Weather, police 'getting ready' for Halloween

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

The prayers of Carbondale Police for a rainy Halloween weekend may be answered this year as the National Weather Service is predicting a strong chance of rain for Saturday evening.

Whether it rains or not, Carbondale Police will have extra officers on duty patrolling Illinois Avenue. Lt. Terry Murphy said 41 officers, including plainclothesmen, will be on duty Friday and Saturday nights, about 30 over the normal number.

A spokesman for the SIU-C Weather Service at Southern Illinois Airport said a powerful storm system is developing in the west and should hit Carbondale sometime Saturday.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies Friday with a chance of rain in the late evening. A strong possibility of rain and thunderstorms is called for in Saturday's forecast. Temperatures for the weekend should range from a high in the mid-70's to a low in the lower 50's.

Murphy said police will be concerned primarily with "preserving the peace and maintaining public safety." He said there are no official plans to close Illinois Avenue, adding "the crowd will determine if the road is closed."

An estimated 10,000 persons attended last year's party compared to an estimated crowd of 15,000 in 1979. By 9 p.m. on Friday last year, the throng had forced Carbondale Police Chief Edward Hogan to close Illinois Avenue from Mill to Elm Streets for safety reasons.

SIU-C Security Police will have 14 additional officers on duty this weekend patrolling Illinois Avenue on foot and participating in joint patrols with Carbondale police. Security Director Virgil Trummer said the additional officers will accompany Carbondale police on their regular patrols, freeing more city officers to work Illinois Avenue.

A spokesman for the state police said regular patrols will be maintained but there would be some "beefing up" of personnel due to the heavy volume of traffic anticipated, though.

The Carbondale Fire Department will also have eight men walking on South Illinois Avenue enforcing building occupancy codes and putting out small fires, according to Fire Chief Charles McCaughan. McCaughan said the fire department has drawn access routes to downtown buildings in case of a major fire.

Murphy said this year's crowd should be smaller if the pattern of the last two years continues. Trummer said the size of the crowd will hinge on the weather but he said "there is no question" that Illinois Avenue will have to be closed.

Fifty-eight persons were arrested during last year's celebration, most of them for minor offenses. More than half of those arrested listed out-of-town addresses and about a fourth were charged with underage drinking. Last year's crowd was labeled as "well-behaved" by police with "no one bent on destruction."

Veteran's Scholarship funding not enough, state official says

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

A $5.7 million appropriation for fiscal year 1982 for the Illinois Veteran's Scholarship program will not provide enough funds for students attending Illinois universities, according to an Illinois Department of Veteran's Affairs official.

But Keith Votava, a department administrator, said Thursday that although the program is about $2 million short in its reimbursements to universities for 1981 scholarships, an attorney general's opinion issued in 1976 prohibits SIU-C and other universities from billing students to get back payments.

Votava said that if a supplemental appropriation bill is not passed by the Legislature, the program could be $5 million in debt by 1983.

"I would hope to see a supplemental appropriation bill passed by the General Assembly. It's done all the time, but with today's fiscal restraint, it's hard to say what would happen," he said.

If a supplemental appropriation bill is not passed, Votava said there will "definitely be a shortfall" of about $5 million in funds for 1982 scholarships.

Joe Camille, the University's director of student work and financial assistance, said that SIU-C sent an about $275,000 bill to Illinois Veteran's Scholarship program for 964 students who were awarded scholarships last spring.

"We haven't received the money yet, but I'm sure that we'll be paid for it," Camille said.

Camille said the scholarship program will first have to reimburse the $2 million to Illinois universities before additional funds are released from this year's $5.7 million appropriation.

"It is unknown at this time whether the $5.7 million will cover the total amount for fiscal year 1982 scholarships," Camille said.

Foreign comments restrained

AWACS sale draws reaction

By The Associated Press

Israel reacted with restraint Thursday to U.S. Senate approval of the Saudi Arabian arms sale and said it expects President Reagan to ensure the Jewish state's security. Saudi rulers expressed "deep gratitude" and said relations with America will improve.

There was no comment from West European allies and most Arab states were silent.

The Soviets claimed the $8.5 billion package, which includes the world's most sophisticated spy planes, will spur a new Middle East arms race and is part of a U.S. preparation for possible seizure of the region's oil fields.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a statement devoid of harshness, indicated he expected Reagan to hold to his pledge to "help Israel retain its military and technological advantages in the Middle East." Reagan made the assurance in a note after the Senate voted 52-48 Wednesday night to approve the sale, the largest single U.S. arms export package ever.

Begin read the Reagan note and then told reporters: "We hope that these words of the president will be carried into realization."

The official Cabinet statement expressed its "regret" over the sale to Saudi Arabia, "which is in a state of war with Israel, rejects the Camp David accords and finances terror in our region. A new and serious danger now faces Israel—new since the restoration of our statehood."

Israel has argued its defense, keyed to the ability for surprise air strikes, would be seriously impaired by Saudi possession of Airborne Warning and Control Systems planes and extra equipment for its F-15 fighter jets.

The Saudi defense minister, Prince Sultan Ibn Abdul Aziz, said the vote "proved that the U.S. political decision is independent in the face of enormous pressures...that tried to manipulate America's foreign policy in the service of the expansionist objectives of a foreign state."

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said the AWACS sale fits "into Washington's longterm policy of increasing supplies of American weapons to this already explosive region.

McCormick to run for state Senate seat

State Rep. C.L. McCormick, R-59th District, is to be expected to announce Friday his intention to seek his party's nomination to the 59th Senate seat, now held by state Sen. Gene Johns.

McCormick 10 days ago announced his retirement from the House, effective in 1982. Republican Party attempts to get McCormick to change his mind about retiring apparently were successful.

The 19-year House veteran's expected announcement comes nine days after Johns was indicted by a Williamson County grand jury on 29 counts of violating state campaign financing laws and one count of official misconduct.

A state Senate spokesman said Johns "is definitely running" for re-election.

Last week Johns said that McCormick would have been a very formidable candidate.

Another Republican, state Rep. Wayne Alstat of the 58th District, said Thursday that he is seeking his party's nomination to the 58th Senate seat, currently held by Sen.

Kenneth Buzbee. Buzbee, a Democrat from Carbondale, has said that he is seeking his party's nomination to the lieutenant governor post.

McCormick said Gov. James R. Thompson telephoned to urge him to run, reportedly at the request of state Rep. Robert Winchester, R-59th District. Thompson and McCormick were to meet this week.

McCormick said he made his decision after "much soul searching and serious discussions with my family, my friends and leaders of the Republican Party."

"I know that it is going to be one of the most difficult political races that I have ever run," he said.

Alstat said he would be a good candidate for the state Senate because he spent over 50 years in township government.

Alstat gained his House seat by defeating six-year incumbent Vincent Birchler in 1980.

Reagan's win in AWACS deal may cause harmful side effects

By Donald M. Rothberg
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan's Senate victory over his sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia rivals his earlier congressional triumphs on taxes and spending, but this time there may be a sizable casualty list.

The places to look for the wounded are on Capitol Hill, where one unhappy senator says Reagan's once-solid support from the GOP "is shot to pieces," and within the administration itself—where bickering and some questionable calls early in the AWACS effort could force some staff reappraisals.

The split in GOP ranks and the poor staff work were major factors in making the fight over the $8.5-billion arms package a much tougher battle than those over the tax and budget cuts.

But what happens now as the administration heads toward the next round of budget cuts? Have Republicans learned they can oppose the president and not be struck down? Will this victory mark the end of Reagan's magic touch with Congress?

"The solid plan of Republicans certainly is shot to pieces," said GOP Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, a hard-line opponent of the arms sale. "They are undermining their ability to achieve their economic goals," he added.

One test of whether the president can heal the wounds in his own party is likely to be the case of Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, a leader in the fight against the arms sale.

Packwood's opposition raised hackles in the White House because of its intensity and also because he is chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee.

Within the White House staff, there is a split over whether it would be best to forgive and forget Packwood's role in the AWACS fight or to encourage Senate Republicans who would like to punish the Oregonian by forcing him out of his campaign committee chairmanship.

Supporters of Packwood can argue that, despite the arms sale fight, he ranks among the most consistent supporters of the president in the Senate. His record of support for the administration would be in sharp contrast, for example, to that of Sen. Jesse Helms, the North Carolina conservative, who has differed with Reagan far more often.

Another signal of the extent of the problems facing Reagan on Capitol Hill came from Budget Director David Stockman.

While most attention on Wednesday was focused on the impending AWACS vote, Stockman was telling the Joint Economic Committee that "there are enormous upward pressures" on federal spending that make it unlikely Reagan can achieve his goal of balancing the budget by 1984.

Within the administration, the AWACS fight is likely to revive speculation about the futures of Richard V. Allen, the White House national security adviser, and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

OPEC fixes new oil base price

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC fixed a new unified base oil price of $34 a barrel Thursday and froze it through the end of next year. Analysts said the deal would add about 2½ cents a gallon to the price Americans pay for gasoline and home heating fuel.

But the world oil cartel also fixed a new price ceiling of $38 in the first official price cut in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' 21-year history. The previous ceiling was $41.

Poland's strike wave spreads

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's strike wave spread to a major port and the universities Thursday, swelling the ranks of protesters to about 400,000 across the nation. Meanwhile, the military council of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact began meeting in Hungary.

Solidarity union officials said 40,000 construction workers struck 68 factories for two hours in the Baltic port of Szczecin, on the East German border, and threatened a wider strike to get more building supplies.

In Budapest, the Warsaw Pact's military council opened a "regular session" attended by defense ministers or their assistants from the seven East Bloc member nations, the Hungarian news agency MTI said.

Cancellation waiver limits, bond fee opposed by GSC

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Resolutions opposing the revenue bond fee and the limitation of cancellation waivers for graduate assistants were passed by the Graduate Student Council Wednesday.

In other action, the GSC will let its fee allocation board recommend how the council should implement its new guidelines on allocating fees.

In a presentation on cancellation waivers, John Jackson, dean of the Graduate School, said waivers should be limited because graduate students are apparently using them as a way to avoid paying tuition and fees.

He said that since the Graduate School began issuing cancellation waivers in the spring of 1982, the number of people applying for them has increased to 875 from 310.

Jackson said cancellation waivers are supposed to be used to defer paying tuition and fees for graduate students whose paychecks have been delayed. But the number of people applying for them leads him to believe graduate students are using them to avoid paying the tuition and fees.

Several council members said, however, that the cancellation waivers are needed because a student has to pay rent, utilities and food expenses with his first check, and that doesn't leave enough money to pay their first installment of tuition and fees.

Jackson also said that processing them bogs down the Graduate School with paper work. A suggestion was raised by council members that the Graduate School should hire an assistant from Student Work and Financial Aid to help process the waivers.

A resolution was passed later in the meeting opposing limitation of the waivers. The resolution also says the GSC was assured by Robert Gentry, former vice president for financial affairs and Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, that the Billing Receivable System would not change the fee deferral policy that was used under the preceding system.

Jackson said Thursday that he would take the council's input into consideration and continue to study the problem.

Another resolution passed reaffirms the GSC's "adamant opposition" to the revenue bond fee because it feels it is unreasonable to expect the entire student body to subsidize University housing.

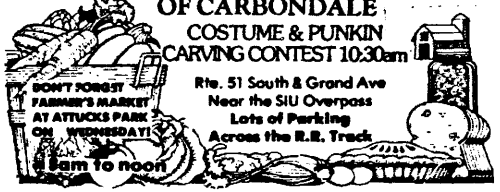

The resolution also states that the proposed $6.60 increase in the fee for fiscal year 1983 should be replaced with an additional $3 increase in the Student Center fee and a $30 increase in monthly housing rates.

In other action, the council asked its fee allocation board to recommend a way to implement the GSC's new fee allocation guidelines.

In her presentation, on fee allocations, GSC Vice President Laura Nelson said the amount of money the council spent on university-wide events so far this year places the council in violation of the new guidelines.

Co-op's success depends on unselfish participation

The idea for setting up a student book co-op has reached a crucial stage, of sorts. Its survival depends upon solutions to two problems: finding workers who are willing to run the co-op and generating student enthusiasm for the project. Without both, the co-op will die before it is even off the ground.

As far as the first problem goes, a clarification is in order. Wednesday's Daily Egyptian ran a story about the co-op under the headline, "Book co-op workers hard to find for USO." That headline may have given the wrong impression about the USO's efforts. In truth, only two groups have been approached so far—the College of Business and Administrative Student Council and the Black Affairs Council.

COBA President Chip Anderson has said the COBA organization will not participate in running the co-op because it feels that the time lag involved before students can receive the money from the books they sell signals certain failure of the project. He also said that business students are concerned that the co-op will take up too much of their time during finals week.

The latter contention has already been refuted. The USO has already said that the major time-consuming tasks—selling and bookkeeping—would occur at the beginning of the semester after books are sold. In reality, there is good reason to believe, despite Chip Anderson's denials, that the opposition of COBA is politically motivated. Anderson is head of the Cobra Party which ran against the Maverick Party in last year's USO elections. It is likely that the Cobra Party will run a slate of candidates again this year and they do not want the present USO administration to get credit for a successful book co-op, nor, for that matter, do they want their people to be involved in something that may fail.

Such concerns of "what's in it for me?" only reinforce the prevailing skepticism of students who feel that student government is not responsive to student needs. The present USO administration deserves credit for initiating some very important projects, many of which have not received any attention from the media. It would be a sad comment on the attitudes of student leaders if the book co-op were to fail because of the short-sighted self-interest of groups such as the COBA council.

Book co-ops can work. Illinois State University has run one successfully since 1970, despite a four-week waiting period before disbursement of payment for books. The paramount reason why a book co-op works is that it represents a genuine saving over commercial bookstore costs and it offers an opportunity for students to feel that they are working for and with each other for a good cause. The value of that savings should more than offset the inconvenience of the waiting period, but students will never understand this if groups like the COBA council continue to stress the bad rather than the good.

The Black Affairs Council has not yet decided whether it wants to participate in getting the co-op off the ground. It is sincerely hoped that they will agree to do so. The perception of the USO has been, for years now, one of inaction and failure to follow through on proposed projects. That perception has not been unjustified at times, but it must be remembered that the ability of the USO to get things done depends on the willingness of the student body to help and to participate unselfishly.

Gus haters beware!

Once again posters have appeared around campus maligning the Daily Egyptian's beloved Gus Bode.

The most recent example is a poster that reads: "Time for a Change. Kill Gus Bode." Besides the fact that it promotes a means of change that civilized society frowns on except in time of war, it offends the sensibilities of a staff which looks up Gus as an institution of sorts.

Gus may not always be funny. Sometimes he doesn't even try, as on the days when the shootings of world leaders have taken place, when Gus' only comment has been that "there is nothing funny to say today."

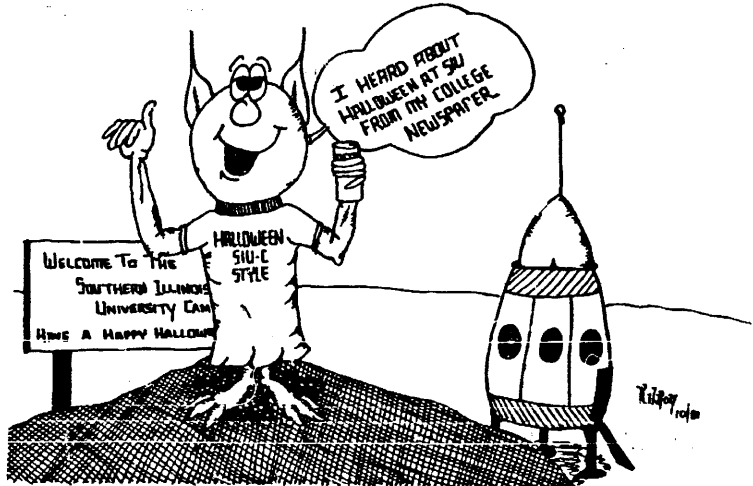

But Gus is the only member of the Daily Egyptian staff who is in a position to speak his mind without the fear of appearing subjective in his approach to the news of the day.

He may not always be eloquent. Sometimes he is even downright irritating. But our loyalty to Gus' right to speak will never flag, because if Gus' First Amendment rights become endangered, then all of society is in trouble.

So let it be known: We will take all necessary measures to protect Gus, including equipping him with a flak jacket. A security cordon will surround him whenever he makes public appearances, which he has never done but which he might, unpredictable cuss that he is.

Finally, we have decided to set up a Special Select Committee on Anti-Gus Activities, with the intention of ferreting out all conformists, of whatever ideology, who forget the importance of mavericks, not to mention the need to fill space in this paper every day.

Gus haters beware! We are onto you and we will not rest until we have once again made the campus safe for Gus Bode, whoever he is.

Draft registration violators should be prosecuted

By Vicki Oigeaty
Staff Writer

For over a year, American men have been required to register for a possible draft within 30 days of their 18th birthday. This legislation was enacted in July 1960 because the majority of Congress thought it would take far too long to mobilize the U.S. military forces in the event of a national emergency.

The peacetime registration of males is designed to cut the time it would take to respond militarily to a national threat. If a draft should become necessary, however, this time saving may be offset by the failure of many youths to register.

According to Selective Service data, nearly 600,000 men did not register when they turned 18. Compliance has plummeted from 97 percent in the first group that registered last year to about 70 percent so far in this year's group. These unregistered men are breaking a law that 6.2 million youths saw fit to follow.

The compliance problem is twofold. Some refuse to register because the idea of draft registration conjures visions of the draft boards of the Vietnam era to them. But there are important differences. There are no draft cards or classifications in today's system. Most importantly, there is no war and there is no actual draft.

Today's registration is only a precaution designed to reduce the amount of time between a defense emergency and the mobilization, should it become necessary, of a large, well-trained army. Without draft registration, the Selective Service estimates it would take 110 days to draft the first man into the military in the event of an emergency. If men are registered before the emergency, the first inductee would be ready for training just 10 days after the military mobilization.

This peacetime registration, as it now exists, is not a threat to personal freedom. All that is required of young men is a five-minute trip to the Post Office where they list their names, addresses, birthdates and Social Security and telephone numbers.

People who refuse to register, people who call themselves "conscientious objectors," have no justification. How can there be conscientious objectors when there is no war to object to?

The second half of this twofold problem is the unwillingness of the government to enforce the registration legislation. The maximum penalty for failure to register is a five-year jail sentence and a $10,000 fine, a definite incentive to register if it is enforced.

Unfortunately, it is not enforced. Of the 600,000 males who have violated the Selective Service Act, not one has been prosecuted. How can people be expected to register if they know there is, in reality, no punishment for failure to do so?

Yet the Selective Service Act was passed without a provision for enforcement. Until recently, the government could not even scan the Social Security rolls in search of unregistered 19-year-olds.

Congress decided over a year ago that a peacetime draft registration was necessary. Until it formally decides otherwise, that registration should take place. Unregistered men must be informed of the consequences of their failure to register, and, if they still refuse to do so, punishment must be dealt out.

It is unfair to demand and receive compliance from some while ignoring the transgressions of others.

Selling of the Army based in image change

By Jennifer Polk
Staff Writer

It's marketed more like a toothpaste than the defense of the nation.

It's advertised as a challenge, a way of life, a chance to grow all rolled into one. It is the U.S. Army.

But the Army has been dealing with a serious image problem for the past several years. Even as the bitterness of the Vietnam War and the anti-war protests faded, the Army remained the branch of the military most mistrusted by youth.

The Air Force and Navy have become more popular with potential recruits in the post-war years because they operate with high technology equipment. But the Army and the Marine Corps still suffer from an image problem.

A national market profile conducted in 1979 produced data that the branch of the service most American youth preferred to join was the Air Force, followed by the Navy. The Army finished third in the poll, just ahead of the Marines. The study showed that America's youth perceived the Army as operating with low technology and being filled with the poor and less educated.

"The Army had this image of being a 1940s-style 'Willie and Joe' organization," said Lt. Col. Joseph Lukitsch, commander of the U.S. Army District Recruiting Office in St. Louis. "People saw those cartoons of soldiers sitting in the mud and drinking in foxholes. They see the high technology of the Air Force and Navy and the Army and the Marines still look like the grunts."

Southern Illinois recruiters meet goals

By Jennifer Polk
Staff Writer

Local representatives of the U.S. Army in Southern Illinois are the Army recruiters and the members of the Army ROTC on the college campuses.

The Army recruiting station for Jackson County is located in Marion. It is small, housed in a few rooms at a small shopping plaza, and shares its offices with a Navy recruiting station. Its recruiting area is about 3,000 square miles, making it the largest district in Illinois.

Four recruiters cover more than 20 high schools in Jackson, Williamson, Union, Saline and Franklin counties. One recruiter operates solely at the colleges in the district, another recruits only for the U.S. Army Reserves. There is one hometown recruiter's aide, an enlistee fresh from boot camp, who returns to help recruit in the vicinity of his or her hometown.

A recruiter's job, according to Sgt. Wayne Stevens, commander of the Marion station, is to fill the ranks of the all-volunteer Army. It is a job that has become easier in the last two years.

A recruiter has to fill monthly quotas based on the population of the district and the number of people the Army needs to fill the ranks that month. In large population areas, recruiters may have run into problems filling those quotas in the past, but recruiting difficulties aren't severe in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

"We've been able to meet our objectives," said Lt. Col. Joseph Lukitsch, commander of the District Recruiting Headquarters in St. Louis. "I think it has a lot to do with the quality of recruiters that we have working in this area and the basic feeling of the people. But I'd be less than honest if I said that the downturn in the economy hasn't had something to do with it."

The quotas—they like to call them "objectives"—for a recruiter in Southern Illinois average two recruits per month. The monthly totals of the college recruiters and the reserves recruiter are figured into the totals of other stations, so only the recruits of the four high school recruiters are figured into the Marion station's total.

The Army may have an image problem elsewhere, but not in Southern Illinois. The Army is more trusted here, recruiters say. High school seniors and juniors, the target group of most recruiters, are more apt to listen to Army recruiters. It is an atmosphere that one recruiter calls "more patriotic."

"We get a lot of cooperation from the high schools and communities down here," said Sgt. Wayne Stevens, commander of the Marion recruiting station. "It's pretty different from some city stations."

Recruiters who get enlistees from high schools have an approach that's different from that of those who recruit from colleges. High school recruiters center primarily on the educational benefits and trade experience the Army can offer and the wide variety of travel and lifestyles the enlistee can choose from.

The college recruiters, aware of the keen competition that businesses and industries present, generally focus on the wide variety of technical and specialized careers the Army can offer.

Stevens said he doesn't try to "sell the Army" because a person must have a need or desire to join in the first place. He will talk to a potential recruit over the phone and get the necessary information, but the background of a recruit must be checked to eliminate those who have criminal records or are unsuitable because of physical or mental reasons.

Like any civilian corporation, the Army has a sales book. In Stevens' case, it's filled with lists of job skills and pictures of Army life that range from combat duty to life in the mountains of Germany. He will talk about the possibilities of being stationed in Europe, Hawaii or in the states, pointing out that Army life "is not all uniforms."

He mentions gymnasiums, saunas, ski resorts and beaches. He emphasizes the contract that recruits sign with the Army—the one that guarantees them their choice of assignment if they qualify and if it's available. He saves the talk about pay until last "because they know they'll get paid, but they want to know what job skills the Army can offer first." As much as possible, Stevens tries to talk to the parents of potential recruits. He works through the high schools in each county—making presentations on career days and speaking to assemblies.

"I don't want anybody coming back after their enlistment is up and saying that I did them wrong," he said.

The Armed Forces Vocational Aptitude Test (ASVAT) scores for the St. Louis district are among the highest in the nation. The ASVAT is made up of 106 questions which are scored on a percentile grid. The rock-bottom acceptance score for a high school senior is a 16. The most desirable score is 30, or 70 percent and above.

The average monthly quota for the district is between 400 and 450, and that includes totals image problem, the Senate Committee on Armed Services investigated recruiting irregularities late in 1979. They heard reports that recruiters cheated when filling quotas, helped potential enlistees with military testing and lied about the backgrounds of recruits. Before the investigation was over, 371 recruiters had lost their jobs.

There was an overhaul in the recruiting ranks. "They started promoting men straight out of combat units right into recruiting," Lukitsch said.

Lukitsch was promoted to command the U.S. Army District Recruiting Office in St. Louis two years ago. Prior to the promotion, he was a battalion commander. Even though he served three tours in Vietnam with the Green Berets, Lukitsch calls recruiting "the most challenging job" he's ever had.

"You hear all kinds of horror stories about the recruiting jobs," he said.

The St. Louis Recruiting District encompasses nearly 64,000 square miles in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. It consists of 45 recruiting stations, including one in Marion.

Recruiting techniques took another shift when, in 1980, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., tacked a mandate onto the Defense Appropriations Act requiring 70 percent of all recruits to be high school graduates, allowing only 30 percent to be non-graduates. Prior to that mandate, Army recruiting was approximately 70 percent non-high school graduates and 30 percent graduates.

"It cert 'nly didn't make my job any easier," Lukitsch said. "The days of the easy market are over. We can't just snatch people out of pool halls and pizza parlors and sign them up for the Army. We have to center on the hard market."

To reach what's called "the hard market,"—the high school graduates and college students—the Army had to come up with completely new advertising campaigns designed to emphasize the technical qualities of the Army.

N.W. Ayers, the advertising agency that has handled the Army's account since 1967, put together a collection of advertising packages designed to combine a personal message with the message of the Army's increased technology.

Ann Winfrey, chief of advertising and promotion for the Army district headquarters in St. Louis, said the new campaigns are people-oriented. The first effort to change the image of the Army occurred after the Vietnam War, when the Army became an all-volunteer organization, she said.

"The first of the post-Vietnam war campaigns was 'The Army Wants To Join You,' and then came 'Join The People Who Join The Army.' The 'Be All That You Can Be' campaign was instituted in January of this year. The Army conducted interviews with focus groups—18 to 21-year-olds—and these slogans were found to have a high recall value. We try to emphasize that the Army is people and not just the 'big green machine.'"

Winfrey said that 60 percent of the Army's national advertising is done through the broadcast media. More money is spent in large market areas such as St. Louis and Chicago than in Southern Illinois. But Winfrey said the campaigns do not differ in theme.

The new campaigns that will be launched this year will focus on the increased educational benefits the Army offers, Winfrey said. A secondary emphasis will be the cash bonus incentives for enlistment and selected U.S. Army Reserve programs.

In a recent Daily Egyptian, a full-page advertisement, under the headline "What Has The Army Got To Offer A Bright Person Like You?" contained a list of career and educational opportunities.

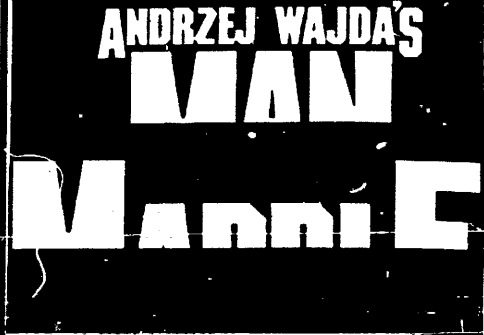

Winfrey said that advertising is important to the Army but "no one makes a decision based solely on the advertising campaigns."

"The professionalism of the recruiter has a lot to do with it. They're handpicked by the Army to do the job they do," she said.

for both the active Army and the Army Reserves. In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, the St. Louis district recruited 5,296 individuals—3,732 for the active Army and 1,474 for the Army Reserves.

Webb, commander of the ROTC on campus.

Webb said there's no guarantee that a cadet will get a commission after college.

"Nothing is automatic around here," she said. "The college doesn't guarantee a degree to every student. We can't guarantee a commission."

Sgt. Randal "Hutch" Hutchinson is in charge of Army recruiting for the college campuses of Southern Illinois. Though he "hangs his hat" at the Marion station, he is officially attached to the area recruiting headquarters in Granite City. He makes regular rounds of SIU-C, SIU-E, Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg, Rend Lake College and John A. Logan College.

At SIU-C he works through the Career Planning and Placement Center, talking to potential recruits who make appointments there. He will meet students at the Student Center, their dormitory rooms—wherever they feel most comfortable.

"The image problem really comes into play in dealing with college students," he said. "I think there is a tendency to believe that a college degree lifts a person above the Army. My job is to convey the fact that the Army is a highly technical and computerized branch of the service. To run it we need intelligent, highly trained people."

The ROTC at SIU-C is in its second year. It is an academic program operating out of the Department of Military Science and offers classes on the freshman and sophomore level to all students. Classes offered on the junior and senior level are open only to those who have had their first two years of classes or have been to the ROTC basic camp. Eighty cadets are in the program this year. Twenty of them are women.

"The cadet is still a college student," said Capt. Marcis

Reagans enter hospital for routine examinations

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Reagan and his wife Nancy, both suffering colds, checked into a VAD suite at a military hospital Thursday for an overnight stay and their first routine, full-scale medical examinations since moving into the White House.

The president, of course, was under intensive care for several days last spring when he was wounded by gunfire March 30. But he had not undergone a full preventive checkup since 1979.

A team of 14 physicians, representing various specialties, was assembled at the National Naval Medical Center in nearby Bethesda, Md., to conduct and an "a wide battery of tests Reagans, said spokesman Larry Speakes.

Before leaving the White House, Reagan said he felt "just fine" despite the head cold that has made his voice hoarse the last few days.

As he walked to the Marine helicopter that carried him to the hospital, the president declared "I haven't got any problems. They're going to tell you how healthy I am."

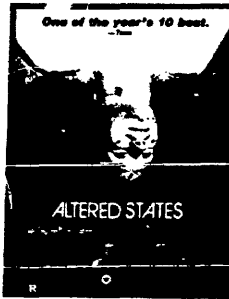

Minutes after arriving at the facility, the president and his wife went separate ways for X-rays, Speakes reported.

Even before entering the hospital, the Reagans were pronounced in good health by Dr. Daniel Ruge, the White House physician.

Design of new library detailed in cramped quarters of old one

By Bob Boardurant
Staff Writer

It was apparent to everyone attending the Friends of the Carbondale Public Library meeting why a new library building is being constructed. In order to hold a public presentation on plans for the new building Wednesday, the record racks in the old building had to be moved from the main floor to make room.

To a group of about 12 people, Library Director Ray Campbell showed slides of the blueprints prepared by Harry Weese and Associates of Chicago, detailing the building's design.

The building is to be built where Brush School formerly was, on Main Street between University Avenue and Poplar Street. $1.725 million in general obligation bonds was issued in September to pay for the structure.

The plans for the three-story, split-level structure were reviewed and accepted by the Carbondale Library Board earlier this month. The slides viewed Wednesday reflected the changes the board had suggested to the architects earlier.

Campbell said the steps which had been planned for the front of the library facing Main Street would be eliminated, after hearing from some members of the Carbondale Planning Commission.

He also said that the most recent floor plan of the building had been received, with wider spacing between the shelves to make them accessible to wheelchairs.

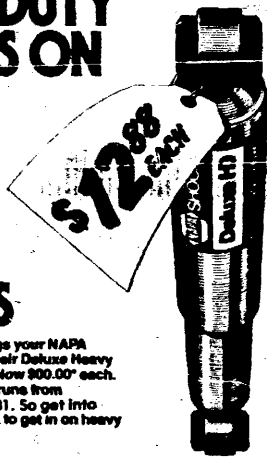

Campbell said that if plans continued as scheduled, construction could begin by February, 1982.

Discussion at the meeting dealt with the inverted skylight planned for the center of the roof and concerns about leakage and the amount of light the skylight would let in.

"We've been assured it's the best way to get that kind of light we need into the building," Campbell told the group.

Exhibit of Fink's artwork opens in Faner museum

The artwork of Herbert Fink, Art Department chairman, will be on display in the North Gallery of the University Museum in Faner Hall Oct. 30 through Nov. 20.

The exhibit will open with a public reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday. Regular museum hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. Fink's work falls into three categories: landscapes, figure studies and allegorical representations.

Fink became interested in landscape after his arrival in Southern Illinois in 1961. His female figure studies reflect the classical tradition within which he works. The allegories enter a world of the fantastic, where Fink turns the irrational into the seemingly rational.

Admission to the exhibit is free.

The Undergraduate Student Organization Presents: "How to Have a Happy Halloween Without Making Someone Else's Miserable" (or: The Do's and Don'ts of Halloween at SIU)

- DO: Have a good time.
- DON'T: Spill your beer or get sick on your friends—or enemies.
- DO: Have a drink or two (only root beer, of course).
- DO: Press out before you get home...and make sure you're in the right house.
- DO: Be sure to write your address on your hand so you can find your way home (you may want to draw a map too).
- DON'T: Sign guests into the towers who you are not prepared to assume responsibility for.
- DO: Dress up or scare your friends.
- DON'T: Be a "gay ghost" (wear a pink sheet)—unless you have big friends.
- DO: Help other people out — lend a hand where you can.
- DON'T: Beat up your friends — or enemies.
- DO: Lock the doors to your car and your home.
- DON'T: Take advantage of dummies who disregard the above suggestion—respect others' property.
- DO: Be considerate to fellow students and Carbondale residents.
- DON'T: Abuse others' rights.
- DO: Use the recycling bins on Illinois Avenue.
- DON'T: Litter.
- DO: Put trash where it belongs (no, that is not what streets and sidewalks were designed for).
- DON'T: Play King Kong for Halloween and climb on buildings. It also is not advisable to stand around under someone who chooses not to abide by this recommendation.

Full (of it) Warranty

The Undergraduate Student Organization guarantees that students who follow these simple guidelines will have an extremely enjoyable, memorable and momentous Halloween. If you are not completely satisfied, just return your Halloween to us in its original wrapping...but sorry, no money back.

Don't let your beer cans get wasted just because you do. Recycling bins will be set up in the lots of the First National Bank and the Standard Service Station.

Dog proves to be finicky by swallowing padlocks

Rascal proved this week that he can be a very picky eater. The puppy turned down Milk Bones and rawhide chews. He wanted to lock onto something very large and very solid. The key to his appetite? Padlocks.

The 1-year-old Labrador retriever added new meaning to his name this week after Carbondale veterinarian Dr. Leon Striegel surgically removed seven brass padlocks from the dog's stomach.

"Been no sign of anything wrong with him," said Rascal's owner, Charles Huthmacher, who runs the Bluff Springs Kennels near Grand Tower in Southern Illinois.

The dog and the padlocks are all resting comfortably following the surgery. Rascal will stay at the vet's for three or four days "and be on a very bland diet," Striegel said. The locks, all of which came out intact, will be cleaned up and put back in use, said Striegel. Huthmacher said locks used on the dog cages had been missing "over a short period of time," and when they did, the kennel caretaker simply got out a replacement.

As for Rascal's tastes, Striegel said, "That dog just liked the way they chewed, and when he got tired of chewing on them, he swallowed them."

Recommendation presented for seat
on County Board

Robert E. Edwards, 68, has been recommended for a seat on the Jackson County Board by District 3 Republican precinct committeemen.

If approved by a majority of the board at its Nov. 18 meeting, Edwards would take the place of Kay King Blackwell.

Blackwell has resigned from the board to become director of a Flora nursing home. Edwards resides in Murphysboro.

GSC

The new guidelines, approved Oct. 14, limit the GSC to spending 60 percent of its fee money on professional development activities, such as students attending conferences, 10 percent on university-wide events, such as speakers, and 30 percent on special support activities, which don't fall under the other two categories.

While the GSC was operating under its previous guidelines, it allocated $2,115 for university-wide activities. The 10 percent guideline would limit the council to spending $7,500.

Nelson said the council could not allocate any more money to university-wide events.

Accident victim's condition improves

An SIU-C student remains in satisfactory condition at Firmin DeLoge Hospital in St. Louis suffering from injuries he received when he was hit by a car last Saturday evening on South University Drive.

Robert J. McQuay, of 4B-1 Lewis Park Apartments and a senior in electronics, suffered a fractured leg in the incident and his condition is improving, a hospital spokesman said. It had been feared that McQuay's leg would have to be amputated but surgery was performed and his leg was saved.

Carbondale Police arrested Randall Scott Gibson, 21, of R.R. 2 Murphysboro, and charged him with reckless conduct in connection with the accident. Gibson posted $100 bond and was released from the Jackson County Jail.

Police said that Gibson was turning south on to University Drive from Hospital Drive and allegedly exchanged obscenities with McQuay and two other men who were walking near the road. He then allegedly drove to West College Street where he backed his vehicle up at a high rate of speed and lost control of the car, striking McQuay and pinning him between a parked car.

Forestry Club ready for rugged day in Hell

By Marie Wolf
Student Writer

For the past four weeks, SIU-C forestry students have been rolling logs, chopping wood, splitting matches and throwing logs in anticipation of a day in Hell.

They hope their hard work pays off Saturday when Forestry Club members compete in the annual Midwestern Foresters Conclave at Hell, Mich.

SIU-C will have 30 entrants, led by co-captains Bob Hingtgen and Ben Irwin, competing in 13 lumberjack events.

"We'll be competitive and we'll have outstanding individuals in several events," said Irwin. "Some of our strongest events will be speed chopping, log rolling, match splitting and the one-man bucksaw."

Speed chopping consists of cutting through a 10- by 10-inch block of wood with a special speed chopping ax. Last year's winning time was 35 seconds.

In log rolling, two-person teams using peaveys—a poker-type tool—roll a 16-foot log 200 feet through an L-shaped course. The winning time last year was 1:49.

Other events include the pulp toss, tobacco spitting, dendrology (identification of trees), chain throw, compass and traverse (following an unknown course) and bolt throw.

Haunted house, parade include youngsters in Halloween spirit

by John Schrag
Staff Writer

Although the annual celebration on South Illinois Avenue has given Carbondale the reputation of a midwestern mecca for college students during Halloween weekend, many citywide activities are planned for the younger generation as well.

The old Bank of Carbondale building at the corner Main and Washington streets will house a variety of ghastly guests this weekend thanks to the Carbondale Jaycees, who have turned the structure into a haunted house.

Robert Summers, president of the Jaycees, said that for a $1 donation, visitors can wander through a cemetery and view a mummy's tomb, a guillotine, and murder and Star Wars scenes, while mingling with Frankenstein, Dracula, a werewolf and assorted ghouls, ghosts and goblins.

Summers said people of all ages are welcome to the haunted house, which will be open from 7 p.m. until midnight Friday and Saturday. Some of the Jaycees' haunted houses in past years have drawn as many as 2,500 visitors, Summers said.

The Carbondale Library will show two Halloween films Saturday afternoon for viewers in the third grade or older. "The Devil and Daniel Mouse" and "The Murder at the Baskervilles," will be shown from 1 to 2:30 p.m. A preschool story hour will be at the library from 10 to 10:30 a.m. for children through the second grade. The "Humbly Witch," a story by Lorna Balian, will be read.

The Carbondale Park District is sponsoring a Halloween parade and costume contest Friday for children through the third grade. Mary Hines, who coordinated the event, said the parade will leave from Bleyer Field at 3:45 p.m. The paraders will travel south on Bleyer Drive, west on Main Street and Old Main Street, and then north on Glenview Drive to Turley Park, where costumes will be judged. Hines said the event should end by 5:15 p.m. In case of rain, the costume contest will be at 4 p.m. at the Carbondale Park District Community Center, 208 W. Elm St.

The Carbondale Police Department advises trick-or-treaters to avoid costumes that reduce vision or are hard to see. They suggest that youngsters stay on sidewalks, carry a flashlight and wear reflective tape. Police advise parents to inspect all treats their children bring home.

Recession signal

NEW YORK (AP) — A new recession signal dealt the stock market a moderate setback in a wet session Thursday.

Declines in open-market interest rates and a prime-rate reduction by a large Chicago bank produced only a short-lived favorable response from lock traders.

As the market opened, the overnight reported a 2.7 percent drop in the index of leading economic indicators for September.

Economic decline predicted by index

WASHINGTON (AP) — An "especially steep plunge" in a key government index foretells a national economy already in a mild recession sinking even deeper in the next few months, a top Commerce Department official said Thursday.

"The only real question is how far it is going to drop," said Assistant Secretary Robert Dederick.

But Dederick and other analysts inside and outside the government say they don't foresee a downturn as sharp as last year's recession.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that the government's index of Leading Indicators fell 2.7 percent in September, the biggest drop since April 1980. Since April 1981, the index has fallen 5.5 percent.

Dederick said the new decline "an especially steep plunge" in the index, which is designed to forecast future trends of the economy.

"The report strongly suggests that industrial production will be sliding into the autumn and that real gross national product will be down for the third successive quarter. Any upturn is unlikely before early 1982."

"The iffy question," he said, "is whether it is going to turn around in the first quarter or the second" of next year.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that over-all business productivity fell at an annual rate of 1.9 percent in the third quarter, the biggest decline since the first quarter of 1978.

And, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker told senators on Capitol Hill that it is "quite possible" the economy was in a recession.

Tax laws to be discussed in conference

The meaning of President Reagan's economic program to those whose business is keeping track of taxes is one of the main topics of the 24th Annual Tax Conference Saturday at the Student Center.

The program is sponsored by SIU-C's Department of Accountancy and the Southern Chapter of the Illinois Society of CPAs. Its purpose is to update the tax-law knowledge of certified public accountants, lawyers, bankers, investment counselors, insurance salesmen and others.

The program includes an analysis of implications of the Economic Recovery Act of 1981, an inside look at the Internal Revenue Service by a former IRS commissioner and a discussion of what to do if a client is accused of tax fraud.

Conference registration opens at 8:30 a.m. in the Gallery Lounge. All conference sessions will be in the Student Center ballrooms. SIU-C President Albert Somit will welcome participants at a 12:30 p.m. luncheon.

Water polo team to hold tourney

by Jim Cagle
Staff Writer

An Oct. 16 editorial in the Daily Egyptian included a line that read, "It is time for athletics to start cutting things like water polo, golf and soap-bubble blowing."

Water polo Coach Bob Steele, said that water polo is "far from a bubble blowing sport." And proof of that can be witnessed at the Recreation Center pool Saturday as the Salukis host the Halloween Animalbrill Polo Tournament.

SIU-C will play three matches in the four-team tourney. The Salukis take on Southeast Missouri State at 9 a.m., Purdue at noon, and Arkansas at 4:15 p.m.

"If I could return to a full compliment of scholarships for swimming, I'd probably be the first to say that polo should be reduced to club status," Steele said. "But as long the University says that we have a water polo team, it's our obligation to produce the best team we can with what we've got."

The athletes are dedicated to their sport, averaging around 18 hours of practice a week. That includes practices at 8 a.m. The early practices are necessary, according to Steele, because water polo demands a great deal of conditioning.

Calling water polo "Animalball" may be a bit of an overstatement. But the inference is accurate. Water polo is a rough, grueling sport.

"It's probably as physical a game as there is that's played without some kind of protective gear," Steele said.

Water polo is one of only few sports where fouling is a major part of the game, according to Steele. A player uses a foul as a defensive weapon, to slow an opponent's advancing of the ball. Fouls are legal, unless they are deemed intentional or delivered in an overaggressive manner. A player called for an illegal foul is ejected from the game for 30 seconds.

The Salukis are an aggressive defensive team. Their record is 6-11 overall, 4-7 in the conference. The top eight teams in the 14-team Mideast Water Polo League are invited to the conference tourney. A victory over conference foe Purdue would keep the Salukis in the running for one of the last two or three available spots.

possible," she said. "We wanted to win two tournaments plus our own invitationals. We didn't win the Southern Classic, so this emphasizes the fact that we have to put things together."

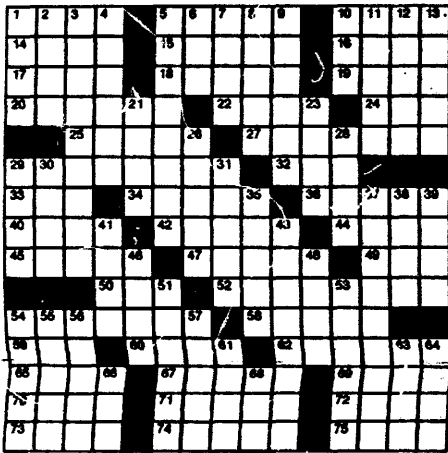

The five-team tournament features Indiana, Miami of Ohio, Oral Roberts University, North Texas State and SIU-C. Friday, SIU-C plays Oral Roberts at 6:30 p.m. and faces Indiana at 8 p.m. Saturday, the Selukis play Miami of Ohio at 11:30 a.m. and North Texas at 1 p.m. The champion-hip game is scheduled for 3 p.m.

Miami of Ohio has a 37-6 record and won the Mid America Conference title last week. The Redskins may be the tournament favorite although SIU-C has won both meetings between the two teams in previous years.

Oral Roberts comes to Carbondale with a 24-10 record and has won the Kansas State Invitational and placed fourth in its own invitational last weekend.

Both Indiana and North Texas are struggling this season. The Hoosiers have a 4-14 record but pulled off an upset recently by beating Illinois. The Illini are considered to be one of the strongest teams in the state, Huster said.

North Texas is having a lackluster season with a 13-20 record. The Mean Green is an apt name for the team since its starting lineup often consists of six freshmen.

Even etiquette in this rough and tumble sport differs sharply from sportsmanship seen in other sports, the four-year veteran said. "No one on the team can talk or gripe with the referee. Only the captain of the team can talk to him," he said. "The referee is treated almost like a god out on the field."
 "Rugby is a gentlemen's game oriented towards controlled violence," Hanetho said with tongue in cheek.
 According to Hanetho, the club's 5-2 record is due to an aggressive and controlled game plan, and a lot of working out between games. He attributes much of the team's success to the "pack," the players who regain the ball from the opposition and lateral it to the backs. The backs, Hanetho added, have been playing excellent rugby, especially with the return of senior John Glotzbach, who suffered a shoulder injury in late September. Glotzbach, described by his player-coach as one of the best fullbacks in the Midwest, carries the same basic rugby philosophy as Hanetho.

"I'VE PLAYED A LOT OF SPORTS, but rugby is more than just sport," Glotzbach said. "Since we're a club sport, everybody has to do well on their own and, in turn, the team will do well together."
 And like Hanetho, Glotzbach feels that the team is rewarded by individual efforts turned into team successes.
 "We are a tight group of guys who have to know each other's reactions to succeed. We're just as tight off the field as well as on it," he said.
 And, according to the senior fullback, a major part of rugby etiquette is showing the visiting teams a good time when they're down for a tournament. "We always entertain the other teams when they come down," Glotzbach said. "It's one of the more fun parts of the sport. I expect a pretty even tournament," Glotzbach said. "If we stay healthy, we should outclass any of the teams coming down this weekend."

Rugby club prepares for 'ghoulish' weekend

By Bob Moran
Staff Writer

HALLOWEEN MIGHT BE BILLED as this weekend's most exciting participation sport, but don't tell that to the members of the SIU-C Men's Rugby Club—they won't believe you.

The club will host the third annual All Ghouls Tournament Saturday and Sunday, which will feature the St. Louis Hornets, the Decatur Rugby Club and college clubs from Illinois State, Eastern Illinois, Western Illinois, Western Kentucky and Southeast Missouri.

The SIU-C rugger's first match begins at 12:30 p.m. Saturday and, if they win, they will play again at 3:30 p.m. The championship game will be at 2 p.m. Sunday, preceded by the consolation game.

According to Player-Coach Dave Hanetho, most people don't understand rugby and have misconceptions about the sport. "Most people think that the game is played by crazy people running around wildly and smashing into each other," Hanetho said. "That's not it at all. It's actually very much a gentlemen's sport."

An older cousin of North American football, rugby is a fast-moving game played with two 15-man teams, minus padding, on a field similar in size to a soccer field. Play does not stop throughout the two 30-minute halves. The ball, somewhat like an oversized football, is driven toward the opponent's goal by running and throwing it laterally to teammates, or dropkicking it downfield.

Meanwhile, the opposition tries to gain control of the ball by tackling the ballcarrier or recovering a kick. Four points are awarded for a "try," placing the ball in the opponent's end-zone, and two additional points are given for the kick through the goal posts after the try. Penalty kicks and dropkicks are three points each.

ALTHOUGH THIS SOUNDS LIKE an hour full of broken noses and cracked vertebrae, Hanetho believes that rugby is less dangerous than football.

"In football, players wear a hard plastic helmet which is almost like a weapon," he said. "Sure, you'll have your share of cuts, bumps and bruises in rugby, but not as many major injuries that you'd have in football."

Spikers continue quest for first tourney victory

By Michelle Schwent
Sports Editor

The volleyball team will be searching for its first tournament championship this weekend, part of a pre-season goal which has been elusive so far this season.

The Salukis had a goal of winning two tournaments, but so far SIU-C has not made a dent in that objective. This weekend's Saluki Invitational, to be held Friday and Saturday at the Arena, is one of the last three chances SIU-C has of reaching the two-championship plateau. The Salukis will play in the Western Michigan Invitational Nov. 6 and 7, and the Illinois Classic in Chicago Nov. 13 and 14.

SIU-C has not competed since its dismal showing in the Illinois Invitational Oct. 16 and 17, where the team failed to advance out of its pool. The 18-9-1 Salukis had a couple days of relief from practice but are rested and ready to play this weekend, according to Coach Debbie Hunter.

"We have had no competition for a week and we took a couple days off altogether," Hunter said. "I'm sensing the players are quite anxious to play again."

"We've got play well as have to be as errorless as

Saluki defenders to be tested by Sycamore passing attack

By Rod Farlow
Staff Writer

The Saluki football team resumes its run at the Missouri Valley Conference title at 12:30 p.m. Sunday at Indiana State.

The Salukis are 3-1 in the Valley, the Sycamores are 2-2-1. All three of the Salukis' remaining games are conference battles.

"They probably feel some disappointment," Dempsey said of the Sycamores. "They were picked to finish high in the conference. They'll be up for this game, up for the spoiler role."

The Sycamores lost two conference games, by a total of four points, to Drake and Tulsa. Both losses were the result of missed kicks by place kicker Dennis Teeparden.

Outside of the kicking lapses, the Sycamore offense has played well, ranking first in the conference in rushing offense and fifth in passing. Tailback Eric Robinson is third in the conference in rushing, even though he missed a game with a bruised knee.

"They have five or six good backs they rotate in and out," Dempsey said.

Dempsey expects Sycamore quarterback Reggie Allen to throw the ball a lot and to start throwing early. The senior has completed 58 passes for 899 yards and four touchdowns.

"If they don't throw the ball on their first play, they will on their second," Dempsey said. "They call around 26 or 27 pass plays a game."

Robinson is the leading ISU receiver with 21 receptions, and he's followed closely by three teammates.

Senior tight end Hubert Moore has 15 catches and two touchdowns. Senior split end Eddie Ruffin has 19 catches and a touchdown.

"Those three guys might be the best receivers in the conference," Dempsey said. "They're all fast and quick, real skill players."

Besides their pass-catching ability, Wilson and Ruffin have done well rushing. Taking the ball on reverses, Wilson has rushed for 107 yards and two touchdowns and Ruffin has picked up 63 yards.

"The reverse affects the defensive end," Dempsey said. "An aggressive end like we have in John Harper can get pinned in on a reverse. The reverse takes away a lot of your pursuit."

Because of the threat of the reverse, Harper and other Saluki defenders will have to stick pretty close to the place they start each play, Dempsey said.

"Indiana State can fake a reverse, they can pass off the reverse. It's been hard for us to practice against this stuff in practice because we don't have guys who can pull it off like Indiana State does," Dempsey said.

Two Saluki offensive players hope to pull off good enough performances to pass milestones. Quarterback Rick Johnson needs 54 yards passing to reach 1,000 and tailback Walter Poole needs 26 ground yards to hit 1,000.

Harriers to meet Valley foes

By Doug Applebaugh
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's cross country team will be out to defend its Missouri Valley Conference championship Saturday at Terre Haute, Ind.

Coach Lew Hartzog, whose teams have won the race three times in the last five years, said that the competition will probably be narrowed to three teams—Wichita State, Illinois State and SIU-C.

Hartzog is most concerned about Wichita State, and he has reason to be.

The Shockers, who placed second to the Salukis last year, have produced some impressive results this season. Coached by Herb Wilson, they have finished second in three major invitationals—Arkansas' Razorback Invitational, the Oklahoma State Jamboree and their own Gold Classic.

"They've got just about everyone back from last year," said Hartzog, "and they were tough last year."

The Shockers placed six runners in the top 20 at last year's conference meet.

The Salukis have faced Illinois State twice already this season. On Sept. 18 the Redbirds crushed Hartzog's crew 21-40 at Midland Hills, but the Salukis rebounded by winning the Illinois Intercollegiate Championship at Normal two weeks ago.

"I still think we have to consider them," said Hartzog. "If they get on to a good race, they are awfully tough."

"The kids know Illinois State well enough to know that we have to pay close attention to them."

Illinois State has an added incentive to win the conference meet: This is the Redbirds' debut season in the MVC.

Coach John Coughlan's team captured the championship at the Notre Dame Invitational on Oct. 2, and took third to SIU-C and Illinois at the state meet.

West Texas State, which placed fourth last year, will not be as strong this year, said Hartzog. And host Indiana State, last year's third-place finisher, may be too young.

"They are too young," Hartzog said. "They've got a good freshman, Tye Wolf, who just might be good enough to make a run at an individual place."

Drake, although not sporting much of a team, has two-year defending champ Vern Iwanich.

"Iwanich is a superstar for Drake," said the Saluki coach. "They didn't have a very good team last year, but that young man is incredible."

Bradley's Eric Huey is another of the eight runners returning from last year's MVC top 10. But as a team, Bradley probably will not be strong enough, said Hartzog.

Hartzog's only handicap going into the conference meet is Mike Choffin, who has a stress fracture in his leg. Choffin, the team's fourth runner, will be out for the season.

Hartzog will be counting on Mike Keane, Karsten Schulz, Tom Ross, Bill Moran and Tom Breen as his top five runners.

A gruesome sight above the door greets some callers.

By day he's Joe Krack. By night he's the Mummy from the Tomb.

If this guy (Ted Christenson) invites you to sit, maybe you shouldn't.

Spooks you can bank on There's great fun in being scared. If you know you're going to be scared. If you're young enough to believe—maybe half way—...at goblins, witches, spooks and other such creatures do come creeping forth—who knows where from?—at Halloween. For those young enough to enjoy a fright there are not only goblins and spooks but monsters of several varieties and a mummy (not the mothering kind) come to life in a haunted house in downtown Carbondale.

It's a creation of the Carbondale Jaycees, who not only put it together but who do the haunting. It's in the old Bank of Carbondale building, Main and Washington, and those who think they're too old for spooks can make of that whatever they wish. The haunts will be evoking shrieks and causing shivers nightly from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday and 7 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday. Scores come at $1 a head.

Fire, fog and eerie lights are real enough. Bruce Wallace shows how it's Jone backstage.

After you've been haunted, perhaps you'd react this way, too.

Energy monitor to use 'big alarm clock'

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

If weatherizing your house to keep energy costs down seems like a hassle, imagine trying to weatherize Faner Hall.

Charles Williams has, and it's not easy.

"Faner's a pain," Williams, SIUC's coordinator of energy conservation, said. "We put guards over the thermostats, and people break them to adjust the temperature themselves. That's why some parts of the building get hot while other parts are freezing."

Faner is only one part of Williams' worries. A 1981 graduate of SIUC's electrical engineering program, he stayed on and is now responsible for overseeing energy consumption in each of the campus' 137 permanent buildings. It's a lot of energy, and a big job.

"There's so much to do, some times it seems like I won't catch up," Williams said. "I have to just sit down and catch my breath occasionally." Williams started at the job in June, but SIUC has a relatively long history of energy conservation. The conservation program was begun in 1973, and the University was one of the first to use a computer to monitor campus electrical use.

Williams, whose office is

Charles Williams, checking on energy use on campus

located in the Physical Plant complex, got the job of coordinator because of his familiarity with the campus and his engineering studies.

"I worked here for several years while I was a student, and I got to know the different buildings very well," he said. "I did pretty well in school, too, although I didn't blaze any trails."

Williams, a Murphysboro native, is now working on developing an advanced computer system which will monitor and control ventilating and air conditioning systems in most major campus buildings.

"The new system will check building temperatures and look for areas which are out of the proper temperature range," Williams said. "It will then set off an alarm clock back here."

The system will be completed in a few months, according to Williams. It will allow University workers at the Physical Plant to set automatic schedules for the fans and pumps used to heat and cool buildings all over campus.

"We'll be able to program it to control schedules of energy consumption in places like Faner and the Communications Building," he said. "It will work sort of like a big, more complicated alarm clock."

Conservation efforts now center around finding out where energy is used on campus and finding ways to cut consumption while keeping the campus running efficiently, Williams said.

"We're questioning administration people in the 17 major buildings on campus to see what their needs are, when they use energy, and how much," Williams said.

Work to reduce energy consumption is done in two general categories, according to Williams. One consists of low-cost, "quick-fix" solutions, and the other involves more expensive capital projects.

"By quick fixes, we mean things like changing thermostat settings, reducing lighting levels, inexpensive things like that," Williams said. "The housing people, for instance, have installed reduced flow shower heads, and that saved on our hot water use."

Capital projects involve larger investments for major remodeling, or the purchase of large items of equipment. Economic difficulties restrict these kinds of projects, according to Williams.

"Money's tight," he said. "You can only do so much on a limited income."

In some of the newer buildings on campus, such as the Law School Building and the School of Technical Careers, the flow of warm air to different rooms can be adjusted for the size of the room, which helps save money, according to Williams.

The remodeling at Davies Gymnasium includes a warm air recovery system for the gymnasium and the locker rooms, which will reduce heating costs there.

The most difficult part of his job is a much more basic problem than any of these, though, according to Williams. It's just getting people to help out.

"The biggest, and hardest, part of my job is convincing people to cooperate," he said.

FTC chief's ideas worry consumerists

By Louise Cook
Associated Press Writer

Several leading consumer activists say there will be a flood of false advertising and shoddy products if the government adopts proposals by the new head of the Federal Trade Commission for less regulation of industry.

"It's horrifying," said Karen Burstein, chairman of the New York State Consumer Protection Board.

Rhoda H. Karpatkin, executive director of Consumers Union, the product-testing organization, said policies advocated by James C. Miller would move the country "back into the age of 'Let the buyer beware,' or maybe even, 'Let the buyer be milked.'"

Miller was named chairman of the FTC two weeks ago. He previously worked in the Office of Management and Budget and was executive director of President Reagan's Task Force on Regulatory Relief.

Miller said at a news conference that the FTC should review and possibly discard its 11-year-old rule requiring advertisers to substantiate their claims. He said that the cost of such proof is expensive for companies and their customers. He also said "imperfect products" should not necessarily be eliminated.

"Consumers are not as gullible as many people and many regulators tend to think they are," Miller said, adding that shoppers have "different preferences for defect avoidance. Those who have a low aversion to risk — relative to money — will be most likely to purchase cheap, unreliable products."

Stephen Brobeck, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America, an alliance of state and local consumer groups, said Miller's suggestions — if followed — would "open the door to the massive selling of defective, shoddy merchandise."

Anxiety lessened, validity increased

Admission test coaching OK, panel says

CHICAGO (AP) — "Coaching" high school students to achieve better scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests is not all bad, a panel of education experts says.

One member of the panel on current controversies surrounding the tests, commonly known as SAT tests, even urged that "all schools have test familiarization programs."

McKinley Nash, assistant superintendent for educational services at Evanston Township High School in Evanston, Ill., recalled that an eight-week "familiarization program" given some years ago to 60 students at the school resulted in an average 50 point gain on the math section of a preliminary SAT test (PSAT) and 30 points on the verbal section.

The coaching experiment was begun after wide discrepancies between black and white students' test scores came to light, Nash said.

Familiarizing students with SAT tests, widely used by colleges and universities in deciding which applicants to admit, "adds validity and reliability" to the tests, Nash asserted.

It does so "because it makes people with anxieties and who lack sophistication in testing able to correct those conditions and gives more youngsters a chance," he said.

The panel was part of the College Board's National Forum and annual business meeting which closed here Tuesday.

The SATs and other standardized tests are developed by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., under contract with the College Board, a non-profit association which sponsors a number of nationwide guidance and admissions services.

Pressure for increased disclosure and access to test-making procedure increased in recent years, sparked by disclosures of flawed test questions and fears that tests were biased against minorities.

Critics also say there is little relation between test scores and college performance.

The SAT "cannot predict success in college. They represent a student's accomplishment in the high school experience, on a given day," said J.P. Lisack, director of manpower studies at Purdue University.

Panelist Rex Jackson, assistant vice president for development, planning and management at the Educational Testing Service, said real concerns about how SAT tests are used remain, including how much weight is attached to scores by college admissions officers.

If consumer activist Ralph Nader's claims that the tests can't predict college success were true, he said, "the SAT wouldn't be around this long."

Over one million students will take the PSAT tests this week and the SAT tests within the next year, said Arthur Doyle, College Board midwest regional director.

This year for the first time, most students for a $6.50 fee will be able after their tests are scored to obtain a copy of the test, their answers and the correct answers, Doyle said.

"We're trying to be more responsive and more sensitive," he said. New York and California law now provides that test forms must be disclosed after the tests are taken, he added.

Family suing over home's radiation level

CHICAGO (AP) — Members of a suburban family have sued Kerr-McGee Corp. and two other companies for more than $100 million, alleging they were exposed to unsafe levels of radioactivity from a building the family bought from Kerr-McGee in 1976.

Robert and Thelma Westrom, two of their four grown children, and another West Chicago man, Roy Johnson, filed the suit in Cook County Circuit Court. They allege they were contaminated with radioactivity while renovating the building, which had been used by the company as a laboratory for the processing of radioactive materials.

The plaintiffs have experienced no sickness as a result of the radiation, but are afraid they may become sick later, said Howard Schaffner, an attorney for the firm representing them.

"At this point, all they know is that their risks of contracting cancer are substantially greater than the risks of the rest of the community. They know that they have the levels of radiation and they don't sleep very well," Schaffner said.

"The building is worth nothing now," Schaffner added.

Unsafe radiation levels were found in parts of the building in 1979 and 1980 by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Schaffner said, and the Westroms and Johnson were found to have unsafe levels of radioactivity in their bodies during testing in 1980 at Argonne National Laboratory.

They each sued Kerr-McGee and two other companies — Eberline Instrument Co., an Oklahoma corporation, and Rempe Sharpe and Associates of Geneva — for $30 million. Eberline and Rempe Sharpe allegedly checked the building for radioactivity and said it was safe before it was sold, the suit alleges.

In addition, Mr. and Mrs. Westrom and two other children with whom they bought the building say it has no resale value and are suing for what they say the building is worth — $350,000.

Schaffner said the Georgia Institute of Technology, which interpreted the Argonne findings, said the radiation in Robert Westrom's body is so high that he has a 66 percent chance of contracting bone cancer.

"The NRC went through the building and found sections were highly radioactive, well in excess of the NRC guidelines" for sale of the building for general use, Schaffner said.

The Atomic Energy Commission, the predecessor of the NRC, ruled that building was safe for general use before it was sold to the Westroms, Schaffner said. He said the Westroms have filed a claim against the government.

A Kerr-McGee spokeswoman, Donna McFarland, said the company would have no comment until it had seen the lawsuit.

The building was part of a complex of buildings that once belonged to the Lindsay Light & Chemical Co., which used radioactive thorium to manufacture mantles for gas lanterns.

Above-normal radiation levels have been found by the NRC in many spots around West Chicago, which is about 30 miles from Chicago's Loop. The suburb's residents who have been tested generally have unusually high levels of radiation in their bodies, but the Westroms' are even higher, Schaffner said.
