High-priced gala could head into red

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

SIU's 125th anniversary gala celebration this weekend in Chicago is falling short of the 800 expected guests, leaving the SIU Foundation to foot about $17,500 of the bill.

Donna Stankiewicz, director of development at the foundation's Chicagoland office, said 340 tickets were sold, totalling $42,500, but the event is costing more than $60,000.

"We needed to sell about 400 tickets to break even," Stankiewicz said. "We have been making calls the past few weeks to increase attendance and try to get corporate sponsorship."

Stankiewicz said the committee started making more phone calls three weeks ago to alumni, in hopes of selling more tickets.

The black-tie celebration, given at the Field Museum, will consist of an orchestra, dinner, dancing, valet parking and an Egyptian artifacts exhibit. Alumni, faculty, staff and students of the University are invited.

Robert Baily, assistant director of development at the Chicagoland office, said the event would pay for itself with full attendance.

Dorothy McCombs, associate executive director of University Relations, said the gala committee — mostly consisting of Chicago alumni — made seat assignments this week. Although many seats were not filled, the committee seemed satisfied with the turnout.

"There are 800 possible seats, but it's not realistic to expect to fill all of them," McCombs said.

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, said the formal event is being held Field Museum in Chicago, because a majority of SIU alumni are from the Chicagoland area.

Baily said the $125 ticket includes hors d'oeuvres, dinner, cocktails, dancing and valet parking.

RSO funding still debated

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government Senate Wednesday voted to provide $118,000 in funding to 115 small registered student organizations, but controversy continues to surround the allocation process.

Some of this controversy began earlier this week when John Shull, finance committee chairman, said committee minutes were missing.

The minutes, which are not typed or approved by the committee and therefore are not official documents, contain a list of the 115 organizations that applied for funding and the amount of money they were allocated initially.

Fun-filled atmosphere adds support for Special Olympics

By Angela Hyland
Minorities Reporter

A string of brightly colored helium balloons Thursday floated above the McAndrew Stadium field as athletes from all across Southern Illinois gathered to compete in the Special Olympics.

Linda Votava, special populations coordinator, stood at a table outside the stadium, directing volunteers to locations where they could offer support and encouragement to athletes.

The day was intended to be enjoyable for everyone, Votava said.

"If this was just a competition, it would be sort of sad," she said.

Special Olympics provides an opportunity for people with disabilities to compete in a supportive environment, she said. Competitions are organized into numerous divisions, so each athlete can compete against others with the same abilities.

Participants can choose to compete in races, softball throws and standing or running long jumps.

Gold medal winners in each event receive an expense paid trip to Bloomington to compete against the top athletes from each competition in Illinois.

The event, which began at 9:30 and ended with a rainstorm at 2 p.m., attracted 452 athletes and hundreds of volunteers, friends and family members.

At the end of the field, athletes and friends could participate in games while they waited for their competition to begin.

They stood patiently in lines, talking and showing off medals as they waited their turn at games.

Participants laughed as they tossed large, soggy sponges at the heads of volunteers peering through a hole in a colorful, wooden board.

They tossed fishing poles

African elections extended

Historic event causes flock of voters heading to polls

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

After nearly 350 years of disenfranchisement, black South Africans are helping decide their leaders in an election of monumental importance to humanity.

Dele Omosogbon, president of the SIUC African Student Association, said the election's significance extends beyond political and racial borders.

"(The election) is of infinite significance to our collective civilization," he said. "It represents the triumph of human civilization — our collective determination to survive and overcome all kinds of odds."

Julius Thompson, an SIUC assistant professor in Black American Studies, said the elections are a victory in the universal search for freedom.

"South Africa represents the search for freedom and the goals to develop a democratic society open to all peoples," he said. "The freedom struggle in South Africa is of major importance to black Americans because of our historical connection to Africa and our concerns about the freedom of black people throughout the world."

"(The election) represents the triumph of human civilization..."

—Dele Omosogbon,
African Student Association

According to Associated Press figures, black South Africans are turning out by millions to vote in the country's first all-race election in 342 years — more than 89 million ballots had been printed as of Wednesday, and more were on the way.

Polls originally were set to close

Wednesday, but turnout was so great officials extended the voting period indefinitely, Omosogbon said.

He said he is pleased with the deadline extension because it is unfair to turn people away because of officials' lack of preparation.

"The suggestion that they should extend the voting period is very sane," he said. "If they vote tomorrow or two weeks from now, it does not affect the outcome. It affects the outcome if they are not allowed to vote."

Although election winners are important because they will lead the country during its transition from apartheid to a more democratic society, nationwide voting eligibility is more significant than how people vote, Omosogbon said.

He told a group of South-African students who voted absentee in Chicago to consider which candidates best can benefit the CAMBODIA ON ROAD TO STABILIZATION — PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Nearly a year after Cambodia held national elections under U.N. auspices, there is a war raging, the economy is limping and gunmen roam the roads. But the country is not a basket case. The government, an odd-couple coalition of a failed Communist regime and a royalist guerrilla force, is still in place despite a decade of hatred and widespread predictions of imminent collapse. Its combined army has captured the headquarters of the infamous Khmer Rouge near the Thai border and now has the Maoist guerrillas, who ruled Cambodia in a savage reign from 1975 to 1978, on the defensive, if not defeated. And after years of runaway inflation that meant printing money to pay salaries, the government has taken steps to stabilize the economy.

ADVISERS WANT CHINA SANCTIONS DELAYED — WASHINGTON — Senior Clinton administration officials have concluded that China should be punished for pirating U.S. recordings and computer software, but some want the action delayed until after a U.S.-China showdown over human rights in June, according to administration and industry officials. The issue is entangled with a more momentous debate over China's human rights record that involves the entire economic relationship between the two countries. Most of President Clinton's advisers are leaning toward designating China as a "priority" violator of U.S. intellectual property rights, the officials said. China's failure to crack down on pirate recording and publishing firms costs U.S. entertainment companies an estimated $800 million in lost exports, the U.S. Trade Representative's office charged recently.

FIRST EXECUTION BASED ON DNA HAPPENS — JARRATT, Va.— Serial killer Timothy Wilson Spencer, the first person in the country convicted of a capital crime through DNA testing, died in the state electric chair late Wednesday night. The man known as the Southside Strangler was pronounced dead at 11:13 p.m., said Wayne Brown, operations officer at Greensville Correctional Center here in southern Virginia. His electrocution came after a flurry of last-minute legal efforts that went as high as the U.S. Supreme Court, which rejected a request for a stay at 10:45 p.m. Spencer's attorneys had frantically pleaded for retesting of the DNA genetic material that led to his convictions for raping and murdering four women during a 10-week rampage in 1987.

FAY GETS MULTIPLE OFFERS FOR STORY — SINGAPORE — As American teen-ager Michael Fay awaits caning on vandalism charges, offers of money for his story are pouring in from television shows, publishers and other quarters. Fay, 18, is serving a four-month prison term for spray-painting cars and committing other offenses. Still to come is the outcome of a clemency appeal on the harshest part of his sentence: six lashes with a rattan cane on his bare buttocks. Singapore's Cabinet is considered virtually certain to recommend that the figurehead president, Ong Teng Cheong, reject the appeal. The irony is that by going ahead with the caning, Singapore appears likely to ensure that Fay, whom the government has denounced as a "criminal," will become a rich young man. While the skin-flaying punishment is said to be excruciating, the financial rewards of TV, book and movie deals could help to ease the pain somewhat.

Student serves Democrats

By Jamie Madigan
Politics Reporter

An SIUC College Democrats member was elected to a student board that will oversee the Illinois Federation of College Democrats next semester.

Maggie Bednar, a junior in political science and speech communication, was elected to the media affairs commissioner this month at the federation's first convention in Springfield.

Bednar, who this week was elected president of the College Democrats for the 1994-95 school year, said she ran for the commissioner's position because she wants to involve more schools and organizations.

"I really enjoy politics," she said. "Maybe through my position as media affairs commissioner I can make people more interested in politics."

Bednar said the other four board positions are finance, legislative action, membership and communications and public relations. Her position will involve many duties, she said.

"We (the commissioners) are supposed to meet — or at least have conference calls — once a month," she said.

"I will have to prepare news releases for really big events and prepare a newsletter for all the college Democrats in Illinois."

Bednar said she is honored to be elected to the position.

"I think it's great — I was really excited," she said. "Hopefully, we'll get a lot done."

Jim Bunton, president of the SIUC's College Democrats, said his chapter took part in organizing the state-wide group.

"The Illinois Federation of College Democrats was formed in November," he said. "It is a division of the College Democrats of America (in Washington, D.C.)."

Bunton said the convention allowed people from different schools to meet each other and offered them an opportunity to hear speakers such as Sen. Paul Simon, gubernatorial candidate Dawn Clark Netsch and the president of the College Democrats of America.

Katie Priekulis, secretary of SIUC's organization, said delegates thought the convention was an important experience.

Chop away: Alumni funds races

SIUC Forestry team continues contests thanks to finances

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

SIUC forestry alumni this week made a commitment to help fund students' speed chopping and logging competitions.

Team co-captain Dave Farris contacted the forestry alumni association to ask for money when funding trips began to pose a problem.

Alumni fun-ling will help with the next conclave, a tribute to old-time foresters, hosted by the University of Missouri. Alumni do not wish to reveal the amount given.

SIUC's forestry team took first place in the Eastern Illinois Forestry Conclave April 16 and 17 at Forest Glen Preserve, about 12 miles southeast of Danville. The Danville win marked the fourth consecutive first place for the team.

The conclave consists of log rolling, buck saw, bolt throw, speed chopping and pulp-tossing events.

Team co-captain James Strole said there are many negative issues concerning the forest because of environmental concerns, such as clear cutting and logging. Strole believes it is important to show the positive events in forestry.

Twelve SIUC forestry students competed in the two-day event against students from the University of Illinois, University of Minnesota, University of Missouri, Southeastern Illinois College, Michigan Tech University and Michigan State University.

"This conclave is more of a spectators event," Strole said. "Several hundred people showed up to watch both days."

The team also competes in the Annual Midwestern Foresters Conclave. Each University competing in the conclave takes a turn hosting the event.

"The annual conclave is very competitive — we start practicing two months ahead," Strole said.

Winners of the Eastern Illinois Forestry Conclave included: Amy Schildt, a graduate student in forestry from Quincy, who won first place in the speed chop both days; Jeremy Dedic, a senior in forestry from Pamona, and Jim Tresouthick, a senior in forestry from Carbondale took first in the two-man buck sawing event, completing in 21 seconds, the same log was cut with a chain saw in one minute and eight seconds.

Mandy Kersten, a junior in forestry from Normal, and Schildt won first place in the women's log roll. Don Frorheck, a senior in forestry from Carterville and Brian Merkel, a senior in forestry from

Little pain, big gain part of giving blood

NINETY-EIGHT PERCENT OF THE PEOPLE IN the United States will at some point in their lives require at least one pint of donated blood.

Yet, stores of reserve blood are very often in short supply even though the Red Cross sponsors blood drives over 350 days a year.

Today is the last day of the blood drive at SIUC. Everyone who can should give about 30 minutes of their day and one pint of their blood to the Red Cross.

AS IS ANYONE, THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IS susceptible to unforeseen setbacks.

Last week, on the way to Du Quoin High School, one of the Red Cross's equipment trucks broke down, leaving the organization without roughly 100 units of blood that organizers had hoped to collect. Also, the drive that took place at Marion High School last week failed to produce the expected donations.

Red Cross organizers, who hope to make up for the shortfalls, increased their goal at SIUC from 500 to 600 pints of blood yesterday.

OFTEN, WHEN THE SUBJECT OF DONATING blood is brought up, many people become unnerved and start to search frantically for excuses as visions of gargantuan needles and searing pain fill their minds. The truth is, there are very few good reasons for not giving blood.

Needles. Many people are afraid of the pain of needles. Actually, the only thing you feel is a small prick and once the needle is inserted, you really do not feel anything at all. For the squeamish, the Red Cross has devised the buddy system in which someone is by your side throughout virtually the whole process.

"I just gave blood a few months ago." Check the calendar. After only 56 days your body is ready to give blood again.

Many people are afraid they may contract a lethal disease by giving blood. This is impossible. A new needle is used for each donor and the area from which the blood will be drawn is thoroughly sterilized.

Probably the most serious concern of many people, particularly on a college campus, is that they may receive a phone call from the Red Cross one day telling them their blood tested positive for HIV. The fact is, on average, only six units of blood out of 260,000 test HIV positive per year, about two percent. That figure covers an 80 county region that includes St. Louis and other large metropolitan areas.

THERE ARE VERY FEW REASONS FOR NOT getting out and giving blood. It could be your own life you save.

The blood drive will continue today from noon until 8 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center. Papa John's pizza, sandwiches, and other food, as well as Fazoli's coupons will be handed out to donors.

Really, it is no big deal.

Half mast: Only half responsible

Coming out of Grinnell cafeteria, I noticed the flag at the Rec Center was flying at full mast. The President of the United States had issued a half mast order in honor of the Americans who recently died in service, and the guys at the Rec, evidently, hadn't caught on yet. No problem, I thought. I'll just give them a call.

I call up the Rec, listen to a long recording, and push option 5. "If you want to speak to a human... or something like that I'm greeted by the automatic and immature sounding voice of a student worker. I tell her my concern.

She tells me they'll send a "maintenance engineer" to fix it. I'm grateful for that politically correct term now. I'd hate to think that the responsibility of flying our nation's flags would be relegated to mere janitors. I thanked her.

A half an hour later, I trot outside, take one look, and call the Rec again. I press 5. I get the same girl. I call her 5 now. I tell 5 that I'm grateful that the "maintenance engineers" have corrected the flagpole immediately out front, within easy walking distance from the building, but there's a flag out in the softball field still flying full mast.

"You mean the one on the other side of Grand Avenue?," asks 5.

I guess, from her perspective, this side is the other side of Grand Avenue.

"Yes," I said.

"I'm not sure that's our responsibility," she said.

I wondered if there was a hidden message I had not stated. Something along the lines of, "Why are you making it your responsibility, when you don't have to?" 5 assured me the matter would be looked into and the flag flew at full mast over the softball field all day.

Homosexuality not normal, human

I read your series on Gay awareness week, and I find some of the positions stated to be contradictory. If homosexuality is truly an "alternative lifestyle", then the persons participating in that lifestyle choose to do so, and they can just as well choose not to do so.

Yet I have read of people who had no choice as to their sexual preference, and how some struggled so hard to go against their true psychological makeup in order to be straight before giving up.

It sound to me like these people feel like they have no alternative to homosexuality. If indeed sexual preference is part of a person's genetic makeup, then so are any number of psychological predispositions, yet no one tries to define them as being acceptable ways of living.

I also read the statement that "the most powerful weapon we have against the religious right and homophobia is coming out".

I see in that statement the same type of prejudice and discrimination that these people claim is directed at them by "the religious right". Indeed, most Christians would state unequivocally that homosexuality is wrong, for that is clearly stated in both the Old and New Testament.

But to group the "religious right" and homophobia together is like grouping homosexuality and AIDS together.

A person with AIDS doesn't necessarily have to be homosexual (and vice-versa), and neither does a Christian or a Muslim have to be homophobic. In fact, I believe that truly Christian behavior would express love for all people, including homosexuals, but express anger at the behavior of the homosexual.

Gay rights activists state that what they are after is equality.

In fact, it often sounds like the things said during the civil rights movement during the 60's. But I see a big difference between gay rights and civil rights. African Americans were discriminated against because of their skin color.

They were forced to attend separate schools, use separate bathrooms, and other such forms of discrimination. When a person decides to openly state their homosexuality, they do this by choice, and the discrimination that occurs is a result of that choice.

A homosexual has a choice as to whether he or she will participate in homosexual acts, just as many people choose to be celibate.

It sounds to me like the "true homosexual agenda" is to justify their lifestyle as being normal, which cannot be true. Whether or not sexual preference is genetic, the act of sex is a choice, and human bodies were designed to match male to female.

I personally would treat the homosexual in the same manner as I treat all people—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you".

But I cannot define their sexual behavior as normal, because if homosexuality were normal, why did God create male and female?

The "True Homosexual Agenda" could never answer that.

— Douglas Flummer, civil servant

Last week, on the way to Du Quoin High School, one of the Red Cross's equipment trucks broke down, leaving the organization without roughly 100 units of blood that organizers had hoped to collect. Also, the drive that took place at Marion High School last week failed to produce the expected donations.

Red Cross organizers, who hope to make up for the shortfalls, increased their goal at SIUC from 500 to 600 pints of blood yesterday.

OFTEN, WHEN THE SUBJECT OF DONATING blood is brought up, many people become unnerved and start to search frantically for excuses as visions of gargantuan needles and searing pain fill their minds. The truth is, there are very few good reasons for not giving blood.

Needles. Many people are afraid of the pain of needles. Actually, the only thing you feel is a small prick and once the needle is inserted, you really do not feel anything at all. For the squeamish, the Red Cross has devised the buddy system in which someone is by your side throughout virtually the whole process.

"I just gave blood a few months ago." Check the calendar. After only 56 days your body is ready to give blood again.

Many people are afraid they may contract a lethal disease by giving blood. This is impossible. A new needle is used for each donor and the area from which the blood will be drawn is thoroughly sterilized.

Probably the most serious concern of many people, particularly on a college campus, is that they may receive a phone call from the Red Cross one day telling them their blood tested positive for HIV. The fact is, on average, only six units of blood out of 260,000 test HIV positive per year, about two percent. That figure covers an 80 county region that includes St. Louis and other large metropolitan areas.

THERE ARE VERY FEW REASONS FOR NOT getting out and giving blood. It could be your own life you save.

The blood drive will continue today from noon until 8 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center. Papa John's pizza, sandwiches, and other food, as well as Fazoli's coupons will be handed out to donors.

Really, it is no big deal.

Half mast: Only half responsible

Coming out of Grinnel cafeteria, I noticed the flag at the Rec Center was flying at full mast. The President of the United States had issued a half mast order in honor of the Americans who recently died in service, and the guys at the Rec, evidently, hadn't caught on yet. No problem, I thought. I'll just give them a call.

I call up the Rec, listen to a long recording, and push option 5, "If you want to speak to a human..." or something like that. I'm greeted by the automatic and immature sounding voice of a student worker. I tell her my concern.

She tells me they'll send a "maintenance engineer" to fix it. I'm grateful for that politically correct term now. I'd hate to think that the responsibility of flying our nation's flags would be relegated to mere janitors. I thanked her.

A half an hour later, I trot outside, take one look, and call the Rec again. I press 5. I get the same girl. I call her 5 now. I tell 5 that I'm grateful that the "maintenance engineers" have corrected the flagpole immediately out front, within easy walking distance from the building, but there's a flag out in the softball field still flying full mast.

"You mean the one on the other side of Grand Avenue?," asks 5.

I guess, from her perspective, this side is the other side of Grand Avenue.

"Yes," I said.

"I'm not sure that's our responsibility," she said.

I wondered if there was a hidden message I had statement. Something along the lines of, "Why are you making it your responsibility, when you don't have to?" 5 assured me the matter would be looked into and the flag flew at full mast over the softball field all day.

Homosexuality not normal, human

I read your series on Gay awareness week, and I find some of the positions stated to be contradictory. If homosexuality is truly an "alternative lifestyle", then the persons participating in that lifestyle choose to do so, and they can just as well choose not to do so.

Yet I have read of people who had no choice as to their sexual preference, and how some struggled so hard to go against their true psychological makeup in order to be straight before giving up.

It sound to me like these people feel like they have no alternative to homosexuality. If indeed sexual preference is part of a person's genetic makeup, then so are any number of psychological predispositions, yet no one tries to define them as being acceptable ways of living.

I also read the statement that "the most powerful weapon we have against the religious right and homophobia is coming out".

I see in that statement the same type of prejudice and discrimination that these people claim is directed at them by "the religious right". Indeed, most Christians would state unequivocally that homosexuality is wrong, for that is clearly stated in both the Old and New Testament.

But to group the "religious right" and homophobia together is like grouping homosexuality and AIDS together.

A person with AIDS doesn't necessarily have to be homosexual (and vice-versa), and neither does a Christian or a Muslim have to be homophobic. In fact, I believe that truly Christian behavior would express love for all people, including homosexuals, but express anger at the behavior of the homosexual.

Gay rights activists state that what they are after is equality.

In fact, it often sounds like the things said during the civil rights movement during the 60's. But I see a big difference between gay rights and civil rights. African Americans were discriminated against because of their skin color.

They were forced to attend separate schools, use separate bathrooms, and other such forms of discrimination. When a person decides to openly state their homosexuality, they do this by choice, and the discrimination that occurs is a result of that choice.

A homosexual has a choice as to whether he or she will participate in homosexual acts, just as many people choose to be celibate.

It sounds to me like the "true homosexual agenda" is to justify their lifestyle as being normal, which cannot be true. Whether or not sexual preference is genetic, the act of sex is a choice, and human bodies were designed to match male to female.

I personally would treat the homosexual in the same manner as I treat all people—"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you".

But I cannot define their sexual behavior as normal, because if homosexuality were normal, why did God create male and female?

The "True Homosexual Agenda" could never answer that.

The $125 ticket price coincides with the 125th anniversary, McCombs said.

Crystal Girtman, a senior in psychology from Carbondale, said although the invitation was open to students, the high ticket price was out of many students' range.

"The high price of tickets, the fact that it is a black-tie and gown affair, not to mention that it isn't even being held in Carbondale, makes me think they're not gearing it toward students," Girtman said. "What's the celebration without the students? The students are the reason the school's been here for 125 years."

The $125 also includes entertainment, such as music by Orchestra 33, raffle prizes, a 15-projector, multi-media presentation titled, "Ambition," and other events aimed at bringing back college memories.

Raffle prizes are a seven-day, seven-night cruise for two on Horizon Cruise Ship, a two-day, three-night Las Vegas getaway at the Luxor Hotel-Casino and a weekend stay at LaMeridien Hotel in downtown Chicago.

The gala will be held from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the main hall of the museum with an Egyptian exhibit walk-through pyramid and Egyptian artifacts open to revelers to enjoy that coincides with the event's theme, Baily said.

country and the world.

"I'm not partisan — I do not care who wins," he said. "I do not know the political leanings of the candidates, I had to say (to the group), may the better candidate win — the candidate (who) will do good for them and for us."

Changes in South Africa's government will affect the United States because historically the two countries have been linked economically and politically, Omosegbon said.

"Particularly the history of Africa and South Africa is inextricably linked with America," he said. "Mainstream America was an active participant in the African process in the sense of supporting or refusing to do anything about apartheid."

Omosegbon said elections also are important to the United States because 30 million U.S. citizens have African ancestors.

Thompson said the fight for equality in South Africa magnifies freedom struggles in the United States.

"For black Americans, the South African struggle reminds us of the uncompleted task (of securing equality) in our own native land, the United States," he said.

"Our hopes and dreams are enhanced by the South African freedom struggle as we look towards the future and a mere just economic, political and social system at home and abroad."

It has taken 342 years to achieve a level of equality among races in South Africa is a lack of understanding — many white citizens do not realize apartheid creates inequality, Omosegbon said.

Money also is a factor, because people who gain from apartheid are reluctant to give up personal benefits for the sake of equality, while those who suffer under it lack resources to change it, he said, Omosegbon said.

"The vested interests who are able (to benefit from apartheid) were able to sustain and defend this cruelty," he said. "Beyond, it has collaborated in other parts of the world."

The elections are an important step toward equality in South Africa, but they are not the only change needed, Omosegbon said.

"I think the most profound change that I would like to see is that everybody is able to vote, and that has happened," he said. "(But) it's not going to take one day to rectify all the problems."

Although it will be difficult to make the transition from apartheid to democracy, Omosegbon said he is optimistic about South Africa's future.

"This (election) is what I have been waiting for," he said. "I have no doubt (South Africans) will not disappoint humanity. They cannot afford to disappoint humanity."

did not toss the catch back in disgust.

Shull Monday borrowed a copied set of the minutes from a Daily Egyptian reporter so he could write bills to fund organizations.

Heather Peet, office manager for USG, said she thinks the minutes were stolen from a file cabinet in the student government office.

She had no comment on why the minutes would be stolen or who might have stolen them.

The Black Caucus, a new organization that promotes African-American ideals in student government, was approved Wednesday as an official registered student organization, and this bred more controversy among senators.

Senator Larry Jackson, a member of the Black Caucus, returned $50 of the organization's initial funding allocations to the finance committee.

Jackson said the caucus gave up part of its funding so other organizations could receive more allocations.

Shull said the Black Caucus should not even receive funding from USG because it was not an official registered student organization when it applied for funding.

"This is just ridiculous that this organization thinks they can give back money when they should not have received any to begin with," Shull said.

Organizations displeased with their initial funding allocations that were announced last week could have appealed for more funding before the senate.

Organizations last Monday could have also appealed for more funding before the finance committee.

Eight organizations Wednesday appealed to the USG senate for more funding and all received an increase in funding.

Band returns to Carbondale roots for performance at Beach Bumz

By Matthew Lamacki
Entertainment Reporter

If having a wide variety of sounds is what makes a band successful, then the Blue Meanies have got it made. The group combine punk, funk, hardcore, jazz, ska, and a horn section all into one that is known as angry with controversial political stances.

The band, which has its roots in Carbondale with founding member Billy Spunke, a former SIU-C student, will perform Saturday at Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave.

The Blue Meanies are from Chicago but originally were formed in Carbondale. At one time the band had eight members, but now has seven.

Roland Davis, owner of Beach Bumz, said the group has not played in Carbondale in two years and the concert should be incredible.

"The last time they were here, the place was really jumping and it was a really wild show," he said.

"They have this energy about them that gets the crowd into it."

The group's concerts are known for being spontaneous and often outrageous.

Lead singer Spunke describes their music as being angry with a positive edge.

"We are definitely a political band in that our songs are about things that we don't like in the world today," he said. "We also try and propose solutions to problems with our music."

Spunke said the band's music can be classified as a sort of hard core ska. Ska music is similar to reggae in sound. The band currently has released two albums, "Pave the World" and "Peace Love Groove" and soon will go back into the studio to work on their third.

"Peace Love Groove" was recorded live at Hangar 9 in 1992 and "Pave the World" is a six-song E.P. released last fall.

Blue Meanies

Spunke said the band's new album hopefully will be released next August or September.

"We are currently negotiating with Razor Boy records for our next album," he said.

"All of the songs have been written and we are ready to record."

The Blue Meanies have performed with other energetic bands such as The Mighty Mighty Bosstones, The Poster Children, Royal Crescent Mob, The M... Duncan Imperials and Wild Kingdom.

Talent fails to 'Favor' film; shallow plot is predictable

By Heather Burrow
Entertainment Reporter

Movie Review

Despite obvious talent of actors involved, the poor plot of the movie "The Favor" was too much to act well without the help of a better script.

The movie is punctuated with dream sequences, which are mildly amusing if not downright stupid.

The opening scene involves one of the lead characters Kathy, played by Harley Jane Kozak, having a love scene with her old boyfriend from high school Tom, played by Ken Wahl.

This begins a theme that permeates the rest of the movie. This being Kathy searching desperately to find Tom and hoping to revive some sense of a love life.

Kathy is married to Peter, played by Bill Pullman, who is a somewhat conservative teacher.

She feels he is not paying enough attention to her and needs some excitement in her life.

Kathy's best friend Emily played by Elizabeth McGovern, has had a string of one night stands and currently is sleeping with Elliott, played by Brad Pitt, who is the typical younger man.

Emily is sent by Kathy to find Tom and sleep with him to see what could have been.

This starts a whirlwind of activity between all five people.

Emily sleeps with Tom to Kathy's jealous dismay.

Then Emily ends up pregnant by either Elliott, whom she has broken up with, or Tom, who was only a one-night stand.

If it sounds confusing, it is. The movie has a very convoluted plot, which comes to a climax when all end up at Tom's cabin in Denver.

Basically the movie tells the story of a disappointed housewife with two kids and her single friend who is trying to find true love.

The characters are typical and have very little depth.

Their shallowness is shown in a line Peter says to Kathy, "I want to rock you mama like your body ain't got no bones."

The story has been told over and over again. Even for a hopeless romantic like me, there is not enough substance there to make it worth seeing.

"The Favor" opens tonight at Fox East Gate Theatre in East Gate Shopping Center. The movie is rated R.

Blood drive needs more donors

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

Today is the last opportunity for students to give blood on campus during the American Red Cross Blood Drive.

Drives have been coordinated on campus so students can give each time, but coordinators say collections have not shown a good response.

Vivian Ugent, coordinator of the drive, said the Red Cross is in desperate need of all types of blood and urges donors to take the time to give. Especially needed are types A and O, Ugent said.

Bonnie Salvetti, director of emergency services at Memorial

See related

Hospital of Carbondale, said more blood is needed in the spring because of increased activity.

The main injuries blood is needed for in the emergency department include motor vehicle and motorcycle accidents, cliff falls and construction injuries.

Salvetti said most of the injuries blood is needed for involve organ trauma. She said on some rainy days, more blood is needed because of increased accidents on slick roads.

As of Wednesday, about 410 units were collected, much less than Ugent said she hoped to collect. She said the goal is 500 units, but much more is needed.

Ugent said the Red Cross hoped to make up for some deficits at drives held earlier this week at area high schools, but problems prevented large collections.

To be eligible for donation, people must be 16 years old or have a parental consent form and weigh at least 110 pounds.

Those who want more information can contact the Red Cross at 529-2151. The drive is from noon to 8 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center.

Best college band sought

By Angela Hyland
Special Assignment Reporter

Thousands of college bands perform beneath swirling disco lights at basement parties or watch cheap beer spill at their feet in local bars, but one group will play to millions of students on television this summer.

A search for the best college band in the country is underway and the winner will appear on NBC's "Late Night with Conan O'Brien."

Bands which have made their first television appearance on the show include The Afghan Whigs, Bad Religion, The Cranberries, Urge Overkill, Juliana Hatfield and Morphine.

An NBC spokesman said judges will look at creativity and performance, not the anticipated popularity of a song.

"That's what's so good about this," the spokesman said. "It's not the kind of contest where they're looking for marketable songs that are going to be on the Top 40."

Jim Pitt, talent coordinator for the show, said a television appearance could lead a band to record contracts and dedicated fans, but it is not a guaranteed outcome.

"They could just go back to school and continue playing (in local bars)," he said.

Carbondale may not be known as the music mecca of the Midwest, but Pitt said the winner could come from anywhere in the country.

"We're not looking for a ratings boost in a particular area," he said.

Pitt said the show already has carved a niche in late-night programming by targeting young people with a preference for alternative music, and a contest seemed like a logical way to find new bands this crowd would enjoy.

Although the show debuted Sept. 13 last year, promoters have dubbed the contest "Conan O'Brien's 9th Annual College Band Search."

The first eight contests are reputed to have taken place in the basement of O'Brien's parents' home, a spokesman said.

Bands have until May 31 to submit a five minute or less video.

Official rules may be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Conan O'Brien's 9th Annual College Band Search Rules, P.O. Box 1616, Bensenville, IL 60106-8616.

Interest rates up due to reaction against inflation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The 1990-91 recession, increased unemployment, idled a noticeable share of the nation's factory production capacity and left managers of many service businesses wondering where their customers had gone.

The economic downturn also had halted an acceleration of the nation's core inflation rate — which excludes volatile food and energy price changes — that began in 1988. Before turning down again, the core inflation rate rose from less than 4 percent to 5.5 percent.

Now concern about inflation is mounting again, although core inflation has shown no sign of turning upward. Most other price measures are equally benign at this point.

Nevertheless, the Federal Reserve has raised short-term interest rates three times in the last three months to keep the economy from overheating.

Vedder says Cobain's life 'pressured'

By Robert Hilburn
Los Angeles Times

It's eight days after the suicide of Kurt Cobain was discovered and Eddie Vedder's voice still trembles as he tries to put into words his confusion and sadness.

"When I first found out, I was in a hotel room in Washington, D.C., and I just tore the place to shreds," says the brooding lead singer of Pearl Jam and the artist whose impact on a new generation of rock fans has been most often compared to Cobain's.

"Then I just kind of sat in the rubble, which somehow felt right ... (it felt) like my world at the moment."

Vedder and Cobain were at the forefront of a new generation of American singer-songwriters whose songs chiefly reflect the alienation and anger of a generation of young people, aged 15 to 25, who feel they have been shortchanged by the American Dream.

Cobain's music was more acclaimed, but Vedder's was more popular.

Pearl Jam's "Vs." album has outsold Nirvana's "In Utero" by nearly 4 million copies since they were released last fall.

On the phone the following week from New York, where the band was to appear on "Saturday Night Live," Vedder apologized on the remark and the pressures he and Cobain both faced.

"People think you are this grand person who has all their (expletive) together because you are able to put your feelings into some songs," he says softly.

"They write letters and come to the shows and even to the house, hoping we can fix everything for them. But we can't ... because we don't have all our (expletive) together either. What they don't understand is that you can't save somebody from drowning if you're treading water yourself."

Both Cobain and Vedder grew up largely on their own — unable to relate to the kids at high school and constantly struggling to find self-worth in troubled home environments. Their link was finding identity and hope in rock 'n' roll.

When they became famous in the early '90s as the two most celebrated figures of the suddenly hot Seattle scene that redefined contemporary rock 'n' roll, they worried about what it meant.

Israeli singer hopes to find American dream

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Even the trees pick up her vibe, drizzling blossoms as she bops on by. Bold, opinionated and headachingly cheerful, Noa hikes across town, backpack swinging, petals surfing on her dark, wavy hair, telling stories that begin: "It's totally fascinating ..."

They aren't always, but so what. "I have a lot of chutzpah," says Noa, 24, beaming a gap-toothed smile. She is Israel's top female vocalist — a young Joni Mitchell — and is trying to make the difficult break into the U.S. market. In New York, the Israeli star once drew only 10 people for a concert.

"A record could sell a billion in India and Americans are like, 'What's that?' If they hear me, I have confidence that I can enchant people."

She is five feet tall and weighs only a handful of kilos. But unlike many American celebrities she is neither fragile, prickly nor self-loathing.

"I can make people happy," Noa states matter of factly. As in the nation that anointed her its pop hero, self-effacement is rare. She is a Yemenite Israeli who grew up in New York City—where, mistaken for a Hispanic girl, she would hear guys on Broadway cry out, "Que bonita!" while blond classmates would needle, "Why do you have dark skin?"

"I'm a fusion, a fruit cocktail,"

Noa says, speaking in caffeinated New York chatter, her silver Yemenite earrings shimmering.

Her real name is Achinoam Nini. She recently decided to simplify it after a lifetime battling AT&T operators and a botched introduction by Dick Cavett at a New York concert: "He blurted out some connotation like 'Godzilla.'"

Her American debut album, "Noa," released by Geffen and produced by jazz great Pat Metheny, hovers at No. 1 in Israel.

Smokers discriminated against; employers, friends express hate

By Barbara T. Roessner
The Hartford Courant

Hooray for the smoke-free McDonald's, for indoctrinating our kids about the dangers of smoking, and for taking the tobacco industry to task for using nicotine as the ultimate marketing hook, that is, methodically addicting its customers.

But cursed be those who would use cigarettes as a reason to hate.

What is it that propels one group of people to find some means—any means—of ostracizing another group? What is it about human nature that propels us to subdivide into the anointed and the scorned, the good and the evil?

I don't believe in original sin, but perhaps there does exist original insecurity, original ego or original need to prove oneself by disproving someone else.

There does seem to be a basic drive to vilify, to demonize, to elevate oneself by putting another down.

It is no longer acceptable, and in many cases no longer legal, to openly employ race, gender or creed—the usual suspects—in this process.

It is, however, to use smoke, particularly if you would never use race, gender or creed.

This is largely an educated prejudice, a white-collar prejudice, a forty-something-and-under, save-the-Earth, Birkenstock prejudice.

It is, in short, the PC prejudice.

Most anti-smoking bigots will tell you theirs is a health issue, plain and simple. Cigarettes kill, they quite accurately point out. Cigarettes cause untold human suffering and untold cost to society—in pain and also in medical bills and insurance premiums.

And, they rightfully add, the evidence is mounting that second-hand smoke kills, too.

Smokers aren't just destroying their own lungs; they're destroying ours.

On occasion, though, these legitimate health concerns are laid aside.

Emboldened by the current political climate, featuring a drive to have the federal government regulate nicotine as a drug (is alcohol next?), a subtler motivation is revealed.

A friend relates how the administrator of a large Midwestern hospital recently boasted that he would never hire a doctor who smokes. My friend, who is not a smoker, protested.

Would you refuse to hire a doctor who eats butter, she asked. How about a couch potato? An obese doctor? An anorexic doctor? A doctor with a fondness for Scotch?

What if the smoking docs are the best in their fields? What has their cigarette habit got to do with their ability as surgeons, as oncologists, as pediatricians?

When pressed, the administrator did not invoke the prospect of higher insurance costs or absenteeism.

He insisted—startled that my friend, an otherwise politically correct type, would disagree—that smokers are simply unethical, unworthy people.

Similarly, a man I know recently informed me that he would never date a woman who smokes. Not because he is revolted by the odor of cigarettes. Not because he would fret about her health and well-being. Not because her diminished lung capacity might limit her mountain-biking capabilities.

But because he considers anyone who smokes to be inherently weak, morally flawed, a generally inferior member of the species.

Besides being outrageously arrogant, there's something hauntingly high-school about these attitudes. There's a certain spitefulness, a certain meanness of spirit, that makes me hark back to the days when the cool people puffed away in the lavatories, while the nerds huddled in the science lab. Is this some kind of revenge?

I am not a smoker, most of the time. They say it's nigh impossible to do, but for nearly a decade now I've smoked on Saturday nights and beach vacations.

I frequently go for several weeks, sometimes months, without a cig. I do not visit the smoking lounge at work. I do not smoke in my car or, with rare exception, in my home.

I ask people not to smoke around my children. I've got a foot in both worlds.

I generally applaud the now ubiquitous no-smoking symbol, the red circle slashed in two and superimposed over a burning butt.

What bothers me is that too often the underlying image—the thing that's being stamped out and stomped upon—isn't a cigarette but a human face.

Air show highlights aerobatic stunts

Students plan weekend

By Matthew Lamackl
Special Assignment Reporter

The "Spirit of Southern Illinois" air show will get underway this weekend with highlights including stuntman Johnny Kazian, two air force planes and other performances from at least eight professional pilots flying in monoplanes, bi-planes and replicas of famous planes.

The ninth annual student run air show will take place from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Southern Illinois Airport in Carbondale.

Gates open at 10 a.m. when spectators can take a tour of the hangar, take $15 helicopter rides and enjoy concessions.

One of the main attractions will be former Hollywood stuntman Johnny Kazian, who has doubled for actors such as Robert Redford, Lee Majors and David Hasselhoff. His TV credits include "The Dukes of Hazzard," "The Fall Guy" and "That's Incredible."

Kazian has performed at air shows for 39 years, and will perform wing-walking and motorcycle acts throughout the show.

Kazian said the key to being successful in the stunt business is to always be prepared and never take anything for granted.

"Complacency can kill you," he said. "You can never be safe enough and that's why checking and double checking equipment is done every time without question."

The wing-walking stunt that Kazian will perform will include him doing a headstand on a plane in flight without the use of a harness.

Phil Van Reeth, a senior in accounting, files a World War II BT-3 airplane around the SIUC campus area. Reeth had a scheduled flight with BT, which was a training airplane for World War II pilots.

Duo brings pianist act to Shryock

Brothers travel world to play classical music

By Kyle J. Chapman
Special Assignment Reporter

Anthony and Joseph Paratore will bring their duo pianist act to SIUC for the first time in 10 years Saturday. The program, which will be in Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m., will display the duo's repertoire of classical pieces.

Born in Boston, the Paratore brothers have traveled all over the world, including the world's most know orchestra halls in Europe and the United States.

The Paratore brothers were the subjects of a television special called "Two Brothers, Four Hands..." The latest of their many recordings is Classics to Broadway.

Nancy Gillespie, publications editor at University Electronic Communication, said the Paratore brothers are a veteran duo people will enjoy.

"The Paratore brothers have been in this business for years. They're a very interesting duo who plays on both two pianos and four-hand on one piano," she said. "They play everything from very classical music to a pop style of music."

John Corker, director of the Student Center, said the music of the Paratore brothers will appeal to many.

"The... pianists play a wide range of music from classical to modern. I think their show will appeal to everyone because of their wide range," Corker said. "The program will be in Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at check cashing in the Student Center.

University Programming Coordinator Joanne Yantis said SIUC students should take the opportunity to hear the diverse music of the Paratore brothers.

"I think this is a good opportunity for our students to hear these artists who are world renown," Yantis said.

This performance will be the year's last concert for Southern Illinois Concerts season and admission is $3.

A buffet dinner will be before the concert in the Old Main Room of the Student Center that costs $7.95. A dinner and concert package is available for $10.

'Tartuffe' opens at SIUC theater

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

If the devil made him do it, at least he did it in style.

Not many people have the courage to drop their pants in public, but in the name of art, Alex Dittmer shows some mighty devilish drawers in the SIUC theater department's performance of "Tartuffe."

Set in 17th century France, it is the story Orgon, his family, and the religious hypocrite Tartuffe.

Tartuffe manages to convince Orgon to take him in, and in the process he alienates Orgon from his family. Tartuffe makes advances on Orgon's wife, daughter, and money, all the while proclaiming his piety.

When it becomes obvious (in a scene involving the most entertaining use of a lascivious grin in recent history) Tartuffe is a swindler, Orgon kicks him out the door.

Especially outstanding are Dawn Wall, in the role of the wise-cracking maid Dorine, and Rebecca Slaughter as

Performance dedicated to college's anniversary

By Heather Burrow
Special Assignment Reporter

Bodies swaying gracefully with liquid movements and rhythms or dancing excitedly to a funky jazz beat. Soaring and moving in unison or solely, dancers of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater will amaze and thrill the audience.

The theater will perform at 8 p.m. tonight in Shryock Auditorium.

There is an annual performance each spring. This year's concert is in dedication to the College of Education's 50 year anniversary.

Creative director Donna Wilson is choreographing two of her own pieces. Along with this, Wilson gives guidance and advice to dancers.

The dance group primarily consists of SIUC students and a guest choreographer, GERALYN BROSSART, an SIUC alumna. Brossart is currently working on her dance degree at SIUC and choreographed "Hands Holding the Void" about search and discovery which will be performed by the group.

The guest group is the Southern Illinois Dance Coalition with their work "Healing Rhythms." The choreographer is Patty Ganyard and describes the piece as a mirror of medicine chants in the form of movement.

Dancer Satoko Mitobe and other SIUC Japanese students also will perform a traditional Japanese fan dance titled "Cherry Blossom," about the celebration of the coming of spring.

Many of the original pieces are created by theater members. Some include "Cry" by Wilson, about an individual who is trapped in a situation with no hope.

Another is "Escape," performed by theater president Lisa McKinley, a large dance number celebrating individual freedom.

To show diversity is a piece by Leigh Wolf, a graduate student in psychology, called "Primitive Fire," a dance based on African rhythms and movements.

The group started in 1975 as a student organization. Before this, it was an unregistered student performing group at SIUC.

STUNTS, from page 11

The plane is called a Stearman and it will be piloted by Dave Dacy. Kazian said he trusts Dacy completely.

"Dave is special and we've been working together for a long time now and I am very confident in him," he said.

Kazian also will perform motorcycle stunts, where he will be jumping through a ring of fire.

Kazian said he enjoys doing these shows because he loves entertaining people.

"This is the only job I know of where you can look into a crowd of 20,000 people and know that you gave them a thrill for one brief moment," he said.

Brian Ninness, student director of the show, said expectations are high after the Rotor and Wing Association, a student run organization, has spent all year planning for the show.

Charles L. Rodriguez, assistant professor in aviation technology and faculty adviser to the Rotor and Wing Association, said students worked countless hours organizing this year's show.

"The students work so hard all year long that they really should be commended for it," he said. "Their hard work and effort make this show possible and they also gain valuable skills in the process."

Brian Ninness said the show should be a lot of fun for everyone.

"We have a lot of exciting things planned, and hopefully it will be a great show," he said.

Pilot Phil Van Reeth, a senior in accounting, will have a World War II BT-13 airplane at the show for spectators to see up close and in flight.

The Van Reeth family, which has owned the plane for more than 30 years, bought the plane in pieces and then completely rebuilt it.

Van Reeth said the BT-13 was a training airplane for World War II pilots.

"The BT stands for basis trainer and it was used to prepare pilots for flying the much larger bombers," he said. "There are probably only 15 other planes like this one in the world today."

Van Reeth's father is a retired TWA pilot and his two brothers are professional pilots.

Van Reeth said before every flight there must be a pre-flight check to insure that the plane is safe for flight.

"Before every flight you do what is called a walkaround where you check the plane for anything unsafe like a loose piece or a brake-fluid leak," he said.

There are many surprises planned for the airshow, but the Rotor and Wing Association is not revealing them. The best bet is to just look to the sky this weekend.

The group, organized in 1984, has 12 members and began producing airshows in 1986.

The airport is located about three miles west of Carbondale, and admission for the event will be $5 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens and $1 for children 12 and under.

U.S. team hopefuls fear soccer boot

By Steve Berkowitz
The Washington Post

Obviously, they have been representing their country as members of the U.S. national soccer team. In reality, they have been representing only themselves in one of the world's longest and most unusual tryouts.

It has already lasted more than three years, and at least another month will pass before the coaching staff determines the 22-player roster for the World Cup finals — the quadrennial 24-team world championships that will be held in the United States for the first time, beginning June 17.

Twenty-two U.S. World Cup team hopefuls are based at the team's training center in Mission Viejo, Calif. Many have been there since the facility opened in January 1993. Some have been under contract with the U.S. Soccer Federation even longer, as the U.S. national team has been the only major outdoor professional soccer team in this country for about a decade.

But perhaps only 10 of the 22 Mission Viejo-based players are assured of spots on the World Cup roster.

Thirteen of whom are considered to be in the national team pool — have been playing for professional clubs outside the United States.

If healthy, six of the foreign-based players are assured of spots on the roster and five are likely to be among the United States' 11 starters when it opens first-round play June 18 against Switzerland at the Pontiac Silverdome near Detroit.

You don't need a calculator to figure out what this adds up to.

Elmire, the nearly ravaged wife of Orgon and object of Tartuffe's affection, and Dittmer, who in a particularly lecherous role gives new meaning to the word scoundrel.

The costumes and scenery lend an elegant feeling to the entire production, and draw the audience in to give subtle glances into the personalities of the characters.

The only weak point in the production is the speed with which the lines are delivered. The script has a sing-song quality, and sometimes the audience is a step or two behind the actors.

But overall, the play is a treat — and the sight of a hypocritical preacher caught with his pants down is a sight that transcends time.

"Tartuffe" is appearing at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow and May 6 and 7, and at 2 p.m. May 1 in McLeod Theater.

"There is no dance major at SIUC, so this theater is the only chance for intermediate to advance dancers to come and show their talent," Wilson said.

There are about 20 dancers in the company, who tryout at the beginning of each semester. Once accepted, dancers have class and dance practice once a week.

"We don't tour a lot because the dancers are not in this as a major," Wilson said.

The tickets will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for children 12 and under. All seats are general admission and there are 21 remaining at the Student Center Ticket Office.

Playoffs true test for Hawks

By Shaun Powell
Newsday

The Atlanta Hawks won 57 games, claimed the Eastern Conference home court, have a favorable bracket in the playoffs ... and can't sell 20,000 tickets for their opening round. That's 20,000 ... for Games 1 and 2 at the Omni. All doubts about the Hawks nationally are doubled in Atlanta.

The home fans have stomached far too many playoff failures for too many years. In the past, the Hawks seemed to enter the playoffs with an expiration date: Use Before May.

So the local citizens are sitting with arms crossed and wallets closed until these Hawks prove themselves incapable of heartbreak.

Actually, that's unfair. The Hawks, '93-94 version, are a little different. They have a coach and they have defense. They don't have an individual anymore (I'm talking about you-know-who), they have a team. They don't deserve to pay for past sins.

But they still have to prove themselves worthy of the regular-season record and back up the words they speak with confidence.

"I think our time has come," center Jon Koncak said. "Everyone around here believes that. We see ourselves going to the finish."

Forward Kevin Willis agrees. "I don't see why not."

he said. Is destiny with them? On appearance, it looks that way. They're the best home-court team in the East. They won't see the Chicago Bulls or New York Knicks until the conference finals.

And by then, maybe the Hawks will have built up enough confidence and momentum, and maybe the Bulls-Knicks winner will be too battle-scarred to last very long.

Most likely, the Hawks will have a much tougher road than they think. The Knicks have enough muscle and the Bulls enough championship experience to make rather quick work of Atlanta.

And the big question that greeted the Danny Manning-Dominique Wilkins trade still remains: Can Manning fill this team's go-to void?

"People say we have a void," Coach Lenny Wilkens said recently, "because we don't do a lot of isolating. But I think Danny's capable, and there's Kevin in the low post. Who's going to stop him one-on-one?"

"I don't buy that. Yeah, we don't have a Michael Jordan. But how many do?"

The Bulls don't anymore. They'll have to develop a new identity without him. This will be worth watching. For all they've done this season—a considerable amount, considering the circumstances—the Bulls really haven't had the chance to accomplish anything truly significant in the post-Jordan era.

hoping to have from the team. We'll see some excellent competition and I believe that we'll put together a good, solid meet.

Besides outstanding collegiate track performance competing, Drake will also host some of the nation's most recognizable stars.

Carl Lewis is scheduled to compete in the 100 meter dash, this after coming off a world record performance in the 4 x 200 meter relay team at the Mount Sac Relays. Two-time Olympian Gwen Torrence, one of the top women's sprinters in the world, is also scheduled to compete.

Representing SIUC at Drake will be LaTonya Morrison (400 m hurdles), Lesley Batson, Morrison, Elissa Pierce, and Katrina Daniels (4 x 200 relay), Kelly Elliott, Daniels, Jennie Horner, Leann Reed (distance medley relay), Morrison, Sheila Hollins, Pierce and Daniels (4 x 400 relay), Cathy Kershaw (10,000 meter run), Karen Gardner Debbie Daehler (5000 meter run), Batson, Morrison, Daniels and Reed (sprint medley relay), Hallema Ivory, Elliott, Jennifer Kostely and Reed (4 x 800 relay), Horner (1500 meter run), April Cokley (shot put), and Morrison, Hollins, Pierce and Daniels (4 x 400 relay).

"Everyone who is competing in individual events this weekend has been knocking on the door to qualify for the National Collegiate Athletic Association Championships this season," DeNoon said. "We're having excellent performances so we're looking to go one step further and see if we can't get the best from them and get some NCAA qualifiers."

The rest of the Salukis will compete in the Murray State Twilight on Saturday, April 30th. The scored meet will feature approximately 15 schools from around the Midwest.

Last year, SIUC finished first of 13. Thrower Stefany Saracco and high jumper Rhonda Brown were winners. Saracco captured the discus event with a throw of 138-3.5 inches, while Brown took the high jump event with a leap of 5-6. Saracco's toss in the discus was good enough to rank her No. 6 all-time for SIUC.

now ranks third in NCAA history for being hit in a season and is eight stingers shy of the national record of 32 set by Fairleigh Dickinson's Steve Dembowski in 1979.

Henderson said the Saluki pitching is what has kept the team above water lately, but some hits have to start finding the holes in order to gain some momentum.

"In four of the five games we have played in the past week, we have held the opposition to five runs or less yet have won only one of those games," he said. "We need to continue getting the excellent pitching, and hope some of the balls we are hitting start to fall in."

SIUC is now headed for a weekend series in Normal with Illinois State, a team that has lost three straight and holds an 8-7 record at home. The Redbird's have added some experienced coaching knowledge to its staff this season in ex-major league superstar Carlton Fisk, though, who's son Casey is a catcher on the squad.

But with MVC Tournament time just around the corner, Henderson said each conference game holds high stakes.

"This weekend is certainly a key series for us and we hold our fate in our own hands," he said. "We have MVC weekends left with the three teams we are battling for a tournament berth, so you can't ask for more than that."

Game one of Saturday's doubleheader with the Birds is scheduled for noon, while Sunday's contest is slated to get underway at 1 p.m.

SOFTBALL, from page 20

1.83 ERA) have done the deed.

The Shockers were swept by the Salukis in conference action last season. Tania Meier shocked the Shockers on the mound last season when she tossed a two-hit shutout. The Salukis own a 16-8 lifetime edge.

Brechtelsbauer said Wichita State has most of the qualities that you see in a winning ballclub.

"Wichita is always strong and they don't beat themselves," she said. "They have some explosive hitters, always have some strong pitching, and they know how to play the tight game."

The Salukis will end their trip with a twinbill on Saturday in the Cornhusker State against Creighton.

The Lady Jays, the preseason top conference pick, have struggled and have not shown many signs of improvement. They have dropped seven of their last 10 and have not performed well on offense or defense.

Offensively, the Lady Jays are hitting only .264 for seventh in the Valley and their pitching has not been much better as their staff's ERA is 4.12.

Creighton will turn to Tracy Rice (.333, 13 RBI's), and Shelly Esser (.330, 19 runs, 10 stolen bases) offensively, while they will send Stephanie Byrge (7-8) and Lauren Kennedy (6-8) to the mound.

Brechtelsbauer said she does not know if Creighton's coaching change or if any possible injuries have affected the MVC's last place team.

"Creighton has kind of been a surprise," she said. "They were selected by the media and coaches to finish one and I think they're a much better team than their record shows."

The Salukis have a four-game MVC winning streak and will look to their bats to awaken from their brief slumber in Missouri on Tuesday to continue the streak.

The Salukis are currently hitting

.319 and have six players hitting .300 or better.

On the mound, Meier has been unbeatable of late (12-4, 1.47 ERA), and Jamie Schutteck (8-5, 2.62 ERA) has also had some good outings.

Brechtelsbauer said first-place SW Missouri State is going to be tough to catch, but the Salukis are going to come out this weekend and give their best effort to sweep the doubleheaders and get to the top of the conference.

Salukis prepare for MVC title

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

It is getting close to crunch time in the Missouri Valley Conference softball season, and SIUC will battle four times this weekend in pursuit of the title.

SIUC (25-11, 6-4) will seek entertainment in the Midwest with stops in Kansas and Nebraska to visit conference foes Wichita State and Creighton.

SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said this weekend's games are key and the Salukis need to continue hitting to be successful.

"I'm very pleased with the team batting average but I'd like to see us get a few more clutch hits,"

Brechtelsbauer said. "We've had the opportunity to win some games throughout the season but have not always been able to come through."

The Salukis travel to Wichita, Kansas today to take on Wichita State in a doubleheader. Wichita State is 7-7 and in sixth place in the Valley. The Shockers have been held to a .255 batting average but have a potent pitching staff which boasts a 1.78 ERA.

Bobbie Paul guides the Shockers offensively. She is hitting .348 with 46 hits, and 19 RBI's. On the mound, Jodie Musser (9-6, 1.49 ERA) and Beth Wilson (9-9,

Aces hand Dawgs one more loss, 5-2

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

The Evansville Aces were anything but wild on Wednesday as the SIUC baseball team, dropped its second game in two days to U of E, 5-2.

Despite another strong performance from Saluki starter Dan Davis (2-8) on the mound, SIUC was unable to manufacture enough offense for a win. Evansville did receive some timely pitching of its own from freshman Kyle Ritter, who threw all nine innings, yielding eight hits and one walk while striking out three.

"It was a great college game with two pitchers that were really on," Saluki interim head coach Ken Henderson said. "We hit some balls hard, but couldn't get the key hit."

The Aces jumped out to an early 1-0 lead in the bottom of the second, but the Salukis struck back to tie in its very next at-bat after an RBI single.

Evansville got back on top with two more runs in the fourth to push ahead 3-1, however the Saluki bats churned out a run of its own in the top of the fifth to keep the game tight heading into the ladder innings.

Both teams were blanked in the sixth frame, but Evansville pulled away with two runs in the bottom of the seventh and held SIUC scoreless down the stretch to secure the win.

Chris Sauritch went two-for-three in the game for the Salukis and was hit by a pitch for the 24th time this season. The SIUC senior

Netters post 6-15 record, prepare for MVC champs

First-year head coach Jeremy Rowan will try to guide his young Saluki netters to a cinderella finish this weekend at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in Tulsa, Ok.

SIUC was picked seventh in a preseason poll and lived down to that prediction by going 6-15 overall, and 2-4 in conference play.

Andre Gransson will handle the No. 1 singles position for the Salukis while Jay Merchant and Bojan Vuckovic will fill out the No. 2 and No. 3 spots, respectively. Rounding out the roster are: No. 4 Juan Garcia, No. 5 Jean-Sebastian LaFond and No. 6 Kei Kamasawa.

The Dawgs finished third last year and last won the event in 1990. Two-time defending champion Drake was picked to three-peat this year.

The SIUC men's golf team saw its progress toward a tournament title cut short Thursday, as rain and low temperatures forced golfers to play just 18 of 36 scheduled holes at the Drake Relays Golf Invitational.

The Saluki linksters are in first placing going into today's final 18 holes with a team score 310.

The following top five teams include Illinois State (315) in second place, Nebraska-Westlyan (370) in third place, Drake University (322) in fourth and Bradley (324) in fifth.

The Salukis posted three individuals on the top 10 individual scoring list, with Quinn McClure and Sam Scheibel tied for fourth with a score of 76. Jason Stillely is close behind his fellow Salukis, as his score of 77 was good enough for eighth place.

John Dalling and Steve Irish closed out the Saluki scoring with an 81 and 82, respectively.

SIUC head coach Gene Shaneyfelt said he expects his team to finish strong.

"All we need to do is hang in there and hope for some breaks in the weather," he said.

The Salukis are preparing for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships which take place May 9th and 10th.

Shaneyfelt said his team should be right there come title time.

"It'll be us, Wichita State and Tulsa going for the title," he said.

SIUC student dives on TNT

Southern Illinois University diver Rob Siracusano, who qualified for the U.S. National Team last week, can be seen this Saturday on Turner Broadcasting's TNT Network.

The station will air portions of last week's Phillips 66 Diving Nationals from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The taped highlights of the event, held in Minneapolis, Minn., will feature portions of the diving activities.

"It should be exciting to watch," SIUC diving coach Dave Ardrey said. "Rob boosted himself to a new level, as four of the five guys ahead of him were previous Olympians."

Being a member of the national team will allow Siracusano to gain international experience as he continues on his quest for a spot on the 1996 Olympic team.
