated by them."

"I love to watch them eat," he said. "They don't have any appendages, so they bite the animal (rat) and throw their body around it. When the animal exhales, the snake tightens up so the animal can't inhale. It suffocates them."

After the rat is dead, the snake then begins to eat. Grimm said he likes to "watch the lump" move to the snake's stomach.

Grimm said he started collecting snakes, lizards and the like when he was about 10 years old. "When I was little, there were so many around where I lived," he said. "I got to see them pretty often. I thought they were kind of mysterious."

Grimm and Burckhardt grew up in a part of Belleville that is near a lot of wooded areas and lakes. Grimm said they used to collect the creatures together when they were children.

The fascination with snakes kept getting stronger for Grimm, more so than with Burckhardt.

"Even though I have them, I shouldn't keep them caged," Burckhardt said. "I never have kept anything a really long time. I turn them loose."

The creatures are kept in 15 gallon tanks, stacked three high and three across, along one wall of Grimm and Burckhardt's trailer.

"When you own your own trailer, they (landlords) can't really tell you what to do," Grimm said.

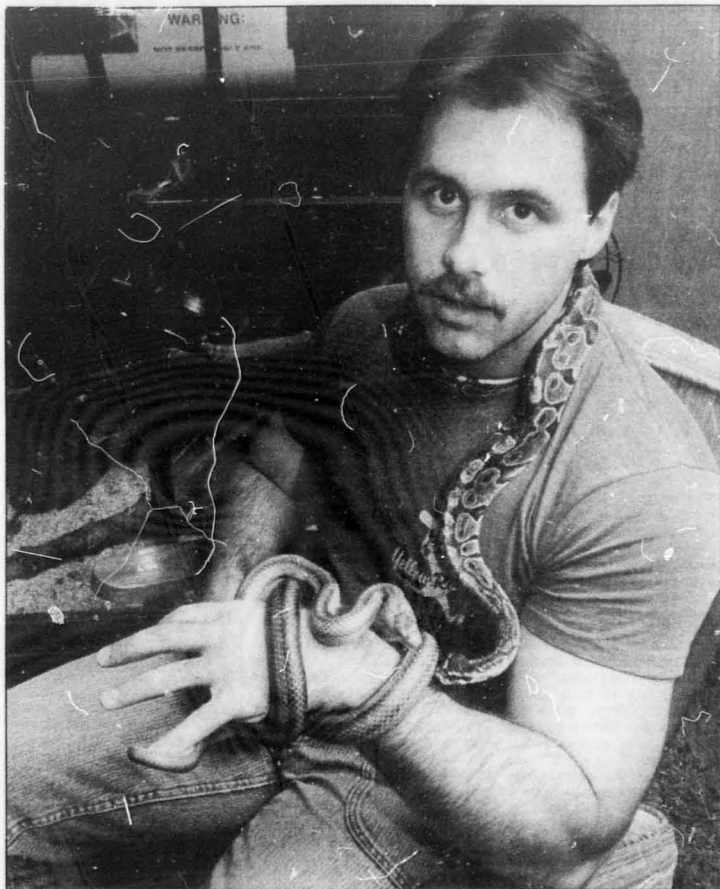

The snakes just lie there and don't make much noise, he said. "The snakes don't get out much."

Once, a lizard decided to stretch its legs, but didn't go far. Grimm said the lizard's "escape" was his fault because he left the lid off.

When Grimm was starting his collection he first brought home a garter snake, which he kept in the basement. However, as his collection grew a few snakes had minds of their own.

Grimm said he remembers his mother's reactions to his household pets. "She said 'that' wasn't staying in the house," he said. "I said, 'Well, if you don't want him in here, you take him out.' So she left him alone."

His mother, Kathy, said: "I don't know why snakes fascinate him so much, but right now, I'm glad they're not here."

David Grimm relaxes with a pair of his reptilian roommates.

Laxalt vows 'lean and mean' presidential bid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., declaring he felt "a duty and obligation" to keep America on its present course, said Tuesday he will run for president if he can raise enough money to finance a "lean and mean campaign."

"This hired hand is ready to take over as foreman," Laxalt told more than 100 supporters at the National Press Club, where he announced formation of an exploratory committee headed by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

The 145-member committee, many wearing "Laxalt for President" buttons, included several members of Congress and such Reagan administration figures as former counsel Fred Fielding and chief White House political adviser Lyn Nofziger.

Laxalt, 64, who retired from the Senate after his second term expired in January, said he must have at least $2 million "in hand" by Oct. 1 to launch a "lean and mean campaign with no fancy parties or stretch limousines."

"I'm not going to run for president unless the finances are there," he said.

Garn said Laxalt, a confidant of President Reagan, is well qualified and has "an excellent chance" to be elected president. Garn said his role is raising funds and that he expects to have more than $2 million by October.

Laxalt, a Nevada native and son of a Basque sheep herder, said the country is "on the right course."

Asked if he would break from Reagan policies or become "a clone," he said he would continue the policies "fundamentally" with refinements as needed.

'Working Girls' gets myths out of 'oldest profession'

By Mary Caudle
Staff Writer

"Working Girls" may be the most thought-provoking movie of the year with its frank portrayal of prostitution as seen through the eyes of women who live it.

Newspaper ads for "Working Girls," playing at the Saluki theater, don't come close to doing the movie justice. Anyone who expects to see a porno movie may be surprised to learn something instead.

The scene is a classy apartment in Manhattan that just happens to be a brothel. Molly, played by Louise Smith, is a graduate of Yale and a lesbian who lives with her lover and her lover's preteen daughter. She supports her aspirations as an art photographer by working at the brothel two days a week.

THE MOVIE follows Molly through scene after claustrophobic scene with her "RGs" (regulars) in the brothel, presenting a picture of prostitution that is both honest and unsentimental.

Prostitution is presented, not as a snake's pit or a sexy job of leisure, but as a job with anxieties and pressures like any other, along with such practical requirements as doing a lot of laundry and, in this particular brothel, providing your own sexy garter belt.

Director Lizzie Borden strips away myths about prostitution as the movie progresses by shifting the viewer's focus. For example, a man into "light dominance" is seen as an easy client because it is easier to simulate dominance than it is to simulate love. While a required skill may be tying knots, certainly a more important skill is acting technique and insight into "what men want."

KNOWING THIS at a glance, and providing it, even if results feel and look like shoddy playacting, seems to be the key to success in this job. It also helps to be young, blond, busty or to fit certain types — the "college girl," for instance.

While there often are explicit sex scenes, through their treatment by Borden they are made fascinating and completely unerotically. This unrated movie is not a porno movie, unless the truth about prostitution could be called "pornographic."

The mainstream media stereotypes of the prostitute, in which women are filmed in come-hither poses for male viewers, don't hold up in this movie. Distinctly different camera angles are used in "Working Girls," with an illuminating effect. This is sex-on-the-job, complete with work schedules, job descriptions and overtime.

REVIEWER ANN Snitow of "Ms." says Borden has done something "bold and original" with "Working Girls," her second feature film. Borden brings prostitution to the home front with believable characters that could be, and are, the men and women who live next door.

The "types" portrayed in the movie, both men and women, ring of truth and some will be immediately recognized by viewers. All of them were drawn from prostitutes Borden interviewed before writing her script with Sandra Kaye, the pen-name of actress Marusia Zach, who also portrays a prostitute in the movie.

THE ACTING in the movie is excellent, perhaps the most crucial element of the movie. Because of the sheer humanness of the characters involved, viewers have to face their own stereotypes about prostitution as something that only happens to "bad women" and "doesn't involve anyone you know."

"Working Girls" is probably the first movie of its kind, as Borden forces viewers to rethink those stereotypes.

BORDEN EXPLORES many of the questions asked about prostitution: How do women ever get involved in it? Why do women stay in it? Why do men put up with it when the women have such contempt for them? She doesn't attempt to provide any easy answers, but lets viewers think through the messages of "Working Girls" and decide for themselves.

Shuttle flight drill simulates failures for 5 astronauts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Five astronauts were hit by a series of imaginary failures Tuesday in the initial hours of a planned three-day space shuttle flight simulation — the first drill of its kind since last year's Challenger disaster.

The most serious of the problems simulated by engineers running a computer-operated trainer sitting in for the shuttle Discovery was a cooling system failure in orbit with the potential of forcing a real flight to end early.

Later during the simulation, the astronauts pretended to have trouble preparing to launch a satellite like that to be orbited in the first post-Challenger shuttle flight next year. Mission controllers told them to prepare for a possible emergency spacewalk Wednesday to fix the problem.

The make-believe flight was directed by controllers in the Johnson Space Center mission control center as if it were a real mission, and the astronauts operated the shuttle simulator in a nearby building as if they were actually in space.

Glassford, who has been campaign manager for state Rep. Larry Hicks, D-Mount Vernon, and chairman of the Inter-Greek Council said he favors building a new day care facility for Rainbow's End, a facility which provides care for children of SIU-C students, faculty members and staff.

DeFosse, senior in business education, received 21 votes.

DeFosse said he favors student medical fee increases as long as they are not too extravagant and students get something for their money. He also favors building a new day care facility for Rainbow's End because it will open student work jobs and encourage more people who have children to attend the University. DeFosse says the oral proficiency test is "absolutely necessary."

DeFosse is a USO senator and has worked for three years for Good Samaritan House, which provides temporary shelter for the homeless. the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures. Students were encouraged to talk all they want, but out of class and in another language.

Ryan's language was more attuned to law making, as he spent most of his speech promoting five bills in a legislative package that would "provide Illinois businesses with a workforce literate in foreign languages," he said.

"Sadly, the United States is the only nation in the world where it is possible to graduate from college and even get a doctorate without studying a foreign language," Ryan said.

The bills are scheduled to go before the Illinois House Elementary and Secondary Education Committee today.

House Bill 2779 would establish a grant award program for school districts that would encourage them to increase full-time foreign language courses between kindergarten and 12th grade.

House Bill 2780 would establish a pilot program to increase and improve the foreign language curriculum provided for those students. Grants would be given for employment of foreign language teachers and weighted in favor of schools with little or no foreign language curriculum.

House Bill 2781 would establish grants to assist school districts in developing a foreign language curriculum in cooperation with area higher education institutions and allows the Illinois Board of Higher Education to give grants to colleges and universities to develop for less commonly taught foreign languages.

"Four important languages we should concentrate on are Japanese, Chinese, Russian and Arabic," Ryan said, in a press conference prior to his speech, "but all of the other languages are important too."

House Bill 2782 would create a special language and international trade academy for secondary education-level students with foreign language proficiency.

HOUSE BILL 2783 would require the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs and the State Board of Education to maintain a foreign language resource clearinghouse to help Illinois businesses with foreign trade development.

Until the committee examines the bills, Ryan said he won't know what these programs will cost, but the funding "will probably come out of normal appropriations for general education and higher education."

During a panel discussion with Ryan, Coral Snodgrass, assistant professor of management, said the bills would help give Illinois businessmen a new outlook on international economic affairs.

"NINETY-FIVE percent of the problems in industry today are from fear of things foreign," particularly in the Midwest, she said.

"We can't sell to ourselves anymore," said Eugene Timpe, a panelist and a professor in the Foreign Languages and Literature Department.

development," Voorhes said.

"These Contras, according to the campesinos (peasants) assisting him, were on specific orders from higher up the Contra chain of command to specifically execute Ben," Voorhes said. "I assume that was done as an example to other internationalists that are assisting in the country."

"This was just not an indiscriminate Contra attack," he said. "Ben was singled out for the work he was doing there."

Voorhes said none of the peasants with Ben had been harmed, but were told by Linder's killers to spread word that Linder had been targeted by the Contras as a warning to other U.S. citizens interested in working for the Managua government.

Linder's body was reported taken to a military hospital in Apapas, 80 miles north of Managua.

Prosecution witness aids Goetz' case

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first major prosecution witness in the attempted murder trial of Bernhard Goetz helped his cause Tuesday by testifying the victims could have been surrounding the subway gunman when he shot them down.

But defense lawyers lost a battle to let the four-woman, eight-man jury hear a statement by one of the four youths who told a paramedic:

"The guys I was with were hassling this guy for some money. He threatened us and he shot us."

State Supreme Court Justice Stephen G. Crane ruled that the lawyers could not ask the paramedic about the remark because they plan to call the young man, Darrell Cabey, who was paralyzed and brain damaged in the shooting, to the stand.

The action came on the second day of the dramatic trial of Goetz, 39, who shot and wounded the four black men on a Manhattan subway Dec. 22, 1984, after at least one of them approached him and asked him for $5.

The subway gunman claims he shot the youths in self-defense because he was afraid they would mug him. All four, now 21, have arrest records and two are now in jail on unrelated charges.

Jurors also viewed photographs of the bloody subway car, saw the bullet holes in the victim's jackets and tested the sharpness of screwdrivers the victims were carrying.

Police Officer Warren Foote of Concord, N.H., testified that Goetz surrendered on New Year's Eve 1984 and begged to tell his story, even waiving his right to have a lawyer present.

"He wanted to talk very much so. He wanted to advise me why it happened, how it happened," Foote said. "He was nervous, very nervous. At one point Goetz was explaining to me what happened. He asked me if I wanted him to make a diagram. He did so."

1,500 pay tribute to police officers killed by sniper

PALM BAY, Fla. (UPI) — More than 1,500 officers, motorcycle engines snarling and blue lights flashing, rode in a somber funeral procession Tuesday to bury the two rookie policemen slain in a shopping center massacre six days ago.

Lawmen representing cities from across the nation came to pay their final respects to officers Ronald Grogan, 27, and Gerald Johnson, 28. Gov. Bob Martinez led the state's delegation.

En route to St. Joseph's Church, the motorcade of two-wheelers and patrol cars rolled past the shopping center where William Bryan Cruse, 59, allegedly killed the two officers and four other citizens and wounded 14 more Thursday. Cruse is jailed on 44 charges, six of murder.

About 100 local officers marched three abreast into the Catholic church while the others lined up 75 men to a row, 20 rows deep in front of the church.

They stood rigidly at attention and saluted as the flag-draped caskets were carried inside and came to attention once again as officers helped the two young widows inside.

The words of Palm Bay Police Chief Charles Simmons, often choking with tears, came dimly over small loudspeakers to the officers and reporters gathered outside the church.

"We talk about what we have to do often in this job," he said, "about what we have to do when the time comes."

"When the time came, Ronny left his car to protect his citizens and died trying to protect them. Jerry did the same thing."

"They died doing the job they loved, protecting their community."

Reading from a prayer sent him by another chief, Simmons said, "May time never erase the sacrifice they made. May their memories stand forever, brave in our minds and hearts."

The ceremony concluded after about 40 minutes and the officers outside, who had gathered under trees to escape the bright sun, went back to their vehicles for the procession to the cemetery.

Stress shows at collapse scene

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — A 17th body was pulled Tuesday from the rubble of a collapsed building where volunteers seeking 11 other missing men showed signs of stress from the sight of crushed and decomposed victims.

Anger, fatigue and frustration drained searchers, many of whom had worked with the victims on the construction site, and health officials worried they would be overcome with stress.

"Part of the morale issue is that with the number of days that have gone by, the hope is less and less that these co-workers will find someone alive. It's taking a very heavy toll," said Christopher Cannon, city health director.

The recovery effort continued for a sixth day, with 17 known dead and 11 buried under tons of concrete and steel from Thursday's collapse of L'Ambiance Plaza, a 13-story building under construction.

Despite round-the-clock efforts by searchers — including experts from the Mexico City earthquake and construction workers wiggling through dangerous tunnels under the debris — no sign of life had been found.

"No encouraging signs have developed," said Mayor Thomas Bucchi.

One wiry ironworker, Tony Turfaro, 24, has been dubbed "Tony the tunnel rat" for his dangerous forays into the rubble.

"Of course it's scary," Turfaro said. "It's dark and it's cold. I'm not stopping until this place is cleaned to the ground."

Cannon worried about the long-term effect on rescue workers, once the immediate crisis is over and they have time to reflect about the deaths of the victims.

"We expect that once all the adrenaline runs out, once all the bodies are extricated, there are going to be issues to be dealt with because of what they have seen — the mutilated bodies, the decomposed bodies," he said.

Priests and psychiatrists in hard hats continued to work 8-hour shifts at the site, counseling searchers and watching for signs of "stress-out." Several volunteers had been ordered to rest, or in some cases, to leave.

Pennzoil named to co-chair Texaco creditor committee

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Pennzoil Co. Tuesday was named to co-chair one of two creditors' committees set up to monitor Texaco Inc. during bankruptcy proceedings of the nation's third-largest oil company.

The move gives Pennzoil, Texaco's archrival and largest unsecured creditor a major role in the bankruptcy case that evolved from their multibillion-dollar legal battle. Texaco, which had no say over selection of the committees or chairmen, had no immediate comment on Pennzoil's key position.

Creditors' committees traditionally wield a lot of power in bankruptcy proceedings.

Texaco stock was ahead 50 cents to $31.625 a share at mid-afternoon on the New York Stock Exchange. Pennzoil stock was up 62.5 cents to $77 a share.

Texaco Inc. and two financial units filed for bankruptcy protection under Chapter 11 April 12 after failing to reach a settlement with Pennzoil in the $10.3 billion legal dispute over Getty Oil Co. ownership.

U.S. Trustee Harry Jones of the Bankruptcy Court of the Southern District of New York Monday set up the two separate creditors' committees, citing the "unusual" aspects of the case.

Pennzoil was selected to co-chair with Tenneco Co. a seven-member committee made up of Texaco competitors. The other members are Mobil Corp., Conoco Inc., Coastal Eagle, Amoco Corp. and Marathon Oil Co.

Press pool improves media access, Navy captain says

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

Military commanders — traditional foes of overly inquisitive journalists — are learning the benefits of keeping the media and public better informed about military actions.

That's the conclusion of Navy Capt. Steve Taylor, director of plans in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense and Public Affairs in Pentagon. Taylor spoke on campus Tuesday as part of Journalism Week.

Taylor said the controversial media restrictions imposed during the invasion of Grenada in 1983 — and the resulting backlash of criticism from both civilian and military personnel — led to formation of the Department of Defense "press pool," a group of journalists now allowed to ride along on military operations.

DURING THE Grenada invasion, more than 700 media personnel were forbidden from entering the combat zone until three days after the assault was launched on the tiny Atlantic island nation, Taylor said. By the time the media were allowed to explore the invaded island, the major fighting had long been finished, with only minor skirmishing and flushing maneuvers taking place for the press to cover, Taylor said.

Additionally, a Marine officer present during the invasion complained to Taylor that no photographic evidence of the Cuban and Soviet military equipment was obtained because of the absence of press during the main fighting. By the time the media arrived, nearly all of the captured Communist paraphernalia had been stolen by U.S. troopers. Only scant documentation of the material was therefore available, Taylor said.

CONSEQUENTLY, Taylor said, a board was formed by the Defense Department to study the Grenada issue, and it came up with eight recommendations. Of these, the most important were the decision to establish a covert media pool to cover military maneuvers and the recognition that a need existed for a more substantial dialogue between the government and the media.

A Department of Defense media pool of 15 people from national wire services,

The media generally are not receptive to a pool format, but in some situations they realize it is unavoidable and "hang their guns on the wall" to cooperate.

— Capt. Steve Taylor

newspapers and magazines was formed after the board's recommendations were studied. Taylor acts as the executive agent for the assistant secretary of defense and coordinates the press pool's activities.

HE SAID the pool's copy will not be censored, regardless of whether it contains information embarrassing to the government, but he does make sure nothing is written about a maneuver before it takes place.

He said the pool's main function is to be sent to a scene where hostilities are expected to take place, preferably arriving before the fighting starts. The pool then collaborates and shares the stories and photographs of the action, Taylor said.

With the formation of the pool, the media is assured access to U.S. military hot-spots, greatly reducing the possibility of another Grenada-type situation, Taylor said.

THE MEDIA generally are not receptive to a pool format, but in some situations they realize it is unavoidable and "hang their guns on the wall" to cooperate, Taylor said.

The DOD pool first participated in a military exercise in June 1985, when the army executed a landing in Honduras. "It was a shrieking disaster, or a great learning experience, as others might say," Taylor said.

Strict secrecy is considered essential to the pool's success, but information was leaked by a pool member's spouse — both of whom worked for a major newspaper — and the spouse's editor published the story before the pool left Washington, D.C., Taylor said.

"IT WAS PUBLIC knowledge that the pool was going to Honduras," Taylor said. "When we landed, the Honduran press was waiting for us on the beach."

Subsequent pool exercises were conducted with the Honduran lessons in mind, and tighter measures were taken to ensure total secrecy of the operations, Taylor said. These exercises were performed adequately, he said.

Before the bombing of Libya in the spring of 1986, Taylor was unable to fly the regular DOD pool into Italy because he was afraid it would be recognized, thus tipping somebody off to the planned raid. Taylor was then forced to use a theater pool already stationed in Italy to report the bombing mission.

Taylor said the DOD pool has eased the Grenada-created tension between the media and government.

"Military commanders are becoming increasingly sensitized to allowing the press to find out what's going on," he said.

Court rules foreign films can be called propaganda

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday the government may classify foreign films as "political propaganda" and sided with the administration in a dispute over Canadian films dealing with acid rain and nuclear war.

The court, on a 5-3 decision, rejected arguments by California State Sen. Barry Keene that the provision, included in a nearly 50-year-old law, would prejudice an audience even though the audience would not have to be told about the classification.

Justice John Paul Stevens, writing for the majority, said the act places no restrictions on the dissemination of films.

In dissent, however, Justices Harry Blackmun, William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, said the term is not neutral and applying it to the films is an infringement of First Amendment rights of freedom of expression.

Giants cut Cubs, Chicago home not so sweet

CHICAGO (UPI) — Hitting Jeffrey Leonard supported Mike Krukow's seventh-inning homer in a five-run sixth inning Tuesday to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Krukow, 1-3, walked one and struck out one in dealing the Cubs their seventh home loss in eight games. The victory was the seventh for the Giants in their last eight road games.

Tampa takes Testaverde, others open with offense in NFL draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers did the expected and the Chicago Bears the unexpected Tuesday in an NFL draft that placed a high premium on quarterbacks, running backs and Miami Hurricanes.

The Buccaneers, awarded the first pick by virtue of their league-worst 2-14 record last season, completed a formality by making Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde the No. 1 choice.

The University of Miami quarterback signed an $8.2 million six-year contract April 2 with the Bucs. Tampa Bay made its first pick official at 8:05 a.m. EDT to start a first round that took 4 hours and 8 minutes.

Indianapolis, 3-14 last season, followed by selecting outside linebacker Cornelius Bennett of Alabama. Houston then traded up with the Buffalo Bills for the next choice, taking Hurricane's full-back Alonzo Highsmith No. 3 overall. Later in the first round, Philadelphia made Miami defensive tackle Jerome Brown the ninth pick.

Not since three Southern Cal players went in the first five picks of 1977 has a trio from the same school been drafted so quickly. The Hurricanes, ranked second in the nation last year, were also a presence in the second round. Center Greg Rokoczy was selected 32nd by Cleveland and his teammate, linebacker Winston Moss, was taken 50th by Tampa Bay.

"I knew where I was heading," said Testaverde, who left the draft in Manhattan for a Tuesday workout in Tampa. "It's the others who probably didn't get any sleep. They didn't know where they were going or if they were going.

"It says a lot for our team," Testaverde said of the Hurricanes taken in the draft. "I'm sure we're going to have other guys up there as well. I'm more excited for them than I am for me."

The 28 first-round selections broke down as follows: Six running backs, four quarterbacks, three wide receivers, one tight end, three offensive linemen, six defensive linemen, four linebackers and one defensive back.

Perhaps the biggest surprise came on the 26th pick when the Chicago Bears drafted University of Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh. He was expected to go no earlier than the late second "combine" workouts in Indianapolis in January and came away impressing a lot of scouts.

"His stock went up considerably after his performance in Indianapolis," an Atlanta spokesperson said. "We were very impressed with his drive and intensity."

Though Van Dyke was fairly confident he would be picked before Tuesday's draft, he didn't have any solid ideas of where or when he would go.

"We couldn't worry about what round we'd go in or who would take us," Van Dyke said of himself and teammate John Field. "We just wanted the opportunity to play pro football."

"You go into camp and it doesn't matter if you're a first-round choice or a free-agent," Van Dyke said. "You still put on your pads the same way and where or when you can."

Van Dyke will report for his first workout with his new team May 6 in Atlanta.

As of late Tuesday evening, Saluki safety John Field and punter Drew Morrison were still available choices as the draft moved into the higher rounds. The draft consists of 12 rounds and was expected to be completed by midnight EST.

Vaulter Knauf returns from L.A. sole Saluki All-America gymnast

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

Senior gymnast Preston Knauf earned All-America honors for the second consecutive year for his sixth-place vaulting performance at the NCAA Championships which were held April 24-25 in Los Angeles.

Knauf vaulted seventh in the meet, which is a tough spot to be in, explained Saluki coach Bill Meade. When there are about 240 gymnasts at the meet, a seventh-spot performance comes while the judges are still a bit rough, Meade said.

Knauf had a 9.425 final score to place him behind New Mexico's Chad Fox, who won the event with a score of 9.70. Previous SIU-C opponents Carlos Fulcher (Northern Illinois) and Alphonso Rodriguez (Houston Baptist) tied for third in vaulting.

Knauf also competed in the parallel bars event where he failed to execute a new skill in his routine and scored a 9.0. The score was not high enough to make the finals.

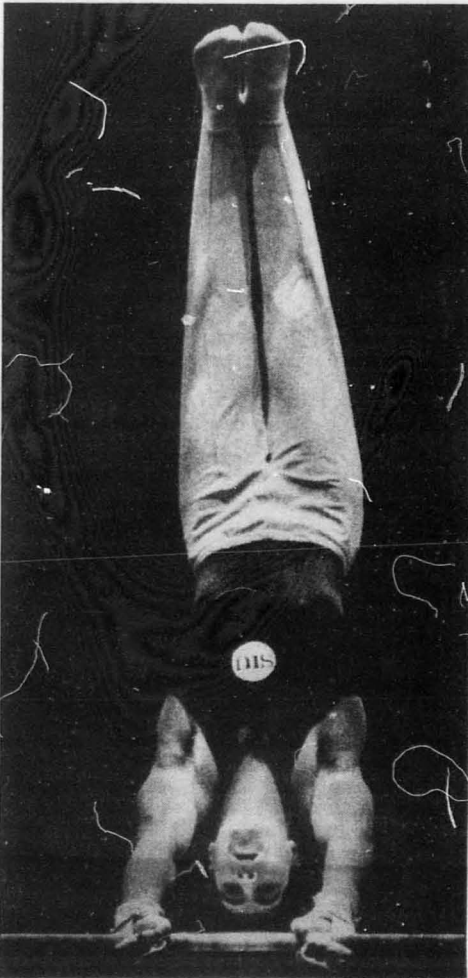

UCLA won the meet with a score of 285.30 with SIU-C rival Nebraska second at 284.75.

"The whole competition was excellent," Meade said. "There were more tricks, better skills, more difficulty."

Senior Mark Ulmer, the Salukis' other All-America gymnast from last year, did not fare as well at this meet. Ulmer was "a little loose," Meade said, and scored a 9.45 in the preliminaries of the still rings event. The qualifying score for the finals was 9.60.

David Bailey, the third senior Saluki at the meet, scored a 9.00 on the pommel horse and did not make the final cut.

Tom Glielmi, a sophomore gymnast who qualified for NCAA competition in floor exercises and was chosen at-large for vaulting, scored 9.70 on the floor and missed the finals by .05 points. Glielmi "tippy-toed" after his vault, Meade said, which dropped his score to 9.20.

SEMO next target in Finley record quest

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

At today's Saluki-Southeast Missouri baseball game, senior Steve Finley will continue his record-setting season as he seeks to score seven more runs.

Tuesday, the All-America candidate's 700th at-bat and 234th hit broke Bert Newman's records (694) and (233) in a romp over the Murray State Racers.

Today's contest, which begins at 3 p.m. at Abe Martin Field, also will aid Finley in his quest for another record—most games played.

The physiology major from Paducah, Ky., has played 103 games and needs 12 more to break Newman's record.

Finley may have a problem setting a new record in this department because the Salukis are assured of playing only 11 more games.

The SEMO Indians, 24-15, have five hitters above the .300 mark with Gary Stucker leading the team at .398.

The Saluki batters welcomed McIntosh with another five-run inning in the sixth.

Finley doubled to score Chuck Verschoore, who had hit a lead-off single and Limperis continued the attack with a single to bring Finley home. McIntosh walked to set the stage for Wrona's three-run homerun, his third round-tripper of the season.

Wrona, a freshman from Lockport, went 3-4 with three RBI and two runs scored in the SIU-C victory. Limperis, of Palatine, earned his 13th game-winning RBI with two hits and two RBI in four at-bats.

Finley, the Salukis' All-America candidate, went 3-6 for the day with two runs scored and one RBI.

round. And, the Bears were thought to be well-stocked at quarterback.

"We might have to have five-hour practices to get all the throwing in," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said.

The Bears already have Jim McMahon, Doug Flutie, Mike Tomczak and Steve Fuller at quarterback. McMahon is recuperating from shoulder surgery. Bill Tobin, Chicago's player personnel director, said the Bears are unsure of his status.

Green Bay, picking fourth, took Auburn fallback Brent Fullwood.

The other major surprise also came at quarterback. The Cardinals took Kelly Stouffer of Colorado State sixth, passing up badly needed defensive help.

Baseballers get revenge on MSU, 12-5

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

Revenge was sweet for the Saluki baseball team as it tore up Murray State 12-5 Tuesday in Murray, Ky., avenging the Racers upset of SIU-C April 21 in front of an Abe Martin Field crowd.

The 31-15 Salukis scored five runs in the first inning to chase Murray State starting pitcher Britt Stevenson from the mound. Stevenson had pitched to nine batters before being pulled.

Salukis play host to SEMO — Page 23

Saluki catcher Joe Hall walked to lead off the first inning before Steve Finley singled and stole second to put SIU-C at second and third. First baseman Jim Limperis sacrificed to score Hall and advance Finley, who later scored on a wild pitch to give SIU-C its second run.

A rattled Stevenson lit Cliff McIntosh with a pitch and walked shortstop David Wrona to put Salukis all over the base paths. With two outs, Chuck Locke stepped to the plate and brought everyone home with his fifth four-bagger of the year to put SIU-C up 5-0.

Locke, who went 2-5 with four RBI, also hit a solo homer in the fifth as did Hall in the fourth to add to the Salukis' lead. Hall's homerun was his second of the year.

Sophomore Tim Hollmann pitched five innings, struck out four and allowed nine hits to bring his record to 4-0. McIntosh came in on relief and struck out three in his four innings.

NFL Falcons draft Van Dyke

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

The Atlanta Falcons selected Saluki offensive left tackle Ralph Van Dyke in the fourth round of the National Football League draft Tuesday afternoon in New York.

"We felt going into the draft we wanted to take an offensive lineman," said Falcon head coach Marion Campbell, "and at this point in the draft he was the top-rated lineman available."

"I think there are some good opportunities for me in Atlanta," the 6-7, 275-pound Van Dyke said. "They've got a fairly veteran line and I'm just going to go in at the bottom and work my way up, however long it takes."

Campbell said offensive line coach Jim Hanifan was impressed with Van Dyke's speed, strength and footwork when he watched the Chicago Heights native work out earlier this year.

"He has the right aggressive temperament for an offensive lineman," Campbell said. "He likes to hit and hit hard." Saluki coach Ray Dorr wasn't surprised to see Van Dyke chosen.

Ralph Van Dyke

"I felt that Ralph has always possessed the qualities it takes to be an NFL player," Dorr said. "I think his willingness to cooperate when the scouts came in really helped. He showed them he was willing to do whatever it took to get to the NFL."

"When he came to SIU he wasn't 275 pounds. During his time here he improved his speed, strength, and his ability to communicate. It's a great tribute to his ability and work ethic."

Show-me state champion signs letter for golf women

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's golf coach Diane Daugherty disclosed Tuesday the signing of the 1986 Missouri Junior Champion, Christine "Christi" Morris of Webster Groves High School in St. Louis.

The 5'7" Morris opted to attend SIU-C over such schools as the University of Illinois, the University of Kentucky, Purdue and the University of Miami.

"We're excited to have her," Daugherty said. "I think she'll give a boost to the team."

Morris' golf achievements include qualifying for the National P.G.A. Junior Golf Championship by winning the Missouri Junior Championship in 1986. Morris won the medalist honors in a sudden death playoff in 1985 at the Flanders Valley Country Club in Morristown, N.J. on the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links. She also qualified for Junior World Optimist play in 1985, but a previous commitment to

Christine Morris

U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links conflicted.

Morris said she chose SIU-C because of its proximity to home, but also emphasized her eagerness to work with Daugherty.

"I feel working with Diane on a regular basis will really help me to improve my game," Morris said. "I really like Diane and the rest of the team. They all made me feel welcome when I visited the campus."

Morris described the length of her game as her strong point, adding she could use work on her approach shots.

The Show-Me state champion plans to major in communications at SIU-C.

Golf men swing into MVCs

Sala, Mullican to lead challenge to improve finish

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

The SIU-C men's golf season concludes this weekend in the seven-team, 72-hole Missouri Valley Conference golf tournament.

The linksters will strike on the 6,978 yard, par-72 Lake Panorama National Golf Course in Panora, Iowa, where Creighton will play host because its home course is undergoing repairs.

Last year's champion Wichita State will try to defend its crown against a title-hungry MVC pack led by the hot-shooting Illinois State Redbirds, who put together back-to-back victories on the college circuit earlier this spring. Other teams vying for the honors include Bradley, Drake and Tulsa.

First-year coach Lew Hartzog admits the Salukis have their work cut out for them if they are to bring the championship back to Carbondale. They are facing two low-scoring squads in ISU and WSU, both of which have five players averaging under 79 strokes per round. The Tulsa Golden Hurricane also boasts an impressive asset in conference leader Andre Bossert, who brings a 73.6 stroke average into the MVC meet.

"I think we'd almost have to have a miracle for us to get past ISU, WSU and Tulsa," Hartzog said. "It would take all of our kids playing as well as they've played at any time this year, although their frame of mind seems to be better than it has been all season. You never know — miracles do happen."

Hartzog will send a regiment to the tees led by senior Jay Sala, who is shooting at a 77.4 clip through 17 rounds. Flanking Sala will be junior Jeff Mullican, medalist at last weekend's Iowa State Invitational. Mullican comes into the event averaging 78.9 through 17 rounds. Senior Mike Tucker takes in an average of 79 for 17, followed by freshman Mike Cowen's 80.7 through 10 and junior Bobby Pavelonis' 81.1 through 17.

The Salukis may have extra momentum on their side

Jeff Mullican

because they come off their season-best performance at the Iowa State tourney, where they placed third in a nine-team field. Hartzog commented after the finish that "it was the first time we acted like a golf team all year."

The golf squad stayed in Iowa all week, fine-tuning its play for the conference meet.

"We've played the course twice now," Hartzog said Tuesday, "and it's a tough one. If we can make the move from sixth, where we finished last year, up to fourth, I'll be more than pleased. I'm not going to be concerned so much about where we finish as how we play."

A scheduled 36 holes will take place Thursday with the remaining 36 split into 18 holes of play Friday and Saturday.
