Bennett says families need to plan for college

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary William Bennett said Monday big families with incomes of more than $60,000 should do “family planning a little better than the other means” than federal aid to send children to college. Bennett is fighting the Reagan administration’s proposal to prohibit federal loans to any student whose annual family income tops $60,000, told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. “I guess we are saying to that 8 percent of the population (families with more than four children), ‘If you’re smart enough to make $60,000, do your family planning a little better.’” Bennett said. “Not have fewer children, just maybe do your family planning a little better or find other means.” The proposal for federal aid on family income for federal college savings was rejected in a center piece of the Reagan administration’s embattled budgeting scholar, said to cut student assistance by 25 percent. Critics say it would spell hardship, particularly for families with several children in college simultaneously. Bennett package has been denounced by a number of educators and members of Congress. It is part of a compromise Reagan would have little support with Senate Republican leaders.

New dean appointed for COLA

John S. Jackson, Political Science Department faculty member, has been appointed as dean of the College of Liberal Arts, bringing to a close the search for a dean that was begun last fall.

The appointment, which is subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees, was announced Monday by President Albert Bennett. Jackson is a man of great backbone of the institution. He is known for his publishing in a variety of fields.

The appointment, which is subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees, was announced Monday by President Albert Bennett. Jackson is known for his publishing in a variety of fields.

Jackson is an “experienced administrator, a man of great integrity and a good solid public scholar,” President Bennett said. “He has all the characteristics you could want in a dean.”

Jackson, who has been an associate dean in the College of Liberal Arts since August 1984, was one of three finalists in a nationwide field.

“I look forward to the challenge of working with the department, faculty and students in making the College of Liberal Arts the important backbone of the institution, as you all will be,” Bennett said.

As dean, Jackson will “work on understanding what it means to be a liberal,” the college,” he said. “It means a big and diverse place, ranging across 14 departments.”

Study says union faculty wages higher

By David Liss
Mark Weber
Faculty at unionized public universities and colleges earn higher salaries than their colleagues at non-union public institutions, according to a study in the May 1 Chronicl of Higher Education.

However, collective bargaining would have little impact on salaries at SIU, said John Guyon, SIU president for academic affairs.

The study, carried out by the College and University Personnel Association, indicates that faculty at public institutions with collective bargaining earn an average of $31,961, while those at public institutions without collective bargaining earn an average of $29,391.

This type of study shows the need for unionization,” at SIU, said Michael Altekruse, representing the United Faculty Association on campus.

The AAUP, affiliated with the Illinois Education Association, which is part of the National Education Association, recently filed a petition with the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board to bring a collective bargaining election to SIU/C.

“It is not clear to me how (salaries) would be improved by collective bargaining” at SIU, Guyon said. “In terms of obtaining additional resources, the University gets money through state allocation.” Guyon said, on which collective bargaining would have little impact.

South African policeman strangled

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police said Monday they found the charred body of a black policeman who was strangled and set afire, apparently by black radicals who oppose cooperation with the white minority government.

The discovery brought the worst death toll from mob violence in South Africa to 10 people.

Boat regatta will be changed for next year

By Jeff Curt

After SIU-C’s cardboard boat regatta last Saturday, a group of people near campus lake were drinking beer. Empty cans rested near their feet. Richard Archer, professor in design and director of the regatta, said he asked the people to pick up the empty cans but they “flipped me the bird.”

Archer said when the regatta was smaller, people used to help pick up trash after the event. However, during last year regattas, boat participants took it upon themselves to clean a challenge to make a creative design instead of a way to win a race. Boatholders didn’t use many materials other than cardboard either.

“It’s at the point now where we’re going to have to throw people out of the race,” said Archer, referring to the racers who add wood or Styrofoam to their boats.

Gus Bodc

Gus says Bennett’s family should have done some family planning — just before Bennett arrived.

Herbert Donow

President of the University Professors. This would mean that salaries at unionized institutions so much higher than non-unionized institutions.

“I wonder how they plan to respect to travel money, equipment, class size and all the other factors” that contribute to the quality of an institution.

“I suspect if you did a similar study in these areas the results would show significant improvement” in unionized institutions, Donow said. The UP-SIU, affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Teachers, which is part of the American Federation of Teachers, is in the running for collective bargaining representation with its own petition topping 500 signatures.

Possession of explosives results in arrests

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — The Costa Rican security minister said Monday two Americans, two Britons and a Frenchman arrested at a Nicaraguan rebel camp were acting as military advisers and will be tried for explosives possession. Assistant special Central American envoy Harry Shlaudeman met with President Luis Monge in an unannounced visit and later said the Reagan administration "will not change" its Central American policies despite its defeat in seeking $14 million for the Nicaraguan rebels in Congress last week.

Committee approves bills to combat aging disorder

By John Kravitz
Staff Writer

State Rep. Bruce Richmond is crediting public hearings, such as the one he was holding at SIC-C last month, with helping to “fine-tune” legislation he has co-sponsored dealing with Alzheimer’s Disease.

The seven pieces of legislation were unanimously approved April 23 by the House Committee on Aging. Richmond said, and are expected to go before the full House within the next few weeks.

Richmond said that the bills were “all amended to what information we got at hearings around the state.”

Information at the four hearings, the last of which was held in Carbondale, came from victims of the degenerative brain disorder, families of victims and medical practitioners.

GOV. JAMES Thompson has recommended a $300,000 budget from the state’s general revenue fund for the Sandinista-Soviet ties questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega’s trip to Moscow demonstrates a “strong and well-planned strategy” by the Sandinista government to strengthen ties with the Soviet bloc, the State Department said Monday.

At the same time, the Senate, by voice vote and without debate, approved a resolution calling Ortega’s move to the Soviet Union “clear evidence of the continuing package of bills, Richmond said, and sponsorship of the seven pieces of legislation has evidence, he said, to become a hot commodity in Springfield lately.

In the last several days I’ve had numerous people coming to my office, asking if they could sign up to be co-sponsors of the bills,” said the Democrat from Chicago.

One of the bills would ask the Department of Aging to administer three-year pilot project grants for the development of special services to meet the needs of victims. The other would establish a 21-member task force to evaluate the way Illinois agencies are dealing with Alzheimer victims.

AS AN EXAMPLE of the influence the hearings had on the legislation, Richmond said that the task force had originally been allocated 11 members, but after input

Sandinistas effort to strengthen ties with the Soviet Union, in support of Sandinista post of militarization, repression and interference in the affairs of its neighbors.”

The non-binding resolution, introduced by Senate Republican leader Robert Dole and Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, also “condemns” the Sandinistas for suppressing the democratically elected government, the press and church and for having “engaged in a massive military buildup in Nicaragua far out of proportion to their legitimate self-defense, thereby nearly bankrupting the country.

The resolution stated that Ortega went to Moscow “seeking a multimillion-dollar bailout” for the Sandinista regime.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan was pleased with the Senate resolution.

Spain leader wants U.S. troop reduction

MADRID (UPI) — Spain’s prime minister Monday called for a reduction in the number of U.S. troops stationed in Spain, saying the 12,600 American GIs are seen as “foreign troops in our territory.”

Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, who will be President Reagan’s host in Madrid next week, said negotiations should begin “as soon as possible” with some of the American troops in Spain, where the United States has maintained a military presence for 32 years.

“I think the perception of the average American is that when an American soldier is in Spain, a sacrifice is being made and that we don’t appreciate it,” Gonzalez told a group of U.S. reporters.

Gonzalez said his Socialist government wants to reduce the U.S. military presence from 12,600 troops at four U.S. bases “to the level allowed by Spain’s strategic interests and the interests of the alliance to which Spain belongs.”

Both the number of bases and troop levels will be reviewed during talks about the U.S.-Spanish defense treaty, which is up for renewal in 1986, Gonzalez said.

UPI tries to sustain operations, meet payroll

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers for United Press International asked a federal bankruptcy judge Monday to approve a new lending agreement which would assure the company’s continued operations and cover $1.38 million in outstanding claims of its employees.

Meanwhile, sources said UPI’s chief owners said the firm’s Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing abrogates an agreement in which they yielded control of their stock. Owners Douglas Ruhe and William Geist are considering whether to try to have the company’s chairman Louis Nogales during a reorganization effort, the press and church and for having “engaged in a massive military buildup in Nicaragua far out of proportion to their legitimate self-defense, thereby nearly bankrupting the country.

The resolution stated that Ortega went to Moscow “seeking a multimillion-dollar bailout” for the Sandinista regime.

The THE ANNUAL CARDBOARD BOAT REGATTA is getting too competitive for anyone. That's the concern of the regatta's founder Richard Archer.

What started out as an exercise for Archer's design students, and was expanded to anyone interested, has gone sour in Archer's opinion. The first few years about 20 or 30 boats entered the race. This year over 100 competed.

More and more boats are being constructed with illegal materials such as styrofoam, wood, and even metal I-beams. There are more complaints about illegal tactics in the water and complaints about the structure of the regatta and how it is run. The whole point of the event is taking off.

Archer is dismayed at what the regatta is becoming. The casualness has been lost. People are now serious about winning. This seems to be almost inevitable when it comes to a contest such as the regatta. The designs have become more sophisticated and require a greater investment in time and money. The greater the investment, the greater the desire to win. Some participants are willing to go as far as doing something illegal to gain an edge.

The FATE OF THE CARDBOARD BOAT REGATTA can be likened to college sports, such as basketball and football. There are pressures from the demise of the scholar-athlete and the "professionalization" of college sports. These people are echoing the same sentiment as Archer. They long for the good old days when competition was the attraction, not winning or the prospect of a fat contract.

Colleges think, as they grew in popularity, changed. Whether that change was for good or bad is another argument. The Cardboard Boat Regatta has gone the same route. As its fame spread and it attracted more participants and spectators, the casual, or impromptu atmosphere of the early regattas was lost.

What can be done to bring back that original spirit? It is doubtful that the regatta can go back to what it originally was at its inception. But some rule changes could be instituted to help emphasize that Archer sees as a bad trend toward cutthroat competitiveness.

THE MOST OBVIOUS SOLUTION IS TO CRACK DOWN harder on boats using illegal materials. If it is known that rule violations will not be tolerated, no matter what the justification, people will be less apt to build boats with materials other than cardboard.

Some psychological reasons might be required by playing up the "instant" boat class. In this class, boat builders construct their craft on race day at the boat docks with provided materials. This makes it almost impossible to conceal illegal materials within the framework of an already completed boat.

The Cardboard Boat Regatta is a unique event, worth preserving, and something Archer and SIUC could be proud of. It has brought national attention to the University and its public relations event. It also is a valuable learning experience.

Archer is right to take steps to bring the regatta under control again, to emphasize the fun and not the competition - as long as his efforts don't end up detracting from what has the potential to be a fun and useful activity.

Applications being accepted for various USO positions

I would like to thank Tracy Stone, the Phoenix Party, and all the other members who worked diligently promoting the issues and putting the Phoenix Party in the forefront of the Undergraduate Student Organization.

The Phoenix Party has and will continue to be one of the most innovative and informative about issues usually overlooked. They have provided services for the students of Southern Illinois University.

Applications are being accepted for three staff assistants, legislative liaison for the national student headquarters of the academic affairs, housing, tuition and fees, student welfare, city affairs and landlord tenant union commissions for summer and fall.

With only one week left before finals, I welcome and encourage all interested students to seek information in the USO office on the third floor of the Student Center. The Phoenix Party would like to wish all SIU students good luck on their finals and a fantastic summer.

Professional wrestling no danger to television viewers' well-being

THERE'S ALWAYS something new to worry about, some grave threat to our national well-being. The latest menace has been revealed to us by the National Coalition on Television Violence.

It's professional wrestling, which has been booming in popularity lately, and is now just about the most popular sport on cable TV.

The NCTV says two scientific studies have shown that wrestling makes people less sensitive to the feelings of others.

Even worse, people who watch it tend to become more hostile than, say, those who have been watching a sport such as swimming. One psychiatrist said: "There is no doubt that the intense hatred and brutality of professional wrestling matches is a part of the wave of violent entertainment that is slowly pushing our society toward a barbarian ethic of hatred and revenge."

Professional wrestling teaches an ethic of violence.

The group's study also shows that illegal and violent tactics -- such as eye gouging, hair-pulling, ear-biting and such -- outnumber legal tactics by more than three-to-one.

But that's the good news of the national mental health, professional wrestling is a part of a college wrestling, says the study's author.

"We're all concerned about the nation's well-being, and I wouldn't want to see us become less-sensitive. But there are two things about this alarm that bother me.

First, wrestling is a big news story. It is getting too close to the Three Stooges. They said that the old Three Stooges movies were too violent, what with Curly, Larry and Moe doing all that slapping and eye-poking. And they feared that impressionable children who saw the Three Stooges on TV would start treating each other the same way.

No normal person could take wrestling seriously.

And even if wrestling was more popular, which it is not, there's the worry that wrestling could start teaching our children the ethic of violence.

BUT TV STATIONS kept right on showing the Three Stooges, and there has been no evidence of any increase in the number of little kids becoming anxious or wearing black eye patches.

The other thing that makes me suspicious of the NCTV's findings is a phrase in their report. They say that the studies show wrestling has "a harmful effect on normal adult and adolescent viewers.

The key word there is "normal." And that means that there's nothing to worry about. No normal person could take wrestling seriously.

The typical match consists of either two or four beer-bellied, slack-jawed louts wading around a ring pounding their chests, howling incoherently and pretending to hurt each other. They scream at each other between matches, and they scream at each other when they promote their upcoming shows.

Now how can normal people be inflated in their behavior by the sight of some fat guy in his underwear screaming at another fat guy in underwear.

I CHALLENGE the NCTV to come up with even one case of a normal person suddenly leaping up from his living room chair, grabbing his wife off the bed, lifting her above his head, and slamming her to the floor. Normal people don't take fat men, who scream and pretend to fight, as their role models.

If they're influenced to do anything, it's to laugh or to turn the knob on the TV set.

Sure, wrestling is becoming more popular. But that's the result of a clever hype. Every time a wrestler is interviewed, he either threatens or actually attacks a TV reporter, and this becomes a big news story.

Well, if any group began attacking reporters, there would be an increase in public interest. Soccer players ought to wise up and kick a few reporters up and down the arena. Their ratings would soar.

So, I don't think there is any reason to worry about this threat to "normal" people. If you can go to a wrestling match and find anybody that looks as though sounds normal -- or in the ring of the you can go paint your eyes.

Computer program for vote tallying a solution to USO election woes

Good God! Just when you thought it was safe (i.e. the USO Election Commission finally running a scandal-free election) another snafu'd fiasco arises centered around the USO and student trustee elections.

I will be completing my bachelor's degree here soon and have committed myself for two more years in graduate school. Instead of screaming, bellowing and bitching about what the problem is with the USO Election Commission and why it cannot and has not in the four years I have been here run a 'trouble-free' student government election, I have decided to render a suggestion to the USO Executive Board on how to deal with this problem that I feel promotes what the USO says it wants to fight: student apathy toward their student government. A strong contributer to this apathy is the student's belief that the election is handled yearly. I worked with present USO president and future student trustee Andy Leighton when we were both presidents of our respective east campus hall councils. Granted, our constitutents were much smaller than the entire student body, but we had a 10 to 20 percent voter turnout for elections. This is much better than the turnover for USO elections.

The suggestion I have will make it so easy that the students will want to vote. My suggestion, once may call it a pipe dream, is to have the Data Processing Department develop a program whereby a student's ID number can be entered only once. The voters will present an election judge their IDs, enter their names in the computer and vote to their desires. The only thing that could go wrong is that the computer could be down.

I feel that with all the resources available at SIU-C this can be done. All the energy expended on arguing about what party is better or what Andy Leighton did or did not do could be well spent on this proposal. In fact, I would organize this myself. But, since I will soon no longer be an undergraduate, I do not want to get involved in the present bureaucracy of the USO.

Therefore, I challenge the USO, or anyone else, to come up with a better solution. I am sure the USO is willing to take suggestions.

I gleaned a lot from student government about myself and other people. As I see it, no ticket or party is best in student government. How each person who is elected serves his or her constituents is what matters. Right now, the only "ticket" I feel the USO should have is the one for the "Chie Train." — Robb Frank, senior, Child and Family Services.

Civil service raise

The members of the Civil Service Executive Board of Morris Library understand that there are proposals before President Albert Somit which would disburse the funds for salary increases which were appropriated by the Illinois State Legislature on a basis other than 8 percent across the board.

We strongly object to any plan which would distribute these monies in a manner other than the 8 percent across the board increase recommended by the Civil Service Employees Council (the Civil Service Employees Council represents all civil service employees at SIUC).

Women's rugby coverage shoddy

I opened my DE on Wednesday, April 24, as usual, to the back sports page. This was the last straw. Nearly the entire back page was devoted to the baseball team, again. It wouldn't be so bad, except that they lost the double header and went into specific detail about the losses.

The day before, I opened to the back page to find a tiny, poorly written misspelled article citing that the Women's Rugby Team won the conference tournament, played right behind Abe Martin baseball field. Only four of the eight teams were mentioned, plus a short paragraph explaining the "entire..." and "three..." and "nine..." and "two..." and "what was going on?" After all, we did notify the DE two weeks prior to the tournament and they said they would be there. As a staff photographer Scott Shaw came up, took one photo and left. I guess that's what they call coverage.

I am deeply disappointed how the DE covered our weekend. This was a major tournament and a huge stepping stone for the women's rugby club. We have two major tournaments coming up and a possibility for a birth at Nationals. I am appalled at the slip-shoulder coverage the DE continues to give the Women's Rugby Club.

I just hope the DE doesn't edit this letter so it will make sense to you readers. — Barbara Cavoto, coach, SIUC Women's Rugby Club.

CONCEIVED AS a cross between German beer hall and London promenade concerts, the Pops was unique for its time. In the intervening century, orchestras worldwide have emulated it, but none have quite matched its popularity and success. The success is attributed in part to the charismatic Arthur Fiedler, whose 50-year reign set a record for a conductor’s tenure. “Pops has become a little more serious with (conductor) John Williams. There are no more sharks or Davy Crockett hats,” says associate conductor Harry Ellis Dickson.

FIEDLER’S KNUCK for choosing music that appealed to a wide public and his mischievous antics—batting an inflated rubber shark around the stage during a performance of the music to “Jaws,” and sporting a coonskin cap at the height of the Davy Crockett craze—won him a devoted following. Although 17 conductors preceded him, Fiedler greatly expanded the Pops’ scope and endowed it with a worldwide reputation.

FIEDLER’S AND THE Pops’ extraordinary success climaxed in a bicentennial Fourth of July Esplanade concert that brought nearly a half million people out for the euphoric celebration, including a spectacular, booming fireworks display punctuating Tchaikovsky’s 1812 Overture.

But his success and its popularity has sparked an abandonment in the orchestra that Williams interpreted as disrespect when he took over in 1980, a year after Fiedler’s death.

AT THE END of the fifth season, Williams, best known for his scores for numerous Hollywood hits, from “Jaws” to “Star Wars,” submitted his resignation and the Pops was thrown into disarray. After an energetic fund-raising effort by orchestra members and symphony administrators, Williams agreed to return.

Besides bringing a more serious atmosphere, Williams has programmed more American music, especially that of the movie industry, and many of his compositions.

But, light classical and popular music arranged for symphony orchestra remains the Pops’ staple and continues to draw nearly sell-out crowds for its average 55-performance season.

Appraisal program to be heard

The Administrative and Professional Staff Council will deal once again with a revised performance appraisal program and a proposed grievance procedure in its last meeting of the 1984-85 school year at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Ohio Room.

"I expect we'll finally approve both, said council chairman Terry Mathias. The council approved its own version of a performance appraisal program in March, but the president's staff was assigned to put together a less "cumbersome" proposal.

REGATTA: Boat race will be changed

THIS YEAR'S spectators were "the biggest, most unruly crowd I've ever seen" and needed police officers on land and in boats to keep the event in order, Addington said. Besides police, future regattas need to go on with more precise rules, more room to get the boats to the lake and a scoring system that isn't "mysterious," he said.

"It's always been a mystery how they (the judges) finally arrive at who gets to the finals," he said.

"This is a big event for the University," Addington said. "When I go to other schools, people may not have heard of the art department, but they've heard of the regatta. I'd like to see the event run more smoothly."

"I'M NOT criticizing my colleagues in the design department," he added. "I think there are more questions than there are complaints." Addington said since the regatta is a competitive event, stricter rules should be implemented on what can and can't be done in constructing and racing the boats. He added that assigning more student workers might help make the event run more smoothly.

Two charged in burglary

Carbondale police arrested two men and charged them with the burglary of Grace United Methodist Church at 601 S. Marion St. at 5:30 a.m. on Saturday.

Philip Campbell, 21, and John Shankland, 19, both of Carbondale, were arrested after a police officer observed them carrying a box and a flag in the 600 block of East Park Street.

When the officer approached them to talk to them, both suspects fled, the spokesman said. Both were later apprehended, charged with burglary and taken to Jackson County Jail.

Emergency crises service develops support systems

By Kelly Bratty
Student Writer

The Emergency Program at the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center is one of the five programs available to Jackson County residents that provide mental health services through professionals and trained volunteers.

The biggest misconception about receiving mental health services is that a person is psychotic. That’s not true. We are here for any type of emergency crisis, from work-related problems to acute psychiatric problems,” said Janit Surry, emergency counselor for the center.

“Often, these mechanisms are the ways in which people deal with problems and support systems break down, which identify the problem as a crisis,” Surry said.

The network is what people deal with problems and support systems deal with people. There are people who deal with problems and support systems deal with people, which identify the problem as a crisis, she said.

EMERGENCY COUNSELORS are on call 24 hours a day and help back up The Network, a 24-hour crisis intervention hotline that is a branch of the Emergency Program, Surry said.

“The Network receives calls pertaining to anything from loneliness to suicide,” said Reid Christian, network supervisor.

Loneliness, bad effects of medical, mental illness, alcoholism and youth-related problems are faced at the health center and the majority are dealt with through The Network program.

“We have a referral program where we suggest the people get help for their particular problem through one of our programs,” Christian said.

“If the problem is loneliness, we place the person in our hotline program where they call every day to see how they’re doing, if they’re taking their medicine and, in general, just make contact. Sometimes one is all we can do.”

The network also deals with suicide. Christian said that although of 200-500 incoming calls a month, only two or three are suicide, it is a serious concern that the volunteers must know how to handle.

“The most important thing to do in a suicide call is to test the lethality. If they are going to attempt suicide with a gun, we find out if they have any bullets. If not, then we have time to talk them out of it,” Christian said.

First we need to bargain for time, then we need to find the means to go on. If we can get them through the night and make them promise to call us in the morning, they probably won’t go through with it. The fact that they called at all shows that they really don’t want to do it.”

“THOUGHTS of suicide usually surround a loss or pending loss, but if we can show them that there are other options, half the battle is won. The other half is to consent to counseling. That’s our aim,” Christian said.

The program consists of volunteers recruited by staff professionals. The volunteers go through intense training for one weekend and then the on-the-job training for two shifts before they get a permanent shift once a week, he said. The hotline also receives calls from Franklin, Perry and Williamson counties on evenings and weekends because of staff shortages,

Christensen said. "Before, phone has never been turned off or left for any reason in 10 years," he said. "There are people relying on us to be there 24 hours a day and we’re not going to let them down."

Sydney Edwards came to SIU-C in the fall of 2003, looking for a good balance in her life between her Fordham softball career and the track and field team. Edwards, a sophomore from Mattoon, Illinois, finished fourth in the triple jump in the outdoor season.

Edwards, a standout on the track team as well as in softball, is also the team's third-leading scorer in the outdoor season with 44 points.

In the indoor season, Edwards compiled a strong showing in the triple jump and the long jump, finishing second in the long jump and third in the 100-meter hurdles as a sophomore.

After missing the state meet as a junior because of an injury, Edwards rebounded her senior year by finishing second in the long jump, fifth in the 100-meter hurdles and helping the Salukis finish fourth in the 1000-meter relay and ninth in the mile relay.

Edwards was a standout in the triple jump for the first time in her career last April in a triangular meet at Illinois and won the event in 36.95.

"I was just missing around one day with the triple jump and my goal was to qualify for nationals," Edwards said.

"I broke the school record in the first meet so they kept me in it and it gave me a lot of confidence," Edwards said. "The triple jump gave me something I knew I could win at and that made all the difference in the world."

Edwards said she's enjoying being the Salukis' third-leading scorer in the outdoor season with 44 points in 40 meets.

"I didn't do it the same way," Edwards said. "I've been able to do my best and I've been able to advance so much easier."

Edwards said her future plans include working for a corporation or a large department store in public relations, and possibly work as a judge or a commentator for beauty pageants on a part-time basis.

"She's definitely worked hard to get where she is," Edwards said. "I think she's a great guard and a great athlete."

In Edwards' senior year in high school, she was crowned the State of Illinois Honor Miss Queen Springfield.

Edwards had to miss the Eastern Illinois Pepsi Challenge Invitational because she was ill, she said. "It was a good experience."

At SIU-C, Edwards worked to improve her form in the long jump during practice at McAndrew Stadium last week.

The eight-member advisory board responsible for selecting a new men's basketball coach has agreed on a list of eight finalists for the job after meeting for seven-and-a-half hours Friday.

The eight candidates will be interviewed Thursday and Friday in St. Louis, Dean Smith Central, SIU-C's assistant for athletics, said. The eight candidates were chosen from a list of 80 applicants for the position.

Stuck declined to discuss names of the eight finalists. The eight finalists include Herman Williams, interim coordinator of the program and an assistant coach at SIU-C for the past four years. The remaining seven finalists are as follows:

- Tony Earone, the top assistant and chief recruiter for Dick Versace at Bradley. A Chicago native, Earone started his coaching career at Chicago's Gordon Tech High School. He was a finalist for the Wisconsin-Green Bay job that was filled recently.
- Rick Bowen, the top assistant to Wisconsin coach Steve Yoder. He has been in Wisconsin for three years and worked for three years as Yoder's assistant at Ball State before that. The 46-year-old Bowen is the son of former Indiana governor Otis R. Bowen.
- Robert Corn, an assistant for the past six years at Cornell, where he has worked for Gene Bartow, Corn is a native of Benton and played for Rich Herrin at Benton High School. Herrin is also a finalist for the job. Corn has coached in Puerto Rico the last four summers.
- Steve Cottrell, who has been the head coach at Western Carolina since 1977. He has a career record of 121-110 with the Catamounts. WCU finished 14-14 last year and 13-13 the year before. He was named the Southern Conference Coach of the Year in 1980 after leading the team to an 18-10 record.

"I'm the epitomy of what I think of as a true student athlete," Leidy said.

In field hockey, Leidy's 33 goals tied for second place on the all-time scoring list. Leidy led the team in scoring with 10 goals last fall.

In track, Leidy holds school records in the 100-meter hurdles (14.4), pentathlon (4,361 points), and shares the high jump record (5-8).
