Humphrey's sister says brother able to unite America

By W. Allen Manning

Hubert Humphrey was described Monday by his sister as the man best able to unite the country.

Mrs. Frances Humphrey Howard, the vice president's sister, spoke before a sparse crowd at Davis Auditorium in Wham Education Building. Another sister, Mrs. Verne Baines, also attended but left the campaigning to her sister. After the talk, the two attended a luncheon in the University Center.

"Within the Democratic Party and within the country we have had dissidents," Mrs. Howard said. "Hubert knows how to unite the country."

"He knows how to bring people into a unified action," she continued. "When Hubert was the youngest mayor of Minneapolis, it was anti, anti everything. Hubert cleaned it up with strength and unity."

"The country is like a symphony orchestra," she said. "In the end, when we come to the crescendos, all notes have to be in harmony. Vice President Humphrey knows how to harmonize the nation."

Mrs. Howard, who resigned her position as Chief of Liaison to Non-Governmental Organizations and Special Project Branch in the Office of the War on Hunger, now makes about four campaign speeches per day and appears on radio and television. She has two children, William, 21, a senior at the University of Minnesota and Ann, 18, who attends Boston University.

Police begin enforcing pedestrian street code

By John Durbin

The Carbondale Police Department Monday began enforcing the pedestrian code requiring persons to walk along the left shoulder of unpaved streets and step off to the left when a vehicle approaches.

Chief Manager C. William Norman said he instructed the police to begin "intensive enforcement" of the code. Although the code has been in effect for more than a decade, Norman said it has never been enforced.

Norman said the decision to enforce the code came as a result of a recent accident on Park Street in which two SIU students were injured. There were no sidewalks on either side of the street where the accident occurred.

Police Chief Jack Hazel said he discussed the code with Norman and warnings were being issued Monday and Tuesday. "We will begin giving out tickets to violators either Wednesday or Thursday of this week," he said.

Norman said the fine for such a ticket would be set up by the court since no published fine is indicated in the city code.

Tom Leffler, head of the SIU Security Office, said Monday he had not talked with Norman and was not aware of the code. He said he would look into the situation as it applies to the University's traffic enforcement along Wall and Park Streets.

SIU-produced moonshine?

It's not moonshine—but it could be. "Over there" in the Technology Building "D" is the equipment capable of doing the job—enough distilling equipment, in fact, to cheer the heart of any true whiskey aficionado.

Enthusiasm absent

Congeniality marks peace march

By Dan Van Atta

Saturday was a peaceful morning as some 95 demonstrators gathered in front of the Morris Library to protest United States involvement in the war in Vietnam. Most in the group were cheerful, and smiling and congenial.

The revolutionary enthusiasm evoked at last spring’s march was conspicuously absent from the group. Yet, beneath quiet laughter rose a silent sadness. There hung an air of hopelessness about the scene.

But the march began. From the library down to Mill Street, then east to Illinois Avenue. And gradually the silent roar became audible. A new spirit began to manifest itself.

“What do we want?” someone yelled over a megaphone.

“Peace,” the throng replied.

“When do we want it?” The voice returned.

“Now!”

“Peace, now. Peace, now.”

The voices were not stereotype jars from a CBS newscast. Fashion, gossip, age, race, nationality; these things did not prevail. Some carried signs and wore plastic sunflowers on their clothes.

James Dentsino, a handicapped student in his third year at Southern, summed up the meaning of the event.

“It’s a matter of involvement,” he said. “We’re all here because we’re concerned with the way the world is, and we feel compelled to get involved in it. I’m afraid many people are tired of hearing about it though—there seemed to be a lot more involvement on this campus last year.”

As the group proceeded down Illinois Avenue, people left the sidewalks and joined in on all sides. Those who did not join in did not heckle; they looked on, with sympathetic eyes. The change of age and ideology that had divided such previous endeavors seemed to be wedded in a common tide of empathy.

A young resident of Carbondale, who preferred not to reveal her name, pushed her two-year-old son down the street.

“People have to demonstrate how they feel,” she said. “The war must end. There’s really nothing else to say.”

Roger Ricketts, a 21-year-old junior majoring in sociology, said he had recently returned from spending a summer studying in Copenhagen, Denmark. He described the Scandinavian attitude toward the war.

“Among the students there is a strong feeling against the war and against America,” he said. “There were two demonstrations against the American embassy in Copenhagen while I was there this summer.”

“But there were also demonstrations against the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.”

Roger marched along side his sweet Swedish wife, Lena. He said they would return to Europe and pursue social work after graduation.

As the marchers turned south from Walnut Street, and headed down University Avenue, their numbers easily exceeded 300.

Among the group was Richard Laws, an instructor in guidance and educational psychology, who said the march “is more informational than anything else.”

And Brian Kemmett, a serious-looking graduate student in anthropology who said he would leave the country before serving in Vietnam.

As the marchers approached the campus the crowds dispersed quietly. Only about 40 remained for the ensuing “speak out.”

The majority disappeared into the anonymity of a peaceful Saturday afternoon.

Presidential debates

Only two Presidents of the United States—Woodrow Wilson and Lyndon B. Johnson—were college debaters. But both of this year’s candidates, Richard Nixon and Vice President Humphrey, were on their college teams.

Stadt to address New York group

Ronald W. Stadt, faculty chairman of technical and industrial education at SIU's School of Technology, will be the final seminar speaker and consultant in a federally funded "Fellowship and Staff Development Program" for the technical and industrial education department of the State University College, Oswego, New York, on Dec. 5 and 6.

Stadt will describe the Enterprise Man and Technology programs which he and his staff have developed at SIU.

"Jokers' must go"

The reassessment of fire alarm systems at University Park and Brush Tower is unusually in that it deviates from the traditional policy of action only in the wake of a disaster. However, this proposed fire-alarm system places convenience paramount to safety, and would result, in effect, in a regressive form of protection.

Under the pre-alarm system, the warning would come only in the rooms of staff personnel. Only after these persons had searched the area, to discover if a fire actually existed could the general alarm be sounded.

This system would result in a loss of evacuation time that could be fatal. Campus safety experts have said that the real danger comes from smoke, not the actual flame of fire. They also have reiterated that every second is critical in the event of a real fire.

It must be remembered, however, that University residence hall staff personnel today simply do not function like heat and smoke detectors. The pre-alarm system places an inhuman responsibility on shoulders.

The accessibility of the pull boxes would be greatly reduced by merely covering them with a glass shield. This was suggested several years ago in the making of University Park. Not only was the suggestion ignored in U. Park, adjustments were not made in the architects plans for Brush Towers. Now that the increased number of students has multiplied recognition of the problem, the administration is considering a change.

A change is needed. But the change needs first of all to arise from the attitudes of those who have criminally disregarded the safety of their fellow students. Administrative action, in appealing the inconsideration by these "figthers", must not jeopardize the welfare of all persons housed in these facilities.

'Tidbit' coverage blamed for poor turnout

To the Daily Egyptian:

This is an open letter to all of the students at SIU who may not know about the opportunity which is available for SIU Graduate Studies Day. This program, held in the University Center on Wednesday, October 17, from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M., brought together representatives for 48 SIU graduate programs, the Graduate School Office, and the College of Education.

The chairmen and/or the directors of graduate studies of these departments, as well as other faculty members, were present to talk to interested students about the graduate courses offered. Among the departments were the departments of English, History, Art, Business Administration, and others.

Writer calls FBI 'inexpert' in judging 'purityness'

To the Daily Egyptian:

It is a shame that Senator Robert Taft has failed to live up to the FBI in his attempts at restricting freedom of association and the presence of groups on the SIU campus. While the FBI may be an effective investigator of crime, it is not an expert as a judge of the "purity" of political beliefs, and is not charged with their evaluation (or suppression).

Mr. Thompson has helped countless students to become more aware of the importance of being on those many college campuses in the (also) McCarthy period of the 1950's. It is with the actions of government agencies strongly influencing what students felt free to say (or not say).

Mr. Thompson should think: How can he expect freedom from outside interference to speak his peace when, as the first sign of a group of individuals he does not have the slightest interest in, runs to "Big Brother" in Washington to do his dirty work for him.

The Veterans Club has as much right to participate in "campus politics" as any other organization. I would welcome the participation of far more students than have been present. This is an extremely apathetic campus, where many students cannot even identify the specific issue of this story — "freedom." But he behooves "administration officials" to operate with a more even hand—either inviting all groups, of WHATEVER PER­ SPECTIVES, or of all students—keeping hands off—instead of indulging in Machiavellian tactics for "neutra­ lizing" students whom they do not wish to deal.

Public Forum

The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current events through editorials and letters. Editorials are written by members of the student body staff and express the editorial opinion of the paper only. Readers are invited to express their opinions in letters, which must be typed with name, address, and telephone number, preferably typewritten, and no longer than 500 words. Letters will be printed only if appropriate and in keeping with the standards of good taste and are subject to the Editor's approval. Acceptance for publication will depend upon the limitations of space and the contents and relevance of the material submitted to the responsibility of the Daily Egyptian to determine content of the opinion pages. Other material on pages four and five includes original and reprinted articles written by the news staff, editorials, regular columns, and other features of interest and importance, and interpretation of opinions and symbols authored locally.

"The New Politicians"

"JUNO" chases "I am a bit" out of "The New Politicians" which was written by the chief of the "New Politicians," an organization of people who would like to see a bit more respect for the "New Politicians." The article was published in the "New Politicians" and was intended to be a "bit" of fun. The "bit" was a reference to the fact that the "New Politicians" were not considered to be serious by some members of the group.

Perhaps your interest in campus events was exhausted after reading the two-column news story on the Illinois Audio-Visual Association Conference and the first annual meeting of the American Baptist Churches of the Great Rivers Region, both of which, you will agree, we are pleased to welcome to our campus.

Or perhaps you were simply exhausted, period, from waiting through the five full pages of good things which were advertised at the sale at Sav-Mart, Borer's IGA, and Kelley's Big Star.

With such surpising fare, I cannot blame you for passing by the tidbit which announced what was possibly the most concerted effort for bringing together faculty and students for conversation which this campus will see all year long. But I can blame the editorial handling of the news story that was to get information of the opportunity to you.

On October 10 I wrote a detailed letter concerning this event to the editor of the Daily Egyptian, and I attached a flyer which had been sent to colleges and universities in this five-state area. I asked that a copy of this story be carried on Wednesday, October 16, in order to preview the program, and that another story be carried on the day of the program itself.

I said that I should be happy to provide other information, if it was needed. Accordingly, on Monday, October 14, I received a telephone call from a reporter of the Egyptian in which additional information was given. On Friday, October 18, I was telephoned, and on Thursday came the little item which you may, or may not, have seen. Meanwhile, the moment has passed and this particular opportunity has been missed for this year.

Unfortunately, it is uncertain whether it will occur again next year," for the student response was so poor relative to the outlay of faculty, graduate student, and administrative time and effort, as well as university money, that one seriously疑问whether it ought to be tried again.

Right over there in Room 14C of the Technology "D" Building stands: potentially the biggest goil-darn moonshine still you ever did see! Yes, capable of 190 proof alcohol—or, if you go for the weaker blends, how about some nice, mellow 90 proof sour mash whisky?

Actually, it’s not exactly a genuine moonshine still—but it could be.

The “still” is a distillation plate column, part of a steel-glass-rubber machinery complex used for instructional purposes by the School of Technology. Murl Teske, a graduate student in transfer and rate processes, is an assistant to J. W. Chen, associate professor in charge of the machinery in Room 14C—and the man to see if you’ve got a yen for, say, a close duplication of a smooth-bourbon.

Teske explains the distillation column’s capabilities:

“Pure alcohol? Sure—easy enough. A bourbon or good moonshine whisky would take a little more effort, but it could be done. A little corn or barley mash, a little steam heat...”

...and presto! Six gallons of good blend an hour! (Unfortunately or, if you’re a teetotaler, fortunately), the distillation column, an exotic-looking piece of equipment, isn’t used for producing the “Balm of Gilad.” Right now its function is to produce pure distilled water for use in technological experiments.

The column, which is some 30 feet in height, is placed alongside such strange-sounding pieces of equipment as a “flash evaporator unit,” a “liquid-liquid extractor” and a “gas absorption column.” Together, they form an impressive complex of demonstration equipment for unit operations in chemical engineering manufactured in England by the Corning Glassware Company, the equipment cost a cool $50,000—which would make it the most expensive moonshine still in Southern Illinois (the most expensive known still, that is).

As noted, it isn’t used for making moonshine, but if it were, here’s the process:

Place one mass of fermented mash (corn or barley—take your pick) in the bottom pot of the column. Turn on the steam and then just sit back and watch—the process is all automatic. The alcohol boils up, separates from the water through the plates—which act as condensing and vaporizing units—and at the top place draw it off through the siphon. You should have about 95% (190 proof) alcohol.

So all you need to provide is the fermented mash. That might not be such a hard item to come by, either—there are three fermenters installed in Room 14C.

Jackie Robinson plans address for Humphrey

Jackie Robinson, first man to break the color barrier of baseball, will speak on behalf of Hubert Humphrey in Ballroom II of the University Center at 12 noon Wednesday.

This will be the kick off for the 'Illinois Youth for Humphrey' rallies throughout the state, Richard Shuf hafer, vice president of the young democrats, said.

SIU's rally will culminate in a canvass of the university community Saturday, Shuhafer added.

Why There Is No Organized Crime In Jackson County

There is no organized crime in Jackson County. There is none because Jackson County has good law enforcement agencies that work closely with a concerned and effective State's Attorney.

Since 1964, when Richard Richman was elected State's Attorney, he has consistently stressed the importance of improving police standards and training. He has worked closely with Jackson County Sheriff Raymond Dittlinger to help build a better county law enforcement agency. He has spent countless hours with Carbondale Police Chief Jack Hazel, Murphysboro Chief Toby Berger, SIU Chief Tom Lefler, and Captain Dan Redmon of the State Police.

Richard Richman has coordinated all of these police agencies into an effective crime prevention force.

Long before "law and order" became a popular political phrase, Richard Richman was doing his job. He was making certain that crime doesn't have a chance.

That's why there is no organized crime in Jackson County. That's why you should re-elect Richard Richman.

Chamber asks City to delay action on vending proposal

The Carbondale Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors has expressed initial opposition to a proposed ordinance providing for the licensing and regulation of automatic food vending machines, juke boxes and mechanical amusement devices.

In a letter to City Manager C. William Norman the Board asked the City Council to delay action on the ordinance until a Chamber committee can study the matter. The Chamber also requested a meeting with the City Council to discuss the ordinance after its study has been completed and a recommendation submitted.

The Board's opposition to the ordinance was directed primarily at that section applying to automatic food vending machines, whereby a separate license would be required for each machine at each original location and subsequent locations to which it might be moved.

The ordinance, drawn up by City Attorney George Fleerlage and Mayor David Kesner, was presented to the City Council for discussion at its Oct. 2 meeting.

Councilman William Eaton and Joseph Ragdalle expressed opposition to the proposed licensing of food vending machines which is included in the ordinance. Eaton called the ordinance 'discrimination against legitimate type of business' which would place an additional financial burden on the owner of such a machine and license.

Fleerlage said the proposed ordinance is neither discriminatory nor 'unlawful taxation'.

Work on revising the proposed ordinance has been held up due to Fleerlage's heavy workload on the grand jury investigation.

Fleerlage said he met with three area beverage dealers who are concerned about the effects the proposed ordinance would have on their business. The dealers were Harry L. Crisp II of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., Marion; Carl Meissner of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Cairo, and Clifton F. Bargaret of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Carbondale.

Czechoslovak youths demonstrate

PRAGUE (AP) -- Defying Soviet occupation forces, thousands of youths marched through Prague's downtown streets for 12 hours, waving flags and raising the flag of their nation, demanded a Russian troop withdrawal. Some triumphantly chanted: "Russians go home! Russians go home!"

The outbreak, on Czechoslovakia's 50th anniversary as a nation, placed in jeopardy the Moscow-Praque agreement for a partial troop pullout and the very future of the liberal regime of Alexander Dubcek.

It was the first mass demonstration since last August, the month the Soviet-led invasion to halt the nation's liberalization drive. The marchers roamed from the west of government at Prague Castle, to the Soviet Embassy, to a Soviet district command post, a Red Army officers billet and to the National Theater where they displayed a gala performance for the new leaders of a patriotic opera.

City street code to be enforced

Leffler said he plans to talk with Norman about the code. He said the security police's primary concern regarding traffic enforcement is the intersection at Old Main Gate and Harwood Street at Route 51.

Sec. 19-97 of the code states: "It is the duty of any persons walking along and upon improved streets to keep on the left of the paved portion or on the left shoulder thereof and upon meeting a vehicle which is on the right hand side, such paved portions to step off to the left."

The code also states that "where sidewalks are provided, it shall be unlawful for any pedestrian to walk along and upon an adjacent roadway."

Norman said the city has run into "extremely difficult engineering problems" in constructing streets along the section of Wall Street running between Freeman Street and extending to Park Street. Sidewalks have already been constructed along Wall Street from Main Street to Freeman Street on both sides.

According to Norman, the City Council gave Bill Schwengman director of Public Works authorization to develop plans to construct additional sidewalks along Wall and Park Streets.

Schwegman said the present plans call for widening Wall Street to 42 feet so that sidewalks can be constructed.

"We have held the plans in abeyance until such a time as the university acquires the property on the west side of Wall Street and then gives the city the right of way," Schwengman said.

Schwegman said he met Monday morning with John Lonergan, SLU architect, to discuss the University's progress in acquiring the additional property. Schwengman said Lonergan "was not too hopeful" that the proposal would be included in the next budget.

The city is not permitted to use Motor Fuel Tax funds to construct sidewalks without building streets as well, according to Schwengman.

Schwegman said the city should be made to construct sidewalks with building streets. This work is being done to iron out these problems, he said.

Schwegman was unavailable for comment.
'Odd Couple' is not politics, but good belly-laugh anyway

By Dean Rebuffoni

No, "The Odd Couple" is not about George Wallace and Curtis LeMay. Rather, it’s about Oscar Madison and Felix Ungar — and it’s even funnier watching that pair perform than observing Wallace—LeMay in action.

"The Odd Couple" is the first production of the 1968—69 Playbill of the Southern Players. The three-act comedy played Friday and Sunday nights in the Southern Playhouse of the Communications Building and will be performed Nov. 1-3 during Homecoming weekend.

The Neil Simon play, which is directed by Darwin R. Payne of the Department of Theater, is — in two words — very funny. And it’s not the light, chatty type of audience laughter which is produced by "The Odd Couple." Instead, the loud guffaw, the deep belly-laugh, is the reaction.

The Department of Theater deserves a campus-wide "thank you" for obtaining the rights to produce such a current and popular play here in bucolic Carbondale.

The play’s setting is in New York City, in Oscar’s eight-room, Riverside Drive apartment. It’s the apartment which provides the play’s focal point, and it undergoes a three-stage metamorphosis: from cluttered to neat to cluttered.

Stage one, extremely cluttered, is the result of Oscar’s being an utter slobo, having the boys over for poker and beer, and being divorced (no spouse, no clean house). At this point Oscar’s pad is closely akin to a dormitory room occupied by two male undergraduates: dirty, with an incredible drift of empty beer cans, discarded clothing and magazines on the floor, the couch, everywhere. Everyone is, happy however, and the poker game goes on.

Stage two: enter Felix, the husband—recently—separated from wife— and family. Oscar takes his friend in, little realizing Felix is a royal slob and for empty aspirins and polished table-tops. The apartment becomes liveable — and intolerable for Oscar and his poker—playing buddies. The gads is turned up.

Stage Three: Confrontation. Oscar orders Felix out into the cold. The card crew returns to the apartment, Felix departs and the play ends with everybody happy.

Simple, isn’t it? But it’s also a play worth attending. The eight-member cast, with Les Lannom and Hugh Smith in the lead roles of Oscar and Felix, respectively, does a fine job — even if their attempts to produce a Brooklyness accent sometimes results in tangled dialogue or some blown lines. Phil Hendren’s set is also worthy of note — it’s quite an apartment.

Many schools have already instituted black history courses, Moore said, and have done it successfully without the aid of Negro instructors. As long as he is qualified, a white instructor can teach the course just as well," said Moore.

This movement for Negro equality has been afoot for many years, "We are merely seeing the climax for respect and human dignity at this time," Moore said.

Moore said this general trend of disavowal where the Negro is concerned is one of the major reasons that this country is experiencing racial difficulty.

Area teachers to study history at workshop

Southern Illinois' history will be the subject of a workshop for social studies teachers in the 42 southernmost counties of the state on Nov. 15 and 16 at the Carbondale campus of SIU. The sessions will be sponsored by the Illinois State Historical Society, the SIU Museum and University Extension Services.

In addition to some 350 eligible teachers in the area, the school superintendents and members of local historical societies have been invited to attend.

Emphasis of the conference will be on the early history of the state and on methods of presenting it to students.

Speakers will include Frederick C. Schmidt, curator of interpretations at the museum; John Y. Simon, executive director of the Ulysses S. Grant Association and associate professor of history, and Sidney Denny, assistant professor of anthropology.

Denny will discuss "Indian Prehistory of Southern Illi-nois" from the discoveries at the rock shelters along the Mississippi River to those at the great mounds at Cahokia.

S.I.U. Legal Counselor Ted Lorek Seeking State's Attorney Post

Ted Lorek, Carbondale attorney and Southern Illinois University legal counsel, is the Republican candidate for Jackson County States Attorney.

According to Lorek, suspected felons have not been judiciously prosecuted in the past. "Suspected violators have not—in most cases—received a fast, fair and impartial trial. Criminal prosecution—like citizen protection—must be rapid and decisive to be meaningful," Lorek believes.

"I'm concerned about laxity of prosecution and coordination of all law enforcement agencies by the present States Attorney," Lorek said, "and I intend to see that these obvious inadequacies are corrected when I'm elected."

Educational and practical background qualifies Lorek to be an excellent States Attorney. If you're concerned about law enforcement in Jackson County, vote for Ted Lorek on Nov. 5.

Roger Kuba and Mike Bradley combined to produce the slight margin of victory over Drake Saturday at Des Moines, Iowa. The game, won by Southern 21-20, marked the first time since 1963 that SIU has won three in a row. SIU is now 3-2 for the season.

Trailing 20-14 in the final quarter, SIU fullback Kuba scampered six yards to tie the score, and then Bradley kicked the decisive extra point for the victory.

Penalties and interceptions marred the Bulldog Homecoming as they were penalized 111 yards, 80 of which came in the second half when the Salukis outscored the Drake team 21-14.

Two infractions cost SIU a touchdown and a field goal, and a penalty robbed Drake of a field goal.

In the opening period Bradley had a 44-yard field goal nullified by an offsides penalty, and in the second quarter a quarterback Jim McKay almost scored a touchdown. Quillen was called back because of an illegal motion call. The pass had been a 28-yard toss. Drake's place kicker, Bob Chase, split the uprights from 28 yards away, but saw that effort cancelled by a penalty.

The Salukis fared well in the pass interception department, picking off four stray Bulldog aeronauts. Two of the steals, one apiece by Carl Mauck and Charles Gorn, came in the final four and a half minutes. Mauck's interception came on the Southern 20-yard line, and Goro's, taken at midfield, came with only 1:09 remaining.

Goro also grabbed a Drake pass in the second period, and Ed Walliner took one in the third, but Southern couldn't convert any of the breaks into touchdowns.

The Bulldog's also stole three SIU passes, one in each of the last three quarters, but they too, were unable to capitalize on them.

Two SIU touchdowns in the third period came in a period of only 87 seconds as Drake ran 11 yards for a score and Doug Holinger took a Bulldog punt 66 yards for another.

Drake also rambled for two scores in the third period, one of the tallies coming on a 64-yard punt return by Diane Miller.

SIU's "elephant backfield'' found it difficult to move against the Drake team, and saw little action in the second half. Quillen rushed for 108 yards in 23 carries, and Bradley contributed 74 yards in seven tries.

"I felt it would be this type of a ball game," SIU coach Dick Towers commented. "Our boys were a little down after last week's game, but still managed to pull together and get the job done after trailing 13-0.

"That's the sign of a good team, and I like that we can win games like this," Towers said after the game had been a 28-yard toss. Drake's place kicker, Bob Chase, split the uprights from 28 yards away, but saw that effort cancelled by a penalty.
