Regatta makes big splash at SIUC

About 125 participants sank, swam or floated their way around Campus Lake in everything from a cardboard baby grand piano to aircraft carriers in Saturday's 18th Annual Cardboard Boat Regatta.

With a light breeze blowing, the misty rain clouds broke and the sun shone through shortly after the start of the race to the relief of many boat builders.

SIUC students Laurie Schoenle and Amy Gamble, who worked for about a week on their black and white rendition of a killer whale, said they didn't mind the rain before the start of the race.

"If it rains, it rains. We're probably going to get wet anyway," Schoenle said.

Despite the good weather, many boats didn't make it past the starting point and some sunk 3 feet from the finish, but many people said they would do it all again if they had the

Although the boat took on water and the pair bailed out shortly after the second turn, the soggy duo both agreed the regatta was a good experience.

of many returns for members of her class.

If winners were decided by crowd applause, Eivis impersonator Jeff Carter would have taken top bearors. Carter, who was dressed in a cream leisure suit, beach thongs and a colorful Hawaiian lei, traveled three-fourths of the course before his golder guitar became water-logged. Shortly before the finish line, the "King" took his final bow and a great cheer went up from the some 8,500 people along the shores who attended the race.

along the shores who attended the race.

Building boats out of cardboard is harder than it sounds, and there is an extra challenge in engineering the Class 2 boats. The Class 2 boats are powered by paddle-wheel type rigging. These boats produce some of the fastest course times, next to the one-man kayaks.

The paddle wheels are made from metal and must be soundly secured to the boats or disaster often occurs. For Sean Scott and Brett Cramer of Carbondale, they found this out the hard way.

As the starter's gun went off, only one out of the three Class 2 boats made it past the starting point. In fact, Jeremy Archer in his boat, "Packard," was the only one to finish with

Bad checks cost SIUC more than $443,000

By Sherri L. Wilcox Staff Writer

In fiscal year University took in 3,631 bad checks totalling more than $443,000 in insufficient funds.

Jeff Holder, SIUC controller, said most of the checks come from Student Check Cashing and the University bookstore, both located in the Student Center.

Holder said if a check bounces, the University issues a $7.50 fee. He added that students who write two bad checks in a year are suspended from check cashing privileges.

Shuttle starts 'Star Wars' mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - The shuttle Discovery's seven-man crew finally rocketed into orbit Sunday on an actionpacked flight to find out how to pinpoint enemy missiles so future "Star Wars" battle stations can blast them out of space.

Running two months late because of a series of technical problems, Discovery took off with a ground-shaking roar at 7:33 a.m., vaulting away through a cloudless fawn sky five days after the ship was grounded Tuesday by a faulty engine fuel pump sensor. With commander Michael Coats and co-pilot Blaine Hammond at the controls, Discovery arced out over the Atlantic Ocean and streaked up the East Coast into a 160-mile-high orbit.

Educators criticize new funding policy

By Natalie Boehme and Sherri Wilcox

Local educators are uncertain President George Bush's education revolution, America 2000 Excellence in Education Act, will have an impact on Southern Illinois school systems.

Donald Beggs, College of Education dean, said the proposal shows leadership in the education field, but how it will work at state and local levels still needs to be defined.

"The proposal is so new and undefined we (educators) don't know what its potential impact will be," Beggs said.

Trustee election declared valid by ad hoc board

By Doug Toole

Despite a joint appeal filed by two candidates, the results of the April 18 student trustee election were validated Friday.

A three-member ad hoc student conduct review board rejected a claim that the election should be invalidated because the election commission failed to provide enough ballots for voters and poorly monitored the ballot box. Jean Paratore, associate vice president of Student Affairs, received the appeal and selected the three members of the committee.

Leonard Gross, law school professor, Jay Ferreri, graduate student in zoology, and Annmarie Allen, junior in English, made up the committee.

Richard Fasano and Darnell Wheeler filed their appeal April 19 after they learned that polling places at Lentz Hall, Kesnar Hall and Trueblood Hall had to issue makeshift ballots for the student trustee election because of a shortage of official ballots.

Fasano and Wheeler said they felt all students were not given an opportunity to vote for student

The SIUC softball team had to scratch and claw its way through the Gateway Conference games Friday and Saturday, but in the end, the Salukis remained unbeatable.

The first signs of stress were seen Friday when the Salukis met Illinois State, No. 3 in the conference. The Salukis won the first game 3-1, and barely squeezed by in the second, winning 5-4.

Europe responds positively to plan for U.N. police in Iraq

LONDON (UPI) - British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said a proposal for a U.N. pelice force to provide additional security for Kurds returning to northern Iraq received a "very enthusiastic" response Sunday from the European Community. Hurd outlined the plan during three hours of talks Sunday morning with EC foreign ministers in Luxembourg amid general agreement that an accord between Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein and Kurdish leaders will be insufficient to persuade the hundreds of thousands of Kurdish refugees to return home. Prime minister tries to keep Israeli coalition JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir tried Sunday to quell dissent within his fragile coalition because of the government's apparent concessions to Secretary of State James Baker during his latest shuttle peace mission to Israel. Shamir took the unusual step of publicly announcing that he had called Levy in to coordinate strategy in dealing with Baker.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Serious crime rose 1 percent in 1990, but the violent incidents that worry most Americans increased by 10 percent, the FBI reported Sunday. But the categories of violent crime, and murder and aggravated assault, both rose 10 percent, forcible rape increased 9 percent and obbery was up by 11 percent between 1989 and 1990. Fighter contract to shake up defense industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In the wake of Lockheed's victory in the battle for the last great military contract of the century, the defense industry appears headed for a dramatic shake-up that will render some former industry giants mere bit players or worse. Industry analysts are predicting a winnowing process among defense-related firms following the Air Force's decision to give Lockheed the Advanced Tactical Fighter, with the losers in the five-year high-stakes competition to produce America's next generation of jet fighters already staggering.

Most lower back pain heals without treatment—doctors

CHICAGO (UPI) - "Take two aspirin" and don't call me in the morning," may be doctors' best advice for most people with backaches.
"People who injure their backs have learned to immediately seek medical attention, which is the wrong thing to do," said Dr. James Weinstein, director of the Spine Diagnostic and Treatment Center at the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. "The majority of patients with acute low back pain eventually get better without any treatment," said Weinstein, chairman of the Bristol-Myers Squibb/Zimmer Orthopaedic Research Symposium, held during the weekend in Chicago.

Special Olympians shine at competition

THE ARENA WAS FULL of winners Thursday when about 1,300 people came together for the 24th annual Southern Illinois District 15 Special Olympics.

More than 500 Southern Illinois special athletes competed in track and field events, attended a carnival and interacted with people from across Southern Illinois.

The oath of the Special Olympics is "Let me win, and if I do not win, let me be brave in the attempt."

Not every runner crossed the finish line first and not every long jumper won a gold medal. But every single athlete left the Arena a winner because they tried.

The joy of victory and accomplishment was felt by participants and volunteers because they were brave enough to work hard without giving up.

THANKS TO THE HUNDREDS of volunteers, coordinators and supporters, a situation was created where that could happen.

Too many times, in day to day situations, these developmentally disabled people are not recognized as winners. Many people view their mental and physical disabilities as being special—but not in the way participants, coordinators and volunteers of the Special Olympics views them.

About 800 University volunteers turned out to provided an afternoon of cheers, hugs and support. There are students on this campus with similar disabilities who could use the support of volunteers such as those 800 who helped with the Special Olympics.

TUTORING PROGRAMS AND OTHER assistance services designed to help disabled fellow classmates with schoolwork are coordinated by Disabled Student Services, but the number of student tutors doesn't meet the high demand.

According to Special Olympic coordinators, the first thing athletes are taught is that they are all winners.

The second thing they are taught is that the Special Olympics is a day of fun where medals are of secondary importance.

The lesson is simple—put your best effort forward, have fun and remember that awards are nice but not the goal. Judging from the smiles and arms raised in victory, these athletes have learned the lesson well.

Bodybuilding article imprecise

The poor write-up of the 1991 Natural SIU Bodybuilding contest that appeared in Monday's DE has prompted this response. The headline read "Bodybuilders take home visible to the beautiful to the beautif wins, lots of groceries."

What the hell does that mean? The prize purse was a shopping spree at Country Fair. Why not mention that for the first time the contest was all-natural (drug-tested) in the headline?

There was no mention of the placings of the other competitors, only the first-place finishers. Moreover, the writer failed to address the negative crowd response (boo, hiss) when the judges announced John Allemand as the third-place finisher in the tall class (not!).

Anyone attending the contest knows the picture appearing in the DE of Mr. SIU, Rob Ferguson, does not do him justice.

So, DE, give the SIU
Bodybuilding contest the accurate reporting and acclaim it deserves.—Trace Stiegman, senior, exercise physiology.

How can we expect a sixthgrader to debate creation/evolution with his Ph.D. science teacher? Few children can be unaffected by such a teaching atmosphere.

Too many times, sending our children into government schools is like sending lambs to the slaughter.

It's time parents woke up. After all, government education is not mandatory.

We can still send them to private schools or teach them at home. God has not relegated responsibility for our childrens'education to the government; it is still the parent's government; it is still the parent's responsibility and privilege. For our childrens' sake, we dare not neglect our duty.—Wayne Helmer, professor, mechanical engineering and energy

Comparison between Palestinians and Jewish people makes little sense

In reply to Ms. Ratliff's ridiculous and nonsensical letter of April 18, I would like to make several points regarding her comparison of the Palestinians and the Jews of Europe during the Nazi era. Apparently, she did not have these in mind when she wrote her

The most important point is that the Nazis felt that the Jews and other minorities (so-called non-Aryans) were of inferior racial stock and needed to be destroyed in order to remove them from the German (Aryan) presence. The presence of these non-Aryan minorities was blamed for Germany's economic and social problems during the 1920s and 1930s and was also seen as a major reason for the German defeat in World War I.

Contrary to what many believe, Israel does not consider the Palestinians to be racially inferior, nor does Israel blame them for any of its domestic problems.

Subsequently, the plan initiated by the Nazis almost immediately upon their ascent to power in 1933, which intensified in 1938 and especially in 1942 with the "Final Solution to the Jewish Problem," called for the mass destruction and extermination of Jews.

Methods for this destruction included slave labor, starvation, disease, "medical" experiments and gas chambers, among others.

I do not believe that Israel has resorted to these methods (although I do not condone some aspects of Israeli policy in the Occupied Territories).
It is obvious that Ms. Ratliff is ignorant of the various aspects of the Holocaust and did not attend any of the events commemorating this horror that were held at SIU in early April.

Her letter should be thought of as an affront to the intelligence of a decent people who believe in about education at all levels," Hodel said.

In addition, Jews do not need. nor do they seek, sympathy from naive individuals such as Ms. Ratliff.—Jeffrey Ebenstein, graduate, political science.

Bush, who campaigned as the education president, introduced the act April 18, calling for a revolution in the nation's education

To those who want to see real improvement in American education, I say there will be no renaissance without revolution," Bush said in a United Press International article April 18. "It's time we held our schools, and ourselves, accountable for results.

Bush outlined his strategy for this revolution in the America plan, which includes more student testing, new inventive schools, greater business involvement in education, and the return of adults to continuing their education - but no new funds.

"Let's stop trying to measure progress in terms of money spent,"
Bush said. "Dollar bills don't educate students."

Beggs said the proposal is still on the political agenda. Eventually legislative leadership and public input will determine if the proposal will be accepted and to what extent it should impact schools, he said. Clover said although education is supposed to be based on the three and -reading, writing arithmetic-for the last 10 years the Rs have stood for rhetoric, requirements and no revenue.

Until revenue comes in to support education, everything is just rhetoric," Clover said. Harold Emme, Carbondale Community High School government teacher, said he doubts the program will have any effect at all on local schools

Emme said the only schools that will be affected by the proposal will be those that are chosen to participate in the innovative school

For the innovative school project, Bush plans to ask Congress for $550 million in one-time startup funds to create at least 535 "New American Schools" that 'break the mold" of existing school

At least one school in each congressional district will receive $1 million to implement the program, including costs to underwrite special staff training, instructional materials and other support the schools need. Emme said Southern Illinois schools don't stand a chance being included among these schools because the local residents don't have the political pull.

Emme, who was in Washington

when the proposal was introduced, said if the United States put half of the money used for the military to education, the problems Bush talks of would not exist.

"His sincerity is shown by what he allots in the resources he controls — the budget tells you where the president's priorities are," Emme said. "Bush is not the education president, he is the war

"If Bush put a Gen. Schwarzkopf charge of education, then maybe I'd think he was serious about being the education president."

Bush's budget plan for fiscal year 1992, which was sent to Congress in February, did not recommend extra funding for education.

The budget recommended no increase in student aid and the elimination of 270,000 students from the aid system in the 1992-93 academic year.

Instead of increased funding, Bush called for active participation from all branches of federal, state and local government, the private sector, labor unions, parents and communities.

Emme said education is a local responsibility, but some national funding help is needed. Quit Smoking for lots of CASH! Call 453-3561 or 453-3573 Mon. - Fri., 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Must be available for Summer

Debbie Vackicev, legal assistant at the State's Attorney's office, said the office gets funds back on about 80 percent of the complaints they

"We don't take complaints on checks that are more than six months old, and the driver's license number must be listed," she said. "Otherwise we couldn't begin to locate the person who wrote it.

In Illinois, a business must attempt to send a check to the bank twice, at least seven days apa t, and one contact must be made with the writer in an attempt to secure payment before turning in a complaint. Once the check is turned over to the State's Attorney's office, the merchant can no longer accept payment from the writer on that check.

Upon receipt of the complaint, the State's Attorney's Office then sends a letter informing the writer of the complaint.

trustee because of this shortage and asked the committee to determine the effects of this on the candidates.

During the hearing, Fasano said write-in ballots may not have been counted and said he had "reasonable doubt" about whether the ballot box was free from tampering both during and after the election.

Wheeler said he had no personal knowledge of any voters who were turned away because of a lack of ballots.

Charles Ramsey, student trustee election commissioner, said no students who wanted to vote were turned away from any polling place. Also, all makeshift ballots were legal and only ballots the were filled out incorrectly or left blank were not counted.

Bill Hall, who won the April 18 election, did not attend the hearing, but sent Israel Bofani, a law student, to represent him.

The committee decided not to hold a re-election, but did say ballots that stated the party name but not the name of the candidate will now be counted for the election.

Hall won the election by 43 votes. Ramsey said there were between five and 10 ballots that mentioned the party name only, and that the commission would recount the ballots Wednesday.

Gross said there was no evidence that voters were turned away. The only person the committee found who said she could not vote for student trustee said it was because she could not find the polling place.

Wheeler said the committee listened to all aspects of the case and reached a fair decision. He said student apathy is still an important issue, and he wants more student voices to be heard.

"Just because I'm not student trustee doesn't mean I won't work toward these things," he said.

Fasano said he respected the decision of the committee and is glad there will not be a second election this close to final exams, but is upset the election did not run as smoothly as it should have.

He said he gave the election his best shot and will remain active in student governance.
"As a student, I will advise the (student) trustee on matters that should be brought before the board (of trustees)," Fasano said.

Unhappy birthday

Saddam not as popular at 54; few Arabs celebrate this year

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Unlike last year, when Saddam Hussein was riding a wave of unprecedented popularity both in Iraq and within the Arab world, his birthday Sunday mirrored the misfortune he has brought to the Iraqi people.

Last year, the Iraqi state spent millions of dollars staging nation-wide rallies, parties and open-door events that promoted the image of Saddam as the father of his nation and the leader of the Arab world.

Government-controlled radio and television for weeks carried long documentaries portraying the success of Saddam as the success of the Iraqi nation a nation that had the natural right to call itself the intellectual and military leader of all the Arabs

Germans debate historical future of Hitler's bunker

BERLIN (UPI) -- Buried 50 feet below some of Berlin's most expensive real estate is a piece of German history many wish would go away — the remains of the bunker where Adolf Hitler committed suicide 46 years ago Tuesday.

Now that the Berlin Wall is no more, controversy has emerged over what to do with the ruins. Some people think it should be a historical site. Others would like to see it flattened and forgotten.

The 32-room bunker where Hitler spent the last three months of his life before a bizarre marriage to his mistress, Eva Braun, and their joint suicide on April 30, 1945, is only a small part of a massive complex.

Part of Hitler's own underground quarters was destroyed but a series of connected bunkers for the fuehrer's feared SS-guards sur-vived intact, complete with spooky SS murals on the walls depicting Nazi officers protecting a model Aryan family.

The entire bunker complex ended up in East Berlin after World war II. But the Nov. 9, 1989, opening of the Berlin Wall and Oct. 3, 1990, German unification rekindled debate over how Germany should deal with the physical remains of its Nazi past

The future of the bunker where Hitler made his final stand as the Red Army advanced into Berlin in April 1945, remains a deeply sensitive issue in a unified Germany concerned about the recent upsurge of right-wing extremism.
"We must, at all costs, prevent the bunker from becoming a place the bunker from becoming a piace of pilgrimage for Brown Shirts", said Klaus Groth, a state secretary for the environment in the Berlin government. The "B. wm Shirts" were the Nazi Storm Troopers.

SIUC advertising organization places third in ad campaign

SIUC's chapter of the American Advertising Federation flew to a third place finish for an American Airlines campaign Friday at the National Student Advertising Competition in Chicago.

Competition in Cnicago.

AAF Corresponding Secretary
Tracy Heropkie said SIUC finished behind Michigan State University and Ball State University at the competition, held this year at the Ambassador West Hotel

"It was disappointing when we first found out we got third," Heropkie said. "We thought we had done better.'

The Chicago Advertising Federation, the headquarters of the student AAF chapters, put on the regional competition for all schools in the sixth district, which consists of Michigan, Illinois and Indiana, Heropkie said.

AAF adviser Jon Shidler said SIUC's chapter won $500 in the competition and he thought the chapter did an excellent job.

"They performed well a represented SIUC well," he said.

He said the judges took two hours before making a decision and the scores between the three universities were within one hundredth of a point. Each year of the competition, the sponsoring company is different and the chapters must create an advertising campaign for the product or service, Heropkie said.

'We take on the role of the advertising agency," Heropkie said.

She said everyone working on the campaign works in different areas like the different departments of an advertising agency.

Heropkie said they received the case in September, but most of the work is done in the spring semester.

She said working on the campaign provides excellent experience in advertising.

"It's reality," she said. "I've learned more through this than I have in many of my advertising

Heropkie said MSU, Ball State and SIUC always have been in the most competition with each other.

"Third place is good," she said.
"It's nothing to look down on."

President Jennifer Banks said she was expecting stiff competition from Ball State because Johan

Yssel, former AAF advisor at SIUC, was the new adviser for Ball

Banks said Yssel was the adviser last year when SIUC won first place at the regional competition and second place at nationals. She said she knew Yssel expected hard work from his chapter.

"I was anxious to have to face him," Banks said.

Banks said only 11 or 12 schools out of the 22 in the district participated in the competition.

'Our competition was cut in half, but it was with the most powerful schools," Banks said.

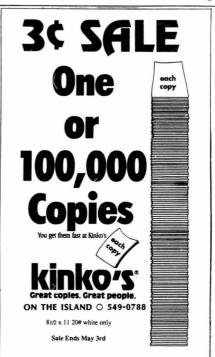

Walter B. Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism, said he was not disappointed and that the chapter made a credible finish.
"We're in one of the toughest districts in the country," he said.

MSU will go to the national competition in Nashville this year and American Airlines will have the option to use the winning campaign.

AAF is a registered student organization and has general meetings every Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the Student Center, Heropkie

U.S., German force brings Kurds relief; suffering not over

YEKMAL, Turkey (UPI) - The wrinkled babies just stare into space, their dehydrated bodies too weak to move, their eyes too dry to

For a few minutes an eeric silence filled the hospital tent at "Alpha," an overcrowded refugee camp straddling the Turkish-Iraqi border.

But soon the droning helicopters that accompanies life at the squalid camp resumed, as U.S. Air Force Huey and German army CH-53s brought in the latest emergency supplies.

"We feel we are doing something good here. We can see we made a difference," said Sgt. Joe O'Neil of Binghamton, N.Y., one of the 63 Special Forces troops responsible for coordination and security at Alpha and neighboring Camp Four.

Four or five children die every day at the two camps, situated near the Turkish town of Yekmal.

But, as in the other Kurdish refugee centers in the southeastern Turkish mountains, the death rate is small compared to weeks ago.

Before the massive multinational humanitarian operation got under way, more than 100 people died each day at the camp, mainly from exhaustion and dehydration.

The young mothers sitting in the field hospital were silent, like the months-old babies they brought. But pain and anger showed in their eyes as they recounted how they fled from Iraq and the loss of their homes and relatives

"I will never go back to Iraq as long as Saddam (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein) lives," said Warda Warda, 53, who walked 16 hours to the camp to escape the Iraqi shelling of Dahok.

Ironically, Warda and his relatives are among the hundreds of refugees whose shelters are on the Iraqi side of the camp, about 100 yards from the border.

But he knows there are no Iraqi troops in the vicinity — and the sight of a U.S. sergeant strolling through the camp with no other weapon than a revolver seems to confirm his certainty.

Warda says he likes to talk to the U.S. soldiers at the camp because it reminds him of his "second home.

Crowded cemetery calls for condo crypts crypts have gone condo at Key West's only cemetery, adding a modern, urban touch to a graveya long famous for its eccentric tombstones.

The grassy, 15-acre Key West Cemetery is the final resting place for some of "the island city's" earliest residents and most outlandish characters

The unusual inscriptions on the tombstones are legendary, making the cemetery a popular tourist

But today, the dead outnumber the living in Key West, and land is scarce and expensive. At least 40,000 bodies are buried in the park, thousands more than the island's population

To keep up with local demand, city officials dealt with the problem in the time-honored Florida fashion. They built condominiums - sleek new high-rise crypts that can accommodate up to five of the dearly departed.

Women's golf tries repeat on home links

By Cyndi Oberle Staff Writer

The SIUC women's golf team will try to take advantage of its home course in the Gateway Conference Golf Championship today and Tuesday at Jackson Country Club.

The Salukis are defending champions in the tournament and after their fifth team title. They are attempting to become the first ever repeat conference champions.

In three of the past five years, the tournament host has won

But to achieve their goals, the Salukis first must top the rest of the field, including Illinois State, after its fourth conference title.

Last year SIUC bested the Redbirds 1,020 to 1,057.

ISU and SIUC have taken turns dominating Gateway golf. The Salukis claimed the title in 1984, 1986, 1988 and 1990; ISU won it in 1983, 1985 and 1989. SIUC coach Diane Daugherty said she predicts low scores and a mad scramble for the team title.

"This should be the tightest conference championship ever," Daugherty said. "Any one of four teams could easily win. If weather conditions are favorable, it may take three scores of 310 to win

Contestants will play 36 holes today and 18 more Tuesday.

Daugherty said she is pinning her hopes on one of her youngest teams ever, with three first-year players in the lineup.

Three seniors and a junior comprise ISU's top four scorers.

Mick, who had a three-hit shutout in the first game, struck out one, allowed one single and retired the final two batters in the bottom of the eighth to cinch the victory for the Salukis.

"I was proud of the way we came back to win," Bretchelsbauer said. "We were under pressure in the extra inning, but we didn't give up. It was hard when we were trying to get ahead."

Mick, who now posts a 14-2 season record with four shutouts, pitched the first games against

Illinois State and Indiana State and was brought in during the final innings of both second games.

She was the third pitcher brought in during the second game against Illinois State. Senior Lisa Robinson started the game and was replaced by Darnell in the fourth after the Redbirds scored three runs. Mick came in during the seventh for the

"Angie is my stopper," pitching coach Gary Buckles said. "I use her in late situations because she can get the strikeout at any time. She just has an exploding ball.

"It is paying off now that we have three pitchers. And if it takes all three to vin a game, that is what we will do."

Buckles said the pitching staff is nselfish and will do whatever it takes to win.

"As a staff they want to win," Buckles said. "They are not happy when I take them out, but they want whatever is best for the team.

"We are working together as a staff, not as individuals. The pitchers who aren't pitching are pulling for whoever is on the mound.

Putting in Mick in the end of the game is mental and not physical training for her, Buckles s

"The more pressure I can put the pitchers in, the better and sharper they will be in the end," Buckles said. "I intentionally put them in pressure situations so they will improve and always be ready for

With 33 wins, the Salukis set a new school record for wins in a season. Bretchelsbauer said the key to their success is team

"I can't say enough about the team," Bretchelsbauer said. "They are a gutsy ballclub that doesn't quit. Everyone on the team contributes at different times. We need every one of the players on
