Officials consider Halloween's future Mayor: Plans being formulated for next year

By Richard Nunez
and Darren Richardson
Staff Writers

Amid the aftermath of the week-end Halloween celebration, some University and City administrators are not sure who won the battle for control of the city streets.

"I'm not sure anybody won or anybody lost," City Manager Steven Hoffner said. "They (students) are an important part of this community, we recognize that. But there are other responsibilities we have to the safety of other individuals and property."

Now that this year's Halloween celebration is over, authorities said they soon will be making plans for the celebration next year.

University President John C. Guyon and Mayor Neil Dillard said the newly adopted fall break, which will be a week-long vacation instituted next year at the beginning of Halloween weekend, will have a significant effect on future celebrations.

The fall break was announced last spring despite the fact that a majority of students polled were against the proposed break.

"Next year's close down will make a difference," Guyon said. "I'm not against people having a good time. I am against unsafe conditions and public consumption of alcohol."

Guyon said at this point nothing was being ruled out. When asked about the possibility of vendors selling beer in plastic cups next year, rather than permit parties to drink from cans, he said it was "in the realm of possibility. At this point, we haven't ruled out anything."

Guyon said the state police were moved back Saturday night because a decision was reached that "constabulary police could handle" the situation.

Dillard said he and the City Council will be making plans within the next three weeks about action to be taken during the Halloween celebration next year.

"The City Council will want to get reports from city administrators and the Halloween Core Committee before they make any decisions," Dillard said.

Dillard said he also will be taking suggestions and will accept all the information he can before making any decisions.

Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan was more optimistic about the chances of ending the annual street party.

"In three years, I think this will be gone," Hogan said. "We never felt like we were going to completely eliminate the event this year. We had some diehards who didn't want to let it go this year. With the exception of that, I think it's about over with."

Nixon warns Chinese of isolation

BEIJING (UPI) — Former president Richard Nixon, in a bluntly worded speech, warned Chinese leaders Monday that China risks economic stagnation and political turmoil if it returns to the isolation of the past and does not work to improve Sino-American relations.

"Neither of us wishes to return to the hostility and bitterness that characterized our relations for over 20 years at such a high cost to our peoples," Nixon said at a banquet hosted by Chinese Premier Li Peng on the third day of his unofficial visit to Beijing.

Nixon, who cleared the way for restoration of ties with China when he first visited Beijing in 1972, told Li it was "neither in China's nor America's interest for your nation of over 1 billion people to return to its isolation. The certain result would be an angry and impoverished nation."

The former president, considered an "old friend" by Chinese leadership, made no attempt to soft-pedal the strain in Sino-American relations resulting from the government's bloody crackdown on the democracy movement in late spring and early summer. He began his dinner toast with a direct reference to the brutal military sup-

University student commits suicide

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

William "Bill" E. Levelsmler, a 25-year-old University student, fatally shot himself with a handgun early Monday morning, officials said.

Don Ragsdale, Jackson County coroner, said Levelsmler was found at his residence, 318 and one-half W. Walnut St., by a friend. Ragsdale would not say to what part of the body Levelsmler sustained the gunshot wound.

Ragsdale said Levelsmler could have been dead for a few hours before he was found.

A note was found but Ragsdale said he was not going to make a pre-judgment as to whether it was suicide or a homicide.

Carbondale Police spokesman Neil Jacobson said he was convinced Levelsmler committed suicide.

An autopsy will not be performed and Ragsdale said an inquest would probably be held Nov. 9.

Visitation will be held Wednesday from 1 to 3 p.m. at Meredith Funeral Home, 300 S. University Ave., with a funeral service following.

Levelsmler body will be cremated and buried at Oakland Cemetery.

Levelsmler, a Carbondale native, is survived by his father, Dr. Jerry E. Levelsmler, of Carbondale; his mother, Lillian Petrucelli, of Conway, Ark.; his brother, Steven Levelsmler, of Morrow, Ga.; two sisters Terry Lynn Kevin, of Nashville Tenn. and Laura Brown, of Germantown, Wis.; and his grandmother, Berta Oliphant, of Memphis, Tenn.

County waits for OK from Bush on armory

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Williamson County will have a new National Guard armory if President Bush signs the appropriations bill.

Both the Senate and House approved a military construction appropriations bill late last week that provides $8.5 billion for military construction projects.

The Williamson County project was awarded $2.6 million by a joint conference committee for the construction of a new armory near the Williamson County Regional Airport to replace the present armory at John A. Logan College in Carterville.

"The current facility is too small and entirely inadequate," Lt. Col. Gary Widner said.

The Williamson County National Guard Unit has been located at John A. Logan College for five years.

Widner said John A. Logan College was the only available facility in the area five years ago, and as soon as the unit built up support and strength, the National Guard began looking for a better site.

The new armory will house the National Guard unit, mess facilities, training facilities, an indoor firing range and classrooms. A new maintenance shop to provide vehicular maintenance support also will be constructed.

When completed, the new armory will house 340 soldiers and employ about 20 people full time.

"Once we get the new facility, the strength of the unit will be even better," Widner said.

Sgt. Bobby Prather said the Williamson County unit has been called to action for trucker strikes, Carbondale riots and disaster relief for tornadoes in Southern Illinois.

Carnival struggles in shadow of party

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

As the Strip swelled with life last weekend, the Halloween carnival struggled.

Attendance by the community was about 50 percent of what the Chamber of Commerce, the sponsor of the event, expected.

The nine-day carnival, "Neewollah '89," did not break even, but the endeavor was not a failure, James Prowell, executive director of the chamber, said.

"It did exactly what it was set up to do and that was to provide a family-oriented event to act as an alternative to the traditional street party. It was a perfect event for families," Prowell said.

He said the carnival was extraordinarily peaceful and no arrests were made.

East German union leader criticized, offers resignation

BERLIN (UPI) — The head of East Germany's communist labor union offered to resign Monday in the face of criticism of his hardline policies, the latest East German leader to be shaken by growing calls for democratic reform. Harry Tisch, chairman of the East German Labor Federation, told the union's governing board he hopes to regain the confidence of rank-and-file workers and is open to all proposals that will help the union. Tisch said if the board of governors gives him a vote of confidence, he would carry out his duties, but if they did not express confidence in him, he would accept that decision also.

Poland works to deflate country's deficit

WARSAW (UPI) — Communist Party members of Parliament Monday called for creation of a new party to meet the needs of a more democratic Poland, while the legislature passed an austere budget aimed at slashing the deficit. Vice Premier Leszek Balcerowicz said the budget bill will lower the deficit to 13.7 percent of the entire 1989 spending, compared with 30.5 percent of spending for the first half of the year. In other areas, Marian Orzechowski, chairman of the Polish legislature, said the next Communist Party congress in January should launch a new party "following the principles of democratic, pluralistic socialism."

At least 30 dead, 300 injured in earthquake

ALGIERS (UPI) — An earthquake measuring 6.0 on the Richter scale shook northern Algeria, killing at least 30 people and injuring 300 others, officials said Monday. Two temblors rocked the northern coastal region west of the capital of Algiers beginning at 8:10 p.m. Sunday, the region is near the site of a 1980 earthquake that killed 2,500 people. Rescue workers continued searching for bodies Monday in the hardest hit area of the Tipasa region. Six 19th-century homes in Algiers collapsed and fires sparked by gas explosions broke out in three buildings.

Bush sends group on mission to aid Poland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, promising sustained support for reforms under way in Poland, said Monday he is dispatching a Cabinet-level mission to examine Polish economic needs. At a Rose Garden ceremony marking the end of Polish-American Heritage month, Bush said he was sending to Warsaw a bipartisan group of officials, business and labor leaders and economic experts "to help ensure Poland's economic recovery becomes a reality." White House press secretary marlin Fitzwater said the United States is seeking a package in excess of $400 million in aid to Poland.

Bush urges no more delays for crime plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush urged Congress Monday to act on his stalled anti-crime package, applauded by law officers as he called for legal guarantees that gun-wielding criminals face prison and cop-killers "pay the ultimate price." At groundbreaking ceremonies for a $7 million National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial, Bush lamented delays in winning approval of a law-and-order plan he touted as "a new national strategy to take back the streets by taking criminals off the streets." "Congress has had our crime package since May," he said. "It is time to act..."

Education officials attack statewide tax reform plan

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Legislators Monday worked on a property tax reform plan that would be acceptable statewide while education officials attacked the legislation as potentially devastating to schools. The Senate Revenue Committee held a hearing to discuss a tax reform bill that has already passed the House, but Education Superintendent Robert Leininger urged Senators to delay action until the Legislature convenes for its regular session in 1990. Leininger said state education estimates show the legislation would wipe out as much as $200 million of $353 million temporary income tax increase for schools approved in June.

German language professor wins statewide recognition

Teacher's textbook pays for scholarship

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Helmut Liedloff, a German language studies faculty member, has been honored with the Lieutenant Governor's Award for Outstanding Contributions to Foreign Language Learning.

Liedloff, who has taught at the University for 30 years, is co-author of a successful series of textbooks, "German Today," and initiated the Southern Illinois Foreign Language Teachers Academic Alliance. He was nominated for the award by SIU-C's foreign language and literatures department.

Liedloff was presented with the award at the governor's mansion in Springfield.

"I was obviously very pleased," Liedloff, 59, said. "The scintillating quite a bit of dignity to the award because the governor's mansion is really quite an impressive place."

"His major contribution is his series of textbooks," Margaret Winters, chairwoman of the foreign language department, said. "They're among the best in the country. A lot of people think they are the top in the country."

Liedloff said the royalties he receives on the sale of his books' created a conflict of interests when SIU-C began using his texts in German classes, requiring students to purchase the text.

"That bothered me sufficiently that I thought I couldn't live with the suspicion of people saying, 'Yes, it's a nice book, but he's using it here and he's making all the money from his books,'" Liedloff said.

Because of these fears, Liedloff started a scholarship fund in connection with the University foundation. Nine students received a full tuition scholarship this year at SIU-C.

"It's clearly a whole lot more than what I'm making off just the SIU books sold," Liedloff said.

Liedloff was born, raised and educated in Germany. After receiving his Ph.D. with a German major and an English minor, he originally planned to teach the two languages in his homeland at the high school level.

Liedloff wanted to perfect his English before teaching it, he said, but travelling abroad was difficult in the years following World War II. SIU-C offered him a fellowship, enabling him to get a masters in English.

"I obviously needed English as a vehicle to teach (German)," Liedloff said. "I can't ask students to try hard to speak German, if I haven't tried hard to speak English."

His original plans changed and he stayed in America to teach German at SIU-C in 1959. Liedloff began writing in 1970 and served in an administrative capacity from 1981-87 as department chairman, during which time he started the Academic Alliance.

"The Academic Alliance has to do with the getting together of foreign language teachers at all levels," Liedloff said.

Lucy Conner, chairwoman of the Academic Alliance, also sent a letter of recommendation for Liedloff, writing, "Dr. Liedloff has dedicated his career to making our young people motivated, interested and proficient in a second language. For such efforts, he is most deserving of Lt. Gov. Ryan's Award."

Delta Chi snares national award for second year

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

For the second year in a row, the University's Delta Chi fraternity has captured the President's Cup Award.

Mike Slavin, Delta Chi president, said he believes the spring conference was the key factor in their accomplishment.

SIU-C Delta Chi Chapter hosted the regional conference on this campus.

"I feel that we presented SIU-C and our chapter in such a way that the national committee could not overlook us," Slavin said.

"The award gives great recognition to the Greek system at SIU-C since the Greek system is so small here," Slavin said.

Delta Chi was informed of the award Oct. 26 and only good things have been said since then, Jean Dee, graduate assistant for Greek Affairs, said.

"It says a lot for the University and for the Greek system since the President's Cup is a national award," Dee added.

The award gives national recognition to only a small number of the 100 Delta Chi Chapters in the nation for their dedication, service and overall Delta Chi accomplishments. The award is based on campus activity, its state newsletter and alumni involvement, but mostly on public service. ...

Rejuvenating ACLU is good for University

PERHAPS, TO the chagrin of President Bush, there may soon be more "card-carrying members" of the American Civil Liberties Union in Southern Illinois.

For the first time in more than five years, Carbondale now has an active chapter of the ACLU. And recently the chapter elected officers to the various areas that the group will be focusing their efforts.

The ACLU is an organization committed to fighting for the rights of minorities, Arnold J. Auerbach, visiting professor to the School of Social Work and chairman of the local chapter, said.

"We're in Southern Illinois, where you have students who are not always welcomed in friendship. You have a minority population who is dissatisfied with the rulings in education and the treatment they get in the community. We are a group that they can turn to for help and advice," Auerbach said.

THE ACLU will set up a law review board, investigate complaints of violations of civil liberties, provide educational programs and mobilize its members on important issues, Auerbach said.

We feel the transient population of the university environment, combined with problems of discrimination are reasons enough to start a new chapter of the ACLU. The ACLU programs will give those who need help an alternative place to turn for advice, as well as support.

With so many diverse ethnic groups, ideologies and religions on this campus, there needs to be a watchdog group that offers not only advice, but legal counsel.

The ACLU is sworn to defend the rights of unpopular and minority groups. Issues that the chapter will be addressing not only include individual complaints of harassment, but also the volatile issue of abortion.

ALTHOUGH THE chapter is planning an active role on the pro-choice side, Auerbach said the ACLU would not hesitate to help pro-life activists if their rights were violated.

Considering the atmosphere in which students, faculty, civil service employees and administration must work, a chapter of ACLU will be advantageous to the campus.

Everyone has certain rights, and when these are violated action must be taken. That is what the ACLU can do for the area. Fight for those whose rights have been violated.

Drug abuse only part of problem

When will all the people who whine about the drug problem wake up?

In Tuesday's Daily Egyptian Mitch Logan wrote: "It's too bad that: so many people do not recognize that our civilization is in decline due to a large extent by the apathy caused in part by drug use."

Wrong, Mitch. Drug abuse is only a symptom of a much more serious disease. True, it is a contributing factor, but first it is an effect before it becomes a cause.

The real problem is a society drowning in self-interest, a society that chooses to ignore, or at the most, gawk at its social problems. We all know about the poor standard of living and decay in many urban settings. Isn't it harder to deny the temptation of escape, even though temporary, when engulfed by poverty, discrimination, and other adverse circumstances that have no relief in sight?

Then there is the other side of the coin, where people have too much money, are "bored" and need "entertainment."

Those who don't turn to drugs or thrills become armchair critics of people who can't improve their lives.

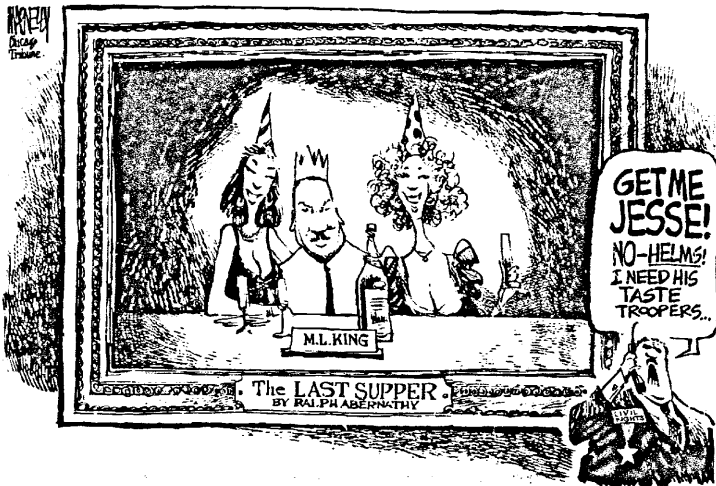

Our society, in its greed, has become too fat and lazy to put any effort into solving the real dilemmas. That is, in part, the cause of our apathy and poor attitudes.

Once we seriously attempt to treat the underlying problems, drug abuse and many other symptoms will gradually lessen. Until then, we will spend countless dollars on programs that, like many remedies, make us feel better but will accomplish nothing.

But don't let me stifle your anti-drug fervor, Mitch.

Go ahead and find someone to look squarely in the eyes, perhaps a pusher in the big city, and tell him, "We can do it!" I just hope you have a bullet-proof vest on as thick as your head. — E.P. Grudowski, sophomore, photography.

Commentary

What could follow yuppie billiard fad?

Out of curiosity, I wandered into one of the big new yuppie pool rooms that have sprung up in Chicago. It is the latest fad, which means it has lasted more than a week.

I don't know what Minnesota Fats would think, but it didn't look like a pool room to me.

For one thing, it was so clean. Even the air lacked the traditional blue haze of smoke. But I shouldn't have been surprised, since smoking is now considered an act of aggression by those non-smoking yuppies who believe they will live forever.

And many of the players were of the female persuasion, which would have been unthinkable in the old-time pool halls. The only women who entered those places were either old biddies selling flowers or younger ones selling something else.

Because it was also a restaurant and bar, there seemed to be more people eating nachos with melted cheese and drinking light beer than were shooting pool. Everyone to their own, but I've had nachos and melted cheese only once, and I'm convinced that those brave men died at the Alamo to prevent this dish from entering the United States.

But the most surprising thing about the place, besides its enormous size, was the skill of the players.

I had assumed they would be tearing up the felt surfaces of the tables, scuffing the balls, poking each other's contact lenses.

Instead, I saw smooth strokes, trim young lawyer-broker types dropping ball after ball while applying the proper English for good follow-up position.

At first that puzzled me. How could they have become so skillful when there are so few pool halls? In recent years, only a few of the true, grungy pool rooms survived, but not in neighborhoods where yuppies were spawned.

Then it came to me. Of course. They had learned to play in their basements. Not basements, of course. The rec room of the suburban bi-level or tri-level where they grew up. A few decades ago, no self-respecting suburban rec room was without the status symbol of a pool table.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

So as little lads, with the Little League season over and snow on the ground, they developed their skills with a pool stick, probably hustling their fathers for extra allowance money, which they could hoard until they had enough to buy a few joints.

I'm not being critical. In fact, it was a nice, civilized place. And after the initial shock of seeing so many female pool players wore off, I had to admit that they were a more pleasant sight — especially when they leaned into a shot — than the bald, tattooed, baggy-eyed players who frequented the pool halls of my youth.

One of the owners wandered over to chat, and he asked me what I thought of his place.

I told him that it depended on his bottom line. If his cash register runneth over, it was a good idea. If not, he should look to the future and anticipate the next fad.

He admitted that despite the crowd, the profits weren't dazzling. The problem with many yuppies, he said, is that they are so fitness conscious, they tend to nurse a glass of white wine or a light beer for an entire evening. And nobody ever got rich selling nachos and melted cheese.

So I suggested that when his accountant told him he was slipping into the red, he convert the joint to something else.

"Such as?" he said.

I pointed out that the place was big enough to put in several bowling alleys. Or lanes, as the image-conscious bowling industry prefers they be called.

He shook his head and said: "There are already a lot of bowling establishments. There would be nothing new about it."

He was mistaken. And I explained.

"All of the bowling alleys in the city and the suburbs have one thing in common. Automatic racks. Machines set the pins. Some places even have computers that automatically keep the score. It is all automated."

"So what do you suggest that's different?" he asked.

"Live pinsetters," I said, "scooping up the balls, picking up the pins, slamming down the rack to set the pins. Just like when I was a lad."

He shook his head. "After a certain point, the machines are cost-efficient. And they're reliable. You don't have to worry about some teen-ager or wind pinsetter not showing up for work."

He still didn't understand. So I explained. "You don't hire pin boys. You don't pay someone to work back in the pits. There are no labor costs."

"Who does it?" he asked.

"That's the whole point. You take out an ad: 'Build your body. Get a great workout. Work up a sweat. Lose those pounds. Be lean, mean, slim and trim.' And you show pictures of muscular yuppie-pinsetters, male and female, happily picking up bowling pins. And you charge them to set pins. You can quote figures about how many calories you burn off setting pins, and how much cheaper it is to get a workout doing that than by joining a health club. They'll be standing in line for that deal. So you'll be making money on both ends — bowlers and pinsetters."

He asked: "What about the social end of it?"

"You can set up a wine bar in the back for the pinsetters. Make it a private club. Charge a small membership fee. Let them bring guests to to watch them bend and grunt."

"It's something to think about," he said.

"And one more thing to consider. Maybe you can get Cher to set a few games."

"Now that is something to think about," he said.

So the first time you see a yuppie pinsetter, remember whose idea it was.

SIU-C graduate student dies

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

William E. Levelsmier, a 25-year-old second year graduate student in business, who died Monday, was described by his sister as an extraordinarily humorous guy.

"When someone would talk to Bill the immediate reaction was a smile," Terry Lynn Kevlin, Levelsmier's sister from Nashville, Tenn., said.

Levelsmier died around midnight Monday from a gunshot wound authorities believe was self inflicted.

A note that was left behind told how Levelsmier felt things just weren't right in his life and he didn't have the energy to make things better, Kevlin said.

Levelsmier received his Bachelors degree in French and hoped to go into international business someday, Kevlin said.

"He traveled to France and other parts of Europe," she said. "He especially loved France and wanted to use his French speaking skills in the European business world."

Levelsmier's sister described him as physically active.

"He especially loved to play Hacky-Sack and he would play every day," she said.

Levelsmier was employed at Two Hearts bar in Carbondale as a bartender and his sister said his forte was gourmet cooking and his knowledge of fine wines and drinks.

S. Africa conservatives call for urgent session

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — The leader of the right-wing Conservative Party warned Monday of a looming collapse of "orderly government" in South Africa and demanded that President Frederik de Klerk convene an urgent session of Parliament to debate his racial reform initiatives.

The warning by white opposition leader Andries Treurnicht came a day after more than 70,000 supporters of the outlawed African National Congress held the biggest anti-apartheid rally in the country's history, staged with the virtual blessing of the ruling National Party that banned the ANC 29 years ago.

"The government's authority to maintain law and order and to enforce the laws of the land is being blatantly challenged," Treurnicht said in a statement, noting mounting concern across the country over the direction of De Klerk's 7-week-old rule.

"The ANC, under its own flag and that of the Communist Party alongside, is enjoying complete freedom to propagate its aims and ambitions, and issues one ultimatum after the other to the government," he said.

"If the government lets itself be intimidated, then it will be responsible for the collapse of orderly government and will be playing into the hands of the revolutionaries," Treurnicht said.

State-run radio and television gave prominent treatment both to Treurnicht's call for an emergency session of Parliament "as soon as possible" and the liberal Democratic Party's announcement welcoming the relaxation of restrictions on the right to protest.

The South African police relations chief, Maj. Gen. Herman Stadler, was quoted Monday thanking "the people for behaving within the norms of democratic society," but said all alleged contraventions of security laws stemming from the rally would be investigated for possible prosecution.

Sunday's rally to celebrate the release of seven veteran ANC members, freed unconditionally two weeks ago by de Klerk, amounted to a daylong suspension of an Internal Security Act ban on the ANC and the promotion of its aims.

Former ANC Secretary-General Walter Sisulu rejected a renunciation of violence as a political weapon or a suspension of a limited guerrilla war by the ANC's armed wing until the government implements further racial reform and meets its basic demands.

China to remove troops

BEIJING (UPI) — China announced Monday it is removing all troops from Tiananmen Square for the first time since last spring's bloody crackdown on democracy activists.

State-run television said under new regulations effective Nov. 1, soldiers also will be withdrawn from Beijing traffic circles and intersections where they have been deployed since the June 3 and 4 clampdown.

There was no mention of lifting martial law, declared May 20 by Premier Li Peng amid massive pro-democracy demonstrations.

Beijing city government spokesman Ding Weijun described the removal of troops from Tiananmen Square, site of the bloody crackdown, as a "major step to ease the constraints of martial law." He said the troops would be replaced with armed police officers.

The government is able to relax martial law regulations because the crackdown and ensuing purge of democracy activist has been successful, Ding said.

"A decisive success has been achieved in quelling Beijing's anti-revolutionary rebellion," he said. "The situation in the city has become progressively more stable and social order has been successful," Ding said.

Police Blotter

Carbondale Police reported an auto burglary occurred at 760 E. Grand Ave. between 2 and 11 a.m. Sunday.

Paula Hildreth, 21, 107 Greek.

Row, told police someone unknown entered her locked auto and stole her purse, police said.

The loss was estimated at $260.

pression of unarmed protesters in Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

"We meet at a delicate moment in Sino-American relations," he said. "The tragedy that occurred in Beijing from June 2 to June 4 and the subsequent developments in your country and mine have cast a shadow over our relations."

Nixon's visit comes at a time when relations between the two countries are at their lowest point since 1979, when diplomatic ties were formally restored. After the event of June, President Bush banned certain military sales and government-funded loans to China to protest the crackdown. The continued presence of leading dissidents Fang Lizhi in the American Embassy in Beijing is another source of tension.

But Chinese leaders insist the economic sanctions imposed by the United States and other countries will not harm China in the long run and they have pressed forward with a vigorous campaign to silence dissent.

Nixon also admonished Chinese leaders to stand by previous commitments involving the Cambodian conflict and Hong Kong.

CARNIVAL, from Page 1

Prowell had assured the Carbondale City Council that the company hired to put on the carnival, Tinsley's Amusements, would enforce the no-drinking policy and the carnival would be shut down at any sign of trouble.

Prowell said he hopes to hold the carnival again next year, when the Halloween weekend will be "normal."

In September, the council repealed the Halloween Fair Days Ordinance allowing drinking on certain Carbondale streets and other special guidelines for the street party.

Despite the repealed ordinance, thousands of University students invaded the Strip this weekend to celebrate Halloween.

Prowell said the number of people on the Strip had no relation to low attendance number at the carnival.

"It was a total separation," Prowell said. "There were families at the carnival and students on the Strip. They were two completely different crowds."

A lot of people may have been hesitant to come to the carnival because Halloween in Carbondale conjures up bad images for some, Prowell said.

Objections by some members of the community also may have been another reason the attendance was so low, Prowell said.

Councilman John Yow voted against giving the chamber the permit to use the land on New Era Road for the carnival because of his concerns that the carnival crowd would migrate to the Strip when the carnival shut down.

City Manager Steven Hoffner said the city staff also had reservations about having the carnival during such a pivotal year for Carbondale.

Jackson County Sheriff William Kikquist said he had objected to the carnival because a large police presence may have been required at both the carnival and the Strip.

Editor from Pulitzer paper scheduled to give lectures

By Mario Millikin
Staff Writer
and University News Service

When the worst drunken driving accident in the country's history occurred in the spring of 1988, it was news editor Marie Geary who stopped the presses at 12:15 a.m. at The Louisville Courier-Journal and organized an effort to cover the story that earned the paper a Pulitzer Prize.

When the story broke early Sunday morning, the Courier-Journal newsroom was five minutes away from its final deadline.

Only the copyeditors were around, preparing to close shop, but within minutes, Geary and the copy desk pieced together an eight-inch story for Sunday's front page. That story provided basic facts about the fiery 1988 explosion of a church bus that was hit head-on by a pickup going the wrong way.

Following this, the paper provided detailed coverage of the event and examined underlying issues such as school bus safety and drunken driving.

Geary will be on the SIU-C campus to give a public lecture on coverage of the accident that took the lives of 24 children, most of them teen-agers, and three adults on Interstate 71 in Kentucky.

The public lecture is scheduled for 4 p.m. today in Lawson 121.

Geary will be on campus speaking to journalism classes today and Wednesday.

Geary holds a bachelor of arts degree from Ball State University and worked almost nine years for The Wichita Eagle in Kansas. Geary began her career at The Courier-Journal in 1974 as a copy editor. She was moved to assistant news editor in 1978 and became news editor in 1985.

As news editor of The Courier-Journal, Geary is responsible for production of the Sunday paper, coverage of weekend events and supervising the wire and regional copy desks, as well as helping with front page content and layout.

The talk is co-sponsored by SIU-C's chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists and the School of Journalism.

Activists burn flag on steps of the Capitol

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Claiming the new federal law against flag-burning was fascist, four left-wing activists defied it Monday by setting fire to an American flag on the Capitol steps.

As the activists chanted "Burn, baby, burn," Capitol police arrested them and dragged them kicking and screaming into the building. One of the four was the protester who started the whole flag-burning controversy in 1984.

After originally scheduling the flag-burning at the Supreme Court as a decoy tactic, three men and a woman appeared on the Capitol's center steps and produced several flags.

Police grabbed most of the flags before the activists had a chance to torch them, but one demonstrator managed to get one lit and throw it burning onto the steps. "I'm a Vietnam veteran and I'm burning this flag," he yelled.

One of his cohorts shouted, "Stop the fascist flag law! Oppose it! Oppose it before it's too late!"

"It smells like Nazi Germany!" another yelled as police dragged him away.

One of those arrested was identified as Gregory Lee Johnson of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, who was arrested in Dallas in 1984 for burning a flag at an otherwise peaceful protest. Last June the Supreme Court ruled that Texas violated Johnson's free-speech rights.

Clinic provides women with services, privacy

By Ken Carr
Student Health Program

The University Women's Health clinic is a component of the Student Health Program offered as an option for female students who wish to have gynecological care and education provided by female health care providers.

To Your Health

The clinic is directed by Dr. Mary Pohlmann who has specialized training in Gynecology.

Maggie Ackerman, Laura Buckley, Sylvia Chalem, and Sheila Gummerman are the nurse practitioners, each of whom have training and experience in the women's health care.

Services offered at the Clinic include pap and pelvic examination; breast examination; colposcopy, and cryosurgery. The clinic also offers counseling, treatment and education related to contraception, reproductive hygiene and preventive measures, abnormal pap tests, sexually transmitted diseases and vaginitis.

Referrals for mammography and specialist care are made when indicated.

The clinic encourages students to be active participants in their own health care.

Two of the staff members, Ackerman and Chalem actively teach the birth control update class in conjunction with the Wellness Center. The birth control update is a class that all first time users of birth control must attend before making their appointment with the health service. The class includes the pros and cons of seven birth control methods, proper use of those methods, self-assessment and decision making. For more information or to sign up for the class you can call 536-4441.

The clinic's hours are the same as the Health Service.

When you check in at the front of the desk of the Health Service and after filling out a registration statement, you will be directed to the upstairs waiting area where increased privacy is afforded.

Offenders find no cold bars, high fences at Vienna prison

Warden mingles freely among inmates

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Not all inmates in prison spend their days lifting weights, making license plates or sitting in their cell.

Not all prisons have high-rise guard towers with rifle tooting guards and 20 feet fences topped with razor sharp barbed wire.

This is not the scene at Vienna Correctional Center, a minimum security prison near Vienna. In fact, Vienna is a prison with no towers, fences or guards.

Vienna is a prison where the warden mingles among the inmates without bodyguards.

Vienna is a totally minimum security prison located in Southern Illinois, which houses a little under 1,000 inmates and employs some 450 civilian workers. Steve Heisner, assistant warden of programs at Vienna, said, Vienna's mission is the protection of society through the humane incarceration of adult male offenders, according to an orientation manual.

Inmates at Vienna get up in the morning, go to school, go to work, have leisure time and live in an atmosphere free from barbed wire fences, canine escorted guards and cold bars.

During a leisurely walk through the correctional center's "Town Square" Heisner said prisoners are accounted for by 10 daily roll calls.

During a tour of the facility with Warden Heisner inmates mingled freely on the grounds of the center.

Inmates at Vienna live in an atmosphere free from barbed wire fences.

As Warden Heisner explained the different programs and buildings at the center inmates said "Hello" to the warden as they walked by.

One inmate approached the warden and asked if he could come see the warden in his office later.

Warden Heisner said, "Sure, stop on by."

Vienna Correctional Center began in 1965 with two buildings. Between 1968 and 1971 inmates began moving in, and in Oct. 1971 all 16 of the newly constructed buildings were dedicated.

Heisner said the average age of inmates at the center is 26-years-old.

Vienna is unique in that it is the only prison in the nation which produces hundreds of gallons of alcohol a day, Heisner said.

Vienna is home to one of the many growing production centers of alcohol in the nation, except it's not for drinking. It's mixed with gasoline to produce ethanol.

Vienna's Alcohol distillery is just one of the many vocational and educational programs sanctioned by Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg. With hands on training, inmates at Vienna are prepared for jobs in society after their release.

Another vocational program Vienna offers to some inmates is emergency medical technician training. In the past Vienna has had inmates who have completed internships with the Johnson County Ambulance Service.

Vocational certificates from SEIC are awarded to inmates upon completion and records of grades received are kept by SEIC so that inmates can request transcripts for use in the job market or the continuance of education upon release.

Inmate jailed for murder is also editor

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Herman Jackson said he is serving time in prison for murder, and at the same time he is learning and experiencing the job of a journalist.

Jackson has served the last three of nine years of his prison sentence at Vienna Correctional Center, near Vienna.

A vocational program that has recently received recognition for excellence at the correctional center is Vienna In Progress, the institution's monthly newspaper, of which Jackson is lay-out editor.

At an awards presentation for the VIP staff held last Thursday, the assistant warden of programs, Steve Heisner, said VIP is the first and foremost accredited prison newspaper, not only in the penal sector but in the private sector.

VIP received top honors in the American Penal Press contest in February from SIU-C's School of Journalism, Diana Douglas, VIP advisor, said. Other top newspapers in the nation are The Mirror, the nation's oldest prison newspaper, published at a Minnesota correction center and The Echo, published at a Texas correctional center.

VIP reported in its February-March edition that the main objective of the paper is to report events Page 8, Daily Egyptian, October 31, 1989 which effect the lives of inmates and correctional center administrators.

Heisner commented at the 10th year celebration Thursday, "We started with a little coal and the effort by the staff of VIP has made a diamond out of it."

Douglas said the inmates who graduate from the journalism program at Vienna and are released, go on to college and receive degrees in journalism.

Gene Stahman, a former inmate who worked for VIP was accepted to SIU-C's journalism school after his release, worked for the Daily Egyptian and has since become managing editor of a Florida newspaper.

Inmates who work for VIP must have a general education degree, Douglas said.

"But I've had staff members who have ninth grade educations and some with Ph.D.s," she said.

Larry Mizell, warden at the center, said funding for VIP comes from an inmate benefit fund and from Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg, where the journalism program is sanctioned from.

Of the approximate 1,200 copies of VIP printed for each edition, 900 copies are distributed throughout Vienna and the Hardin County Work Camp, and 300 are mailed to correctional center administrators across the United States, Douglas said.

Lexington arrives at home port after fatal crash

Training jet crash killed five people, including the pilot, injured two others

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — The aircraft carrier USS Lexington arrived at its home port Monday for an assessment of damage caused by the crash of a training jet that killed five people and injured at least two others.

Petty Officer Tom Hushion said the carrier arrived at the Pensacola Naval Fair Station shortly after 9:30 a.m. CST.

One of the two injured sailors was in critical but stable condition Monday with second- and third-degree burns over 40 percent to 45 percent of his body, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The other injured sailor was reported in stable condition at the Naval hospital at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Brian Keeter, a spokesman in Washington for Rep. Earl Huelskamp, D-Fla., said Pentagon officials briefed the congressman and reported that three aircraft on Lexington's deck were damaged when the T-2 Buckeye jet crashed on the World War II-vintage carrier shortly after 3:30 p.m. CST Sunday, touching off a fire.

"We understand that, after it hit the island (or control tower) of the aircraft carrier, it flipped over and ran into a row of parked planes," Keeter said. Two of the parked planes received major damage and one received minor damage.

"We understand that the plane came in flying too low, was waved off by people on deck (but) came in anyway," Keeter said.

"There was a fire, because the aircraft fuel ignited. That, however, was contained fairly shortly. The Pensacola last week for routine training exercises, was in the Gulf of Mexico about 30 miles from Pensacola when the accident occurred. The pilots, stationed in Meridian, were being trained in carrier landings.

The Lexington, an 889-foot carrier that usually has a crew of 1,440, is used exclusively for training carrier landings.

pilot along with four other were killed. Two others were injured," Keeter said.

Navy officials in Pensacola identified one of the dead as Ensign Stephen E. Pontell, who was the pilot of the jet that crashed. Pontell was based in Meridian, Miss. The Lexington, which left stable condition at the University of South Alabama Medical Center, hospital spokesman Monica Knight said.

The second sailor from the Lexington was admitted to West Florida Regional Medical Center and later transferred to the naval hospital at Pensacola. Her identity was not immediately available.

Since April 19, a gun turret explosion aboard the USS Iowa killed 47 crew member. The Navy issued a 1,000-page report Sept. 7 concluding that the disaster "probably" was an act of suicide by Gunner's Mate 2nd Class Clayton Hartwig, but acknowledged that what happened will never be known "with absolute certainty."

On May 9, a fire aboard the Navy combat supply ship White Plains killed six sailors.

D.C. murder rate ties 1988 record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five weekend murders in the District of Columbia brought the 1989 total to 369, tying a record 1988 yearlong death toll that earned the city the distinction of the nation's murder capital, police said Monday.

All five of the weekend killings occurred between late Saturday and early Sunday. There were 287 murders in the district at this time last year, police said. At the present rate of killings, the city would finish 1989 with 445 murders.

Police have estimated that more than 60 percent of the murders are directly linked to drugs, and particularly to violent drug gangs fighting for control of the city's lucrative crack cocaine market.

There was a 62.5 percent increase in D.C. murders from 227 in 1987 to last year's record total, which displaced Detroit as the nation's "murder capital" in terms of killings per capita.

Efforts to quell the violence have been launched by government, private institutions and individuals, including a highly publicized campaign by federal drug control policy director William Bennett to make the war on drugs in the nation's capital a model for the nation.

Just last week, however, Bennett's six-month evaluation of his war on drugs on D.C. streets showed that very little has changed.

"The high murder rate in the nation's capital is the result of (successful) efforts by the city to keep out organized crime," said James Fyfe, a criminology professor at American University in the city. "In cities where the drug violence is controlled by organized crime, the violence and drug trafficking are controlled."

Federal officials, including Bennett and President Bush, have spoken in strong terms on the city's violence and drug problems, but city officials have become increasingly embittered by what they view as the failure of the Bush administration to match deeds with words.

On Friday, Bush vetoed the city's $4 billion appropriations bill — which would have provided for the city to hire another 700 police officers — because it also would have allowed the city to use its own tax dollars to pay for abortions.

Mayor Marion Barry called the veto a "catastrophic" mistake, and new police Chief Isaac Fulwood said he might be forced to end all overtime for officers to help the city survive financially.

But arrests continue at record rates and the city's few prison facilities are overflowing.

Albums portray spectrum of music from metal to rap

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

Album Review

Bullet LaVolta, "The Gift,"
RCA Records

Hearing the hyperactive drum beats, lightning-fast chord changes and screaming vocals of this album's opening song "X Fire," you might think you're listening to an early 1980s hardcore band. But the album's glossy production and pop-oriented lyrics tell a different story.

Bullet LaVolta, a five-man outfit from Boston, can't seem to make up their minds about what kind of music to play. They often switch between hardcore, punk, metal and pop within a single song. While this makes the band refreshingly unpredictable, it also makes them seem like a K-Tel compilation of alternative music styles of the 1980s.

The album contains some irresistibly flashy guitar work by Clay Tarver, who is especially impressive on "Chalkdust" and "Underground Well."

The band veers into metal territory with "Little Tiny Pieces." Yikki Gipe's razor-edge vocals and Tarver's guitar pyrotechnics are highly reminiscent of Motley

Crue's "Shout at the Devil."

Other stand-out songs include "Over the Shoulder" and the haunting, slower "One Room Down." Most of Gipe's lyrics are mercifully indecipherable. Every once in a while a cliché-ridden line like "When you were young, you thought you never needed anyone/ You thought that life was a game and you played it for keeps," jumps out to make the listener cringe in horror.

Overall, Bullet LaVolta is an energetic, talented band with a flair for killer guitar hooks. They may not be very original, but they make fairly entertaining music.

De La Soul, "Three Feet High and Rising," Tommy Boy Records

De La Soul's million-selling debut "Three Feet High and Rising," released earlier this year, has become the object of renewed attention lately because of the song "Transmuting Live from Mars." The song, which samples a keyboard part from the 1969 Turtles song "You Showed Me," is now the subject of a $1.7 million lawsuit filed against the band by former Turtles Flo and Eddie.

If Flo and Eddie win their suit and sampling is ruled illegal, it could drastically change, if not kill, hip-hop music, which makes extensive use of samples from previously recorded songs.

De La Soul are archaeologists of pop culture, digging up forgotten gems and remaking them into fresh new music. Other artists sampled on their album include Steely Dan, Hall and Oates, James Brown and Funkadelic. Borrowing riff and vocal idiosyncrasies from other songs, the band creates sound collages in which it is hard to tell what's old and what's new.

In songs like "Me, Myself and I," "Treadwater," and "Jenifa Taught Me," the band combines the irresistible smoothness of pop with the quirky creativity of rap.

They also manage to parody other forms of rap, soul and dance music while retaining the musical strengths of the genres they're satirizing. "I Can Do Anything (Deleratic)" makes fun of the rap hit "Supersonic" with silly lines like, "If I want to, I can jump off this building/I could hold two pieces of doo-doo in my hand."

'Shocker' full of blood, gore but no treat in scare arena

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Director Wes Craven has released a new scary movie that features a new bad guy.

Film Review

Run while you still can. "Shocker" is not frightening. Nor is it disturbing, touching, funny, easy to follow or very enjoyable to watch. In fact, it's quite bad.

The movie has all the conventions of a horror film: an evil villain, an all-American good guy, a lot of blood, a high body count and a high-tech climax.

Unfortunately, it also includes a confusing plot, predictable deaths, helpful ghosts, a psychic link between the hero and the villain, unexplained plot devices and an unsatisfying conclusion. "Shocker" is a story about Horace Pinker (played by Mitch Pileggi), a nasty guy who likes to kill people. For no clear reason, he keeps running into a rich, handsome, all-American college athlete named Jonathan (played by Peter Berg), who decides to stop the killer. Eventually Jonathan gets his man and Pinker is put to death on the electric chair.

But Pinker has, through Satanic worship, made a pact with a television set to gain supernatural power. Death just releases him to do more damage. Pinker gains the power to control things that use electricity, travel through power lines and enter a strange dimension within television sets.

Jonathan now has to try killing a nearly omnipotent being that doesn't really exist in reality, armed only with a necklace that repels Pinker for no apparent reason.

Witches brew up next year's predictions

NEW YORK (UPI) — In their annual Halloween look at what's up next year, American witches Monday predicted that Donald Trump will lose most of his money in a rigged pinocchio game and Roseanne Barr will become one of America's most beautiful women.

In the 16th annual survey compiled by the New York Center for the Strange, the witches also forecast that 1990 is going to see major shortages of herring, banjos, billiard balls and Marilyn Quayle posters.

Tammy Faye Bakker, they say, will change her last name, dropping one "k."

And a book will be published claiming Zsa Zsa Gabor was really born and raised in Houston.

The tongue-in-cheek predictions from the Center for the Strange — "a non-profit organization involved basically in research" — is also accompanied by a plea from Executive Director Richard Blaine for a better understanding of witches.

London play intellectual but no bite

NEW YORK (UPI) — David Hare's new drama, "The Secret Rapture," offers a world without redemption as a parable of Thatcherite Britain that is as unbelievable as it is charmless.

The London hit which opened last weekend at the Ethel Barrymore Theater with an American cast is a play aimed at an audience that looks to the theater for more than entertainment. It offers considerable intellectual interplay among some interesting characters, but in the end it is a sterile, manipulative exercise that fails to grip the emotions.

The cast of "The Secret Rapture" is completely competent with one exception, but no one except Francis Conroy in the role of the "good" sister seems at home in his role. Apparently the London cast was able to convey the ironic nuances of Hare's script with more bite and wit than its American counterparts.

This is a play that informs us that politics, work, even religion offer no redemption in a culture that puts personal financial gain and emotional security ahead of a life lived for others in a truly unselfish manner.

In carrying out this theme, Hare brackets his play with death. He begins "The Secret Rapture" with the death of the bookdealer father of two daughters and ends with the murder of one of these daughters by her obsessed lover.

'Air Jordan' gets ground support from new cast

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bulls believe they have finally acquired a talented supporting cast to go along with superstar Michael Jordan.

The Bulls enter the 1989-90 season with guarded optimism, following their most successful campaign in club history. They enter the season with a new head coach and three quality first-round draft picks.

Jordan, 26, enters his sixth NBA season and has established himself as one of the finest players ever to play in the league. He led the league in scoring for the third consecutive year last season, averaging 32.5 points a game. However, the 6-foot-6 guard became a much more well-rounded player, posting career highs of 8 rebounds and 8 assists per game.

He was at his best in the clutch, hitting dramatic game-winning shots against the Cleveland Cavaliers and New York Knicks in the playoffs to help the Bulls reach the Eastern Division finals where they lost, four games to two, to the eventual NBA champion Detroit Pistons.

"I believe we really have the capability of surpassing last year's performance, and I feel good about that," said Jordan.

The Bulls enter the season with a new coach, Doug Collins, the fiery former pro star, was fired abruptly at the end of last season and replaced by another former pro, Phil Jackson. Jackson, who served as Collins' assistant, has quietly and quickly tried to prepare his squad for the new season.

A member of the Knicks' chamionship team 1972-73, Jackson has introduced a disciplined defense and realizes it will take time before his players adjust to it.

"We would like to be in the

Jordan led the NBA in scoring for the third consecutive year last season, averaging 32.5 points a game.

NBA Finals," Jackson said. "We think we have the equipment to be there. We need some seasoning. It depends on how fast the rookies come along, and if they can help, then we'll be knocking on the door."

The starting lineup will remain nearly identical to last season, with Jordan teamed with center Bill Cartwright (12.4 ppg and 6.7 rpg in 1988-89), power forward Horace Grant (12 ppg and 8.6 rpg) and small forward Scottie Pippen (14.4 ppg and 6.1 rpg). Veteran guard John Paxson is expected to start the season at the point, with Jordan moving back to his natural shooting guard spot.

The rookies include three first-rounders: Stacey King of Oklahoma, B.J. Armstrong of Iowa and Jeff Sanders of Georgia Southern.

Sanders was the unknown of the draft, and will remain a mystery a bit longer after suffering a stress fracture in his foot. He is expected to be sidelined until December. King and Armstrong are the keys to the Bulls' progress. King will be rotated with Cartwright and Grant while Armstrong could develop into the true point guard the team has been looking for to complement Jordan.

Despite the label "second-year pro," center Will Perdue also will be tested for the first time. The 7-foot Perdue, drafted 11th overall in 1988, got in 30 games his rookie season but played only 190 minutes as Collins chose to use veteran Dave Corzine as his backup center. Corzine has been traded.

The Bulls will be tested early with a grueling schedule. Ten of their first 15 games are on the road, including a 13-day, seven-game swing on the West Coast.

Lakers begin life without Kareem

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—Running away from your problems is rarely a solution, but that's exactly what the Los Angeles Lakers plan on doing this season.

With Kareem Abdul-Jabbar retired and absent from the Los Angeles low post for the first time in 15 years, the Lakers want to avoid working off a set offense. To do that, they hope to employ their explosive fastbreak more than ever.

"We have to move on because we don't have to have that safety deposit box (Abdul-Jabbar) down low," said Mychal Thompson, who inherits the role of starting center.

"Besides, you don't harness the stallions we got on this team. You've got to let them run free."

The Lakers, winners of eight straight Pacific Division titles, should be faster in 1989-90. Thompson and 7-foot-1 Vlade Divac, a former Yugoslavian Olympian and Los Angeles' No. 1 draft pick, each possess excellent speed for big men.

Larry Drew, the first top-notch reserve playmaker the team has had in some time, was signed as a free agent. His addition allows Michael Cooper to play almost exclusively at small forward, and that will make the Lakers quicker.

Meanwhile, both NBA Most Valuable Player Magic Johnson and Byron Scott have recovered from the injuries that may well have enabled the Detroit Pistons to sweep the Lakers in the NBA Finals.

Los Angeles, which went 8-0 in the exhibition season, probably will miss Abdul-Jabbar the most when the shot clock runs under 10 seconds. The NBA's all-time leading scorer could always be counted on to get off a skyhook under those conditions.

Now, Johnson, Scott and James Worthy will be taking those last-second attempts.

'Personal Fouls' didn't give complete picture

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The primary source for the controversial book about the North Carolina State basketball program said Monday he knows of further revelations concerning the university and Coach Jim Valvano that were omitted from "Personal Fouls."

"There are several things, like what coaches and players did on the road," said John Simonds, a manager for the 1986-87 N.C. State team. "(But) I began this process out of concern for the athletes and I was careful not to use personal attacks on people. I think you'll find Coach Valvano knew a lot more than he's saying."

Simonds did not elaborate on his claims. He was joined at a news conference near the school's campus by Peter Golenbock, the book's author, and Bennie Bolton, a senior captain on the 1987 Wolfpack team.

It was Golenbock's first appearance in the area since the initial reports of his book last January.

The book, which came out in late July, led to several investigations and the resignation of Chancellor Bruce Poulton and the ouster of Valvano as the

"I think you'll find Coach Valvano knew a lot more than he's saying."

—John Simonds

school's athletic director. "I want to express my admiration to a great university that saw the need to state its priorities and did so," Golenbock said. "I think it wants to be a clean program without the chicanery of the previous administration."

Golenbock said he did not wish for Valvano to be fired as coach, but instead hoped "he will stay North Carolina State coach the rest of his career."

Bolton said he was not a source for the book.

Nuggets still speaking English in Denver

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Coach Doug Moe enters the 1989-90 season with a familiar cast two years removed from winning the the Midwest Division.

Unfortunately, it's also the same team that went 44-38 last year and was bounced out of the playoffs in a first-round sweep. The Nuggets refused to make a major trade during the offseason.

But despite a slew of preseason predictions that placed them well down in the NBA's Midwest Division, neither General Manager Pete Babcock or Moe is prepared to write off the season.

"In the last five years, both years we won the division were picked to be pretty miserable," Babcock said.

Moe, never one to let other people judge his talent, likes the Nuggets' chances with a club built around perennial All-Star Alex English, steady guard Lafayette Lever and dizzying point guard and three-point shooter Michael Adams.

"I don't know what anybody else thinks. We'll be good," said Moe. "We'll probably be as good as anybody else in the West with the exception of the Lakers. That's just my opinion. It's nobody else's, but who gives a damn?"

Moe's main concerns heading into his 10th season as Nuggets coach are finding a backup point guard to spell Adams and more help for the front line.

Adams averaged more than 36 minutes a game directing the Nuggets' fast-break offense, and that pace may have taken a toll. He missed five games at the end of the season and was hampered in the playoffs by sore hamstrings.

lary like the program and the way things were run out there."

The level of competition Smith played against on the West Coast helped her, Scott said.

"She played against some excellent competition," Scott said. "San Diego State plays against teams like UCLA and Long Beach. This is some of the best competition in women's basketball. That experience will help Alison."

Smith agrees with Scott's thoughts.

"I'm sure it's helped me a lot. Besides having two All-Americans on our team, we played against some tough competition," Smith said. "We traveled and played on the East Coast as well as the West Coast."

Scott hopes Smith can help in an area that haunted the Salukis last season. The Saluki scoring average of 60.9 points per game was the worst of any team during Scott's 12 years here and ranked last in the Gateway. Smith could convert that weakness into a strength this season, Scott said.

"Alison is a good perimeter shooter and she could make us more solid there," Scott said. "She is a real leader as well and the other players look up to her. That is a real credit to her."

Smith said she did learn some things from sitting out last season.

"Sitting out gave me a chance to see a lot of what they expect and I got to talk a lot to the freshmen last year," Smith said.

Unlike Smith, Weis will be playing in her first season of Div. I basketball.

Weis, from Indianapolis, said spending the last two seasons at a junior college helped her development as a player.

"I started playing basketball my sophomore year in high school and it helped me learn more," Weis said. "It helped prepare myself for this level because I wasn't at this level yet."

In leading Rend Lake to a 19-13 record last season, Weis averaged 23 points per game and was the team's Most Valuable Player. Weis also was Rend Lake's leading rebounder the last two seasons and was all-conference each year.

Weis said there are a lot of adjustment she'll have to make at SIU-C.

"I'll have to learn the offense and the new defenses," Weis said. "It's a different style of play. It's harder and faster like a new brand of basketball."

Weis gives the Salukis a new dimension, Scott said.

"Cheryl could give us some needed help inside," Scott said. "She likes to play with her back to the basket and she has great touch with the basketball. She is an offensive scorer and that gives us a new dimension. She is adjusting and working harder."

Weis converted .610 and .590 from the field as a freshman and sophomore respectively. She feels this is an area she could help the team.

"I hope I can help the team in scoring, and with my size, help in rebounding as well," Weis said.

have been all season," Smith said. "That's a real bright sign. We are beginning to recover."

Seniors Willie Davis and Scott Boelte should be back in action after being out with injuries for their last home game. Davis, a defensive back, was out with a thigh bruise and Boelte, a defensive end, had an ankle sprain.

Sophomore quarterback Scott Gabbert injured his right shoulder during the game and his status will not be known until about midweek, Smith said.

Cooper tops defense

Sophomore corner back Jon Cooper was named the defensive player of the week by the Saluki coaching staff. Cooper recorded five tackles, one fumble recovery, an interception and a pass breakup. Junior receiver Johnny Roots was the offensive player of the week.

Salukis on the run

The Salukis have built a bit of a reputation as a passing team but showed they are able to run the ball as well against the Thorobreds.

"I was pleased with the way we ran the ball," Smith said. The Salukis ran for a season-high 245 yards on 53 attempts and three touchdowns.

coaching staff to alter the lineup according to the opposing team's strengths or weaknesses.

"If I'm playing the three position (small forward), we'll have a bigger team on the floor, giving us better rebounding," Shipley said. "We may lose some shooting and quickness, but we'll gain in other areas."

Junior Sterling Mahan, a 6-1 guard, will be taking over the point position from the departed Kai Nummerger, who now plays basketball in Germany. Mahan will be running the "controlled fast break" for the Salukis this season.

The Salukis averaged only 13.1 turnovers per game last season, fewest in the Valley. The surhanded Mahan committed only 45 turnovers in 33 games, an average of only 1.4 during his 21.7 minutes per game.

Mahan said things are going well in practice so far this season.

"Our practices are more intense and harder now since the coaches are stressing more defense," Mahan said. "Bell, Hodges and Amaya are coming along really well. They're learning more than they did at the high school level. Everybody is getting along. We're playing as a team."

With a comic book look, a black humor hook and a drunken, demented delivery (actually he drinks Penite with very tart limon), this loony Dallas-based comedian/vicior is a crazy cross between Pee-wee Herman, the Adams Family and just a touch of The Shining's Jack Nicholson. With numerous feature television appearances on shows such as Showtime's "Comedy Club Network," "The Late Show," "George Schatzler Comedy Club Special," "Star Search," MTV's "Half Hour Comedy Hour" (to name just a few) and even more off Broadway and night club performances under his belt, Spanky is gaining massive national attention as a comedian "hot as rubber bands in July." All across the country, fans and critics are raving about Spanky's refreshingly original, endlessly creative and completely hilarious approach to stand-up comedy. Don't miss a quickly rising star whose claims not to be the average comic are valid indeed. "I don't talk jokes about how Orientals can't drive," says Spanky. "I'd rather get to the stuff most people think about but never say out loud...like if blind people wear sunglasses, then why don't deaf people wear earmuffs?"

Tenacious defense stressed

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Players say intense practices will pay off later

Although basketball practice is barely two weeks old, the new philosophies head coach Rich Herrin and his staff have installed are showing positive effects for the players.

The new aspects include more emphasis on the fast break and tougher, more aggressive defense, mainly in denying the opposition open passing lanes. The Salukis finished last season at 20-14, but a lack of solid defensive pressure is partially responsible for the Salukis 6-8 mark in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Senior guard Freddie McSwain is the team's leading returning scorer. He averaged 15.5 points per game in 1988-89. At 6-5, 205, he is perhaps the most explosive player on the team, as his season-high 32 points last year against South Carolina State suggests.

McSwain is entering his second season as a Saluki after transferring to SIU-C last year. He said the new defensive pressure will pay strong dividends before the season is over.

"By extending the defense, it will give us more room to operate and step into the passing lanes and get better opportunities at stealing the ball," McSwain said. "One of the main goals of our defense is to create turnovers. With more emphasis on defense, I think we'll be a better team."

Coach Herrin has mentioned before that the new players must be ready to play when the season starts.

The freshmen include guards Jason Hodges and Tyrone Bell, and forward Ashraf Amaya.

McSwain said the freshmen are doing a good job of picking up the strategies.

"The new players are blending in with the team very well," McSwain said. "They are stepping in and are learning the defense. They're making great strides. They're going to give us the depth we're going to need."

McSwain said the quickness of the athletes blends in well with the defensive tempo they'll use when the season starts.

"It will help us a lot," McSwain said. "We're looking forward to playing the defense in a game situation. It will definitely help us in the last minutes of the game. That's when we lost a few games last year."

"We're confident in the defense, offense, the coaching staff and each other," McSwain said. "We'll have great chemistry going into the season."

Junior Rick Shipley, a 6-8 forward, also said the players are mixing really well on the practice floor.

"It's starting to come together for us," Shipley said. "We still have a way to go but we're getting closer. Defense is the big thing we're working on. We need to stop people where we haven't in the past."

"We have good players at every position who can step in and do the job," Shipley said. "We've been working on denying the ball, not giving up the easy shot in the paint or the easy jumper."

Shipley will play at the small forward and power forward positions this fall. This will allow the

Gridders look to start winning streak

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

After a 52-14 win over Kentucky State Saturday, the Salukis are in a position to win two games in a row for the first time this season — if they can beat Indiana State Saturday.

Head coach Bob Smith said the Salukis want to finish the season competitively against two conference foes. The Salukis travel to Indiana State this week and to Northern Iowa next week.

"We really want to compete hard in these last two ballgames," Smith said. "We should be able to do that against Indiana State."

The Fighting Sycamores, 2-7, 0-4 in the Gateway Conference, are very similar to the Salukis, Smith said.

"They are very talented and they are having a very frustrating year," Smith said. "Their year is so similar to the year that we are having, it is almost scary. They have lost some close ballgames and have played a tough schedule with a couple of (Division) I-A schools in Minnesota and Ball State."

Team confident, but...

Despite the convincing win over Kentucky State, Smith said his team will not be overconfident for the remainder of the season.

"There is no way this team can be overconfident vs. anybody," Smith said. "It was good to win this game and I think we played above the competition. That was our goal going into the game."

Smith is hoping the rest of the games this year will be played more cleanly than the Kentucky State game. On Saturday the Thorobreds were flagged 12 times for 87 yards. Most of the penalties were personal fouls, late hits and close to record weight. ADFPA requires a two-year "clean period," in which drugs cannot be used. Because of the cost of administering drug tests, generally $60 - $100, the weightlifting club will randomly issue polygraph tests to 10 percent of the lifters in the meet.

unsportsmanlike play.

"Good sportsmanship didn't seem to be a priority," Smith said.

Smith said the rough play can be attributed to a number of possible factors.

"I think it happens when there is a lack of discipline and either the game itself is a huge emotional game or a big rivalry," Smith said. "It happens when one or both of the teams have not won much and one team proves it is a little better than the other."

"The frustration comes out and you get some cheap shots because you just haven't won any games and you just can't understand why," Smith said. "You'll get some cheap shots and a lot of talking going on. Football is definitely not a game of talk, it's a game of action."

In Smith's office a sign hangs on the wall that reflects what he thinks about football players who like to talk and taunt the opposition on the field.

"It's better to have less thunder in the mouth and more lightning in the hand," and I believe that when it comes to football," Smith said.

They Salukis suffered some minor injuries during the game Saturday but should be healthy for the game this week, Smith said.

"We may be as healthy as we

Newcomers to bolster Scott's team

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

With only two returning starters and four seniors lost to graduation, Saluki women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said newcomers will play a big role this season.

Two newcomers hoping to contribute are juniors Allison Smith and Cheryl Weis.

Both Smith and Weis are transfer students. Smith is a 5-9 guard transferring from San Diego State. Weis, a 6-1 center, spent the last two seasons at Rend Lake Community College.

Smith transferred last year but had to sit out the season because she was moving from one Div. I school to another. She had arthroscopic knee surgery last November, but said she is ready to go.

"I think knee surgery has helped because it doesn't hurt as bad as it did before," Smith said.

In 1987-88 as a sophomore at San Diego State, Smith started 27 of 31 games and averaged 7.0 points and 3.1 rebounds per game. She converted .379 from the field and .691 from the free throw line. Smith scored a career-high 22 points in an early season loss to Maine.

The Salukis recruited Smith out of high school, but she opted for the West Coast.

"Who could turn down the West Coast?" Smith said. "I liked Coach Scott and that was the biggest factor for me coming here. I liked the coaches because they were so nice but I just had to experience the West Coast first."

Smith, a Troy, Mo. native, had other reasons for joining the Salukis.

"I was a little homesick," Smith said. "I didn't particu-

Ditka angry with booing Bears' fans

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Even the Chicago Bear fans failed to escape the wrath of Coach Mike Ditka and a member of his crew Monday.

Ditka, a day after his team broke a three-game losing streak with a 20-10 win over the Los Angeles Rams, took issue with the fans who attended Sunday's home game at Soldier Field. Veteran defensive tackle Steve McMichael also chipped in, saying fans who boo can kiss his derrière.

Ditka got the ball rolling on his weekly radio show on WGN Monday morning, saying he needed to get a few things off his chest.

"I thought the fan reaction in the first half of our game, I didn't know there were any fans. I thought I was at a mortuary," Ditka said.

He added: "A lot of people must have got caught in a traffic jam because there was no noise at all."
