Faculty: Students lack writing skills

RECOMMEND:

Council suggests tests for all incoming freshmen, transfers.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

More writing-intensive courses could be added to the SIUC curriculum because of faculty concerns that some students are not prepared for college-level writing and lack necessary writing skills, the core curriculum director says.

Ann-Janine Morey, the core curriculum director, has spoken with faculty who say their students' writing could be better.

"However, we could be doing a better job finding out exactly where students may be having difficulty," Morey said. "Faculty know a lot about student writing, and they are concerned about it."

On April 9, the University core curriculum executive council released a report titled "Writing Literacy at SIU: Recommendations for the Future University Core Curriculum Executive Council."

It recommends that John S. Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, support seven methods of improving SIUC students' writing:

- The SIUC administration should allocate more money to the curriculum to help colleges share writing information, to offer faculty workshops on teaching writing, to reduce class sizes and to offer incentives to teach writing.

- SIUC should have a writing test for all incoming freshmen and transfer students.

- Students who fail the placement test should be required to take basic writing skills courses.

- English 101, 102 and 120 should be changed to improve students' writing.

- The Writing Center, administered by the English Department, should be expanded and given more money.

- SIUC should adopt a writing and grammar manual that all freshmen and transfer students would be required to own.

- SIUC should establish a campus-wide student essay contest with prizes for the winners.

Morey said many faculty members are concerned that students do not take writing seriously and are unable to communicate effectively.

"Faculty express frustration when students say, 'This is not an English class, so why do you grade me on my writing?'" Morey, a professor in English, said. "The flip

Student earns internship in France

PLANS: Winner will attend workshops, work at American Pavilion.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An SIUC student may be hobnobbing with Bruce Willis and Robert De Niro next month in France.

As the first SIUC student to get an internship at the International Film Festival at Cannes, France, Takae Shimizu wants to use her experience to improve the Big Muddy Film Festival in Carbondale.

"Not many people know what independent filmmaking is," she said. "Mainstream films are so much out in front, especially in Carbondale. There is no art theater."

Shimizu, a second-year graduate student in cinema from Japan, received an internship from a national competition for the 1997 International Film Festival at Cannes, France, from the American Pavilion/Kodak Worldwide Student Program.

Not many people know what independent filmmaking is.

TAKAE SHIMIZU
GRADUATE STUDENT FROM JAPAN

The festival is celebrating 50 years of showing independent films. Celebrities including De Niro, Willis, Michael Jackson, Tim Burton and Andie MacDowell also will be present at the festival May 7-18.

As an intern, Shimizu will work a few six-hour days at the American Pavilion and meet some of the people at the festival. She also will attend workshops and view some of the screenings at the festival. There also will be opportunities for day trips to the area around Cannes.

Shimizu grew up in Kumamoto, Japan, a city about the same size as St. Louis. She graduated from Daiichi High School in 1991 and attended Carroll College in Montana after graduation.

"I think more cows existed in Montana than human beings," she said.

But the isolation is something she wanted because of the bad things she saw in people in her high school in Japan.

"The teachers didn't care about people who didn't get good grades," she said.

Panel discusses hatred

MEMORIES: Member says life experiences taught her a powerful lesson.

MARC CHASE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Theresa Zitter is not filled with hatred, even though she has watched family and friends, many of whom were executed, treated like sub-human life forms at the hands of the Nazis.

Zitter, 66, a Jewish woman from Hungary, survived the holocaust during World War II. Memories of being beaten by Nazis when refusing to defecate on the Bible and being forced into crowded box cars en route to concentration camps still linger in her head.

But she says she does not have the same hatred toward the Nazis that they showed her people.

Zitter was part of a three-person panel that spoke Friday to about 138 SIUC School of Social Work seniors. Each year, students in the graduating class are allowed to choose a topic for an end-of-the-semester panel discussion. The students chose hate crimes as this year's topic.

As she spoke to the crowd, Zitter told a story she once heard about two Jewish friends who survived the holocaust. These two men were prisoners at Auschwitz, a Nazi concentration camp where an estimated 1.6-million people were killed.

She said these men moved to South America after their liberation from the camp at the end of World War II.

One day, while one of the men was out walking, he saw his friend working as a servant for a former member of the Gestapo who had beaten his friend when they were in Auschwitz.

"So the man asked his friend, 'Why are you doing this after all of the horrible things he did to you?'" Zitter said. "The other man replied, 'Because he promised this time he would treat me better.'"

Board votes to keep Kelly

GUILTY: Committee finds Kelly in violation of election laws, but says he did no harm.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A grievance committee on Friday approved the winner of Wednesday's student trustee election by voting to void the two grievances filed against him.

Pat Kelly, who won the election, faced two grievances filed by Anthony Buie, who finished second in the student trustee election. Buie alleged that Kelly walked through the Student Center Wednesday wearing a Revolution Party T-shirt.

Buie also alleged that a member of the Revolution Party, which endorsed Kelly, distributed fliers too close to the Student Center.

The Student Center was one of four polling places in Wednesday's student elections.

Both grievances cited Section 4-102:c of the student trustee election laws, which states, "No advertising or solicitation of voters shall occur within a distance of 50 feet from the poll from all directions."

Joseph Carberry, the student trustee election commission's grievance committee chairman, said the committee ruled that Kelly violated the advertising/solicitation rule, but that his action did not influence voting.

"We decided that he was guilty of wearing the T-shirt, but the gravity of the transgression was insignificant," Carberry said. "The five or 10 minutes he was in the Student Center was not enough solicitation to swing votes."

Carberry said Buie could not identify the Revolution Party member mentioned in the second grievance and did not have a copy of the flier as evidence.

Kelly won the student trustee elections with 625 votes. Buie garnered 573, and Monty Peerbhai had 280 votes.

No grievances were filed after the Undergraduate Student Government elections, which also were Wednesday.

Kelly was surprised Buie filed the grievances.

"Anthony, Monty and I had a strange camaraderie that developed during the campaign," he said.

The grievance committee voted 2-1 against disqualifying Kelly in both grievances. Buie said he would not appeal the decisions.

SIUC's student trustee acts as a student advocate to the SIU Board of Trustees. The student trustee has an advisory, non-binding vote on board decisions.

Kelly will replace current student trustee Eric Bottom on July 1.

Police investigate link between sex offenses

A 21-year-old SIUC student reported that a man exposed himself to her at 2 p.m. Sunday on the Campus Lake path. The man is described as a college-aged white man with brown hair. He was wearing gray sweat pants, a green sweat shirt and a baseball hat.

University Police still are investigating the possibility that Sunday's incident may be connected to a report from Thursday when two people reportedly saw a man masturbating near the Campus Lake path. If anyone has any information about either incident call the University Police at 453-2381.

Panel's rule widens access to nominee's FBI report

A rule adopted last week by the Senate intelligence committee will lengthen the time the FBI investigates nominees to be director of central intelligence (DCI) and "could radically change the nature of (that person's) confirmation hearings," according to Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., vice chairman of the panel.

Under the rule, the White House would allow committee members to have access to a nominee's full FBI background investigation report, including agents' interviews, which normally are available only to committee chairmen and ranking minority members.

Study criticizes TV news, racial attitudes

It's hardly a revelation that people watching local television news see an awful lot of crime, much of it involving suspects who are black.

But a new study casts a surprisingly harsh light on television and racial attitudes. Even when news reports made no reference to a suspect, 42 percent of the survey participants later recalled having seen a perpetrator. And in two-thirds of these cases, they recalled that the nonexistent perpetrator was black.

What's more, researchers used digital technology to change the mug shots of some accused criminals, "painting" black suspects into white ones. Just over half of those who saw the white perpetrator accurately recalled his race, but when the criminal was black, two-thirds of those accurately remembered his race.

Local election boosts Communist conservatives

Italy's small but powerful Communist Refoundation Party made advances in local elections on Sunday, consolidating its position of influence over the government of Prime Minister Romano Prodi.

Conservative opposition parties ran strongly in Milan and Turin, the largest of more than 1,000 cities and towns that elected mayors and councils. Results showed their candidates leading in the two northern cities, at the expense of the separatist Northern League, but not by big enough margins to avoid runoffs on May 11 against candidates from the center-left coalition.

Adults and children of the Interfaith Center gathered at Evergreen Park Saturday for the "Saturday Music in the Park" festival. The event provided fun and games to raise money for the center and was a chance to spend quality time with family and friends.

Adoption plan to restore woods

SAPLINGS: Students get up early Saturday to help plant trees in Thompson Woods.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Getting a group of bleary-eyed students together at 8 a.m. on a weekend to do battle with creeping vines and choking weeds is not an easy task.

But that is exactly what Philip Robertson, a professor of plant biology and head of the Thompson Woods Management Committee, had in mind for about 50 students Saturday who participated in the Adopt-a-Patch program that puts volunteers to work planting trees and clearing ground in Thompson Woods.

"We had about $3,500 worth of trees to plant," Robertson said as he snipped a vine away from a young tree.

"We have a serious problem with exotics (plants) in this forest. We brought in Japanese honeysuckle many years ago for ground cover and erosion control. It turned out the native plants were not adapted to competing with them. The exotics have really taken over."

Thompson Woods is the 16 acres of woods that begins behind Morris Library. The woods has some trees believed to be 150 years old.

As part of an effort to return Thompson Woods to its natural state, volunteers planted oak saplings, some as tall as 14 feet, on Saturday. Varieties of oak included white oak, red oak, black oak and cherry-bark Oak.

Roger McCoy, a graduate student in botany from Elgin, previously has been to Thompson Woods to help plant seedlings and cut back exotic growth.

"The Illinois Native Plant Society has had this plot since early this spring," McCoy said. "We've been out here a few times. If I'd had my own shovel, I would have been out here earlier to get these trees in the ground."

Robertson said planting new oak trees is imperative to restoring Thompson Woods to an upland-oak forest state, in which mature oak trees do not allow ground cover to grow by keeping light from reaching the forest floor.

"The University had a lot of trees

Education does not always create open-minded people

I recently saw a nice idea on the sign at University Baptist Church. The sign stated, "Education fills empty minds with open ones."

Obviously the writer did not receive his education at SIU. Some of the more educated people on this campus have the most closed minds.

I am referring to the Law School community. Here we have a group of people who are learning to defend citizens from encroachments on their liberties, yet they are the first to encroach on someone's rights because they do not agree with that person's opinions.

As my Law School career comes to an end, I think it would be fitting for me to thank this school for an education that I will not soon forget.

This school taught me that education does not equal maturity. (Graduate students still procrastinate and then blame work schedules and such.)

The school taught me that no matter how illogical something is, it is OK as long as the administration stands behind it.

It taught me that there are people and places that time has forgotten.

It taught me that no matter how hard you try, you cannot change an opinion once you have a reputation for something.

Most of all, the Law School community has taught me to be prejudiced, to close my mind and to hate.

Regardless of what comes to mind when I mention the word "prejudice," I am talking about a group of people who exclude someone based solely on something that they do not understand and will not take the opportunity to discover.

I need not write colorfully about my experience, since the black-and-white truth is scary enough.

Following my first year in Law School, I was involved in an automobile accident.

Typically, it would have resulted in fatalities.

Not mine. Death would have been easier than what I went through.

I endured a week in a coma, eight surgeries, 1 1/2 months in the hospital and more than $125,000 in medical care.

I received a head injury that returned me to a childlike state where I was taught to chew food and swallow again.

Surgeons operated on me, but were quick to tell my parents that they had never operated on anyone with so many critical injuries who lived for more than a week.

When I lived a week, doctors encouraged my father to put me in a nursing home because I would not be capable of dressing myself, let alone much else.

I worked terribly hard and eventually returned to my pursuit of a legal education.

I came back to a school that would not talk to me. Why?

Who knows? I was prejudiced by people who did not have to know me to decide that their time was more important than mine. They acted offended when I did not agree.

People who have never taken the opportunity to talk with me began warning others that they did not want to talk to me.

Everyone at the Law School claims to have an open mind.

Most do not. Open minds would accept varying opinions. They would not feel the need to label one opinion wrong. One may disagree, but everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion.

Open minds would not segregate into cliques. The Law School is full of cliques that divide the community, rather than strengthen it.

This community is full of segregation.

People have offered the idea that for someone to befriend me would require them to face the possibility of his/her own death. They would need to accept the fact that they will die; they are not invincible.

It may require them to do something that they have not done before: learn.

It would be wonderful if education did fill empty minds with open ones. Maybe then we could change the image of lawyers.

After three years here, I am truly saddened by the prospect of my classmates embarking on the legal field in hopes of changing the negative image of lawyers.

How can we change something by continuing the same technique? Stupidity fosters stupidity.

There are a few people who give me hope.

A few students act like members of society, not elitists. Very few. I learned how to be a person who could change the image of lawyers, but not here in this school.

Everyone at the Law School claims to have an open mind. Most do not. Open minds would accept varying opinions. They would not feel the need to label one opinion wrong.”

Faculty members need to vote today for SIUC union officials

IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT UNIONIZED faculty members vote today for their representatives.

A group of union members will help decide the future of the SIUC chapter of the Illinois Education Association/National Education Association and the power of the faculty's influence with the administration. By voting today, members will elect those executive board members who will guide the association and develop its policies.

BESIDES VOTING FOR THE EXECUTIVE board — president, vice president and secretary/treasurer — union members also will decide who represents their colleges and interests, and those representatives will talk with the negotiating team members and executive board members about their colleges' concerns. Members also will vote for representatives at-large to serve on the executive board and represent all faculty.

The outcome of this election will decide how contract negotiations and other matters are handled. The gravity of this election is so great that it would be foolish not to vote.

SINCE THE BIRTH OF IT LAST NOVEMBER, the SIUC chapter of the IEA/NEA has tried to organize a strong voice for the faculty. Voting today will help strengthen the organization and its voice.

More than 740 faculty members are eligible to join the union. Of those, only half currently are union members and are eligible to vote today. The representatives will be elected by a small group of members who believe in what the union is doing to improve the working conditions and quality of education at this University.

WHERE ARE THE OTHER ELIGIBLE members who did not join the union or who did not decide to vote today? Their views will go unheard because of their failure to join or vote.

Whether faculty support it or not, the union is here. And instead of fighting it by not joining it, the faculty has everything to gain from it. The members that are elected today will determine how strong the union grows, evolves and deals with the administration. It's better to be united than to be divided, and electing qualified and responsible representatives will ensure that the union is heard not only on this campus but in Springfield.

THE REALITY OF THIS SITUATION IS clear: Contract negotiations started last month, and the union members are the only representatives for the SIUC faculty at those meetings. It is time to put some of the power back on this campus and at the negotiating table.

It would be nice for the faculty to know that they have a qualified team negotiating their interests and paychecks. Vote today.

Writer's claims offend Muslims, ignore truth

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter published in the April 18 Daily Egyptian regarding Islamic views.

I think Mr. Lionel Bender does not have good knowledge about the subject.

In Islam, all the people are considered equal, so how can slavery be an option in the religion?

The message conveyed by the Mohammed (P.B.O.H.) is simple and crystal clear.

He said slavery is not allowed in Islam because everybody is created by God, and no one is superior to another.

It is important to understand at this point that Islam is not based on cultures, so when we analyze a culture of a Islamic nation we should not think that it as a part of Islam because cultures are separate from religion.

So if a foreigner (Bender) was honored where locals' lives were unpleasant, then I would say it was only cultural factors by which Mr. Bender came to the conclusion that in Islamic societies people are having unpleasant lives.

Mr. Bender claimed in the article that Pakistan and other Muslim countries are under civil war.

This claim is far from the truth, and I am sure he does not have anything to support his claims.

Claims like this can offend Muslims because these claims are not real; they are just opinions of someone.

Whatever was said in the letter was to let people think that Islam is a religion of extremists.

Qu'ran teaches humility, acceptance of both sexes

Dear Editor:

As a Muslim, I cannot put more emphasis on the need to read the Holy Qu'ran to understand Islam. Islam means "submission to the will of Allah (God)."

Islam is a manifestation of Judaism and Christianity.

The moral and codes of conduct can be found in the Qu'ran.

The message that Islam brings is the same message that was given to Adam, Abraham, Moses, Jesus and the prophet Muhammad, which is to believe in one God.

The teachings of the Qu'ran firmly ensure women's status — both legal and social — and their dignity as individuals, and it cemented their right to wealth and property, to inheritance and education.

The media forgets to tell their audiences how the Qu'ran teaches Muslims that men and women are all equal under Islam.

What is being teleprompted by the media is a confusion between the principles of Islam and a society's culture.

For example, if I were to assume that all European Americans were evil, because of the Ku Klux Klan, I would be stereotyping.

The next big misconception of Islam is its association with slavery.

Islam never suggested to anyone to hold another person in captivity beyond his or her own free will.

People used religion to justify their evil intentions. "... Righteous is he who believes in Allah ... and gives his wealth despite of his love for it, to kinsfolk, to orphans and the needy, and to the wayfarer, to those who ask, and to set slaves free" (Qu'ran, Chap. 2v., 177).

Slavery was not abolished because of moral reasons, but because it no longer suited economic needs and interests.

Islam and true Christianity never enslaved or killed anyone — human beings did.

Western secularism established the rise of Islamic militants.

Muslim populations of the Middle East were captured by the insidious invasions of the region by Western cultures and values.

In Algeria, Libya and Tunisia, the government was seen as attempting to separate religion from politics and as harassing and persecuting Islamic organizations and their leaders.

Also in Lebanon, the president was Christian, and the Muslim leaders came from traditional bourgeois and notable families who were Westernized and secular.

It is under those conditions that militant groups formed throughout the southern Mediterranean area.

Some people cannot see the rational justification in militant bombings, but the same rational thinking enabled American armed forces to bomb Iraq over a barrel of oil.

Author naive about religion

Dear Editor:

M. Lionel Bender attacked Islam and Muslims once again (April 18) by expressing great aggressive feelings toward this peaceful religion.

I found myself forced to clarify a number of points.

It is important to realize that Islam means "peace, security and submission to the one God."

No one can deny the great role of Islam in the human civilizations.

Islam is the only belief that satisfies the physical and spiritual needs of the human nature.

The Holy Quran, the final revelation from God to all people, had declared and preserved the rights of humans, including women, 1,400 years before the West did so.

Mr. Bender and many others view Islam as a political force.

It is true that Islam, as a complete way of life, has a political role.

It provides guidelines for a just society, proper human conduct and an equitable social economic and political system.

However, comparing Islam to other racist movements such as Zionism or Nazism is a huge misunderstanding.

If violence is what Islam calls for as claimed, then how come

It is important to realize that Islam means 'peace, security and submission to the one God.' No one can deny the great role of Islam in the human civilizations.

that fifth of the world's population are Muslims?

People have found in Islam, with its uncompromising pure monotheism, what brings peace, forgiveness and justice to their societies.

According to American newspapers, the spread of Islam has increased by 235 percent — five times more than any other belief.

In a few years, more than one third of France's population will be Muslims.

Mr. Bender should expect 20 million Muslims in the United States by the year 2000.

Linking Islamic teachings to terrorism has always been claimed by the American media.

People need to realize that Saddam Hussein in Iraq, Khomainsi in Iran and Khaddafi in Libya are not real Muslims, but are devils who use religion to win power.

Where was the American media when 300,000 Muslims were massacred by the Serbs when Muslims in Burma, Keshmire or Palestine were facing the same destiny?

Why is the word "terrorism" always used for describing Muslims only?

I think that people like Mr. Bender should cure themselves from the Islamicphobia.

STORY BY ANNETTE BARR

CURTIS K. BIAS/Daily Egyptian

NICE DAY FOR A SWIM: Some contestants returned to the shore the hard way after their boat proved to not be seaworthy.

PAT MAHON/Daily Egyptian

ROW YOUR BOAT ASHORE: The start of the races are congested with boaters, but as the race goes on, the boats become separated in the fight for the lead.

24th Annual Great Cardboard Boat Regatta leaves mark on class, SIUC

Millling around Campus Lake on 6-inch platform shoes, Jim Olsick and his three crew members hardly look nautical in their black wigs and face paint.

The sounds of KISS echo through the trees on Saturday as the crew members resembling the hard-rock group proudly stand in front of a 3-foot cardboard rendition of Gene Simmons' head.

"We were going to build a giant Gene Simmons head, but it was too much (time)," Olsick, a sophomore in art and design from Willowbrook, said. "We sacrificed some of the boat for the costumes."

Olsick and the other members of KISS were rewarded for the more than 40 hours spent making their costumes when they received the Best Dressed Team award Saturday afternoon at the 24th

Annual Great Cardboard Boat Regatta at Campus Lake.

For students in art and design 100B, "Three Dimensional Design," the regatta has been a final exam since 1974.

Richard Archer, assistant professor in art and design, came up the final as a way to leave his mark on the class. However, the race is open to anyone.

Saturday was filled with racing heats featuring cardboard creations, including a yellow Corvette built to scale, with blinking head and tail lights, and a flailing red lobster that was not water-friendly.

Of the 154 boats entered in the 24th annual regatta, each was divided into one of three classes.

Class I boats are made entirely of cardboard and are moved through the lake by canoe paddles, oars or kayak paddles. Class II boats are powered by other means, such as paddle wheels, propellers or sails. Class III boats are made on site from a kit with "secret contents."

Carla Flowers, a senior in aviation management from Paducah, Ky., came to the race Saturday knowing she and her friends would make a Class III boat because they did not have time to make a boat earlier.

"We're doing this because it's the last year," Flowers said as she applied duct tape to Noah's Ark. "It's a tradition at SIU."

Boats varied from biblical themes to themes of beer and cults.

Katrina Niebrugge, a junior in art history from Teutopolis, navigated her white cardboard boat resembling a bed as she and her crew members dressed in black chanted, "Hale-Bopp, Hale-Bopp," symbolizing the Heaven's Gate cult from which 39 members recently committed suicide.

"It's a big media event," said Jackie Olsommer, a junior in radio-television from Palatine and crew member of Heaven's Gate. "We weren't interested in speed. We wanted media coverage and originality."

Whether boats sunk or swam, the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta was an experience some were grateful to have.

"Everybody has to do this at least once," said Love Honea, an undecided freshman from Marion and "Heaven's Gate" crew member. "It isn't college life if you haven't done the Cardboard Boat Regatta."

PANEL

Zitter said this story and her own life experiences teach a valuable lesson.

"I don't hate, because hate hurts me." Another panelist, Preston Ewing Jr., spoke of a more recent example of racism. Ewing wrote the book, "Let My People Go," which is a collection of photos and writings that document the Civil Rights Movement in Cairo from 1967 to 1973.

Ewing helped organize the movement in Cairo, attempting to get equal rights for blacks. He said hate crimes and racism are problems that affect people of all colors.

"Results from hatred are shared by both blacks and whites," Ewing said. "Many whites are held hostage by ideas of racism."

Ewing spoke of the recent victory of Tiger Woods, a 21-year-old golfer, at the Master's tournament, the premiere event of professional golf. Woods is African American and Asian American.

Ewing said derogatory comments made by another professional golfer, Fuzzy Zoeller, about Woods and other African Americans show racism still is "alive and well" in the 1990s.

"At a period like we live in now, it's easy to be lulled into believing that racism is not here," Ewing said. "This is a good, strong reminder."

Kathy Marks, who began studying right-wing extremist groups while working on her master's degree in administration of justice at SIUC, also participated in the discussion.

Marks, who wrote the book, "Faces of Right Wing Extremism," said most members of white extremist groups were taught from birth to hate non-whites.

She said many of these groups twist the meaning of the Bible to justify their beliefs and actions.

"In the Christian Identity Religion (an all-white religious movement), they raise whole groups of people to believe this (hated toward non-whites) is the will of God," Marks said. "It makes people much more dangerous if they think they are acting out the will of God."

Despite some people's hatred toward blacks, Jews and other groups, Zitter said it is important to cling to love and hope.

As the discussion concluded, Zitter, who designs clothing, brought a volunteer from the audience to the front of the room. Using a large piece of fabric, Zitter wrapped the fabric around the volunteer and demonstrated how she used a table cloth, while she was a concentration camp prisoner, to make a dress.

"You see, creativity cannot be stopped," Zitter said. "Not even in a concentration camp."

cut down last year because of hazards," Robertson said. "This left a lot of holes in the canopy, which allowed the exotics to grow more."

The problem is that this is an isolated forest and can't be expected to function normally.

"We're in restoration management here. What we're doing today is investing in the woods for 20 to 30 years from now."

Jen Horbe, a senior in plant biology from Lake Zurich, had more basic reasons for helping to plant trees.

"I knew this was a good cause, and I wanted to — OK, I got extra credit," Horbe said while she set a sapling in the ground.

"When I was here last time, we just cleared Japanese Honeysuckle and marked the spots where these trees would go."

Spaces for new saplings were chosen on a basis of space and light availability.

Robertson said the Adopt-a-Patch program has been taken up by 13 organizations and individuals so far.

Organizations include the SIUC Forestry Club, the Forestry Honorary Society, the Society of American Foresters, the Student Environmental Center, Student Wildlife Society, Plant Biology Department students, the Outdoor Research Club, Illinois Native Plant Society and the Department of Microbiology Faculty and Students.

WRITING

side of this is faculty want to say, 'Well, I'm not an English teacher, so why should I have to do this?'"

Jackson agrees with all the recommendations except for the campus-wide essay contest.

"He said it would not improve student writing because only good writers would enter."

"I support the majority of the recommendations," he said. "We can't afford to do all that they wanted, but I will allocate all the resources I can muster to this program."

Morey said the recommendations could be implemented in one or two years.

Morey said a Writing Across the Curriculum program may be the answer to the faculty concerns.

The program encourages faculty of every discipline to incorporate writing into their classes.

"At some point you need to be worried if, as a graduating senior, you don't know the difference between plurals and possessives," she said.

"We all know the more you practice, the better you get."

Sheila Brutten, director of the University assessment program that evaluates student learning, said the College of Liberal Arts already has a Writing Across the Curriculum program.

There must be one writing intensive course in each of the majors within the college.

David Blakesley, a professor in English and incoming director of writing studies, said SIUC's admission standards often let in students who require greater writing assistance.

He said that a writing intensive course can help, but more is needed.

"A writing-intensive course doesn't hurt, but it implies that there doesn't need to be writing in other courses as well," he said.

"It's a step in the right direction, but it doesn't go far enough."

Blakesley recommended in a memo to Jackson that class size in the core curriculum writing courses be limited to 20 students so faculty can effectively instruct them.

Fred Isberner, College of Applied Science and Arts associate dean, said that by fall 1998, he will implement a plan to require every student in the college to take an extensive writing course in their major before graduating.

Faculty express frustrations when students say, This is not an English class, so why do you grade me on my writing? The flip side of this is faculty want to say, 'Well, I'm not an English teacher, so why should I have to do this?'
ANN-JANINE MOREY
CORE CURRICULUM DIRECTOR

"The biggest fear accompanying this is faculty think they will be burdened because they have to read every assignment word for word," he said. "But instructors can develop writing assignments that do not require intense grading but improve a student's writing."

Brutten said that without support from faculty and administration, writing will not be improved at SIUC.

"You start with those (faculty) who buy into it, and as they see that it works, they'll join in."

SIUC recruitment wings in prospective aviators

CAREER DAY:

Students, alumni fly 88 Chicago high school students to Carbondale.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When Charles Davis first came to SIUC on a Boeing 737 in 1994 with other high school students for Aviation Career Day, he had no idea he later would recruit for the event three years later.

"The Black Aviation Association really made me feel welcome, and that is why I attended SIUC," he said. "Now, we have changed the name to Minority Aviation Council, and now I am the president and helping the kids the same way this (Registered Student Organization) helped me."

Davis, a senior in aviation management from Chicago, said SIUC alumni and students help on Aviation Career Day to recruit African Americans and women into aviation fields because the aviation field is predominately made up of white males.

Davis said he will be the first student to attend and graduate from SIUC as a result of the Aviation Career Day. He will graduate in December.

United Airlines flew 88 Chicago high school students to the Southern Illinois Airport Saturday on a Boeing 737 for Aviation Career Day.

Career day has brought 12 students into the aviation program since its inception in 1994. The students are paired with minority aviation RSO leaders and alumni for tours of the campus.

The students were in Carbondale from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. touring SIUC's aviation facilities, the Student Center, Thompson Point and the Recreation Center.

This was the second year that Julie Savage, a senior from Cory-Glove High School in Chicago, attended the career day. She will start at SIUC in the fall to study aviation management and flight.

"I got (to sit in) the cockpit seat last year, and it inspired me for the rest of my life," she said. "I wanted to come to SIUC because this is the best place that will prepare me for my goal."

Savage said that she has wanted to fly since she was a child.

"My parents always tell me I was born to fly," she said. "Flying is wonderful because you get to see the world, and you love what you do."

Savage's father works for United Airlines as a mechanic at O'Hare International Airport.

"It was kind of bred into me about flying," she said. "I want the United (Airlines) internship here at SIUC. It is my No. 1 goal."

The University has had a long relationship with United Airlines in Chicago, and students can receive a bachelor's degree in aviation management through Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

Savage said the alumni at the career day also were a big help to her.

Mark Smith, lead aircraft mechanic for United Airlines and a 1994 graduate of SIUC, decided to participate in career day to help the students.

"The first year they did this I noticed there was only one mechanic aboard the plane," he said. "I have done it three years now. It is good to see kids excited about aviation."

Davis said the career day was fun because of all the students interested in aviation.

"There are so many job opportunities in aviation," he said. "It was very exciting to see a lot of inspiring pilots and mechanics."

Pat Mahon/Daily Egyptian

ON THE TARMAC: Chicago high school students arrive at the Southern Illinois Airport Saturday after being flown down for Aviation Career Day. Eighty-eight students participated in the event, which was sponsored by aviation alumni and students.

Los Angeles still struggling to heal five years after riots

OPEN WOUNDS:

Living standards have stagnated as community member grow apart.

WASHINGTON POST

LOS ANGELES—Five years after a violent riot tore apart the social fabric of this multicultural city, Los Angeles is struggling to heal its deep physical and emotional wounds.

A majority of the strip malls that were reduced to smoldering rubble have been rebuilt, many operated by Latino and Asian immigrants. Latinos, long described as the "sleeping giant" of Los Angeles, have emerged as a major political force. Tourism has rebounded, and trade is thriving with nations of the Pacific Rim.

But the long, slow struggle for economic recovery has been plagued by racial and ethnic conflicts among blacks, Latinos and Korean Americans. Many middle-class blacks have moved out of Los Angeles.

"We have a lot going for us in terms of economic development, but we need to come to terms with the cultural clash and different cultural identities," said Rep. Julian C. Dixon (D), an African American who has long represented a diverse Los Angeles district.

His assessment is widely shared. In interviews, community activists, business leaders, public officials and economists offer a mixed assessment of economic recovery and a generally bleak one of ethnic conflicts. Most of them agreed that the riots continue to cast a shadow over Los Angeles.

"People fear the environment of South Central as an investment site," said Fernando Oaxaca, a former Los Angeles businessman who owns a radio station in suburban Ontario. "It's a vague kind of reluctance that leads people to seek out communities that don't show black marks from the fires."

The Los Angeles Police Department, which was often called an occupying army in minority neighborhoods, has taken significant if incomplete strides toward community policing.

On the one hand there is a new attitude that what happened in 1992 should never happen again, that the orgy of destruction didn't get us anything and that we should work in a different way. But the other change is negative. ... Individuals have stopped talking to one another and retreated from collective action."

Veteran community activist Joe Hicks of the nonprofit Multi-Cultural Collaborative said that standards of living are stagnant in poor neighborhoods and that "the daily struggle for survival" will become grimmer as legal immigrants lose food stamps and welfare benefits because of federal legislation.

The nation's deadliest riot of this century erupted in South Central Los Angeles on April 29, 1992, after a suburban jury acquitted four white Los Angeles police officers of using excessive force in the videotaped beating of Rodney G. King. Fifty-four people died, more than 2,000 were injured, and 862 buildings burned to the ground.

"And the people who did get good grades looked down on those who didn't get good grades. There were a lot of nasty things going on there."

Shimizu was in an English program at Carroll College, but after a year decided to study aerospace engineering.

"In aerospace engineering, I was more concentrating on something unknown and rejecting what is around us," she said. "I was almost escaping what is happening by studying space."

The isolation of being in a new place and the sparse population of Montana made it easy to escape into the world of space. Back home, her parents were always fighting, and her peers were consumed with getting good grades. Shimizu had left them all behind.

It was not until a friend told her that other people can influence the way a person thinks did she discover the power of film.

"You go to the theater and watch films in the dark. Since there is a freedom within that space, people can escape from reality," she said.

"There is more possibility to find the truth of reality that was hidden in everyday life. Theater is a real important place for the audience to realize what they are all about."

She left the aerospace engineering program and became a theater major because Carroll College did not offer a program in film.

Shimizu graduated from Carroll College in 1995 and received a graduate assistantship SIUC in the Cinema Department.

After graduation, she wants to write and direct her own films. Her goal is to help her audience see the importance of life itself and not to take anything for granted.

"I want to let people realize the importance of the lives they have right now and of life itself," she said. "People don't realize human beings cannot live without depending on someone. Things on earth depend on each other."

At SIUC she has worked as a co-director for the Big Muddy Film Festival and was instrumental in bringing international films such as the Japanese film "Maborosi," a film that won awards at international film festivals in places such as Japan and Canada.

Robert Pickering, co-director of the festival, works with Shimizu in the Big Muddy Film Festival. Pickering said Shimizu was pleasant to work with — even at 4 a.m.

"If anything, I was the more irritable one. We had to keep going at time when things can fall apart," said Pickering, a second-year graduate student in cinema from Chico, Ca. "She made it easy. She is one of the most positive persons I have met here."

Shimizu is taking a brochure about the Big Muddy Film Festival with her to France to get recognition and feedback about it from organizers of the larger festival in Cannes.

But working in film is not the only form of creativity she enjoys. She has participated in the Dance Expresso at SIUC and has choreographed her own dance.

Shimizu wants to incorporate dance in films, and she wants to make a career in the United States.

Because of Shimizu's background in theater and dance, Susan Duhig, assistant professor in cinema, said Shimizu often comes up with unusual and innovative ideas in film.

"I think Takae has a lot of creative potential," She said. "She has a very unusual mind and makes unexpected connections."

a few hundred dollars to keep the center's maintenance up to date.

While setting up the food stand, Knodt said that providing food, music and games is a way to bring the people of the Interfaith Center, the community of Carbondale and SIUC together for the first time to have fun.

Bobbing his head to the sounds of a Carbondale-based band, Jackie Badger said providing entertainment for adults and children is something he has anticipated from the Interfaith Center for a long time.

"This is a fun event to build the community and bring people out to enjoy, relax and have a nice time," Badger, the Interfaith Center secretary, said.

Music bands Blue Plate Special; Billy, Roger and Becky and Out of Space were entertainment for the adults, while the children played water-balloon toss, the bean-bag game and Hula-Hoop throughout the day.

Some SIUC students stood at the craft table, admiring the crafts of Bamboo Flute, an international craft shop in the Interfaith Center. As they set up their own tables, students discovered that the event was a chance to sell crafts and designs of their own, which included colorful beaded necklaces and hand-painted silks.

Tricia Garofalo, a sophomore in university studies from Murphysboro, said that although she is not heavily involved in the Interfaith Center, it gives her the opportunity to show off her work.

Garofalo said the Interfaith Center is a full of good people, and she is thankful the benefit was put together.

"I've known people from the Interfaith Center, and they're good people," Garofalo said. "I think it's definitely a good idea for them to bring people together and hang out together like this."

Badger said he wants the Interfaith Center to continue providing events that bring the community together regardless of fund-raising purposes.

"The center serves a lot of purposes at once," Badger said. "Instead of only worrying about money, it's like coming together as a community."

You're smart. Have fun.
Take the money and run.

Missing the Internet Boat?

Egyptian Directory

from the Daily Egyptian

The Internet is about business. The Daily Egyptian web site gets about 100,000 hits a month and is growing rapidly. Property managers advertising in our online edition are having tremendous success. Proof that people are turning to the Internet for purchase information. Listing in the Egyptian Directory will help your business. Let the people know you are there. Sometimes before they even come to town.

Egyptian Directory is a searchable directory service that directs customers to your "real world" address, your telephone number, or your web address.

Egyptian Directory is like the printed Yellow Pages, but with a some notable advantages that add to your listing:

- ★ With a line ad, customers can search for your specific business offerings!
- ★ Product listings, menus, and delivery policies are listed and searched!
- ★ List special events including movies, bands, exhibits, shows, sermons, plays...
- ★ Purchase the account manager package and manage your own listing as often as you choose!

We made it real cheap—so it's a no-brainer!

If you already have a web site for your business, Egyptian Directory helps direct people to it. The Daily Egyptian web site already gets a great deal of traffic. Together, the DE and Egyptian Directory will pull traffic into your web site like never before. If you don't have a web site, the line description that Egyptian Directory offers may be all you need, and in any event will get your business on the Internet immediately.

Expanded web pages featuring items such as additional descriptions, graphics, logos, VR movies, as well as management accounts so YOU can manage the information directly. Check it out for yourself. Point your browser at www.dailyegyptian.com and click NEW.

Call 536-3311 to get listed TODAY, or miss the boat.

Saluki tennis squad takes eighth at MVC tournament

SINGLE VICTORY:
SIUC goes 1-3 in championship, coach blames players' injuries.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A rash of injuries and a lack of experience on the Saluki men's tennis team gave coach Brad Ifner a little consolation after SIUC finished eighth in the Missouri Valley Conference Championships Saturday.

The eighth-seeded Salukis finished their tournament with a 1-3 record after a 5-0 loss to seventh-seeded Creighton University in Evansville, Ind., Saturday.

SIUC ended the season with a 6-16 record and a 3-10 mark in conference play.

"The big thing for me was that everybody played hard in all of their matches," Ifner said. "All of the players gave everything they had, and that is all I can ask from them."

Ifner said injuries to two of the team's top players within the last month hurt the team's chances of being successful at the tournament.

"Randy de Guzman had a twisted ankle, and he wasn't 100 percent," Ifner said. "Juan Carlos England had bursitis in his knee, so neither one of them were 100 percent, and that hurts because they're your No. 2 and No. 3 players."

The Salukis opened the tournament with a 4-0 win over ninth-seeded Bradley University Friday. Freshman Kyle Henry, junior Brian Etzkin and freshman Brian Ingle picked up wins in single matches, while SIUC won two of the three dual matches.

However, the Salukis could not get another win in the tournament. SIUC lost to top-seeded Wichita State University 5-0 Friday, followed by a 4-0 loss to fifth-seeded Evansville University.

"If we would have beaten Evansville, we would have played Sunday," Ifner said. "That was my goal whenever we entered the tournament, but those were close matches."

Etzkin said a single win in the tournament did not meet the team's expectations.

"We pulled out a win, but we were disappointed," Etzkin said. "We got the first one, but we expected to do better."

The Salukis also faced unusual circumstances during the tournament. With the entire tournament scheduled to be played within three days, a time limit was set for each match, as the first team to reach four points would win the match and any individual matches would be suspended.

"What the results will show is that we lost matches by a big score," Ifner said. "But they stop the matches when you get to four points, so it can be a little deceiving. There were several matches that we were close in or maybe even winning, but they stopped them when it reached four points."

"Brian Etzkin was a perfect example. He beat Bradley's No. 5 player, but then the rest of his matches were suspended."

But Etzkin said the team knew about the rule heading into the tournament.

"During the regular season, it is kind of bothersome," Etzkin said. "But we knew that they were going to play that way during the tournament, so we were prepared for it."

Ifner said the team battled hard to overcome their injuries and inexperience.

"We entered the tournament as the No. 8 team and we finished eighth," Ifner said. "Considering everything that happened, we can't be too disappointed."

Bullets may face Bulls without center

SHORT-HANDED:
Washington could lose Muresan for game three of NBA playoffs.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — As if a 2-0 deficit to the defending NBA champion Chicago Bulls in their first-round Eastern Conference playoff series were not bad enough, the Bulls now must face the prospect of playing Game 3 of the best-of-five series without center Gheorghe Muresan.

Muresan aggravated an old hip flexor injury during the Bulls' 109-104 loss in Chicago on Sunday, did not practice Monday and is listed as questionable for Wednesday night's game at USAir Arena.

Muresan, who iced the injury and received electrical stimulation therapy during practice, speculated that perhaps the back injury he suffered in the last week of the regular season, which still bothers him, put a strain on his hip. He said he hurt it the first time he jumped during Sunday's game.

Muresan first strained his right hip flexor, a muscle used every time he takes a step, during the off-season. It kept him out of training camp, the pre-season and the first five games of the regular season. Muresan said that the pain of this injury is "not the same, but it's close."

Bullets Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said the team is prepared to play without Muresan, who scored one point in 13 minutes Sunday.

WNBA, ABL wage draft war

WANTED WOMEN: Female professional basketball leagues battle for top collegiate players.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Within the span of an hour Sunday, the bidding war between pro basketball's two women's leagues escalated. The focal point was USC's 6-foot-3 Tina Thompson, who, in a late-hour reversal, signed with the Women's National Basketball Association.

The American Basketball League countered Sunday with an announcement that it had signed Connecticut's 6-7 Kara Wolters and Georgia's 6-3 LaKeshia Frett.

Thompson said she hopes to be drafted Monday by the Los Angeles Lakers' WNBA team, the Sparks, who have the draft's third pick. She sat with Sparks Coach Linda Sharp and General Manager Rhonda Windham at Sunday's Laker game. Thompson's signing by the WNBA was a sudden and unexpected development. She was tendered a last-hour offer that beat a deal offered by the ABL.

Her agent said Saturday afternoon Thompson would sign with the ABL Monday, then said 90 minutes later that the signing was no longer definite.

The WNBA, beaten badly by the second-year ABL's string of recent signings of premier college seniors, apparently made an 11th-hour decision to draw a line over Thompson, one of college basketball's most dominating forwards the past two seasons.

With the Sparks, she would join former USC teammate Lisa Leslie and China's 6-9 Zheng Haixia to form the biggest front line in the women's game.

The ABL and Wolters, called by her UConn coach, Geno Auriemma, "the most dominating post player in the history of women's college basketball," will hold a Hartford, Conn., news conference Monday.

She will be drafted by the New England Blizzard, the ABL's runaway attendance leader last season at 5,003 paid per game.

No one was talking money Sunday, but the WNBA might have gone beyond a $150,000 package to land Thompson. That's said to be what the ABL will pay Stanford Naismith Award winner Kate Starbird next season.

The ABL wanted Thompson to play for its Long Beach expansion team, which has the first pick in its May 4 draft. The focus now shifts to Old Dominion's 6-5 Clarise Machanguana for Long Beach.

Thompson led the Pacific 10 in scoring last season at 22.5 points per game.

dual matches.

Auld said the match was one of the closest SIUC has played this spring.

"Basically, it was not a match we lost, but a match Indiana State won," Auld said. "There were close matches all the way through, and I would think the same thing if we had won it."

Saluki junior Sanem Berksoy said the loss motivated the team to finish the tournament strong.

"We were disappointed that we lost to Indiana State," Berksoy said. "But we didn't let that bother us for the rest of the tournament."

The Salukis came back to win each of their matches the rest of the weekend. SIUC beat Northern Iowa

5-1 and Creighton University 3-2 Saturday and sealed up fifth place with a win over the Bulldogs.

"We're fifth in the conference, but in my mind, we were the No. 1 team in desire," Auld said.

The Salukis also finished the tournament with several strong individual showings. Card, Berksoy and junior Helen Johnson all finished with undefeated records, but no Saluki was selected for the all-tournament team.

"I really thought Sanem and Helen had a good shot for the all-conference team," Auld said. "I've never been pleased with our all-conference selections because I know for a fact that a lot of coaches do not research like they should."

But Berksoy was not as confident that she should have been named one of the conference's top players.

with the NFL.

If given a choice, Gagliano prefers to remain with the Colts.

"I still have no idea exactly where I will end up. I'd really like to end up with the Colts, though," he said. "Everyone there is so professional and were very helpful. It's not like I don't have a shot in the world."

Gagliano's next step is to return to Lafayette July 5 for his second mini-camp, where he will be

"I can't say that I should have made the team because there are so many strong players in the conference," Berksoy said. "I thought I played really well and peaked at the right time."

The tournament was the end of the careers of seniors Patricia Zihler and Liz Gardner.

Card said the team will miss their leadership on and off the court.

"We're going to miss Liz (Gardner) and Patty (Zihler)," Card said. "But we're excited about next season, getting to see some new players and starting all over."

Although the team did not win the championship, Auld said the team can take pride in beating Drake.

"The main thing was they came off of a tough loss and they refused," Auld said. "If nothing else, they're satisfied with the win they pulled out against Drake."

joined by all the Colts' rookies. The team's veterans will join the team a short time later.

For now, Gagliano plans on perfecting his game.

"My holding is just fine," he said.

"Punting wise, I need to get my drop kick down and get more consistent. I know I've got to improve my hang time. I've got to get my drop down and get my foot on the ball quicker."

Carbajal jailed after fight with off-duty police officer

Boxer Michael Carbajal was arrested Monday following a fight with an off-duty police officer outside a gas station.

Carbajal, a silver medalist in the 1988 Olympics and now a professional boxer, and another man allegedly attacked the officer at 3 a.m., police said.

An off-duty officer had been inside the gas station buying a drink when he came out and told Carbajal, his wife, and the second man to keep the noise down. The clerk inside the station called 911 to report the suspects were chasing the officer around the gas pumps.

The second man, identified as Carlos Valdez, allegedly began the attack on the officer and soon was joined by Carbajal. Carbajal, 30, ran from the scene but was cornered behind a shed by a police dog and an officer. He surrendered without any problems.

Carbajal and Valdez remained in custody Monday.

NBA

Mitchell and Willis fined

The NBA fined forwards Sam Mitchell of the Minnesota Timberwolves and Kevin Willis of the Houston Rockets for their actions in a Saturday playoff game at Houston.

Mitchell was fined $10,000 by the league based on the severity of a penalty 2 flagrant foul he committed against Willis with 9:25 left in the fourth quarter of Houston's 96-84 win. Mitchell hit Willis with a swinging right forearm and was ejected following the incident. The ejection carries an additional $1,000 fine.

Willis was fined $7,500 for flagrantly elbowing Mitchell in the head with 1:15 remaining in the first quarter.

The Rockets lead the best-of-five series, 2-0. Game 3 is Tuesday night in Minnesota.

Phoenix's Roenick out for rest of playoffs on injury

The Phoenix Coyotes will be without center Jeremy Roenick for Game 7 of their Western Conference quarterfinal series against the Anaheim Mighty Ducks Tuesday night. And if the Coyotes win Tuesday, they will be without Roenick for at least the next round as well.

The Coyotes announced Monday that Roenick has suffered a third degree tear of the medial collateral ligament of his left knee and will be sidelined 4-6 weeks.

Roenick, the team's second-leading scorer in the playoffs, sustained the injury when he collided knee-to-knee with Anaheim's Ted Drury in the second period of in Sunday's 3-2 overtime loss to the Mighty Ducks in Game 6 at Phoenix.

Women's tennis snaps nine-year losing streak

DRAKE DEFEATED: Saluki women beat Bulldogs on way to fifth-place finish at conference championship.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Beating one of the conference's top teams for the first time in nine years meant a little more to the SIUC women's tennis team than a fifth-place finish at the Missouri Valley Conference Championship Sunday.

The fifth-seeded Salukis finished their season in Wichita, Kan., Sunday with a 5-4 win over third-seeded Drake University to capture fifth place and run their conference mark to 10-10 on the season.

The win over Drake was as the first for the Salukis since April 15, 1988. That period included an eight-match losing streak to the Bulldogs.

Saluki coach Judy Auld said the win was a perfect ending to a successful tournament.

"I have no idea when the last time was that we beat Drake," Auld said. "This year was the first year that Drake has been beaten by three other schools in the conference other than Wichita State.

"We played with a lot of heart. We wanted the match a lot more than they did."

Saluki junior Molly Card said the win was extra special because it came during the tournament.

"It was a really good win, and we're really happy because Drake is one of the top teams in the conference and won the championship last year," Card said.

SIUC opened the tournament Friday with a 5-4 loss to fourth-seeded Indiana State University. The Salukis took three of the six singles matches and one of the three

Gagliano kicks off NFL life

IN THE COLT CORRAL: Saluki punter begins training with Indianapolis' Pro Bowl punter Gardocki.

MICHAEL DEFORD
DE SPORTS EDITOR

Five months ago, Mark Gagliano was sitting in Collierville, Tenn., wondering if he ever would get a shot at the NFL.

On Saturday, he was in Lafayette, Ind., competing against Indianapolis Colts punter Chris Gardocki.

The former Saluki punter signed as a free agent with the Colts Friday evening and spent Saturday and Sunday practicing with the team.

"It was just an awesome, awesome weekend," Gagliano said. "I am really excited that I got the chance to experience what life is like in the NFL. It was just a lot of fun, and the Colts are a neat team to be with.

"The Colts are really a first-class organization and right down my alley."

Gagliano, who also talked to the Chicago Bears, Miami Dolphins, Dallas Cowboys, Pittsburgh Steelers and the New England Patriots, flew to Lafayette, Thursday evening, took a physical Friday afternoon and signed a two-year contract with the club later that evening.

Gagliano, a Division I-AA All American who averaged a nation-best 45 yards per punt at SIUC last season, went through five practice sessions with the Colts, rubbing elbows with quarterback Jim Harbaugh and competing against Gardocki, the Colts' Pro Bowl punter.

Gagliano said Gardocki not only gave him some pointers on making it in the NFL, but motivated him as well.

"He is so consistent it's unbelievable," Gagliano said of his competition. "I tried like heck, but he is the most consistent punter in the NFL. Every ball was just perfect. I planned on getting some experience, but after I seen him punt, I just wanted to beat him.

"But I can't worry about him. I have to worry about me."

Exactly how long Gagliano will remain with the Colts is uncertain. Gagliano said he is unsure if he will make the team's final cut, but he said he welcomes the opportunity the Colts have given him.

Gagliano's contract does not guarantee a spot on the team. If cut, Gagliano is up for grabs, meaning any team in the NFL can sign him within 72 hours under his original contract. If he signs any later than that, Gagliano has to renegotiate his contract with whoever is interested.

"The contract is a little confusing," he
