Only one Complaint

... We both enjoy the Alumnus. Our only complaint is that so many of our friends and acquaintances fail to write about where they live, etc. We often wonder about them.

Fed too Well

Thank you for a very nice vacation (Alumni Family Camp). My husband and I enjoyed ourselves thoroughly and are looking forward to returning to Little Grassy next year.

If we have any complaints, it would only be that we might have been fed a little too well. The camping program is a marvelous idea and we wish you every success. With people like Chuck and Jay, you just can't miss.

The Dames Club

In response to several inquiries on the progress of the Dames Club at Southern, we are including in this column a brief summary of the first fall meeting of the organization.

The year’s program was launched October 23 with a fashion show in the University Cafeteria. Some of the Dames served as models.

Following the style show, Mary Rominger, president, introduced the new officers. They include Judy Durham, vice president; Shirley Miles, corresponding secretary; Terry Ludden, treasurer; Donna Rubino, recording secretary; Joyce Boblea, Chautauqua representative; Pat Copeland, town representative, and Deanna Traylor, Southern Acres representative.

Donna Rubino was mistress of ceremonies. Music was furnished by Beverly Gwinn. Judy Durham was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Members of her committee were Pat Thalman, Kay McLeon, Sharon Cruse, Donna Mills, Gini Bonnett and Jean Nelson.

Mrs. Elbert Fulkerson, Illinois Mother of the Year, was a special guest. Mrs. Fulkerson's nomination was sponsored last spring by the SIU Dames Club. Other guests were Mrs. A. R. MacMillan and Mrs. Felix Negro, sponsors, and Louise Morehouse, fiscal officer.

Proud to be an Alum

In addition to reporting an address change for myself and my wife, Susan Krejci Stevens, '55, I thought I would pass along some material which you might use in your alumni news section.

I have just ended three years of teaching and graduate work at the University of Illinois and was awarded a Ph.D. in accountancy. I am now a member of the management consulting staff of the public accounting firm of Touche, Niven, Bailey and Smart—a national firm with headquarters in Detroit. Back in November of 1957, I was fortunate enough to have passed the C.P.A. examination. During our stay at the University of Illinois, Susan gained three years of interesting experience as an artist for the U. S. Air Force at Chanute Air Force Base.

The Southern Alumnus is one of the best alumni magazines I have seen. It is a credit to the school and to you and your staff. I have always been proud to say that I am from Southern Illinois University. It would have been easy to find a school with a better commerce building; many schools cost more money, and some offer a “prestige" name, but I do not believe I could have received a better opportunity for an education than that offered at Southern. SIU has been blessed with many dedicated teachers. Like all of the school’s accounting graduates, I am particularly indebted to Miss Susie Ogden.

This year's Homecoming queen, Marie Holifield, is a junior from Brookport. She was crowned Thursday night, October 30, in ceremonies at Shryock Auditorium and reigned over the weekend festivities.

Jan Majors and Donna Schuchard were the queen's attendants. The members of the royal court included Carole Chambers, Barbara King, Bobbie Jones, and Margaret Coury. All were finalists in the contest for queen.

A reception for the queen and her court followed the coronation. Also in the receiving line at this reception were Dr. and Mrs. Delyte Morris and Pati Dey, who was chairman of Homecoming.

More than thirty events were held in connection with the annual Homecoming, from informal coffees to a formal dance on Saturday night.

House decorations were won by Alpha Gamma Delta in the women's division and by Theta Xi fraternity in the men's division.

The winning float in the women's division was that of Sigma Sigma Sigma. Pierce Hall, one of the Thompson Point units, carried off top honors for the men.

The parade also featured stunts, as well as 26 southern Illinois high school bands, the SIU marching band, the AFROTC band and honor guard and local National Guard units.

For the first time in four years, Southern won a Homecoming football game. The Salukis met the Washington and Lee Generals from Lexington, Va., defeating them 36-7. The victory was witnessed by a record-breaking crowd of 13,000.

Homecoming pictures appear on pages 10 and 11 of this issue.

Southern Sketches

Southern Illinois University has more faculty authorities on the anthropology of northern Mexico than any other university in the country. So says Dr. Walter W. Taylor, new chairman of the SIU Department of Anthropology. Taylor is the fourth anthropologist on the SIU faculty who has studied extensively the cultures of northern Mexico. Others are J. Charles Kelley, SIU museum director who is on leave for special research; Carroll L. Riley, specialist on medical herbs and other contemporary cultural practices among isolated Indian groups in northern Mexico; and Howard Winters, an assistant director of SIU’s biennial field work in Durango, Mexico...

A "Darwin Centennial Celebration" is being observed at Southern. Six prominent American scholars are lecturing on aspects of man’s origin. The first in the series was a lecture October 1 by Dr. Alfred Emerson, University of Chicago zoologist. He spoke on "The Impact of Darwinism on Modern Biology." On October 21 Dr. Philip Appelman of Indiana University lectured on "Darwin and Modern Literature." Scheduled for November 17 is Dr. Loren Eiseley, University of Pennsylvania anthropologist, who will discuss "Barriers to Darwinism." On December 4 Dr. Bert James Loewenberg, Sarah Lawrence College historian, will lecture on "Darwin, Darwinism, and History." The last talk in the series will be on February 10, at which time Dr. Dean Amadon, head of the Division of Birds, American Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Herbert Muller, Indiana University critic and political philosopher, will be on campus. Amadon will talk about "Darwin’s Theory 100 Years Later," while Muller will discuss "Evolution and Human Values"...

Last month the University of Kansas Press published "Furbearers of Kansas," co-authored by Dr. Howard Stains, assistant professor of zoology at Southern...

On November 17 the Southern Illinois University Press will publish "American Labor Unions and Politics, 1900-1918." Written by Marc Karson, SIU associate professor of government and a student of labor movements, the book is aimed at a reappraisal of the political action forces in the American labor movement. In his book, Karson departs from conventional notions about the influences of such forces as syndicalism, voluntarism, socialism, and Catholicism, but shows that labor is in politics to stay. He claims that the political program of left-wing unionism during the 1900-18 period made dramatic contributions to the solution of political problems but did not develop into a movement. David Saposs, labor historian, calls the book "an indispensable addition to American labor movement literature"...

Mrs. Walter Collins will be honored April 23 as Southern Illinois Women’s "Leader of the Year." From West Frankfort, Mrs. Collins is a member of the SIU Board of Trustees. The sixth annual Southern Illinois Women’s Day program will be held on the Carbondale campus. The main speaker for the occasion will be Emily Taft Douglas, wife of Illinois Senator Paul H. Douglas.
The Yeast Story

by Dr. Carl C. Lindegren

The Biological Research Laboratory at Southern Illinois University is devoted primarily to the study of yeast. Yeast is, undoubtedly, the micro-organism that man has studied more intensively than any other since the beginning of civilization. It was first grown for bread and beer in prehistoric times, much as it is today.

Yeast is a single-celled organism which divides approximately once every 90 minutes and can grow on very simple nutrients. The yeast cell has all the components characteristic of the cells of higher plants and animals; such as nucleus, cytoplasm and cell wall. The nucleus contains chromosomes and genes which control the hereditary mechanism. The hereditary transmission of characteristics from parents to offspring seems to be achieved about the same way in all living organisms, from the highest to the lowest. The general principles of heredity which are established with the simpler organisms can be applied to more complicated ones.

In 1943 I discovered that yeast cells have sex, and this made it possible to produce hybrids much more easily than was previously possible. The different sexes are distinguishable by testing, but otherwise look alike. The small poem by Ogden Nash discusses this scientific problem. "The sexes look alike, you see; you cannot tell the he from she, but she can tell and so can he."

Inasmuch as hybrids can be produced and the life cycle is short, yeasts are the ideal organisms for the study of heredity. The enzymes that control the fermentation of sugars are under the control of genes, and this laboratory has made many contributions concerning the manner of their transmission from parents to offspring. The inheritance of ability to synthesize vitamins, amino acids, purines and pyrimidines is also gene-controlled, and genes have been located controlling these syntheses. This fact has made it possible to study the behavior of the chromosomes in division. Yeast hybrids producing vitamins have been developed in this laboratory, and many large pharmaceutical companies use these hybrids for production of thiamin, riboflavin, ergosterol and other vitamins and proteins for human consumption.

The Atomic Energy Commission supports research in the laboratory for studying the effects of radiation on yeast cells, anticipating that the results may be applied to higher organisms. The sensitivity of the yeast cell to mutation by X-rays and ultraviolet rays and means of reducing the harmful effects of these rays is also of interest to the AEC.

Because many poisons and drugs can induce respiratory deficient yeast cells with defects similar to those of cancer cells, the American Cancer Society, the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund, the U. S. Public Health Service and the National Science Foundation support research in yeast. Much recent scientific work is being done all over the world on this problem, both in inducing the phenomenon so much like cancer and in studying means of preventing its induction and of changing the induced cells back to the normal condition.

The laboratory publishes about 15 scientific articles each year in domestic and foreign journals, and requests for these papers come from all parts of the world. (Dr. Lindegren has published about 150 scientific papers and one book, The Yeast Cell, Its Genetics and Cytology.)

The Biological Research Laboratory has the largest known collection of pedigreed yeast cultures, totalling approximately 25,000. Each is different, but all are related and capable of making hybrids with each other. Requests for these cultures come from laboratories in almost every country.

The laboratory serves as a training place for undergraduate and graduate students. There are about 15 or 20 students currently employed who work on a part-time basis and thus manage to learn some of the specialized techniques which assist them in their professional careers. Students working in the laboratory have gone into a variety of industrial and scientific positions elsewhere. The Biological Research Laboratory is closely associated with the Department of Microbiology, and many of the students assisting in the laboratory have received bachelor's or master's degrees in microbiology. The Department of Microbiology has recently been authorized to confer the doctoral degree, and candidates for doctorates have already been registered in this department. Although the Biological Research Laboratory's chief function is not primarily instructional, it participates with the Department of Microbiology in the instruction of microbiology.

(Carl C. Lindegren, professor of microbiology and head of the Biological Research Laboratory at Southern, is a well known geneticist and authority on cancer. In 1958 he received the Pasteur Award, given by the Society of Illinois Bacteriologists. Last month he was cited as an outstanding American Cancer Society county chairman. Dr. Lindegren is chairman of the Jackson County ACS chapter.)

Labor Consultant to Japanese

Samuel C. Evett is spending two months in Japan as a labor consultant to the Japanese trade unions. Evett is a representative of the United Steelworkers of America, District 31, with offices in East Chicago, Ind.

Assigned by the International Cooperation Administration, Evett's duties consist of serving as advisor, lecturer and group discussion leader and conducting seminars sponsored by the Japanese trade unions in the industrial areas of Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya, Fukuoka, Hiroshima and Sapporo.

He will try to promote a better understanding of the philosophy and practices followed by American trade unions in the establishment of sound labor-management relations.

Another part of his assignment calls for helping formulate a program designed to increase productivity through better use of existing labor resources. He is also striving to promote a better understanding by the Japanese trade union technicians of some of the research techniques and practices of American unions, especially regarding technical questions relating to financial analysis, job study, incentive systems, time and motion study and union contract analysis.

Evett lives in Munster, Ind., at 1346 Park Dr.
CALCULATES FLIGHT OF JUPITER-C MISSILE

Pfc. Martin Schrader, '54, calculated the flight of the Jupiter-C missile which carried Explorer IV into space. It was he who established the flight performance capability of the missile.

Schrader is assigned to Aeroballistics Laboratory of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency at Redstone Arsenal. The Army Ordnance missile command said, "Schrader established the flight performance capability of the Jupiter-C missile which carried Explorer IV and determined the optimum four-stage missile flight program which required the minimum apogee altitude, safe lowest perigee, and tilt program requirements meeting range safety conditions. Based upon his determinations, the flight program was fed into the missile by intricate guidance and control systems before the launching. He calculated the exact history of the expected flight, and this basic data was used as reference for the actual launching."

Schrader received his master's degree from SIU in 1956. In 1954 he attended the University of Hanover in Germany on a Fulbright scholarship and in 1956-57 studied at the University of Wisconsin on a graduate assistantship.

OLDEST ALUMNUS TO BE HONORED

On November 20 the Optimist Club of East St. Louis will pay tribute to John E. Miller, '85, Southern's oldest living alumnus, is the world's oldest active Optimist. He is a charter member of the East St. Louis club.

A dinner in his honor will be held at the Broadview Hotel, with Bruce Barrington principal speaker.

The day after he is honored by the Optimist Club, Mr. Miller will observe his 94th birthday. He spent 57 years as a teacher and school administrator.

An 1885 graduate, Miller embarked on his third career at the age of 91, when he began studying and writing about the history of the Mississippi Valley. Prior to that he had served 14 years as bailiff in the Federal District Court in East St. Louis.

Mr. Miller's East St. Louis address is 3047 Audubon.

MAXINE BLACKMAN WINS ALMA AWARD

Mrs. Robert F. Blackman, the former Maxine Harris, '47, '49, won the first annual competition for "outstanding journalism in home laundry education."

Sponsored by the American Home Laundry Manufacturers Association, the "Alma" award was presented to Mrs. Blackman October 30 at the Home Laundry Conference held at the Chase Hotel in St. Louis. More than 500 educators, extension specialists, home demonstration agents, women's editors, utility home service directors, textile and fabric industry members and AHLMA members attended this conference.

A former editor of the Southern Alumnus, Mrs. Blackman is now fashion editor of the Houston Chronicle in Houston, Texas. The Southern Alumnus received a national award among alumni publications under her editorship.

Mrs. Blackman and her husband, a 1951 Southern graduate, have an 18-month-old son. The family lives in Houston at 1515 Hewitt.

NOMINATE NOW

Have you someone you wish to nominate for an Alumni Achievement Award? If so, send your nomination(s) to Bob Odaniell, Alumni Office, Carbondale. Deadline for nominations is Monday, February 16.

Inaugurated in 1957, the first awards were made in June as part of the Alumni Day festivities. At that time eight awards were presented, four in recognition of outstanding service to the University and four for outstanding achievement in business or profession. Ordinarily only one award is to be made in each category.

Any alumnus or former student of Southern is eligible to nominate candidates. Academic deans and department heads of the University are also eligible to make nominations. With the exception of members of the present faculty or board of trustees and the current president of the Alumni Association, any alumnus or former student is eligible for nomination.

Each winner will receive a certificate and a memento. The awards will be made at the Alumni Day banquet next spring.

Cited last year for outstanding professional achievement were Dr. Percival Bailey, '12; Dr. Richard Browne, '19; Dr. Charles Sattgast, '21, and Judge Fred L. Wham, ex-'05.

Honored for their service to the University and the Alumni Association were Dr. James Barrow, '98; Dr. Robert Browne, '13, '18; Robert Teeter, '04, and W. W. Vandeveer, ex-'09.

Health Education at Southern

by Ray Rowland
SIU Editorial Writer

This fall more than 100 students are majors in the largest college health education program in the nation—Southern Illinois University's.

With a faculty of 14 specialists, eight of whom have doctoral degrees, SIU's Department of Health Education has received wide-spread recognition, not only for its size but also for its service to schools and communities in southern Illinois.

"Our staff has traveled thousands of miles helping plan and conduct city, county and regional health meetings," explains Dr. Donald N. Boydston, department chairman. "We also have assisted in the development of county public health departments as well as school health and mental health clinics."

When Boydston came to Southern from the University of Mississippi faculty three years ago, the department consisted of four teachers, seven undergraduates and no graduate students. Generous support from the University and the area has enabled him to triple the faculty and greatly expand the program. By last spring, 68 undergraduates and 32 graduate students were preparing for careers in the field of health.

Wherever a valid need arises, the department initiates a program to meet it. For instance, last year at the request of school administrators the first program in the nation for the preparation of school health co-ordinators was established at Southern.

Five students already are majoring in the new curriculum, which will qualify a person to teach elementary school subjects and health and biological sciences on the high school level and at the same time co-ordinate health services for all pupils in an elementary-secondary school system.

The SIU department also is one of the few in the nation offering a minor in safety education which meets National Safety Council recommendations.

From all indications, SIU's health education program will keep growing.

"The American Public Health Association recently estimated that the nation needs some 6,000 public health educators," Boydston said. "We are one of the few schools preparing such teachers."

Last year the General Assembly passed a law requiring Illinois schools to give pupils as much instruction in health education as in physical education. This, Boydston said, will increase the demand for health education teachers and also will influence physical education majors to take more health courses than they have in the past.

Another Illinois school law makes it mandatory for driver education instructors to have a minor in safety education by 1960. At Southern, industrial education majors are advised to minor in safety education, and all freshmen are required to take a basic health education course. Boydston indicates that his department may be ready to begin a doctoral program by the fall of 1959.

Partly as a result of Southern's enthusiasm for health education, the Illinois Health Improvement Association is encouraging young people to prepare for careers in health. The Association recently established a $1300 student loan fund at SIU and is planning a broad scholarship program for health education majors.

Two state health agencies, the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness and the Illinois Heart Association, have representatives in the department who are provided with office space and stenographic service.

Graduates of the SIU department are working as school health co-ordinators, in veteran's hospitals, at other universities, in public health, and for health agencies such as heart, cancer and tuberculosis associations. Salaries, Boydston said, are excellent.

Among the specialists on Boydston's faculty is a community health counsel, Dr. Deward K. Grissom, who conducts a co-operative health education workshop for public school teachers each summer at Southern. Dr. A. Frank Bridges, '29, specializes in civil defense training and driver education. Miss Florence E. Denny's specialty is public health, as is Charles E. Richardson's.

Dr. Sheldon S. Steinberg, an expert in medical services, recently completed a health education survey in Paducah, Ky., and is writing a book on medical quackery. Miss Frances K. Phillips, '35, is an expert in elementary school health. Dr. Roger F. Sondag, a county health officer, serves as an assistant visiting professor. His specialties are community health organization and communicable diseases.

New Pulliam Scholars

Willie Brown, Jr., and Albert Morgan (second from right) have been awarded Roscoe Pulliam Memorial Alumni Scholarships. Named in honor of a former SIU president, the scholarship is sponsored by your Alumni Association. Brown is a junior from Memphis, Tenn. Morgan is a junior from Mount Vernon. Looking on with interest is Mrs. Pulliam, wife of the late Roscoe Pulliam. The checks were presented by Bob Odaniell, director of alumni relations at Southern. Gifts to the scholarship fund may be directed to Mr. Odaniell in care of the Alumni Office.

Holing up for the Winter

by John W. Allen, '22

Mischievous boys may still make sly and unannounced visits to watermelon patches. A report of such a visit would not be unusual. It would be unusual, however, to hear that a group of boys had raided an apple hole. Sneak visits to farmers' apple holes have ceased. Boys may still be the same, but the apple holes aren't. These once inviting objects have disappeared along with the practice of which they were an important part. Having ceased to exist, they naturally can not be raided.

It is now about the time of the year when farm folk once gathered and stored certain of their winter food supplies. After heavy frosts and the first freezes of the winter had come, the frugal farmer began the storage of his reserve supplies of potatoes, cabbage, turnips, apples, pears, celery; sometimes pumpkins and squash.

Many farms, in fact most of them, did not have cellars. There were no locker plants, the home freezer had not appeared, and even refrigerators were practically unknown. No fruit expresses or truck lines were here to supply the grocer with a regular stock of fresh vegetables. If families wished to have a dependable supply of certain foods, they needed to "hole up" their own.

The "holes" for the storage of these reserve supplies of food really were not holes. They were conical mounds or pointed ridges of straw, earth and the product being stored. It was the practice to store each product separately, hence the size and number of these mounds seen in a householder's garden was a rather reliable indication of the family's prospect for eating well during the winter.

The manner in which these storage places were built was rather uniform. A spot where water did not stand was selected and a heavy layer of straw, leaves, or grass was laid down. The apples or other products to be stored were carefully arranged in a conical heap or in a sharply pointed ridge. Beginning at the lower edge of this stack a thick layer of straw or leaves was thrown over it. A layer of dirt eight inches or so thick was next added from a pit dug around the base of the growing mound. Boards or planks were often leaned against these mounds as additional protection against the rains and snows to be expected.

It was the purpose in this method of storage to keep the product stored as cold as possible and still not have it freeze. It was also kept dry. The method described worked well and many foods were thus kept throughout the winter months. These were our first cold storage devices.

Products to be stored were not specially prepared. Care was taken, however, to store only sound and clean products. Some of those storing apples would arrange them with the smaller and knottier ones nearest the place where it was planned to open the mound. This would allow the best of the crop to be kept until Christmas time.

Cabbage to be stored was pulled and the root stalk was left attached. It was then arranged with the roots upward. This was thought to retard any tendency of the cabbage to grow. When cabbage was removed for cooking the stalks were cut from the heads. If one wished to grow early cabbage leaves for use as greens, these stalks were set out. A few such stalks were left to grow and produce seeds for the next crop. If the stalks were not to be planted, they were the prizes of youngsters who peeled them, dipped the peeled tips in salt, and ate them. Some oldsters may recall eating them and thinking they were good.

In addition to providing food for the family, a well stocked apple hole added a certain social factor. This was especially true if the owner was of a generous nature and "treated" visitors. It was pleasant indeed to have the man at the place being visited hand a bucket or pan to his son and say, "Roy, you and John take this bucket and get some apples. Be sure to stuff the straw back into the hole and place the boards over it again." It made for a pleasant evening.

SOUTHERN ALUMNUS
As far as we can determine, only two Southern alumni have chosen auctioneering as a profession. The two—a father and son combination—are L. Oard Sitter, '15, and Lloyd E. Sitter, ex '49, of Anna.

During the past year they conducted two of the largest antique sales ever held in the Midwest (excluding Chicago and St. Louis). These sales involved the estate of Bessie T. Doty of Benton. Held last April, the first sale lasted eight days; the second, held in August, lasted four days. Buyers came from 16 states. A collection of dolls and banks sold for more than $12,000. One doll was sold for $800, as was one of the toy banks.

Oard Sitter didn’t start out to be an auctioneer. After graduation from Southern’s agriculture department, he taught in the rural schools of Union County for three years. In September of 1920 he entered the College of Dentistry at Washington University and was graduated in 1924. But he never practiced dentistry; he went into the wholesale fruit and produce business and farming in Anna.

It was the year 1925 when he entered the auctioneering profession. That, and the real estate business, have occupied his time since. He has conducted sales of all types throughout southern Illinois, southeast Missouri and western Kentucky.

From 1932 to 1940 he was employed by the Auditor of Public Accounts of Illinois as auctioneer for the remaining assets of all the closed banks in Illinois, except those in Cook County.

During World War II, he and the recruiting officer for the U. S. Navy sold a famous pig, King Neptune, for bonds that amounted to more than $19,000,000. The proceeds were applied on the cost of the cruiser Illinois. It has been reliably reported that Oard Sitter sold more bonds than any other individual in America. He has a certificate for “Meritorious Service” from Henry P. Morganthau, former Secretary of the Treasury.

For ten years Sitter and his friend Rayburn Ice conducted a two-hour radio program over stations WEBQ and WGGH. At that time it was the longest remote control program in this country.

Active in civic and political affairs in Anna and throughout southern Illinois, Sitter is Democratic State Central Committeeman for the 25th Congressional District. He is a member of the Methodist Church, Anna Chamber of Commerce, Union County Farm Bureau, Illinois Farmer’s Union, National Association of Auctioneers, Illinois Association of Auctioneers, National Institute of Farm Brokers, Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, National Association of Real Estate Boards, and director of the Anna State Bank.

Mrs. Sitter is the former Beulah Rendleman, ex '15. They have two children, Elizabeth and Lloyd. Mr. and Mrs. Oard Sitter live at 502 Walnut Street in Anna.

Salukis Tied for First in IIAC

by Bill Young, '54

A potent running attack has powered the Salukis into a tie for first place in the Interstate Conference football standings.

Led by Captain Cecil Hart, Hillsboro fullback, and Quarterback Bill Norwood, Centralia, Southern moved down four opponents before falling to upstart Illinois Normal, 21-8.

Going into the league clash with the Redbirds, the Salukis had trampled Evansville College, 34-14, and West Virginia State, 19-0, in non-loop action, and Eastern Illinois, 29-8, and Western Illinois, 32-31, in a thriller.

The Leatherneck win was credited to Norwood and Halfback Lane Jenkins, Lake Charles, La., who combined on a 67-yard pass play in the final seconds to pull within striking distance. Jenkins then struggled across for a two-point conversion for the win.

The same pair prompted heart failure again against Eastern Michigan after the Normal loss. Coach Al Kawal's crew came off the field in the fading moments to dump the Hurons 13-9. Norwood hit Jenkins with the same pass play, this time for 65 yards and a touchdown.

For the first time in four years, the Salukis won a Homecoming game. They defeated Washington and Lee in a 36-7 decision.

On November 8 the team traveled to Mount Pleasant, Michigan, to give Central Michigan its first conference defeat. Three teams, Southern, Central and Western Illinois, are tied for first place in the IIAC as a result of the November 8 encounters. SIU gridders will complete this year's schedule at Normal Illinois on the fifteenth.

Basketball

Some 45 basketball candidates reported to Coach Harry Gallatin at opening drills October 15.

Rigorous conditioning sessions and one official squad cut have cropped the contenders to 25.

Gallatin has promised home fans a "running, fast breaking team" and is beginning early with running, wind sprints, full-court drill, play combinations and more and more running.

Ten lettermen are back to give rugged competition to one of the finest stables of freshmen to report in recent years. Captain Seymour Bryson, Quincy senior, leads the veterans, along with Garrison Newsom, Shawneetown; Dick Ruggles, Quincy, Mass.; Gene Sams, Albion; Don McGee, Chester; Jim Lazenby, Pinckneyville; Randy McClary, Milltown, Ind.; Don Hepler, Champaign; Bill Roberts, Monticello, and Tom McCreal, Rantoul.

Pushing the regulars for their berths on the starting five are Charlie Vaughn, a feather-touch sharpshooter from Tamms; Gene Velloff, southpaw ball hawk from Alton, and Jim Gualdoni, jumping jack from Herrin's 1956-57 state championship squad.

The Salukis open their season December 1 at Austin Peay State, and the 10-game home schedule starts December 6 against Drury College of Springfield, Mo.

Junior Varsity Basketball

The junior varsity basketball squad will play a 13-game schedule this season.

The Saluki Pups are coached by Thomas Stark, graduate assistant from the Duluth branch of the University of Minnesota.

The schedule:

Dec. 6 Murray State H
Dec. 9 Scott AFB T
Jan. 3 Scott AFB H
Jan. 12 Murray State T
Jan. 13 Intra-squad at Quincy
Jan. 17 St. Louis University T
Jan. 27 Mt. Vernon Jr. Col. T
Feb. 6 Paducah Junior Col. H
Feb. 13 Eastern Illinois T
Feb. 20 Intra-squad H
Feb. 21 St. Louis Univ. H
Feb. 23 Paducah Jr. Col. T

Gymnastics

Ten returning letter winners have bolstered Coach Bill Meade's chances of bettering last season's 6-3 gymnastics' record.

Some 20 gymnasts have begun workouts in preparation for the opening of an 18-match schedule December 6.

Back this season are Jerry Bickenbach, Westchester; Ed Buffum, Elmhurst; Bob Fester, IIAC rings champion from Winnetka; Ed Foster, Elmhurst; Captain Bob Hauser, Cottage Hill; Charles Hillard, Melrose Park; Bob Kies, IIAC side horse champ from St. Louis; John Ostarello, Chicago; Gene Salmon, Grayville, and John Taylor, West Palm Beach, Fla.

The schedule:
Dec. 6 Midwest Open Championships, Chicago
Dec. 26-30 National Gymnastics Clinic, Sarasota, Fla.
Jan. 16 Univ. of Mich. T
Jan. 17 Michigan State T
Jan. 23 Illinois Normal T
Jan. 27 University of Ill. H
Jan. 30 Eastern Illinois T
Jan. 31 Ball State College and University of Chicago at Muncie, Ind.
Feb. 7 Western Illinois H
Feb. 13 Ill. Normal and Central Michigan H
Feb. 20 Eastern Illinois H

Swimming

Coach Ralph Casey begins his second swimming season at SIU with only four veterans from last year’s team.

Casey lost seven lettermen and five reserves from the 1957-58 squad, which won five and lost three. Returnees are Bob Steele, sophomore from Chicago in the backstroke; Bill Busch, Jerseyville junior in the breaststroke; Bob Schulhof, junior from Chicago in the butterfly, and Warren Dick, Deerfield sophomore in the freestyle.

“The rest of the squad will have to be composed of freshmen,” Casey says. “We’ll have troubles early in the season, but they should work out as the boys gain experience.”

Largest gap in the squad was left by the graduation of Roger Council, the Salukis diving champion from Wood River. Council is swimming and gymnastics assistant this year.

An 11-meet schedule, featuring the University of Kansas and Loyola University, will open December 6 at Kansas. The schedule:
Dec. 6 Univ. of Kansas T
Jan. 9 Loyola University T
Jan. 10 Univ. of Chicago T
Jan. 17 Missouri Mines H
Jan. 23 Western Illinois T
Jan. 31 Wash. University T
Feb. 7 St. Louis University H
Feb. 14 Illinois Normal H
Feb. 28 North Central College T
Mar. 6-7 IIAC Meet H
Apr. 2-4 NAAU Championships at New Haven, Conn.

Cross Country

L ed by freshman sensation John Flamer of Yonkers, N. Y., Coach Leland P. (Doc) Lingle’s cross country crew has rung up a 6-2 dual meet mark this fall, best in several seasons.

Flamer has powered the Salukis to wins over Northeast Missouri, St. Louis University, Eastern Illinois, Missouri Mines and Southeast Missouri twice.

Flamer has shattered Southern’s new 3.3 mile course record three times. In his last home effort he was clocked in 16:22, and against Cape October 29 he galloped over a 3.5 mile layout in 17:25.

November 1 the Salukis traveled to Loyola University of Chicago to compete in the state meet, and November 8 to Central Michigan for the Interstate Conference running.

Junior Varsity Football

The Salukis’ junior varsity football squad absorbed a terrific pounding from Fort Campbell, Ky., as they lost their fourth game in five starts.

The Screaming Eagles, rated the third best service team in the country, ran up an 85-0 score, with reserves going most of the way. The Pups could make little headway against the soldiers, who have a 6-0 mark against college varsity squads.

Last game for Coach Dwaine Martin’s Jayvees was November 10 against Southeast Missouri, winner of an earlier game with Southern, 40-0.

Wrestling

Four Big Ten schools and six tournaments are included in SIU’s 1958-59 wrestling schedule.

The Salukis will meet Wisconsin, Northwestern, Indiana University and the University of Illinois in dual and triangular action. They also will participate in the Illinois tournament, the Interstate Conference meet, NAIA meet, Central AAU championships, the NCAA meet, and the Wheaton tourney, which the Salukis have won the past three years.

SOUTHERN ALUMNUS
NIGHTINGALE PLEDGE

I solemnly pledge myself before God and in the presence of this Assembly:

To pass my life in purity and to practice my profession faithfully.

I will abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous, and will not take or knowingly administer any harmful drug.

I will do all in my power to maintain and elevate the standards of my profession, and will hold in confidence all personal matters committed to my keeping, and all family affairs coming to my knowledge in the practice of my profession.

With loyalty will I endeavor to aid the physician in his work and devote myself to the welfare of those committed to my care.

Another First at Southern

The prospective registered nurse looks forward eagerly to the day she receives her cap. For without it, her uniform is not complete.

On Sunday afternoon, October 26, eight girls made the Nightingale pledge. This was the first such ceremony for Southern’s new Department of Nursing.

The cap was designed by Susan Denker Goodman, one of the first recipients. It has three points, signifying body, mind and spirit, to which the nurse ministers in her patient care.

In his welcoming address, President Delyte W. Morris stressed the particular responsibility of this first class. Everyone, he said, will expect these eight women to set the pattern. He pointed out the privilege which was theirs in being the first to be capped at Southern.

An address was given by Mrs. Walter Collins, representing the SIU Board of Trustees.

The Reverend Ray Rist, pastor of the Lutheran Church, Carbondale, gave the invocation.

Mary Wyatt, assistant professor of nursing, presented the class. Virginia Harrison, department chairman, presented the caps.

Those capped were Lois Josephine Bider, Chicago Heights, Illinois; Susan D. Goodman, Carbondale, Illinois; Bobby J. Johnson, Palestine, Illinois; Nedra Alice Kline, Carterville, Illinois; Joan Jenette Pratte, East St. Louis, Illinois; Carol Diane Rischeck, St. Louis, Missouri; Beverly Elizabeth Roberts, Pana, Illinois; Carleen Naona Todd, Grand Tower, Illinois.

A reception in Woody Hall followed the ceremony.
Jackson County Alumni, 63 strong, held a dinner meeting on October 23. Dean E. G. Lentz, University professor emeritus, was principal speaker.

Speaker at the Washington County luncheon October 16 was Dr. Willis G. Swartz (l.), dean of the graduate school. With him are Kenneth E. Frieman, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Clemens and Charles Auld. Auld was re-elected president.

A scene at the White County picnic held September 28 at Norris City Lake.
Why Don't You?

Become a Life Member

Last March the Southern Alumnus ran a list of life members of the Alumni Association and called attention to the large number currently paying installments on either regular or family life memberships. Since that time many of these installments have been completed and new names have been added to the list. Why don’t you become a life member? If you have already paid your dues for the current year, the money you have paid can be applied on a life membership. The following have joined the ranks since the March 1958 listing.
