Officials: Pell cuts will not hurt SIUC

Federal grants to increase next year despite 20-percent budget reduction

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

Although federal funding for Pell Grants was cut about one-fifth from the amount allocated for 1995 in this year’s federal budget. University and state officials say students who rely on the grants should not worry. The 1996 budget passed the U. S. House and Senate Thursday, seven months after the start of the fiscal year and after two federal government shut downs because of disagreements among politicians. In the budget, about $4.8 billion was appropriated for Pell Grants, cutting its funding about one-fifth from last year.

Vicki Shipley, director of client and federal relations at the Illinois Student Assistance Commission, said Pell Grants can add money left over from the previous academic year onto the next year’s budget.

Shipley said Pell Grant funding for next year will be about $5.7 billion because $609 million left over from last year will be added onto the appropriated money.

Pam Britton, director of SIUC Financial Aid, said additional money for Pell Grants is available because more money was allocated for the grants than was needed in previous years. She said there actually will be an increase in the maximum awardable Pell Grants offered to grant recipients from $2,470 to $2,340, despite a lower yearly allocation from the federal government.

University faculty could form union with 30-percent vote

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

If enough SIUC faculty sign a card asking a state board to conduct an election at the University, a faculty union may result, state and national educators say. A faculty union could help negotiate increasing the salaries of faculty members at SIUC. Jim Sullivan, president of the SIUC chapter of the Illinois Education Association-National Education Association, said the first step for SIUC faculty to gain more authority in negotiations with administrators is to sign a Representation Authorization Card.

Sullivan said if at least 30 percent of SIUC faculty sign the card, the State Labor Board will sponsor an election. At the election, faculty can choose to become a union, through which they will have a vote in University decisions, or remain an advisory body, with no official vote on University policy, he said.

The Labor Board requires that 20 percent of faculty members sign the cards to prove that there is interest in forming a faculty union. Sullivan said.

Sullivan said he is collecting 400 cards, but only about 300 have been returned so far. He said about 270 faculty members at SIUC would account for the 30 percent of faculty that is required. The group has until Sept. 1 to complete the drive.

“We are very anxious to bring this to a completion by the end of the semester,” Sullivan said. “We want to get a strong showing.”

As a way to get more faculty interested in forming a union, Christine Mainland, higher education coordinator for the National Education Association, will give a presentation on faculty unions Tuesday in Oglesby Hall Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

Mainland said unions would encourage better communication between administrators and faculty.

“Collective bargaining is a means for faculty and administrators to sit down as peers and become equals in the bargaining process,” Mainland said. “It levels the playing field for faculty and support staff.”

Sullivan said a faculty union could help negotiate increasing the salaries of faculty members at SIUC. He said SIUC faculty salaries are lower than faculty salaries at other institutions in the state.

Sullivan said SIUC faculty make an average of $2,000 less than community college faculty. An Illinois Board of Higher Education report on fiscal year 1995 faculty and civil service salaries reported that SIUC faculty earned $45,100 per year, while Illinois community college faculty made $46,900.

Sullivan said he has been working toward collective bargaining, a process used by unions to influence University policies, for a number of years. An election for collective bargaining took place in 1988, but a faculty union was voted down.

Although SIUC's College Bowl team did not win an award at the national tournament, last week several team members say the competition was a learning experience.

Saluki Express summer routes topic of study

By Brian T. Sutton

Carbondale may study the feasibility of funding some of SIUC's mass transit service routes during summer breaks to keep the service available for city residents, a city official says.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the City Council may vote tonight on whether to begin discussions with SIUC officials about possible city funding of some Saluki Express routes.

Doherty said he is not sure if the city can receive the same rate SIUC receives through its contract with Beck Bus.

Jeff Shepard, of Carbondale, asked the City Council, at its April 16 meeting, to consider funding the service during SIUC breaks. Shepard, a city councilman, feels the service would be popular if it continued during breaks.

Doherty said the council should look into the feasibility of the project.

Borman said non-students are charged a fare of 50 cents per ride. The service has received approximately $13,000 from non-students since August, he said.

"It's an indication that others besides students use the system," he said.

The incident occurred in the Student Center, near the central entrance on the building's east side. The child was lying on the walkway and fell to the marble walkway entrance on the building's east side.

The child did not slip through the good condition, SIUC Police say.

Sue Davis, University News Service director, said the ruling should be announced within the weekend.

Vernon, said the ruling should be announced within the week.

Lee Ellen Snavely, SIUC attorney, said she could not comment on the case while it is pending in court.

Robert L. Christian, SIUC associate professor of journalism and non-practicing attorney, said the information the Illinois Attorney General's Office released on Friday is protected by a "litigation privilege." The attorney general's office said it could not comment on the case. The attorney general's office said it could not comment on the case.

"The questions that we asked ranged from the birth of the universe to current events as to current this week's events, and they covered all areas of knowledge," he said.

Lazey said he is now able to understand more clearly how the Illinois Attorney General's Office does its job. Lazey said it is reassuring to know the education.

"We were definitely the new kids on the block at the tournament, but we had a good time," said Thomas Lance, Saluki team captain.

Lance said that the team was asked about 30 questions during the tournament ranging from sports to genetics. He said one of the more obscure questions the team members were asked was, "What is the technical term for Mad Cow Disease?"

"It was Bovine spongiform encephalopathy," said SIUC received seven points for knowing the correct answer.

Lazey said the moderator asked the question, "It is presently in a mansion in Chiwa, Kansas; what is it?" The moderator said the answer was "Bovine spongiform encephalopathy," and SIUC received seven points for knowing the correct answer.

EDITORIAL

Politicians' claims against same-sex marriage unsupported

FOR A STATE IN FINANCIAL TROUBLE, IT IS absurd for Illinois to enact a bill that would make the state undesirable to new companies and individuals that are considering moving here.

But the same-sex marriage ban passed by the Illinois House on Thursday would do just that. By banning same-sex marriages, the state would not have to recognize such marriages licensed in other states.

On March 8, we urged the Illinois Senate not to pass similar legislation, which it eventually did. Now we urge Gov. Jim Edgar not to sign this bill that is based on a tenuous moral judgement and undefined threats of lost state funding.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said that without the bill, Southern Illinois would lose revenue. A spokesman for Illinois House Speaker Lee Daniels, R-Elmhurst, said support for the bill isn't a moral argument so much as a fiscal one.

But these arguments fly in the face of a study performed by Lee Badgett, a visiting professor at Yale University. The study, "The Cost of Non-Recognition of Same-Sex Marriages," refutes the politicians' arguments.

The study shows that with legal recognition of same-sex marriages, the couple could combine their savings, investments and property legally as a traditional couple can, opening up opportunities for more savings and investments.

The study reports that when both individuals were filing taxes as a joint return instead of individually, a couple will pay more in taxes than single people do.

POLITICIANS SUPPORTING THE BILL HAVE used taxes and savings as places where the state would lose money by recognizing same-sex marriages. The study's findings show that the opposite is true.

Badgett's study also showed that if an individual can put his or her partner on the employer's insurance, that couple is less likely to use social services such as Medicaid.

But without legal recognition, individuals in same-sex relationships would be at a mercy of insurance companies and the companies' regulations if wanting to add his or her partner's name to a policy.

With legal recognition, more couples would not have to turn to social programs to assist with medical costs, thus saving the state money.

A final benefit of legally recognizing same-sex marriages that Badgett cites is that marriage is the primary way people leave welfare. By implementing this ban, politicians would make people lose every dollar as well as a loss or tremendous by society at large. And early child-care providers that have completed a four-year program are not paid enough for the work they do.

Teachers, as well as child-care providers, have the ability to educate our children. Education educates the whole world. Those who teach have the power to influence every child's perception. Because of this influence, men have voted on the moon.

Teachers and other child-care providers are a part of America's children, and America's children are the clay. The children are shaped and molded into perfection by the potter. Let's all take time out to appreciate these great people.

Child care shapes the world's future

Teachers, as well as other child-care providers, do an exemplary job of serving families and young children. They are rarely given credit for making sure that America's most precious possessions are transformed into the leaders of tomorrow. Most child-care providers didn't base their decisions to care for children on the premise of popularity. It is time to praise those who care for our children.

Currently, child-care providers are thought to have the easiest jobs in the world. Legitimacy in the area of childcare for all children hasn't been established by society at large. And early child-care providers that have completed a four-year program are not paid enough for the work they do.

Teachers, as well as child-care providers, have the ability to educate our children. Education educates the whole world. Those who teach have the power to influence every child's perception. Because of this influence, men have voted on the moon.

Bost's justification makes no sense

A same-sex marriage bill has passed the legislature. Rep. Mike Bost made a strange observation about this bill. He claimed allowing the marriages would result in a loss of revenue for the state. I would like to know how this conclusion was reached. What statistics are behind this number? Why not prove this?

I believe that if all gay people in Illinois moved to another state — one more receptive to gay people — the state would be greatly impoverished by the loss of revenue from tax dollars as well as a loss of tremendous talent and skill.

We greatly need every person. Also, when any person is denied the rights they deserve, we are all denied justicewith rights and responsibilities for everyone — including state representatives, who have the responsibility to be informed and fair.

Soon-to-be graduate grades
University after two years

On May 10, 1996 I will begin to refer to my time at SIU in the past tense. My university life is almost complete. I have a few years left.

The Creative Process (A). The recreation center stands as one of the strongest assets that has made obvious efforts to serve the entire university and community. From its origin to the programs for the disabled, the recreation center certainly deserves recognition. The need for this service to SIUC.

Morris Library (B). The library is an attractive collection of journals that has assisted me in my research efforts at SIUC. However, the computer system that catalogs the library's collection is antiquated and frustrating to navigate. The library needs to invest more money in their own catalog system and less money on accessing the Java scene (you know, the Internet).

College of Science (C). From the bread-box-sized advising office to the science department's fauna, the College of Science stands as an embarrassment to the University's dedication to attracting scientists for the next millennium. The most recent effort, the third Life Science building, the University should have spent money on advising that the undergraduate laboratories.

College of Liberal Arts (A). The advice from the COLA is vastly different from the one at the College of Science. It is special and up-to-date and oriented. Instead of the cramping students into a box, a student can have the basement of Neckers, the students have plenty of room to wait for an appointment with any faculty member.

Justice at SIUC (F). The University of Illinois, Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University, Loyola University, and John A. Logan College all have real libraries, but SIUC is the only one. The University only gives students the rights that they are legally required to provide and nothing more. That is sad.

Health Services (B). Other than the 1 that nearly killed my roommates, sending him home without observation after an immunization shot (he had a severe allergic reaction), the health services performs well in their treatment and education of the students at SIUC.

University Honors (A). I would love to honestly say that I have learned the most, here at SIUC, from my honors classes through the University Honors Program. The instructor has an obvious interest in showing up to class (and they are even prepared). The University Honors instructors teach, as opposed to the droning lectures you get from SIUC's science instructors. I agree entirely with Ann Woodlock Letters to the Editor, April 11) that while she is proud to be graduated, she is disturbed by the problems that (she) sees being created by a lack of a real, practical response to those problems.

I hope that when people discover the deeply hidden secret that I am an SIUC graduate they don't concoct pictures of John Belushi in Animal House. SIUC deserves praise and recognition for its service to SIUC.

University Housing (C). The window's in the towers open an amazing two inches. The mice in my lab have better living conditions than the students in University Housing. The illintent plan to force all freshmen to live on campus is an embarrassing play for money by the housing department. The University needs to improve the conditions before they attempt to force mandatory housing.

Meeting's Here & Out

but don’t forget your finals!

1. The class final exam period begins at 8:00 a.m. on the first day of the final exam period. Final exam times are posted in the class listing located on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section in the registered student's schedule of classes). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule of Classes book on two lines in the manner:

   8:00 - 10:00 A.M.
   10:10 - 12:10 P.M.

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is “8:00”. The meeting days of that first line are "T" or "R", and therefore are in the category “Begins with a T or R”. The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Spring '96 Final Examination Schedule to be Thursday, May 9 at 12:30 - 02:30 p.m. The Exam Period is by the attached Spring '96 Final Examination Schedule to be Thursday, May 9 at 12:30 - 02:30 p.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final exam in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms due to space conflicts. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

3. Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class session prior to final examinations.

4. It is a policy of the University that no final examination be given prior to the scheduled final examination period, and that students be given their examinations at the designated times. Any deviation from this policy must be approved by the Dean of the College.

5. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during the make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they received the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

5. Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered at the SLU Student Center throughout final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education at Washington Square C (555-7515) at least three days in advance to reserve a time slot and receive a room assignment.

Well-done meat as bad as rare—study

For years, scientists have been warning about the dangers of undercookcd meat. Now studies suggest that the new method of cooking meat, the more harmful it is.

Actually, the truth is somewhat in between. Meat cooked medium rare must still cook ground meat thoroughly to kill deadly E. coli bacteria, say researchers at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

But a new study suggests that the longer you grill or fry beef — cooking it at high temperatures for a long time — the greater the risk of stomach cancer.

In fact, according to the study conducted by the National Cancer Institute, Nebraska farmers were three times more likely to get stomach cancer if they ate their beef well-done.

Lance said although the team lost to Cornell by only five points and lost to the University of Michigan by 25 points, SIUC still would not have placed in the top four positions because, overall, the team did win as many games as the teams who placed in the top four positions.

Caste said the University of Michigan won first place, second went to the University of Virginia, Princeton took home third place and Cornell placed fourth.

Lieber or SIUC officials decide to postion the state Supreme Court, they only have 35 days to do so after the appellate court's decision is announced.

"If the court decides to hear the case, there is no way of telling when a decision can be reached," she said.

University officials said they would not comment while the lawsuit is pending.

"We are going to try to get back there next year, and hopefully we will do better.

Lance said that although the team lost to Cornell by only five points and lost to the University of Michigan by 25 points, SIUC still would not have placed in the top four positions because, overall, the team did win as many games as the teams who placed in the top four positions.

Caste said the University of Michigan won first place, second went to the University of Virginia, Princeton took home third place and Cornell placed fourth.

Lieber or SIUC officials decide to position the state Supreme Court, they only have 35 days to do so after the appellate court's decision is announced.

"If the court decides to hear the case, there is no way of telling when a decision can be reached," she said.

University officials said they would not comment while the lawsuit is pending.

Lewis gears up for Olympics' stretch run

Stronger, healthier Carl Lewis letting everyone know he will get to Atlanta Games

The Washington Post

ATLANTA—Although it's only April, two months from the U.S. Olympic track and field trials and three months away from the Olympic Games, Carl Lewis wants to make something clear. He plans to be in Atlanta, and for what he wants to do, he won't need any tickets.

"Carl's dead" is becoming like a good story because it's been said so many times," an extremely upset Lewis said the other day at the U.S. Olympic Committee's media summit. "By the time I get to June, I'll be running as fast as I ever run.

"It's becoming interesting, when you deal with all this throughout the years," he said. "Things do change. Perceptions do change. I was a big bloomer in high school and I'm a little bloomer now. I don't think about age; I just continue to do it and train hard.

"If Lewis makes the U.S. team in the two sprints, the long jump and the 4x100-meter relay (six spots are available), there will be few more appealing mileau-sagas at the Atlanta Games. Other than Johnson's potent gun for an unusual double-gold medalists in the 200 and 400 meters—Lewis will be the story. But this is nothing new. Lewis always demands—and receives—center stage, simply by showing up. Arguably the greatest track and field athlete ever, and certainly the medals, "said Dennis Mitchell, the man who handed Lewis the baton in the 1992 relay, once a momh. But since this event, there's been trouble admitting he had some mistakes in his career. Now, the admissions come easily.

"For me to say that I haven't made mistakes in life is ludicrous. Absolutely, I don't pretend to be."

Making a wager on televised betting

The Washington Post

LOUISVILLE—The most important racing news in this city isn't being made at Churchill Downs. It's happening in the living rooms of people such as Tony Powell.

When Finley tunes his television to Channel 57, he can see live races and wagering information, from all of the tracks that Churchill simulcasts. If he wants to place a bet, he inserts a plastic "smart card" into what looks like a second cable box by the TV; then he switches to Channel 56, where an on-screen menu lets him choose the races, amount and type of wager. He submits his selections with a remote control device and, instantly, the wager is transmitted to the Kentucky off-track betting system.

"It's great," Finley said. "It's like a big kid's video game." Finley always has been a low-key racing fan, but goes to the track about once a month. But since this experimental betting device has been in his home, he uses it at least once a week.

Most of the 300 subscribers in the first American trial of interactive wagering have responded enthusiastically and increased their normal levels of betting. The promoters of this system believe it can revolutionize and revive the sagging neighborhood racing industry. But others worry that the innovation would commoditize the sport's business by allowing regular customers to stay at home instead of going to the track.

Mark Broner, the brains behind the system, started trying to develop applications for interactive television while he was working for United Video, a far-reaching media company. United Video provides the "Pigskin" game that appears on most cable systems, and Broner designed an interactive system that allows a close-up look at the game and see a full description of it.

throughout the championship conference Auld said.

"What pleased me was when it got tough, they kept fighting," Auld said. "As a coach you can't ask for anything more than that."

Berksy and McNeil won all-conference awards.

Berksy was named all-conference at the No. 3 spot in singles.

"There is no one else who could have voted for," Auld said. "He beat everybody in the conference."

McNeil and Berksy were named all-conference at the No. 3 spot at doubles, hammering out 25 wins for the year.

McNeil said although they did not win the conference championship, winning all-conference was a positive end to her tennis collegiate career.

"Even though we placed 5th and I'm a senior it was a wonderful way to end my collegiate career," McNeil said. "This was a sweet reward, not only for me, but the whole StU women's tennis team. Because outsiders looking in would say "oh they placed 5th" instead of looking at the overall winning records. Samem Berksy achieved at No. 3 singles and our No. 3 doubles accomplishments."

The Lakers are feeling more at home on the road.

The Los Angeles Times

HOUSTON—Apart from the fact that most of the court looks like it was inside a paint factory that exploded, there are worst places for the Los Angeles Lakers to be than the Summit. Such as at a meeting of the referee's association. Or the Forum.

"Master of fact," Magic Johnson said, "sometimes I feel we play better on the road than we do at home. I don't know why that is."

Neither do many of the other Lakers, but they agree with the assessment. Maybe it has something to do with the fourth-best road record in the National Basketball Association at 23-18—behind only the Chicago Bulls, Seattle SuperSonics and San Antonio Spurs—or finishing better than .500 away from the Forum for the first time in five seasons, or even the section that their best victory of 1995-96 may have been as visitors, the 22-point rout at Orlando, Fla.

What makes it all the more impressive is that it's unlikely—this is basically the same team, the one that arrived here Sunday night and will practice Monday at the Summit in preparation for Game 3 against the Houston Rockets Tuesday, that the Magic Club wouldn't cover. Too many calls for roadside service.

Or don't you remember the Lakers of November and December? They lost the first four road games, then got a victory. OK, so it was at Sacramento, Calif., on a night the Kings scored their highest victory of 1995-96 may have been as visitors, the 22-point rout at Orlando, Fla.

When we went on that three-game trip East in January, that was the turnaround. They weren't great teams, but they were road wins and we got there in a row. It turned our minds-sets around. We thought we could do better, and we did."
SIUC looking to continue winning ways
3-game streak on line against Illinois

SIUC men's soccer club finished its spring season with a 5-2 record and a record of 11-6-4 for the year.

"We're going to look at it as just another two games we would like to win," said Don Callahan, Saluki baseball coach.

"The key was we really dug a hole and they (SIUC) came out full of fight," said Judy Auld, Women's tennis coach.
