Fate of Hambletonian to be decided Sunday

By David Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

DU QUOIN—Officials of the Du Quoin State Fair may learn Sunday whether the Hambletonian Trotting Classic will stay in Southern Illinois after this year.

The Hambletonian Society's board of directors will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Sheraton Inn at LaGuardia Airport, New York City, to decide the fate of the race.

"Our chances are certainly as good as anyone else's," said Fred Huff, vice president of Hayes Fair Acres where the race has been run for 17 seasons.

"We won't know much until after Sunday's meeting," fairgrounds owner William Hayes said.

Hayes said he hopes there is a chance of getting the race back. "There's a lot of sentiment in our favor. Of course, someone else could get it to go in their favor."

Hayes plans to attend the New York meeting.

Huff said he and Hayes know of only two other tracks that are certain to offer bids Sunday. The New York State Fair at Syracuse and the Saratoga racetrack, both bidders last October for the race, plan to offer bids Sunday.

The Washington Park racetrack in Chicago is a possible contender, Huff said.

Max Hempt, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., president of the Hambletonian Society, said the board of directors will consider bids from Du Quoin, Syracuse, Saratoga and the Latonia racetrack in Northern Kentucky.

Huff said there was some speculation that the society will restrict bids to those who bid for the race last year.

"But they can do anything they want," he said.

Hempt, however, felt that additional bids are unlikely.

"I doubt that any new bids will be accepted," he said. "Or let me put it this way: up to this date we haven't received any additional bids."

Du Quoin lost the right to host the race last Oct. 28 when Liberty Bell secured the race by a narrow margin of the board directors vote. The three-year contract would have begun in 1975, the golden anniversary of the trotting classic.

When the Society offered the contract April 15, however, Liberty Bell executives failed to sign.

Liberty Bell's official statement read: "We confirm that the deadline set by the Hambletonian Society for signing its contract to race here in 1975 passed Saturday unsigned. We were granted the Hambletonian for three years last October under the impression it would be a one-day event on a mile track."

"In our opinion," Hempt said, "there was nothing in the contract that was objectionable."

Huff speculated that the biggest factor influencing the society's decision to move the race to Liberty Bell was to get the race back east.

"A majority of the society's members are from the east," he said, "and it's only natural they would want it in their own back yard."

"Essentially, they (Liberty Bell) got more votes than we did," Hayes explained. "They made an all-out effort to get more than half the board of directors to vote in their favor and they got the job done. It amounts to a matter of salesmanship."

Hempt said more than anything else, "the overall picture" will influence the directors Sunday.

"A lot of things have to be weighed," he said. "I think everything will be

Seven liquor licenses may not be OK'd

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Seven liquor establishments in Carbondale may lose their liquor licenses Tuesday if the license holders fail to include more information on their applications.

The Liquor Advisory Board recommended Wednesday night that seven liquor license holders be denied renewal because they haven't supplied the board with sufficient information.

Mayor Neal Eckert, the liquor commissioner, will make the final decision on license applications Monday. Eckert said that although the information missing may be minor, it may affect his decision on approval of license application.

The seven establishments are: Patricia Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, Papa Caesar's, Holiday Inn, LBJ's, Whitts Lancer's Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, Eagles Lodge and Buffalo Bob's.

About 30 liquor license applicants have already received recommendations from the liquor board for approval. The licenses expire at midnight Tuesday.

Patricia Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge has not identified the persons of a land trust which owns the restaurant.

Papa Caesar's has failed to include fingerprints of each person who owns

Controls to end Tuesday

Jump in local prices predicted

By Dave Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale merchants and an SIU economics professor expect a jump in prices followed by a gradual period of price stabilization if federal price and wage controls are allowed to expire Tuesday.

Prof. Charles Stalon said he expects drastic inflation to continue, aggravated by the shortage of raw materials.

The consensus of local merchants contacted this week was the rise in prices would be temporary, with prices leveling off soon after the limitations are lifted.

Retailers complained they had little control over their prices since they charge prices based on a percentage of what manufacturer's charge them for goods.

"I've noticed that some of the prices have gone up here in the store," said Terry Hiller, manager at Ace Hardware, "particularly on steel items."

"I'm sure some manufacturer's prices will go up," after April 30, he said.

Most of the controls came off consumer items about two months ago, according to Eldon Ray, manager of Penney's Department Store. He said he doesn't feel there will be much change in prices of such goods after the April 30 expiration date. Most of the price increases have already come, he noted.

In grocery products, George Trimborn, manager of Penney's Grocery Department, said prices probably would remain fairly stationary for the next two months.

"I can't see prices getting much higher than they have in the past year," he said.

Trimborn said grocery prices increased more while the restrictions were imposed than they ever had since he entered the grocery business 20 years ago.

"I think everyone agrees that some businesses will take advantage of it (the control lift) and there will be a quick adjustment of prices upwards," said Gilbert Logel, vice president, First National Bank and Trust Co. "We feel that competition will make that only a temporary advantage. Eventually, prices will come back to an even keel."

City Council to hold open budget hearing

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed 1974-75 operating budget at 7 p.m. Monday in the University City cafeteria.

The public is invited to comment on the budget. Copies of the proposed budget are available for inspection in the City Clerk's office at City Hall.

The general fund section of the budget, which includes city departments and agencies, had been allocated $2,265,752, a figure that City Manager Carroll Fry said "does not reflect a maintenance of the level of services that we have enjoyed during 1973-74."

Other sections of the budget also show a decrease in the city's spending for the coming year.

The council has already tentatively approved the budget but will not formally adopt it until after the public hearing.

Fry also will ask the council members to consider segments of the 1976-79 Capital Improvements Program. The council tabled the program April 8 but approved the allocation of $4,226,932 for capital improvements for the coming year.

1974-75 is the first-year segment of the five-year capital improvements program. The council tabled the rest of the program for further consideration.

Fry will ask the council to adopt the entire program.

Council members will also consider a request by City Attorney John Womick for a contract for legal services between him and the city. Womick is presently a city employee under the personnel system.

The contract would allow Womick to assign some of the city work to Robert T. Coleman, a partner of Womick's law firm in Anna.

"This, I believe, will allow more time for me to pursue what I feel we both consider more important matters of the city," Womick said in asking for council approval of the proposed contract.

Fry will recommend that the council adopt the contract because of its "flexibility of a law firm in assigning personnel to handle the ever increasing work load of the city without running into a possible conflict of interests."

"Mr. Womick has been a hard-working, effective attorney for the city. However, the duties of prosecutor have often times broken into the continuity of his work and made him inaccessible at times when he was needed for other matters," Fry said.

Fry said he expected that the City Attorney's office would be operated within the $35,505 budgeted by the council for 1974-75.

Womick has suggested that he should charge $22.50 an hour for the legal services rendered.

Womick stressed that he would request council approval of any assignment made by him to Coleman before any agreement is made.

"The contract, I feel, will allow me to represent the city on all legal matters. I feel that having one person responsible for all the work will make for better legal representation for the city," Womick said.

Three area editors honored Friday with SIEA's 'Golden em' awards

By John Russell
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois Editorial Association (SIEA) honored three area editors with its Golden Em award at the association's annual banquet Friday night in the SIU Student Center Ballrooms.

Leon H. Church, editor and publisher of "The Lebanon Advertiser," Franklin M. Dooling, editor of the "Effingham Daily News," and J. N. Vallow, former editor of "The Kimmunity Express," received the award, symbolizing editorial excellence.

Church has been the editor and publisher of the weekly Lebanon newspaper since 1939. He has been a teacher and coach on both the high school and college levels, and is a life member of the Illinois State Historical Society.

He and his wife Helen have one son. Church has been a community leader of Lebanon and was instrumental in the organization of Lebanon's Boy Scout Troup. He served as president of the McKendree College Alumni Association from 1960 to 1963.

A lifetime member of Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalism society, Church is a past president of the SIEA. He is also a member of the Illinois Editorial Association and the National Editorial Association.

Dooling began his career in the newspaper field on the "Virginia Gazette," in Virginia, Ill. He moved on to an editorial position with the "Illinois State Register" in Springfield and served as a reporter and desk man for the "Illinois State Journal," also in Springfield.

In 1946 Dooling became the editor of the "Effingham Daily News," and has served as editor ever since.

Dooling has served on several fraternal and business organizations and has been active in Red Cross and mental health association work. He has served on the governing boards of both organizations.

Vallow purchased "The Kimmunity Express" in 1921 and served as editor until 1973, when he retired. His "ZATSO" personal column first appeared in the paper in 1935, and ran every week until his retirement.

The SIEA honored the "ZATSO" column with awards in both 1968 and 1970. Vallow, a member of the SIEA since 1922, served as the association's secretary from 1932 to 1934, and as president from 1935-36.

Vallow has three children, thirteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

He was a member of the Illinois Press Association for many years, and is a member of the Kimmunity United Methodist Church. He serves on the Board of Directors of the Kimmunity Building and Loan Association.

Guest speaker at the banquet was Ron Powers, television columnist for the "Chicago Sun-Times." A Pulitzer Prize winner, Powers spoke on the "The Television Column Comes of Age."

Gretchen Schmitz, a 1962 graduate of SIU, was also honored by the SIEA. Ms. Schmitz, editor of "Art and Framer Magazine," received the SIU Journalism Alumnus award.

Ms. Schmitz was the first woman elected president of the Industrial Association of Greater St. Louis and is past president of the St. Louis chapter of Women in Communications, Inc.

In the afternoon session of the conference, Charles C. Feireich of the "Metropolis Planet" was presented with the Freedom Foundation Award and Howard R. Long, editor and fiscal officer of the "Daily Egyptian," was awarded the Arthur Darwin Jenkins Award for outstanding contributions to journalism in Southern Illinois.

Winners of the SIEA Better Newspaper Contest in the general excellence category were the "Columbia Star" for small weekly papers, the "Wood River Journal" for large weeklies, and the "Alton Telegraph" for daily papers.

Winners were also named in the categories of local news coverage, overall makeup, photography, original columns, locally written editorials and advertising excellence.

Price boost should level off in Carbondale

president, Bank of Carbondale, said he thought the end of limitations will be inflationary but said he couldn't speculate on future interest rates.

Stalon painted a bleak picture of a "flurry of price increases in the first two weeks of May" followed by price increases leveling off to five to six per cent per year.

Stalon said it was apparent that former U.S. Treasury Secretary George Shultz and John Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, decided about two months ago to start dismantling the control program.

Dunlop began cautious bargaining with industries, offering to allow them a price increase in return for a promise of not raising their prices over the next several months, Stalon explained. In this way one industry after another was exempted from the wage and price controls.

A number of construction contracts are scheduled to end in May, according to Stalon. He expects to see a number of strikes for higher wages immediately after the control authority ends.

"I think it's safe to say," Stalon said, "that there is not a serious proposal afoot in Congress or the administration for dealing with inflation."

"We're almost certainly going to ad hoc our way through this," he said. "And the price of ad hocking is inflation."

He said both political parties seem to be hoping to gain from the "coming disaster."

Stalon said neither party can offer a solution for inflation because the solutions involve stripping power from the parties' mainstays of power—the trade unions and big business.

"The government has no policy other than to ride it out" and hope the system will right itself, Stalon said.

Big business has the power to impose prices on the market and the power to resist price decline, Stalon explained. Trade unions representing about 20 per cent of the American working force, continue to boost wages.

These two interests in the economic system coupled with raw material shortage lead to rampant inflation, Stalon said.

He said he does not expect to hear serious proposals for dealing with inflation until after the 1976 elections.

So far the discussion has involved "exchanging blame without offering solutions," he said.

In Stalon's grim vision of the economy, prices and interest rates will continue to rise unless the power to impose prices and wages can be stripped from big business interests and trade unions.

He offered two possibilities for this. One, either a recession or depression could have a hampering effect on business and union power.

Or two, big business and big labor could join forces and create their own economic control.

"We have a nasty word for that," Stalon said, "we call it fascism. It happened in Italy and we hope it won't happen here."

Takeover of Portugal may have African effect

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The confrontation between black and white-ruled parts of Africa promises to be irrevocably changed by the coup in Portugal.

Portugal's new leader, Gen. Antonio de Spínola, moved Friday to consolidate the army's takeover of the country by promising elections, a free press, and the end of political police.

A basic question, observers were saying Friday, was how fast the new Lisbon regime introduces changes in Portugal's African territories and how quickly the effects ripple over their borders.

As a sign of the house-cleaning he plans, Spínola fired all civil governors in the mainland and in the African provinces.

If the Portuguese reach accommodation with insurgent blacks in Angola and Mozambique, white minority ruled Rhodesia and South Africa would find it increasingly difficult to cope with their own black rebels.

The geography of south-central Africa is such that Angola, Mozambique and Rhodesia provide a coast-to-coast buffer for South Africa from black Africa.

Rhodesia is already under pressure from terrorists who infiltrate the country's vulnerable northeast frontier with Mozambique and Zambia.

Prices on the Johannesburg stock exchange tumbled Friday for the second consecutive day and brokers said the selling was in direct reaction to the overthrow of Premier Marcel Caetano by Gen. Antonio de Spínola and other officers who want an end to Portuguese military intervention in Africa.

Rebels have been fighting for more than a decade against Portuguese rule in Angola and Mozambique, but neither side has made significant headway. Spínola has written that the wars are ideological, not military, and can only be solved politically.

The new government will probably have no trouble granting independence or greater local autonomy for Portuguese Guinea, its other possession. The small territory has few natural resources and no white settlers.

But Angola and Mozambique have rich economic potential and settled white minorities, and early reports reaching Johannesburg indicated a strong assurance among them that whatever happened in Lisbon there would be no surrender to black rebels.

One possibility foremost in the minds of observers was that if the new government did try to accommodate the blacks, the white settlers in the two territories might declare independence.

Variety of activities planned for African Day celebration

The explanation of the "Organization of African Unity" (OAU), an African dinner and fashion show will all be included in the African Day celebration scheduled for Saturday at the University complex.

Philip Palmer, Sierra Leone's ambassador to the United States, will give an address on the "Organization of African Unity—Ten Years After." Palmer's address will be followed by an analysis of United States and African relations by Dr. Gossie Hudson, chairman of the Social Science Department at Lincoln University.

Huge female turnout at Woman's Day fair exceeds expectations

By Charlotte Jones and Debby Ratemann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

The turnout was overwhelming. More people toured the exhibit area the first hour than were expected all day. Julia Muller of the Student Life Office said about the first Woman's Day and Career Fair held Friday in the Student Center.

"The day has been such a success a lot of people already have asked about plans for next year," Ms. Muller said. Gov. Dan Walker and Acting SIU President Hiram Lesar issued a proclamation declaring April 26 Woman's Day. Sponsors of the Woman's Day celebration at SIU say they expect it to become an annual celebration on campus.

The registration desk reported a large turnout of high school groups and returning college age women interested in returning to school.

About 200 persons jammed into the third floor activities room to hear keynote speaker Mary Manning, associate assistant regional director of the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor in Chicago.

Ms. Manning spoke about the "Labor Market, New Jobs for Women and the Necessity for Pre-planning."

"Sheer economic necessity is forcing women to spend more and more years in the labor force. A lot of women plan to work only a few years after they are married then find they can't afford to quit," she said.

The wife's additional salary often is a must to make things go and it is important for a woman to plan a career she will enjoy," Ms. Manning said.

About 30 exhibits representing the armed services, government agencies and colleges at SIU were set up in Ballroom D.

Many of the exhibits used slide shows, monitors and other visual aids.

Woman's Day and Career Fair, aimed at older women returning to school, high school girls, civil service workers and college students, was designed to motivate women to pursue educational and vocational goals.

The afternoon session opened with a Women's Film Festival which ran from noon until 10 p.m. Films shown were: "To Be A Woman," "Women's Lib," "Gwendolyn Brooks," "What I Want To Do," "Social Change and the American Woman," "Woman's Place," "Growing Up Female" and "Three Lives."

The first flick, "To Be A Woman," was a beautifully shot color film of women in all stages of life with voiceovers of women telling what it means "to be a woman." One woman summed it up: "It's easy to be female, a little harder to be feminine, and awfully hard to be a woman."

The women in the audience, mostly high school students, enjoyed the film, but the projectionist, a young male, fell fast asleep. When the movie ended, he had to be roused by a group of giggling high school girls. He promptly fell asleep again during the second film, "Where I Want To Be," about women in medical careers.

Nine panel discussions during the afternoon gave women ample choice of what they wanted to be enlightened about. Panels included "Combining Home and Career" with Edith Spees, Tippy Bach and Marlene Scott; "Games Awareness" with Laura Brown; "Promotion" with Barbara Kirkakis, Barbara Martin, Debby Lindrud, Lee Bickett, Margaret Camarato, Geraldine Kelley and Naomi Patheal.

"What About the ERA?" was led by Vivian Ugent, Marcia Anderson and Genevieve Houghton; "In Ten Years I'll Be" and "It's Your Choice," Diane Tinsley, Rene Laventure, Yvonne Hardaway, Catherine Casey and Ginny Britton; "What's Different About Jobs Today," Mary Manning, Marge Parker and Carol Wortham; "Woman As a Person" Judy Little, Barb Dahl and Ruby Patterson.

At the end of the day a rap session, "Put It All Together," was held to discuss the day's events.

Two additional films were shown from 8 to 10 p.m.: "Growing Up Female: Six Become One" and "Three Lives."

Sponsors of the fair are Continuing Education for Women, Student Life Office and Specialized Student Services.

Brush and associates lay out the town

By Marion W. Mitchell
(Third in a series)

During the summer after the burning of the Brownsville courthouse, various cliques began to agitate for the removal of the county seat to another location. Although Brownsville was attractively situated, there were several factors which made it unsuitable for a county seat.

"The site of the town was on a level strip of ground between the Big Muddy on the south and the hills on the north. A slough runs along the foot of the hills, which is filled with backwater when the river is full. It was a beautiful site for a small town; rather contracted in width, but indefinite in length. Some of the residences were built up the side of the hill and overlooked the town."

—Newsome

The steeply sloping high hills to the north (Illinois State Route 149 now runs along their ridge) made Brownsville virtually inaccessible during rainy weather. The slough cutting across the middle of town made it difficult to travel from a major part of the residential sector into the business district. The Big Muddy was difficult to cross at this point. While the old Cairo-to-Kaskaskia trail crossed the river just east of Brownsville, it was not a particularly good ford and was not convenient to the town. Brownsville was limited as far as expansion was concerned. Although it might stretch some distance up or down the river, growth to the north and south was definitively restricted by the river and steep hills.

And, as might be expected, politics were involved. Dr. John Logan offered—free of charge—to the country a 20-acre parcel of land on his farm if the county seat would be transferred there.

If all fairness, the Logan site had much in its favor. There was a good ford across the river at that point. It was on a high hill well out of reach of any flooding likely to occur. There were extensive coal deposits nearby.

In August, 1843, an election was held to determine whether Brownsville would remain the county seat. There was some question (at least in the mind of Daniel Brush) about the ethical level of the Logan faction campaign; but there was no question about the outcome. When the ballots were counted, the village under the hill was no longer the county seat of Jackson County. The exodus from Brownsville to the new county seat—Murphysboro—began. Dr. Logan built a hotel—the Logan House—and began to sub-divide a portion of his remaining acres, thus realizing a neat profit.

Daniel Brush was indignant at what he considered the chicanery involved in the transfer of the county seat. But Brush was also a realistic businessman. He began to make preparations to move to Murphysboro. That was difficult as the Logan clique evidently conspired to keep Brush from purchasing property in the new town. Brush, however, prevailed upon a friend to bid in a lot for him and the next spring found the Brush family comfortably ensconced in one of the first homes built in Murphysboro. By April, 1844, Brush and a former Brownsville neighbor, Mr. John M. Hanson, had formed a partnership and opened the first store in the new county seat town.

Brownsville quickly withered away. By 1853, Richard Worthen owned all the land where the deserted buildings of the town stood. He burned all the buildings for which he had no use and began to farm the land. Cornfields obliterated the gridiron of streets. A branch of the ICRR now runs where once Court Street ran. Broken glass, pieces of pottery, a few brick foundations, some rusted hardware are all that is left of Brownsville. The cemetery, well up the hill and hidden in a dense woods, was declared a State Historic Site in 1973. The Brownsville Cemetery is the last resting place of many Southern Illinois pioneers; including Conrad Will. Conrad (pronounced Coon-Rod) Will, a member of the first state legislature and "Father of Jackson County", is the individual for whom Will County is named.

Murphysboro grew and prospered. Brush and Hanson moved into a new store building early in 1845 as their business expanded. James Green, too, was in the Murphysboro area:

"I had some knowledge as a carpenter and I worked regular, building houses back in the country. I helped build the first store in Murphysboro."

—Green

The years 1844-1852 were years of financial success for Brush. In 1846, 1847 and 1848, Brush and Hanson sent Broadhorns (flatboats) full of produce from Murphysboro to New Orleans; each year brought a better profit for the partners. By 1848, Brush and Hanson concluded that their business had progressed to a point where each could do well independently. The firm of Brush & Hanson was subsequently dissolved with, evidently, no hard feelings. Each former partner maintained a high regard for the other throughout their lives.

Tragedy struck the Brush family during this same period. In the winter of 1847-48, Brush's son, Rowland, succumbed to scarlet fever; one of many victims who died during the epidemic that besieged Murphysboro that year.

During the spring and early summer of 1849, cholera enveloped the whole Mississippi valley. Shortly after another profitable flatboat expedition to New Orleans, Daniel lost his younger brother, James, to the fearsome killer. Daniel was left with the task of settling James' estate.

Other business ventures were not so successful. The Brush sawmills in Alexander county were operating in the deficit column during this period. So it was that by the late 1840s and early 1850s, Daniel Brush found it necessary to regroup his assets and venture into other fields. He liquidated his Alexander County holdings with the exception of a steam-powered rig which he eventually moved to Carbondale. Brush was ready for something more.

But the late 1840s, Green had returned to his old home. In 1848, Green's mother died and, later that same year, he was married.

"I worked around Murphysboro until 1848. When I moved back to the old home in Carbondale, time was very easy for me. I worked around among the newcomers, maybe a few days a month. The woods were full of hogs. All I had to do was buy one and turn it loose in the woods with a registered mark on his ear. This entitled me to kill all the meat that I needed."

—Green

In the spring of 1852, the coming of the Illinois Central Rail Road to Jackson county gave Daniel Brush the opportunity for which he had been searching. Here was the chance that offered not only the promise of financial advancement, but also the opportunity to put some distance between himself and the Logan faction.

"In the summer of 1852 the line of the Illinois Central Railroad was permanently located through this county. I was then residing in Murphysboro, the county seat, and had previously determined that as soon as the road was established I would remove to some point on it which offered a reasonable prospect of doing remunerative business. Knowing that persons seemingly connected with the railroad company had purchased land near the present stations of DeSoto and Makanda, thus indicating a design to develop towns at these points, I desired to find an intermediate site, where I could secure sufficient land and, if possible, induce the Company to put in a switch and make a stopping place, or at least a flag station."

—Brush

In August, Brush and Asgill Conner commenced their search for the right place. After riding their horses to the small farm of John Brewster, they were compelled to leave their mounts and:

"...pick our way as best we could through a dense mass of vines, briars, and tangled underbrush until we found the line of road—a path along which was cleared of the luxuriant growth—and by the grade stakes, we could see the line of survey as well as the profile of the road, and by following the line and carefully noting the numbers of the stakes, we discovered that for about one mile through parts of sections 16 and 21 of T9s R1w the roadbed would be level, without much excavation or filling up at any place. This level occurring in the center of an elevated and rolling scope of territory and being likewise about midway between the points that had been apparently selected as stations, and also being nearly upon a direct line from Murphysboro to Marion, the county seat of Williamson County, struck me very forcibly as the spot I was looking for."

—Brush

Brush further determined that the surrounding land could be purchased reasonably. Shortly thereafter Brush, Conner, Dr. William Richard, John Dougherty and several other individuals formed a company to acquire, survey, sub-divide and sell the land which was to become the town of Carbondale.

On November 24, 1852, the town of Carbondale was laid out. Brush, inasmuch as the town was in a coal producing area, proposed that it be named "Carbondale". His colleagues agreed upon the fitness of that name, and it was done.

They also concurred upon the two other proposals that Brush put forward: That alcoholic beverages should be forever banned from Carbondale and that the Christian faith be promoted. Written directly upon the original plat of the town are the stipulations that:

"All the right, title and interest of any person whatsoever to any lot in this town, on which he, she, or they shall hereafter sell Spirituous liquors to be used as a beverage, Shall then and thereafter be forfeited to, and become the property of the inhabitants of the Said Town for the support of Public Schools, and to that extent and for that purpose are hereby appropriated. The Lots donated to Churches as marked on this plat are not to vest in said churches until a house of worship shall be erected thereon of stone, brick, or frame. Worth at least five hundred dollars, and then to vest in fee simple in such church."

—Town Plat, Carbondale

On January 4, 1853, the first lots were sold and Carbondale was off to a flying start. Dr. Richard built the first house in Carbondale proper; a small log cabin in the vicinity of the present-day Kaleidoscope. Asgill Conner was next and soon, Daniel Brush built a small store building.

"Then the rail road came, and people flocked to Carbondale by the hundreds. The railroad brought many men in to make the cuts south of town. They used only wooden wheelbarrows and shovels. They were paid one cent for every three wheelbarrow loads. The harder they worked, the more money they made. They said that they made as high as one dollar a day."

—Green

Brush, alert for any legitimate means to acquire a share of the revenue engendered by the coming of the railroad, was successful in negotiating a contract with the ICRR for the construction of a freight house. A piece of land enclosed by what are now Washington, Monroe, Illinois and Jackson Streets had been set aside for railroad use. It was in this area that the new station was erected.

"My brother Bill moved to Carbondale, and he and I got a job hewing the sills and posts for the freight depot."

—Green

It was shortly before the depot was finished that the first fire-breathing, smoke belching monster—a locomotive—rolled into town. It was July 4, 1854. Brush and Green were both in Carbondale on that memorable day:

"We were almost finished with the depot when the first engine and some flat cars rolled across (the) Big Muddy into Carbondale."

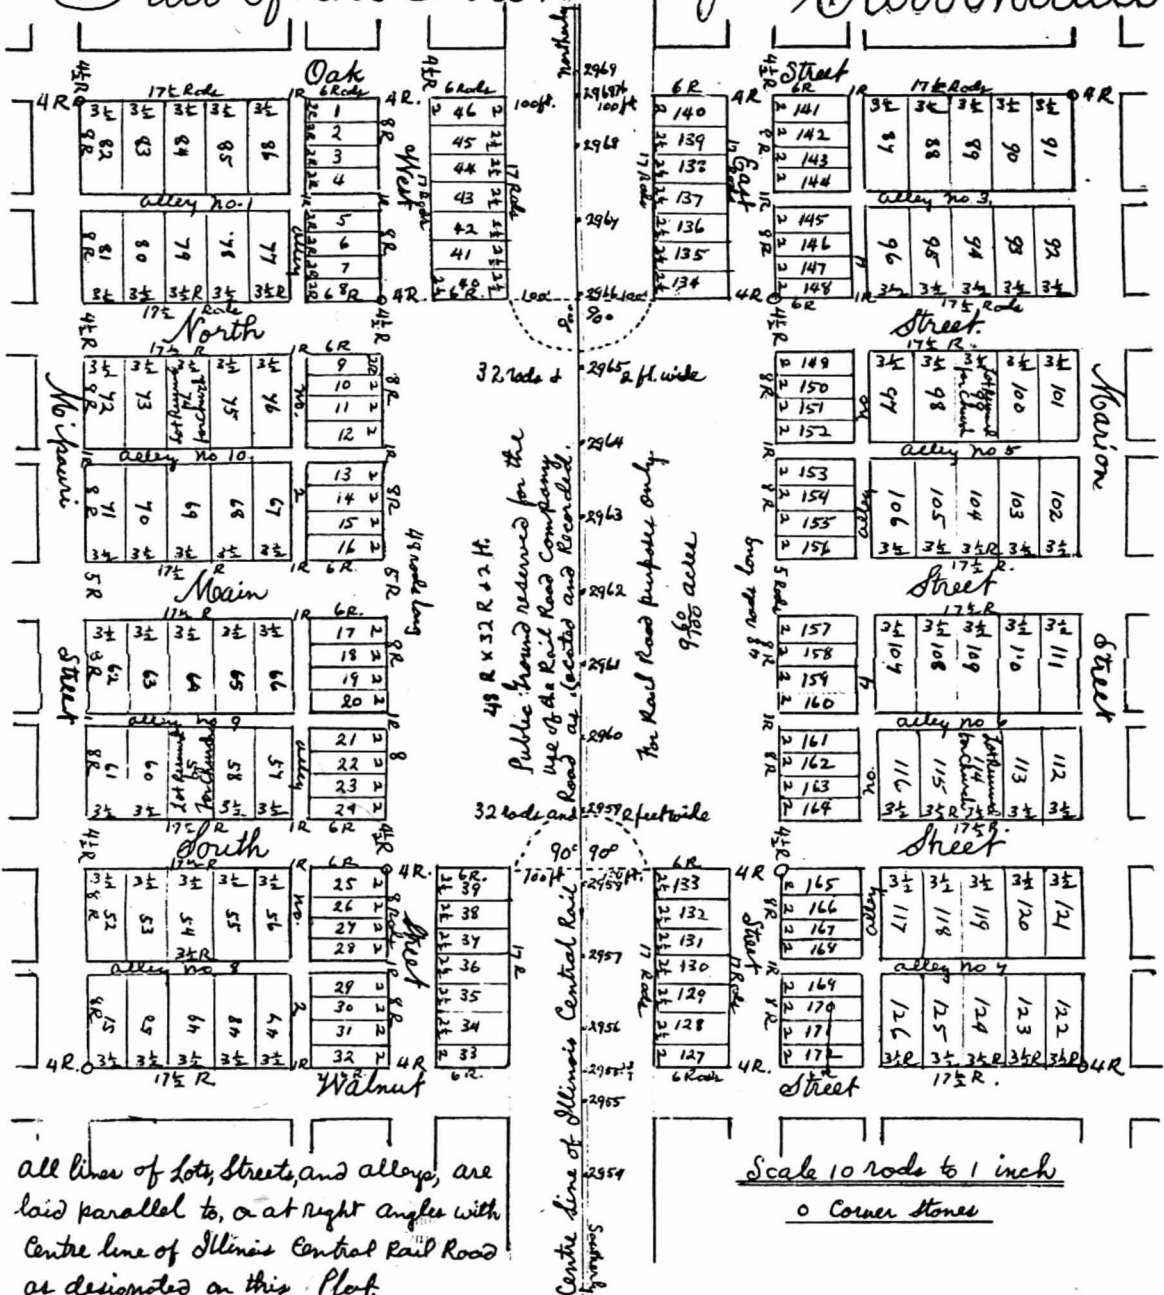

—Green

(Note: the Big Muddy River lies to the north of Carbondale.)

Brush describes the day:

"The railroad track was laid to this town from the south on July 4, 1854 and on that day the first

Plat of the Town of Carbondale

all lines of lots, streets, and alleys, are laid parallel to, or at right angles with Centre line of Illinois Central Rail Road as designated on this Plat.

All the right, title & interest of any person whatsoever to any lot in this Town, on which he, she, or they shall hereafter sell spirituous liquors to be used as a beverage, shall then and thereafter be forfeited to, and become the property of the inhabitants of the said Town for the support of Public Schools, and to that extent and for that purpose are hereby appropriated.

locomotive came up thus far. The citizens of the town and neighborhood made a free dinner and extended a general invitation. About 2,000 men, women and children came in from the surrounding country to see, most of them for the first time in their lives, a railroad and a train of cars."

—Brush
Green's recollections are somewhat more detailed:

"There were hundreds of people in town that day. Everything was free. Barrels of lemonade set around with gourd dippers hanging to the side. They had barbecued fifteen hogs, and hundreds of loaves of bread were baked in a stone oven in the hillside across the creek. That was the greatest day Carbondale ever saw during my lifetime."

County asks disaster area help

Compiled by David Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board has passed a formal resolution requesting that Jackson County be declared a disaster area for the loss of the 1974 fruit crop.

The request was drafted at the last meeting of the board April 10. But as yet, no reply has been received from the Governor's office.

According to Charles Gray, chairman of the board, he was contacted by personnel in the Governor's office who outlined procedures for applying for the designation.

Gray then contacted the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Office and the Farmers Home Administration (FHA).

The two offices pooled statistics to document the fruit crop loss and sent it to the Governor's office in Springfield.

"Then we sent it (the documentation) again with our request," Gray said.

The official request for the designation must be accompanied by documentation to be granted.

The request will be reviewed by the Governor's office and the Director of Civil Defense before being sent to Washington for final verification, Gray said.

"We're trying to speed up a fairly lengthy process," Gray said. "Even in the case of a disaster it takes a long time."

"If Jackson County is designated a disaster area," said John Hammel, county supervisor of the FHA, "loans from the FHA would be made available to fruit growers at a five per cent interest rate."

The loans would be 100 per cent repayable and would contain no forgiveness features, Hammel said.

"This loan doesn't have the $5,000 forgiveness feature or the one per cent interest rate that the flood loans had," Hammel said.

Freezing weather March 22 through 24 killed 95 to 100 per cent of the Jackson County peach crop and caused up to 50 per cent damage to the apple crop.

Union County is also requesting the disaster area designation.

Army finds 'manure power'

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press Writer

NATICK, Mass. (AP)—Army researchers said Friday they have developed a process that could turn cow manure, table scraps and trees into ethanol, a cheap auto fuel that can be blended with the gasoline in a car.

The process uses paper, trash, stable leavings—anything that's made of animal or plant fibers—and turns them into a sugar called glucose. That is fermented into ethyl alcohol, or ethanol.

Then the cheaply produced ethanol is blended with gasoline into a clean-burning fuel that will run automobiles, researchers say.

Leo Spane, manager of the pollution abatement program at the U.S. Army Laboratory here says the process is "technically feasible and practically achievable on a very large scale by 1980."

Computerized organ recital set for Sunday

Marjorie Jackson Rasche, of Carbondale, will give a dedicatory organ recital at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Orchard and Schwartz, Carbondale.

Mrs. Rasche is a graduate of the American Conservatory of Music, Chicago, and the Royal Flemish Conservatory in Antwerp, Belgium. She is the winner of numerous organist awards.

Her recital Sunday will include numbers by Bach, Buxtehude, Widor and other composers.

She will play a new digital computer organ, the first of its kind to be installed in a Carbondale church.

The new computer organ, produced by the Allen Organ Co., uses advance large scale integrated technology first developed for the Apollo Space Program. Through micro-miniature electronic circuitry and a special memory section which stores tonal information, the organ is the first musical instrument of its kind to create precise harmonic structures directly.

The recital will be followed by a reception.

The instrument itself will be dedicated at the regular morning worship service at 11 a.m.

Communications scheduled topic for conference

Communication and appreciation of others will be the main topic of the Christian Growth Conference scheduled for May 3 to 5, at the Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Carbondale, 933 W. Walnut.

The conference, according to the Rev. J. Wyatt George, pastor of the church, will be of special benefit to Bible class teachers as well as other members of the community.

The Rev. George said the conference will be led by staff members of the Educational Board of the Reformed Presbyterian Church Evangelical Synod.

For more information, contact the Rev. George at 549-0816.

No quick verdicts expected in trial of Mitchell and Stans

By Arthur Everett
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal court jury settled down to its first full day of deliberations Friday at the 10-week-old criminal conspiracy trial of former Cabinet colleagues John H. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans. No quick verdict appeared in sight.

A government source earlier had predicted a speedy verdict, but he revised his forecast without explanation and said he now expects no decision before Monday.

The jury appeared to be concentrating on the conspiracy charge, the initial count in the 15-count indictment against the former attorney general and the onetime commerce secretary.

Just before lunch the jurors asked for the second time in as many days to be refreshed by Judge Lee Gagliardi on areas of the government's conspiracy claim. Included in their request was a document addressed to President Nixon's brother, Donald, from international financier Robert L. Vesco.

The government said the memo was intended for the President but was intercepted by Mitchell and a pigeon-hole, as part of the conspiracy.

The document contained a threat by Vesco to reveal a secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign unless a Securities and Exchange Commission fraud investigation of his corporate empire was halted.

In return for the contribution, the government charges, Mitchell and Stans conspired to obstruct the SEC probe and later tried to cover up their actions by lying to the grand jury that indicted them.

On Thursday night, the jury also had asked for a limited re-reading of Gagliardi's charge as it applied to the conspiracy count. This was taken as an indication that the

Simon releases income, assets for public record

Paul Simon, Democratic candidate for Congress made his income public for the 19th consecutive year this week. His statement includes income and assets for his wife and children.

Simon's statement shows 1973 total income of $44,152.02, the largest single item from teaching. His statement of assets and liabilities as of April 15, shows a net worth of $109,864.

Simon was the first Illinois official to regularly follow the practice of releasing his income figures and was the first to require similar disclosures by members of his staff.

"I believe as strongly as the day I first held public office that we must move to require income disclosures in detail by all key elected and appointed public officials," Simon said. "We have had enough scandals in both political parties to suggest the absolute necessity of this move."

Special election to be held for Jackson County coroner

Jackson County will hold a special primary election on August 6 to nominate candidates for coroner, according to Jackson County Clerk, Delmar Ward.

The special election is necessitated by the death of Harry Flynn in January. Flynn (D) had been elected to the office in 1972 for a third term and a little more than 2 years remained in his term.

"Anytime more than one year remains in the term," Ward said, the special election is required.

Don Ragsdale, (R), DeSoto, is currently serving as coroner. He was appointed to the office by the Jackson County Board shortly after Flynn's death.

Filing dates for potential candidates are April 29 through May 6.

Ward said petitions are being circulated by candidates from both political parties.

There are no requirements for candidates to run, Ward said, but the law requires the candidates' petitions to carry a minimum of 1.5 percent of the total vote cast by the candidate's party in the last election.

Ward said this amounts to "a minimum" of 100 signatures for the Democrats and about 45 for the Republicans.

EAR worthy of consideration, becomes serious about work

By Dave Stearns
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
Let me be subjective.
(Because that's the only way I CAN be when it comes to multimedia avant-garde art).

For I don't pretend to understand or fully appreciate what went on Thursday night at the Electronics Arts Review (EAR) concert in Shryock Auditorium. But EAR is worthy of serious consideration. EAR has, for the most part, disposed of any former absurdities and weirdo-freakout pranks—now they are much more serious about what they are doing.

Some of their experiments fail, some succeed, but they apparently are sincere in their attempts at making art through the use of film, dance, Moog synthesizers and relatively new forms of composition, such as chance and improvisation.

So I will tell you a little bit about the pieces performed, bearing in mind that any structural aspects (no matter what the style or medium) may not be readily discerned on an initial exposure.

Lonny Gordon's dance, "Phrase and Fields" was a highlight, which began after Gordon invited the audience to participate in making any sounds they wished during the dance. "Tonight, you will be my orchestra," he said.

The dance was performed solo, against slide projections of abstract paintings created by Gordon. Choreographed in 1968, the dance is quite youthful—the displays of emotion are blatant and unrefined compared to Gordon's current work. His sharp, jagged movements were especially appropriate against the expressionistic paintings. We were given a gamut of feelings—reaching and grasping—desperate movements, with a fitting conclusion of cynical laughter. Gordon is a highly charged dancer—quick, well-defined and energetic.

A mock science fiction piece—but certainly not one to be passed off as a prank—was "Soup," a film by David Gregory with a score by EAR director Bryce Robbley. The opening sequence was in black and white, showing a soup canning factory, like those old Encyclopedia Britannica movies we all saw in grade school.

A mysterious can of Curly Noodle Soup then finds its way to a supermarket shelf (in cheap garish color) and is brought home by a Suzy Homemaker of some sort. Then we find that the can is a dwelling place for a curiously carnivorous bi-tenicled monster, which in an attempt to swallow up Ms. Homemaker's feet, prompts a tug-of-war between the can and the husband over the woman. Curly Noodle eventually wins by swallowing up both people.

Another interesting film was "Forests" by Peter Lewis and Frank Miller, consisting of forest shots zoomed in at one-point perspective and quickly retracting to the former perspective. In rapid succession, these zooms were a most intriguing visual teaser, aided by tight editing and excellent execution.

Robbley's best piece on the program, and probably one of his more sophisticated compositions, was "Jello for Cello and Tape." The cello part, played by James Stroud, was a fine display piece for the instrument, for it encompassed the full range of the cello's timbre—from pizzicato to rapping on the wooden body. Stroud was certainly at his best Thursday night, and during the opening sequences of the piece when the cello and tape are in stiff competition, it was a lively match. Stroud vs. Machine, you might say.

The most palatable sequences were roughly in the second half of the composition, which were relatively placid hints of imitative interaction between the tape and cello.

The remaining pieces on the program—to my mind—were inert, no valence, as Richard Farina might say. In other words, I could not relate them to my field of experience. "Focuses," a film by Frank Paine with a score by Robbley had some pretty shots of clouds—nothing offensive, but not much to dig into. "Dybbuk" by Robbley was not offensive either, but seemed to be little more than a series of timbre-exploring peaks and valleys of volume—without much unification.

What was offensive was organist Ted Pankey, who concluded the concert with Lukas Foss' Organ Etudes No. 1 and 3. Pankey and his two assistants appeared to be dressed up for Halloween—grotesque masks and all.

But the ultimate absurdity—which cheapened the concert was at the end when they threw gum off the balcony to the audience, which was an unusually large one for a School of Music concert. As for the music itself Foss is a highly regarded, nationally known composer, but I didn't enjoy his organ etudes much. The first seemed like a rather sick parody of a Bach prelude, and the third seemed to be a tasteless exercise in organ rapping.

It was an insult to Shryock's fine organ and an even grayer insult to the serious atmosphere prevailing in Thursday night's EAR concert.

Free land offered to industries

(EDITOR'S NOTE: These items were drawn from stories originally published in the Carbondale Free Press and the Southern Illinoisan.)

50 Years Ago

The Carbondale Business Men's Association purchased 55 acres of land near the city and offered to give the land to any industries willing to establish factories in the "Calling Carbondale 'The Athens of Egypt,'" the businessmen placed an advertisement in the "Illinois Journal of Commerce" offering the land to any interested industrialists.

Two persons out for a Sunday drive on a road two miles south of Carbondale were seriously wounded when passengers in a car behind them open fire for no apparent reason.

L. T. Clark and Nellie Taylor, both hospitalized for their wounds, said the car appeared out of nowhere and tried to run them off the road several times before the shooting occurred.

20 Years Ago

More than 1,000 students took part in the annual Murphysboro all school music festival, with the theme "Pages of History." Children from kindergarten through eighth grades traced the trends in popular music in the history of the U.S.

Southern Illinois business, civic and educational leaders made plans for the formation of a program to encourage development of small industry in the area.

Delyte W. Morris, SIU president, and W.W. Naumer, president of Southern Illinois Inc., worked together to determine a steering committee for the project.

Business leaders meeting in the SIU cafeteria agreed that the time had come for a program to develop industry in the area, and called for SIU to take the lead in organizing such a program.

10 Years Ago

A meeting was held in the Jackson County Court House to organize a protest against the abandonment of Illinois Central Railroad (IC) service to Murphysboro.

The Murphysboro City Council,

Chamber of Commerce and other citizen groups called the meeting to draw up a battle plan to keep the IC from rerouting to Carbondale its four daily passenger trains.

The American Playwrights Association chose for national production a play which had made its world premiere at SIU two years earlier.

Barrie Stavis, author of "Banners of Steel," traveled to SIU to get tips for the national production from student and faculty members of the original SIU production.

Archway's walkathon set Saturday morning

A walkathon is set for Saturday to raise funds for a new Archway school building.

Registration of walkers will begin at 7 a.m. at the YMCA with the walk beginning at 8 a.m.

Persons who wish to walk in the event should pick up sponsor booklets and solicit sponsors for their effort. Sponsor booklets are available at the YMCA, Bleyer's Sport Mart, Bleyer's Westown, Squire Shop Ltd., Caru's Mens' Shop, J. C. Penney's, Archway school or on Campus at the Instructional Materials Center at Washington Square.

Persons who wish to sponsor a walker should call 549-4442.

A 16-mile route has been mapped out between Carbondale and Murphysboro for the walkathon.

Archway is a school for multiple handicapped children and has grown from about 20 to 53 students. Sponsors of the non-profit organization feel the new building is necessary to continue to offer adequate education services to children with learning or behavior problems, said Mardee Thomas, coordinator of the walk.

The walkathon is among the first in a series of events scheduled to earn money for the school building.

Area citizens signed to participate in the walkathon include Paul Simon and Val Oshel, congressional candidates, State Sen. Ken Burbee and Ronald McDonald, Jamie-O the Clown and Professor Ludicrous, of Cable 7 television.

A free picnic and swim will be available to all participants at the YMCA at the end of walk.

Poetry lecture planned Monday

Eduardo Neale-Silva will deliver the Madeline Smith lecture at 8 p.m. Monday at the Morris Library Auditorium. He will speak on the South American poets, Vallejo and Neruda and their significance today.

Professor Neale-Silva was born in Chile and holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees for the University of Wisconsin, where he has taught since 1941. He has been a Guggenheim Fellow and is the author of "Horizonte humano—vida de Jose' E. Rivera" and other books. During the past decade, he has expanded his interest to include recent 20th century Spanish-American poetry.

Neale-Silva's lecture will be in English and is open free to the public.

Robert Foster and his '55 Clark Gable T-Bird

'55 T-Birds revamped

Special interest in cars 'takes backseat from stars'

By Dave Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"I didn't even know it was Clark Gable's car when I first tried to buy," Robert Foster, Chapman Trailer Park, said.

But for four years now, Foster has busied himself in his spare time (between teaching, managing a trailer court and studying for his master's degree) with restoring Gable's 1955 Thunderbird to its original condition.

Foster, who teaches sixth grade at Lewis School, said that he understands Gable bought the car new, drove it a year or two and then gave it to his niece who was attending Colorado State University. The bright red sports-car still bears a college sticker on its rear window.

"After that it was sold to Craig Elwood, a California architect who had it painted with blue corvett paint, installed a Mallory ignition and reverse chrome wheels."

"Elwood's wife used it to drive back and forth to work," Foster said.

Mrs. Elwood, incidentally, is Gloria Henry who played the mother in the old Dennis the Menace television series. She drove the Thunderbird from her home to the studio.

Foster said he knew that because her home phone number was on a card listing the alterations the Elwood's had done on the car. "I called her and she told me who she was."

Then Ernie Limpus, Limpus Realty of Carbondale, went to California to visit his father, saw the car and bought it from Elwood.

"I first saw it in 1968," Foster said, "and I tried to buy it then but Limpus didn't want to sell it."

The classic car wound up behind Bank's Ford in Murphysboro, Foster said. Then Bank's went out of business, but Limpus didn't know it and the car was left setting behind the Banks building.

"When I finally got it," Foster said, "people had stripped it. The wheels were missing, the carburetor and some of the interior parts. The blue paint had started to crumble."

Foster still has some interior work he wants to do on the car. Other than that, the car is almost exactly as it was when Clark Gable owned it.

The car still has the original 312 V-8 engine.

"I took the Mallory ignition off," he said, "because I just couldn't drive it up and down the streets here with that."

In addition to the Clark Gable '55 Thunderbird Foster has a 1931 Model A Ford Roadster and a 1926 Pontiac.

"That's the first year they made Pontiacs," he said.

In 1969 when he and his wife first came to Carbondale, Foster owned a 1926 Model T Coupe in "mint condition with the original license plates."

"We had our little girl and we needed the money so I sold it," Foster said. "The guy offered me too much money for it."

So what's Foster going to do when he finishes the interior of Gable's '55 Thunderbird?

He has two more to work on. One of which he bought from Eleanor Bushee, dental hygienist at STC, and has stored on his farm near Salem.

"I had it two or three years before I picked up this one (Gable's car)," Foster said with a grin. "It belonged to Joan Crawford."

Campus lake clean-up set

A GREAT LINEUP OF LOCAL SHOWS

Hot bat a pleasant surprise to Hoscheidt

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

As the SIU baseball team trickled back into the Arena locker room after Friday's brief workout, centerfielder John Hoscheidt said he really didn't know his team-leading batting average was all the way up to the .466 mark.

"I knew it was high," Hoscheidt said in playful disbelief, "but not that high."

Hoscheidt has consistently pumped his average higher this season. His five-for-seven showing Wednesday against Western Kentucky helped break the SIU consecutive win record. That game also pushed his personal average up over the .450 mark.

The hot bat of Hoscheidt and the many other hot Saluki sticks have put together a 27-5 overall record and also put SIU in prime contention for an invitation to the District IV baseball playoffs.

"Starting in fall practice, I knew I would have to hit to play here at SIU," Hoscheidt said. "And that's all I concentrated on. I started to hit better, but when winter came, it seemed that everything I'd learned in the fall left me.

"I always figured there was one little thing each day that I was doing wrong," Hoscheidt recalled. "But this year, when we went to Florida, it all came together."

Hoscheidt said he stayed with the style of hitting his coach Richard "Itchy" Jones had shown him. "I just stayed with it and now I'm getting hits."

And hits he is getting. His five-for-five game against Indiana State tied school records for most hits in a single game and his five runs scored tied a record set by Jones himself, when he was a player at SIU from 1957-60.

Hoscheidt's 54 hits are nine more than the team's next best batter and he leads the Salukis in RBI's (29) and triples (7). He also has two doubles, two homers and six stolen bases.

Hoscheidt said the key to his success was in the movement of his hands. "I found that I was getting caught with my hands moving back as the pitch came at me," he said. "The pitchers were able to jam me and whip the ball past me. But now I've got them going in the right direction and it's paying off."

Hoscheidt came to SIU last year as a thirdbaseman-outfielder, but he had problems with his throws from third to first and was used to back up Joe Wallis in center. He also played shortstop for the junior-varsity team.

Baseball has always been a common word in the Hoscheidt house. John's father played baseball at Notre Dame in 1948-50, and his great uncles are Gene Mauch, manager of the Montreal Expos, and Vern Hoscheidt, assistant coach with the Oakland A's.

"I thought at the beginning of this year that if the guys who hadn't played a lot last year, like Jim Locascio (now hitting .380) and myself, could hit about .300, we could be as good or even better than last year's team," Hoscheidt said. "But I never expected to hit like this."

"I don't see how they can keep us out of the district's if we beat Illinois State," Hoscheidt predicted. "I'm anxious for the Districts to start and I hope we get to host them here again this year." SIU hosted the District IV playoffs last season and seems to have an inside track on the site again this year. "I see World Series for us," Hoscheidt grinned.

As a team, the Salukis are slugging at a .347 pace and will go for consecutive wins No. 21 and 22 in a noon doubleheader Saturday against St. Louis in Abe Martin Field.

John Hoscheidt

The Billikins, 7-12, took a doubleheader from SIU-Edwardsville Thursday. The team has had several problems, many of which revolve around a freak accident to the team's two best outfielders and hitters.

George Khoury and Steve Craig, leading the team in hitting and the Bill's most competent outfielders, collided chasing a fly ball and are both out for the season. Both received concussions and required surgery.

The Salukis will throw two of its pitching aces at St. Louis, as Jones sends seniors Rob Klass (6-0) and Scott Waltemate (5-1) to the mound.

The Salukis will play two different teams in a Sunday doubleheader when they meet St. Louis at 1 p.m. and Arkansas State at 3 p.m.

Daily Egyptian Sports Bruins again favored in Stanley Cup action

CHICAGO (AP) - The Boston Bruins, with their Big Line getting back into the swing of things, have regained the favorite's role in their semifinal Stanley Cup playoff against the Chicago Black Hawks.

"It's a two-out-of-three series now and we're going back to Boston," said Bruins' Coach Bep Guidolin after his club evened the best-of-seven series at two games each Thursday night following a 5-2 victory over the Hawks.

The Big Line of Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman contributed three goals in the victory Thursday night with each member getting a score. Bobby Orr put in over 40 minutes of playing time to stifle the Hawks constantly.

It was Hodge who put the Bruins ahead to stay with a first period goal which made it 2-1 in favor of Boston. Guidolin once had toyed with the idea of benching Hodge in favor of Dave Forbes.

It was Esposito, previously stopped cold by brother Tony Esposito, the Chicago goalie, who connected on a power play goal in the second period which proved to be the winner. And it was Cashman who doomed Chicago's comeback hopes with an empty net goal in the final minute.

"I was getting tired of him stopping me every game," said Phil of brother Tony. "It's about time I beat him. This time I dropped my shoulder when I went in on him and just slid the puck along the ice. I'd shot over the net earlier and maybe he was thinking of that."

The two teams meet again Sunday night in Boston with game No. 6 scheduled in Chicago Tuesday night. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played in Boston next Thursday night.

Chicago Coach Billy Reay considered Hodge's goal, which came with seconds left in the first period as "the turning point. After that we were forced to play catch up."

Motorcross set for Sunday

A motocross motorcycle race is set for 1 p.m. Sunday at Greenbriar Raceway located on Greenbriar Road, 1 1/2 miles north of Highway 13 and about one mile west of Cartersville.

The race is being sponsored by Cyclesport, Inc., and is sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association. Riders are expected from throughout Southern Illinois and adjoining states. Admission to the motocross will be $2.

In addition to the motocross, there

Although Boston appears to be in command now that it's a three-game series with two in Boston, Phil Esposito doesn't think the home ice is that much of a factor.

"We won one game in Chicago and they won one game in Boston," said Phil. "So who's to say whether we're in a good spot. The best spot will be wherever we win the fourth game."

The Hawks, meanwhile, are concerned over the health of Stan Mikita and Dennis Hull, two of their leading scorers who didn't get a single shot on goal in Thursday's loss.

"My arms and legs felt like cement," said Mikita who also suffered a puffed lip when he got hit with a puck in the first period.

Hull suffered a muscle spasm in his back and was yanked from the game in the second period. "I've never had it before and I hope it goes away by Sunday. I was just standing there when all of a sudden it hit. I couldn't even straighten my back for a while."

Rozelle fines San Diego for drug use

NEW YORK (AP)—The San Diego Chargers, general manager Harland Svare and eight players have been fined a total of $40,000 and the individuals involved placed on probation by the

Best Midwest bowlers to appear in tournament

The best bowlers in the Midwest will be in Carbondale for the Midwest Schlitz Open bowling tournament May 4 and 5, according to Ken Friess of the Carbondale Bowl, Murdale Shopping Center.

The tournament will be played at the Carbondale Bowl beginning at 10 a.m. May 4.

The tournament is a singles' tournament which will involve three squads of bowlers bowling in five-game blocks, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, Friess said.

The Schlitz Midwest Open is essentially for members of the Midwest Open, but local people with a 180 league average or better may shoot as guest bowlers. Guest bowlers should contact Bob Allen, 1105 E. Main, West Frankfort to make arrangements to bowl.

Five hundred dollars and a trophy are offered to the first place bowler in the tournament. Cash prizes are offered for other places, Friess said.

The event will be "Strictly a scratch tournament," he said, "with the best bowlers of the Midwest."

The Midwest Open has members in 11 Midwestern states.

The Carbondale Bowl has room for several hundred spectators, Friess said, for those who wish to watch the tournament.

The tournament is sponsored by a local Schlitz distributor.

nounced. This is the first action announced by the NFL since the league strengthened its drug policies last June.

The players fined were Deacon Jones and Tim Rosovich, $3,000 each; Coy Bacon, Dave Costa and Jerry LeVias, $2,000 each, and Rick Redman, Walt Sweeney and Bob Thomas, $1,000 each. Sweeney was traded to Washington in the off-season.

The players were disciplined "for violations occurring at the training camp site and, in some cases, during the regular season as well," according to Rozelle.

Saluki netters to host young Kansas squad

The SIU tennis team will meet the Kansas Jayhawks Saturday at 2 p.m., on the University Courts. The Salukis are presently 11-9 after Thursdays loss to Tennessee, 6-3.

Mainly an underclassman team, Kansas has only two veterans on this year's squad. The Jayhawks, 20-7, are led by Carlos Goffi, 15-12, Bill Tompkins, 22-5, and Steve Mann, 21-6.

"We have a young team but I hope we can improve enough this season so we can compete for the top spot in the Big Eight Conference," said Kansas Coach Mike Howard.

SIU coach Dick LeFevre said of Saturday's match, "With losses to Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, this is our last chance to crack the Big Eight Conference."
