Rape...

Women turn to self-defense

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

A recent study reveals that over half of all American women are fearful of being raped or sexually assaulted. And as this fear increases, more and more women are looking for ways to protect themselves from attacks.

The study, titled "America Afraid," reported that 55 percent of American women fear being raped or sexually assaulted. It also said that 40 percent of all Americans feel unsafe in their homes, neighborhoods and work places.

At SIU-C, women are turning to self-defense classes and special transportation systems to combat the problem.

"It's a fact of life that a woman is vulnerable to attack," said Patti Follansbee, one of 12 instructors for the SIU-C Women's Services self-defense classes.

A common method SIU-C women use to protect themselves is riding the Night Safety Bus and the Night Safety Transit cars at night. Presently, the bus has about 20 riders a night and the transit cars have between 50 and 60 riders a night, said Bobbie Majka, another of the Women's Services self-defense instructors.

These two transportation systems are funded by a 96 cent campus safety fee that is part of the Student Activities Fee that all students pay.

A number of women are also turning to self-defense classes offered twice a week at the Recreation Building by Women's Services.

The Monday night class has an enrollment of 30 women, and has a waiting list that will fill up the classes to be offered this spring, Majka said. The Tuesday night class has 24 students.

If the response is good enough, more classes may be offered in the spring, Majka said.

The Carbondale Women's Center also offers self-defense classes, although none are going on now.

A general studies class in self-defense is offered in the spring and "the majority of the class has been female," said instructor James Wilkinson of the Physical Education Department.

He said that there were over 60 women enrolled in the two classes offered last spring, and added that "we could probably double the size of the class," because of the large number of students who want to take the class.

More and more women are also buying canisters containing a tear-gas-like substance that is being sold by students, mail order companies and some stores in Carbondale.

"It's been selling tremendously since I've started selling it," said Nancy Selke, a Chicago-area distributor for a company that sells the canisters. "The girls are just elated about it." She said that she has been selling it for about six months.

The canisters are about three inches long and spray a liquid that is supposed to leave an attacker unable to "take concerted action for 10 to 20 minutes after exposure," claims an advertisement for the canisters.

The problem with the tear-gas-type spray is that it is illegal in Illinois to carry around any canister that contains a "noxious gas, liquid or substance," according to Scott Struif, an intern at the Jackson County State's Attorney's office.

Tear-gas-type sprays are illegal because they may be used in robberies to incapacitate victims, Struif said.

Housing rate hike 'imminent' for '81

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

An increase in single and family University Housing rates is imminent for fall 1981, Sam Rinella, University Housing Director, told the Housing Liaison Committee Friday.

Rinella said he discussed the increase with the committee, a group of representatives from all the housing areas, but said the size of the increase has not been estimated yet. He said the housing office will announce its estimates for next year's housing rates this week.

The increase is needed because of the rise in price of food and utilities, Rinella said. He added that improvements asked for by the Housing Liaison Committee will add to the costs of housing.

Rinella also said he announced an increase in the Campus Housing Activity Fund. He said the fund, which supports the various house councils, will rise from $9 to $12, the first increase since 1969.

The committee also discussed improving the lighting on campus although Rinella said he could not promise anything could be done because of the cost involved. Bob Sagendorf, Triad House Council president, said he is thinks better lighting is needed on campus to provide more security to students.

Sagendorf also said he thinks more security measures are needed at the Triads-Allen, Boomer and Wright Halls. Rinella said he would look into the matter, but that he felt security at the three residence halls is sufficient.

Rules for political campaigning in University residence halls were announced to the committee by Rinella. He said door-to-door canvassing can begin Oct. 1 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. He said that two weeks prior to the Nov. 4 general election canvassing will be allowed the same hours seven days a week.

Faculty parking fines to be taken from pay

By John Ambrosio
Staff Writer

Parking fines incurred by SIU-C faculty and staff since August, 1974, will be deducted from their salaries if other attempts to collect the $19,783 in back fines fail, according to SIU-C President Albert Somit.

Methods for collecting fines are outlined in a proposal which has been discussed by various University constituency groups. Somit said. The proposal is expected to be implemented beginning Wednesday, according to Warren Buffum, associate vice president for financial affairs.

Letters will be sent to faculty and staff who owe more than $100 in back fines requesting that the debts be paid within 30 days of receipt of the letter. Somit said. Fines may be paid on an installment plan if the amount of the fine is too high to pay in one sum, he added.

But if arrangements to pay the fines are not made within the 30 day deadline, the money will be deducted from the faculty or staff member's paycheck, Somit said.

"Of course we would be fair about taking the money out of the checks," he said. "We wouldn't want to take out too much at once because we don't know how it would affect that person. So we would take out a little at a time until the fine is paid."

Faculty and staff with fines of less than $100 won't be notified by letter until after plans for retrieving the larger fines have been under way for several weeks, Somit said.

A similar attempt to collect back fines from faculty and staff was turned down by the Illinois Comptroller's office last spring. Citing an Illinois statute concerning deductions from public employee salaries, the office issued a statement that the funds could not legally be withheld by the University.

But Associate University Legal Counsel Shari Rhode said that the University is completely within legal guidelines in presenting the current proposal.

All University employees must sign a contract stating that they will abide by the rules and regulations of SIU-C, which give the administration the authority to withhold the wages, she said. She cited Section 6-105 of the University's motor vehicle regulations which states, "...any person who is an employee of the University, or the State of Illinois, who fails to pay a monetary use charge as set forth in these regulations will be subject to having such monetary charge deducted from the sums due to such employee from the University or the state."

Somit, Rhode and Buffum all agreed that the plan should prove effective in getting faculty and staff to voluntarily pay fines, and will ultimately prove to be completely effective in collecting the back fines since the funds can be recovered through the salary withholding program.

Emergency energy planning called 'woefully inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is no more prepared for a disruption in foreign oil supplies than it was in 1979 when the Iranian revolution slowed imports, according to a new congressional report.

The report, released Monday by the Government Operations subcommittee on energy and the environment, said emergency energy planning in the United States is "woefully inadequate at all levels of government."

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., chairman of the subcommittee, noted that the study was prepared before the outbreak of war between Iran and Iraq. But he said the war creates exactly the kind of conditions that the report warns about.

"We can see how fragile the supply situation is," Moffett said in releasing the report.

The report says that well over a year after the Iranian revolution brought about long lines at service stations and sent prices soaring, planning for energy emergencies is still low on the nation's list of priorities.

Moffett said the subcommittee investigation determined that only one state, Nebraska, has drawn up a formal energy conservation plan. Other states are preparing plans but need technical guidance and federal money to complete them, he said.

The report said U.S. dependency on oil imports means the nation, "faces the constant threat of a major supply disruption." The report said, "The United States is not prepared to respond in an energy emergency in a timely and coordinated manner."

The report also noted that Congress passed a law in 1979 that requires every state to prepare energy conservation plans to be used in the event of a crisis. But it said little has been done on this program.

Moffett said U.S. energy planners have been lulled into a false sense of security by a current over-supply on world oil markets. But he said one-third of the world oil surplus, which he estimated at about five billion barrels, could quickly disappear if the Iran-Iraq fighting continues for a month or more.

The report recommended that the Emergency Energy Conservation Act be reworded to force states to submit emergency contingency plans prior to declaring an actual emergency, sending states money for preparing their plans and making conservation a top priority for the Energy Department.

The subcommittee headed by Moffett is to begin hearings Tuesday into the effect the Iran-Iraq war could have on U.S. energy supplies.

News Roundup

Higher coupon tax ruled illegal

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — In what was hailed as a victory for consumers, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled Monday that shoppers should pay sales taxes on the discount price of items when holding store-issued coupons, instead of the item's normal, higher price.

Justices said the state Revenue Department no longer could collect the higher tax, as it has done.

The department had contended store coupons were taxable as though they were cash, because the coupons amounted to a direct cash savings to the consumer.

But the high court, with only Justice Robert C. Underwood dissenting, disagreed with state revenue officials.

"...The face value of the store's discount coupons is never received by the store," Justice William G. Clark wrote for the majority court. "The coupon's value is deducted from the selling price received by the store and not added to it."

The court said the state should not charge the tax on a discounted item's full price.

Vice presidential debate canceled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters, its invitation rejected by two of the candidates, on Monday canceled the vice presidential debate the organization had planned to hold in Louisville, Ky., later this week.

League president Ruth J. Hinerfeld said she will keep trying to arrange two remaining debates planned among the presidential candidates.

Republican George Bush followed the lead of GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan in turning down the debate invitation. Vice President Walter F. Mondale said he would debate only if Bush accepted.

Independent vice presidential candidate Patrick Lucey had accepted the invitation unconditionally, as did John B. Anderson, the independent presidential candidate who debated Reagan in Baltimore in the league's first debate Sept. 21.

If Iran would do same

Iraq would agree to cease-fire

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq agreed Monday to a U.N.-requested cease-fire provided Iran did the same, but the fighting did not subside. Iraqi troops and equipment moved southward inside Iran toward the enemy's oil heartland, where Iranian resistance appeared to have stiffened.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that Iraq would heed

a Security Council appeal for a cease-fire if Iran also would. Hussein urged the council to "take necessary measures to urge the Iranian side to abide by the resolution approved Sunday. Iran did not respond immediately to Waldheim."

In other diplomatic moves:

—Iran's ambassador to the Soviet Union, Mohammad Mokri, said at a Moscow news conference Iran might agree to a cease-fire if Iraq's president resigned. Iraq's army surrendered, the Iraqi city of Basra were turned over to Iranian control pending an election there and Iraq's Kurds were allowed to vote on whether they wanted autonomy or to join with Iran.

—A special envoy representing Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr met in New Delhi with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and said (Continued on Page 16)

Citizens Party offered as alternative

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

Saying there's not a "thimbleful of difference between the three presidential candidates," Sidney Lens, Citizens Party senatorial candidate, offered his party as an alternative to the Republican, Democratic and independent bids for the presidency.

"If you put the differences between Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John Anderson in a thimble, there'd still be room for the Empire State Building," said Lens, a native of New York who now lives in Chicago.

The 68-year-old author and lecturer told reporters at a press conference at the Student Center Monday that in the Citizens Party, "people come before profit and butter comes before guns."

The Citizens Party's presidential candidate is one of its founders, Barry Commoner, a Harvard University graduate, noted environmentalist and author of six books including "The Politics of Energy." Commoner's running mate is LaDonna Harris, an Indian rights activist.

The Citizens Party was formed in April and its supporters include author Studs Terkel, "Mother Jones" publisher Adam Hochschild, and Georgia state legislator Julian Bond.

Lens faces Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal, Secretary of State Alan Dixon and four fringe party candidates for the Illinois Senate seat. He said his party favors "drastically" reducing the military budget, phasing out nuclear power, developing alternative and renewable energy sources, and social ownership of the oil industry.

Other party planks include the elimination of draft registration, public control of the energy industries, guaranteed jobs for the unemployed and development of community-based cooperatives to handle regional energy, food and housing needs

Man charged with two rapes

A Marion man arrested by Carbondale police Sept. 24 has been charged with a second rape.

Joseph Perruquet, 28, now faces two rape charges in Jackson County and one rape charge in Williamson County.

The most recent charge stems from the abduction of a Carbondale woman at knife-point June 30 from the Carbondale Clinic parking lot. She was allegedly driven in her own car to an area north of Carbondale and raped. The man then abandoned the woman and drove her car back to the parking lot, police said.

The original rape charges stem from an Aug. 28 abduction of a Carbondale woman from the University Mall parking lot. Police said the woman was driven in her own car to locations in Jackson and Williamson counties and raped. The man then drove the woman's car back to the University Mall parking lot, according to police.

Perruquet is being held in the Williamson County jail in lieu of $100,000 bond. The Williamson County State's Attorney's Office had requested a bond of $1.5 million.

Prison officials reject inmate demands

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

Officials of the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion received another unsigned inmate grievance list Friday—this time calling for conjugal visits, a furlough program and a prison family day.

Prison spokesman Ron Beai said all the demands were impossible to implement because of Bureau of Prison policy and security risks.

Beai said conjugal visits by wives of inmates are strictly prohibited throughout the prison system. He said that a furlough program allowing inmates to "go into town on the weekends" would not be allowed for prisoners in the Marion penitentiary "because none can meet the type of classification required for furlough."

Beai said a family day for inmates would not be possible due to security constraints at the penitentiary.

"No way could we have the wives, girlfriends, mothers, and children of these men in with the rest of the population," he said.

Janet Mitchell, a paralegal at the Marion Prisoners Rights Project, said she believed the demands list was not representative of the prison population of 440 inmates, 320 of whom have been staging a work stoppage at the prison for the last two weeks. Prison officials are still trying to determine if the list is representative of a majority of the prisoners.

Beai also said that five of the 20 inmates being held in administrative detention have been released for lack of evidence that they were strike organizers. He said the investigation into the other 15 inmate's strike involvement is continuing.

WSIU shouldn't end 'The Morning Report'

SIU has lost an old friend.

Jimmy Moore's decision to cancel "The Morning Report" may be a legitimate exercise of his power as acting director of the Broadcasting Service, but one must question his reasoning.

He says that the addition of "AM Weather" will provide a community service. Farmers, pilots and students will benefit, according to Moore.

On top of that, Moore argues that "AM Weather" will be less expensive for the station and more professional than the student-run show.

However, Moore is overlooking some things.

First, WSIU-TV does not do all that much local programming. The Southern Illinois area is lacking in a credible in-state news show. "The Morning Report" and two other WSIU shows were helping to fill that void.

This type of local programming increases the prestige of both the school and the station. Cancelling "The Morning Report" can do little to benefit the people who are looking for local Illinois news in the morning, and it can do even less for the prestige of the school or the station.

Second, Moore's decision cancelled some 50 on-the-air student jobs. Those jobs provided experience that a person just cannot get in the classroom.

Almost all of the people involved with the show were volunteers trying to get some practical experience. Moore seems to be forgetting that while it is true that the Broadcasting Service is a separate entity from the Radio-TV Department, WSIU is still closely linked to the University.

That link is what Moore seems to forget. The primary purpose of this University, or for that matter any university, is education. While he does have control over the station, SIU has control over him. He shouldn't shut off the chance for people to learn.

Moore has agreed to let the students practice with the equipment, and that should be appreciated—but it is not the same thing.

No amount of practice can simulate what happens when a person is really on the air. Moore's offer, while generous, would be like telling a theater student that he could use the main stage to practice only when there is no audience present.

Finally, "The Morning Report" may be more expensive. No figures have been shown, by either side, but should a public television station really be all that worried about cost?

If the station can afford to present local programs, they should do so. Moore has presented no evidence that WSIU will go bankrupt if it continues to produce "The Morning Report."

"The Morning Report" has been a valuable friend to the University, the students and the area. Moore's decision may be motivated by the best of intentions, but for the sake of all, he should reconsider his action.

"The Morning Report" is worth the cost and the effort. It should be reinstated.

Wright cartoon was offensive

We, the undersigned organizations and individuals, find no reason for the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board to be racist. The fact that some Palestinians have seen more camels in American papers and TV screens than in Palestine prompts us to wonder what kind of a grudge you hold against the Palestinians and for what purpose?

We feel it will be good for you to realize the following:

1. A Palestinian (like any other human being) has the right to identify him-herself as he/she pleases irrespective of your personal prejudices.
2. The Palestinians consider themselves the outcome of dynamical historical interactions of many civilizations—extending from the three monotheistic religious forms, namely: Christianity, Islam and Judaism to the most extravagant cultures of old Egyptians, Sumerians, Greeks, Romans and Arabs (to mention a few). After all, the Christian culture of the West has its birth in a little town in Palestine (Bethlehem if you simply forget).

3. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) Charter is very clear in its goal, viz., to establish a Democratic, Non-Sectarian state in Palestine where (agnostics, atheists), Christians, Jews and Moslems may live on an equal footing. The PLO never claimed whatever insolence you have tried to ascribe to her in your September 18, 1980 cartoon.

Do you think we would be asking too much if you were to commit an act of decency and perhaps apologize?—Marwan Burgan, coordinator, Committee for Justice in Palestine

Editor's note: This letter was also signed by 78 other people, including officers of the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists, the Palestinian Student Association and the Iranian Moslem Organization.

Gov. Reagan is poor choice to be next U.S. president

Reagan for President? Only if we want to reverse the last thirty or so years of struggle for civil rights, social service and ecological legislation. Reagan for President? Only if we want to find ourselves sending money and troops to support brutal and repressive governments in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

What Reagan (and with a more liberal facade the other major candidates) represent is capitalism fighting to survive in the face of the results of its own destructive policies. For crime caused by increasing poverty, more police power; for the revolts of brutally exploited peoples overseas, more military aid for the local dictator. Finally for the failures of an economic system never able, or even designed, to meet the needs of an increasing number of the unemployed and powerless, more tax breaks.

The only thing that Reagan and the other major candidates can give us is four more years of degeneration; more poverty, more crime, increasing official repression, more senseless war to protect monied interests overseas, and degradation of the physical and spiritual environment at home.

But there is an alternative though. That alternative is for people to abandon the exploitive ideology of capitalism and struggle against the existing system and for a new world. This is something that major candidates for President have neither the ideology nor the moral will to do.—Brian Bridgeford, Student PROUT Federation

Why even use SIU-C, SIUC?

To Karl Monroe or anyone else who thinks SIU-C should be changed is right, but to SIUC.

It looks so Bush to see SIUC written all over the DE as if we don't know where we are. Why waste time differentiating between Carbondale, the main, larger and better school and that slightly enlarged high school in Edwardsville?

If the story is about Edwardsville, then you can write SIUC-Edwardsville, but to constantly write SIUC degrades us. For the few times a story is about Edwardsville it's not worth the effort to let everyone know it's Carbondale all the other times.

Next you'll want the football team to put SIUC on their helmets, so that no one thinks he's watching Edwardsville's non-existent team. —Timothy Matthews, senior, Radio-TV

Marion Penitentiary has unique role

In recent months there has been heightened interest in the U.S. Penitentiary in Marion. This has been evidenced through the printed and visual media relating events which have occurred at the institution and in reporting the views of inmates and interested parties in the community. As a concerned employee at the institution, I believe there are three general areas of information which are often overlooked, but which may be of interest to the public.

First, the Marion Penitentiary has a unique role within the Federal Prison System. It is the most secure federal facility in the country. Men are placed at Marion because of their lengthy sentences, the serious nature of their crimes, patterns of repeated misconduct at other institutions, or other aggravating factors that indicate they require close staff supervision and high security. Because it is a long-term institution, industrial work programs and recreational facilities are emphasized, but education, counseling and other programs are available. Out of approximately 25,000 federal inmates, less than 500 require the type of security Marion provides.

Secondly, the Control Unit has been the focus of much attention. Although instituted in the early 1970s as a response to an institutional emergency, the Control Unit operation has evolved into a much different configuration than that which was litigated in the much-quoted court cases of the mid and late '70s. As applicable policy and judicial standards have changed over the years, so has the Control Unit. Past features of its program which have been found to be objectionable by the courts have been modified. The Control Unit houses about 50 men at any given time. Out of the same 25,000 federal prisoners nationwide, this small number have been found to require the unusually high levels of supervision and security provided in the Control Unit. These men have been placed there because they have compiled repeated and serious records of institutional misconduct, often involving violent assaults on staff or other inmates. By removing a relatively small number of such individuals from the general population of other institutions, the remainder of the inmate population, and staff, are safe from their assaultive and predacious conduct. The rest of the inmates in the system benefit by having a more relaxed atmosphere within which they can participate in programs of their choice safely. Each case in the Control Unit is reviewed monthly by unit staff and bimonthly by a regional director and assistant director of the Federal Prison System to assess progress toward release. The average stay in the Control Unit is 12-14 months. No behavior modification techniques using aversive conditioning or drug treatments are used in the Control Unit, in Marion or in the Federal Prison System.

Lastly, the problems of management of information about the institution, its staff and inmates are worthy of note. Media efforts in reporting news about Marion Penitentiary reflect the source of the reporter's information. When inmates and representatives from outside groups comment on institution activities, or initiate media contacts, they are not under the constraints which government officials are. The Privacy Act of 1974 precludes release of all but the most basic information about individuals within the organization. When inmates or disgruntled employees make public remarks detrimental to the institution, this law constrains official comments which might effectively respond to and explain those remarks. In many cases, brief factual statements are all that may be released. In other circumstances, such as during strikes, detailed releases may hamper ongoing efforts to resolve the issues in question.

When litigation is pending on a matter, public commentary by institution staff is inappropriate even though it might serve to counteract unfavorable and sometimes inaccurate reports about the events at the institution—Richard L. Phillips, executive assistant to the warden at Marion

Short Shot was a 'cheap shot'

I realize that your "short shots" aren't meant to be taken seriously, but Cindy Clausen's entry in that column is a "cheap shot" more than a "short shot." Not true, Ms. Clausen, that Marion's prisoners "signed their own contracts to get in."

Marion Federal Penitentiary is one of several in the federal prison system, and such prisons range from minimum security prisons, such as that in Allentown, Pa., which hosted a number of Watergate figures, to maximum-security, of which Marion is the highest security. But does it necessarily follow that all the Marion convicts deserve to be there?

The point of the recent demonstrations, as I understand it, was twofold: to dramatize the fact that some people kept at Marion are held more for political than for security reasons, and to protest the isolation units.

That may be Ms. Clausen's problem; she's seen too many jail movies.

Or perhaps her problem is that she thinks that the government never makes mistakes; anyone who's in prison, must deserve to be there. Just remember that the government is simply a machine run by people, and people make mistakes. Even in Marion—Patrick Drazen, Broadcasting Service

Sidewalks are there for walking

This letter is in response to the 9-22 DE letter written by Ross Bielema, entitled "Where should we ride bikes?"

Ross seems to have some misconception that the sidewalks were built for something other than walking on. Well, as far as I'm concerned, he is dead wrong! As a pedestrian, there is nothing that infuriates me more than having some lame-brain bicyclist cruising down the middle of the sidewalk, weaving in and out of people and expecting everyone to step to the side.

I fully realize the dangers that cyclists face when they are forced to ride on the street, but what about the dangers that pedestrians face just walking down the sidewalk? It seems to me that the answer to the problem is not to allow bikes on the sidewalk, but to construct bicycle lanes on the streets. Many universities have developed systems for bike-riders, so why not Southern? I think that instead of bitching about the police giving tickets for riding on the sidewalk, you should organize the cyclists on campus and go complain to the student government, the University administration and the city until something is done to make it safe to ride on the street.

I applaud the efforts of the police to make the sidewalks safe for their intended use. It is obvious that cyclists will not voluntarily ride where they are supposed to, so the police are obligated to impose some fines to scare people into following the law.

If giving tickets doesn't work, I for one am ready to take matters into my own hands. Ross mentioned that not many cyclists wear helmets—well, they better start! If ticketing doesn't work, Ross, you had better watch out. The next person you go zipping past could be me—and you may suddenly find a tree branch ripping through your spokes.—

Stuart G. Burchard, senior, Political Science

Direct bike complaints to city

It seems as though there needs to be a "middle of the road" opinion on the bicycle situation on this campus and in town.

I am one of those persons who rides a bike and also travels from class to class on foot. I face the fear of being run over by cyclists while on foot, and I face the agony of trying to ride my bike through the pedestrian-filled campus sidewalks between classes.

I don't think the argument should continue between the bicyclists and the pedestrians. Complaints should be directed toward the University or the City Council.

It wasn't until last year that the University designated a clear "bikes only" path on the overpass leading to East Campus. I am not aware of any statistics of a decrease in injurious accidents as a result of this separation of paths; however, I'm sure it is an improvement.

As far as town is concerned, a bike path such as the one on South Poplar Street is the only one I am aware of. It's an excellent idea—so why not create bike paths on other main streets in town?

Certainly, if bicycle paths were to be specified all over campus and in town, the number of accidents would not only be decreased, but the number of complaints and arguments between pedestrians and bicyclists would discontinue.—Michele VanOrt, junior, Communications

Put prisoners on road crews

I think it's damn near pathetic to realize the condition this country is in today. Especially when prisoners have the right to protest and call for a work stoppage.

Like someone mentioned earlier, they signed their ticket in, so why should they receive a "bed of roses" in return of killing someone's father, or raping someone's wife. I say let's get back to "the good old days" of gas chambers and sentencing hardened criminals to 10 hours a day of hard labor on our country's roads, then this country can once again take shape!—Rick Hanson, sophomore, Business Administration

Short shots

The debate issue is really much clearer than it seems. It is only a case of Jimmy refusing to play with Ronnie if he is playing with Johnny at the same time and Ronnie needing Johnny in case Jimmy gets too rough for him to handle alone.—Cindy Clausen

Apparently, Carbondale Cleanup spanned two Saturdays, Sat., Sept. 20, was when 10 tons of garbage was collected, and Sat., Sept. 27 was when it was priced and sold at the Arena.—Liz Schindler

The way the League of Women Voters sees it, Ronald Reagan has finally joined the actors' strike.—Cindy Hix

I'm confused. Debating the issue of the debates in which to debate the issues seems to have become the main issue of debate.—Susan Miller

Regarding the 1980 Census, the City Council seems to have a unanimous opinion: it's about time we stand up and be counted—twice.—Dan Sitarz

$10 fee makes his blood boil

Recent stories in the DE about retaining the $10 athletics fee increase and editorials supporting that retention make my blood boil. College athletics have enjoyed disproportionate budgets for far too long. The time has come to return to the dictum "Mens sana in corpore sano." A healthy mind in a healthy body as a guide to the true and proper function of the athletics departments.

The athletics fee benefits only a small minority of students—no one who has found the swimming pool or the tennis courts closed for team practice could believe otherwise. Why not keep the $10 fee increase but spend it on something that benefits the entire University? Next year, let that money support something every student uses, something that attracts good teachers and scholars to the University far more than any athletic team. I refer, of course, to the library. Let's tell the athletics department that we won't do anything more for them until they start doing something for us.—Thomas A. Pallen, Carbondale

Bible attacks were untrue

I would like to reply to the letters written by Pat Drazen on his untrue attacks on the Bible. I don't disagree with his 'freedom of speech, but for once he should get his Biblical facts correct.

The Bible has a lot to say about the budgetary process—it warns against borrowing and

Kreskin truly was amazing

My intention for writing this is not to degrade Kreskin's performance, but to praise it. I am, however, degrading Mohammad Hami's performance in writing his letter about Kreskin. It is quite a shame that Mohammad claims Kreskin's audience was being "tricked and used." I think they should decide that for themselves.

In his letter, Hami stated that any psychologist or psychiatrist could prove Kreskin wrong and call his act one of hypnotism. I would simply like to tell you that the Amazing Kreskin is a psychologist himself and got his degree many years ago at a New Jersey college.

I think it was quite remarkable when Kreskin asked the audience to regress to their childhood. It is a shame that Hami forgot to mention the fact that Kreskin mentally discovered many of those childhood incidences and told the audience the setting, what deficit financing, contrary to the charge by Pat. His remarks about the day time stood still for one day were full of inaccurate statements. If I made the same untrue remarks about his field, classical music, he would be up in arms. Pat, just out of curiosity, read Hosea 4:6.—Jim Weiss, Carbondale had happened and even, sometimes, the people involved.

I think it is remarkable that Kreskin also discovered what was happening in the present lives of some of the people. For example, he picked a man out of the audience and mentally found that his sister-in-law was going to have a baby and even figured out that her name was Carla. Not a common name I would say; was there a trick in that one, Mohammad?

And how did Kreskin find his paycheck after it had been hidden anywhere in Shryock Auditorium? It is funny that Hami did not want to attempt to explain that one.

Thank you Mohammad Hami, for telling the public the truth, it is such a shame your truth is wrong. You puzzle me, though, if you are such an expert on these matters and claim to be able to do them yourself, why are you bothering with physics as your major?—Cyndi Kestyslo, junior, Art Education

Ad hoc committee tentatively named to review dean of graduate school

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

An eight member ad hoc committee has been named by the Expanded Executive Committee of the Graduate Council to review John Guyon, dean of the Graduate School. Guyon is also acting vice president for Academic Affairs.

The committee must still be approved by the entire Graduate Council at its meeting Thursday. Dennis Leitner, associate dean of the Graduate School said Monday.

The Operating Paper of the Graduate Council requires review of the Graduate School dean at least once every five years. The 1980-81 school year is Guyon's fifth year as dean of the Graduate School.

The committee members were randomly chosen Friday from a pool of 27, nominated by both the Graduate Council and the Graduate Student Council. Leitner said. Up to 32 nominees were allowed; one member from each college of the Graduate Council, two non-council faculty members from each college and one graduate student from each college. Nominations may still be made at Thursday's meeting.

The committee has one representative from each college with a graduate program.

Leitner said the committee must select a chairperson and talk about review procedures before any reviewing can get under way.

Some of the powers and responsibilities of the graduate dean include acting as liaison between the Graduate Council and the rest of the University, acting as the fiscal officer for the Graduate School and maintaining and improving the overall educational standards of the Graduate School.

"If the committee decides to bring in outside consultants, it could be a month to six weeks before any evaluating will be done," Leitner said.

There is no set deadline for a report from the committee, according to Leitner, but he said he hoped the committee would submit its report by late spring semester. The committee will also give monthly reports to the Graduate Council.

Women may be afraid, but they're fighting back

Women are also buying canisters of pressurized air that let out a loud, high pitched sound when the top is pressed. These are available through the same outlets as the tear-gas-type spray, and are supposed to attract attention if a woman is attacked.

The "America Araid" report which was released last week said that 52 percent of American families have acquired guns for protection, although the report did not breakdown this figure into how many women carry guns.

The report also said that 60 percent of Americans dress plainly to avoid being noticed by criminals and almost 50 percent lock their doors and ask people to identify themselves before letting them in their homes.

The ironic part of all the self-defense methods that women use is that they do not decrease the number of attacks. Majka said, because they do not reduce the number of attackers.

"However, as more and more people become educated about ways of protecting themselves, they reduce their chances of being victims," she said.

Women's Services puts on lectures for residence halls, community group meetings and some classes at SIUC dealing with self-defense. Follansbee said.

Majka stressed the fact that self-defense is 70 percent psychological. Physical skills can't be separated from the mental skills.

She said that many people have the false impression that self-defense classes deal only with being able to physically fight off an attacker. She agreed with Wilkinson that few women can physically overpower a male attacker, adding that women must overcome their fear and not panic in a situation, but try to "take control."

"The idea being to keep yourself out of physical confrontation as much as possible," Follansbee said.

Prisoners escape foreign jails via letter-writing campaigns

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

Exerting pressure for the release of political prisoners jailed in foreign—and often communist—countries isn't exactly the typical function of a small, local citizens' group.

But for the 20 members of Carbondale's Amnesty International Adoption Group, freeing people imprisoned for their "ideas or political associations" is their only business, and they're successful at it.

The group was formed here in 1978 and was then assigned, by the New York based Amnesty International, two prisoners who had been jailed for political beliefs. The group's job was to free its "adopted" prisoners.

Both were freed and the group is now working for the release of a man in a Taiwanese prison.

"We write to prison officials, lawyers related to the people's cases, kings, dictators and everyone else involved," said E. Earle Stibitz, professor emeritus in the English Department and coordinator of Carbondale's amnesty group.

"We tell them that we know what they're up to. When officials are aware of outside knowledge of the particular imprisonment, it often leads to the person's release," he said.

The group supported a woman in Swaziland and a man in Sudan who were both freed by the monarchies in those countries, largely in response to the Carbondale group's letter-writing campaign, Stibitz said.

He said AI—which claims 9,500 members nationwide and 85,000 contributors—works strictly with prisoners in foreign jails and only those who are not connected with any violent crime.

Robert Maurer, associate director in AI's central office in New York City, said the group was formed in 1961, and has helped free 14,000 "prisoners of conscience" in the past 20 years. The group won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for its efforts.

"Half of all the prisoners we try to free are released," Maurer said. "But we also work extensively, and worldwide, on stopping the death penalty. Groups in other countries now adopt a state here in the U.S. and start letter-writing campaigns directed toward governors and others in state government. Norway, for instance, has adopted Mississippi as its state and the United Kingdom, with over 200 AI groups, has recently signed to fight against capital punishment in Illinois," he said.

But AI's main mission is for the release of political prisoners, not to repeal government policies and laws. In Carbondale's case, the group was assigned a woman named Bernice Ndziba, who was jailed in the central African country of Swaziland Stibitz said. Ndziba's husband, who had died in prison, was politically active in opposing the country's monarch. She was not imprisoned for any crime, he said, but only for association with her husband. Stibitz said she was released after several years in prison.

Maurer said the typical prisoner is hard to describe because all countries have different regimes, most of which attempt to conceal kidnapped political prisoners. But many situations are typical.

"In many countries," Maurer said, "holding fundamentalist religious beliefs is against the law. In Russia, Protestants, Baptists and Jews who try to preach the word of their religion are jailed."

Maurer said that countries with military dictatorships—particularly Guatemala and Argentina—have "death squads" of government

WSIU-TV starts new season, programming to show variety

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

The return of old favorites from the BBC, new shows from PBS and locally produced educational shows are among the highlights of the new season of programming on WSIU-TV Channel 8.

"Nuclear Nightmares," a special hosted by actor Peter Ustinov describing scenarios that could lead the world to a nuclear holocaust, will be shown at 7 p.m. this Wednesday. "Nova," a continuing science series that's one of PBS' most popular shows, will open its eighth season at 7 p.m. Tuesday. Another science show, the 13-part "Cosmos" featuring astronomer Carl Sagan, will be aired at 7 p.m. Sundays and 9 p.m. Fridays.

The "Great Performances" presentation of John Le Carre's "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy" six-part series starring Sir Alec Guinness, began at 7 p.m. Monday and will continue for the next five weeks in that time slot. The BBC's Masterpiece Theatre will open at 10 p.m. Tuesday with the four-part adaptation of Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment."

Another new series, "The Body in Question," beginning at 8 p.m. Tuesday, will be hosted by Dr. Jonathan Miller with topics ranging from "Can You Repair Yourself?" to "Will Death Always Be Inevitable?"

WSIU also plans to present shows especially aimed at black audiences on Thursdays, beginning with "Up and Coming" at 7 p.m., a story of black teenagers readjusting to a new school in a new neighborhood. "From Jumpstart," a jazz special, will follow at 7:30 p.m.

"This Old House," a "how-to" show on home renovation, will be shown at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays.

WSIU will also serve the movie-loving viewer with three shows, beginning with "Movie Theater" at 10 p.m. Friday through Monday. Last season, "Movie Theater" reserved Friday as horror night. This year the theme will change to mystery night.

"Sneak Previews," at 6 p.m. Saturday is a 40-week series of movie reviews and clips starring critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert. "Matinee at the Peter Ustinov is host and narrator of "Nuclear Nightmares: Wars That Must Never Happen," to be aired at 7 p.m. Wednesday on WSIU-TV, Channel 8.

Bijou," at 4:30 p.m. Saturdays, is an entertainment program that will try to recreate and present the same things old movie houses used to—cartoons, newsreels, "Flash Gordon" serials and a short film.

This weekend's "Movie Theater" lineup will start Friday with the 1944 mystery "They Live in Fear." Saturday's movie will be "Not As A Stranger," starring Frank Sinatra, followed on Sunday by the 1938 Marx Brothers' film "Room Service." Monday's movie will be "Sinbad the Sailor" starring Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

Public affairs programming, dominated this year by election-related shows, will be very visible on PBS. "Advocates...Election '80" will have shows throughout the season on timely topics ranging from presidential debates to OPEC, at 8 p.m. Mondays. "Government As It Is," a new muckraking special hosted by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, will examine the federal executive branch in the first of a three-part series starting at 9 p.m. Wednesday. "Bill Moyers' Journal," at 8 p.m. Fridays, will feature an eight-part election year edition.

"The Dick Cavett Show," "Over Easy," "Sesame Street" and other popular PBS shows will continue this season, in addition to opera, symphony and rock specials produced by PBS stations throughout the country.

Students in hands-on program call community work valuable

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

Only so much can be learned in the classroom. One SIU-C program offers students a chance to learn their trade in the field.

The University Year for Action program offers college credit and money to students who work in local community projects. More importantly, it gives them the opportunity to gain experience while helping people.

Raymond Lenzi, UYA director, said students in the program are enrolled in at least six hours of classes besides their field work, for which they receive another six hours of credit per semester.

"In our program, students from different areas work together with people in local communities, using their various forms of expertise," Lenzi said.

Beginning its fourth year, UYA is open to juniors, seniors and graduate students. Most of the UYA students study design, administration of justice, rehabilitation, community and social services or human development, Lenzi said.

Although most of the 30 students enrolled in the program are from the College of Human Resources, the projects they work on vary from working with the elderly or helping unemployed youth to installing solar power units, he explained.

Jeff Deer, a design major in UYA, handles the distribution and use of building materials for the Shawnee Solar Project. He said he enrolled in the program because he was "looking for learning without going to class."

"I'm learning a lot now by doing what I want to do," he said.

Students in UYA are paid $225 a month for the 30 to 35 hours of work they put in each week, Lenzi said.

In past few years students have designed and installed solar units for Carbondale, New Burnside and other local communities.

"We are working at the forefront of technological and social change," Lenzi said.

Several of the UYA students work at the Illinois Young Adult Conservation Corp., an organization that provides work for unemployed youth.

Colleen Dullin, a senior in social welfare, works for a senior citizens center in Anna.

"I wanted on-the-job experience doing something I liked, and this was perfect," Dullin said.

Lenzi said the experience UYA students gain through the program can help make them more attractive candidates for employment after graduating from SIU-C.

"Students in our program work with people in the community. They help themselves, they help other people and they learn," he said.

Area group offers cheap concerts

By Steve English
Student Writer

John Corker, best known as director of the Student Center, has taken an additional role.

In his new role, he is anxious for students to know about what he calls "an incredible deal" for those interested in quality entertainment at reasonable—even cut-rate prices.

Corker was recently elected president of Southern Illinois Concerts Inc., a community organization that has scheduled a series of concerts to be held in Shryock Auditorium. SICCI's 46th season will offer a well-balanced variety of entertainment, according to Corker, and a low-priced package for students.

We have had an increasing student interest in our concert series," he said. "Each year our attendance has been increasing by a couple hundred students."

This year SICCI is presenting four concerts for $12 to the general public and half-price to students. Non-students must purchase a season ticket, and will not be able to obtain individual tickets.

Under the contract agreement with Columbia Artists of New York, a booking agent, the selling of individual tickets is prohibited. Through a special arrangement with the agent, however, SICCI has made individual tickets available to students, according to Corker.

"About four years ago we worked out an agreement to purchase 200 tickets per performance to sell to students individually," he said.

Students may now purchase individual tickets for $1.50. Students wanting to attend the concert and a buffet dinner, held prior to the concert in the Old Main Room of the Student Center, may purchase a ticket for just $4.75. Season ticket holders may purchase tickets for the buffet for $5.50. This means that students attending the buffet are seeing the concert for only an additional 25 cents.

Another aspect of the program is SICCI's exchange program with Cape Girardeau and Olney, according to Corker.

"Season ticket holders can go to Cape Girardeau and Olney and see any of the concerts in their series for free. So, actually you can see 13 concerts for the price of a season ticket," he said.

"You will not find quality

Concerts offered at discount prices

entertainment at this low a price anywhere," said Corker. "We would like to get more involvement from the students. We are offering John A. Logan students the same deal we are offering SIU students. We will be advertising on campus and sending out brochures to try to get more students involved."

SICI's 1980-81 season will begin on Oct. 25, with the performance of the Eastern Brass Quintet. They will be followed by the Eleanor Bergquist, Theodore Uppman vocal duet on Feb. 23, the Janacek Chamber Orchestra on March 11, and the Tamburitzans Folk Ensemble on April 20. All performances will be at Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m. Buffet dinners will be served from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

As a bonus concert for new members, a violinist Jaime Laredo will appear March 10 at Shryock Auditorium. Tickets for the concerts may be purchased at the Student Center Ticket Office. No tickets will be sold at the door.

The Eastern Brass Quintet performs works from the Renaissance to contemporary eras of music. They have been together since 1970 and are one of the top music ensembles in the country, according to Corker. The five band members are Richard Green, trumpet; Robert Fanning, trombone; William Wich, trumpet;

Charles Baxter, french horn, and Stephen Ross, tuba. SICI generates its money primarily from ticket sales, Corker said.

"Last year we raised approximately $10,000 from ticket sales and $2,000 from contributions. We are able to book quality acts because the performers we get are on their way up and not already at the top of their field. Since we are a community concert organization, the rates are much cheaper."

There were 900 season-ticket holders last year, according to Corker. "I would like to see that number increase this year," he said.

'Playing for Time' to be devastating

By Peter Boyer
AP Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Playing for Time," the CBS movie starring Vanessa Redgrave as Auschwitz survivor Fania Fenelon, is finally set for broadcast tonight. That it arrives under a cloud of controversy is tragic.

"Playing for Time" is devastating television. It will shake you to the bone. Vanessa Redgrave, whose casting in the lead role caused the storm, delivers a performance that is simply unparalleled in television.

Daniel Mann's direction and Arthur Miller's script are nearly flawless, but the film's greatness resides in Miss Redgrave's performance. Therein lies the tragedy.

Controversy in television is usually an ally in hype, a ratings-booster that networks moan about for appearances but don't really fear. But the casting of Miss Redgrave as the indomitable Fenelon, a French Jew who survived the Auschwitz death camp through music, stirred trouble that went far beyond usual television controversy. This wasn't Archie Bunker flushing a toilet, or "Soap" yukking around with sex

Miss Redgrave is a devoted Trotskyite, profoundly pro-Palestinian and, therefore, anti-Zionist — a political view she expressed before the world in accepting her Oscar for "Julia" two years ago. Jews have likened her casting as a Holocaust survivor to hiring a Ku Klux Klansman to play Martin Luther King Jr.

Almost anyone will agree that the Redgrave hiring was in the least insensitive. Anyone who sees this stunning performance, though, will have to agree that this is Vanessa Redgrave's master work, and that the story of Auschwitz has never been more movingly told.

McLeod Theater to open

"The Madwoman of Chaillot," Jean Giraudoux's Gallic comedy, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday through Sunday at the new McLeod Theater (formerly the University Theater). The highlight of the play's run will be Friday, when a dedication ceremony will be held officially re-naming the theater in honor of former Theater Department chairman Archibald McLeod.

The play, first performed in 1945, tells the story of an old countess who lives in the memories of her past. She reads the same 45-year-old newspaper every morning because she finds the current ones to be unsatisfactory. The only thing that should matter to people is to be happy and not concern themselves with being rich, she insists.

She eventually devises a scheme to drive all the money-hungry people to their doom in the sewers of Paris.

Tickets for this season-opening production are $3 for students and senior citizens and $4 for the public and can be purchased at the theater ticket office from noon to 4 p.m. weekdays.

SPC to show Vonnegut film

"Slaughterhouse Five," a 1972 film starring Michael Sacks, Ron Liebman and Valerie Perrine, will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday at the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $1 for students and $1.50 for non-students.

Filmed on location in Cz-choslovakia and Minnesota, the film adaptation of Kurt Vonnegut's novel concerning World War II experiences and mental illness was directed by George Roy Hill of "The Sting" fame.

The film is being sponsored by the Student Programming Council Films Committee and the SIU-C Vets Club.

Survey finds parties steal study time

By Randy Hognaki
Staff Writer

In a study of activities which deter students from studying, an SIU professor has found that partying and socializing are serious distractions for those students surveyed.

John Mercer, cinema and photography professor, surveyed 432 students last spring in two sections of GSC 349, "The Cinema." He asked them which of 19 outside activities were most damaging to their grades.

Mercer said he considered a "distraction" to be anything that deterred students from studying but was not necessary to their survival at the University. Employment was not included on the questionnaire because Mercer considered it a necessity for students who work.

"There are very few activities around the University to draw students to studying," Mercer said. "But there are a tremendous number which pull students away from studying. Some of these distractions are very serious problems."

Most students who responded to the questionnaire said they go to parties, and 21 percent said partying is harmful to their grades. Mercer said seniors, students living off campus, and students from large high schools seemed to be most affected by partying.

Socializing was considered a serious distraction by almost 18 percent of the students who responded. Sophomores and students from large high schools seemed to be most affected by socializing, Mercer said.

"When I first came to SIU 22 years ago, things were a lot different," Mercer said. "There were only about 8,000 students and only a few taverns near campus."

Listening to music and spending time with a boyfriend or girlfriend were rated as other serious distractions, primarily by students from large high schools. Students from small high schools considered watching television to be a major deterrent to studying.

Men and women responded similarly to the survey. Women, however, were less affected by watching television and partying. Women considered worrying to be a more serious distraction than men did.

Activities which all students who responded considered minor distractions included going to movies, participating in intramural sports, working in a student organization and reading.

Mercer said students at other universities experience distractions similar to those experienced by students who responded to his questionnaire. "At some of the schools in the East, it's one big party from Friday to Monday," he said.

"I would like to see SIU do more in the way of speakers and special seminars which relate directly to academic life," Mercer said. He said he sent his study to the Office of Student Affairs, the Office of Student Communication and Fine Arts, the College of Education and the University News Service.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said, "he found the study 'fascinating.'"

"I thought it was interesting from the perspective that we try to plan a variety of healthy activities which help students work toward graduation," he said.

Swinburne said he was pleased that intramural programs and student programs such as films were not major distractions. He said, however, that he has recognized a trend toward University activities which draw students away from studying.

Women help celebrate themselves through the arts

Lauren Clare
 Writer
 Wesley Foundation
 was the setting Sunday night of poetry, dance and for women and by women community sponsored by Men's Services.

Person, a graduate in guidance and national psychology, was first performer in the program Celebrating Ourself.

for a crowd of about 75 women. Person began by reading poems which were written "using a lot of water imagery."

The common water theme featured in her only published poem "Sea Chanty," about the relationship between her mother and grandmother.
 "To Have or Have Not"
 depicted her childhood fantasy growing up to be another Lauren and the realization that there are times when my lover
 I play scripts."

Merideth Taylor, a lecturer in Theater Department, performed a dance to the reading of haiku poetry Taylor and she is fascinated with haiku and wore a white neutral mask during her performance.
 The audience was particularly amused with the haiku
 "The Cat" and Taylor's sleek pose in imitating the cat as she comes out love-making."

A reading from various Shakespearean plays by Elin Harrison, associate professor in theater, added to the program's diversity.

Harrison characterized Shakespeare's women as "spunky, noble women who knew their minds and followed their hearts."

Readings from "The Merchant of Venice" and "Macbeth" highlighted her performance.
 Sally Idoine, associate professor in the Physical Education Department, performed a short dance number entitled "On the Edge of Return."

Wearing bright orange trousers and a black leotard, Idoine performed a fast-paced dance number which "has no beginning or end," she said.
 The coffeehouse atmosphere of the lounge set the mood for Sandy Hull as she strummed a guitar and sang some of her own material.

Her powerful vocals were best expressed when she sang
 "Motherless Child" a cappella.

couches and chairs, were captivated by her lyrics and easy going manner.

"I've always compared life to a river," she said at the end of the set, "constantly changing and growing, kind of like us."

Jan Robinson, an adjunct instructor in the School of Medicine, gave an inspiring poetry reading about several women she has known and the effect each has had on her life.

The first was about a woman friend and their symbiotic relationship. The second poem, she said, was written about 10 years ago and concerned a woman who was a patient in a mental institution.

Katee Miller, a woman from the community who is known for her satirical poetry, gave an oral presentation on "in-congruities in the educational environment."

"Take an education, not a class," was the topic of the lecture aimed at the stress on grades aimed at learning in the institutional environment.

associate professor of English, and her mother Frances rounded out the Sunday evening presentation.

Slides of the southwestern part of the United States and the awesome southwest coast of Alaska were shown to highlight the poetry essay.

Wrapping up the evening,
 Ellen Buechner, a music student, sang some of her original tunes which incorporated contemporary themes.

One song dealt with divorce, but the crowd favorite was about women and striking the balance between love and sex.

Homemaking ruled asset in divorce case

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Homemakers add value to a marriage that courts must weigh along with each partner's financial contribution when dividing a couple's assets in a divorce, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled Monday.

"While we perceive some difficulty in assessing the value to be placed on the different forms of contribution, we caution against placing too much emphasis on monetary contributions...." the court's seven justices said in a unanimous opinion.

The ruling upheld the 1977 Illinois divorce law provision ordering courts to divide property between marriage partners "in just proportions considering all relevant factors, including... the contribution of a spouse as a homemaker or to the family unit."

The case involved Edith and Albert Aschwarden, formerly of Decatur, who in 1977 each sought divorce after 25 years of marriage.

A Macon County circuit court ordered Aschwarden to give his former wife $120,000 in stocks that he had accrued in a stock purchase plan at Archer-Daniels Midland Co., where he was an executive.

The award to Mrs. Aschwarden represented 22 percent of the childless couple's net worth of $543,000 and was inadequate, the court said.

The Supreme Court agreed with a state appellate court that had thrown out the trial court's award, saying it failed to meet the "just proportions" requirement of the state's 1977 divorce law.

Aschwarden contended the $120,000 property settlement to his former wife was adequate. And he said the $15,000-a-year in alimony and the $11,000 in lawyer fees made the settlement "equitable."

"The evidence reveals that... (Mrs. Aschwarden) contributed substantial services as a homemaker over the long duration of the couple's marriage," said the state Supreme Court opinion.

Written by Justice Thomas J. Moran, it also said she helped Aschwarden accrue the couple's financial assets by shopping, planning meals and helping entertain company executives and customers while the couple was stationed at ADM's Belgium offices from 1973 to 1977.

"(Aschwarden's) occupation and his long-standing employment with ADM afford him both a very high and steady income and the prospect of continued high income in the future," Moran wrote.

"By contrast, (Mrs. Aschwarden's) station and health leave her with little opportunity to regain and maintain the standard of living to which the couple had become accustomed..." said the opinion.

Mrs. Aschwarden, who suffered back troubles, returned to her native Switzerland in 1977 and resumed a pre-marital career as a dental assistant, the court record said.

"We do not view the (state divorce laws) property disposition section... as mandating an equal distribution of marital property," Justice Moran wrote.

But he said the law required a court to consider such factors as the value of a homemaker's contributions to a marriage and family, and the length of the marriage, when dividing property.

Iraqi citizens proud of battle with Iran, despite huge oil cuts

By Steve K. Hindy
Associated Press Writer
BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Hajj Mohammed Zuwait tuned his small transistor radio and gestured to his visitors to be quiet for a moment. He listened intently to news of Iraqi victories on the Iranian front and smiled.

"We hear about the war with Iran, but we don't really have to live with it here," said the 60-year-old Zuwait, sitting cross-legged under a lazily whirring punkah fan in his stall at the local market.

Barely four hours earlier, Iranian warplanes had buzzed the city and bombed the nearby Rashid military base. Zuwait didn't think the early morning raid was worth mentioning.

The eight-day-old border war with Iran has substantially cut oil exports and blocked Iraq's only sea outlet, but it has had little impact on life here in the Iraqi capital.

Freshly baked bread is stacked in the bakeries and the private and government-owned stores are well stocked with rice, meat and other staples.

Diplomats say hoarding of imported products always has been a problem in Iraq's government-controlled economy, and they are surprised that the war has not caused a run on other goods.

The market — heart of this and every other Arab capital — is bustling with little boys carrying huge bolts of fabric piled on their heads, grizzled farmers driving heavily burdened mules and horses and shoppers with packed bags.

In this socialist state, as well as in Arab nations with more conservative political systems, the market is the province of the old families of the city. The war seems very popular in there.

"High honor is not safe unless it is framed in blood," said Zuwait, his gold tooth gleaming.

Most shop owners seem proud to say they have sons fighting in Arabistan — "land of the Arabs" — the Iraqi name for Iran's Khuzestan Province.

Iraq would agree to cease-fire provided Iran would do the same

he urged her, as a leader in the non-aligned movement, to help end the war. The envoy, Shams Ardakani, said Cuba, the current chairman of the non-aligned bloc, also was playing a role, but he did not elaborate.

—A "good will" mission from the Islamic Conference arrived in Baghdad. The mission — headed by conference leaders, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan and conference Secretary-General Habib el Chatti of Tunisia — was told by Iranian leaders earlier in Tehran that it would not be permitted to mediate the Iraq-Iran dispute, but could gather facts.

—Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadeh left here for New York to appear before the U.N. General Assembly and defend Iraq's position in the war, Baghdad Radio reported.

—In Washington, the State Department repeated assurances that the United States intends to remain neutral but said it opposes the seizure of territory by force by either Iraq or Iran.

AP correspondent Steven R. Hurst, reporting from near Qasr-e-Shirin at the northern end of the Iraqi invasion front, said the Iraqis were moving troops, tanks and armored personnel carriers southward toward the oil-rich Khuzestan province where heavy fighting has occurred since the border dispute erupted into war on Monday of last week. Qasr-e-Shirin, 15 miles inside Iran, is some 300 miles north of Abadan, the major Iranian oil refining port on the Shatt al-Arab waterway separating the two countries.

The implication appeared to be that Iranian forces had been offering stiffer resistance than Iraq had expected on the southern front.

Iraq reported ground fighting along 200 miles of the invasion front, running northward from Abadan to Mehran. Iraq claimed it captured the air force base and radar station at Dezful, 70 miles north of Ahwaz, the capital of Khuzestan province which Iraq claimed to have captured last week.

Tehran Radio carried a military communique saying an Iranian warplane shot down an Iraqi MiG after it attacked an Iranian army helicopter near Ahwaz. The broadcast said the pilot was found dead.

An earlier Tehran Radio broadcast said "all Iraqi pilots who have sought sanctuary in Iran, or whose planes have been shot down, who baled out and who are being held by the Iranian forces, are well and healthy."

The commander of the Iranian navy was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying his ships had forced the Iraqi navy to seek shelter in ports of other Persian Gulf nations. The state-run station also quoted him as saying Iran's navy was in complete control of the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's outlet, and that foreign commercial ships could proceed normally as long as they do not head for Iraqi ports.

The Iranian coast guard carried out a sea-borne raid on Iraqi oil storage tanks and military targets at Faw, Bishah and Qesleh, the official news agency Pars quoted a military communique as saying. All three are near a major Iraqi deep-sea oil terminal at the head of the gulf by the entrance to the Shatt al-Arab.

An Iranian communique said Iranian forces had forced invading Iraqi troops to retreat at Sar-e-Pol-e-Zahab, a town near the main border crossing point of Qasr-e-Shirin.

Iraqi said its army was tightening its siege of Abadan, 15 miles east of Khorramshahr, where Iran's big oil refinery was afire from bombing and artillery attacks. An Iraqi refinery area in Basra also was still burning from Iranian air attacks.

In other developments: —Tehran Radio reported that the Iranian Foreign Ministry summoned separately envoys from Algeria, Syria, Somalia, Kuwait, The United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Bahrain and Jordan to explain Iran's position in the war. The radio carried a ministry statement quoting the Arab envoys as saying, "The attack on Iran is an American project."

—Iranian Premier Mohammad Ali Rajai was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying Iran had warned Arab nations not to aid Iraq or "we shall consider them as being in a state of war."

—Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi met in New York with U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and said his country opposed intervention in the Persian Gulf by any outside power, including the United States.

Discrimination review set up

The Illinois Human Rights Commission will meet in Carbondale Wednesday to review decisions by administrative law judges on discrimination complaints filed by the Illinois Department of Human Rights.

The panel meeting—which is open to the public—will begin at 10 a.m. in the Federal Building, 205 W. Cherry St.

Following the panel meeting the seven commissioners will tour the campus and join the University's Affirmative Action Council for lunch. The Affirmative Action Council directs the activities of the Affirmative Action Office and is made up of representatives of University relations, student affairs, financial affairs, campus services and academic affairs divisions.

The commissioners will be guests of the Affirmative Action Office at a 2 p.m. reception in Student Center Ballroom C.

Both the Human Rights Commission and the cabinet-level Department of Human Rights were established by the 1979 Illinois Human Rights Act. The act superseded the Fair Employment Practices Act.

South African 'synfuels' example for U.S.

William Nicholson
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa

A vast jungle of pipes, storage tanks and giant towers emerging from arid bush country means energy survival in South Africa — and a sample of things to come in the United States.

OPEC price increases and, more recently, fighting between Iran and Iraq demonstrate how venerable industrialized nations are to disruptions in supplies of petroleum imports.

Indeed, in Washington on Monday, the House Government Operations subcommittee earned in a report that the U.S. faces the constant threat of a major supply disruption. "Because of its high dependence on imported oil and a lack of energy emergency planning. But this is old news to South Africa, which now has probably the most advanced synthetic fuel operation in the world. It's been producing 'synfuels' for the last 25 years.

Just this week, the state-controlled South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp. — better known as SASOL — announced that a synthetic fuel plant using its technology will be built in North Dakota. A consortium of American companies is to build the coal-to-oil facility near Louisiana sulphur coal fields in that state.

The U.S. Congress passed legislation in June for a $20 billion program to launch a synthetic fuels industry. The program's goal is to produce the equivalent of 500,000 barrels of imported oil a day by 1987, or about 4 percent of today's daily U.S. oil consumption.

SASOL officials expect their technology to be deeply involved in the American program. The Los Angeles-based Fluor Corp. has an agreement to market SASOL know-how in America.

Long before the rest of the world discovered that cheap oil wasn't cheap anymore, South Africa had a problem.

The most industrialized country in Africa, it had no oil deposits of its own. It has lots of coal — an estimated 61 billion tons — and thus needs imported oil for only a fourth of its energy needs. But this oil goes for public and private transport and the economy would collapse without it.

The white minority government committed itself to a synthetic fuel industry just after World War II and used some Nazi technology to start its first oil-from-coal plant, SASOL 1. By 1955, the plant, located 40 miles south of Johannesburg, was producing gasoline and 20 other petroleum products.

The technique, developed in Germany during the war, uses steam and oxygen under intense pressure to convert coal to carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, hydrogen and methane. The gas is liquified to produce a synthetic oil almost indistinguishable from natural crude.

The South African government keeps a tight wrap around details of the process and how much it costs. It is assumed that production of SASOL fuel costs far more than natural oil. But South Africa is less concerned about cost than it is about getting fuel.

Iran was South Africa's traditional petroleum supplier until the fall of the Shah. The Shah's father, when he was in exile during World War II, was given refuge in South Africa.

The revolutionary Iranian government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini cut off oil sales to South Africa last year, joining other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries which refuse to sell oil to the white minority government because of its race segregation policies.

South Africa now buys oil on the spot market, where the cost can be twice as high as current OPEC prices. But South Africa, as the world's largest gold producer, has plenty of money to spend. In fact, it is understood that the government already has 18 months of oil supplies stored in secret tank farms and unused underground mines.

When OPEC sharply escalated oil prices in 1973, South Africa began constructing SASOL 2, a synthetic fuel plant occupying 1,850 acres that has 1) times the capacity of SASOL 1. It has already begun production and will be operating at full capacity within two or three years.

Last year, in light of the Iranian revolution, the launching of SASOL 3 — a carbon copy of SASOL 2 — was announced. It is being built alongside SASOL 2 and a workforce of 22,000 is on site. SASOL 3 should be operating by 1984. SASOL 2 and 3 are located near rich coal deposits 120 miles southeast of Johannesburg.

Carbondale considers energy code

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

A code setting minimum energy efficiency requirements for new commercial buildings in Carbondale has been proposed by the city's Energy Advisory Commission.

The code, modeled on guidelines suggested by the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers Inc., will be reviewed by the City Council at its meeting Oct. 6.

EAC Chairman Chris Robertson said the code will set "bare minimum standards" for new commercial structures, and will not be restrictive on contractors now constructing energy efficient buildings.

"There are people in Southern Illinois buildings now that vastly exceed this code. For them, this code will be irrelevant. There may be some buildings planned, such as those with a standard design as in the case of a national chain, that will require some redesign," Robertson said.

The highly technical ASHRAE insulation standards for energy conservation are designed to be followed by engineers and architects, Robertson said, and are difficult for a layman to understand. The requirements will apply to each proposed building depending on its size and its use. He stressed that although the code will be a new legal requirement in Carbondale, most builders would exceed the requirements set by the code.

EAC member Steve Miller said, "A person would be foolish to be in business and put up a building that does not comply with the standards in the ASHRAE code." He said that even if builders incurred higher construction costs for more insulation, the extra expenditure would be made up by lower energy costs, which figure heavily into the cost of operating a business.

Miller said about $30 million spent on energy leaves Carbondale each year and the loss has a negative effect on city businesses. More efficient buildings would keep some of those dollars in circulation locally and make for a healthier business climate.

"More money in circulation will provide a better atmosphere for business, which in turn will attract more business into Carbondale. Energy conservation growth and economic growth go hand-in-hand," Miller said.

Robertson said each dollar saved on energy could potentially circulate 25 times through the community and the multiplier effect to local businesses could be very high.

Robertson said the EAC has received no negative reaction to the code yet, and comments from the public are invited at the council meeting Oct. 6. The EAC will recommend the council adopt the code as soon as possible, he said.

"There is a good climate of awareness on the part of the citizens, government and the business community in Carbondale related to energy issues. There is a very favorable environment here in terms of how people understand the issues," Robertson said.

A code revising insulation requirements for ceilings, walls and floors in new residential housing was adopted by the City Council in June. That code becomes effective Jan. 1, 1981, or when the city issues single family revenue bonds, whichever comes first.

Energy saving program may cause health problems

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government's energy saving program to "button up" homes and offices may be contributing to health hazards by not allowing polluted air to escape outdoors, says a congressional study released Monday.

The General Accounting Office said in its report that polluted air trapped inside buildings could lead to respiratory illnesses and even, in some cases, increase the risk of cancer.

The GAO report also criticized private industry for not paying enough attention to indoor pollution.

"Efforts to button up homes, schools and office buildings to decrease their energy use permits less air to enter or escape. Pollutants produced indoors are trapped and their concentrations increase," the report said.

It also said the federal government has contributed to some of the problem by using tax credits to encourage citizens to better insulate their homes. One material qualifying for this incentive is urea formaldehyde foam insulation, which is a source of potentially harmful indoor air pollution.

"So, in attempting to resolve the nation's energy shortage, the government may very well be advocating solutions which will adversely affect public health," the report concluded.

"While government and industry have concentrated on cleaning up the nation's outdoor air, they have paid little attention to the quality of indoor air in the non-workplace," the report contended.

"Yet indoor air pollution may pose a potentially more serious health problem since we spend 70 to 80 percent of our time indoors—at home, at work, or at play," the report said. Also, certain groups such as infants, the elderly, the handicapped, as well as homemakers, spend even a greater percentage of their time indoors.

The GAO asserted that harmful pollutants have been found in the indoor air in concentrations greater than the outdoor surrounding air and in some instances greater than recommended exposure standards.

The GAO identified some of the more harmful indoor pollutants as radon, carbon monoxide, formaldehyde, nitrogen dioxide, respirable particles and asbestos.

Tobacco smoke, soot, ash and dust were also mentioned. The GAO recommended that the EPA take the initiative to deal with indoor pollution, but in the meantime it said the public can take steps to deal with the lack of ventilation.

The GAO suggested the periodic "airing out" of homes to offset the buildup of pollutants, installing air purifiers, filtering equipment, and ventilation systems

Solar project should be intergrated with home loan plans, report says

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

The integration of a solar energy project with Carbondale's home mortgage loan plan will be encouraged in a Shawnee Solar Project report to be released this week, Chris Robertson, project manager, said.

The report will present ways Carbondale could develop a municipal solar utility (MSU) to Women cops can hold their own, says professor

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP)—The image of a gun-swirling lady sheriff would never work in the old-time westerns, but a police researcher contends that nowadays, women often make the best cops.

Edmund Grosskopf, an Indiana State University professor, recently spent 10 months researching the Cook County Sheriff's Police Department in Illinois.

The professor, a burly ex-policeman who served for 10 years with the Chicago Police Department, says his research and experience shows female officers handle the job at least as well—and often better—than men.

Grosskopf disputes the argument that women make poor police officers because they don't have the physical strength to subdue subjects by force.

"That argument simply doesn't stand up, since police officers are given batons, mace, handcuffs and firearms to create an advantage for them," he said.

Besides, he added, women often don't need to use violence.

perform such energy-related functions as installing, maintaining and financing privately-owned solar energy systems. The report will also suggest combining MSU plans with the city's plan for providing residents with home mortgage loans, Robertson said.

The loan plan, which has been under City Council consideration since 1979, is meant to encourage home ownership in low- and middle-income families by offering low interest rates on mortgages and low down payments.

Robertson, who is also chairman of the city's Energy Advisory Commission, said preliminary reports on the solar project have brought on discussion by the City Council about increasing the maximum loan limit by $5,000 for applicants planning to install passive solar energy systems in their homes.

Shawnee Solar Project, a local, non-profit organization, is also working with underwriters of the loan project to develop more ways of integrating the two schemes. Discussion has included working with the lending institutions distributing the loans, he said.

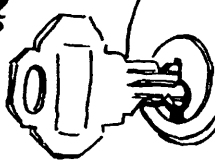

Organization and financial methods used by cities with MSUs were studied in Phase I of the study. Phase II, scheduled to begin before the end of September, will include, among other things, more in-depth studies into financial options and solar project costs and benefits for Carbondale's MSU, Robertson said.

The Phase II budget of about $42,000 is still being considered by the Illinois Institute of Natural Resources but is expected to be approved without any problems, Robertson said.

"The INR has a very strong commitment to this project

Tulsa just misses upset of powerful Razorbacks

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—"I've never been as proud of a football team as I am of this one," Tulsa Coach John Cooper said moments after the Missouri Valley's Hurricane barely missed scoring a major upset. No. 15 Arkansas had to resort to a 41-yard, fourth-quarter field goal by Ish Ordonez to survive Tulsa, 13-10, in Fayetteville Saturday.

Tulsa quarterback Kenny Jackson engineered the near upset by rushing 98 yards and completing five of six passes for 117 yards.

But Tulsa lost five fumbles.

was stopped late in the game on the one-yard line and missed a field goal with 2:40 left.

In nonconference action, Wichita State, Missouri Valley leader at 2-0 and 3-1 overall, won its first game on the road in two years, defeating Cincinnati, 13-8.

Indiana State's Reggie Allen showed he was healthy again by completing 10 of 14 pass... for 147 yards in the undefeated Sycamores' 27-9 win over Akron.

Defending Valley champion West Texas State bopped Southwestern Texas State, 21-13.

Tiebreaker win gives netters narrow victory

"It's going to be real confusing," Auld said. "Northwestern will be the No. 1 seed, that's basic fact."

The Salukis got a firsthand view of NU's strength during the 9-0 loss in Evanston. Auld left the match in awe of Wildcat freshman Randi Rosen, who humbled Martin at No. 3 singles.

"She is devastating," Auld said. "Randi is just an excellent player. But I wasn't particularly impressed with their No. 5 and 6 players. Becky just as easily could have won her match."

The Salukis rebounded from the Northwestern nightmare by blanking Circle. According to Auld, that gave SIU-C confidence going into the Illinois match, and brought to light "what might have been" had the team played Circle first, then lost to NU.

all six players and the others on the bench. Right now, I'd have to say they are all about the same level. There are no superior six on the team. Or at least a superior six hasn't emerged yet."

The team doesn't play another match until Monday when it faces Florissant Valley Community College of St. Louis, a power in national junior college volleyball circles for the last five years. Florissant Valley won the NJCAA nationals in 1976 and haven't finished any lower than fifth in recent years.

Hunter and her assistants will see the off week to work out the links.

"We aren't panic stricken yet. This isn't a really bad thing to happen to us because we haven't reached mid-season yet," Hunter said. "It's going to take some very careful observation on my part to see who is doing what well. This weekend could be very significant for us. It was a good experience because it forced us to exchange ideas."

Will 2-year layoff take its toll as Ali attempts to regain title?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—"You're in trouble." Muhammed Ali shouted at Larry Holmes while the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion sparred.

The old master was psyching another opponent, right? Well, that's not the way Holmes sees it.

"They say he's trying to psych me," Holmes said. "But he's trying to psych himself. Let me tell you something: He lost all that weight, but he ain't hard. He's still got a lot of flab on him."

All chatters constantly about how he's gotten down from 256 pounds to the low 220s for his title bid against Holmes Thursday night at Caesar's Palace—his first fight in two years.

Ali won the World Boxing Association title by outpointing Leon Spinks on Sept. 15, 1978.

The 30-year-old Holmes knows the effect a long layoff can have on a fighter. He damaged his right hand in outpointing Roy Williams April 30, 1976, and didn't fight again until Jan. 16, 1977, when he outpointed Tom Prater.

"Tom Prater was the hardest fight of my life," said Holmes. "I lost my zip. I couldn't knock him out and I hit him with the kitchen sink."

But inactivity has not been a problem for Holmes since he won the WBC title on a split decision over Ken Norton in a fast-paced 15 rounds June 9, 1978. He has made seven defenses three of them this year—knocking out Lorenzo Zanon in six rounds Feb. 3, stopping Leroy Jones in eight rounds March 31 and stopping Scott LeDoux in seven rounds July 7.

"I'm in condition to go hard for 15 rounds," said Holmes, who scoffs at questions about his stamina.

While Holmes claims he is not bothered by Ali's antics, he does admit to being annoyed sometimes by the hustle and bustle that comes with a big fight with the constant questioning and picture-taking.

"One photographer was naming me fight a cactus. you know what I mean?" said Holmes, his eyebrows arching.

"When I return I don't want people coming up to me," said Holmes. "I want to fade away."

"I was concerned with us losing to Northwestern and I wanted us to bounce back," Auld said. "Going to Circle and doing so well might have had a positive effect going into the match Sunday. When I made the schedule, I didn't even think about that, but it may have been a big factor."

Some boxing people feel that although the 38-year-old Ali has lost weight, he might not be in fighting trim because of the long layoff.

"That's a big drawback," said Ken Norton, who fought Ali three times and Holmes once, "plus the fact that his fight against Spinks wasn't that good. He didn't do that much."

Fielders win, but put applause on hold

Saluki goaltender Kenda Cunningham tries to kick a shot away during an SIU-C field hockey contests at Bowling Green and the College Weekend tournament at Sauk Valley College in practice at Wham Field. Cunningham, a senior, allowed only three goals in five games in SIU-C's

If your Little League team went on a road trip and came home with a 3-1-1 record, you'd think the coach would take you to Dairy Queen. But when your team doesn't play up to expectations, the fruits of victory taste something less than sweet.

The Saluki field hockey team isn't made up of tireless perfectionists, but Coach Julie Illner wasn't 100 percent satisfied after her team won at Bowling Green, 3-0, last Friday, and went 2-1-1 in the College Weekend tournament at Sauk Valley College Saturday and Sunday.

"It's just that we're doing good, but everybody knows we can do better," Illner said Monday. "We're at the point where we know we can do it, but I don't know if we're lacking concentration as the game goes on or what."

In the Sauk Valley tournament, the Salukis scored 1-0 wins over Wisconsin-Stevens Point and Earlham College. In a game Illner felt her team controlled, the Salukis ended up in a 2-2 tie with Northwestern. SIU-C lost 1-0 to Central Michigan. In all five games over the weekend, Illner pointed to her biggest dissatisfaction—a lack of scoring.

"We should be scoring more," Illner said. "The Bowling Green game was a good one, but I think we had 43 shots and ended up putting only three in the goal. I don't know if we're losing our poise around the goal or what. We were hitting the ball too much and not passing it."

The scoring that SIU did get showed a little more balance than usual. At Bowling Green, Cindy Davis put the Salukis in front, followed by goals from Ellen Massey and Karen Tonks. The Saluki offense showed some signs of snappy play on Massey's goal in the second half.

"Our third goal looked really good," Illner said. "A pass came all the way across the field, Ellen stopped it dead on her stick, and put it right in. But overall, our stickwork just isn't there yet. We have to stop the ball and control it around the circle in front of the goal."

Massey also scored two goals in the tie with Northwestern, giving her nine goals so far this season.

The 1-0 victory over Wisconsin-Stevens Point came with a goal from winger Peg Kielsmeier. The Salukis held a 28-9 shots-on-goal advantage. But Illner felt that her 6-1-1 team was in total control of the tie with Northwestern, also.

"I felt we were in control of the game," Illner recalled. "We scored the first goal, and I remember turning away from the field for a minute, and the next thing I knew, I look around. Here's Kenda (goalie Cunningham) picking the ball out of our net and a couple of our players picking each other off the ground. It happened that fast."

Illner added that injuries, minor but numerous, also put a damper on the weekend outing. Mary Bruckner and Mary Gilbert each suffered sprained ankles, and reserve Cindy Clausen reinjured her left knee.

"Our bus was more like a hospital bus on the way home," Illner said. "Everybody was getting iced down and everything. Dore Weil played for Gilbert in the Earlham game and scored our only goal, but we also had three called back by penalties."

"But when Bruckner got hurt in the Bowling Green game, it kinda threw our timing off. I moved Peg to the right inner spot and put Jennifer Bartley (a freshman) out on the wing. They both did good jobs, but Peg was a little uncomfortable playing right inner."

Illner classified this Friday's game against SIU-Edwardsville and next Tuesday's game at Southeast Missouri as breaks in the schedule. But the practices this week will be anything but relaxing.

"It's not that we're not trying, but sometimes we're trying in the wrong way," Illner said. "We tend to push ourselves and be a little overaggressive. We need to slow down the pace on offense, spread out a little and take fewer, more controlled shots."

Netters break tie, edge Illinois

By Scott Stahmer
Associate Sports Editor

The countless hours the women's tennis team spent driving on Interstate 57 this weekend just wouldn't have seemed worth it if Jeannie Jones and Lisa Warrem hadn't won their third-set tiebreaker.

Fortunately for the Salukis, Jones and Warrem defeated Illinois' Lisa Buchanan and Amy Young in the tiebreaker at No. 1 doubles, 7-3. That gave Jones and Warrem a 4-6, 7-6, 7-6 win, and it was SIU-C's winning margin in its 5-4 win over the Fighting Illini Sunday afternoon in Champaign.

With that win, SIU-C finished 2-1 for the weekend. The Salukis traveled up I-57 Saturday and lost to Northwestern, 9-0, but bounced back to overwhelm Illinois-Chicago Circle by the same score.

"I'm real proud of the way we came through," Saluki Coach Judy Auld said of the win over the Illini. "We lost to them earlier in the season, 6-3, when I felt like we could have beaten them. This shows how much we've improved."

"This was just a real good weekend for us," Auld added. "It showed our people how important WHERE you win is, no matter what position you play in. We're making progress, and that's what I shoot for."

The Illinois match was as close as the final score indicates. Jones topped Sara Olson at No. 1 singles, Debbie Martin defeated Kathy Kewney at No. 3 singles, and Becky Ingram edged Rita Hoppman at No. 5 singles. But Warrem lost to Gayathri deSilva at No. 2. Sue Hutchison whipped Stacy Sherman at No. 4, and Maureen McNamara beat Mona Etchison at No. 6.

In doubles, Ingram-Etchison downed Hoppman-Kewney but Martin-Sherman lost to deSilva-Donna Crane, making the score

4-4 and putting SIU-C's victory hopes in Warrem and Jones' court.

They lost the first set to Buchanan and Young, staved off defeat by winning the second set in a tiebreaker, and finally ended the match by capturing the decisive tiebreaker.

"They came back and fought back," Auld said of Warrem and Jones. "They're playing a lot better doubles, talking to each other on the court and cutting down on errors. For awhile, they weren't playing good doubles at all."

"Jeannie played a lot better than she has been. She played four tiebreakers and won them all. It seems like she has her confidence back."

The Salukis' win confuses the picture for the AIAW state tournament. SIU-C has lost to Illinois State twice but has defeated Illinois, while the Illini have beaten ISU.

Hunter looking for some answers as spiker squad collapses at BYU

"At least we didn't have any injuries" is the only positive aspect volleyball coach Debbie Hunter could point out following a dismal trip to the Brigham Young Invitational last week.

The Salukis lost five of the six matches they played and did not play the way Hunter would have liked. Utah State won the tournament, defeating Texas at Arlington.

"It was a very disappointing week," Hunter said. "I should have expected it with such a young team, but I really didn't think this would happen. We played very poorly Thursday and Saturday, but played very well on Friday. We lost to the two weak teams that we should have beaten and played well against the good teams."

SIU-C lost its first match to Idaho State, 8-15, 15-9, 7-15, and its second match to Lamar University, 14-16, 10-15. The Salukis then took on two teams that Hunter said were even tougher: California-Long Beach and Colorado State. Long Beach dumped the Salukis, 15-7, 15-11, but the Salukis gave CSU a scare before losing 2-15, 15-13, 12-15.

"We actually threatened to win against Colorado," Hunter said. "It was probably the best match we played all week."

SIU-C squeaked out a win over Western Arizona, 15-10, 15-11, 12-15, 15-11, but lost to New Mexico, 13-15, 8-15, 5-15.

"Arizona had been playing badly and we managed to beat them although we didn't play well either," the coach said. "New Mexico played badly too, but we played worse than they did. I had figured we would finish twelfth out of the 20 teams. I never thought we would finish 17th."

Hunter couldn't put her finger on what exactly went wrong, but she hopes to avoid a repeat of the weekend's play.

"The frustrating thing is inconsistency," she said. "We would get one phase of our game going well and another phase would collapse. Our blocking game wasn't what it should have been either. Idaho was that superior. In fact, they may have been the worst team we have faced all year."

One of the team's problems may be the absence of leadership on the court.

"This is the first time Sonya (Locke) and Mary (Maxwell) haven't carried us," Hunter said. "It was the first time that Mary didn't come on real strong. But she can't do it all, all the time."

"We have been banking on them, but we can't ride on the shoulders of two people," she continued. "We have to rely on

Poole rushes his way to conference honors

The Saluki football team was able to rush for 315 yards Saturday against a team that was the No. 1 defensive team against the run.

The leading Saluki rusher against Drake, junior tailback Walter Poole, was recognized for his efforts in SIU-C's 34-28 win Monday. Poole was named the Missouri Valley Conference offensive player of the week.

For the second straight week, Poole, the Salukis' leading ground gainer, picked up more than 100 yards rushing. The Hubbard, Ohio native ran the ball 24 times for 142 yards and three touchdowns. It was Poole's career high rushing total.

This season, Poole is leading the team in rushing with 391 yards and in touchdowns with seven. He is averaging 97 yards rushing per ball game and 5.6 yards per carry.

The fastest Saluki running back was hit with an injury jinx his first two seasons. As a freshman, he moved into the starting tailback slot in the game with Wichita State.

Walter Poole

The Salukis are currently the top rushing team in the Missouri Valley because of the total yardage of Poole, fullback Vic Harrison, quarterback Gerald Carr and the inspired play of the experienced Saluki offensive line, self-proclaimed the "labor gang."
