Survey to study Halloween profits

By Jackie Hampton
Staff Writer

A survey is under way to determine how much money will be spent by the 20,000 people who will jam the Strip and East Grand Avenue for the annual Halloween festivities.

In the past, the Chamber of Commerce and the Tourism and Convention Bureau relied on "raw numbers" to determine the amount of money injected into the economy by Halloween partiers, Jim Prowell, president of the chamber, said. The new study will consider a broader base of factors to determine the impact the event has on the local economy.

IPIRG funds endorsed by grad council

The Graduate and Professional Student Council voted to endorse the establishment and funding of the Illinois Public Interest Research Group at its meeting Wednesday afternoon.

After about 10 minutes of discussion, which was a continuation from the meeting two weeks ago, GPSC voted 33-5 to pass a resolution supporting the establishment and funding of IPIRG through a $3 per student per-semester fee and to facilitate the establishment of IPIRG.

During the discussion concerning the fee, Leo Bernardez, representative from the College of Business and Administrator of the GPSC, said, "We're not voting on the issue of the fee. All we're here to do is declare when the adoption of the concept of IPIRG or not." Trudy Hale, graduate student in political science and officer of Students for IPIRG, presented information following the group's history to the council two weeks ago. Hale predicted the charter will follow the GPSC's discussion at that meeting.

"The were very supportive," she said. "GPSC's endorsement is a major step."

Halloween ads to draw festival-goers

By Jackie Hampton

While most of the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau's $4,297 Halloween advertising budget is being spent for safety ads in local media, ads are being run elsewhere in hopes of attracting festival-goers and the money they will spend by.

"The local ads stress safety and the others are mainly to inform people of other areas that the festival-goers and the money they will spend by.

Vintages costumes not on Halloween

By Christine Cudesky
Student Writer

Once again Halloween enthusiasts in search of the perfect costume are following Carbondale's red brick road to the Longbranch Vintage Clothing Store, 100 E. Jackson.

The Longbranch has become the traditional shopping place for costumes since owner, Tom Egert, sold four truckloads of used tuxedos a week before Halloween in 1982.

"Many times people use the items they buy for Halloween to wear later, such as a nice blazer or hat," Egert said. "They serve two purposes."

Most of his customers are students, Egert said, and a lot of them want to dress as one of the Blues Brothers, a gangster, a bag lady, a bum or a soldier.

He said he has helped make matches for costumes ranging from Q-Tips to pregnant nuns.

"People can get very creative," Egert said. He gets his merchandise by going on the road. His quest for vintage clothing takes him to garage and yard sales, the Salvation Army and Goodwill stores. The store carries items, such as Navy bomber jackets, that Egert places in a "one-of-a-kind" category.

Gorilla costumes and Santa Claus suits also can be found at the store.

The store is parked from floor to ceiling with the ordinary and the unusual. Egert keeps the Longbranch well-stocked with blazers, leather and military jackets, beaded dresses, fishermen's caps, feather hats, old jewelry, snakeskin shoes, flannel shirts and Hawaiian shirts.

And if you're looking for a price tag on that one-of-a-kind dress or shirt you've discovered, don't waste your time. Egert bases his price on the item's condition, when it was made, the material it's made of and the difficulty he'll have replacing it.

Egert said he sells 99 percent of everything he collects. The Longbranch is open until 8 p.m. the week before Halloween.

Ninety percent of costume shoppers, including out-of-towners, visit his store the week before Halloween, Egert said.

Dressing up isn't a drag thanks to local thrift shops

Students are stocking up on wigs, sheets and hobby socks in ghoul and hop their way around Carbondale this weekend.

Employees of a local second hand clothing shop and a thrift shop are saying that ideas for outrageous costumes are more in demand than certain costumes.

Gayle Jefferson, employee of the Nearly New Shop in Carbondale, said she has sold a lot of wigs and Mexican and Spanish clothing. She said the store is out of "false faces" and ideas.

"I'm fresh out of ideas," she said. "I never had any to begin with."

Purchases have been ranging from black skirts to frilly blouses, Jefferson said, adding that she doesn't have any idea how the custom, or plans to make a costume out of the clothing.

Emily Morris, an employee at the Church Women United Thrift Shop, said their business has been booming.

"We had to open up on Wednesday's (a day the store is usually closed) the last two weeks to accommodate the crowded," she said. "We even had to get extra volunteers to help."

We sold a lot of hobby socks and black and white shoes," she said.

As for ideas for costumes, Morris said, "You name it - it depends on what a person's intuition is."

Today marks the third week of practice for the ISU basketball team.

"I think the last two or three days, Herrin said.

The women's basketball team has been practicing for about a week and a half.

"Last week was a lot more intense," Herrin said.

Practice is still going strong, Herrin said.

"It's hard to be perfect everyday but we still have to do a little better than the last few days," Herrin said.

The ISU women's basketball team has been practicing for the past two weeks in preparation for the upcoming season.

"We're still going to run the break and make the game exciting," Herrin said.

For the past break to be effective, the Salukis must first get the rebound. Last season, SIU-C averaged 36.1 rebounds per game. The best rebounds per game this season was 36.4.

"For us to have a successful season, we've got to improve our rebinding and we've got to play better defense," Herrin said.

"It's as simple as that." "A year ago, the Salukis defense was improved by the Missouri Valley Conference, allowing 70.7 points a game. That was the Salukis' running style but the defense is back in normal," Herrin said.

During the first two weeks, the Salukis spent a majority of practice time mapping out offensive plays. When the first team started to look sluggish on offense in Tuesday's practice, Herrin installed a sixth and seventh player on defense. Suddenly, the action was up-tempo and everyone began to bang and elbows started to fly.

The team is working hard for the tough season that lies ahead.

Women swimmers prepared for season's rough waters

The loss of several key players and its second coach in the past, seven years makes the women's swimming and diving team unstable and inexperienced.

"We're going to suffer all year until the lack of depth, but again I think that we have top dogs that will perform to their best and not allow the lack of backup to hold them back," co-owner Doug Ingram said.

Ingram, who has coached SIU-C's men's swimming and diving teams for three years, begins this season coaching both the men's and women's teams.

Former women's coach Bailey Weatherly left SIU-C for a job in Texas during the off-season.

Men's head coach Pat Dye is leaving for California to coach in a program that is sure to graduate several swimmers.

The women's swimming and diving team begins the season Nov. 1 at the Western Illinois Relays in Macomb.

Wallenberg fits role as spiker co-captain

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles about volleyball players who joined the team as walk-ons.

By Bill West
Staff Writer

The role carries a lot of respect and an equal amount of responsibility.

Senior Debbi Wallenberg accepted the role for her senior season. Wallenberg said, a lot of people were surprised to see a freshman fighting for a spot on the team.

"Boy, coming in four years ago as a walk-on, I never thought for a minute that I would be captain," Wallenberg said.

"But I love it. Being a captain in any collegiate sport, well that's great."

But being captain also meant the inconsistent play characteristic of previous seasons was no longer acceptable.

After 25 matches, Wallenberg has proven that she can be counted on.

"I've gotten a great deal of pleasure this year," Wallenberg said.

Although Illinois State was inside ISU's 30-yard line six times, the Salukis' defense allowed just three points.

"We kind of gave the game away in the last quarter," Johnson said.

Some of ISU's problems on offense can be attributed the absence of starting quarterback John Sahm, lost for the games because of a sprained left ankle that was slow in recovering.

Sahm was completed 43 passes in 94 attempts for 779 yards and two touchdowns.

"Our target is right," Rodney Porter, the Gal's leading pass receiver with 40 receptions for 683 yards and two touchdowns.

The Salukis' ground game is anchored by senior running back Charles Walls, Walls rushed for 114 yards against ISU and 72 yards against Illinois State.

Friday's game between 2-6 Indiana State and 3-6 ISU was in a league of its own looking to salvage a degree of respectability for its programs.

About 15,000 fans are expected to attend the game, the Sycamores' homecoming game, according to ISU sports information director, Jason Burgert.

"Even though the 36-0 defeat to Georgia Tech Oct. 10, didn't show it, the defense finally picked up its tempo of play," Mark Johnson, ISU sports information director, said.

"We were only down 17-0 late in the third quarter."

The following week the defense played well against Eastern Illinois in Charleston, but ISU still lost 26-14.

Official: Fear hinders AIDS understanding

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

Our fear of death makes it more difficult for us to understand the true disease, AIDS, Chet Kelly, coordinator of AIDS programs for the Illinois Department of Public Health, said.

"AIDS is a fatal condition. Most of us in Western society don't deal with the issues of death and dying very well," Kelly said Wednesday at an AIDS staff development activity in the Student Center.

"There are many fears of death become even greater when we deal with a disease that kills young people.

"We live in a time when we are not used to dealing with contagious diseases," he added. "There are many people who feel that AIDS is divine retribution for sin.

"Kelly said many people believe AIDS is a disease of specific and stigmatized groups of people such as gay men or intravenous drug users.

"Many people develop the attitude that they won't be infected because they don't know anyone in the high risk group. That is their behavior that has led to it," Kelly explained.

He added, "I think the reality is most of us interact everyday with someone who may be at risk but we don't recognize it."

In the United States, an estimated 60,000 AIDS cases have been reported since 1981. Illinois ranks fifth in the nation with 1,500 AIDS cases reported since 1981. Eight-five percent of those cases are from the Chicago metropolitan area, Kelly said.

The three most effective ways of preventing infection of the AIDS virus, said Kelly, are abstinence, mutual monogamy and practicing safer sex.

He emphasized the word safer rather than safe when referring to condoms and said "you are safer from infection. You have reduced your risks but not eliminated them entirely. What we have managed to do is imply to people that if you use a condom you won't get AIDS."

He explained that often condoms break or are used incorrectly and fail to protect.

When people are tested for AIDS, they are being tested for what is called HIV infection, Kelly said. If a person tests positive for HIV antibodies, it means they have been exposed to AIDS and may or may not develop the disease in the future.

Kelly said that HIV infection can be present without any symptoms but those who have it can still infect others. With five years of infection, approximately 25 percent of those exposed will develop AIDS, he said, adding that it usually takes a person six to eight months to give a positive reading for the infection after exposure.

Counseling for people before and after they are tested for AIDS is crucial to prevent them for the possible outcome, Kelly said. He explained that often, people who are told they are positive for the antibody change their behavior in a positive way and begin to move away from high risk to low risk activities.

AIDS cannot be spread through casual contact, Kelly stressed. He cited an experiment where 101 family members living in the same homes as AIDS victims were studied to see if their contact with household items caused infection.

Researchers looked at plates that still infect others. Washes, brushes, towels, glasses and kissed the AIDS victims on the cheeks and lips. They found that not one participant acquired HIV after six-month exposure as a result of the contact.

Ruggers kick 'bad boy' image for Halloween

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

The prospect of hundreds of rugby players descending on the Strip Halloween weekend causes little panic this year among city and University officials.

The officials expressed little fear Wednesday that the ruggers—who will be in town for the annual All Ghouls Rugby Tournament—will get carried away with their boisterousness.

However, Edward Ruerger, a University spokesman, said the University continues to be concerned about "their rugby players' continued participation off the field in the Halloween celebration. We would hope that they would keep the rugby game on the field.

Last year, the city and University tried to discourage the SIU Rugby Club from hosting the tournament. They accused the ruggers of throwing cans and engaging in other violent acts during previous Halloween festivities.

The change in heart this year stems from the rugby club's success last year in discouraging riotous behavior among players, Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, said.

"I think we got a good understanding last year of what we expect from the visiting teams and the host club," Welch said. "If they want to hold a rugby tournament here, that's fine—as long as they're responsible."

The rugby club and the office of Intramural-Recreational Sports worked together last year to make players aware of the danger of disruptive behavior during the Halloween celebration. Bill McMinn, associate director of facilities for the Recreation Center, said the awareness campaign was a success.

McMinn said a team captains meeting will be held prior to the start of the two-day tournament.

The tournament will get under way at 8 a.m. Saturday at the rugby pitches near Aoe Martin Field. Twenty-four teams from four conferences will compete in the tournament.
Alcohol awareness: a Halloween need

THE HORDES of out-of-control partiers that will converge on the Strip this Halloween weekend could save themselves and others from a lot of trouble if they heed the message of National College Alcohol Awareness Week, which ended Monday, and choose to celebrate responsibly and safely.

Alcohol, the "accepted drug" on college campuses, is king during Halloween at SIU-C. It runs in an ominous circus of events that ranges from inching through a rowdy mob jammed like sardines into the street — while consuming the most alcohol possible in the least amount of time — to playing pitch-the-beer-at-the-Derby-sign. Awareness doesn’t come until the hangovers hit home.

The crowd of 20,000 people or more is largely made up of students who come in from out of town to distort their reality among fellow partiers in the Halloween hoopla and madness. And the festivities are not without their casualties.

LAST YEAR'S HALLOWEEN celebration resulted in 250 arrests, 64 for reckless conduct and 140 for underage consumption. Police officers, trying to maintain a modicum of safety in the crowd, confiscated all of the revelers' weapons, including knives, clubs, baseball bats, saws, hammers and pitchforks.

The Memorial Hospital of Carbondale emergency room also was hopping over the weekend, with 92 Halloween-related injuries reported over the 48-hour period. None of the injuries was described as serious, but all of them could have been prevented. They consisted for the most part of scalp lacerations from off-airborn beer cans and twisted ankles from attempting to weave through the dense crowd.

This sort of publicity is what the rest of the state hears about SIU-C and has resulted in the University once again being "awarded" the rank of one party school in the state. SIU-C wasn't mentioned in the only thing high school counselors hear about the University is its annual Halloween celebration and the tens of thousands of students who attend the celebration, partiers: that just because alcohol abuse is drinking, according to Fijolek, out to be, but it isn't in between perception and reality among fellow partiers.

SIU-C WASN'T MENTIONED in any of the other categories such as "best bargain" or "best education." But if the only thing high school counselors hear about the University is its annual Halloween celebration and the mind-numbing triouction perpetrated by the tens of thousands of students who attend the celebration, then you can hardly blame them for their perceptions.

SIU-C be the party school that others make it out to be, but it isn't doing a good job of changing that reputation either. There may well be a "wide gap between perception and reality" in SIU-C's reputation, as Chancellor Lawrence Petitt said; in truth, alcohol misuse is a serious problem for students on the SIU-C campus and Halloween is one of the high points.

Barb Fijolek, coordinator of alcohol and drug education at the Wellness Center, said 99 in 100 SIU-C students drinks and one in five students has a problem with that drinking. According to Fijolek, SIU-C students on the average imbibe about 6 beers each week, adding up to a whooping total of 150,000 beers down by students overall. That's a pretty hefty leg.

THE MESSAGE of Alcohol Awareness Week is one that, unfortunately, may fall on deaf ears with Halloween partiers: that just because alcohol abuse is "accepted" at SIU-C does not mean that it is not harmful. But if just a few people get the message and choose to drink responsibly this weekend, the Halloween celebration will be all the better for it.

Good Samaritan is losing friends after helping man at risk of AIDS

A COUPLE of weeks ago, I wrote about a kind-hearted woman who gave a stranger mouth-to-mouth resuscitation after he collapsed on a Chicago sidewalk and appeared to be dying.

When the paramedics arrived, they looked at the man's arms and discovered that he was a mannequin junkie. And, as it turned out, he was not only a junkie, but a gay junkie. And not only a gay junkie, but one with bleeding gums.

Naturally, the woman was alarmed at the possibility that she might have been exposed to AIDS. She tried to persuade the hospital, where the man was treated for a seizure, to give her information, including his name.

THE HOSPITAL refused, saying the law prevented it from giving out any information on the man.

So I wrote to the city's Health Department for help. But I was told by a hospital employee who listened to my story, "Did you have sex with him?"

That was where we left the story of Diane, the good Samaritan. Since then, there have been other developments. "My social life has taken a nose dive," says Diane, who is divorced.

"My dentist read the article and now he wears a mask when he works on my teeth. Friends who used to shake my hand no longer do."

"My friends seem different now. They're concerned about AIDS, but I'm not going to go there for the tests because they might have some vested, legal interests in the results. I'm going to get the tests, but somewhere else."

A SPOKESMAN for the hospital concedes that the hospital is in kind of a bind.

"We've been trying to get him to come in to be tested."

We've also tried to get him to agree to let her have his phone number, but we haven't been able to get in touch with him.

Working on her own, however, Diane has discovered the man's name. But when the paramedics treated him, they took it down in information and it is a matter of public record.

But that hasn't helped Diane track him down because, as the hospital spokesman said, the man seems to be constantly on the move. A busy lifestyle, I assume.

So Diane is going to go ahead and take the series of tests. There's no great urgency. As a state health official said: "It's not like she can go in and take a shot and change anything." In other words, if she's got it, she's got it and that's that.

THE STATE official also said: "I've talked to our medical experts and they said that her chances of getting AIDS are extremely slim."

Luckily, after I wrote the first column about Diane's experience, I heard from an organization that promotes teaching the public on how to give cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

The organization said that I may have been irresponsible in writing the article, because I might encourage someone from giving mouth-to-mouth aid to strangers.

They might have a guilt, so I want to make it clear that I was not trying to frighten a whole pile of grieving someone in need of help.

On the other hand, it might not be a bad idea to take a couple of seconds and check to see if anyone in the crowd is wearing membranes or is wearing lip-stick.
Letters

SDI opponents possess eclectic and varied views

The Oct. 21 article entitled "SDI Controversy Continues" exposed the irrationality of the position taken by the opponents to the Strategic Defense Initiative research program. In the article, Mid-American Peace Project (MAPP) president, Lori Keller, reported that SDI technology was useless for defense purposes. This was followed by another member of Keller's organization by remarking that "SDI just makes it easier for us to say that we can go (shut it)."

Also, in a letter to the DE on Oct. 6, Keller's group MAPP member supported their opposition to SDI by citing the opposition of Dr. Carl Sagan and the Union of Concerned Scientists. A letter stated: "It is with this group, along with thousands of other scientists and experts worldwide, that MAPP faces its beliefs." SDI was called "an abstraction," and a penultimate sentence, "apparently expressed support for SDI research, was opposed by scientists who wrote: "We have been a difficult time deciding what argument to pursue in our peace building and a second letter from the primary group opposing SDI, which MAPP stoutly and indeed the Union of Concerned Scientists (UCS) and A lot of scientists disagree with us..."

If MAPP's interest is in promoting peace, preventing nuclear war, and cutting defense spending, then it should rethink its support for the MAD doctrine and opposition to SDI, SDI, as a defense against ballistic missiles. What is not generally known is that most users of UCS are not scientists. In an article in the Fall 1986 issue of "The Intercollegiate Review," John Tiram of UCS is quoted as saying: "We've never said we speak for the scientific community. A lot of scientists disagree with us..."

Balloon release was an ecological blunder

If we, as a nation, are so concerned with garbage, junk yards, deteriorating oceans and general waste sites, then why was the University's football field used at the start of one of those sites Saturday? Were the 10,000 released balloons readily biodegradable?

The thought of all of those balloons being released at parades and sporting events has often bothered me. Where do they go? I guess it really doesn't matter since they disappear in a few short minutes, to eventually land on their own, a couple of square inches of the billions of acres in the United States or Canada, or maybe to go just as far as Giant City Park. We'll more likely see them again... Who cares?

Those balloons don't land within a couple feet of each other so they don't create a joyful sight in the middle of nowhere, but what about the specific sites where the balloons do land?

Imagine fishing on scenic Cedar Lake numbers on popular Union County or biking in the remote areas of Pine Hills. Balloon debris would not add to any of these adventures.

When wildlife is forced to interact with human throwaways, it doesn't, in most cases, create a major problem. But, what about the infamous goose living with the plastic ring around its neck, or the fish that grew up inside the can tab? We don't need to cause these hardships for wildlife; we don't need to create more debris across the countryside.

I am not in any way objecting to the joyous occasion of the football game. I am all for having a good time, but I don't care to have trash deposited in areas that it shouldn't be.

I am positive that we, as a University, would have no problem finding alternative methods that would not interfere with our ecosystem. — Mark L. Nelson, senior, wildlife management.

business is as great as might be expected for a crowd this size," he said.

In past years, the chamber estimated that each person at the festival spent an average of $10. Prowell said. Those figures are lower than the $11 estimate for people attending a business conference but higher than the $25 average estimate for people coming to Carbondale for one day.

"Neither ($11 or $25) is appropriate because many people at Halloween stay with friends," Prowell said. "A realistic view is that they spend more than $25 but less than $11."

Each dollar spent generates $3 at the Gate, $1 for the economy as it circulates through town, Prowell said.

Receipts from the 1 percent sales tax collected by the city from last year's 5 percent sales tax, the 1 percent privilege tax on food and drink and the 4 percent hotel tax are ways to gauge how much money is coming into town, Prowell said.

"Once we arrive at a figure for how much money brought in, we have to subtract expenses," he said. "It has been running about $40,000 dollars — $10,000 from SUU, $10,000 from the core committee and $20,000 from the city."

Do you take this marriage tax refund? I do

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

For better or worse? For richer or poorer?

The state may make some better by making them a little richer.

People who have paid $25 or $45 for a license to tie the knot or jump over the proverbial broom in Illinois may get a refund.

Refund forms for those who were overcharged for their marriage licenses will be available Nov. 23. Phillip Mueller, spokesman for the Illinois attorney general's office, said Wednesday.

Under the marriage license tax law, which went into effect Jan. 1, 1985, the $15 marriage license fee was increased $10 to a total of $25, Mueller said. In August 1984, the marriage license fee was increased an additional $15, making the little slip of paper that allows someone to walk down the aisle cost a total of $40.

The Appellate Court in Sangamon County declared the marriage license tax law unconstitutional in October 1985. However, Mueller said, the attorney general's office believes some counties continue to charge the extra fee.

The attorney general's office does not have a complete count of the number of people who qualify for refunds, but the number will be in the hundreds of thousands, Mueller said.

Money collected from the extra charges on marriage license fees were intended for domestic violence programs around the state, Mueller said. A portion of the money was used for the programs, but the state has $2.7 million to finance the refunds, he added.

The court will decide what to do with any remaining money from the $2.7 million designated for refunds, Mueller said.

He said he cannot speculate on what will happen if the $2.7 million does not cover all the refunds.

Refund applications will be available from Nov. 23 until Feb. 29, 1986 at the Carbondale Regional Attorney General's office, 626 A. E. Walnut St., or at the County Treasurer's office in the Jackson County Courthouse.

Seminar to focus on health care

By Mary Wisniewski

“Outlook,” the name of the two-day conference on women's and children's health care, hopes to offer options on pregnancy, child care and the role of nurses.

The conference will be held today and tomorrow at Giant City State Lodge. It is sponsored by the Illinois Association of Maternal and Child Health, which holds two conferences every year.

The seminar is free to Rebecca Hartman, M.D., a Carbondale Clinical obstetrician who will participate in the conference. “Outlook” focuses on alternatives in women's health, with special emphasis on patient-centered and independent health care.

Today's seminar on breast cancer, for example, will discuss alternatives to massive surgical operations like mastectomies, Hartman said.

Registration for both today's and Friday's sessions will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Each day, seminars will be held from 1:15 to 5 p.m.

Today's seminars will focus on:

- Home pregnancy monitoring, with speaker Laurie Olson, R.N.;
- Breast cancer management, with speaker Marsala Ryan, M.D.;
- The role of the nurse-clinician (R.N.C.), with speaker Bonnie Cox, R.N.C., C.N.M., Ph.D., and Terrie Trewhassell, R.N.C.
- Structured patient teaching, with speaker Marlene Matten, R.N.

On Friday, seminars will focus on:

- Support for crisis pregnancies, with speaker Joan Davis, R.S., R.D.H.;
- Working to ensure a safe and peaceful future, with speaker Maureen McCue, M.D.;
- Mother and infant care units, with speaker Cox;
- The support organization I Lost a Child or IIAC, with speaker Elaine Smith, ILAC representative;
- Certified nurse midwives or C.N.M., with Betty Schlatter, C.N.M.

The conference is free to students with identification.

Instead of taking the usual trek through the mob on Southern Illinois Avenue Saturday, people can spend the night boogieing at the USA Dance for UNICEF.

The local chapter of UNICEF is sponsoring a 12-hour dance marathon from 2 p.m. Saturday until 2 a.m. Sunday at the Wesley Foundation, 618 S. Illinois Ave. All proceeds will go to UNICEF, which distributes the money to needy children worldwide.

Carlos Clarke Drazen, local coordinator for USA Dances for UNICEF, said the marathon is a "good alternative for people who don't drink and those who want to bring their children," Drazen said.

The entrance to the dance is free, and local businesses are providing free refreshments.

Couples can enter the marathon by picking up their pledge sheets at Old Town Liquors, 314 S. Illinois Ave., or by calling the local UNICEF office at 549-4004.

"The couple who lasts the longest will receive a prize," she said. UNICEF is supplying the prize, which will not be delivered to Carbondale until Saturday morning. Drazen said she thinks the prize may be T-shirts.

"UNICEF has been having the USA Dances for UNICEF around the country for two years, and this is the first time Carbondale has participated," she said.

Saturday is National UNICEF Day, and Mayor Neil Dillard has proclaimed Saturday Carbondale Dances for UNICEF Day.

The schedule for the Halloween Fair Days' Grand Avenue stage has been revised because of touring conflicts.

The WCIL Jam Van and bands will play from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday evenings. Bands begin at 8:30 p.m. 'Slick Rick' Johnson will perform his 'Halloween Safety Rap' during set changes.

The schedule of bands is:

Friday: 8:30 to 9:20 — Almost Blue.
10:10 to 11:50 — Lucky Mary Blonde.
11:00 to 1 — October's Child.
Saturday: 8:30 to 9:20 — Tin Pan Alley.
9:46 to 10:20 — Tremor.
10:10 to 11:40 — Modern Day Saints.
11:40 to 1 — Four on the Floor.

Witches pick year's events

NEW YORK (UPI) — The witches are out with their annual Halloween predictions for the coming year and they say Col. Oliver North will start a string of franchise military summer camps and Michael Jackson will try to adopt Jim and Tammy Bakker.

For the 14th year, the off-the-wall forecasts were offered Wednesday by the New York Center for the Sight, which claims to be in contact with most of the legitimate witches in the country — 200 at its latest count.

For example, the witches predict that George Bush's campaign will falter — when, in attempt atlevity, he unintentionally insults both working mothers and used-car dealers.

Some find Halloween horror in violent Strip incidents

By Jackie Hampton
Staff Writer

Consider the true Halloween horror stories.

Last year, among the dozens of visitors to the Memorial Hospital emergency room was a young woman there to have a wound stitched closed. She had been hit on the head by a full can of beer. This year, she and her friends are going away for the weekend, an increasingly common way of dealing with the rowdy crowds that converge on Carbondale during the last weekend in October.

Another woman was forced to walk through a gauntlet, a double line of drunken men who proceeded to fondle her. A crowd of litter left by crowds perhaps, but a traumatic one. The police eventually closed the bars and student body president Dennis Sullivan asked that alleged police brutality be investigated. The crowd was estimated at 600 to 2,000.

In 1979, the crowd had swollen to 6,000. There was only one arrest reported, though several businesses reported property damage.

Homecoming events were scheduled to coincide with Halloween weekend in the mid-1970s and the crowds continued to grow. Police estimated 20,000 people were on the Strip in 1978 following a Bob Dylan concert at the Arena. One hundred people were arrested.

MANY PEOPLE who were in Carbondale in 1978 agree that it was the coupling of a Dylan concert, homecoming and Halloween that led to the large crowd. The night Dylan played caused the first real big problem," Miller said. "With Dylan, Kappa Carnaval and homecoming going on at the same time, there were a lot of things going on."

A first attempt to organize Halloween began in 1979 when student leaders initiated Carnaval '79. The city closed from the Strip bars into the street. The police eventually closed the bars and student body president Dennis Sullivan asked that alleged police brutality be investigated. The crowd was estimated at 600 to 2,000.

several blocks of South Illinois Avenue and student groups lined the street with food and entertainment booths. There were 36 people treated at the emergency room and 49 arrests.

In 1980, the city government began to intervene. Among the suggestions was a total ban on the Halloween festival, a proposal quickly deemed not feasible.

THE CITY Council eventually passed an ordinance banning the sale of beer, liquor and wine in glass bottles during the weekend. The festival was closed, although a crowd of 10,000 virtually blocked vehicle traffic. It was a rainy weekend; the crowd was estimated at 16,000. There were 58 arrests and 22 injuries were serious enough to warrant a trip to the emergency room. The most seriously hurt was a student who was punched and stabbed by two attackers. He was treated and released from the hospital the following night. Although the 1981 Halloween crowd of 15,000 was described as "fairly mellow" by city officials watching activity on the Strip, the number of violent acts outpaced previous years. Police reported 36 arrests and 36 people were treated at the emergency room. A 17-year-old girl was raped and two female students were robbed at knife point. Police confiscated more than 200 weapons, most of which were props for costumes. One student was seriously injured when he fell under a speeding train and another suffered a concussion when he fell from the roof of a tavern.

By the early 1980s, the crowd size had stabilized at about 20,000. The number of arrests had become fairly stabilized also. Fifty people were arrested in 1981 and 65 in 1983. That year also marked the return of big-name entertainment to Halloween, as Jackson Browne played at the Arena. By 1984, city officials were taking Halloween in stride and the Core Committee's safe Halloween activities were firmly in place. "It's taken us five years to get where we are today," Jim Prowell, Chamber of Commerce executive director and Core Committee vice president, said. "We're making it as safe as possible."

Still, in 1984 there were 95 arrests on Friday night and at least 128 over the weekend. It was the first time beer cans were the cause of injuries. As a Carbondale fireman was set in the head by a flying can. Several businesses were damaged.

Nationally known entertainment came to Grand Avenue when the Blasters headlined the entertainment along with two local bands. The cost of Halloween grew to a record level in 1985. The city spent $16,834 for police patrols, cleanup and other Halloween-related costs. It recouped $1,900 from vending licenses.

City officials gave the 1986 celebration good marks, noting a decline in the number of arrests and can-throwing incidents. There were 24 arrests for reckless conduct, a classification that includes throwing cans.

Despite all the publicity, there are those that claim Halloween is not a new tradition. "I was talking to a neighbor about the good old days," Miller said. "They had a Veiled Profit ball at the American Legion hall. The rest of the town was dry and it was the only place in town to drink. He was talking about Halloween 30 to 50 years ago. This is just our 15th year."

Core committee preparing for next year’s Halloween

By Jackie Hampton

The Halloween Core Committee, 50 days away from a celebration expected to attract 20,000 to the downtown area, is looking ahead to 1988.

This year several events were added to expand the festival away from the downtown area in a whirlwind of activity that began two weeks ago. The bands were not signed until early October and the final entertainment schedule not released until Wednesday.

With that in mind, Sam McVay, committee chairman, asked the group to meet at 8 a.m. Wednesday at Ed Green’s to discuss the positive and negative aspects of this year’s celebration and begin planning for next year.

“It’s important for the people who are doing these new things to be here,” McVay said. “The sooner we start coordinating with everyone, the fewer problems we’ll have at the last minute.”

The late additions to the celebration include a haunted house, sponsored by the Student Theater Guild, Chamber of Commerce and WREU in the radio station building. Jim Prowell, president of the chamber and vice president of the committee, told the group safety problems at the site, 211 W. Main Street, have been taken care of.

“We were concerned with safety but we have worked an agreement with the station to use its lobby and parking lot beside the building,” Prowell said.

Police Chief Ed Hogan was concerned that a large crowd on West Main Street might spill out in the heavy traffic on Rt. 13.

The house will be open from 3 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday. The house will remain open from 6 to 8 p.m. each night to allow younger children to tour it in a less scary atmosphere.

“AFTER 8, it will be scary,” Prowell said.

It is open to children 7 to 13 years of age, he said. The pledge class of the Inter Greek Council are ready to sponsor for a Halloween Carnival for Carbondale school children. The Beta Iota pledge class of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity is sponsoring the event from 6 to 8 p.m. today in the Student Center Ballroom B and Gallery Lounge.

The children will compete for prizes at booths manned by members of each pledge class.

“It’s prizier will be small things, but there will be enough that no matter what they do, no matter how bad they mess up, they’ll get a prize,” Kris Fabian, co-chairman of the carnival, said.

“After it, it will be scary.”

Paula Buckholts, make-up artist at Ahead of Times, 703 S. Illinois, puts the finishing touches on David Carter's Halloween makeover Wednesday. Carter is from Murphyboro. Ahead of Times will offer face painting Friday and Saturday.

Create a face only a ghoulfriend could love

By Amy Gauhatz

Halloween is the day that ghosts, goblins and witches walk the streets, looking for people to scare. It only comes once a year, so why not have people stare and gasp in amazement at the creativity of which your face is made up.

Imagine being original in the respect of having warts and scars on your face, or looking like you were run over by a car. You can't buy these effects at a store, but you can have them painted on your face.

Byron Karraker and Rex Morrison, owners of Ahead of Times, 703 S. Illinois Ave., will be face painting in their shop from 3 p.m. to 2 a.m. Friday and from 3 a.m. to 2 a.m. Saturday.

Advantages of having your face painted, instead of wearing a mask, Karraker said, is "comfort and better visibility."

"With face paint, you can get more creative, and it makes for a safer Halloween," he said.

Face painting can be done two different ways, regular or detailed. The paints used by the artists are Stein makeup, which wash off with water or cold cream.

Cat or clown faces, butterfly eyes, or the face of a punk rocker would be examples of regular face painting which costs $5 and takes about 15 minutes to complete.

A werewolf would be an example of detailed painting, because hair is attached to the face. Detailed painting costs $10 and takes about 25 minutes to complete.

"Basically it depends on what they want you to do," Karraker said. "We will do hair, hence it, use lots of hairspray and put hair paint or glitter in it for $5."

"We did a lot of people," Karraker said, who along with Morrison face painted last year.

The popular faces last year were of flamingos, KISS faces, vampires, skulls, and lots of glitter, and wild hairdos with paint.

"The wierdest request," Karraker said, "was a guy who wanted to be a Mexican spy who was brought over to the U.S. as an undercover shoe salesman."

"Anything they want done, we can do," he added.

Other artists who will be face painting include Sharon Parker, who specializes in cartoon characters and Paula Buckholts, who specializes in gore, blood and bruises.
Misconceptions concerning aging topic of lecture

By Dana Schulte

The myth that elderly people grow old, ugly and incompetent will be the topic of discussion in Arna today.

SIU-C English professor Herbert Donow will speak at 10 a.m. at the nutrition suite, 400 S. Main, about the portrayal of the elderly in literature.

The program is sponsored by the Governor's Office of Senior Involvement. Donow will be reading, presenting films and lecturing about the stereotypes associated with the elderly.

"We don't think of old people as individuals," he said. "We think of them as people who are worn down, not interested in sex and sitting in a rocking chair.

Those who attend the programs will gain a better feeling for literature, Donow said. "We hope they (the programs) will be entertaining."

Josephine Oblinger, Director of the Governor's Office of Senior Involvement, said, "We think they (the programs) will provide us with a realization that our attitudes toward the elderly are as old as literature itself.

The program also will be held Nov. 3 at 220 S. 23rd St. in Carbondale and Nov. 17 at 516 Supermarket Square in Metropolis.

Soviet professor compares teaching around the world

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Despite differences in ideology in various countries, classroom instruction and teaching methods are similar worldwide, an education expert from the Soviet Union says.

He said many people argue whether to integrate students into the regular classes, but he said there is more to education than theory.

"Theory is nice, but it usually affects areas where education research occurs more than any area of education," he said.

"As a matter of fact, the most important question is guaranteeing success for every student in the classroom."

"When we go into the classroom anywhere in the world, we see pretty similar things, and that is where solutions need to be made," Korgesaar said.

But he said there is a tendency in education to resist change.

"Primary teachers are reluctant to make changes in their classroom habits," he said.

He also said that administrators "don't know what to do" to improve education.

He said they should be more flexible in changes.

He also said a problem prevalent in the United States is the difficulty in getting the public to support innovations in the educational system with more money.

"People have tight pockets," he said.

He said West Germany has one of the best systems of integrating slow-learning people into the work force.

Korgesaar is in the International Research and Exchanges program, in which the United States and the Soviet Union exchange scholars with the other country for nine months to do research.

Marcia Davis, a member of the organization, said the difficulty in getting the public to support innovations in the educational system with more money.

Group cleans litter from highway

By Tom Trotter

A student business organization on campus collected litter from alongside Route 13 last weekend for one mile west of Rammada Inn, members of the group said.

Chris Bigdeli, president of Pi Sigma Epialon, said the group asked the Illinois Highway Department if the members could clean the stretch of highway to go more involved with the community.

"They provided us with a truck, safety vests and two workers from the highway department," she said.

Then, about 30 members of the student organization picked up trash from alongside the road.

"We might go out next semester and clean up the area again, as a goodwill effort," she said.

UNI controls destiny in title race, complicated ties still possible

Northern Iowa won the top spot in this week’s Gateway Conference football standings by handing Western Illinois its first league loss of the season.

Both teams entered last week’s action with perfect marks in Gateway play. Western needed a win to complete a sweep of the Gateway teams and clinch the league’s title and automatic berth to the I-AA national playoffs.

With the win, UNI took control of the Gateway race and moved up two notches to No. 10 on this week’s NCAA poll. Western dropped to 10 places to No. 16.

UNI must now run a four-week gauntlet against Eastern Illinois, Southwest Missouri, SIU-C and Illinois State to win the league title outright.

At 3-1 in league play, Eastern Illinois also could still figure into the league’s title chase. If EIU beats Northern Iowa, the league’s top three teams would have the same number of losses.

A second loss by either EIU or UNI would eliminate them from the race.

Western, with an earlier win over Eastern, would win the two-game UNI at-larnge game. UNI would win the title if it finishes in a two-way tie with Western. Regardless, Western has an excellent chance at an at-large playoff berth.

The picture will be much clearer after this weekend’s action after one team emerges from the Eastern Illinois-Northern Iowa contest. The two games meet Saturday at the UNIDome in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

In the rest of the league’s action, Southwest Missouri plays host to Illinois State and Southern Illinois takes on Indiana State. None of the four teams can figure in the title race except as spoilers.

Hearns looking for fourth different title belt

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) - Thomas Hearns, who has qualified points competition.

Hearns and Roldan will meet in a scheduled 12-round bout at the Las Vegas Hilton for the vacant World Boxing Council middleweight title.

Hearns, 29, previously held titles in the junior lightweight and light heavyweight and won one of 10 boxers to hold pro championships in three weight classes. Henry Armstrong, Alexis Arguello and Roberto Duran failed in tries to win fourth crowns.

"That was them. This is even more than shredded wheat.

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — A select field of 30 players embarks on the final tournament of the PGA season Thursday with the richest prize in golf history awaiting the winner.

Despite the fact $4.5 million will be awarded at this event, there has been criticism from some about the $1 million-plus names about the lucrative Nabisco Clumpion of Golf.

"I think the money is great," said Greg Norman, who qualified through a year-long points competition. "The bottom line is that it is great for us. But I don't think the money should count on the official money list. It puts too much emphasis on this one tournament.

Three separate competitions will take place this week at the par-70 Oak Hills Country Club course of them with rich payoffs.

There is a basic total prize of $2 million at stake for the 72-hole tournament with the winner claiming $500,000. That is more than Ben Hogan made in his entire career.

In addition, this week's tournament ends a year-long $1 million points race with the winner of that competition earning $75,000.

Finally, the tournament includes a 54-hole event in which Curtis Strange, Scott Simpson, Ben Crenshaw, Larry Nelson, Tom Kite, Dan Pohl, Fred Couples and David Frost will be vying for $1.5 million as representatives for eight different tournament. This is also the culmination of a year-long points race.

consistency to her, and now she’s reacting to it well.

"If she continues, it could mean she will be a contender for some nice post-season honors."

Her hitting percentage of .330 is the highest on the team. In five matches she was the leader in kills, including a career-high 22 against Eastern Illinois.

"I’ve got a lot more confidence in my hitting. I’m not afraid to go up and hit away. I think I’ve shown that I can play in the front row," Wallenberg said.

Wallemburg’s role expanded in another way this season. Without co-captain Sue Sinclair in the lineup because of a season-ending injury, Wallenberg assumed the duty of co-captain.

"I’ve got a lot more confidence in my hitting. I’m not afraid to go up and hit away. I think I’ve shown that I can play in the front row," Wallenberg said.

trip violated NCAA rules.

Burger and Thompson were held out of last Saturday’s Mississippi State game because Auburin officials were concerned the trip could be considered a special benefit.

A friend of the Thompson family flew Burger and the line on a recruiting trip in south Alabama the day after the Oct. 10 Vanderbilt game. The man is a University of Alabama graduate, published reports said.

The incident marks the third time Burger has been in trouble this year. An academic honesty committee at the school recommended that Burger be suspended for the fall and winter quarters for plagiarizing a term paper but Auburn Vice President Warren Brandt overturned the penalty.

Burger was briefly declared ineligible before the season began because assistant coach Pat Sullivan signed his grandmother after Burger was arrested following a fight at a fast-food restaurant. The NCAA restored Burger’s eligibility on an appeal from the school.

Burger, a fifth-year senior, has completed 106 of 154 passes for 1,316 yards and 10 touchdowns.

Backup quarterback Reggie Slack, a sophomore who got his first start last week, has hit 11 of 17 passes for 185 yards and three touchdowns in a 36-7 win over Mississippi State.
