Police release evidence

PYRAMID FIRES: Officials puzzled over judge's ruling.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

Photographs, diagrams and videotapes documenting the city's fatal 1992 Pyramid apartments fire, as well as clothing and canisters of gas collected at the site, will be viewed by attorneys representing those injured in the blaze.

Circuit Judge William Schwartz last week ruled that the city must release physical evidence, not just documentation, of the Dec. 6, 1992, fire at 504 S. Rawlings St. that killed five SIUC students.

The evidence can be used by the attorneys of the survivors and the families of those killed in the fire, who are suing the building's past and present owners and managers in a consolidated lawsuit. The evidence also can be used by the defense attorneys.

Police believe the fire was set deliberately, and the case remains under investigation, though no suspects have been named.

That is the reason Carbondale Police have been reluctant to show the attorneys the evidence, Police Chief Don Strom said. He said the suspect would know some of the information.

On Sept. 16, 1996, Schwartz ruled that the city must release records of the fire, confidentially, to the parties in the lawsuits.

The ruling came more than one year after the city filed a motion alleging the records' release could compromise the criminal investigation, and more than five months after the court decided it could not review the sizable amount of records.

City Attorney Paige Smith said that defense and plaintiff attorneys met on April 1 and reviewed the documents on the fire. Three days later, the city filed a motion for interpretation asking Schwartz to clarify whether the ruling was for the release of documents or of all evidence, including physical evidence.

"It wasn't clear to us whether he did intend on us providing that physical evidence," she

SIUC Student Worker of the Year Jeff Schelfaut, a senior in electrical engineering from Moline, shreds paper Tuesday while working as a receptionist in the Department of Curriculum and Instruction.

SIUC honors student for dedication

DON'T GO: Department doesn't want to see him graduate.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jeff Schelfaut traded working on flight carriers during Desert Storm for working as one of more than 6,500 student employees at SIUC, and because of his dedication he is Illinois' 1997 Student Worker of the Year.

Schelfaut is the second SIUC Student Worker of the Year to capture the state title.

And after today's regional contest sponsored by the Midwest Association of Student Employment Administrators, Schelfaut will find out if he is on his way to becoming the nation's top student worker.

But Schelfaut, a senior in electrical engineering technology from Moline and receptionist at the Department of Curriculum and Instruction, said he has done anything out of the ordinary.

"I try to figure out how I won these awards," he said, shaking his head. "All I $200 scholarship on April 11 as the campus' top student worker and a $75 check along with the state title.

Karen Smith, the curriculum and instruction office manager who nominated him for his first award, said Schelfaut did accomplish one rare feat.

"He's been with me almost ever since he came to campus from the Navy, and it's hard to find student workers who stay with you for their entire four years," she said.

"Somewhere along the line he stopped being a student worker, became a friend and then a son."

Schelfaut, who will begin work May 27 at McDonnell Douglas Corp., was the first student Smith ever has nominated for SIUC Student Worker of the Year.

Smith said Schelfaut formed a bond with about 50 professors and 90 staff members in the department. She said everyone will be misty-eyed when he

NECESSITY? Associate dean says SIUC has one of the lowest tuitions in the state.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A Graduate School committee believes increases in the cost of graduate tuition are necessary because graduate instructional costs are greater than undergraduate instructional costs, a Graduate School administrator says.

Jack McKillip, the associate dean of the Graduate School, said overall graduate education costs more because faculty spend more time with graduate students, and the need for technical support and research is greater.

He said SIUC currently has the lowest graduate tuition among most Illinois Universities.

He said the document, "Graduate School Tuition and Tuition Waivers," created by the SIUC Graduate School Tuition Waiver Committee, recommends ways in which SIUC can finance its graduate programs.

He said the Graduate Student Council and the Graduate Professional Student Council will consider the recommendations in their meetings this week.

"When you have very low tuition and much higher expenses, it becomes much more difficult to maintain the high quality of our graduate program," he said. "The idea behind this is we need more resources for graduate education and those who benefit from graduate education should pay more."

He said graduate tuition and undergraduate tuition currently are the same, and that one recommendation is to separate graduate tuition from undergraduate tuition so that graduate tuition can be increased.

The recommendations within the document state that graduate tuition should be increased gradually over the next five years until graduate tuition for a student taking 12 hours is 25 percent of the cost of instruction. Currently, the cost is 18 percent of graduate

Union elects new officers

AT THE POLLS: Current president James Sullivan wins; organizers pleased with voter turnout.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

One hundred and nine faculty union members turned out Tuesday afternoon to elect the executive council of the new SIUC Faculty Association.

Michael Dotson, a member of the faculty union election committee, was pleased with the turnout at the election.

"I thought it went a lot better than we were expecting," he said.

James Sullivan, current faculty union president, was re-elected after receiving 106 votes. Three faculty union members did not vote for the position.

Sullivan said there are almost 300 union members.

Bary Malik, a physics professor, was elected vice president after receiving 44 votes. Mary Lamb, an English professor, received 26 votes.

Beverly Stitt, an information management systems associate professor, received 64 votes and was elected as secretary/treasurer.

Each voting member also voted for four at-large representatives who will represent all faculty.

Simon announces he will join union

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Former Sen. Paul Simon expressed his support of faculty unions to about 50 members of the SIUC faculty union Tuesday afternoon.

"I'm going to become a member of your organization," Simon, also a political science and journalism professor, said. "I am a great believer in this type of activity."

Although Simon can become a union member, he cannot vote because he is the chairman of Paul Simon's Public Policy Institute, which makes him part of the administration.

Simon said adequate pay for teachers should not be the only goal of unions. He said the University should strive for higher standards and greater resources for higher education.

"The reality is, we need to do better," Simon said. "We need to reach out."

He said there is a need to invest in the future and make sacrifices. Simon said that if there is not change, the United States will fall behind other nations in education.

Simon's speech was the introduction to the faculty union general meeting.

The meeting included a report on the current status of contract negotiations and a discussion of faculty union goals by James Sullivan, the faculty union president.

The meeting concluded with the announcement of the faculty union election results.

Pourboghraat, an electrical engineering associate professor; Morteza Daneshdoost, an electrical engineering associate professor, and Eileen Trout-Erwin, a technical and resource management associate professor.

Voters also chose representatives from their respective colleges. These representatives will express the concerns of their college to the faculty union's executive board and the negotiating team as they negotiate a faculty contract.

The executive board guides the faculty union and develops policies for it.

Timothy Janikowski, an associate professor in the rehabilitation institute, was elected to represent the College of Education.

The College of Business and Administration election resulted in a tie between Richard Rivers, an associate professor in accountancy, and Reed Nelson, an associate professor in management,

CHICAGO

Veteran Tribune columnist Mike Royko, 64, dies

Mike Royko, the ornery chronicler of an often ornery town, died Tuesday at Northwestern Memorial Hospital of complications following a brain aneurysm. He was 64.

Royko had suffered a stroke in early April and last week underwent surgery for the aneurysm, a rupture or weakening of a blood vessel.

In nearly 34 years as a columnist at one or another of Chicago's daily newspapers, Royko represented in print the views of the lunch-bucket white ethnic, long after he'd moved his own family to the wealthy northern suburb of Winnetka. He managed to continue offending powerful politicians, police, feminists, gays, blacks and Latinos, to list just a few.

But the columnist was merely following a long Chicago tradition of journalistic like-it-or-not bluntness, from Finley Peter Dunne's column about the opinionated bartender, Mr. Dooley, to Nelson Algren's love/hate letter to his town, a book called "City on the Make."

Like them, Royko wrote words refracted through the lens of the guy just a bar stool away. Sometimes he gave the guy a name, Slat's Grobnik. Sometimes he played off an equally fictional psychiatrist, Dr. I.M. Kookie. Most often, though, he dispensed with the alter egos and simply presented himself.

In 1962, he began a weekly government column called "County Beat." In 1963, the Chicago Daily News gave him regular space for his own thoughts on whatever subject he chose.

In 1978, the paper folded.

Royko didn't have to move far for his next job, at the tabloid Sun-Times in the same building. But in 1984, when Rupert Murdoch bought the Sun-Times, he proclaimed that "no self-respecting fish" would be wrapped in something published by the new owner. He landed a few blocks away at the Chicago Tribune.

Women discuss leading cause of death

PREVENTION: Workshop aims to help African-Americans detect breast cancer early.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Remembering her family members who have died, LaVell Cox told a roomful of women how breast cancer affects lives and remains the No. 1 killer of African-American women.

Cox, president of the Carbondale Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc., said to meet the needs of the African-American community, the sorority sponsored a workshop on Sunday.

"Hopefully, women will adhere to breast cancer after they get the correct information," Cox said to about 24 people at the New Zion Missionary Baptist Church, 803 E. Barnes St. During the workshop, which was titled "Sister to Sister: African-American Dialogue on Breast Cancer Awareness," Cox said breast cancer is not talked about openly among most women because they do not know the facts.

The awareness campaign was designed to educate women of the facts and how to make informed decisions on breast cancer, as well as give insight to detect the illness before it becomes deadly. Cox wants each person to spread the word, especially to the younger women.

"Some women find out too late, and with this campaign they can catch it early," she said. "This will help them do things to make healthier lifestyles for themselves."

Cox said that beginning at age 20, women should perform routine breast self-examinations once a month, while lying down or taking a shower, to be aware of changes in shape, size and color of their breasts that may occur.

An American Cancer Society pamphlet advises that each year, a woman should have a clinical breast examination. Once a woman reaches 40, she should get a mammogram every two years. A mammogram is a special X-ray that can reveal small lumps in the breasts before they can be felt by touch.

With displays and pamphlets showing how to detect lumps in the breasts, guest speaker and breast cancer survivor Roxanne Davidson, said that if information such as this has been available to her and her family, cancer in the family may have been detected sooner. One of her family members was diagnosed, and another died from the illness, Davidson said it was because of lack of information.

"African Americans tend to keep it a secret when they need to share it with someone," Davidson said. "If I had known at the time what I know now, more of my family members could have gotten mammograms."

Davidson, a third-year graduate student in psychology, was diagnosed with the illness about seven years ago. She has been a member of the American Cancer Society for five years and wants to educate and motivate women to have breast exams on a regular

Writer predicts future of current Bulls team

I'm not from Chicago. I'm from the area of Illinois titled "South of Chicago," and I accept this because I realize that to the Chicago person, the State of Illinois is divided into two geo-political areas — Chicago Land and South of Chicago Land.

If you happen to be unfortunate enough to live north of Chicago Land, then you are from Michigan, and we assume that you are quite cold and angry.

During the majority of the year, I didn't think about Chicago much.

I know that it's still there, and I also naturally assume that the Cubs just lost a game, even if it's January.

But it's April, though, or possibly May, and that means one thing: The Cubs just lost a game.

No, that's not what I meant.

The NBA finals are finally here, and it's about time, eh?

In the weeks ahead, just like you and I, NBA teams across the nation will be taking their finals, sharpening their No. 2 pencils and drinking large amounts of coffee.

Again, I'm just fooling you.

The NBA finals are much different than our finals, mostly because they get paid large sums of money for taking their quizzes, regardless of their grades.

And they don't actually take tests — they play basketball games, which I suppose makes sense, because they seem to be fairly good at it.

During this time of year, at least in the last few seasons, the nation leans its collective body towards the heart of the country, and nearly everyone becomes a Bulls fan.

I know I do, and I'm not really that into sports.

To me, sports have always been a constant reminder that if I were born in a more archaic time, chances are I would never get the chance to reproduce.

No one would want to help me make children, mostly because I have the strength and agility of an ink pen.

In basketball, I shot at the wrong basket.

In baseball, I consistently tripped in the outfield, at times coming dangerously close to maiming the center fielder.

In football — well, we didn't have football (thank God).

The reason, however, that I find myself suddenly interested in the performance of Jordan and his boys is that somehow, because I'm from Illinois, I feel a sort of special link to their victory. I can say, "Yeah, I'm from Illinois, and that's my team. They're the best team that ever was or ever will be, and if you don't think the same way I do, I'll have some Chicago people beat you senseless."

This year is different, though.

It's special because it could very well be the last great run of the last great team of this century.

Jordan might not come back, and if he leaves, chances are Pippen will do the same.

And without those two, Rodman will probably go crazy or something, start wearing dresses and dying his hair ridiculously flamboyant colors.

And Toni Kukoc will probably just start crying like a child.

So, here is my prediction for this year: The Chicago Bulls will win every series and then beat some team in the finals, probably a team from the Western Division.

After this happens, Jordan will ascend to Heaven.

He won't get to bring all his Nike crap, but he will get to play golf with Moses and will become frustrated with Moses' infernal "parting of the water hazard" maneuver.

Coach Jackson will become a Zen monk and eventually write a book titled, "Seeing Red: I Think I Might Have Been the Greatest."

Pippen will retire and try to conquer Wilt Chamberlain's record — the one that has nothing to do with basketball and that the liar made up.

Rodman will probably go to hell, or at least Canada.

Kukoc will just start crying like a big baby, and Krause and Reinsdorf will get married and move to Joliet.

So, that's the way it goes. I could be wrong, but really, how often does that happen?

This is my last column, you lucky stiffs.

I've enjoyed being the Wednesday columnist, and I want to thank you all for not threatening my life.

And for all of those interested, Mojo the Cat is alive and well, and fortunately has finally kicked her pickle eating habit.

She now has developed a new vice, which mostly has to do with scratching the hell out of my roommates.

Our Word

High achievers

African-American sports heroes taught society valuable lessons

BASEBALL HERO JACKIE ROBINSON, SIUC basketball player Harvey Welch and golf pro Tiger Woods have broken the racial barrier and shown the world that anything can be achieved with hard work.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of Robinson's emergence into Major League Baseball and Welch's 46th anniversary as the first African-American SIUC basketball player, and earlier this month, Woods won the Master's golf tournament. These three men reached new glories for their sports and taught the rest of us the way to perceive race.

BECAUSE OF ROBINSON'S COURAGE IN penetrating the racial discrimination in the major league, African Americans no longer are considered novelties on the baseball field.

Fifty years ago, what startled people the most about Robinson's emergence into the league was that America's favorite game finally started to look like true America. Many ignorant people in this country were not ready to accept that African Americans were a part of America's past, present and future.

FROM HIS EARLY DAYS IN EBBET FIELD TO the Baseball Hall of Fame, Robinson has been an icon of hard work and determination. During his first season in the major leagues, he batted .297, led the National League with 29 stolen bases and hit 12 home runs. He also was the league's Rookie of the Year in 1947, and he won the batting title in his 1949 Most Valuable Player seasons by hitting .329. He overcame racial discrimination — both on and off the field — and became one of the best baseball players of his time.

ON THIS CAMPUS IN 1951, HARVEY WELCH, current vice chancellor of Student Affairs, became the first African American to be suited up on the SIUC basketball team. On the court, Welch was an equal. Welch, like Robinson and Woods, opened many doors for students of all races. His determination and commitment to the team earned him a place in SIUC basketball history and on this campus. He also was the first African American to complete the Air Force ROTC program on this campus. His achievements on and off the court — including numerous scholarships and basketball awards — made him a shining example of a student athlete. Even today, Welch is helping students achieve their goals.

WOODS IS THE MODERN-DAY ROBINSON. Because of Woods, professional golf is open to all races, not just elitist white men. Earlier this month, the 21-year-old Woods won the Master's golf tournament — one of the most prestigious competitions in the sport. What people witnessed with Robinson in the late 1940s, we have experienced today with Woods: the ability and opportunity to look past race.

In the past, many young African Americans have been intimidated by golf because of its label as a sport for only the wealthy. This financial factor, combined with social and discriminatory factors, has caused golf to be dominated by white men or women in the past, but not any more.

AMERICANS SHOULD BE PROUD OF THESE men and others who have overcome obstacles and discrimination to create new standards of excellence. We should take a lesson from these three men and other African Americans who have shown the rest of the world that with a little opportunity and a lot of hard work, even the biggest dreams can be achieved.

Late-night library options a possibility in the future

Dear Editor:

When one strips away her many light-hearted sneers at the Library, what is left in Emily Priddy's April 28 column, "Saturday night fever: Library needs later hours."

It happens that we agree with her.

Paradoxically, though, the remedy she proposes, "a crew of underpaid student workers," is not one we can afford. That is, we can't afford it if we intend to staff all the desks we do now when the library is open (92 hours per week most of the term and 106 during finals and the week before). But there may be another way.

An affordable compromise would be to create a 24-hour study area on the first floor. With such a facility, staffed by just a few student workers, we could close all but the first floor at times we now close the whole building.

Most of the library's electronic resources are available on computers along with the Reserve/Self Instruction Center, microfilm reader/printers and photocopiers. So long as they collected them before the floors closed, users could take reference books (which don't circulate), periodicals or other materials to the study area to read at their leisure after hours.

To accomplish this, extensive remodeling will be required, primarily the construction of restrooms on the first floor. This proposal has the support of the library Affairs Advisory Committee, and the funding is being discussed with the University administration.

There are other important issues, too, of course, such as the security of readers and library staff traveling to and from the library late at night, but we are confident of resolving them all once the necessary remodeling has occurred.

Then the library will be able to offer an alternative for that small but worthy band of scholars whose thirsts on Saturday nights run regularly to learning.

Gays want to be themselves

Dear Editor:

Mary Jo Wasson's comments in last Friday's paper about your editorial "Our Word titled "Discrimination" are ludicrous.

It is quite apparent she is completely misunderstanding the purpose the discrimination bill serves.

It's not to create a situation in which the employer must choose a homosexual over someone else. An employer when interviewing should not inquire about such personal matters. Hiring should be strictly based on qualifications, attitude, and personality.

The bill is a protective measure to help ensure that a person's job is not lost due to his or her homosexuality.

Race and gender are easily noticeable, and can be discriminated upon immediately.

Homosexuality cannot necessarily be determined by appearance, therefore leaving discrimination to take place later when it is revealed.

Some time after their hiring, homosexuals may feel comfortable enough to share their lives with co-workers.

If they are lucky, it won't bother their co-workers. Other times someone in charge is informed, and sometimes the homosexual ends up losing his or her job.

These are the people that this bill is to protect: the ones who wish to openly share their life experiences with their co-workers. Those who wish to put a picture of their significant other on their desk without fear of repercussions.

This law would not favor individuals, but protect them as laws should do.

By passing this law, it acknowledges homosexuals as part of our society who are also deserving of certain unalienable rights.

Once homosexuals feel of equal status as the rest of the citizens of this country, they will begin to come out from hiding.

If statistics are correct and one out of 10 people are homosexual, then in a society of 300 million, there would be about 30 million of them.

Respect would quickly grow once people realized how many homosexuals are actually out there. As for animosity, it will only come from those who are caught breaking this law.

Mary, you asked in your article, "What is it they (homosexuals) want to do they cannot do right now?"

The answer to that is obvious. They want to be themselves.

Early childhood professionals provide indispensable service

Dear Editor:

When you think about the work of an early childhood professional such as an elementary or preschool teacher, what comes to your mind?

Many see glorified baby sitters who are paid to play with children all day and keep them busy until their mother or their father gets home from work.

What about at-home moms or home day care providers?

Many see their work and think, "They're only doing what every mom has to do anyway — what's so special about that?"

They, too, are seen as overpaid baby sitters who care for their children like they're supposed to and perhaps care for the neighborhood children as well while eating bon bons and watching soap operas all day.

Despite what the majority of people think about early childhood professionals, they really do work a lot harder than you can imagine.

This is a profession, and whether these people choose to stay at home and care for their own children or expand their services and care for a number of children outside of the home, this job is just as important as the job of a doctor, a judge or a politician.

How can any professional look down upon the work of early childhood professionals when in fact their success depends upon it?

Yes, that's right — no doctors can become very successful if they have to bring their 2-year-old into surgery with them.

These are educated women (or in some cases, men) who choose to use their knowledge to guide the lives of young children.

Some of these people work from sunup to sundown and don't get paid nearly as much as they deserve.

Nor do they get the respect or the credit that they deserve.

Between the ages of 1 and 6, children are struggling more than ever to adapt to the world around them, and unfortunately, there are a lot of mothers out there — who shouldn't even be mothers — who are incapable of guiding these children properly.

Isn't it refreshing to know that there are trained professionals out there who are willing to care for these children and teach them the skills that they need to become successful adults?

Early childhood professionals make a big difference in the lives of our children, and a lot of people can't afford to pay them as much as they are really worth.

However, we can reward them even by respecting them and even thanking them once in a while.

I'm sure that knowing that their work is not being taken for granted is a reward in itself.

That motion led to Schwartz's April 23 ruling that physical evidence also must be released to the attorneys.

"The parties have repeatedly and continually been thwarted in their efforts to secure the information which is in the possession of the City of Carbondale, Illinois, by the organized and concerted efforts of various employees and agents of the City of Carbondale, Illinois," the rule states.

Strom said good investigators try to keep their information private.

"The city has never tried to get around anything or in any way be deceptive with anybody," he said.

"Our goal always has been to protect the most confidential information we have in this case."

Strom said the court order makes some effort to protect the evidence, because it stipulates that one attorney from each firm can examine the evidence, but it cannot be copied or discussed with the public or other attorneys.

"The highest degree of protection would be not to release it to anybody," Strom said. "It's kind of been our position from the start. We've felt it's important to protect that information. At the same time, we've agreed to comply with the order of the court."

Smith said the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Carbondale Police Department have been jointly investigating the fire since the night it happened.

The five students who died in the fire were Kimioko Ajioka, 25, of Japan; Mazlina Abdul Wahid, 28, of Malaysia; Cheng Teck Wong, 23, of Malaysia; Ronald L. Moy, 23, of Chicago; and Lai Hung Tam, 23, of Hong Kong.

The defendants are Bonnie Owen Realty Inc., Sun King Realty, Arthur Realty Corp., The Pyramids and Egyptian of Carbondale Inc., Herman Horowitz and Israel Jakobovich.

The plaintiffs in the consolidated case are five survivors: Gergana Zlaveta, Simona Dimitrova, Sylvia Camacho, Ahmet Singh and Chanin Heid Birkhahn, and also Masako Toyota Shin, the administrator of the estate of fire victim Kimiko Ajioka.

Marion attorney Robert Howerton said the five original civil cases have been consolidated.

"We who are representing the injured people are going to file an amended complaint, and I believe will allege negligence," said Howerton, who, along with Marion attorney G. Patrick Murphy, represent Masako Toyota Shin and Sylvia Camacho.

and Simona Dimitrova, both have appointments to view the evidence early next month.

Both said they need to see the material before they know how useful it will be.

"We have a pretty good idea of what we're looking for or not looking for in the police evidence, records and files," Alleman said. "The answers to things that are important are the things that are there and the things that are not there."

Smith said the disclosure should allow the case to proceed.

"Hopefully, attorneys for the plaintiffs and defendants in the civil case will get enough information," she said.

Smith and Strom both said an order to release evidence in an ongoing criminal investigation is unusual.

"I've never seen anything like this happen before," Strom said. "I don't mean that as a slam against anybody."

"I think our responsibility as good investigators is to try and protect the information we think is most crucial to our investigation."

TUITION

The cost for educating an average SIUC graduate student enrolled in at least 12 credit hours for the 1997-1998 academic year is $11,822. However graduate tuition is only $2,160.

The recommendations come after an Illinois Board of Higher Education mandate that all state universities review their graduate programs, evaluate programs and form a plan for financing graduate education.

A report must be submitted to the IBHE in August.

The report further recommends that students with a half-time graduate assistantship receive tuition waivers for 15 credit hours, and quarter-time receive waiver for nine credit hours.

Although some members of the GPSC agree that graduate tuition should be higher, some of them are concerned about the total cost of graduate education.

"We understand that increases have to occur because of the inflation rate and because graduate education is more expensive," Paul LeBlanc, GPSC vice president of Graduate School affairs, said. "What we are concerned about is total cost."

Ed Ford, a GPSC member who served on the graduate tuition task force, said increasing fees often are imposed upon graduate students.

He cited the proposed athletic-fee increase as a fee that does not benefit graduate students.

The annual athletic fee for full-time students could rise from the 1997 rate of $106 to $196 by 2002 if approved by the SIU Board of Trustees in June.

The GPSC will vote Wednesday on whether to support the fee increase. In addition, the GPSC will vote on a resolution to support the document accompanied by a recommended change that the University explore a user-based fee system.

GPSC also recommends not to increase graduate tuition until out-of-state graduate tuition is lowered to two times the level of in-state tuition rather than three times than in-state tuition.

The College of Engineering representative is James Graddock who received four votes. He takes the position because Daneshdoost, who received 10 votes, and Pouboghraht who also received four votes, were elected as at-large representatives.

The Mass Communication and Media Arts representative is K.S. Sitaram, a radio and television professor.

The College of Liberal Arts representative is Thomas Alexander, a philosophy professor, who received 28 votes.

The representative for the College of Agriculture is Jeff Beaulieu, an associate professor in agrusiness economics.

The College of Applied Science and Arts representative is Les Sheets, an associate information management technology professor.

Sullivan said he was satisfied with the results of the election.

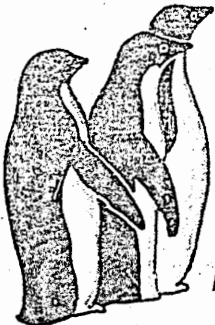

"I am extremely pleased by the people who were chosen to be the executive board and representative council," Sullivan said. "They are highly dedicated and committed, who bring diversity and experience to their positions."

Law students to get extra funds for tuition

RELIEF: Provost allows money from a previous loan to pay for students.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC law students with graduate assistantships will be receiving more money in compensation for losing their tuition waivers in the fall, a University official says.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said some second-year law students thought they would be receiving another year of their tuition being waived.

"I talked to law students and I decided to contribute money to give the students an extra $2,000 so they will be receiving $3,000," he said.

Jackson said that under Benjamin Shepherd, former vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, $250,000 was lent to the Law School last year for unexpected expenses.

"This year the loan was due back," he said. "So the Law School was allowed to keep $50,000 to give the students more money."

The Law School will end tuition waivers on July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, as part of the decentralized budget. The Law School's decentralized budget will allow the school to keep and budget its own tuition dollars. Currently, the University collects the Law School's tuition dollars and returns a portion of it for the budget each year.

Law students who received half a tuition waiver will receive $500 and law students with a full waiver will receive $1,000 in the fall unless they have a graduate assistantship.

Now, the 31 students with graduate assistantships out of 90 students who receive tuition waivers will receive $3,000 instead of $1,000. The tuition waivers cost the Law School $388,890 a year.

Law School students received tuition waivers along with a stipend, which had them receiving more than $30 an hour. A monthly stipend automatically comes with tuition waivers and varies in amount.

Thomas Guernsey, dean of the SIUC School of Law, said Jackson contacted him because second-year Law School students were complaining to him because they thought they had a guarantee that they would have their assistantships for one more year.

However, Peter Sanchez, a first-year law student from New York, said it is not right that first-year students are not receiving the $3,000 as are the second-year students.

"It is not fair because if they cut the money they need to cut it to everyone," he said. "They should have notified us at least a year before."

However, Sanchez said he will not feel any immediate financial strain because of his tuition waiver being taken away while attending the Law School.

"I have student loans so I will not feel the strain until after I graduate," he said.

Guernsey said law students also will be receiving an hourly wage of $7.50 for first-year students and $8.50 per hour for second-year students. Units outside the Law School, such as University Legal Council, will be able to hire students and pay them the wage or the stipend. The Law School looked at the American Bar Association average wage of $7.50 an hour to establish the wages.

Dale Aschemann, a second-year law student from Quincy, said Guernsey made an equitable decision about the Law School.

"Dean Guernsey did as much as he could," he said. "With the nature of the proposal, some classes would have to take the blunt of it."

Aschemann said second-year students should receive the $3,000 instead of the $1,000.

"Dean Guernsey recognized certain expectations that the second-year students thought they would be receiving tuition waivers for another year," he said.

But Aschemann said he is not sure if he supports the new decentralized budget.

"I am not certain if I support the substance of the proposal of budgeting and management," he said. "I am not sure if it is a correct plan substantially. This is never going to pass campuswide because we are not a good representative of the Graduate School."

Jackson said the SIUC Law School waived more tuition than other law schools.

"We were basically waiving tuition left and right," he said. "I also agree that the Law School students should be making what other law school students do."

graduates in two weeks because of all of his dedication and hard work.

"No one else was able to do the things he did for us," she said.

"He repaired software equipment, fixed office machines — we've had virtually no downtime since he's been here.

"And none of those other things were a part of his job."

"I can hardly remember a time when he didn't show up for work. He's missed few days in four years.

"We're all dreading his graduation because he's been a fixture here for so long."

However, Smith jokingly said she has a solution to that problem.

"We've decided to clone him," she said.

"We've hired his younger brother."

Schelfaut said he anxiously is awaiting the results of today's regional competition, even if he still believes he has not done anything special.

But he always will consider the work he did as a receptionist to be just as serious as the work he did as an F-14 electrician in the U.S. Navy.

"I take my work seriously, and I get paid for it," he said.

"It may not be as important as the things I did while I was in the Navy, but I still respect it as a job. Besides, it gave me enough money for living expenses and several pizzas."

CANCER

basin.

"You are looking at a breast cancer survivor, a victor of breast cancer," Davidson said.

"Every woman is at a risk for breast cancer."

Women at a higher risk for breast cancer are women with a family history of breast cancer, who have no children, who have had children after the age of 30 or who began their first menstrual cycle early or late.

Davidson said the risk of breast cancer is so high that out of the 24 women at Sunday's program, at least three will be or have been diagnosed with breast cancer.

She said African-American women are more likely to die from the illness because of failure to seek medical treatment, which is sometimes because of the cost, denial and pain.

"It's our bodies, ladies," Davidson said. "If you want that comfort, you need to pay the extra money for it."

Wynema Pete, a second-year graduate student in education from Chicago, said she is grateful for the Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta and Davidson for providing valuable information to her.

"I didn't know that heredity played a part in breast cancer and that self exams should start at the age of 20," Pete said. "I commend Roxanne because a lot of people wouldn't be concerned with informing; they'll just be happy to be a survivor."

Pete said she can walk away knowing what to do about mammograms and will inform others.

"I didn't actually know what a mammogram was," Pete said. "But now I do, and I will tell my mom and all my friends about mammograms and self exams."

Women were given information bags filled with pamphlets and self-examination demonstrations at the end of the campaign.

Included in the bags were Mother's Day cards to give out reminding women to get mammograms.

Each woman received a certificate for the completeness of the program stating that she knows all the facts and is qualified to inform others about the illness.

Cox said it is important for every woman who attended the program to tell others and make use of the information given to detect breast cancer early.

"Early detection is the key," Cox said. "Once I learned about it, I needed to tell someone else. Each one, tell one."

TA training under scrutiny by GPSC

SOLUTIONS: GPSC is working with Graduate School to fix problems.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The graduate assistant training program should ensure that graduate assistants are properly trained to teach and that students understand them, a student leader says.

Paul LeBlanc, Graduate and Professional Student Council vice president of Graduate School Affairs, said GPSC is working with the Graduate School to identify problems with graduate assistant training and finding solutions.

LeBlanc says students often complain that they do not understand graduate or teacher assistants who do not speak English natively.

"There have been several complaints about the inability of students to understand non-native, English-speaking TAs," LeBlanc said.

LeBlanc said if students cannot understand their instructors, the University is not properly serving the students.

"Part of the mission of this University is to offer quality education to students whether they are graduate or undergraduate students," he said.

John McKillip, Graduate School

associate dean, said English proficiency of assistants is monitored through periodic evaluations and an English proficiency test.

"If a person is going to be standing in front of a classroom teaching, that person has to have satisfied the English proficiency requirement," McKillip said.

McKillip said there is some variance in the degree of proficiency a teaching assistant or graduate assistant must have.

"There is a lower threshold of proficiency for someone helping in a lab experiment than someone lecturing, for example," he said.

LeBlanc and McKillip said students with graduate assistantships do not always attend a required workshop that begins the week before the fall semester.

McKillip said one way of enforcing attendance at graduate assistant training is to inform assistants that the workshop is mandatory.

"We are setting up a system to monitor who's attending training," McKillip said.

"When an assistantship goes through, we will make sure we attach a note to the contract, which will state that attendance at the training session is required."

McKillip said no penalties have been defined for those who do not attend the workshop.

"I don't know what will happen if people don't attend, because I think they will attend," he said.

McKillip said alternative training sessions might be necessary for students who could not attend the regular training sessions, which begin Aug. 18.

The Graduate School will have two sessions during the week of Aug. 18 to accommodate all assistants who need training, McKillip said.

LeBlanc said another flaw with the graduate assistantships is that some students who can speak English fluently are denied assistantships.

LeBlanc said although Graduate School requires that international candidates for assistantships have taken and passed an English proficiency test, some international graduate students are not told about the proficiency test, do not take it and are subsequently denied for assistantships.

The Graduate School catalog mentions the requirement, he said, but not all international students who are accepted to the Graduate School have a copy of the catalog. LeBlanc said students applying for a graduate assistantship should be made aware of the English proficiency requirement.

He said the requirement should be placed on the Graduate School application packet.

"Unless there is a public record of what the policy is, some students are being discriminated," he said. "It's a sin of omission."

McKillip said teachers of the year also will improve the training sessions.

"Last year, for the first time I know of, we had each department's teacher of the year work with assistants," he said.

"We will do that again this summer, because we think it benefits the assistants."

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost John Jackson said each department in the University is required to provide training for graduate and teacher assistants.

"Some departments are doing that," he said. "Some are doing a great job of training, some meet the bare minimum, and some are ignoring it."

Jackson said he will support improvements in the training program.

"If it takes some clout from my office, then I will do what is necessary," he said.

Jackson said meetings to discuss improvements in the graduate assistant training program will continue.

LeBlanc said he hopes changes in the program will be forthcoming and will improve the quality of graduate and teacher assistants.

"After receiving the training, I would want to be able to say, 'I was trained how to teach.'"

Judge tries to duck ticket, faces impeachment

CAUGHT: Illinois Chief Justice tries to use position to get out of speeding ticket.

WASHINGTON POST

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Early on a cold January morning more than a year ago, a police officer in Pekin, Ill., stopped a pickup truck he had clocked at 43 mph in a 30 mph zone. According to the police account, the driver briefly stopped, then resumed driving to his home a few blocks away.

Confronted in his driveway by several officers, the police say, the motorist tried to use his position in state government to escape a traffic ticket. He was eventually handcuffed and charged with speeding, failing to yield to police and resisting arrest.

What seemed to be a fairly routine traffic altercation set off a chain of events that led Tuesday to an extraordinary gathering in the ornate state Capitol here. A special 10-member committee of the Illinois House held its first meeting to investigate whether the driver, James D. Heiple, should be removed as chief justice of the Illinois Supreme Court. Only two Illinois judges, the last in the 1840s, have been impeached by the House, but neither was removed from office by the necessary two-thirds Senate vote.

The rare nature of the proceeding was underscored by the committee's attempt to sort out what constitutes an impeachable offense. The modern Illinois Constitution, adopted in 1970, does not define impeachable offenses.

For more than an hour, with a retired federal judge and a former Illinois governor gently sparring over ground rules, the committee heard testimony from an array of legal experts. The one common theme they struck was that judges cannot be impeached because of controversial rulings or because they are unpopular.

"Being unpopular goes with the territory of being a judge," said Donald Hubert, president of the Chicago Bar Association.

Heiple was fined $200 after pleading guilty to two petty offenses in exchange for dropping of the resisting arrest charge in Pekin.

At a hearing this month, the courts commission refused to take any testimony after Heiple said he did not contest the facts of the traffic incidents.

Egyptian Directory from the Daily Egyptian

The Internet is about traffic. Our site receives 100,000+ hits a month and growing. Property managers in our online housing guide are having great success. People are "surfing the net" for information before buying. Get listed in the Egyptian Directory to let people know where you are--maybe even before they come to town.

Egyptian Directory is a searchable directory service that directs customers to your "real world" address, telephone number or existing web address. It is like the printed Yellow Pages, but with some notable advantages that add to your listing:

- ★ With a line ad, customers can search for your specific business offerings.
★ Product listings, menus, and delivery polices can be listed and searched ★ List special events like movies, bands, exhibits, shows, sermons, plays...
★ Purchase the account manager package and manage your own business listing as often as you choose!

We made it real cheap--so it's a no-brainer

For some businesses the "line" description may be enough; others may require more. Expanded web pages with longer descriptions, graphics, logos, photos and virtual reality movies are available for an additional charge. Management accounts are also available so YOU can manage the information directly.

Check under "New Stuff" at www.dailyegyptian.com for ideas for your business, or call Jeff at 536-3311 ext 261 to get your business on the Internet immediately.

TITLE IX

male- to 42-percent-female institution.

But the Athletic Department is 65 percent male to 35 percent female. SIUC must be within a 5 percent discrepancy to comply with the first part of the test.

The second part of the test is whether SIUC is underrepresented in a sport, and if so it continually must be adding more programs to meet the interests of the University.

SIUC does not meet this test either because the University has been cutting men's programs as a means to reach proportionality, which some SIUC men's coaches wonder if it is necessary.

"I am pretty vocal about this situation," men's track and field coach Bill Cornell said. "I am totally for equality in athletics. But I am for equality within the sport."

"Somewhere in the back of my mind, and I have been coaching 31 years, when they first came in they said there should be equality for the women but not at the expense of the men."

But Cornell knows that has not been the case.

"Of course it's impossible to do that," Cornell said. "When Title IX really started to be enforced, the only way for the university presidents and athletic directors could handle the situation was to take from the men to give to the women because there wasn't the extra dollars available."

The final part of the three-part test is whether one sex is underrepresented among athletes, whether the University has been expanding programs, and if the needs of the athletes have been fully and actively accommodated by the present program.

The committee does not have the correct data to be sure if the department meets this requirement. To obtain the data the committee would have to conduct an extensive survey, but members have not scheduled to do so.

SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart said Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West's involvement on the NCAA and National Gender Equity Committees has given SIUC an added push toward compliance.

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to see if one of our own is on the Gender Equity Committee, then it's logical that we had better be in compliance," Hart said. "I do not know that we are not in compliance, or we are so close in compliance it would pass muster."

The material from the Gender Equity Committee is given to the Athletic Department, which submits it for the Equity Disclosure Act, a federal mandate SIUC must follow to show its progression on Title IX.

The administration is addressing the areas of non-compliance to the committee and used the recommendations that the committee has given them to work toward an equitable program.

Bandy said even though the University is making progress toward compliance, it hasn't always been easy.

"If you don't have the administration willing to input the recommendations, it can be problematic," Bandy said. "The emphasis by the NCAA has helped a great deal."

"They know they are coming one year from November, so they better address the problems. If we don't, we will be required to have a plan with a specific intended result."

One area of Title IX compliance the Gender Equity Committee has addressed is the lack of locker rooms or bathrooms at women's softball diamonds, which falls under part three of the law: benefits and opportunities.

The men's baseball team used $18,000 of student fees to build a clubhouse at Abe Martin field, Bandy said. So, the Athletic Department must build one at IAW fields to meet gender equity requirements.

The Athletic Department has plans to build a softball clubhouse when money from bonds being sold under the Saluki Futures campaign will raise $2.3 million for the clubhouse and other facility improvements.

This is just one of the areas where the University does not meet Title IX compliance, and the Gender Equity Committee is helping them to do so.

The Athletic Department also is working toward equality in lodging, meals and travel.

"There is overwhelming discrimination throughout the country, and it continues," Bandy said. "I see minor sports struggling to raise the money for fundamentals of their program. If your budget doesn't increase with inflation, you don't know how you can stay competitive."

"I admire those coaches because they make the dollar work for them."

Tomorrow's story will examine part three of Title IX which requires equal opportunities for athletes to participate.

DRAFT DODGING:

Salukis sign a good crop of players, but could lose them to the draft.

MICHAEL DE FORD
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan is unsure if he will be able to hang on to every member of this year's recruiting class.

Callahan signed three more players Tuesday to national-letters-of-intent, increasing this year's class to seven signees. Of the seven signed, Callahan said several are possible draft selections this season.

"This is a very good recruiting class," Callahan said. "But we could go from having a strong recruiting class to trying to reload over the course of one or two weeks in early-to mid-June because of the draft."

On Tuesday, Callahan signed Jason Mallory, a 6-foot-6-inch, 175-pound, right-handed pitcher out of Country Club Hills; Michael Meyers, a 5-foot-2-inch 210-pound right-hander out of Blackhawk Junior College in Titusville, Ontario, Canada; and 5-foot-10-inch 165-pound shortstop Jon Winter out of Triton Junior College in Wausau, Wis.

Callahan said Mallory came highly recommended from four Major League scouts, while Meyers has been a draft selection twice already.

SIUC's newest members join previous signees Daniel Adams (1B Reidland High School, Paducah, Ky.), Jake Allen (C, Southeastern Illinois Community College), Adam Biggs (RHP, Rend Lake College), and Brad Heuring (RHP, John A. Logan College), who all signed national-letters-of-intent in the fall.

It's possible Heuring will be selected in June's draft.

"If we hold onto them great. If we don't and they end up signing professionally, then maybe that means we are recruiting some strong ballplayers," Callahan said.

Mallory is 2-1 with a 2.87 ERA at Rich Central High School. He has struck out 28 batters while walking eight in 18 innings.

"Jason is one of the few kids we have signed sight unseen," Callahan said. "He comes highly recommended from four Major League scouts we know and trust."

Callahan said Mallory, whose father, Sheldon, was an outfielder for the Oakland A's in the late 1970s, is projected to throw in the low- to mid-90s, but may not be ready for the pros just yet.

"As much as the Major League scouts like Mallory, most don't think he's ready to go out and play professional baseball," Callahan said.

Mallory visited only SIUC, canceling recruiting trips to the University of Tennessee and Texas A & M University.

Meyers, who has been selected in the Major League draft twice, is 3-2 with a minuscule 0.41 ERA. Meyers has struck out 62 batters and walked only 13 in 44 innings of work. The right-hander only has allowed 28 hits this season.

"We actually went up to Blackhawk to see another pitcher, but came away liking this athlete even more," Callahan said. "He will be a great addition to the pitching staff."

"A guy like him is pretty marketable, and I think pro scouts are looking at him."

Meyers also was recruited by Tennessee and Texas Christian University, whose pitching staff is coached by Major League Hall of Fame inductee Nolan Ryan.

"Mike is someone I really liked as a freshman, and we just stayed on him over the course of a year. We thought we were going to sign him in the fall, but a week before the early signing period TCU called him, so there was a strong lure there. He decided to wait and as it turned out, we kind of persevered and ended up signing him."

Callahan said Winter is expected to give the Salukis more versatility in the infield, especially if sophomore shortstop Jerry Hairston decides to enter the Major League Draft.

Winter, who selected SIUC over the University of Minnesota and Nebraska University, is batting .400 and helped lead Triton to a JC World Series appearance last season, earning all-conference honors at second base.

"Since Jerry Hairston is eligible for the Major League Draft after this season, we wanted to make certain we had a quality shortstop coming in," Callahan said.

"When it comes down to the draft, we are going to have to hold our

BIG CENTER: SIUC brings in second basketball recruit of week.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Saluki men's basketball team signed its second recruit within one week when Hiwassee Junior College forward Derrick Tilmon signed a national letter of intent Tuesday.

Tilmon, a 6-foot-7-inch, 227-pound forward/center, scored 13.2 points and grabbed 10 rebounds per game for Hiwassee, located in Madisonville, Tenn.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said Tilmon's inside play will help improve the program.

"Derrick is a very versatile player with great rebounding skills," Herrin stated in a press release.

"He's a good person, who likes to play the game, and there's no question about it, his presence will make us a good team."

After playing his high school ball in Clarksville, Miss., Tilmon led the Tigers to a 30-2 record as freshman this season. Hiwassee finished one win short of qualifying for the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan. Tilmon made 64 percent of his field goal attempts and 72 percent of his free-throw attempts while being named to the All-Conference First Team in the Tennessee JC Athletic Association Eastern Division.

Tilmon joins Okaville's Abel Schrader as the team's recruits this spring. Carbondale's Josh Cross announced his intentions to play at SIUC last fall.

Tilmon's signing also brings the total number of new Salukis for the 1997-98 season to five. West Frankfort's Lance Brown red-shirted last season after transferring from John A. Logan Junior College, while O'Fallon's Chris Trunell sat out last season after transferring from Florida International University.

SOFTBALL

Brechtelsbauer said. "Considering the caliber of teams we have played, I have been very impressed with her consistency."

Schutteck had a standout week for the Salukis. The senior pitcher/designated player for SIUC went 4-0 last week with a 1.40 ERA and one save to lead SIUC to a 5-1 record, including two wins over No. 7 University of Missouri in 25 innings.

At the plate, Schutteck went 10-for-19 for a .526 batting average while driving in eight runs. Schutteck also knocked two doubles and scored three runs.

For the year, Schutteck is having one of the strongest all-around seasons in Saluki history. The Herrin native is 24-1 on the mound with a 0.71 ERA and has won her last 13 starts. She is batting .358 with seven home runs and 38 RBIs, and she has 15 single-game, season and career school records on the mound and at the plate.

"She's got the whole package together, and she's doing it all," Brechtelsbauer said. "She's been one of the biggest differences for us this season."

Schutteck's success also has had a big impact on SIUC this season. The Salukis are 35-14 overall and 10-4 in the Missouri Valley Conference. SIUC is ranked No. 27 in the nation in the NFCA/USA Today poll this week.

SCHUTTECK

team.

"I think not only for me, but for the team, we're going in the right direction," she said. "After I'm gone, someone else will break them."

"Everything I have worked for the last 15 years, this is where it's gotten me. I would not change any of it."

Schutteck has had a good career at SIUC, but senior third baseman

Becky Lis says the times weren't always good.

"No one likes to lose," Lis said. "When we struggled with other pitchers because they weren't getting the job done, Jamie would be throwing every game."

"She was sore but she wouldn't say anything. She'd go in and throw strikes."

Brechtelsbauer realizes Schutteck's career has been exactly that — a career.

"Showing performance overtime, that is what career records are about," Brechtelsbauer said. "Jamie has had a career."

Lis agrees Schutteck has had a career as a pitcher.

"When Jamie is on, she is untouchable," Lis said. "She doesn't care if they are No. 1 in the nation or a losing team. She is never intimidated."

Yet the biggest highlight in Schutteck's career at SIUC is yet to become a reality.

"I would be hoping the biggest highlight is yet to come," she said. "(My dream) is to get to the NCAA tournament, and this team is capable."

SOFTBALL STANDOUT:

Schutteck breaks new ground at SIUC in pitching, hitting and general excellence.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The spirit of former SIUC softball pitching coach Gary Buckles is with senior hurler Jamie Schutteck every time she heads to the mound.

"I always had the talent," Schutteck said. "When I got here my freshman year, (Buckles) kept telling me I was the best. He was always in my head presenting the mental aspect. Every time I am on the mound I am saying, 'Help me out, Gary.'"

Schutteck was named the SIUC Female Athlete of the Year April 20, which was an honor she found bittersweet. Buckles died in 1996.

"Gary Buckles gave me most of what it took to get me to this point," she said. "I would have wanted him to be here for it."

"My dad gave me the tools, the ability and the talent. And Gary polished it up."

When Schutteck began her career at SIUC in 1993, she did more hitting than pitching. But what mattered was she was on the field.

"Basically my whole life I only wanted to play softball," she said. "I did what I needed to do to play."

When Schutteck finally got the chance to play, she began breaking record after record.

The Herrin native currently holds 15 SIUC softball records for her pitching and hitting. She set her first record her freshman year when she hit .439, earning her the record for highest average in a season.

SALUKI OF THE YEAR: Saluki softball standout Jamie Schutteck, a senior from Herrin, was named NCAA Division I Player of the Week. Schutteck batted .526 (10 for 19) with eight RBIs and two doubles this week.

Since then, the hurler has earned such single season records as most wins (24), most strikeouts (126), most appearances (36), most shutouts (eight) and most saves (five).

Schutteck also has slugged herself to such career records as most RBIs (126) and most home runs (16).

"Jamie has had a phenomenal career," SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "She was an impact player as a freshman.

"When you compare her to who set the initial records, she has done a tremendous job. I love to see players break records, it's what they're there for. She has earned every one of those wins."

Schutteck said the records she has broken this year mean a lot to her and the Jamie Schutteck's record-breaking performances on the softball field have earned her a piece of the national spotlight as Schutteck was voted Tuesday the NCAA Softball Division I Player of the Week.

Schutteck was named the country's top player in the poll, voted on by 25 coaches from the National Fastpitch Coaches Association. The honor is the first for a Saluki player since its inception three years ago.

For her efforts, Schutteck also was named the Missouri Valley Conference Co-Pitcher of the Week, along with Nora Cagwin of Southwest Missouri State University.

Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said Schutteck is well-deserving of the honor.

"It's a wonderful honor."

After 25 years, SIUC still struggling with gender equity

TITLE IX: Budget concerns hamper compliance with a federal law requiring equality of men's and women's sports.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Editor's note: This is the first story in a three-part series exploring aspects of Title IX and the SIUC Athletic Department's effort to comply with the law.

It's been 25 years since the enactment of Title IX, and the SIUC Athletic Department still is working toward compliance with the law.

Title IX, passed in 1972 by Congress, is designed to ensure gender equity in athletics at all federally funded institutions. The law states that an institution must have equal financial assistance, accommodations of athletic interests and abilities and other program areas for athletes.

"(Title IX) is a function of money,"

Nancy Bandy, assistant athletic director, said. "Since the law was passed 25 years ago, we have heard, 'We'd love to do this, but we don't have the money.' We should do it because it is the right thing to do."

Title IX has three main parts: athletic financial assistance, accommodation of athletic interest and abilities, and opportunities and benefits for athletes. All of these parts must be addressed by the SIUC Gender Equity Committee to check SIUC's compliance with the law.

The Gender Equity Committee, one of five standing committees within the SIUC Athletic Department, is a broad representation of athletic support staff, student-athletes and coaches.

Bandy said the committee has had an effect on the Athletic Department's compliance with the law, even though it has not been easy.

"The Gender Equity Committee has been a positive thing," Bandy said. "Some years we are more active than others. It is frustrating making the same recommendations over and over. It will benefit when the NCAA visits one year from November."

"It has been difficult. Not everyone has been supportive. It is an unpopular position to be in, to be pushing for equity with only so much money."

Bandy said that although the Gender Equity Committee overall has been supportive of Title IX, some members of the Athletic Department staff and administration has been less supportive.

The first part of Title IX the Gender Equity Committee must address is athletic financial assistance, which must be awarded on a proportionate basis between male and female athletes. SIUC complies with 1 part of the law.

The second part of Title IX is the accommodation of athletic interest and ability which is whether the University has a selection of sports and a level of competition that effectively accommodate the students' interests and abilities.

The second part of Title IX is broken down into a three-part test, which SIUC must meet to comply with the 25-year-old law.

The first is participation — whether percentage of athletes is proportionate to
