Directors are balking

Mager plans to reshape SIU Foundation

By Gene Charleton
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

T. Richard Mager, vice president for development and services, has embarked on a program to reshape the SIU Foundation to provide private support for University activities that can't be financed by state funds.

But some foundation directors reportedly are balking at his plans.

Among activities proposed for funding by the foundation is a $10,000 President's Development Fund for the Carbondale campus which would be used for spending not eligible or appropriate from state sources, including the buying of liquor for the president's entertainment needs, Mager said in an interview Wednesday.

He said the fund is needed for entertainment of visiting dignitaries and recruitment of potential faculty members.

Mager said he intends for the foundation "to march in the same step as the University" by supporting the administration's development plans.

The plans for reorganization and a new mission have upset some foundation board members and a number of resignations and intentions to resign have been reported among the directors. The foundation is administered by a 36-member board, 28 elected and eight ex-officio from the University administration and trustees.

Reports also have circulated among the directors that Kenneth Miller was forced to resign as executive director of the foundation because he opposed Mager's plans and requests for an incan spend state funds for travel, meals and accommodations.

Mager said the entertainment portion of the proposed fund would include money for the purchase of alcoholic beverages. He said use of state funds for such purchases would be undesirable.

"Let's face it, whether for good or bad, this is an amenity which is extended," Mager said.

A similar fund of $8,500 was made available to SIU-E President John Rendleman last year. Mager said a like amount was made available this year, and it is being shared with the Carbondale campus.

Mager said he has proposed to the Foundation that a reorganization be undertaken to give more flexibility to its operations and better serve SIU-C. He said the University has become, in effect, separate entities since the decentralization of the campuses and the foundation should change to reflect the new status of each campus.

Under Mager's proposal, the present SIU Foundation would be retained to serve the needs of the Board of interest-free loan and a car for the University's new athletic director, Douglas W. Weaver.

Mager declined to comment on Miller's resignation. He confirmed that requests had been made for a loan and a car for Weaver but said these had no relation to Miller's resignation.

The proposed President's Development Fund "will be used to get us next to people who can help us," Mager said.

Burris said he looks on the President's Development Fund as a "courtesy fund" for the use of SIU President David R. Derge. But he said a primary concern of the foundation board "was the possibly adverse publicity that establishment of such a fund might generate."

Mrs. Wham said her concern over Miller's resignation has been primarily with the actions of University officials and members of the SIU Board of Trustees.

While the rumor was circulating that Miller had been asked to resign, Mrs. Wham said "neither I nor the board was asked for our opinion."

She said she had asked both Mager

Was it forced?

Miller resignation draws concern

By Sherry Winn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Mrs. Faye Wham of Centralia, SIU Foundation president, and other foundation board members have expressed concern about persistent reports that University administrators forced Kenneth R. Miller to resign as executive director.

In addition to acknowledged dissatisfaction over the Miller resignation, concern has been expressed by foundation board members about a new role the administration has planned for the foundation.

Mrs. Wham said rumors had been circulating for several months about Miller's resignation but none of the directors seemed to know the real situation.

Several members of the board have said they believe Miller was pressured into resigning by the administration. Roland Burris of Springfield said Miller had told him "this move was not voluntary."

Miller's resignation was announced in a University news release at the Board of Trustees meeting on May 11. In the statement, Miller was quoted as saying he resigned for "personal and professional reasons."

Miller will not deny or confirm whether he was asked to resign. His only statement has been the one released by the board.

T. Richard Mager, vice-president for development and services, also declined to comment at all on Miller's resignation. Miller reports to Mager and his salary is paid through Mager's office.

No mention of Miller's resignation was ever made to the foundation board before it was announced at the trustees meeting.

Mrs. Wham said that she had asked Ivan Elliott, trustees chairman, to make the announcement or to let her do it. She related that Elliott told her that Mager would announce Miller's plans for leaving at the April 5 board meeting.

Mager did not make the announcement, she said. Mrs. Wham and several board members said they were aware that the administration had made requests of Miller with which he had refused to comply.

The requests were for the foundation to provide Douglas Weaver, the newly appointed athletic director, a convertible car and a loan to purchase a home. Another request was reported to be for $10,000 for the president of the University for expenses that state funds don't cover, such as entertainment and liquor bills for guests at SIU.

Taylor, Clarke spending under question

By Larry A. Glowacki
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Investigation into Student Government spending has revealed a series of expenditures by Student President Jon Taylor which Marianne Rosenzweig, student vice president, has called "beyond all reason."

Among the largest single amounts was more than $750 which Taylor and Bill Clarke, former administrative aid to Taylor, spent attending a week-long conference of the National Student Association (NSA)—of which SIU is not a member—in Washington, D.C., last August, according to records in the student activities office.

Disclosure of the questionable expenditures developed after complaints were voiced this week by Ms. Rosenzweig and other members of Student Government about what they consider "outrageous" misuse of student activity fees.

The funds allegedly misused last summer alone may total nearly $2,000, the records show. Records have not been fully checked for the remainder of the school year.

Other expenditures for books, films, that reportedly were never shown, luncheons, and car rentals have also been cited as questionable by Jack Baier, coordinator of student activities and alternate Student Government fiscal officer. Larry Cox, coordinator of student activities, is the regular fiscal officer. Baier acted as alternate while Cox was on vacation. Clarke is now coordinator of the Black Affairs Council.

Baier also disclosed he has attempted to collect from Taylor and Clarke some funds that he believes were mispent but that he has been unsuccessful.

In all, the Taylor administration managed to spend between $6,000 and $7,000 during summer quarter, the entire amount left over from the previous year's $33,000 Student Government budget, Baier reported.

The expenditures are questionable because the Student Senate was not in session over the summer, and all allocations of student government funds were made with Taylor's approval. Student Government funding was also in a state of turmoil because student fee allocations for the 1972-73 school year had not even been made by the beginning of fall quarter.

Taylor maintained Wednesday that the expenditures were "vital to the welfare of the student body."

A breakdown of the more questionable expenditures showed that $57.17 was paid to the Downtown Motor Inn, Springfield, for two days in July. The nature of the expenditure was not specified on the invoice voucher.

Flood plain redesigned

Zoning ordinance may be changed

By Monroe Walker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The final installment of the hearing on the proposed zoning ordinance ended Tuesday night with an indication by the Carbondale Zoning Commission that the proposed ordinance may be changed.

Allan Bennett, chairman of the zoning commission, said that the proposed zoning ordinance has already been changed in light of some of the recommendations offered at the public hearings of May 1, May 2 and May 15. "We are not under any obligation to submit the proposed ordinance as is," Bennett said. "We will probably make other changes in the text and map before submitting them to the city council.

The proposed ordinance and map must be submitted to the Carbondale

City Council for final approval within 30 days or before June 29.

Glenn Gidley, assistant city planner, pointed out during the hearing Tuesday night that the flood plain area has been redesigned so that it does not interfere with commercial and residential property as was formerly outlined in the proposed ordinance.

"We have also incorporated a restriction on construction of property within 50 feet of any designated stream," he said, adding that the proposed ordinance will prohibit property construction within 50 feet of Little Crab Orchard Creek, Crab Orchard Creek, Piles Fork Creek, Glade Creek, Drury Creek and Mud Creek.

Gidley said also that some of the area which had been previously zoned for one, two and three dwelling units has been changed to include "quadraplexes or four dwelling units."

He added that some agriculturally zoned land has been changed to accommodate rural residences and secondary businesses. Also, the University City Housing Complex at 602 E. College has been reclassified from multi-family residential to administrative offices, he said.

Nearly 50 people attended the final hearing which started at 7:30 p.m. and lasted about 45 minutes.

Merle Hickam, Carbondale Township resident on RR 4, said that the city was guilty of "forsaking the constitution" by placing zoning restrictions on the one-and-a-half mile area surrounding the city limits.

He said that it was "taxable... without representation" because the people in the mile-and-a-half area surrounding the city were not adequately represented on the Zoning Commission or the City Council.

"Why don't we have an election to see if they (people who live in the mile-and-a-half area which surrounds the city and is under the city's jurisdiction) want to be zoned," he said. "Zoning will hamper the growth and industry in and around Carbondale."

He said that the city was discriminating against the people who live in the mile-and-a-half area and suggested that the city change its direction so that it has "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

James Rayfield, director of the city's planning department, pointed out that "the state of Illinois has given Carbondale the power to zone within the mile-and-a-half area outside the city limits because that's the future of Carbondale."

Louis Freitag, 607 W. Owens, commended the Zoning Commission for undertaking the task of drafting the proposed ordinance and recommended that neighborhood residents "have some say in what kind of property a developer may construct in a neighborhood."

Freitag also recommended that Carbondale "hire better city officials who are not on the take and who do not go along with the developers."

Two SIU students accused the commission of discrimination because the proposed ordinance limits the areas where groups of students may live in the city.

"It denies the individual freedom of choice where he may live," Diane Johnson said, adding that zoning should be based on density rather than family units.

"It's clearly a tactic to limit where students may live," she said. "I suggest that the word family be changed so that rental units are zoned according to density."

She said that limiting the areas where students could reside would push the price of rental units up as well as increase the work of the city's code enforcement department.

"Codes are barely being enforced now," she said, "and when students are limited where they can live, it will get worse."

Rolf Rolnicki, SIU student, said that the proposed zoning ordinance is "discriminatory."

"The number of people in houses should be based on available square footage," he said, "not blood relations."

Sue Casey, member of the zoning commission, said that the available square footage is the criteria for zoning multi-family residences.

"It is only in the single unit dwelling that the square footage criteria will not be used," she said.

Barrett Rockman, RR 4, suggested that the commission "clearly delineate the difference between boarding house and cooperative."

"Unless we show a difference," he said, "we are discriminating against students because of their lifestyle and not because of their living arrangements."

He suggested that the commission extend the areas where groups of students may live and incorporate it into the proposed zoning ordinance.

Student fees delayed

93 groups may not get summer funds

By Bob Grupp
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A series of delays and a tight schedule for approving student activity fee allocation recommendations for the 1973-74 school year could leave 93 student groups without funds summer quarter.

The Joint Fee Allocation Board (JFAB) should finish a series of meetings Wednesday designed to recommend funding for 93 recognized student organizations, John Hardt, JFAB chairman, said. However, Hardt said that the JFAB has completed allocation recommendations for 12 of the 93 groups.

A special session of the Student Senate has been called for 3 p.m. Friday by the senate's President Pro Tempore Duncan Koch, Hardt said. The senate is scheduled to consider the JFAB's recommendations and vote on approval of the proposed funding.

When the JFAB finishes its recommendations, they will be forwarded to the senate's finance committee, Hardt said. The finance committee will review the proposed budget before it goes to the senate for approval.

The five-member finance committee is part of the larger 14-member JFAB. Hardt added that he expects finance committee changes in the allocation recommendations before the budget goes to the senate.

Friday's special senate session is the last meeting of that group for the 1972-73 school year. According to SIU Board of Trustees statutes and by-laws, the Student Senate must recommend activity fee allocations to Dean of Students George Mace.

Mace inturn reviews the fee allocation recommendations and submits them to the board for final approval before actual allocation. Hardt said earlier that the JFAB was attempting to finish its recommendations in time for the student senate to consider them, forward the proposed budget to Mace, and send it before the board of trustees at its June 5 meeting in Edwardsville.

If the senate fails to approve the recommendations, the 93 student groups requesting a chunk of the $172,000 will be left without funds at the beginning of summer quarter June 18. The senate will not meet again until fall quarter begins in September.

Mace was unavailable for comment Wednesday as to whether he would request emergency activity funds from the Board of Trustees if the senate fails to approve the proposed budget.

Student evaluation

Study to assess university goals

By Jim Cummings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Someone is actually trying to find out what the students at SIU think of their University.

Sam Long, assistant professor of government, along with 40 of his students and 12 individuals from the Illinois Public Information Research Group (IPIRG) are conducting an "SIU Goals Study" to determine student attitudes toward the University's goals, the administration and the University in general.

The study is in the form of a 27-page questionnaire which was given to 400 randomly selected students this quarter.

Long said. The students were selected from a master list much like closing your eyes and placing your finger on the page, he added.

"We want to know a series of things," Long said. "One of the major goals of the study has to do with what the students think the University should be doing and how well the University is doing it. There are 56 goals of the University listed and the students asked how important the goal is now and how important it should be."

Long, who is the "man behind the questionnaire," said that the students' rating of the present importance of a goal and what they think it should be will be compared in order to determine how well the student feels the goal is being met.

The questionnaire is divided into about four or five different parts. Besides the goals part there is a part asking the students how responsive the University is to their needs, about the impact SIU has had on their education or on them personally, about their evaluations of different parts of the University, about the excellence program and about their basic values, Long said. There is no identification of the respondents on the questionnaire, he added.

"We began thinking about it last fall and started putting it together winter quarter and were ready with it at the beginning of this quarter. We took some of the questions from the study and pretested about 250 students winter quarter to see if the questions were measuring what they were intended to measure and how well they were worked. As a result of this, we made up the final version of the questionnaire," Long said.

The pretest showed a relatively negative perception of the administration and David Derge; a warm feeling toward SIU and the faculty, Long said. He said the results of the study will probably be similar to that of the pretest.

Long said there have been no plans to present the questionnaire to the University administration but they have considered doing so with the faculty here and the faculty and students at the University of Kentucky this fall.

The results of the study will be published sometime next fall, Long said.

L.A. elects black mayor, ends Yorty's reign

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Thomas Bradley will take office July 1 as the first black mayor of Los Angeles, third largest city in the nation with nearly three million residents.

Bradley, 55, defeated incumbent Sam Yorty by nearly 100,000 votes Tuesday after a campaign in which he charged Yorty with neglecting critical problems in the city.

The mayor-elect went immediately to work Wednesday, pledging to give autologged Los Angeles an operating rapid transit system in four years.

Bradley said he saw his victory as an inspiration to young people who have lost faith in the American political system.

"I've been trying to say to them that I lived in the system, I believed in it, I thought it would work," he said.

Bradley is the son of Texas sharecroppers who came to Los Angeles 48 years ago seeking "a better life."

He said if young people "are willing to persevere, to work hard enough and to prepare hard enough, it is also possible for them to dream as I have dreamed," Bradley said.

With the vote count 99 per cent complete, Bradley ended the 12-year administration of Yorty, 63, with more than 56 per cent of the vote.

Miller resignation draws concern and Elliott for clarification but neither gave any.

"Mager just didn't come through with some things I was asking," she said.

"He said that I couldn't even call a board meeting to discuss the matter," she stated. "The dye was cast."

Mrs. Wham said she wrote to Elliott expressing her views about the situation. She said that the "whole situation had been handled poorly" and she was "upset" with the actions of Mager.

Her letter stated, "You're making enemies on campus by the way the administration is handling things."

"If this is an example of the academic excellence that they are always talking about, then I'll take something else," Mrs. Wham stated in a telephone interview.

Other members of the board said they had heard the rumors about Miller's resignation but were unable to find out exactly what had happened.

Several members have said they knew about the requests to the foundation by the administration but no answers were being given by SIU-C officials.

Since Miller's resignation, Mrs. Wham said, she has received two resignations from board members and she said she has heard that several other members are considering resigning.

"The whole staff seems to be dissolving," she said.

Miller said that he had heard several board members are resigning but he hasn't seen any letters. He didn't say if he knew the reasoning behind their decisions.

He also said that he had not consulted with the board before announcing his resignation.

Martin Van Brown, secretary of the Board of Trustees, suggested that foundations at other universities be looked at to see how they operate.

The SIU Foundation is authorized to solicit and receive gifts for the benefit of SIU and for the advancement of scientific, literary and educational purposes. The gifts are used in part for student scholarships and loans, the Rare Book Library Collection at Morris Library, and research grants.

The foundation also offers students and faculty members patent protection and royalty agreements, estate planning services and educational exhibits.

Brown said that he hadn't heard about Miller's resignation until it was announced in May.

Brown commented, however, that "no rationale was given me concerning the resignation and I was surprised he was going."

Brown said he did not know of any request to the foundation or the foundation board concerning a car for the athletic director.

"I do know that the Board of Trustees decided that it would be advantageous to the University for an automobile to be assigned to the athletic director," Brown said. He said the board decided that the assignment of the car was in the purview of the administration, and that the board did not apply any pressure to the administration for the car.

"If you are going to recruit athletes, you are going to need some kind of transportation for the athletic director," Brown said. He said this would be a logical decision for the University president to make. He said the board made its decision about the car before Weaver was hired.

Regarding Miller's work, Brown said "I think Ken Miller has done an excellent job with the tools he has to work with. He has done excellent work in developing the possibilities of the foundation participating in any possible financial returns from inventions, copyrights and research which have been done by various faculty members."

Burris echoed Brown's statement when he said, "Miller has done an excellent job. No one could ever legitimately say that Miller was incompetent. No way!"

Mrs. Wham also expressed the highest regard for the work Miller has done in the past 15 years.

"We started with $10 and we now have $10 million in the foundation."

She added that Miller "certainly wasn't let go because of budgetary problems."

Unanswered questions surrounding Miller's resignation are expected to be cleared up at the June 15 meeting of the foundation board, several directors indicated.

Aubrey Holmes of Springfield and Alice Williams of Mt. Vernon both stated "everything will come out then." The meeting will be in the SIU-C Student Center.

Taylor, Clarke spending studied

A bill from the SIU Transportation Service asked $238.53 for five cars rented by Student Government between July 28 and August 8, 1972.

According to the invoice, Taylor made three of the trips—one to Edwardsville, one to Springfield, and one to Normal which cost $102.68. The remaining trips were taken by Bill Clarke, to Edwardsville, and Gary Dickerson, to Springfield.

Another statement from the Transportation Service billed Student Government $96.74 for three vehicle rentals between August 23 and September 23.

The biggest disagreement on expenditures between Baier and Taylor arose over the Washington trip.

Baier explained that Taylor and Clarke had planned for themselves and another student to drive to Washington to attend the conference. He said he was against it from the onset, stating that the registration fee alone was $250 for each person.

But fee money was allocated to pay the registration fees and the trip was planned, Baier said.

However, Baier said he later discovered that Taylor and Clarke had flown to Washington without the third person. There they collected the $250 registration fee of the absent student and Taylor made the decision to rent a car for $102 and managed to put 300 miles on it while in the Capitol.

Taylor said that "We (he and Clarke) never had any intentions of doing anything but flying. Basically because I don't like to ride long distances in cars. I get car sick."

When they arrived at George Washington University, the conference site, they found that on-campus accommodations were unavailable and he stayed with one of his relatives about 20 blocks from campus, Taylor said. The car was needed to commute to and from the campus, he added.

When asked about the 300 miles logged on the car, Taylor said it had been rented at the airport on the other side of the city and was driven back and forth.

Upon his return Clarke argued that the two had saved students' money by flying because it was cheaper than driving.

"It should not have been allowed to occur," Baier said.

The power of the Student Government fiscal officer is limited to signing the invoice vouchers and he has no authority to stop any allocation, Baier explained.

At the time, Baier had said he couldn't stop Taylor and Clarke from making the Washington trip, "and that's what we did," Taylor said.

Taylor insisted his presence at the NSA convention was worthwhile, adding that from information gained at the conference he now has contact with every student government organization in the United States.

"It was vital to the welfare of the student body that SIU be represented there," he said.

Baier said he seriously questioned Taylor's using the $250 registration fee for something other than what it was allocated for. An opinion from the SIU Legal Office, requested by Baier, stated Taylor's action constituted a misuse of University funds.

Baier then took action to stop payment of Taylor's and Clarke's salaries until the money used for the car rental was repaid to Student Government. Baier said, however, that their paychecks were never stopped, and Taylor has yet to pay the debt.

"Taylor strongly believes he has certain powers and authority that we do not feel he has," Baier said.

Baier said there has been an on-going dispute over the authority of the student body president in allocating student activity fees.

Another major rift between Baier and Cox on one side and Taylor on the other existed last summer over Taylor's use of his $1,000 contingency fund.

The presidential contingency fund was set up primarily so that groups in need of emergency funding could receive help from the student body president. He has had complete control over the allocation of the $1,000 in this sense, Baier explained.

Baier said Taylor used his entire contingency fund in his first four months in office, spending the money on books, travel expenses, and other miscellaneous items.

"He would frequently take friends to dine in the Student Center restaurant and charge it to Student Government," Baier said.

Baier said he and Cox once did a rundown on expenditures from Taylor's contingency fund and "questioned its use" in several instances.

Taylor maintained that his expenditures were legitimate on the basis that he was conducting Student Government business at the dinners, Baier said.

Mager plans to reshape SIU Foundation

Trustees and two new foundations would be established, each to serve one of the campuses. Mager said this would give added flexibility to the use of funds for University activities on each campus.

"I need to know they are being used for the purpose for which they were given and for the benefit of this University," Mager said.

He said the foundation now has complete control over all funds, even those allocated for a specific purpose.

"I resent the foundation saying 'we should make up our mind about what you should spend your money for,'" Mager said. "If it wasn't for us, they wouldn't have the money."

This attitude in the foundation, Mager said, sometimes leads to difficulties in funding desirable projects.

"Our foundation is not marching to the same step as the University," he said.

Mager said this was evident when the foundation turned down administration requests that a car be supplied, either by lease or purchase, and a loan be made for the purchase of a house by Athletic Director Doug Weaver.

He said the foundation was asked but refused to participate in a program of short-term loans for faculty members, which included the Weaver loan. A house or car for Weaver was not needed, Mager said. He said the request was made "just to see what would happen to it."

"The amount of money involved was 'not extravagant,'" he said.

"In the case of the athletic director, the request was made to see what kind of support would be given."

The resignation of Miller, executive director of the SIU Foundation for 15 years, had no relation to the foundation's refusal to approve the car or loan for Weaver, Mager said. He would not comment further on Miller's resignation, which has been a cause of concern among foundation directors.

The weather Sunny and warmer

Thursday: Mostly sunny and warmer today with the high temperature in the upper 70's. The precipitation probability will be five per cent both today and tonight. The wind will be from the W-NW at 6-12 mph. The relative humidity will be 50 per cent.

Thursday night: Fair and a little warmer with the low around 60

Friday: Continued mostly sunny with warmer conditions. The high will be in the low to mid 80's.

Wednesday's high 73, 1 p.m., low 60, 5 a.m.

(Information supplied by SIU Geology Department weather station)

Mager said he was aware of the concern of foundation members over the development fund and the proposed reorganization, but said he was not aware of any resignations from the foundation although several resignations have been reported.

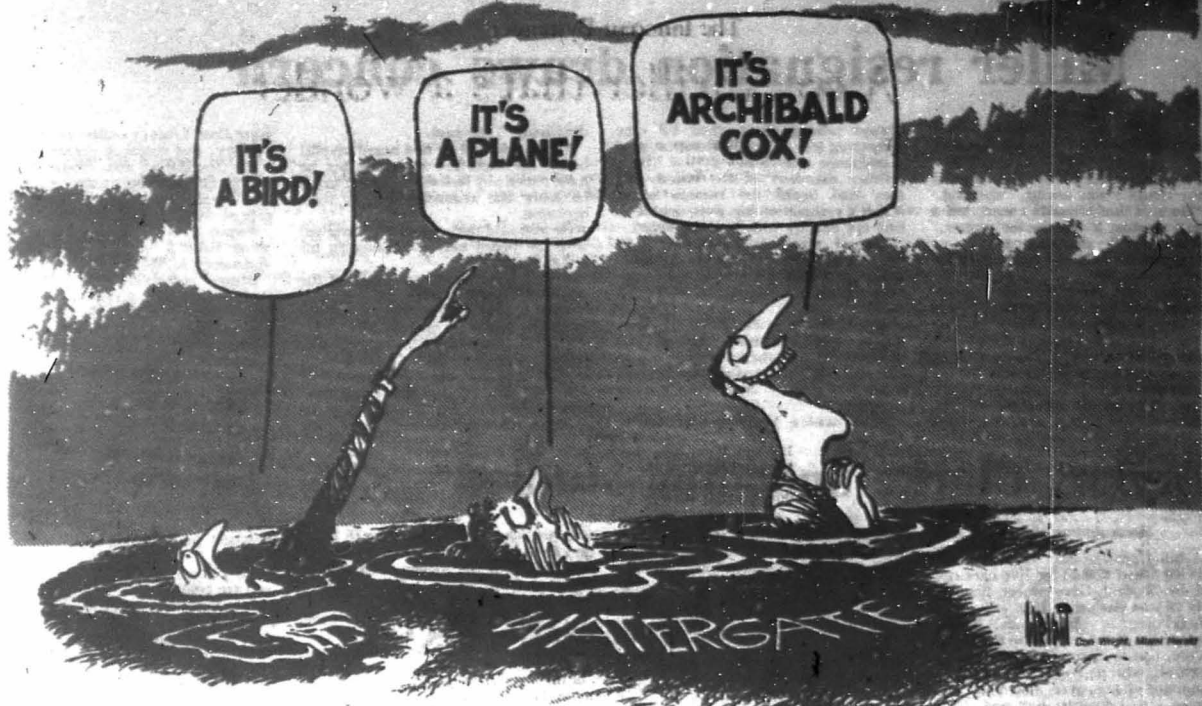

"I have sympathy with the consternation felt by board members," he said.

He described the proposed changes in foundation organization and function as "an evolutionary process," and said a certain amount of natural animosity was to be expected during such a procedure.

The function of the alumni association and the foundation "should be more than to meet twice a year and have lunch," he said. "Their purpose is to be helpful to the University."

Mager expressed dissatisfaction with the fact that during the last 15 years, only $1 million had been raised by the foundation from private donations. He said, however, this dissatisfaction had no bearing on the Miller resignation.

"I have the highest regard for him," he said.

Don Wright, Miami Herald

Editorial ERA opposition

Some things in life are not all they are cracked up to be. The Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) is an example. Purported to be an end to sex discriminatory practices in our society, the proposed amendment is in fact an end to protective legislation favorable to women.

The momentum behind the amendment that spurred it through both houses of Congress has stopped as the consequence of its acceptance have become clear. It has been ratified by 26 states, yet nine states have defeated it outright, including Illinois. Two other states, Kansas and Nebraska, are reconsidering their passage of the amendment.

Twelve more state ratifications are necessary to make the ERA an amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Well-financed lobbyists, such as Stop ERA, founded by Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., have organized to urge rejection of this mischievous amendment.

The principle argument versus adoption of the ERA is that it will abolish many legal safeguards that protect women in the family system and in the career world. Specifically, it will invalidate every law making any distinction of any kind in any respect between men and women.

The ramifications of this are costly to the privileged status of women in society today. Women may be subject to the draft; they may be liable to pay alimony in a divorce case; they may no longer choose to stay home to care for their families as child support will have to be shared equally by women and social security benefits and inheritance rights that widowed women have long enjoyed from their husband's job will be reevaluated.

The ERA also has a detrimental effect on the career woman. Such protective legislation as minimum wage laws for women; limitations on night work; limitations on heavy or hazardous work a woman may perform and the requirement that restroom facilities be provided and that maternal leave be granted will be wiped from the law books. These protective legislative measures were enacted to safeguard the health, safety and morals of women. Women will have to sacrifice these benefits if the ERA is adopted.

Further, the ERA does not require equal pay for equal work; does not require promotion of women to better jobs; does not provide day care centers; does not encourage women to run for public office nor does it make contraceptive methods readily available.

Sex discrimination in our society is largely a matter of private practice anyway, not a matter of public law. The ERA would therefore be ineffective in eliminating this inequality.

Thus, the ERA, if adopted, would only destroy the civil rights and legal benefits that women have won and create new obligations and responsibilities for them to assume. It will not extend democracy nor eliminate suffering.

On censure

To the Daily Egyptian:

This is an announcement to all those who are concerned with SIU being censured by the American Association of University Professors. A conference has been organized to analyze this situation. This conference is called, "AAUP Representatives speak on SIU Censure." This conference will take place at 7 p.m. this Thursday night in Ballroom A of the Student Center. Students and teachers now have the opportunity to find out what censure can mean to SIU. Come on Thursday night and find out for yourself.

have before an interview with the employer.

The Director of Information job will not appear on any "help wanted" newspaper ad. Nor will the personal data sheet of required talents be listed for this task since description is too vast and extensive for the size of the ad. And finally, no one will hire a person simply because the degree is in an appropriate major field the employer needs. Instead, the reason I now work in the above capacity is because I invented a job for an employer who needed abilities created from my own special background and not from a standardized test inked out by his firm.

Just one question remains: "Can everyone do this?" The answer is a concrete "yes" if you do not wait for a certain firm to advertise that special job so suit just you. Create an advocate for the employer and then you will know...who advises who.

Graduate's choice

To the Daily Egyptian:

My final academic quarter terminated winter term, 1973, so who advises me now? The Daily Egyptian reports on May 19 that Richard Grey suggests the job market, "still has a long way to go," before it can be considered good for all June grads. I shall graduate this June 8 with a major in philosophy and a minor in sociology. Should I accept his council as my new advisor?

The choice to find a job belongs to the June graduate. Do not blame the predication of Mr. Grey nor any other advisor you may receive after graduation if you cannot find a paid advocacy for your abilities. I located a job just two weeks after leaving SIU-C as the Director of Information and Public Relations for Extended Care Nursing Homes in Illinois. Many students consider this Information Director account as an "ego trip" while close associates consider this job as an opportunity with a future. My reaction is, "How do they know?" Haughty prestige nor life long security is implied in this statement about the job. Instead, a first job reveals an individual choice to exercise known potential skills of personal desire in order to select a task and not the required interest of a firm one ought to

Appreciation

To the Daily Egyptian:

On behalf of the Alexander County, Ill., community, a grateful appreciation is extended to those volunteers who unselfishly gave their time and labors to assist in the fight to save the Miller City, Ill., levee system. The willingness and good spirit you have shown in aiding all of our community is deeply appreciated.

Correction

Part of a sentence was inadvertently omitted from Randy Zeese's letter in last Saturday's Daily Egyptian. The sentence should have read, "Perhaps the SIU Board of Trustees should employ a second President for Carbondale's campus, one who will be able to meet the mental tasks-like communicating with the students-that Derge won't find the time for."

A spy thriller that's a wonder

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Scene: The studios of wonder productions. (If it's a good movie, it's a wonder!)
The Veteran producer, Sol Hepatica, cigar in mouth, is listening to his eager young writer, Fred Frisbee, who is trying to sell him a script.

Frisbee: You'll love it, chief. It's called, "Watergate!" And it's a spy thriller, see...
Sol (rubbing his hands): Good, good. I made a hundred spy thrillers in my day and they spell b-o-x o-f-i-c-e (cq)

Frisbee: Any way you spell it, chief, it's great. It's about this dedicated little band of spies, see, who go around saving the country by burglarizing psychiatrists' offices, taking down names at radical demonstrations and wire-tapping apartments of subversives. They wear red wigs the CIA gave them and Sol: Red wigs?

Frisbee: We'll shoot it in Technicolor. Now the hero's name is Jim and he's been in the business 20 years. You know, like Richard Burton in "The Spy Who Came in from the Cold."

Sol: That was a winner. So you open, as usual, with Jim getting his orders from the man on top.
Frisbee: Well, no. He gets his orders from a guy who gets his orders from the guy who gets his orders from the man on top.

Sol: That's a smart new gimmick. I think.
Frisbee: So finally Jim gets his orders for the big caper: sneak into the enemy's headquarters and plant a bug.

Sol: That's a great scene. All alone, he crawls through the air vent... Maybe I can get Hitchcock to direct.

Frisbee: Well, actually, he walks in the front door with two friends and four Cubans.

Sol: Cubans?
Frisbee: They want to save the country from Fidel Castro.

Sol: Why's he need a small army to plant a bug?
Frisbee: He's also fighting rising unemployment. But wait'll you hear this wrinkle: They cleverly take the latches of all the doors so they can get out.

Sol: Any door you can get in, you can get out. But they pull off the caper?

Frisbee: No, they get caught.
Sol: Great! I've shot it a hundred times. The enemy counter agents surround them, guns drawn...

Frisbee: No, they get caught by the janitor who calls two cops and...

Sol: Okay, so they shoot it out with the cops; bullets flying, blood spattering...

Frisbee: No, they throw up their hands because the two cops have got them surrounded. But the man on top disavows them. Vigorously.

Sol: Well, I'm glad you got something traditional in there. So they got no choice but to swallow their cyanide capsules. They'd rather die than talk. Right?

Frisbee: Well, actually, they all hire lawyers and rat on each other.

Sol (incredulously): You ever seen a spy thriller, kid?

Frisbee: And the higher-ups all begin ratting on each other. But in the end it turns out they saved the country after all, just as they intended.

Sol: From the radical subversives?
Frisbee: No, from the Democrats. Now the female lead's a middle-aged blonde named Martha and she...

Sol: No violence and now no sex. Well, it might make a one-reeler.

Frisbee: Gosh, that's great, chief. Shall I see if I can get Richard Burton?

Sol (crushing out his cigar): No, the Three Stooges.

SAN DIEGO—This is the twentieth anniversary of the announcement of the polio vaccine. A strange and paradoxical situation exists now in the United States with respect to immunization. Although the incidence of the disease has been sharply reduced, nevertheless cases continue to occur. The reasons for this are clear. So is the remedy. Why, then, do the authorities who are aware of the problem seem to be looking the other way?

From the Journal of the American Medical Association, October 1969: "Although poliomyelitis now occurs infrequently in the U.S., cases of paralytic illness occur in temporal association with administration of oral poliovirus vaccine."

From the Weekly Reports, U.S. Public Health Service Center for Disease Control, December 1972: "Although rare, the occurrence of paralytic poliomyelitis in contacts and recipients of oral poliovirus vaccine is a well-recognized phenomenon. In the ten-year period, from 1961, when it was first licensed for use in this country, through 1971, 109 vaccine-associated cases were reported. Thirty-six of these occurred in close contacts of vaccine recipients."

From the June 1972 Report of the Public Health Service Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices: "Between 1955, when IPV (inactivated poliovirus vaccine—i.e., Salk-killed virus vaccine) was introduced, and 1962, when live, attenuated vaccine (Sabin oral vaccine) became widely used, more than 400 million doses of IPV were distributed in the U.S. Primary immunization with IPV plus regular booster doses provided a high degree of protection against paralytic diseases."

The authorities are aware that the live virus vaccine is responsible for some of the cases of polio which continue to occur in the United States and in at least nine other countries from which reports are available. This tendency of the oral vaccine to cause polio is inherent because of the genetic instability of the virus strains used. They are also aware that in Sweden, where only a killed virus vaccine has been used, polio has not occurred since 1968. In the same interval in the U.S., 192 cases of polio have been reported, a difference which is significant even though the population of Sweden is twenty times smaller.

The Advisory Committee Report makes the statement that the live virus vaccine "is easier to administer and produces antibody levels like that of the natural disease." This misleads one to believe that the immunity produced by the live virus vaccine is superior to that produced by the killed virus vaccine. However, this implication is not borne out by experience. The only advantage, then, that can be claimed for the live virus vaccine is its oral administration. Since all other vaccines have to be administered by injection or scarification, and since a killed virus vaccine has been shown to produce the desired effect without the risk of the vaccine itself causing polio, we might wonder why a toll of several cases of paralysis a year and an occasional death must be paid because it is "easier to administer" polio virus vaccine orally.

Ten years ago we reported that high and lasting antibody levels to the three types of polio virus could be induced in human subjects using a vaccine made of killed virus. The prevalent dogma then stated that a living virus vaccine would be necessary for effective control of polio. In light of the Swedish evidence this position is clearly untenable. Moreover, in some areas of the world, such as Africa and Latin America, the live virus vaccine is only partially effective because of the high prevalence of intestinal viruses which interfere with the establishment of the polio virus infection necessary for the oral vaccine's immunizing effect.

Because of the prevailing "live virus vaccine dogma," in 1961 the American Medical Association recommended that physicians in this country switch to the oral vaccine. Following this advice, use of the killed virus vaccine was gradually reduced to the point where it has now been completely replaced by the oral vaccine, and is no longer either manufactured or distributed in this country.

In retrospect, this changeover was both unnecessary and ill-advised. Had the switch not been made, and had the still-needed steps been taken to immunize the remaining pockets of unvaccinated individuals, the control of polio could have been as complete today in this country as it is in Sweden.

It is not too late to change back. However, those in authority reluctant even to make the facts known to the general public much less to consider the necessary changes. Even if present policies remain unchanged, the people of this country should at least have the same freedom of choice that exists in other countries, such as Canada and France, in which both live and killed virus vaccines are available.

In the absence of any other voices, I feel a responsibility to inform the public that they can justifiably demand that, if nothing else, a killed virus vaccine at least be made available in the United States so that they can request from their physicians a vaccine which is not only effective but completely safe.

Polio cases still occur

Farm Band mixes rock with peaceful message

By Dave Stearns
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Stephen and the Farm Band combined rock music with a seldom-voiced message Monday night at the University City Cafeteria.

Promoting an expanded level of awareness, Stephen, who does not use his last name, spoke after the Farm Band's first set. "The work college students do is far below actual living. Colleges are not trying to educate human beings, but are only trying to serve the technology of the society."

"Colleges are morally decadent and teach so much relative truth that their truth is not solid. I'm trying to wake you up. There's a reality we've experienced and I want you to see how it works," Stephen said.

Two years ago, Stephen founded a 1700 acre commune in Lewis County, Tenn., which now supports 800 people. They grow their own food, build their own houses and deliver their own babies.

"We didn't stop smoking grass and we didn't cut our hair, but we have been integrated into Lewis County because the people know that we are serious and trying to make it on our own."

"We've met some nice people in Carbondale, but you think that you and the city of Carbondale are separate, and it just ain't that way. You've got to learn to co-exist with other people. This country can't go on with the split between youth and age, black people and white people and men and women. But you don't think that you can co-exist with different kinds of people, so you just want to boogie and have a good time."

Stephen told about his experience Saturday night during the heavy rainstorm when he tried to warn the police of electrical wires that had blown down in the road. The police did not take Stephen seriously; a reaction that he attributed to the irresponsible reputation of SIU students.

"Most cops clean up other peoples' messes for them, and you people are some of the messiest. The college scene is like being on welfare. The only difference is the social status, because other people have to work to support you at the level that you live. Every state has those multi-million dollar playpens," Stephen said, referring to state universities.

"Farming is not the only way to live, Stephen said, commending any sort of work that serves humanity."

"Last year's budget, which included buying the farm ($70 an acre), construction and equipment for the Farm Band averaged out to $365 per person per year. We aren't living in poverty, even though in the financial standards of the government we are living in poverty."

"There's folks starving that have more money than we do, but we aren't starving," he said.

He mentioned that the members of his commune build their houses out of wood that nobody wants, and that they have been driving a pickup truck for the past year for which they paid $1.

Besides raising sorghum, black eyed peas and sweet potatoes, the people on the farm have raised marijuana. "We believe that marijuana is a sacrament. We got busted for growing it on the farm, but the court charge is still up in the air. Our defense is on religious grounds, because how can a government legislate something that goes on in a person's mind, on a spiritual plane that the government does not believe in?" Stephen said.

Stephen is the author of two books, "Caravan," and "Monday Night Classes." Both books concern the talks that he has given concerning religion. Stephen's philosophy embraces Christianity, Buddhism and Zen.

The farm offers sanction for pregnant women who don't want their babies. "If a woman does not want her baby, we'll keep it and raise it as our own, rather than the woman having an abortion. This is 'Unborn Baby's Lib.'" And the mother can have the baby back anytime, Stephen said.

When the audience began to talk during Stephen's lecture and slide show, he scolded them, which provoked a few heckles. A majority of the audience gave him a warm ovation, and the Farm Band began their second set of high volume rock music.

The Farm Band's music was polished, tight and well rehearsed. Playing loud and lively, it was the sort of music that makes audiences want to dance. The Farm Band also has an album on Mantra Records.

During their concert tours, the band rides in a bus that is equipped with kitchen facilities. Instead of sleeping in Holiday Inns like most rock bands, they camp in tents. The band tours with a crew of 47, not to mention their 21 children.

The reasons the Farm Band never charges money for their concerts perhaps can be summed up by the banner on their bus, "We're out to save the world."

Watergate coverage 'favored'

Response has been favorable to the coverage of Watergate by WSIU-TV, according to David Rochelle, assistant to director of the WSIU Broadcasting Service.

"We've received about a half dozen calls and about a dozen letters from viewers who were all in favor of us covering the hearings," Rochelle said.

Rochelle also said that the letters and calls were from viewers in Southern Illinois, not from students themselves. "Students don't watch WSIU-TV," he said.

WSIU-TV will continue to carry taped coverage of the Watergate hearings at night for the next two weeks, Rochelle said.

Summer Theatre undergoes name, production changes

By Kathie Pratt

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Summer productions in the University Theater have undergone a number of changes this year beginning with a name change.

Previously referred to as Summer Theater, the productions now come under the heading, Summer Playhouse. Where in past summers six plays or musicals were presented, this summer the number of shows has been reduced to four, not including a children's play.

A cut in finances is cited as the reason for the reduction in shows presented. Jo Mack, publicity director for Summer Playhouse, said "everybody in the University has been asked to cut expenses." She added that the summer theater cannot hold its own weight in terms of box office receipts and with an additional cut in funding, the number of shows had to be reduced.

Whereas in the past summer productions hosted two separate companies—one dramatic and one musical—this year the music and theater departments have merged to produce a one-company concept.

While the University does not subsidize the entire cost of productions, the summer shows do receive financial aid in the form of scholarships, tuition waivers and stipends for students in the company. In addition the University will make up any deficit that exists at the end of the season that box office receipts cannot cover, Ms. Mack said.

"We thought it would not be possible to have one company to handle three plays and three musicals," Ms. Mack said.

The summer season will include two plays, "Wait Until Dark" and "The Tavern" and two musicals, "Oliver" and "Promises, Promises."

Directed by Elin Stewart Harrison, associate professor of theater, "Wait Until Dark" is a mystery drama about a blind girl's terrifying experience with three killers, and will be presented July 8, 7 and 8.

With a chorus of boys from Caruthers High School in Murphysboro, "Oliver," the musical story of Oliver Twist, will be presented July 13, 14, 15, 20, 21 and 22. Darwin Rein Payne, associate professor of theater, will direct this production.

George M. Cohan's comedy, "The Tavern," will be presented July 27, 28 and 29 under the direction of Christian H. Moe, associate professor of theater.

The recent Broadway hit, "Promises, Promises," directed by Lonny Gordon, assistant professor of theater and women's physical education, will wrap up the summer season. Based on the motion picture, "The Apartment," this musical will be presented August 3, 4, 5, 10 and 11.

The company for the summer includes approximately 48 students working in either the production end or in the actual performing. The performing company has 20 members including six SIU students: Lewis Bolton, Nancy Callahan, Michael Dixon, Gary Golbart, Malcolm Rothman and Lauree Baker.

Auditions for the company were held at SIU and at the Southeastern Theater Conference in Pensacola, Florida. Most of the members are students and will receive 12 hours credit for participation.

William T. Felts, assistant to the dean in the College of Communications and acting coordinator of the Summer Playhouse, explained that the company is popular among students because in addition to course credit they can receive professional training.

Felts said that 27 students will be receiving scholarships and an undetermined number will receive tuition waivers. Stipends of $200 will also be given out to some students to cover room and board expenses.

In addition to the company, 19 music students will make up an orchestra that will provide accompaniment to the productions.

Mike Hanes, associate music director for the playhouse and percussion instructor at SIU, said that applicants for the orchestra were selected from auditions and participants will receive 2 hours credit for each show in addition to a $10 stipend per performance.

Mary Elaine Wallace, associate professor of music, will be the director of musical productions for the Summer Playhouse. Archibald McLeod, chairman of the department of theater, will be the director of dramatic productions and Lonny Gordon will choreograph the dance numbers.

All plays will be presented in the University Theater. There will also be a children's play, "The Dancing Donkey," presented in the Laboratory Theater July 17, 18, 24, 25 and 31 and August 1, 7 and 8.

Individual tickets for plays or musicals priced at $1.75 for SIU students will go on sale June 20. General admission tickets for plays are $2.25 and $2.75 for musicals.

Season tickets are available from the University Theater box office and are priced at $5 for students and $8 for general admission.

Ticket reservations may be made in person at the University Theater box office or at the Central Ticket Office in the Student Center.

Honor soloists to perform Friday night

Being chosen to perform in a School of Music Concerto Concert is an honor and a recognition of musical excellence. Richard Strawn, conductor of the concert, said

The soloists performing in this year's Concerto Concert, which will be held at 8 p.m. Friday in Shryock Auditorium, were chosen by audition, and their performances will be accompanied by the SIU Orchestra.

Beethoven's first and second piano concertos are on the program. Only the "Allegro con brio" movements from each concerto will be performed, with pianist Ronald Hill on "Concerto No. 1" and pianist Bruce Sternfeld on "Concerto No. 2."

Strawn described these concertos as monument of Beethoven's style, which is characterized close musical dialogue between the solo piano and the orchestra.

"Concerto for Trumpet and Orchestra" is a piece on the program by Hummel, who was a contemporary of Beethoven. Wayne Miller will play solo trumpet.

Two pieces by Richard Strauss will be performed. "Concerto No. 1 for Horn" will feature Soloist James Betts and "September" for "Four Last Songs" will feature soprano Vicki Mayo.

Ms. Mayo will also sing "Hear Ye, Israel" form Felix Medelshon's oratorio "Elijah," and soprano Mona Irey will sing Mozart's "Vorrei Spiegarti, Oh Dio."
Admission is free.

Art student to exhibit pottery

By Bill O'Brien
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

April Fecher is in real good shapes.

That's right—"shapes"—such as the shapes of water pitchers, wine goblets, tea cups and even a beer stein.

Ms. Fecher literally "throws" her shapes together on her potter's wheel, a revolving disk used by, curiously enough, "potters," that group of artists who contribute shiny ceramic objects to both the practical and aesthetic worlds.

Ms. Fecher, sophomore in the School of Art, will open an exhibit of her pottery, which is all stoneware, at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Wesley Foundation Gallery, 316 S. Illinois. The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

"Pottery is much more satisfying than other art which is more limiting to being creative," Ms. Fecher said in discussing her reasons for taking up pottery. "What I'm after is to do many new things with clay."

Ms. Fecher brings solid evidence of her creative abilities to the art show. Some jar lids have elaborate multiple handles while wine glasses are elegant in their simplicity. One object is actually three pieces, each separately and painstakingly shaped, then cemented together into a harmonious whole.

Ms. Fecher's stoneware have compact, opaque and colored bodies. All the works are glazed with a non-lead mixture, making them safe to use on the dining table.

The simple clay, Ms. Fecher explained, is moistened, and then shaped on the potter's wheel to produce the cylindrical vessels with walls of even thickness. After shaping and trimming, the ceramic ware can be ornamented by incised, stamped or impressed designs, by clay inlays, or by relief modeling on the clay surface.

After drying, a piece is ready for the kiln or baking oven. Baking sometimes lasts as long as two or three days, Ms. Fecher said. Heat required for stoneware is between 1200 and 1350 degrees centigrade.

Glaze is applied to the clay surface and fused with it by firing. Glaze serves to smoothe and especially to decorate, and is used to impart attractive color to such nonporous surfaces as stoneware and porcelain. Colored glazes are made possible by the use of metallic oxides such as iron, copper and manganese.

The exhibit is free and open to the public.

This stoneware teapot, made by April Fecher, sophomore, ceramics, is part of an exhibit of pottery, cups, pitchers, goblets and bowls being displayed at the Wesley Gallery. The exhibit opens at 8 p.m. Thursday and runs through June 8 (Photo by Dennis Makes).

McDonald's art shows may become extinct

By Kathie Pratt
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Sunday may mark the last art exhibit held at McDonald's on Illinois Avenue. Larry Clark, senior majoring in art, explained that the exhibits at McDonald's which began six months ago may be extinct unless someone is willing to take over the job of coordinating the shows.

"McDonald's is the only business in Carbondale that has contacted the art department about using their facilities," Clark said.

"I thought it would be interesting to use McDonald's as an exhibit hall because there aren't too many places to exhibit around here that are not art oriented."

Clark volunteered his services for coordinating the shows but did not find art students or instructors very interested in exhibiting at McDonald's. "I talked to instructors about this and asked them to suggest names of students," he said. "Most of the time they forgot about it."

Clark added that he believes many students prefer an informal art showing but sometimes do not have enough material for a one-man show. He said that existing galleries have stringent regulations regarding showings and many students do not meet their qualifications.

The facilities at McDonald's can accommodate many types of art, from painting and photography to work of design students, he said.

"The manager at McDonald's has been more than cooperative and eager to have these showings, but students are in danger of losing this exhibit space unless someone is interested in taking over this job."

Clark said. Clark will be graduating in June and will not be able to coordinate future shows.

Anyone interested in coordinating exhibits at McDonald's should contact the manager, Clark said.

There will be a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday at McDonald's for the opening of the exhibit. Works of approximately 30 students will be on display and several paintings will be available for purchase. The exhibit will continue for at least a week and possibly through the summer, Clark said.

Fred Bredehorn, SIU pre-med student has received permission from the School of Music to teach a bagpipe class in the fall. Bredehorn learned to play the bagpipes 10 years ago while attending Northwestern Military Academy in Lake Geneva, Wis.

SIU will offer course in bagpipes fall quarter

The skirling sound of bagpipes will be heard on campus starting in September. Fred Bredehorn, an ex-Navy man who enrolled at SIU as a pre-med student last January, has received approval from the School of Music to offer a class in the bagpipes. Bredehorn may play the bagpipes in the University's Marching Salukis field band next fall.

Bredehorn, 6-foot-3, 228-pounder, from Forest Park, said he learned to play the pipes about 10 years ago when he was attending Northwestern Military Academy in Lake Geneva, Wis.

"Pipe bands aren't unusual," he said. "The Academy had one. Iowa State has an all-girl bagpipe band and the Air Force Academy has a band. Of course Edinburgh University in Scotland has a famous one."

Bredehorn kept up his interest in bagpiping as a student at Concordia College in Minnesota, Northwestern and Triton College. He also plays the saxophone.

"You don't have to be able to read music to play the bagpipe, but it helps," he said. "You don't even have to own a set of pipes, for bagpiping can be learned on a small 'chanter.'" A chanter is the reed of the bagpipe.

He doesn't plan to require his students to buy a set of pipes, which are "pretty expensive," ranging from $70 to $2,000. All are imported, although they may be ordered through a Chicago firm, he said. The "chanter," on the other hand may be purchased for approximately $20.

The class Bredehorn proposes to teach will be offered as a section of the woodwinds course (Music 365C), directed by Jervis Underwood, associate professor in charge of woodwind instruction. One hour of academic credit may be earned. Students interested in the bagpipe class should pre-register early, Bredehorn said.

IPIRG survey reveals increase in food prices

By Marcia Ballard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Food prices in Carbondale have risen 7.4 per cent since December 1972, according to the latest survey conducted by the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG).

The survey of seven major supermarkets on May 24 showed prices rose eight times faster in the past six months than they did throughout all of 1972. Since April 1, the overall price increase was two per cent.

IPIRG surveyed about 34 commonly purchased items which are available at all the stores and compared the findings with the results of previous IPIRG surveys of identical items. The items were divided into seven categories, including dairy products, baking goods, beverages, canned goods, household type items, "miscellaneous" products and meat and poultry.

IPIRG found meat and poultry prices have risen 24.4 since December. That index had shown only a 5.3 per cent increase during all of 1972.

The seven stores surveyed and their rankings, from least to most expensive, are National, Penney's Food Mart, A&P Food Store, Kroger's, IGA in the Lewis Park Mall, IGA on West Main and Kelley's Big Star.

Overall per cent changes for each of the stores were IGA West Main, 5.1 per cent; Kelley's, 6.2 per cent; National, 6.5 per cent; IGA Lewis Park, 7.5 per cent; Penney's, 8.3 per cent; A&P, 8.8 per cent and Kroger's, 8.8 per cent.

Since December, dairy products rose an average of 4 per cent; baking goods, 7.3 per cent; beverages, 5.3 per cent and miscellaneous, 1.4 per cent. Miscellaneous includes such items as catsup, crackers, salad dressing, peanut butter and several other dissimilar items.

Canned goods have risen 3.9 per cent in the past six months and household goods recorded a 3.1 per cent increase.

IPIRG has discovered patterns among several stores since it began surveying. Kelley's was found to be the store that increased its prices at the lowest rate. There is also a trend toward a narrowing range between the least and most expensive stores, the survey shows.

Kelley's has been the most expensive in all four IPIRG surveys. Since October 1971 however, the percentage difference in prices between Kelley's and the least expensive store has narrowed 1.4 per cent. The difference is now 7.5 per cent between the least and most expensive.

Conference to discuss censure

The Committee to Defend the Right to Speak (CDRS) will sponsor a conference entitled, "American Association of University Professors (AAUP) Speak on SIU Censure" at 7 p.m., Thursday in Ballroom A of the Student Center.

CDRS Vice-President Peter Paluch announced that AAUP representatives Charles G. Stalop, associate professor of economics, and Robert B. Harrell, associate professor of English and president of the local AAUP chapter, will discuss the implications of SIU being academically censured for dismissing Doug Allen, assistant professor of philosophy.

Faculty and students are invited to attend. There is no admission charge. A question-and-answer period will follow the speakers' presentation.

YMCA to offer swim lessons

A "Learn to Swim" campaign is being aimed at Murphysboro boys and girls by the Jackson County YMCA and the Murphysboro Junior Women's Club.

Sessions will be held daily from June 5 to June 9 to improve the water-skills of children in grades one through six who cannot swim at least 10 feet. Four 45-minute classes, each with a maximum enrollment of 40 children, will be held each day.

Total cost of the five lessons in the series will be $1. The $1 fee may be applied toward regular swimming lessons at the Jackson County YMCA.

The lessons will be held at Riverside Pool, 23rd and Commercial Streets, Murphysboro. Children may register at the pool from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

Textbook return hours released

The office hours for spring term textbook return have been announced by A.A. Logue, manager of the Textbook Rental Service.

The hours for textbook return will be from 8 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday and from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through June 7.

On June 8, the office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on June 9, the hours will be 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

The deadline for the return of all books is 12 noon on June 9. A penalty of $1 per book will be assessed for all books returned after the deadline.

The Textbook Rental service will begin to check out textbooks for summer term at 8 a.m., June 18. The service will remain open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through June 22.

Correction

Because of incorrect information supplied by Jackson County Sheriff's office, Daniel W. Wiggins was listed in the May 25 Daily Egyptian as one of 23 persons indicted by a federal grand jury who had been released on bond.

Wiggins was arrested on May 4 in a raid led by Illinois Bureau of Investigation as a material witness and was released. He was not involved in the federal indictments.

Indian mounds 'offer clue' to past civilized culture

A walk through Cahokia State Park, a trip to the Kinkaid Mounds, or even a road stop on Route 3 near Chester will give Southern Illinois residents and tourists a picture of past residents of the area.

A long time ago, Indians of the Hopewell and Mississippian cultures began digging baskets full of dirt to specific locations in their villages. The gradual buildup of dirt has materialized into a series of Indian Mounds, still visible today in these Southern Illinois locations.

Jon Muller, archaeologist and associate professor of anthropology, said Wednesday that only a very small percentage of these mounds still exist. Muller spoke Wednesday at the Lunch and Learn presentation in the Student Center.

Hopewell Indians inhabited the area between 500 B.C. and 500 A.D., Muller explained. Many of their mounds were built in the Illinois River bottoms as burial grounds for tribe officials, Muller said. The Hopewellian mounds are usually conical in shape and not more than four or five feet high and 40 feet across, he added.

"Fancy earth workings," copper ponded sheaths, decorative smoking pipes and skeletons of the long-ago Illinois dwellers have been found in these mounds, Muller said.

"Mink's Mound, located near Cahokia, is the largest mound in the United States," Muller said. This flat-topped structure built by the Mississippian Indians around 1200 A.D. "is almost 100 feet high and 10 acres across at the base," he added.

The size of the structures indicates to archaeologists that the civilizations of both cultures were fairly well advanced.

"These are not simple savages," Muller explained. At one particular burial mound, two young men and 30 young women were killed as a sacrifice to the dead tribe official.

"When a culture has enough people to have mass sacrifices of its population, you have some type of civilization existing," Muller said. Anthropologists have estimated that as many as 15,000 people may have lived in some villages during the mound building period, he added.

"At the peak of population, some researchers have even estimated that as many as 60,000 Indians may have lived at certain sites."

Through a series of slides, Muller indicated the imprints of building foundations of these past villages in current soil pictures. Dark rings appeared where structures had been built by the Indian villagers, he said.

Indian mounds are not singular to Illinois, however. Tennessee, Ohio and Alabama have a series of mounds built by other Indian cultures, Muller said.

Mounds built by the Mississippian culture, which inhabited Southern Illinois around 1200 A.D., are much larger than Hopewell mounds, he added.

Kinkaid Mounds located near the border between Pope and Massac Counties in the southeast corner of Illinois, show signs of a large village. Soil deposits indicate the one-time existence of a fortification around a village area, Muller said.

Anthropology and archaeology students who work in the "dig" at the SIU Field School, located near the Kinkaid Mounds, are in the process of sifting through the dirt to recover information about the residents of that area, Muller said.

"Archaeological sites of this type are very unique," Muller explained. "One site can represent the only dwelling place of one particular population."

Workers at this field school are able to recover more from the area by using a flotation screening process in which the dirt from the sites are sifted through water. Many more details about what type of activities took place in certain locations within an Indian village site can be discovered in this flotation process.

"Sites have different areas," Muller said. "One area may be where Indians used to tan hides, another where they worked with flint, another where corn was ground," he added.

"We can find all sorts of burnt seeds and nutshells among the material collected from the sites," he said.

However, Muller said archaeologists use excavation as little as possible. Too many sites have been damaged and rubbed out completely by excavation—both agricultural and archaeological.

"It's like taking notes from a page in a history book when someone excavates," Muller said. "Take the notes and then burn the page from the book and all you have is a map of the page" and not the real thing anymore.

Skylab crew collects data for research

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP)—Skylab astronauts probed the earth below and the heavens above Wednesday with instruments which may help man learn more about the resources of his own planet and about the boiling surface of the sun.

Astronauts Charles Conrad Jr. and Paul J. Weitz were to aim a battery of photosensors at a swath of land extending from the Oregon coast on the Pacific Ocean to the Atlantic shores of Brazil.

The instruments gather data from both visible and invisible light bands for the study of such things as land use, the health of crops, soil salinity and mineral deposits.

The third skylab crewman, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, will operate a group of telescope cameras focused on the sun. These instruments study the natural thermonuclear fusion occurring constantly in the sun, providing what scientists called "details previously unresolved" from land-based telescopes.

The first use of the earth resource sensors focused on 25 sites at the spacecraft passed over Oregon, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and then over the Gulf of Mexico and into Central America, Colombia and Brazil.

Projects for the 27-minute sensor run included the study of clouds along the Oregon coast; a gypsum bed in New Mexico; insect infestation and soil types in the Rio Grande River Valley.

Skylab's temperatures on board leveled off Wednesday in the mid-80s, but the astronauts said they could work comfortably.

"It could be a little cooler," said Conrad, as the crew ate breakfast, "but I think everybody got a feasible night's sleep."

The astronauts slept in the small private bedrooms of the space station for the first time Tuesday night. They zipped themselves into bedroll-like restraints attached to the walls. This allowed them to sleep without floating around in weightlessness.

Alpha Zeta honorary fraternity initiated 27 new members in a ceremony Wednesday evening and held the spring banquet after the initiation. Keith Leasure, assistant provost, was the speaker. New officers installed are: Carl Sparenburg, chancellor; Anne Butsch, censor; James Lehmann, scribe; Cathy Chan, treasurer; Gary Aagesen, chronicler and Ronald Poletti, pledge guide. Dick Moran is the retiring chancellor.

Alpha Gamma Rho (AGR) and Alpha Zeta will have their final informal fellowship coffee hours for the spring term during the coming week. The AGR coffee for School of Agriculture staff and students will be held from 9:30-10:30 a.m., Tuesday in the Ag Seminar Room. Alpha Zeta will sponsor its coffee hour from 9:30-10:30 a.m., Thursday in the Seminar Room for the School of Agriculture staff and students.

The American Marketing Association (AMA) will have a pig roast June 2 at Giant City. The cost will be 50 cents for members and guests, but will be free for members that joined this quarter. M.B.A. members are also invited to attend. Persons who wish to attend the picnic may contact Haig Halebian, president of AMA or Donald James in the marketing department.

A former doctoral student in the department of chemistry, Carl Ernst, and D.W. Slocum, professor in the chemistry department, have co-authored a paper which will be published in the April Journal of Organic Chemistry. Entitled, "Proton Magnetic Resonance Effects in Trimethylsilylferrocene," the paper constituted the seventh in a series of fundamental studies of substituted ferrocenes issuing from Neckers Laboratory.

Eighty boys from the Carbondale YMCA conducted a button sale for the Pi Sigma Epsilon fraternity. The boys sold 1,000 buttons at 25 cents each with a commission of 40 per cent, and the fraternity made a profit of about $100 after expenses. The money will be used for the upcoming fraternity banquet.

James Redden and Glenn G. Gilbert, professors of linguistics, will spend next fall quarter in Germany with Fulbright grants. According to Redden, the eight-member department of linguistics has received 15 Fulbright grants, since the program was initiated.

Renovation delay hinders microscope center work

By Richard Levine
Student Writer

Several important research projects are being hampered because of delays in the planned and approved renovation of a laboratory which houses five expensive electron microscopes, Judith A. Murphy, director of the Center for Electron Microscopy, said.

The center, located in building 9018 across from the Botany greenhouse, houses $200,000 worth of microscopes. The lab is devoted to pure science research as well as research projects of a functional nature, Ms. Murphy said.

The final blueprints for the renovation have been made and approved and work was to start last year, she noted.

The cause for the delay is a lack of funds, Ms. Murphy said. She explained that the money which was originally allocated for the work was insufficient and the renovation was held up. She said she doesn't know when enough funds will be made available so the work may begin.

"With the hot summer months ahead and the lack of the approved renovation of our building, we don't have the proper air conditioning which is necessary for the instruments to function," Ms. Murphy said.

"We also don't have sinks to properly process films and we don't have the necessary safety features to operate the lab. Plus there's the fact that these valuable instruments are being irreparable damaged by the heat and humidity," she added.

(One of the projects the center is investigating, she said, is the cause of an annual economic loss of billions of dollars. It is corn stalk fungus, a disease known to many farmers in the corn belt states.

Another project being delayed is a study to determine whether buccal, or cheek cells, can be an indicator of cancer in humans, she noted.

There are two types of electron microscopes in the lab. One type is the transmission electron microscope and the other is the scanning electron microscope, she said.

"The transmission electron microscope is used to look at the inner structure of a specimen at the cellular level and the scanning electron microscope is used to look at the surface of any type of specimen," Ms. Murphy explained.

Both microscopes are used for very high magnification work up to 300,000 times actual size, she said. Other equipment is also available for use in the lab (for preparation) of specimens to be examined under the electron microscopes.

Specimens are prepared for the microscopes in several ways, she said, some of which are freeze etching, freeze drying and ultramicrotomy.

"Freeze etching is the slicing of specimens at cold temperatures and then making replicas of them to be viewed in the transmission electron microscope.

"Freeze drying is the dehydration of specimens at cold temperatures.

"Ultramicrotomy is the thin slicing of specimens to be stained with heavy metals and viewed for the inner components of the cells," she explained.

The center is not a service lab, Ms. Murphy said. "People from the University who have electron microscopy needs are trained to do their own research after the need is approved."

Not only has the renovation problem impaired the ability of the lab to operate but also has restricted its ability to train new researchers, Ms. Murphy stated.

Funding for the center is through the Office of Research and Projects, but these funds are just to run the lab. Each researcher must find his own funds to support his project, she said.

Even though the center is now in 15 departments with a total of 77 researchers using the lab facilities, she added.

Literary contest winners to receive certificates

Winners of the "East Side Story" literary contest have been announced and publication of the literary magazine setp is underway.

"East Side Story" which is an East Campus publication, comes out once a year and is comprised of short stories and poems written by east campus residents.

"The Experiment", a short story by Richard Blumenthal of Boomer I, won first place in the short story category. The second place winner was Daniel Hofman of Schneider Hall with his short story "The Succumbing of the Great American Writer". There were eight stories submitted.

Of the 50 poems entered, Richard Crooks' "On the Death of Man" took first place. Crooks also lives in Schneider Hall. Sue Zagorski of Mae Smith Hall won second place with an untitled work.

Fred Lurch from Schneider won first prize for the best photograph. There were only two photographic entries.

Randy Zeese, editor of "East Side Story" and a sophomore majoring in journalism, said that since there was such a small response to photography, we decided to drop it from the magazine. Zeese said that if there had been more photographs, they would have been published, but there seems to be little interest in that field.

From all of the entries, 15 poems and four short stories will be printed. This includes the winning entries.

First and second place winners will receive $10 and $5 gift certificates respectively, redeemable at any J.C. Penney's Store.

Home Ec class becomes popular course among men

By Eric Schuster
Student Writer

Due to societal changes of the masculine role since World War II, there is no longer a stigma against home economics for men as there once was, according to Arlene Heisler, assistant professor of family economics and management. "Our enrollment in this class is continually growing. Mrs. Heisler, who teaches "Home Ec for Men," said, "Seven years ago, when the course was first offered here, I had one section of under 100 students. This quarter, there are 172 men enrolled in seven different sections." She added that last year nearly 1,000 men enrolled in the course.

Mrs. Heisler attributed the success of her course to the shifting masculine role in the American society and the move by men from dormitory housing to off-campus housing.

The name of the course is being changed to "Fundamentals of Everyday Living" after this quarter, she said. The course is listed as Family and Economic Management 300 and is specifically for men she said.

Mrs. Heisler has been teaching full-time at SIU since 1960. Before that, she divided her time between raising two children and teaching part-time. She received her B.A. from Iowa State University and her M.A. from SIU.

Prior to receiving her master's degree, she worked for the Simplicity Dress and Pattern Company in New York in an educational and promotional capacity.

Mrs. Heisler is co-adviser for the Student Home Ec Association and is also on the Faculty Council from the College of Human Resources at SIU. In the past year, she has made several programs pertaining to Home Ec classes for WSU's "Your in Good Company."

Mrs. Heisler said she enjoys hearing from former students which include a priest, a medical student, lawyers, photographers and businessmen.

A few years ago she received praise for her work from people she did not even know. Those people were responding to an article in Parade newspaper magazine about Mrs. Heisler and her Home Ec class for men.

Mrs. Heisler said she emphasizes different aspects of the course according to the preferences of the students in each section. On the first day of class, students select their preferences from a list including food (selecting, buying, and preparing), child care, job interviews, clothing (selecting and storing), housekeeping, manners, travel and tipping. The selections are tabulated allowing Mrs. Heisler to know which areas to emphasize, she said.

Ladies' wear firm may open local plant

By Diane Michaels
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A St. Louis-based manufacturer of ladies' sportswear has decided to open a plant in Carbondale, according to a news release from the office of U.S. Rep. Kenneth J. Gray (D-Ill.).

Other sources, however, indicate that Gray's statement may have been premature and over-optimistic. The sources cited several major obstacles that must be overcome before the venture can get underway and create a significant number of new jobs and an influx of payroll dollars in the city. These obstacles were not mentioned in Gray's statement. The new plant "will employ 275 to 300 persons," the news release issued Tuesday stated. Gray's statement described the "half-million dollar" plant as 30,000 square feet in area, "ultra-modern" and air-conditioned. The manufacturing firm, Interstyle, Inc., was described in the release as "very substantial."

Temporary headquarters for Interstyle, until its new building can be constructed, will be the former P.N. Hirsch building, 200 S. University Ave. where "65 to 80 persons" will be employed, the release said.

In contrast to the optimistic tone of Gray's statement, Ray Lech, executive vice-president of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the Carbondale Business and Industrial Development Association (BIDA), expressed a guarded attitude towards the establishment of the new industry.

"Nobody will know anything for sure for another 30 days," Lech said.

Interstyle's temporary occupancy of the Hirsch building was confirmed by Lech. However, the firm can not begin any manufacturing activities at that site, he explained, unless it receives a zoning variance from the Carbondale City Council.

Interstyle must operate in temporary headquarters, Lech said, because funds to begin construction of a new plant do not exist at this time. Neither the city nor Interstyle, Inc., can afford to finance construction of the building, Lech added.

The city may be able to raise construction funds by selling industrial revenue bonds, Lech said, but even that is not certain. An investigation to determine whether the industry and city qualify for bonding is underway, Lech said.

If bonds can be legally issued and sold, Lech estimated it would take 90 days to arrange the bond issue. Plans to finance the factory's construction can be worked out while Interstyle operates in the Hirsch Building, Lech said.

Regarding the potential number of Interstyle employees, Lech said that the temporary South University Avenue plant can hold between 50 and 60 employees. It will be "open to two years," Lech said, before the firm can reach maximum employment of 275 persons.

Lech expressed confidence that the city council will grant Interstyle an exemption from the zoning ordinance to begin operating in the Hirsch building.

"I can't imagine the city not rezoning," Lech said. "Interstyle isn't going to hurt anybody by being there."

Public hearings on the zoning question are scheduled for June 5, and the question will come before the city council on June 11, Lech said.

"I assume they're just going through the formalities of holding hearings," he added.

Construction plans for the new factory are "uncertain," Tony LaMatrina, executive vice-president of Interstyle, said. No definite plans have been made for the building or for its location, LaMatrina confirmed.

The employment figures offered by Lech—50 to 60 persons in the Hirsch building and a maximum of 275 in the planned factory—were also confirmed by LaMatrina.

Interstyle, Inc. is 13 months old, LaMatrina said. The firm was established in May, 1972. Interstyle's general headquarters are in St. Louis and the design studio and showroom is in New York City, LaMatrina said.

Although the zoning question is unresolved, LaMatrina said that Interstyle will begin hiring employees for the South University Avenue location at once. Some machinery already has been moved into the Hirsch building, LaMatrina said, and more is due to arrive in about two weeks.

A plant manager and two assistant managers have been hired, LaMatrina said.

The press release issued by Gray's office praised Gray's aide, Paul Gayer, company officials and city officials for their joint efforts "that have resulted in approximately 300 new jobs for Carbondale" and "an eventual payroll of one-half to two million dollars" yearly.

Most of the credit for arranging Interstyle's location in Carbondale belongs to William J. Noonan, president of BIDA, Lech said.

R.S. Henderson and Associates, industrial consultants with whom BIDA has a one-year, $11,200 contract, provided "valuable consultation," Lech noted.

William J. Butler, vice-president of R.S. Henderson and Associates, said he was unaware of Gray's news release on Tuesday afternoon.

Carbondale's industrial development division "may play a future role in site acquisition" for the factory and help arrange financing of its construction, Lech said.

House passes legislation to give woman equal pay

By Michael Robinson
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Legislation to guarantee women pay equal to that received by men for the same work was approved, 149-0, Wednesday by the Illinois House and sent to the Senate.

Sponsored by Rep. Thomas J. Hanahan, D-McHenry, the measure would set up hearings before the state Fair Employment Practices Commission for women who believe they were victims of discrimination in pay.

Hanahan, chief spokesman in the House for the state AFL-CIO, also was a leading opponent of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to ban sex discrimination.

"It may shock some of the women's libbers that I'm sponsoring this bill," he said. "But it doesn't do any good for us to say we are for equal pay for equal work. We can put our words into action by passing this bill."

Sponsors of the ERA say that the move to ratify it is dead for this legislative session.

In the Senate, legislation to allow newsmen and television cameras inside polling places during voting hours and for the counting of ballots was approved, 34-5, and sent to the House.

Sen. Jack Walker, R-Lansing, said that, under his bill, "results would be quicker and more accurate, and it would also stop vote fraud."

"The main purpose of the bill," Walker said, "is faster dissemination of the news."

To enter a polling place, newsmen would have to be accredited by a local election board or county clerk.

Sen. Daniel Dougherty, D-Chicago, objected that "this will intimidate voters and keep people away from the polls."

"All kinds of intimidation takes place in polling places," Sen. Dawn Clark Natchez, D-Chicago, retorted. "I'm not so sure that this will make it any worse."

The Senate also approved and sent to the House a series of bills to toughen criminal laws affecting two-time offenders.

A measure sponsored by Sen. James F. Bell, R-Joliet, and approved, 34-2, provides that if a defendant in a felony case already has been convicted of another felony in the last 12 months he may not be released on his own recognizance. Recognizance bonds, under which defendants do not have to deposit money to be released, are often allowed in what judges consider low-risk cases.

"This bill will allow society to get the habitual offender off the streets," Bell declared. "It is a meaningful thrust to tip the scales of justice a little bit toward the average citizen."

Legislation sponsored by Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and approved, 31-1, would require judges to impose a sentence of at least 20 years for defendants convicted a second time of dealing in hard drugs, such as heroin.

Another Regner bill, passed 40-1, would establish a mandatory 20-year minimum sentence for a second conviction on any felony charge involving a firearm.

In other action, legislation to establish a state medical examiner system to replace county coroners fell 15 votes short of passage in the House.

Bomb threat charge dropped

A charge against Mark Levine, an SIU government instructor, for making a bomb threat has been dropped by the Jackson County State's Attorney's office for lack of evidence.

The Carbondale Police Department received a telephone call at approximately 12:40 a.m. on May 13. The caller said that a bomb would go off in 10 minutes at a concert at Thompson Point. There was no concert at Thompson Point, nor was a bomb found by police in a search at Thompson Point.

Carbondale Police said the call was traced to Levine's home phone. Levine denied making the call.

The State's Attorney's Office, in dropping the charge said that it could not be proved that Levine made the call. Levine was arrested but was not held in jail. He was released on $100 bond.

GROCERY SURVEY

PRICE CHANGES

SINCE DECEMBER 1972

This survey was compiled by the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) Consumer Research Committee on May 24 as a service to the people of the Carbondale area.

The list of items represents commonly bought products which are available at each of the stores, and is not intended to reflect a consumer's personal shopping list. The percentages in the "least to most expensive" line indicate the difference in totals between the least expensive store and the other stores in rank order.

For example, the second least expensive store is 1.3 per cent more expensive than the most expensive store. The difference between the least expensive store and the most expensive store is 6.7 per cent.

The "per cent change" figures represent a comparison between current prices and those reflected in an IPIRG survey of identical items published on December 8, 1972.

Board of Trustees member, made a motion that "both requests be granted," according to the minutes. He added his personal opinion that "the moneys so authorized should be given on a non-restrictive basis," according to the minutes.

Alice Williams, Mt. Vernon, foundation board member, expressed concern over "the possibilities of there being public negative reaction to using foundation moneys for the funds," according to the minutes.

Another board member, Russ Guin, Danville, said "he was personally aware of the sensitive nature of the requests," according to the minutes. He urged all board members "to give serious consideration to the long range results of any action." Guin also expressed "his personal concern that the publicity media might well place an incorrect interpretation on the entire matter; and, in his opinion, the University should make a major effort to avoid this situation." He concluded his remarks by asking if "the Board of Trustees were aware of the problem" as presented by Mager and John Paul Davis, legal assistant to SIU-E President John Rendleman.

According to the minutes, Ivan Elliott, Carmi, foundation board member and chairman of the Board of Trustees, said the Board of Trustees "was definitely aware of the problem." He added that in "addition to the two presidents, the Board of Trustees was also faced with the same problem of available funds for recruiting and entertaining dignitaries and potential staff."

Elliott, according to the minutes, said "other state universities, including the University of Illinois, are also faced with the same problem and their foundation is utilized for the purpose of underwriting such activities."

According to the minutes, Roland Burris, Springfield, a foundation the fund-raising potential of the foundation."

Burris suggested that "the foundation board give further consideration to the entire matter, and that other sources of support for the funds be checked out" prior to the June 15 meeting.

Foundation board member Aubrey Holmes, Springfield, according to the minutes, said "there is no question about the legitimate needs of the development funds" as expressed at the foundation board's meeting in October. He concurred with previous statements which emphasized the need to carefully consider the request for utilizing foundation resources. Holmes said "every effort should be made to protect the ultimate use of such funds in order to avoid damaging publicity at a time the University needs to strengthen its public image."

Davis and Mager, according to the minutes, expressed a "willingness to submit a written breakdown on the expenditures requested." Mager and Davis plan to submit such written proposals directly to Mrs. Wham prior to a June 15 meeting, according to the minutes.

Burris made a motion to table the request, according to the minutes. Ms. Williams seconded the motion. A motion was passed to table the matter until the June 15 meeting.

He said "one negative headline in a Chicago newspaper misinterpreting the actions of the foundation board could seriously hurt the current image of the University and perhaps weaken

S-Senate finance committee will carry on duties during summer

The Student Senate Wednesday passed a bill empowering its finance committee to function during the summer as it would during the regular school year.

Student President-elect Mike Carr suggested that the committee carry on its regular duties during the summer session, according to the bill introduced by Ron Adams, eastside dean senator. The finance committee's duties include reviewing senate appropriations and recommending allocation of student activity fees.

In other business, the senate passed a bill stating that student senators should receive academic credit for participation in Student Government.

According to the bill, letters recommending academic credit for student senators will be sent to T. Richard Mager, vice president for development and services, Willis Malone, vice president for academic affairs and campus provost, George Mace, dean of students and SIU President David Derge and his wife.

Another bill creating an ad hoc committee within the senate to study accessibility for wheelchair students on campus was passed unanimously by the senate. The committee will begin research into the area of campus facilities for handicapped students immediately and will report its findings to the senate at the beginning of fall quarter.

Gary Ferguson, west side dorm senator and sponsor of the bill, was appointed chairman of the ad hoc committee. Ferguson will appoint committee members from within the senate ranks.

The senate tabled a constitutional amendment dealing with changes in the qualifications of chairman of the Student Government Activities Council (SGAC).

Duncan Koch, president pro-temore of the senate, ruled a bill requesting a referendum on the question of allocation of student activity fees out of order. The bill suggested that a referendum be held to determine whether students favored activity fee allocation recommendations by the Joint Fee Allocation Board.

CIA blamed for coverup

By Brooks Jackson
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former White House adviser John D. Ehrlichman Wednesday blamed the Central Intelligence Agency's deputy director, Vernon Walters, for the CIA's role in the Watergate coverup.

Ehrlichman also said he can't recall asking the CIA to help E. Howard Hunt, challenging testimony by former CIA deputy Robert Cushman.

Ehrlichman, who quit as chief White House domestic adviser last April 30, testified behind closed doors to the intelligence subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He later gave newsmen a 17-page transcript of his prepared testimony.

Subcommittee Chairman John McClellan, D-Ark., said later there has been seriously conflicting testimony in his hearings. He scheduled former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman for an appearance Thursday.

Ehrlichman's statement dealt with two matters. One was the 1971 burglary by Hunt and others of Dr. Lewis Fielding, a psychiatrist who treated Pentagon Paper defendant Daniel Ellsberg. The other was an attempt to limit the FBI's investigation of last year's Watergate wiretapping.

Ehrlichman's account of the Watergate matter generally supports a statement by President Nixon last week. Nixon said he ordered Ehrlichman and Haldeman to ensure that the FBI's investigations into Watergate didn't uncover secret operations by the CIA or White House agents.

Ehrlichman said Walters and CIA Director Richard Helms met with him and Haldeman in late June, 1972. Helms and Walters said the CIA hadn't been involved in Watergate and that an FBI investigation wouldn't uncover any past CIA operations.

But Ehrlichman said Walters gave an "equivocal response" to a question about whether any ongoing CIA activities in Mexico might be uncovered. Walters was then ordered to contact acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and "give him all the facts."

Gray has testified that Walters told him to postpone FBI interviews with two men, one of them a Mexican lawyer, whose checks supplied a financial link between the Watergate wiretappers and the Nixon re-election committee.

Rabbi to take Asian tour

Rabbi Earl Vinecour, director of the Hillel Foundation, will leave Carbondale June 18 for three months to study Eastern Religions in seven Asian countries.

Rabbi Vinecour said he will go to India first to see the birthplace of Buddha. His next stop will be Nepal to visit Lamaist monasteries and then to Burma to study at various Buddhist centers. From Burma, he will go to Thailand to investigate Buddhist shrines.

"After I leave Thailand I will go to Vietnam for three weeks to study the religion of Cao-Dai," Rabbi Vinecour said. "Then I plan to go to Korea to visit some Confucian centers. I will make my last stop in Japan to visit with the Zen centers and to see Mount Fuji."

Rabbi Vinecour said he wanted to study oriental religions because he "feels a need to bring back to Carbondale some first hand experience dealing with studies which students seem to be so interested in."

Rabbi Vinecour said he would like to share his experience with "anyone who is interested." The Rabbi intends to present slides and a few movies of his trip as soon as he returns.

"I would like to start a course in comparative study between Judaism and some of the oriental religions emphasizing not only what they share but how they differ," he said.

Rabbi Vinecour added that he would eventually like to settle in Israel, after he finishes his obligations at the Hillel Foundation next year.

Poison Control Center provides vital information

By Phyllis Morach Student Writer

A mother finds her small child sitting on the bedroom floor with an open bottle of polish remover. Where should she call for help?

The Poison Control Center, part of the emergency room of Doctors Memorial Hospital, is trying to help.

The main purpose of the Poison Control Center is to provide information to individuals and physicians. Roberta Dugas, head emergency room nurse at Doctors Memorial Hospital, said.

There are two sources of information at the Poison Control Center's disposal, said Ms. Dugas. One is the Poison Control Data Graphic System and the other is a toxicology book.

The Poison Control Data Graphic System is a microfilmed collection of information about the clinical toxicology of commercial products, Ms. Dugas said.

The product name is located in a directory, which lists the card and frame number of the appropriate microfilm. Then the microfilm is selected and placed on a viewer.

The information contained in the Poison Control Data Graphic

System is updated every three months, Ms. Dugas said.

"The book on toxicology contains the same sort of information about the basic chemical content in products, but it is updated every six years."

This information enables the Poison Control Center to determine which treatment and antidotes the patient needs, Ms. Dugas added.

One of the most dramatic cases, Ms. Dugas said, was the case of an 18 month-old child brought in for emergency treatment by his parents. The parents refused to tell the nurses which drug the child had taken.

"We had to treat the child symptomatically," Ms. Dugas said. The child was put under close observation until the drug wore off.

The majority of Poison Control Center calls come from families with children, Ms. Dugas added. Some of the most common drugs taken by children are birth control pills, tranquilizers and aspirin, she noted.

"The biggest problem lies in trying to educate," Ms. Dugas said. People must learn the seriousness of the effects of drugs and household products, she emphasized. The Poison Control Center can be reached by calling 549-0721.

Anything worth selling is worth selling well. The D. E. Classifieds sell well. Well can be a deep subject. It will not do well to buck it. Weils, as a topic, will become dry if brought up too often. There is no use wailing over a dry well. Whales will not do well in dry wells. Will Wally Whale wilt? Why. Why? Why. Why? Weird, weird, weird.

Man with the clout

Moose Caluffetti strides past an offering earlier this season in action at Abe Martin Field. Caluffetti will be looked for to provide the power for the Salukis during the playoffs which get under way Thursday with the SIU-Marshall contest at 1 p.m. The Southern catcher paced the squad with seven homers and 41 RBI's during the regular season. Astros cool off Cubs

CHICAGO (AP)—Solo homers by Roger Metzger and John Edwards aided the three-hit pitching of Ken Forsch Wednesday as the Houston Astros cooled off the Chicago Cubs 4-1.

The Astros sewed up Forsch's fifth victory against five defeats by chasing Cub starter Milt Pappas, 2-4, with a two-run sixth inning.

The Cubs, losing for the second time in their last seven starts, got their only run in the first on a walk to Rick Monday, Glenn Beckert's double and an infield out.

That tied it 1-1 following Metzger's game-opening homer, his first of the season. Houston moved ahead 2-1 on Edwards' homer, his fourth, in the fifth. A single by Doug Rader and Tommy Helms' sacrifice fly delivered the final two Houston runs.

Chicago's only hits after the first were a scratch single by Don Kessinger in the second and Billy Williams' clean single in the sixth. Houston's Jimmy Wynn suffered a twisted left ankle on a play at first in the fourth and was replaced in center field by Tommie Agee.

Metzger's homer was his first this season and only the fourth of his pro career. He had two homers for Houston last season and one for Tacoma in 1970.

Edwards' No. 4 homer in the Astro fifth broke a 1-1 tie and then successive singles by Bob Watson and Lee May, launching Houston's two-run fifth, chased Pappas who has still to finish a game after 10 starts.

Bill Benham was greeted by Doug Rader's single, scoring Watson. An intentional walk to Edwards led the bases. But after Tommy Helms' sacrifice fly scored May from third, the Astros ended on Forsch's infield bunt.

Lambert signs Dunbar basketballer

SIU has announced the signing of Tommy Harris from Chicago's Dunbar High School to a basketball letter of intent.

The 6-foot, 155-pound Harris was a two-time Chicago all-city selection at Dunbar under coach Jim Foreman.

Harris averaged 28.5 points and six assists per game his senior year. He connected on 49 per cent of his field goal attempts.

"We think Tommy is the finest guard to come out of the Chicago area this year," Saluki coach Paul Lambert said. "He plays a lot bigger than most six-footers. And he plays a complete game—offensively and defensively."

Foreman said Harris owned "the quickest defensive hands" of any player he had ever coached. Harris plans to major in journalism at SIU. He is the cousin of Billy Harris, the all-time scoring leader at Northern Illinois University.

Sox, Cubs in 2-day battle for patronage

CHICAGO (AP)—The Windy City this week is experiencing a baseball party which could be topped only by an Elevated Train World Series—not beyond expectation at this stage of the season.

The Cubs, leading the National League East, and the pacesetter White Sox of the American League West, are in town simultaneously battling for patronage two successive days.

Weather permitting, the Cubs were booked to complete a series Wednesday and Thursday with the Houston Astros, while cross-town, the Pale Hose were booked the same two nights against the All-East-Leading Detroit Tigers.

Actually the pair of "double-brothers" had been scheduled to begin Tuesday, but the Tiger-Sox opener of a two-game series was postponed by rain until Thursday night.

Meanwhile, the lightless Cubs Tuesday afternoon handed a 7-1 trimming to the Astros of Leo Durocher, who quit managing the Cubs under fire last July. Then came a rainfall which caused the season's sixth washout for the Sox.

The conflict is a rarity stemming from complications in scheduling which customarily has only one team at home at a time in two-city major league cities.

Entering Wednesday's play, the Chi-Sox with 490 on a 34-14 record and the Cubs with 469 on 28-18 had the two top win-lost percentages in the majors.

It's much, much too early for any real promise of an All-Chicago World Series. But Managers Chuck Tanner of the Pale Hose and Whitey Lockman of the Cubs have the fans of both clubs scenting at least divisional pennants.

The sterling feats of Wilbur Wood, who has knock-knocked exactly half of the Chi-Sox 73 victories, and superluggers Dick Allen and Bill Melton, mainly have lured an average attendance of 17,000 for 33 home dates.

The veteran Cub lineup, adroitly piloted by Lockman in his first full managerial season, averaged 14,000 for 18 dates.

Last day for IM award nominations

Thursday is the last day to submit nominations for the 1973-74 Glenn "Abe" Martin Intramural Athlete of the Year Award.

Deadline is 5 p.m. in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, Room 128 in the SIU Arena.

Some of the criteria outlined in the nomination form includes:

- 1) The nominee must have been active in intramural activities during every year in which he has been enrolled at SIU.
- 2) The nominee must have senior standing or above.
- 3) The person making nominations must list all teams, the year and the sport in which the nominee participated.
- 4) The person nominating an individual cannot have participated on the same intramural team during the past intramural year.

Playoff time! Southern opens series

By Stan Kosinski
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

A consensus among the coaches of teams in the 1973 NCAA District 4 baseball playoffs is that pitching will be the key to a successful showing.

"In a short playoff like this, the team with the best pitching depth will certainly have the edge," SIU coach Itchy Jones said.

"Pitching will be the decisive factor in determining a playoff winner," Miami of Ohio coach Bud Middaugh said during a recent telephone interview.

Minnesota coach Dick Siebert and Marshall's Sports Information Director Chuck Rist, speaking for coach Jack Cook, voiced the same opinion.

The double-elimination tournament begins Thursday at Abe Martin Field with SIU facing Marshall at 1 p.m. The second game, beginning approximately at 3:30 p.m., will feature Minnesota against Miami of Ohio.

The first game Friday will feature Thursday's losers at 10 a.m. and the second game, both winning teams, starts a half-hour after the first one ends.

A third game will feature the winner of game No. 3 and the loser of game No. 4.

Saturday, the championship game is slated for 1 p.m. If a seventh game is necessary, it will begin a half-hour after the first is completed.

On paper the Salukis take on the favorite's role, based on percentage of wins. SIU, 35-4, has a .897 winning percentage. Miami of Ohio, 27-7, follows with a .791. Marshall is third with an 18-8 record and a .682 winning percentage. Minnesota, 26-14-2, is .643.

For the man who relies on national ratings, SIU is again the team to watch. Ranked fifth in the country, the closest team is the Gophers, ranked 11th nationally. Miami of Ohio is 15th while Marshall is not mentioned in the top twenty.

For two teams, the 1973 post-season bid is the first—Marshall and Miami.

SIU on the otherhand has made the District 4 playoffs seven times in the past eight years. Minnesota has participated nine years since 1956.

Both the Salukis and Gophers have won the playoffs three times, but unlike SIU who finished second in the nation to Southern California twice, Minnesota captured the national crown each time it won the playoffs. The first championship was in 1956 and was duplicated in 1960 and 1964.

In pitching SIU and Marshall have the No. 1 and 2 hurlers. SIU's Rick Ware sports the nation's best earned run average (ERA), 0.54. The Thundering Herd's contribution is Mark Dobooney with a 0.55 ERA. SIU is ranked tenth in the nation in pitching with a 2.09 ERA. Miami's pitching staff is ranked sixth nationally with a 1.96 ERA. Minnesota has a 3.10 team ERA which is deceptive when looking at Gophers Steve Comer, 5-1 with a 0.99 mark and Ken Herbs, 5-0, posting a 1.10 ERA.

In the batting average race, SIU, ranked tenth in the nation, has a .307 team mark. Minnesota is at .290, Ohio is .280 and Marshall is hitting .268 as a squad.

Putting all these elements together, Jones' words may sum up what should be expected in the playoffs. "I really don't think there is a favorite going into the tournament. Everybody is equal. The stats show that every club has solid hitting, pitching and defense."

Although Jones' words ring validity, another point must be considered. Miami is the only team that has recently been competitively active.

Marshall has laid off for approximately four weeks while SIU and Minnesota have rested nearly two before Thursday's contest. Minnesota's coach Siebert believes this is definitely an advantage for the Redskins.

This activity, however, puts a strain on the ballplayer physically and some SIU ballplayers believe the rest was valuable in allowing the minor injuries to heal.

Each team is out there to win. Each team has ballplayers who have achieved success throughout the season. Each team has a reliable coaching staff. Each team has a chance to win.

Only Saturday will tell the tale.

3 Salukis on district all-star team

SIU and Ohio University dominate the NCAA District Four all-star baseball team announced Wednesday by District Chairman Danny Litwhiler, Michigan State coach.

The Salukis placed three players on the ten-man first team while Ohio had two players chosen. Marshall, Miami of Ohio, Central Michigan, Eastern Michigan and Illinois had one player selected each.

Named from SIU were centerfielder Joe Wallis, shortstop Stan Mann and left-handed pitcher Rick Ware. Ohio's selections were first baseman Bob Makoskie and catcher Steve Swisher.

Rounding out the first team were second baseman Bob Pollock of Illinois, third baseman Mike Ferguson of Eastern Michigan, leftfielder Terry Lynch of Central Michigan, rightfielder Dennis Smith of Miami of Ohio and right-hander pitcher Mark Dobooney of Marshall.

Southern Illinois has two other players who were named to the District Four second team, first baseman Mike Wilbins and catcher Larry Caluffetti. Lynch was the top hitter on the all-star team with a .427 average while Smith was second with a .426 mark. Ware had the best earned-run average (.54), followed by Dobooney with a 0.55 mark.

Let the games begin

Johncock wins abbreviated Indy 500 race

By Mike Harris
Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gordon Johncock won the abbreviated, problem-plagued, death and injury marred 57th Indianapolis 500-mile auto race Wednesday under a yellow flag, beating Billy Vukovich by 20 seconds in the rain.

The race was halted in the 134th lap on the 2½-mile oval by a red flag as the rain began to pelt down heavily. It had gone to a yellow flag six laps earlier.

Swede Savage was critically injured in a flaming crash in the fourth turn during the 59th lap and a crewman died just a little over an hour later after being struck in the pits by a fire truck rushing toward the accident.

Vukovich was followed in the finishing order by Roger McCluskey in third place, Mel Kenyon in fourth and Gary Bettenhausen in fifth.

Johncock, who set the unofficial indianapolis Motor Speedway one-lap record of 159.4 miles an hour in tire testing in March, was rushed to victory lane after Chief Steward Harlan Fongler called it a race.

Fongler told the crowd of about 20,000: "Obviously we can't go on. This is a race."

The race was the shortest in the long history of the classic, begun in 1911, five laps less than Johnnie Parsons' 1950 victory.

Johncock covered 332½ miles in 2 hours, 5 minutes 26 seconds, an average speed of 159.014 miles an hour.

Johncock took his victory lap in the pace car waving to virtually empty stands.

The race originally scheduled for Monday but was postponed until Tuesday after it was washed out by rain shortly after an aborted start resulting from a multiple-car accident. David "Salt" Walther, 25, of Dayton, Ohio was seriously injured and badly burned in that accident.

Savage, whose car bounced off both the inside and outside walls in a fiery burst of action, was flown to Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis by helicopter. He suffered fractures of both legs and burns on the face, arms and his right hand.

Johncock took over the lead for good on the 72nd lap after two-time winner Al Unser, the 1972 second-place finisher, was forced to slow down by a sour engine.

The race took its toll on machinery and only 11 cars were running at the end. Thirty-two started Wednesday, with only Walther missing from the original starting lineup.

Bobby Unser, the 1968 winner, took off and lapped the field in the early laps of the race, taking the lead from pole-sitter Johnny Rutherford in the first turn.

Unser led for 39 laps before Savage came on to take the front spot for 12 laps. He fell behind Al Unser only four laps before the end of his race and Al, the younger brother stayed in front until Johncock took over for good.

Armando Teran, 22 of Culver City, Calif., was pronounced dead after being taken to Methodist Hospital in a specially-equipped cardiac aiding ambulance. He was a member of rookie Graham McRae's crew and was on his way to help push McRae's car back to the pits when he was struck by the truck, going the wrong way on pit row, and knocked more than 100 feet up the road.

It was the second death at this year's 500. Veteran driver Art Polard was killed in a flaming crash during a practice run for the time trials.

The race got started at 3:10 p.m., EDT, five hours after the scheduled start. The long delay was again caused by rain and then a wet track.

A.J. Foyt Jr., a three-time winner, had to leave the race twice.
