Rendleman, Bost bid in targeted state race

By Shawaun Donovan and Emily Friddy
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Education funding and economic concerns are key issues in the race between state Rep. Mike Bost, R-Marquetteville, and Democratic challenger John Rendleman.

Rendleman has criticized Bost for supporting a flat-funding approach for Illinois schools, saying he doesn’t think anything to fix the disparity.

Rendleman, an attorney in Carbondale, said Bost of putting politics ahead of Southern Illinois students’ best interests by proposing the Republicans’ Quality First education plan.

Quality First plan includes a flag-grant funding provision that gives more money to schools with higher student achievement, rather than basing state funding on property values, as traditional plans have done.

Like previous plans, Quality First gave more funding to northern schools, but Bost said the plan had helped districts in Southern Illinois and was a necessary compromise.

“We were the only legislator that had the opportunity to vote, I would have brought each of the members of Southern Illinois,” Bost said.

Bost said the Quality First plan brought $50 million to local school districts, and no districts lost money.

The hold-harmless fund funneled more than $100 million to the 115th District to ensure that no school district received less than it did in 1995.

Bost said that since he took office in 1995, 600 new jobs have been created in Southern Illinois and the district is in a position of state prison facilities.

Rendleman said improving Southern Illinois infrastructure can play an important role in attracting industry to the area.

Bost, a former Jackson County Circuit Court member, was elected in 1992.

Mike Bost, a former judge at the Circuit Court level, is a professor at SIUC College of Law.

Rendleman, a Carbondale resident, received a bachelor’s degree in history in 1984 at SIUC and a law degree in 1987 from the SLU School of Law.

The 115th State Representative District is comprised of Perry, Union and Jackson counties.

Candidates want problems solved different ways

Local educators race for key seat

By Emily Friddy
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The candidates for the 38th District of the state Senate seat say they are out to solve many of the same problems if they are elected, although their approaches differ.

Democrat Barbara Brown, an SIUC political science lecturer from Chester, and state Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Oliverville, have identified many of the same problems — including school funding and campaign finance reform — as key issues affecting Southern Illinois.

Brown said the state needs to put a cap on the amount of campaign-funding candidates can receive from sources outside of their districts.

Under current laws, candidates are required to itemize all contributions of more than $150 and also are required to file that information with the State Board of Elections, but there are no limits on who can make those contributions.

Luechtefeld said he opposes those reforms, but legislators must be sure the laws are fair to incumbents and challengers.

Brown and Luechtefeld have expressed opposition to the state’s current education funding system, which is based on property taxes, because they say it shortchanges Southern Illinois schools and places an undue burden on taxpayers.

Brown criticized Luechtefeld for voting against the state’s budget, which she said allocated more money to wealthy Chicago schools than to schools in Southern Illinois.

But Luechtefeld has said that the budget provides Southern Illinois with much-needed funds, with no school receiving less state money than it did last year.

According to figures from the Luechtefeld campaign, this year’s budget provides local schools with $11 million for capital projects and almost $3 million more in additional funds than last year’s budget projection.

Brown advocates issuing $500 million in state bonds, including $3 million in College Savings Bonds.

Under the plan, parents could buy bonds for their children, which they would cash in when it is time to send the children to college. The interest from the sale of these bonds, would go to fund additional repairs for Illinois schools.

The candidates’ similar concerns with your state and local issues — may seem in part from their backgrounds.

Brown, a mother of three, has taught at SIUC since 1983. She has earned a bachelor’s degree, a master’s degree and a Ph.D. in political science from the University.

Luechtefeld, a father of four, attended Carbondale Community High School during his 12-year career as a teacher and principal.

Luechtefeld earned his undergraduate degree in political science and is a graduate of Washington University. He also has earned a master’s degree at SIUE.

Luechtefeld had no political experience when he was selected by the seven Republican county chairmen in the 38th district to replace retiring state Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, last year.

Salvi, a trial lawyer, supports a Republican plan to reduce the size and scope of the Department of Education, Dan Patlak, Salvi's press secretary, said.

Patlak said Salvi supports three of the Department of Education's programs: student loans, the Head Start program and federal Title I funding, which educates low-income children. But Patlak said Salvi believes the rest of the agency should be eliminated.

"Past that (the three programs), we'd like to see the other functions of the Department of Education basically eliminated," Patlak said.

Patlak said Salvi regards other programs, like the curriculum standards initiative called Goals 2000, that create too much paperwork for teachers.

Durbin, a seven-term congressman who voted with President Bush in establishing direct student loans, opposes the idea eliminating the programs, Chris Widmayer, Durbin's deputy press secretary, said.

Widmayer said the Republican plan would not help college students.

"It would affect students in many ways," he said. "The Department of Education administers a number of programs, including the student loan program."

Widmayer said the Safe and Drug-Free Schools program, administered by the Department of Education, is an example of a program that would be jeopardized by a plan like Salvi's.

Salvi, who won the March primary in an upset against Lt. Gov. Bob Kastner, has endorsed Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole, who supports phased-in cuts, in a 40 percent across-the-board tax cut.

And Durbin favors targeted tax breaks for college tuition and other expenses as does President Bill Clinton.

The media have characterized the race as a bitter one, in part because both campaigns have produced television ads using words like "radical" and "extremist."

Campaign workers on both sides say the labels aimed at their candidates are not true.

"He's (Durbin) been using the term 'extremist' on Al Salvi. But Al Salvi's views generally reflect the views of Ronald Reagan, who was elected with one of the greatest majorities in history," Patlak said.

"It's (Durbin) been using the term 'extremist' on Al Salvi," Patlak said. "But Al Salvi's views generally reflect the views of Ronald Reagan, who was elected with one of the greatest majorities in history."

Durbin and Salvi have access to each other of having radical plans to change Social Security, and political advertising watchdog groups have called both sides charges misleading.

The candidates also have clashed concerning truth-in-sentencing laws and the other of voting against the laws. The two camps also disagree on several other issues.

Salvi opposes gun-control measures, opposes a constitutional amendment against burning the American flag.

Durbin supports gun-control measures, opposes a flag-burning amendment and supports abortion rights. Both candidates want to change campaign-finance laws.

Salvi wants to limit the contributions of political action committees to 10 percent of candidates' war chest. Durbin wants campaigns to be shorter and says free media time for all candidates should be part of campaign-finance reform.

During the riot, this DUI awareness car was turned over and set on fire outside Grimmel Hall early Sunday morning.

Campus suffers heavy damage from Strip's weekend activities

By Brett Villwock

Ronelle Borecup was shocked when she came to work Monday and saw the damage inflicted on her campus office from rioters during the weekend. Borecup, a senior in political science from Nashville, works at the Student Recreation Center, where two windows and two glass doors were broken.

She said she did not expect something like this to happen on the SIUC campus.

"It was disturbing," she said. "It was shocked is the damage done.

The damage to Borecup's office was a small part of the overall damage that took place on campus during the weekend after riots, including damage across the city and campus. There were several confrontations between rioters and police, and flash, tear gas and smoke were repeatedly used by police in attempts to disperse the crowd.

University Police said five of Borecup's employees reported that two double-pane windows on the automated doors and three glass-paned windows were broken, causing more than $3,000 in damage.

Also, officers stopped to assist firefigthers on Park Street early Sunday morning in front of Grimmel Dining Hall in University Park where the University Police DUI awareness car was run over and set on fire.

The overall population of SIUC was not what was voiced the other night," she said. "I think the flashlights of a few has shed a very dark light on the students coming to SIU for an education.

SIUC Police said all damage reports have not been turned in, and there may be several more instances of damage to University property released this week.

SIUC Chancellor Don Bergs said at a press conference Monday that he is aware of the rioters' actions, and he said the rioters should know that the University is not going to allow its assets go undamaged.

"The strongest sanctions the University can bring against you," he said.

Man throws bottle into sorority house

By Dave Armstrong

While many people took advantage of the weekend riots to commit violent and destructive acts, some SIUC students chose to act the part of good citizens.

Derek Holloway, a senior in advertising from Carbondale, was one of two Sigma Pi fraternity members who helped the Carbondale Police Department capture a man accused of throwing a bottle containing a hate message through a window of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority house at 320 S. University Ave. in Carbondale.

Holloway said that about 3 a.m. Sunday, he was across the street from the sorority house when he saw a man throw something.

Holloway said he heard glass breaking and saw the man run away.

"Some guys were left behind after the riots, and one of them threw a bottle right through the window," Holloway said.

Holloway chased after him and his friend and found them hiding in a bush. He dragged them back to the Sigma Pi house and held them.

"We got tell the police," said Holloway.

Smoking to be banned from McAndrew

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Joe Sanchez has attended every Saluki football game this season and has missed only one, but he and other smokers will have only one more chance to light up at McAndrew Stadium.

SIUC Chancellor Don Begg approved a unanimous recommendation from the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee Thursday to declare McAndrew Stadium a no-smoking area starting next year.

Sanchez, a sophomore in public relations from Aurora, said he has come to terms with the new no-smoking policy, but he said he will not leave games to smoke.

"I probably wouldn't smoke because I wouldn't want to miss the game," Sanchez said. "I'd rather see the football game than smoke.

The last time smoking was allowed in the stadium was the Salukis' final game of the season Nov. 16 against Southeast Missouri State.

Begg said the University will designate smoking areas around the stadium before the no-smoking policy goes into effect next year.

"There should be a smoking and non-smoking section," he said. George Ghawi, a freshman in physical therapy from Atlanta, said the administration should carefully consider where the designated smoking area will be. He said it would be a mistake to allow smoking under the stands.

"At halftime, everyone's going to go into the breezeway, and it's going to be thick with smoke," Ghawi said.

The committee considered the no-smoking proposal after a spectator who suffers from asthma complained about second-hand smoke at a recent game. Jim Hart, director of intercollegiate athletics, said Hart said the decision to make McAndrew smoke free follows the example of college stadiums such as Hanneck Stadium at Illinois State University and professional stadiums such as Busch Stadium, home of the St. Louis Cardinals.
Barb Brown is best choice for Senate

A SOUND POLITICAL BACKGROUND, established relationships with SIUC administrators and a good approach to solving Illinois’ damaged system of education funding are several reasons why the Daily Egyptian is endorsing Democrat Barb Brown for the 58th District state Senate race.

Brown’s experience as a political science professor at SIUC has made her more familiar with what SIUC needs from state government and thus makes her a better choice to articulate those needs than incumbent Dave Luechtefeld, Okawville.

Brown also has been involved in politics for several years, starting as a campaign worker for Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., while she was a student at SIUC. She has a firm grasp of what it will take to push Southern Illinois and SIUC interests through the GOP. Her opponent, on the other hand, is a high school basketball coach and former high school history and political science teacher, who was appointed to his position.

BROWN ALSO SUPPORTS A GOOD PLAN FOR restructuring the way Illinois funds its public school system. Schools are now funded mostly by property taxes, which creates the large disparities in the wealth of school districts. This happens because affluent areas with higher property values and incomes use these property tax bases to tap more money into schools. Poorer areas, such as the 58th District, which has hit hard times since the Clean Air Act damaged the Southern Illinois coal industry, collect fewer taxes and thus have less money. Brown, like some other Democrats, want to pass laws that will take money out of the state’s budget to fund schools and end the dependence on unreliable property taxes.

Brown also supports changing the state’s tax campaign finance laws. Currently, the leaders of both parties are allowed to funnel in hundreds of thousands of dollars into campaign, creating an environment where legislators may move more dues to pay to their party’s leaders than to their constituents.

Brown’s political background, ideas and savvy make her the best choice for the 58th District.

DE endorses Bost for representative

TWO YEARS AG0 MIKE BOST WAs A freshman representative in the General Assembly. Since then, the political knowledge he has gained has made him the superior choice for the 115th District state House race over Democratic challenger John Rendleman.

Bost has shown extensive knowledge of the Capital Development Budget which allocates funds to SIUC for infrastructure repairs. That type of knowledge can make a defining difference in how much and when funds are given to this University.

Bost also has a smart, realistic approach toward campaign finance reform. He knows there will be tough resistance to reform from those who benefit from the status quo. That is why he wants to take small steps toward reform to at least accomplish something instead of taking too much at once and being defeated.

Although he comes from a political family, Rendleman has no experience as a legislator and could not be as effective as Bost.

Bost, however, does lack an aggressive plan to take education funding away from property taxes that Rendleman has advocated. But Bost’s strengths outweigh this flaw and make him the best choice to represent the 115th District.

Halloween riot contradicts idea

I would like to address this letter to all those students who actively protested against Halloween on Saturday night. There are two basic problems I have with your actions. The first is the message you are giving to the University and the city. The second questions your philosophy behind the protest.

I find it amusing that you are up set by the city’s and the University’s actions to ban Halloween. By destroying public property, you are perpetuating the reason Halloween was banned in the first place.

Your argument for Halloween seems to be contradicted by your actions. To many people, the argument is, “We are adults who should be treated as adults, and therefore, there is no reason to ban Halloween.” Yet, you act as though someone took away your Big Wheel. Do you think anybody on the City Council is saying to themselves, “Hey, maybe I was wrong about those students and they do deserve to have Halloween after all.” Not one positive thing was accomplished by your actions this weekend. Any kind of support you might have had from business- es in the Strip is gone and with it, your hopes of ever experiencing Halloween as it once was.

More importantly, I am having a hard time understanding why it is that you are protesting. How old were you when University officials actually ended Halloween in Carbondale?

The Halloween you know is an empty shell of something that died when you were in junior high or high school. Unless you were raised in Southern Illinois, it is a pretty safe bet you have no idea what Halloween in Carbondale was like.

Did you take the streets of your hometown in protest back in 1989 or 1990? Did you break windows and sue police because a tradition that you do not know much about or ever experience was dying?

The simple fact is, you who are protesting are perpetuating something that was never a part of Halloween. Halloween was not taken away from you. It was taken away from SIUC students seven years ago. Simply stated: This is not your fight. If you wish to protest something, it should be something that was taken away from you. Perhaps then the bar entry age.

Strip riots shows students’ frustration

The rioting on the Strip Friday and Saturday night was, while not justifiable, at least understandable. These students were not rioting merely for the sake of violence. Somewhere in the midst of all of this chaos is a cause.

Students at SIUC are fed up with city and school policies targeted at needs and wants and take responsibility for meeting those needs and wants.

I think that the city has forgotten that we, the students, constitute a majority of the population of the city, and we cannot be ignored. The city, department, non-academic student feeling.

The police officer who sprayed Mace into the eyes of an innocent victim should be held equally accountable for the violence at the student who throws bottles and smashes windows.

Sooner or later, school and city officials will have to take notice of the students’ needs and wants and take responsibility for meeting those needs and wants.

I believe that as long as this city and school choose to ignore us, the hard-working student of SIUC, our frustration will inevitably be manifested in unfavorable actions such as those which occurred this past weekend.

City got what it deserved

The Daily Egyptian's original editorial article on Oct. 28 stated that the Homecoming riots raised the chances for future celebrations when they decided that they were not good for the school's image. I agree with the city ruined our chance for future celebrations when they decided that they were not good for the city's image. I think that the city decided to pass some laws that challenge the freedom of speech and privileges that everyone in this country should have, and was meant to, enjoy. Prohibition was reinstated by the city when it seems stringent time limits on when businesses can sell alcohol.

Yes, Mr. Norby, Bill Myers was wrong in saying that the first amendment was violated, but you are wrong in thinking the students here are inept and are the sole cause of this problem, which actually is the power mongering of city officials attempting to undermine the very elements that define college. And yes, Mr. Norby, the state does not the drinking age, but they do not set the bar entry age. I am unable to go into bars with my older friends, only to play pool or listen to a band, because the city decided to adopt an under age drinking — a task which the city should know is doomed to fail. If SIUC manages to curb under age drinking, it will be the first college in the country to do so, which shows the absurdity of such a high drinking age in the first place.

I think this chain of is a building example that the city has curbed under age drinking but has merely created a monster. The students feel alienated, and rightfully so. The students are the sole reason for most of the jobs in this city, and I think it is time the city officials and SIU administration start listening to them. Otherwise, the city is doomed to becoming a ghost town.

Yes, there were protests involved in this.

The animosity that has been growing between students and city officials finally came to a confrontation in the students believe their voices could not be heard by any means other than violence, which is what every revolution in the history of the world has been founded on. So, in conclusion, I believe, Mr. Norby, the city did "get what it deserved."

Lt. Steve Odum said Erik Schuber, a 25-year-old Carbondale resident, was arrested and charged with damage to property in the incident. Odum said the second man with Schuber was identified but was not charged.

Amy Brogi, a senior in psychology from Chicago, said her window had been smashed by a brick that had been thrown during the riots by an unknown person. She said she did not see the rioters.

"It all started when two guys were asked to get off our property," Brogi said. "They had an argument, and some of our friends had to stop them from hitting the girl who asked them to leave. It really upset me."

Brogi said the men left and later came back after the riots. She said the note inside the building was directed at members in the house.

"The note was obviously written to cause problems for the Greek organization, not the participating students," Brogi said. "It said, 'Dear stupid sorority girls, you're fake and you're going to have problems.'"

Brogi said they had been promised a five-day extension on the Greek fines, but that extension was revoked.

"If we don't agree to do something, we're going to have a mess of problems," Brogi said. "We're meeting with the house and the sorority to try to come to an understanding, but now we're at loggerheads."

Brogi said the cops had been called when the gas cleared that flooded her room. She said the cops had arrived on the scene.

"We're going to take extra precautions this weekend," Hollaway said. "Right now, we know we are not doing anything to warrant being in the area, but we want to make sure we are not surprised by any incidents."

When Natasha Jenk was asked what pen a date, she said she figured it would be fun. But when her date showed up at the door, she was hit by something she did not expect- her date's a bad breath. Jenk, a sophomore in accounting from Chicago, said although her date was a nice guy, she had to end the date early because she could not stand the stench emanating from his mouth.

"On my way out the door, I picked up some mints off the table and gave him one," she said. "He put it in his mouth, but it really didn't seem to help." To remedy an acquaintance's bad breath, Nicole Cashaw, a philosophy major from Chicago, said she also tried the breath-froster approach. She said she would pull out a pack of gum when her friend was around.

"I would always ask for a piece of gum when I had it and made it a lot easier for me to talk to him," she said. Although mints, gums and mouthwash are temporally cover up halitosis (bad breath), a visit to the dentist usually is necessary to cure bad breath, Marilyn Paulk, assistant professor in dental hygiene, said. "People with bad breath use mints, and the sugar in their tea can increase the decay rate," she said.

FOOTBALL
Bonner takes offensive honors again

Once again, senior running back Cee Bonner has earned the football Saluki's offensive player of the week, Big Ten honor for the week. Bonner rushed for 140 yards in 25 carries Saturday in the Salukis' 33-7 loss to Northern Iowa University. The game was Bonner's fifth 100-plus yard rushing game of the year.

Defensive player of the week honors went to Dwight Miller. Miller recorded 11 tackles, five of which were solo. The SIUC defense limited UNI to 304 total yards.

TENNIS
One nettet takes home winning record

Mick Smyth of the Saluki men's tennis team finished the weekend with a winning record in the Rutes Regional Championships. Smyth had his first singles draw match but picked up the pace with the battle into the consolation brackets. Smyth won three straight matches, good enough to put him in the finals, where he fell to Jake Bush from the University of Missouri 6-2, 6-2.

Smyth ended the weekend with a 3-2 record. Only two other Salukis played in the tournament and they had little success. The Saluki two-seeded singles player, Randy deGuzman, won his first match in the consolation bracket before falling to a player from the University of Memphis. Three seeded singlesman Juan Carlos England did not advance past the first round of play, losing 8-2 to Evansville's Stephanie Hawkes.

Women's tennis team has mixed results

The SIUC women's tennis team had mixed results at the Metroes Tournament Saturday and Sunday. In the No. 1 singles, Liz Gardner went 0-2, losing her first match to Kennia Melchez of Arkansas State and then losing her consolation game to Isabel Sloowikowi of Southeast Missouri State University.

Junior Card played the No. 2 spot for SIUC, making it to the final round before losing to Coryn Gagliano. The Salukis two seeded singles player, Randy deGuzman, won his first match in the consolation bracket before falling to a player from the University of Pittsburgh. Junior Juan Carlos England did not advance past the first round of play, losing 8-2 to Evansville's Stephanie Hawkes.

OFFENSIVE line

Offensive lineman of the week honors went to Mark Gagliano. Gagliano had four punts for 195 yards, the dropped average decreased his class total to less than 12 hours, making him eligible to play.

Rugby teams romp during weekend play

The SIUC intramural rugby teams left Carbondale for the weekend and were victorious.

The women's team was finally scored at the Metroes Tournament Saturday and Sunday. In the No. 1 singles, Liz Gardner went 0-2, losing her first match to Kennia Melchez of Arkansas State and then losing her consolation game to Isabel Sloowikowi of Southeast Missouri State University.

Clinton offers choices for U.S. future

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

President Bill Clinton is seeking reelection based in part on what he describes as an unprecedented record of higher education advancements during his first term as president.

During the past four years, Clinton has expanded Pell Grants, created the direct lending program and created AmeriCorps, which gives students tuition money in exchange for work in social-service groups.

Under the direct lending program, the Department of Education makes student loans directly available to the students, bypassing banks and guaranteeing institutions. Clinton says the direct lending program, which has been in effect at SIUC since fall 1995, saves taxpayer's money by reducing administrative costs and eliminating the middle man on loans to 2.5 million students.

Clinton has proposed at the Democratic National Convention in August to help families pay the cost of higher education by creating a $1,500 tax credit for families with children in college, by creating Individual Retirement Accounts for college, by giving $10,000 scholarships to the Top 5 percent of students in every high school and by creating a $10,000 tax deduction for family-college expenditure.

In addition to expanding his AmeriCorps project by $1.43 million, Clinton has proposed a $5.1-billion project to hire 30,000 college students to tutor grade-school children in reading.

Clinton has pledged his continued support for the Department of Education, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which funds SIUC's student-run television station WSIU.

Bob Dole proposes to improve education in America by transferring the authority over education from the federal government to states and communities.

Dole is the former Kansas senator and former Senate majority leader.

He is the Republican Party's presidential candidate.

Dole has said the federal government has no constitutional authority over education. At the Republican National Convention, he proposed eliminating the Department of Education, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as part of his plan to reform government.

Dole says the rising cost of college tuitions is the result of billions of dollars of federal spending regulations, paperwork and political correctness.

He has proposed a national reassessment of the economies of higher education to cut rising costs.

Dole says Clinton's direct lending and AmeriCorps programs are wastes of taxpayers' money and has called for elimination of the programs. He advocates using the money saved from the program elimination into Pell Grants and College Work Study.

Republicans say eliminating the direct lending program would save the federal government $1.5 billion during the next seven years.

Dole says his plan for the economy will help education by cutting taxes, which he said will give families more money to pay for college, and by balancing the budget, which he said will lower interest rates on student loans.

Dole has proposed a plan to allow low and middle-income families to invest $500 annually in tax- free savings accounts to help pay for a child's education.

He also has proposed a plan to make student-loan interest tax deductible for low and middle-income families and students.

Dole supports anti-discrimination laws and has said no one should be denied employment or admission to school because of race, sex, religion, creed or national origin.

He said affirmative action laws and policies are unfair and illegal because they are discriminatory and therefore should be eliminated.

Standing Tall for Southern Illinois

That's what Dave Luechtefeld has done over the past year as your State Senator. He's fought to impove economic growth, education, health care and law enforcement here in Southern Illinois.

• Passing new laws to help revitalize the coal industry and save jobs in Southern Illinois.
• Secured almost 3 million more in state dollars for local schools.
• Fought to bring new jobs to Southern Illinois, such as those at the new prison.
• Giving mothers and newborns more time in the hospital by requiring insurance companies to pay for 48-hour stays.
• Securing more than $11 million in state dollars for local projects.

LUECHTEFELD State Senator
Paid for by Citizens for Luechtefeld
Older demographic groups all reported turnout levels of more than 70 percent. The younger age group consistently has the lowest turnout on Election Day while 74 percent of people ages 65 to 74 voted in 1992. Young people do not particularly understand why their votes can evoke their futures, Jackson said.

"Things like student-loan programs, things like money for education, things like how we're going to fund welfare at the state level -- all kinds of quality-of-life issues are wrapped up in the political world," Jackson said. "It's just that we haven't made it human to young people."

Krisen Schick, a junior in cinema and photography from Aurora, said before looking at literature at a political table in the Student Center, she was not aware of how many independent candidates are running for president.

"There are so many people running," she said. "If you don't like Clinton or Dole, voice for someone else. If you don't vote, you don't have any right to complain."

On the SIUC campus this fall, some students tried to make the case to their friends about becoming deputy registrars and registering others to vote.

Unfortunately, Student Government registered 710 students, and the College Democrats, College Republicans and Black Affairs Council also participated in registration.

Jane Vaaghe, Carbondale city clerk, said Oct. 7 and Oct. 8, the last two days to register for the November election, more than 320 people were registered in her office by city staff and the League of Women Voters. She said about half of those were students.

Those voter-registration drives have a special resonance in Carbondale, where student-dominated precincts consistently have lower turnout than those in the city at large.

"Of the 689 registered voters in Carbondale's 21st Precinct, which includes the SIUC dorm area, had the highest turnout of any student precinct in the March primary, with 233 percent of the registered voters showing up."

Carbondale's 24th Precinct, which includes Evergreen Terrace, had the highest turnout of any student precinct in the March primary, with 233 percent of the registered voters showing up.

In the 1995 Carbondale City Council election, two SIUC students were the only SIUC students who ran for the race, turnout in student-dominated precincts was low, with 51 of the 2,465 registered voters in the 21st and 24th precincts going to the polls.

That year, the national parties have tried to attract younger voters on a local level by putting celebrities with their causes.

Rachel Campos, Rachel of MTV's "The Real World," is in San Francisco, is the spokeswoman for the Young Republicans, and actor Matthew Broderick, is a spokesman for the College Democrats of America.

Steve Larson, a freshman in Liberal Arts, said: "They're trying to woo the voters." Democrats, he said, do not identify themselves with any political party.

"I'm closer to being a Democrat than a Republican because of my education. I'm for education funding," Larson said. "But they are definitely trying to attract the voters."

On a local level, parties are relying on volunteers and grassroots traditions of knocking on doors and walking student areas.

Hamilton Arentsen and nine other SIUC College Democrats are set for every Tuesday and Saturday afternoon knocking on doors and walking student areas.

After almost two hours of pounding on doors and passing out literature, the members can only hope for a handful of votes from their efforts.
