Officials, candidates at odds with election takeover

USG Adviser

■ SIUC administrative officials seized the student elections early Wednesday, marking the first time in recent history the administration has taken control of the elections. Vice President Harvey Welch gave USG election commissioner Yusuf Haqq an ultimatum—leave alleged election violators Brad Cole and Joe Hill and William White and Jacquelyn Thames on the ballot Wednesday or no election. Haqq and the election commission tried to proceed anyway. USG President Jack Sullivan, who notified USG adviser Jean Paratore of the commission's intent to remove the candidate's names from the ballot, confiscated the ballots Wednesday morning under the consent of the administrators. morning under the consent of the administrators.

■ The election commission had charged Cole with violating campaign expenditure by-laws in the USG constitution. Cole and Student Party vice presidential running mate Joe Hill maintain their innocence. Independent candidate William White was disqualified for not turning in a campaign expense report, which he denies. Reform Party candidates, Denise Young and Mark Shelton, had not been cited for violations as of Wednesday.

Save Illinois schools with funding reform

GOV. JIM EDGAR HAS BEEN NO FRIEND to education. Funding schools at any level has never been high on the governor's agenda. So when he criticizes a proposed constitutional amendment to make the state finance more of the cost for primary and secondary education, it comes as

The amendment bill, which asks the state to fund more than 50 percent of public education, originated in the Senate and passed last week. If it passes the House of Representatives by the weekend, voters will make the final decision in the Nov. 3 general election.

THE AMENDMENT DOES NOT radically alter the state constitution, but only seeks to clarify a segment dealing with education. In its present form, the constitution gives the state primary responsibility for education funding. Presently, lawmakers interpret "primary responsibility" to mean the state must contribute at least one-third of funding for public education.

But that one-third has proven woefully inadequate. The remainder of funding comes from school district property taxes, which means the bulk of responsibility for education remains at the local level.

THAT WOULD ALL BE WELL AND GOOD, if all school districts were equally wealthy. But property taxes are determined by property value, which is in part determined by the economic status of each region. Districts with a high concentration of wealth, as in suburban Chicago, survive admirably. But in areas where the economic outlook is bleak, such as Southern Illinois, property tax cannot meet school systems' needs without complementary funding.

EDGAR, WITH A SMELL OF BURNING MARTYR in the air, said he would not stand in the way of the amendment if voters approved it. But he claimed such state responsibility would hit the taxpayers with a 50-percent income tax hike, and said it would fall to the Legislature to actually raise taxes. By passing that burden onto the General Assembly, he effectively dared the House legislators to pass a bill that would damage their popularity with voters in the long run.

SUCH A THREAT IS A CHEAP METHOD of derailing a productive amendment. Unwilling to scrap a property-tax system that has proven itself faulty in areas with poor fiscal growth, Edgar has absolved himself of responsibility in the matter.

STATE LEGISLATORS ALREADY KNOW BETTER than to look to Edgar for responsibility on education, hence, the proposed amendment. Hopefully the voters will ignore the income-tax scare talk and shout yes when the polls open Nov. 3. If education finance is not restructured now, public-school education for more than half the state will wither to dust. Better to make a painful financial stitch now than rebuild the Well, we haven't been trained in riot control. Furthermore, anyone who got near the Ford Festiva got pelted with cans and bottles.

We did call the police. But their reply was, "Oh, that car-tipping on Beveridge? Yeah, we know."

We're not trying to say the police didn't do a good job that night. They did. Most of us were cheering them on.

At 2 a.m., we were cleaning our yard to escape a $50 fine, per resident, for litter control. Some of our neighbors weren't so lucky. The residents of Beveridge didn't participate in the riot Saturday, yet we payed for it. Post-fest chaos fuels new call for camival's end

We would like to commend SPC and its chairman, Jason Beverlin, for its outstanding programming for the Springfest '92 activities. The tailgate, carnival, and the performing bands were extremely well-organized and very entertaining. Moreover, the festivities appeared to be enjoyed by all in attendance. Thanks for a fun afternoon.

It is regrettable that the night activities following Sprin; fest had to put a damper on the weekend as a whole. Just as SIUC was beginning to overcome its Halloween reputation, this Springfest pops up to haunt us for many years to come.

The reckless behavior exhibited this weekend will reaffirm what many emrecently begun to forget. We just loved getting calls the day after Springfest regarding drunken louts taking over the Strip on national television. We know of one fine indi-vidual, and his veekend guest, who prided themselves on throwing bottles and contri-buting to the destruction of the car displayed on the front page of the DE. We are all very proud of these mature

We regret that a small percentage of students had to spoil the fun for the remainder of the SIUC student body. It would be nice if we could have the day activities without the adjoining chaos. However, we know this proposal is unrealistic, and consequently we have to ask Springfest be cancelled. Now we look to President Guyon and the administration to bring our school's poor reputation back up to par with other universities.—Bill Barker, freshman, radio and television; Gene Lamis, junior, agribusiness economics; Mike Garzanelli, junior,

The seizure of the election by administrators imposes on his duties as commissioner, Hagg said.

"I was seated to run a fair election and they're trying to have me run an election but keep my hands tied—they don't want me to run the election fairly; they don't want me to investigate; they want me simply to run it

Shortly after the administration's seizure, the commissioners forfeited the election property, leaving a pile of ballots scattered across the sidewalk in front of the Student

The ballots were confiscated and impounded in the USG office to prevent tampering and will be used in the new election. Student affairs will take charge of the election and the current USG election commission will not participate in any way, Sullivan said.

A startled Denise Young, the Reform Party presidential candi-date, walked into the Student Center Wednesday morning to discover the elections had been cancelled.

"If they're going to make a decision that's going to affect the can-didates, we should have been involved," she said.

Psychiatrist deals with boy in psychological thriller play

By Kristi Rominger

Peter Shaffer's controversial psychological thriller, "Equus," runs like an emotional roller

"Equus," playing at McLeod Theater, deals with a 17-year-old boy who has been institutionalized after blinding six horses, and a psychiatrist struggling to find the reason behind the crime

Peter Schmit, a senior in theater from Murphysboro, plays the role of Martin Dysart, the psychiatrist.

"Dysart starts out a very clinical, cold professional," Schmit said. "He is calculating, incisive and intelligent. Dysart, in his 40s, is going through his mid-life crisis and starts to realize he is not worth as much as he thought he was."

Schmit said the 17-year-old boy is considered a deviant, and the psychiatrist develops strengths and feelings toward Alan.

He cures the boy of his insanity, but by doing so, he discovers his own dispassions of his toveless relationship—he has not kissed his wife in six years. He has no children and is getting to the point in his life where he probably never

Schmit said it is the most

Schmit said it is the most difficult role he has played.
"I'm only 21 years old," he said, "and playing a character two times my age. He is going through a midlife crisis and that experience is head to be the said."

hard to portray."

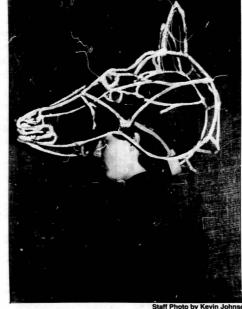

The hardest thing he had adjusting to playing Dysart was the age difference.

During the play, Dysart is put on trial, Schmit said. He is trying to figure out why one image obsesses the teen-ager. Dysart cannot figure it out and it is supposed to be fundamental. He puts himself on trial and ends up investigating, defending and prosecuting himself at the same time.

Blacc Martin, a sophomore in theater from Nashville, Tenn., says "Equus" is emotionally ringing—it captivates the audience.

Martin plays Alan Strang, the 17-year-old who is under Dysart's shows off his costume designed for the play "Equus."

Tobiasz Daskiewicz, a senior in the theater department,

Martin said it is nice to see something dramatic—and "Equus" makes the audience want to gasp

"It is a psychological thriller," Martin said. "Alan is sick and in pain, but has colorful emotions that I wish I could have sometimes. He is a brilliant character-he is creative, and his feelings make sense to me because he is so in touch with the earth.'

Martin said he admires Alan because he does not hold back or worry about what others will say or

Alan has a love for horses, which have a deep symbolic meaning in the play.

The horses in the play are very see EQUUS, page 8

Their costumes are borrowed from the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. The large horse heads and hooves are made out of welded aluminum and some adjustments were made to the hooves for movement purposes, said Alex Chrestopoulos, director of "Equus" and assistant professor of acting and voice.

The symbolization of the horse figure is, in any kind of Freudian dream analysis, representational of a male figure.

The set serves as a courtroom as well as the psychiatrist's office, and the middle of the stage looks almost like a boxing ring.

Director: Nudity necessary in play; audiences not offended, shocked

By Kristi Rominger Entertainment Edito

The sign outside McLeod Theater's doors reads "Deals with mature subject matter. Contains nudity and adult language. May not be suitable for all audiences.

The performance is "Equus," which deals with a teen-ager who has been institutionalized after blinding six horses, and a psychiatrist struggling to find the reason behind the crime

But audiences did not seem too shocked by the nudity in "Equus," said Alex Chrestopoulos, assistant professor of acting and voice and director of the play.

'Actually, the response has been -it is not offensive," he said.

"Don't come to see it because it's controversial," said Peter Schmit, a senior in theater from Murphysboro, who portrays the psychiatrist in the play, "Come because it is an emotional roller coaster with great writing and language."

"Equus" is not the first play to be performed with nudity at SIUC.

There was a production of "Dangerous Liaisons," and, in 1973 a play cailed "Lying in State" was controversial for its time, Chrestopoulos said.

"SIUE also did the play 'Bent' which had full frontal male nudity,

But "Equus" has both male and female full frontai nudity.

"It is essential to the play," said Amy De Figueiredo, who plays the character Jill Mason in the play.

Jill and Alan Strang, played by Blaec Martin, are the two characters who appear nude during an important psychological turning point in the play.

De Figueiredo, a senior in creative writing from Palatine, said the scene where it happens is very pretty and innocent, and the nudity makes sense.

"It's not about sex," she said. "It's about humanity.

Chrestopoulos said the scene seems so sexless that it is not offensive to the audience.

De Figueiredo said she no longer feels awkward doing the scenes on stage.

"I was scared at first," De Figueiredo said. "This is the first time I've been on stage, and I felt lucky to get the part. I knew it would be difficult, but it became personal to me.

She said she is not uncomfortable because it is not real.

Martin agreed. "I'm not an exhibitionist, mind you," he said.

Martin said he feels comfortable with the nudity and hopes the audience does too.

"I definitely took away from this a different perception of our vulnerabilities and how we mask them," De Figueiredo said. "And how much we allow ourselves and our passions out in the world."

'Equus" is a very heavy play, she

"You really come out of it thinking," she said. "People enjoy something tapped into them to get them thinking, and this play taps into the reality of our fears

Music students to cover two centuries of music in recital

By Kristi Rominger ntertainment Edito

It takes two to tango.
And "Tangos," a fiery guitar duet by Astor Piazzolla, will be performed as part of the SIUC Guitar Ensemble tonight.

Two hundred years of music will e covered in one night as 14 School of Music students come together for the free performance at 8 p.m. in the Old Baptist Foundation

Professor of Music Joseph Breznikar, specialist in guitar, said this performance is "unique because one of the works has never been performed in the Mirlwest before."

The work is "Cuban Landscape with Rumba" by Leo Brouwer, a Cuban composer.

In addition to Piazzolla and Brouwer, works by J.S. Bach, W.A. Mozart, Frederic Chopin, and I. Albeniz are to be performed.

Space researcher studying plasma, magnetic fields to speak at SIUC

By Annette Holder General Assignment Writer

Researchers at a New Mexico laboratory are studying electrical magnetic fields to learn more about magnetic fields in space.

The physicists are investigating the solar wind and its interactions with planets, moons, comets and spacecraft.

Kurt Moore, staff member of the Los Alamos National Laboratory, has conducted research on space plasma physics, the interaction of plasma and electrically charged material.

Moore's visit is sponsored by Sigma Xi, a scientific research society, said John Preece, professor in plant and soil science.

"We try to select scientists from different areas of science," Preece said. "Moore has been recommended as a good speaker.

Plasma, made of very low density gas, is about 100 miles above the earth's surface.

The earth's magnetic field shields it from the plasma, created by solar wind, that comes from the sun.

The plasma and the magnetic field of the sun and earth interact in a way scientists are still discovering, said Peter Gary, group leader of the space plasma physics group at the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

The laboratory has been researching plasma and its effect on the creation of the aurora borealis, flashes of light observed in the night sky.

Plasma that is trapped in the magnetosphere, which is 400 to 40,000 miles above the earth, is released and creates the lights.
The aurora borealis, also known as the Northern Lights, are visible at northern latitudes such as Alaska and Canada, said Michelle Thomsen, staff member of the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

"The plasma becomes untrapped and bangs into the atmosphere," Thomsen said. "It's as if they get excited and glow. They're in different colors such as red, green and white."

The magnetic field also causes problems with satellites and spacecraft in space, Thomsen

"Electrical charging can kill delicate spacecraft systems and the instruments can be messed up," she said.

Moore's research observes where man can travel to, unlike the research on the Big Bang theory that observed where mancannot go.

The space plasma physics program, designed to be non-technical, will be at 4 p.m. today at 231 Lawson Hall.

1992 Spring Semester Final Exam Sched

457-TANU

THE EXAMINATION SCHEDULE ACCEPTS to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Spring '92 Final Examination Schedule to be Friday, May 15 at 10:10 a.m. - 12:10 p.m. Please note that University policy indicates that exams are not to be given prior to exam week, or at times other than those scheduled.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice.

Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

House That War Built' tells stories of Lebanon

A dramatic view of war-torn Lebanon as told through the narratives of those who experienced it first hand will play this weekend in the Marion Kleinau Theater.

'This is the House That War Built," directed by Laila Farah Mohtar, will show at 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Mohtar wrote the script for the play from the transcriptions of nterviews of 12 Lebanese men and women in the Detroit area. The 12 were all touched by war, prejudice and culture shock, and their narratives relate their experiences with each.

The play deals with the era of civil war in Lebanon in 1975 and with the Israeli invasion in 1982.

"I would say it is a journey in three different ways," she said. The first is the actual physical journey to the states. The second journey deals with their experiences. The last is a personal journey of self, as in, 'How does being away from my culture change

Mohtar is half Lebanese and grew up in Lebanon. She came to the United States because the University of Beirut was closed in

The play is her own personal way of dealing with her war experiences, Mohtar said.

Debatin's part of Mona Hammoud involves the bombing invasion of Lebanon.

The part of Samar El-Bkaily, played by Waltz, portrays a traditional housewife who has come to America.

Higgs, who plays Hicham Tout, said his narrative deals with his coming to an airport with six other Lebanese. They were treated badly because airport officials thought they would hijack the plane

Carroll's character of Nada Dandan was buried alive in rubble after a bombing, and her narrative deals with her fear and shock.

Yeer said her part of Khadijeh Zeort, a young girl trying to be liberated, is one of the lighter moments in the play.

Washburn, who plays Khadijeh's husband Ahmad Zeort, said his narrative deals with the issue of culture shock.

Philyaw can empathize with his character because he has travelled

"I've been to places like Turkey and had a case of culture shock," he said. "I want people to understand what it's like to be a foreigner. Van Dyke said his character of Abdo Alfakih is a philosophical outlook on America from the Lebanese point of view.

"It discusses how America is out for the individual," he said, "while in Lebanon everything is for the family. It deals with dating styles and the adjustment that has to be made. You can't live here and be (in Lebanon) or you'll be at war with yourself."
Tickets for "The House That War

Built" can be purchased in the speech communications office and are $2 for students and $4 for the general public.

and six triples, Riggleman said.

"Signing Bryan gives us a another option for the leadoff position next season," he said. "He adds strength to what we feel will will be a strong outfield next year Lefand Macon all in their sophomore seasons." with Dan Esplin, Jason Smith and Leland Macon all in their Hampton holds the Garden City Community College school record for base pilfering. He added to the record last week when he stole second, third and home against one of the best catchers in junior college baseball, Garden City coach Joe Slobko said. Hampton also is errorless in the outfield, with no miscue in 67 chances.

The Salukis return 16 players next season, including two of three regular starting pitchers and six starting position players.

After defeating the University of Evansville on the road Tuesday evening, the Salukis' current squad will bring a three-game win streak into their Missouri Valley Conference pairing with No. 5 Wichita State this weekend.

Third baseman Brian Heather paced the Dawgs in Indiana, reaching three times in four at-bats with three runs scored and an RBI in their 5-3 victory. The win puts SIUC at 17-23 for the season, but more importantly it puts the Salukis into a winning state of mind for the WSU series, Riggleman said.

"Momentum is very important in this game," he said. "We were able to put back-to-back wins together at Illinois State (on Saturday and Sunday) and we wanted to continue to build on that.

"We need to put pressure on Wichita State. I'm sure they think they're going to just tear us apart—that's expected from a top ranked team, but with the way our pitching staff has been performing and some confidence I think we can give them a good battle."

The Salukis play at Wichita State in an important three-game set beginning Friday. The Dawgs currently stand at fourth in the N/VC with a 6-7 record, but Riggleman said he feels the Dawgs need to win at least two more games to be among the top six Valley teams who make the MVC post-season tournament.

Bradley holds down the fifth position in-conference with a 6-8 worksheet, while Southwest Mis-souri and Illinois State are tied for the last qualifying position at 6-9.

The Shockers can assure themselves of the Missouri Valley Conference Championship by sweeping the Dawgs this weekend. WSU holds a 15-3 record with three games to play. Creighton is second at 10-4.

Mahoney to coach St. John's Mahoney Wednesday was named

Mahoney Wednesday was named the new head basketball coach at St. John's, giving him a chance to succeed the man who was responsible for bringing him into coaching 19 years ago.

Mahoney was named the replacement for Lou Carnessecca, who retired April 13 after 24 seasons at St. John's.

"Dreams do come true,"

"Dreams do come true," Mahoney said Wednesday. "I just honored and feel very, very honored and fortunate to be able to be in this position.

Except for three seasons he spent as Manhattan's head coach from 1878-81, Mahoney, 43, was an assistant to Carnesecca since 1973. Carnesecca coached Mahoney with the New York Nets of the ABA, then talked him into becoming an assistant coach when he returned to St. John's in 1973.

"Of course I was 24 years old at the time and I thought I would be the next Jerry West," Mahoney said. "Of course that didn't happen. But in the back of my mind I always felt that I would want to get involved in coaching."

involved in coaching."

Now Mahoney, with a 16-62 career record as head coach, is replacing his Hall of Fame mentor.

Highly paid NHL Kings expect shakeup soon

The team with the highest payroll in the NHL wasn't assembled to lose in the first round of the playoffs, and the Los Angeles Kings recognize there's a shakeup coming.
The Kings, littered with veterans

Edmonton completed a 4-2 series triumph Tuesday night by beating the Kings 3-0.

To improve on last year's efforts. owner Bruce McNall made deals to reunite winger Jari Kurri and defenseman Paul Coffey with Wayne Gretzky and other key members of the Oilers' dynasty. The playoff magic McNall expected fizzled instead.

Kings veteran Dave Taylor said he expects there will be some major changes in Los Angeles in the off-season.

"We have a lot of guys over 30 on our team," Taylor said. on our team," Taylor said.
"Everybody keeps themselves in pretty good shape but I think management has got to look at our team and look at it pretty seriously. We didn't get by the first round this year and I expect there'll be some changes over the summer.
