Candidates disgualified from race

By Casey Hampton General Assignment Writer

The USG election commission yanked the Student Party and Independent candidates for president and vice president from the ballot on the eye of student elections, but the student government adviser said the move will cancel the election.

Election Commissioner Yusuf Hagg said after a careful and lengthy deliberation over the USG constitution, he decided he had the power to disqualify any candidate for a violation of the election by-laws.

Student Party, Independent hopefuls for president, vice president off ballot

The election commission declared that Brad Cole, the presidential hopeful for the Student Party, breached the by-laws that impose a $250 limit on each president-vice president team for campaigning. Cole exceeded the limit, which was substantiated by actual receipts, Haqq said. A receipt made to Cole that was attached to a Student Party senatorial candidate's itemized expense list showed Cole had paid $200 of a $248 bill for Student Party Tshirts, bringing his total expenditures to $448

As a result, Haqq disqualified Cole from the USG elections, automatically disqualifying his running mate, Joe Hill.

'As far as we're concerned, on that alone we have enough evidence to have questioned and recommended disqualification unless proven otherwise because all we can see is the receipt, it has Brad Cole's name on it, and that pushed him over the limit," he said. Cole maintains the invalidity of the election commission's accusation and has filed an appeal with the commissioner and Judicial Board of Governance, claiming the disqualification is "a personal attack against me by the election commissioner.

Polls open today for USG elections

By Casey Hampton General Assignment Writer

Undergraduate Student Government candidates have launched their final stage of campaigning SIUC students go to the polls today.

Students can cast ballots today for the student trustee, USG president, vice president and senators between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. at one of five places across campus.

Election Commission appointees will monitor polling places at the Student Center, Student Recreation Center, Lentz Hall on Thompson Point, "neblood Hall at University Park and Kesnar Hall on Greek Row

The USG election is open to undergraduates, and the trustee election is open to all students. A valid identification card must be presented to vote. Tony Syach of the Student Party

Bush sews up nomination after Pennsylvania primary

By United Press International

President Bush claimed Tuesday that the Pennsylvania primary gave him the delegates needed to clinch the Republican nomination, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton was moving toward a clear victory and another leg toward becoming the Democratic nominee.

Cable News Network projected Bush and Clinton the winners in Pennsylvania over political commenator Patrick Buchanan in the Republican race and former California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown on the Democratic side

"I'm grateful to so many for this victory," Bush said. "II's wonderful to be offically over the top.

Addressing what the sponsors called the most lucrative fund-raising dinner ever—bringing in some $9 million to GOP coffers— Bush told 4, 000 cheering parti-sans that "this could well be the year we get control of both houses of Congress.

Brechtelsbauer captures win No. 4

By Norma Wilk Sports Writer

The SIUC softball team lost 4-2 in Game One against Gateway foe Eastern Illinois but came back and won 3-1 in Game Two to give coach Kay Brechtelsbauer her 400th SIUC career win.

Brechtelsbauer, who has coached the Salukis for 25 years, has the longest active coaching career at any NCAA Division I school. She became the 18th coach to notch 400 wins.

Brechtelsbauer said it was nice to come back and win the second game.

third periods. LeBlanc, who belongs to the Chicago Blackhawks but played most of the season with Indianapolis of the International Hockey League, was credited with 23 saves. The United States, which placed fourth in the Olympics, is in Group A Group A.

In an earlier Group B game, Canada survived a late rally by France to escape with a 4-3 victory. The French scored twice in the last three minutes and nearly tied the score before the final Brechtelsbauer became the third Gateway coach to capture 400 wins. Meredith Bakiey of Northern Iowa and Kathy Veroni of Western Illinois are the other two.

In Game One the Panthers scored two runs in the second inning. Right fielder Chelle Maynard reached first on an error by pitcher Dede Darnell, 7-6. She was sacrificed to second, and a single by catcher Annette Travica gave her third.

Travica stole second, and left fielder Aimee Klein hit a sacrifice fly to score the first run. An error by freshman first sacker Marlo Pecoraro gave Travica a chance to score

In the fifth inning, first sacker Nicole Chapman led off the inning with a double. She advanced to third on an afield single by designated player Michelle Stinson and scored on a double steal. Pitcher Coli Turley had a sacrifice fly to score Stinson.

By Karyn Viverito Sports Writer

Tom Roth's dream of playing professional football began at 10 a.m. Sunday when the 1992 National Football League draft began. Many teams at this point had showed interest in Roth, and NFL agents projected that he would go in the ninth or 10th round of the draft.

Sunday passed and as the draft went into the ninth round on Monday, Roth got a call from the Los Angeles Rams, who told him they were not going to draft him

Roth and the waiting began again. Then 10th round passed, and at the start of the 11th round Roth said he found himself getting discouraged.

"I was getting angry because I wanted to get drafted so bad," he said. "I was happy that teams were interested in me as a free agent, but I was still down."

Into the 11th round Roth got a call from the Cincinnati Bengals and the Atlanta Falcons, both giving him the same scenario he received from the Rams

They said he was not going to be drafted, but they would like to invite him to try out as a free agent. Roth accepted both offers

Then Roth was on the phone with his agent, who told him that it was most likely that he was not going to get drafted.

That is when Roth's call waiting brought a very important call to his attention.

"Would you like to play for the aiders?" the voice on the other Raiders?' line said.

Roth replied with a hearty "yes," expecting the same senario received from teams rounds earlier.

"Good," the voice answered. "Because we have just selected you in the 12th round of the NFL draft."

It was now 29 hours after the NFL draft had begun and the 6-6, 285-pound Saluki was the 324th pick out of 336 players. Roth said it was a lifelong dream

Guatemalan refugee issue needs attention-speaker

By Sherri L. Wilcox General Assignment Writer

Six thousand Guatemalan refugees living in camps in southern Mexico are fully prepared to move back to their homeland this summer, despite unsuccessful bargaining between the government of Guatemala and the representatives of the refugees.

Francisco Baten Rojas is one of 10 Guatemalan refugees speaking across the United States to raise visibility of the refugees and gain funding for their return to Guatemala.

"Our mission is to get attention to the problem and ask you to accompany us on the return." Rojas said, "to return with us as witness to the treatment we receive from our government

Rojas is one of about 46,000 Guatemalans living in refugee camps in southern Mexico. He is a representative of the Guatemalan Permanent Commissions of Refugees, a group of organizations formed in 1988 in an effort to secure a collective refugee return to Guatemala.

The commissions have engaged in negotiations with the Guatemalan government to ensure safety for the refugees upon their return. Among the conditions, commission bar-gainers insist on their right to be accompanied in their return by national and international groups.

Rojas presented the refugees' demands on the Guatemalan government Monday at Newman Center. The visit was sponsored by the Newman Center and the Southern Illinois Latin America Solidarity Committee.

There are six points that we are demanding be covered, but we will move back home en masse regardless of governmental agreement," Rojas said.

Demands include: the return of Guatemalan refugees must be orderly and on a voluntary basis.

 refugees must be allowed to return to and possess the land they owned before fleeing the country, the government must recognize the refugees' right to organize freely amongst themselves the right of life and safety for themselves and their community.

COLA may drop religious studies rescission last January and the fiscal

By Brandi Tipps Administration Writer

The dean of the College of Liberal Arts is proposing to cut the religious studies program at SIUC to save the college $80,000. Dean John S. Jackson wants to drop the religious studies program because of the financial condition of the college and because the reli-gious studies department has only three majors, he said.

"Religious studies is not a strong department and is an area we cannot afford to build in," he said. "If we can't afford to build in a department, then it is my opinion we should do away with it." COLA faces a $700,000 deficit this year because of the 3-percent crisis of the state and the University. At least two of the religious studies courses will continue to be taught in the general education curriculum for the time being, he said.

The college is in the middle of restructuring the GE curriculum and the possibility exists the religious studies courses may not survive after the restructuring is finished, Jackson said.

"This would be a loss," Jackson said. "Anytime you lose a single course it is a loss, but I have a feeling that there will be an increasing number of losses to students in the next couple of years." Jackson said the State of Illinois is derelict because its lack of fund-tuition, while continuing to offer less and less.

Off-campus unrulies spell Springfest's end

John C. Patterson

Walter B. Jaehnig

The warnings were clear. This was to be the last year if celebrations got out-of-hand. But the warnings fell on deaf ears. Although a majority of students took responsibility for their actions, a violent few ruined Springfest for the many.

Watching students oll a car on the news and reading about student riots in nearly ever major and small-town paper between Carbondale and Chicago, administrators must be wondering what they can do.

Are the students who decided to vandalize the auto proud of their accomplishments? One can only hope they actually are SIUC students and will face the ridicule of their fellow University members when identified by the news videotape of the event. How many parents saw the nightly news and said, "There's my son doing his family proud?"

Springfest has become a blatant embarrassment for anyone even remotely associated with SIUC. Both the University and Carbondale officials gave students one last chance to prove they could handle themselves. Students were up in arms when the City Council proposed a series of strict alcohol regulations to deal with Halloween and Springfest disturbances. But the council struck the ordinances down, and now that the beer cans have settled and the streets have cleared, those in positions of authority are saying, "We told you so.

On Sunday morning newscasts, Beveridge Street resembled Beirut. What image of their city and University are students trying to portray to the rest of the state and the entire nation? The relative calmness of the tailgate and mainstage areas gave hope that students could act their age. But as the night progressed, it became obvious that the University can no longer sponsor or promote any activity for the general student population that relies on personal responsibility.

Let Springfest go the way of Halloween. If drunken students want to promote an idiotic cause, then let them do it from the Carbondale City Jail. No more school vacation fiascos, no more regulations. Students need to forget Springfest. Had the 1992 festivities come off peacefully, Springfest's memory might have lingered as a last opportunity for students to enjoy themselves and everything SIUC has to offer. Instead, thanks to car-tippers and street rioters, it will live in student minds as an embarrassment and unfortunate tragedy, just another victim of student immaturity

Pell in danger of funding cuts The Daily Illini

University of Illinois

It is time to realize that, for some students hit by one or more of U of I's recent rate hikes or surcharges, it will get worse. Although different sources are implementing these hikes and added charges, the people making these changes must look at the overall picture. We are being 'nickeled-and-dimed" in $100 increments, which could mean academic death for some students.

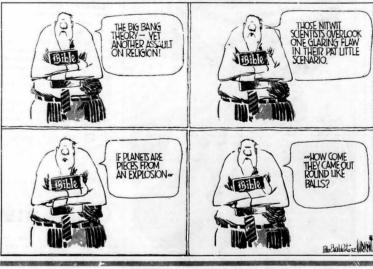

Now the federal government is considering adding another dime to the pile of surcharges and added costs. The government might not give Pell grants the normal amount of extra funding the program usually receives.

Combined with the increasing number of students seeking Pell grants because of the recession, this s creating a nightmare in which Pell grants could be underfunded by at least $332 million next year.

The last time Pell grants were cut was three years ago, and $102 was the maximum amount recipients had to pay back. While $100 doesn't seem like that much money, add this to the existing pile 5100 might just be the straw that breaks the students' backs. Students should contact their representatives and urge them not to take the easy way out by penalizing students for government ineptitude. Unless we do, the nickels and dimes will add up until only the elite will be able to afford to attend public universities.

Letters to the Editor

Jesus' words used as weapon

I have noticed that many people quote Jesus in their letters to the LE. People of both opposing Les. People of both opposing viewpoints quote Jesus to make their points. I have a different view on what the message of Jesus is. In many scriptures, Jesus mentions sin, forgiveness, judgment, and eternity. The comparative differences between different people's opinions on what He meant are due to the different states of their hearts

If they are living sinful lives they can easily twist scripture to fit their personal needs, just enough so they can convince themselves that they are forgiven and will make it into Heaven. The fact is that one Bible verse no matter how much it seems to mean what you want, means nothing without the rest of the Bible. Even the devil can quote scripture if he so pleases.

Can a homosexual deny the Old Testament judgment of Sodom? Can a heterosexual who commits adultery deny the Commandment of God? Or a fornicator, drunkard, sower of discord, thief, etc."

There are so many sins it is impossible for a person not to sin. The message I get from the Bible is that all men who are saved are saved by the Grace of God and not by what they do. If we truly are set free from our sin, then our lives should change when we repent If our lives do not change, then we did not repent, but only told God that we were sorry. If a person has to convince others that he/she is not sinning, then he/she must be worried.

If other people can see a flaw in their salvation, then how much more so can the Almighty God? Are you right with God. Do you have the joy that being at peace with the Lord brings?—Thomas J. Garfunkel, graduate student, geography.

New study links porn with rape

I have just finished reading a book that should be on the "must read" list for President Guyon, who permits the sale of pornographic magazine in the University Bookstore, and for Prof. Harris Rubin, who has "studied human sexuality for more than 25 years" but has "not found a correlation between the use of pornography and the commission of sex offenses, including rape." The book, edited Ly two leading scholars in this area, is titled "Pornography: Research Advances and Policy Considerations" (1989), and is available in Morris Library. I will give four direct quotes. "Baron and Strauss (1985) did find a strong positive relationship between rape rates and the per capita sales of men's magazines (e.g. Playboy). Scott and Schwalm (in press) found quite significant positive relationships between rape rates and each state's per capita sale of the so-called soft pornographic magazines such as Playboy and increased their appetities for deviant activities." (p. 209.) "Finally, data from Carter et al. (in press), Marshall (in press), and Silbert and Pines (1984), suggest that rapists and child molesters use pornography incitefully both immediately prior to their crimes and during the actual assaults." (p. 210)

In my view, the problem is not so much a lack of evidence as it is a lack of leadership to take this one small step to protect women students, faculty and staff on this campus.—Dennis T. Lowry, professor, journalism.

Homosexuality a harmful force, result of neglect

In regard to Michelle Malkin's letter: Gays try to push their perverted influence off on someone else, namely the children. I prefer not to have that influence promoted by society or individuals. I have found gays to be egocentric in nature. What do I mean by egocentric? Refusing to see another person's viewpoint, especially if that viewpoint is religious. Women who feel a need to love other women carnally have grown up without proper love and care from the mother parent figure, in my opinion. So I have nothing against

"real" love. Religion is not the choice. Homosexuality is the choice. You were not born that way. You will be wrong if you do not heed the Bible passed down from generation to generation. Anything less is degenerate.

needs to be heard, and that's the students' voice," he said. Syach has familiarized himself with the circle of student government and political process by serving as a senator and vice president for USG and by leading his fraternity and interfraternity council, he said.

Student Party candidate for USG president Brad Cole and vice presidential running mate Joe Hill were disqualified.

The Student Party, however declares an edge on its opponents through experience and knowledge.

Cole, a junior in biology and political science who has served as USG chief of staff for two years, said the Student Party has established important goals and has the dedication to carry them through.

"We've achieved the platform goals we've had in the past and we would remind everyone that our party is based on experience, knowledge of the issues, dedication and concern for the students," Cole said.

At the other end of the spectrum is the Reform Party and Independent candidates, who are focusing on breathing fresh air and positive change into USG by cleaning it up.

survey last fall, gaining inconclusive results, and a public hearing on campus this spring to review the possibility of the elective termination of pregnancy to be included as a health insurance benefit.

The board made a recom-mendation to the student governments to consider the idea, but rather than taking an in-house stance, the governments decided to place the question on a referendum, said Jake Baggot, admin-istrator of the student health program.

There's very strong and intelligent arguments on both sides of the issue," he said. "We've not taken a position on it yet, but rather let students express their own ideas."

If the referendum to include the coverage in the student health insurance policy passes, the plan may be effective next fall, Baggot said. The student governments and administration must endorse the plan before implementation. "It could potentially be effective for next fall, but it could be delayed depending on how quickly the student governments act on it," he said. The added coverage of abortion is not expected to increase the insurance premium at this point, Baggot said. The fate of the Illinois Student Association also lays in the hands of SIUC students today as they dential candidate for the Reform Party, and her running mate Mark Shelton said USG needs to be restructured because it has been left in the dark with many pressing issues facing students.

Young, a junior in admin-istration of justice from Schaumburg who has served as a USG senator, said the Reform Party plans to represent students who traditionally have been left unrepresented by USG, such as African Americans, international and handicapped students. "The Reform Party has a vision and we see an active-working student government-one that is pro-active rather than reactive, one that will do more than write resolutions to tuition increases," Young said.

The need for change in USG also tops the platform of Inde-pendent USG presidential can-didate William White and running mate Jacquelyn Thames.

White, a senior in special ed-ucation from St. Leuis, said the time has come for USG to escape the shadow of the University administration and work for the students.

"We as students feel it's time to stop and make a change," he said. "Basically, we want the students to determine the destiny of our tuition and our education."

vote whether to continue membership in the organization.

A question will appear on a referendum about continuing support of the ISA through payment of an annual $1 refundable fee collected for the next two years with tuition and fees.

In the past year, ISA has been charged by the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign with general lack of competency and no sense of commitment to its member schools

Despite a recommendation by the U of I Student Government Association to withdraw membership, students on the Urbana-Champaign campus voted to retain membership by a narrow margin.

But the U of I Board of Trustees voted April 6 to withdraw both the Urbana-Champaign and Chicago campuses from ISA because of mixed student views on the effectiveness of the organization.

The decision carried with it a blow to ISA's $120,000 annual budget, leaving the organization with only $60,000 for next year.

ISA executive director Phil Lyons said the ultimate fate of the organization hangs on the outcome of this election.

The election commission also disqualified William White, the Independent -- candidate -- for White failed to turn in an itemized expense list on campaign funding, as required

Red Cross faces financial trouble after record number of disasters

WASHINGTON (UPI) American Red Cross, mired in "scrious financial trouble" because of a record number of natural disasters, pleaded Tuesday for $30 million to allow the humanitarian agency to keep helping the victims of mudslides, hu carthquakes, and the like. hurricanes,

Red Cross President Elizabeth Dole said the financial shortfall facing the agency threatens its 110year-old disaster relief program, which gives food, shelter, medicine and other aid to disaster victims. Dole asked for $30 million from the public and private sectors, citing the more than 55,000 disasters in fiscal 1990-91 and a large number in this fiscal year, which ends June 30, that the agency has helped victims cope with.

"The American Red Cross disaster relief program is in serious financial trouble," she said at a news conference at the agency's national headquarters. "Back-toback years of unprecedented disasters put us in this position." In 1989-1990, the Red Cross spent a record $224 million to help victims of such disasters as Hurricane Hugo, which raked the East Coast, and the earthquake that rocked San Francisco. The 1990-1991 figure was $184 million.

At the news conference, victims who have been helped by the Red Cross joined Dole at the podium, giving emotional testimony and making pleas for money for the agency that was chartered by Congress but is not funded by government. Roger and Elizabeth Spencer

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration regulates cosmetics through the U.S. Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, which defines cosmetics as "articles other than soap which are applied to the human body for cleansing, beautifying, promoting attractiveness or altering the appearance." FDA is responsible for regulating poisonous ingredients in cosmetics, including eye makeup.

osmetic users in search of the ultimate product to reduce skin and body imperfections may come up short if they choose a product based on packaging, not ingredients. The Food, Drug and Cosmetic

The Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act defines cosmetics as articles which may be mibbed, poured, sprinkled, or sprayed on, introduced into, or otherwise applied to the human body for cleansing, beautifying, promoting attractiveness or altering the appearance without affecting the body's structure or function.

According to that ton. According to the FDA, cosmetics manufacturers often claim their products contain some ingredient superior to the ingredient used by other lines or som magic formula that will accomplish extraordinary results.

Mary Taylor, director of public affairs for Avon Products, Inc., said Avon emphasizes quality and reasonable price.

"Products like the 24-hour lipstick and our SkinSoSoft moisturizer are two of the most popular among college students," Taylor said.

Chemical analyses show products in any category lipsticks, face creams, and other cosmetic products—are similar in composition.

Darlene Bailey, spokeswoman for the midwest region of the FDA, said a common question about cosmetic products is whether a product is the best product to use.

Bailey said women and men purchase products because of their attraction to it—by color or name brand.

"A lot of the calls are people saying things like— 'we bought this cleansing cream and is it one of the best?" Bailey said. "They are not concerned whether the product will do what it is going to do."

Bailey said because the FDA regulates the cosmetic companies, it cannot comment on the brand of the cosmetic.

"We generally tell them a moisturizer is a moisturizer regardless of the name brand. "A lipstick is a lipstick Cosmetic restrictions It is against the law to distribute cosmetics that contain poisonous or harmful substances that might injure users under normal conditions. Manufacturing or holding cosmetics under insamlary conditions, using nonpermitted colors or including any filthy, putrid or decomposed substance in the cosmetic is illecal.

Except for color additives and a few prohibited ingredients, a cosmetic manufacturer may use any ingredient or raw material and market the final product without government approval.

regardless of the name brand," she said, "We tell the consumer to pay particular attention to the ingredients of the products they are using."

Taylor said Avon lists all ingredient information on its products.

"We were one of the first cosmetic companies to use sunscreen SP 15 in a number of our skin care products," Taylor said. Bailey said listing the ingredients

Bailey said listing the ingredients on cosmetics is important even though cosmetic firms are not required to register with the FDA or to tell the FDA the formulas they use in making their products.

"First, the consumers have a right to know what is in any product they are buying," she said. "And second, listing the ingredients will make the advertisers tell the truth."

Bailey said consumers will be surprised, when they look at the ingredients is in the cosmetics they use.

Lipsticks are a perfect example, she said.

Baily said castor oil is a principal ingredient in lipstick.

The FDA has no authority to require pre-market testing of cosmetics for safety, but the agency can take legal steps to have a product removed from the market if it proves to be a health hazard.

A 1974 FDA study showed 10 categories of products with the highest rate of adverse reactions. Those categories were:

Those categories were: deodorant/antiperspirants: depilatories (chemical hair removers): moisturizer/loton: hair spray/lacquer: mascara, bubble bath: eye cream; hair color/dyc lighteners; facial skin cream/cleaner: and nail polish.

Bailey said most cosmetics are safe for use by most people, but adverse reactions to cosmetics do happen from time to time.

happen from time to time. Carbondale dermatologist Eugenia Poulos said common reactions to facial and eve makeup include acne, whiteheads and blackheads.

Many cosmetic products also contain oil-based ingredients that clog pores, intensifying the blemishes many cosmetic users are trying to cover up. And Bailey said a big contributor

And Bailey said a big contributor to adverse reactions to cosmetics is cross-contamination.

"It is a big safety issue with the FDA," Bailey said. "Sharing cosmetics like lipsticks is common among college students."

Bailey said people who share cosmetics with someone may have a cold sore on their lips and by sharing lipstick spread the sore.

Poulos said a common belief among college women is that moisturizers retain moisture in the skin.

"That is a myth. Moisturizers block moisture already in the skin," Poulos said."When women put moisturizer on before they put on the make-up they believe they are adding moisture to it. That is not true."

Bailey said women cosmetic users buy certain products based on myths.

"Many women spend a lot of money buying different types of make-up removers and don't consider petroleum jelly does the same thing," Bailey said. The FDA just wants to provide enough information for consumers to make the proper choice, she said.

permission for delegations of international representatives to accompany the refugees back into nala and Guate freedom of mobility within Guatemala and internationally. The Guatemalan government agreed to demands for an orderly return and recognized the refugees' rights to organize among themselves. Government officials have notified the representatives they will discuss the remaining four demands at the next meeting in May.

'We want the land we are taken to to be as good as the land we left behind," Rojas said. Rojas said the refugees want the United States to be aware that there still exists in Guatemala unrest and corruption.

"The government asks for support on one basis, but acts on another," he said. "At the same time that they ask the United States for support for schools and housing, they are using the money for guns and weapons." Rojas left Guatemala for Mexico in 1982 where his camp chose him to represent the group in negotiating for their return. Rojas has been working with the commissions for three years.

Many of the refugees left Guatemala following a coup by a three-man military junta in 1982 that led to Amnesty International charges of brutality, corruption and political murders to then president Romeo Lucas Garcia.

While the coup left the junta in power for several months, hopes for improvement in the government quickly faded when Gen. Jose Efrain Rios Montt took sole power of Guatemala three months later following a violent campaign for office that left more than 60,000 people dead and more than 400 villages destroyed.

"The campaign involved the military taking people, hanging them and cutting them to pieces," Rojas said.

It is this situation that has prompted U.S. groups to send aid to the refugees and support their safe return.

"It was proposed that the return would begin in March, but it has not yet begun," said Georgeann Hartzog of the SILASC.

"The war in Guatemala is the longest insurgent war in this hemis phere, and has been drastically and consistently overlooked," she said. Despite the violence and unrest that remains in Guatemala, many refugees want to return to their homes, prompted by the treatment of the Mexican government in the refugee camps.

Refugee camps lack clean water, land and firewood, Rojas said, and under the Mexical government's control, refugees are not allowed to look for work outside the camps. "The United Nations has withdrawn its attention from us," he said. "This means no pumps for water, and no money to pay for electric.

Refugees reportedly pay very high rent on the limited land that is available.

"Mexican land owners charge whatever they please," he said. Some of the refugees have decided it would be better to move to Canada to live, but according to the commissions, the Mexican authorities will not allow the move.

Following a return to democracy in Guatemala in 1985 and the writing of a new constitution, these refugees now are preparing to return to their homeland, although the history of government corruption in Guatemala still leaves Rojas and many refugees leery about how sincere the present government is in their agreement to refugee demands

"We will just have to wait and see." Rojas said.

Gunman kills three, wounds three in trailer park

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — A gunman apparently angry about his battery conviction returned to a trailer park where he had lived and began shooting, killing three people and wounding three others people and wounding three others before dying himself, authorities said Tuesday

Police still were uncertain if the gunman, identified as Furmin Mancilla, killed himself at the end of the shooting spree or was killed by shots fired by a victim, Deputy Chief Jim Weston said.

Police said there had been a long-standing dispute between neighbors at the Covered Wagon Park and the Bonanza Trailer R.V. Park

The shooting spree was apparently sparked when the spect was convicted of battery SI on Monday, he said. "He went back to the trailer park that evening and went after some of the people who were involved in the court case," Weston said.

The gunman drove into the park north of Reno about 8 p.m. and began firing. Two people were killed inside a trailer and another outside.

had been in court earlier that day during Mancilla's conviction. The victims included the manager of the Covered Wagon Park and his wife, who were trying to evict the suspect.

During the 1972 presidential elections, Republican Richard Nixon defeated Democrat George McGovern in a landslide victory. The following year brought government turmoil with the development of the Watergate scandal involving Nixon.

Sheila Simon was only in junior high when these events occurred, but she had a unique perspective that few teen-agers will ever experience. Simon and her brother, Martin, the children of U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, had the opportunity to ask McGovern to explain personally the concept of Watergate to them. "He explained it to us in his own words—so we could understand it," she said. Today, Simon teaches family law part-time at the SIU law school and practices law at O'Neill and Colvin, an all-female law firm in Carbondale.

Simon said she believes being the daughter of a well-known political figure has been a plus in both her private and professional life.

"It has helped me to teach and has helped me to be a better lawyer," she said. "It's given me a perspective of why certain things work and certain things don't," Simon said.

Simon also has met people she would not have, if her father was not so involved in the government, she said.

"I worked on Jimmy Carter's second presidential campaign, and

Sheila Simon

I thought it was really fun," she said. "I wanted to get involved in politics and see how the government worked," Simon said. Her parents played significant roles in helping her decide a career without forcing her to go a certain route, Simon said.

"Like any kid, I have gone through a million choices of what I wanted to do," she said. "But they didn't try to steer me in one direction or another."

The Simons have managed to stay close in spite of the time her father must spend away from his family. Simon said.

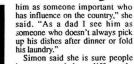

"Dad and Mom have had to find ways to stay close, mainly through lots of phone calls," she said. And we've always tried to take big summer vacations each year just to get away." In the past her family has traveled to Costa Rica and Alaska, and this summer they will go to Colorado for a week, Simon said.

Simon describes her father in two ways-one as a politician and the regular guy-the other as a father. The two are very different, she said. "I know both the politician and -everyone sees have treated her differently because she is the daughter of a politician, but it has not interfered with anything she has done in her career, she said.

"After the initial 'Oh, wow!' it's back to regular Sheila," she said. "One time in 1988 when my father was running for president I wrote a check at Sears and the cashier had to have an ID. I thought 'Well, I'm sure not getting any special treatment here.

The rumors that presidential candidate Bill Clinton will choose her father for his running mate excites her family, but her father is being more realistic, Simon said.

"Dad thinks the chances are pretty slim, but the rest of us are ready to pack our bags and hit the campaign trail again—we obviously think he would make a great vice president," she said. "And we've tentatively been organizing a "Move Out the Quayles" party and we've had a lot of takers, too."

In the future, Simon said she will more than likely work with her law firm and perhaps continue teaching at the law school.

"And I might be campaigning for Dad or someone else, or get into politics myself," she said. That's always an option.

Simon is married to Perry Knop, a first year SIU law student, and they have one daughter, Reilly, 2.

Power companies urged to share air pollution plan profits with people

By Christy Gutowski General Assignment Writer

Allowing the trade of air pollution emissions futures in the open market may be an economically efficient plan for electric power plants, but interest groups say the profits earned should be shared by both companies and

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission authorized the Chicago Board of Trade to sell futures hased on sulfur dioxide air pollution emissions from electric power plants last week

The free market option allows utilities to sell allowances directly to other utilities or trade with the CBOT.

But the Citizens Utility Board in Chicago opposes such a system because the profits made from trading will go to utility companies, not the consumer who, in the end, will foot the bill, said Pat Clark, CUB spokeswoman. "At the end of the legislative session last year, utilities were given permission to pass the cost of installing scrubbers on to consumers, she said.

she said. Those power plants allowed to trade will be chosen according to the 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act, which rewards utilities that are environmentally aware by giving credits to the individual company.

The act mandated 50 of the least environmentally safe plants to either switch to low-sulfur coal or install scrubbers in an attempt to clean up the facilities

CUB officials say the scrubbers will give the utilities the chance to earn substantial profits for selling allowances, but the consumer will not benefit as a result of the new legislation.

"The profits should in some way be shared with consumers," Clark said.

Illinois Power predicted the move may call for a rate increase of up to 10 percent for consumers.

But Clark said the increase may be higher. "IP has made predictions in the past that have fallen short of what consumers actually ended up paying,' she said.

Clark said her organization would like to see the profit of selling allowances used to offset the higher rates naid by the consumer

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will grant emissions allowances to power utilities based on the amount of sulfur dioxide air pollution they produced in 1985.

Agency in Springreid, said his agency supports the allowances. "We're glad the (Commodity Futures Trading Commission) made the authorization," he said. "There are a lot of people out there that really needed this."

The agency represents 30 cities and is part-owner of a private power plant in Louisville, Ky. "We're looking for a market to sell the emissions right now," he said. "As soon as the price is right we intend to sell'

In theory, the sale of allowances on the open market will generate sulfur dioxide reductions, said. Bob dioxide reductions, said - Bob Libernin, director of Energy and Natural Resources in Springfield. Sulfur dioxide reductions will come about by cutting allowable emissions to 12.5 million tons in 1995, 9.4 million tons in 2000 and to 8.9 million tons by 2010, according to an EPA report.

This is an 8.9 million-ton reduction from utilities in 25 years. Only 20 percent of annual sulfur dioxide emissions allowances are expected to be available for trading. The emissions-trading plan allows 1 ton of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere a year for each allowance. Each allowance sells for each $80 to $200 a ton.

other course that offers information on the Middle East, and the professor who taught it has retired, Bengtson said.

Local religious organizations have helped to support the department financially, he said. The Islamic Center of Carbondale and the College of Liberal Arts have had a long-term agreement for each to pay half the salary of Professor Riazuddin

Salary of Professor Razuduli Zohairi's salary, he said. The center has contributed more than $100,000 with the average being about $15,000 a year. The Jewish Chautauqua Society donates $1,000 a year to finance a commone of under course on Judaism

But Jackson said the $80,000 COLA can save is a significant amount of money.

If the department is eliminated, Bengtson will retain his tenured position and be moved to another department, but the two other faculty members, Michael faculty members, Michael Humphries and Riazuddin Zobairi, would be given a one year notice prior to termination.

The students who are majors will be allowed to finish out their major if the department is eliminated.

Bengtson said his department was not notified of Jackson's intentions to eliminate the department and after meeting with the executive committee of the College of Liberal Arts Council, no indication was given the department was in danger of being eliminated.

Jackson said every department was requested to write up a proposal concerning the goals, financial needs and the future of the department, and Bengtson was invited to the meeting to discuss the future of the department, which

Bengtson has fought the same situation on three other occasions but thought the problem was solved after a memo he received from Jackson two years ago, which led Bengtson to believe the department was no longer in danger of being cut, he said. "I hope you will take the above long-term plans as an endorsement of your own personal ambitions for the department," according to the memo, "and that you will look at this as a new beginning as we both strive to increase the role of the department and its programmatic offerings.

Bengtson said Jackson apparently thought the department had potential because he hired a religious studies faculty new member Michael Humphries last summer

Humphries, an assistant professor of Jewish and Christian origins, said when he came to SIUC and interviewed for the position he was assured his hiring was part of the plan to build up the department.

Jackson said Humphries was hired as a tenured track faculty member. A tenured track faculty member is hired with the presumption he will be at SIUC, at least, until he is eligible for tenure, which is after six years, he said. Humphrics said most colleges would not hire a new faculty member just to eliminate the program nine months later. "I find it hard to believe they were nc' aware of these financial problems when I was here interviewing," he said. Humphries said one year may sound like a long time to some people, but "my chances are slim to find a job within one year," he

Bengtson will present his argument to save the department before the College of Liberal Arts Council next week

Former SIUC zoology prof dies after long cancer battle

By Jeremy Finley General Assignment Writer

An SIUC professor whose love for birds led him to a career in zoology has died after a sevenear battle with cancer.

William George of Cobden died April 18 at St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau. He was 67.

"On the way to the hospital before he died, he made his wife slow the car down so he could listen to the birds one last time because by then he had lost his sight," said Du Wayne Englert, George's friend for 28 years. George came to SIUC in 1964 and contributed much to the zoology department, Englert said. George was born in 1925 in Santa Cruz, Calif. He joined the Naval Air Corps during World After the war, he studied at Stanford University with a major in English. George received his doctorate in zoology from the University of Arizona in 1961. Three years later he became a fellow of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. He spent a year of his fellowship in South America gathering rare songbirds for the museum. Because of George's great love for books, the family requests contributions to his memory should be made to the Stinson Memorial Library in Anna or to any public library

George is survived by his wife, Marian, his daughter, Sarah, and relatives in England.

Unpublished Kerouac works to be printed

BOSTON (UPI) - More than twenty years after the death of Jack Kerouac, readers will be able to get their hands on recently revealed works by the Beat Generation author and poet. Beginning this fall, two companies will publish four manuscripts of prose and poetry and a set of letters written by the Lowell, Mass., native. John Sampas, whose late sister, Stella, was Kerouac's third wife, said the newly revealed works were written by Kerouac in Mexico, San Francisco and New York during the late 1940s to mid-1950s.

The first book scheduled for release is a volume of poetry, "Pomes All Sizes." City Lights Books in San Francisco, founded by Kerouac's friend, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, plans to publish the poetry within the next eight months.

Sampas, who is the legal literary representative for the Kerouac family, said there was no particular reason for releasing the manuscripts now.

I don't know what to say. He didn't have the recognition back then he has now." he said. Sampas, who said he had just completed negotiations for a contract with Viking-Penguin for "Some of the Dharma," a lengthy work on Kerouac's personal ideas about Buddhism, and "Wake Up," a work about the life of Buddha, said the two works are due out in late 1992 or early 1993.

Kerouac gained as much fame during his lifetime for his lifestyle as for his writing, leading an often reckless existence heavily doused in drugs and sex.

During his life, Kerouac published nearly 20 books. "On the Road," a novel of American culture in the post-World War II era, was completed in 1952.

is very popular.

Since the expanded format was added in August, guests have included ESPN's Baseball Tonight host Gary Miller, Jason Stark from Inside Baseball magazine and KMOX-AM (St. Louis) sports director Ron Jacober, Silverman said.

said. "The guests definitely add a factor of credibility to the show," he said. "Before we added that aspect to the program we averaged one or two calls a show. Now we're up to five or six, so (the change) has drawn attention."

WIDB assistant sports director Curtis Smith said the guests improve the quality of Sportsview not only by increasing audience participation, but by increasing the enthusiasm of the show's hosts

In the last couple of years the show has really taken a giant step up," he said. "Personally speaking, I know it makes me excited when I know someone like J:m Hart or Gary Miller will be in the studio."

WIDB hopes to continue the guest format by attracting former Saluki and current Houston Astro center fielder Steve Finley as well as members of the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs, Silverman said. In addition, it will use promotions to continue to increase the show's audience size.

Still, the main obstacle to the success of Sportsview is the limits of WIDB's listening range. Only students in the dorms and Student Center can pick up the station, Silverman said.

"A lot of people don't even know our show exists," he said. "It's hard to get much publicity with such a own, but when the listener has a chance to win something it makes it not only fun but profitable to win.

Silverman said the give-aways will include sports equipment, T-shirts and submarine sandwiches.

In addition to the Sportsview program Smith said SIUC sports fans can find the Dawgs home baseball, basketball and football games on WIDB's programming schedule, as well as four daily sports updates at 8:50, 11:50, 1:50 and 4:50. RAIDER, from page 20 phone to be greeted by Raider head coach Art Shell who welcomed him to the team. Roth said he thanked him for making a dream come true. It was both expected and a surprise when Roth got drafted, offensive line coach Tom Seward said.

"About four teams showed interest in him, and agents that reviewed him projected him to go in the 10th round," he said. "Then again he's from a Division I-AA program and has had knee surgery so there was always a chance that he wouldn't get drafted at all."

Roth, who hailed from Alton-Marquette High School, was the Salukis most experienced lineman with three letter seasons.

The most remembered season however, was Roth's junior year, when he had to sit out most of the season due to a knee injury.

The knee was obviously a concern for the NFL agents, but Seward said Roth's knee with give him no problems in the NFL.

"He had six months of rehabilitation and his knee and never given out or given him any problems since," he said. Roth said he has not given a thought to his knee giving him problems in the NFL

"My knee has fully recovered and I had no problems with it during the 1991 season," he said. "Actually, they(NFL agents) were more concerned with a minor shoulder injury that I had, which has also healed."

The concern for Roth now, is a question asked of him by Shell during heir phone conversation. "Have you ever snapped a football Tom," Shell asked.

When Roth replied no, Shell said he had better learn how.

With the Raiders thoughts of using Roth as a center now in effect, he said he has wasted no time in preparing for the task. Junior Saluki quarterback

Scott Gabberi is Roth's roommate and they have already been out practicing, Roth said. "We have been working on my snaps, and he is teaching me how the quarterback needs to receive the ball," he said. "He's gonna keep working with me each day, and along with running and working out, I will be in good shape for camp.

Melanie is the sister of current sophomore Saluki swimmer Cheryl Davis. Cheryl Davis said she can swim any freestyle distance but the 50, and she has solid figures in the stroke events.

Melanie Davis is the most versatile players SIUC has recruited, Ingram said.

"The women we are bringing in are versatile in all strokes, while the men give us a wide range of freestyle talent," Ingram said.

Ingram expects to announce ad-ditional recruits in the near future.
