Early Days of Agriculture

I noticed in the Southern Alumnus that this was the 50th Anniversary of the Agriculture Department. My reason for writing this is to inquire whether or not there will be any special program or celebration of this event within the year.

For your information, I am a member of the first Agriculture class at Southern. I was also the first President of the old agricultural club which was organized sometime between 1913 and 1915. I am also one of the boys who milked the first cow that was brought to the farm where McAndrew Stadium now is located, and also had the pleasure of fitting the harness on the two gray Percheron mares which at that time were Professor Muckelroy’s pride and joy.

Tribute to Dean Lentz

I read about the death of Dean Lentz in the Chicago Tribune and Clark Davis sent me the clipping from the Illinoisan of March 25. Needless to say, we were all sorry, indeed, to hear of the death of this good man who made such a tremendous impact not only on his own institution, but on his associates in other colleges and universities throughout the Midwest.

Dean Lentz was a great friend of my predecessor, Dean Thomas Arkle Clark, who was the pioneer Dean of Men in the United States. I became acquainted with him through Dean Clark and my admiration and affection for the man duplicated that of Dean Clark.

He attended meetings of the Illinois Association of Deans of Men and was present at several of the meetings of the National Association. In these meetings he won the high respect of all of his fellow deans for his wise and unemotional statements on matters which disturbed his fellow deans.

We were all impressed with his modesty and his unwillingness to be in the limelight yet he always came through with wise counsel at the right time.

I am sure that his loss is great for Southern, but it is equally great for those of us who knew him and respected him through the years.

Old Hand for SIU

I am tempted to feel expert in the role of representative for SIU in academic processions, and confess to experiencing considerable pride in the function. At such times, the archaic stirrings of a court musician rise incongruously within this naval aviator.

The afternoon was a success in spite of winds rhetorical and meteorological. President Kennedy glowed with good health; Cardinal Cushing outshone even the Oxford graduates; and the honorary degree citations made us all proud of law, letters, and humanity.

Many thanks for thinking of me again for this happy duty. I stand ever ready for such service.

Recruiting for Navy

Just a short note to tell you what it is like to have a California winter after many, many years of Illinois winter weather. Living close to Angeles Crest, we do get some cool weather, like about 25. . .ABOVE zero.

I came to California after completing my master’s work in physics at SIU in August, 1962. I am working as a physicist with the U.S. Naval Ordnance Test Station in Pasadena.

Coming to California also brought to an end my bachelorhood, as I married Marjo Andrews of Chicago and Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., on February 16, 1963. My wife receives her B.S. from Loyola University, Chicago, in June.

Each spring term finds a class of forestry students taking to the woods for practical field work. Their laboratory is Shawnee National Forest and a former CCC barracks in Giant City State Park their home away from campus.

The Department of Forestry, under the chairmanship of Prof. Neil W. Hosley, has a four-year curriculum providing instruction, research, and consultation in the fields of forest production and utilization. The spring quarter of practical field courses is required of every student enrolled in the curriculum.

The Press Photography class of Prof. C. William Horrell '42, Department of Printing and Photography, followed the forestry students in their round of study, work, and play to present a story of this particular phase of the forestry program at Southern.

Below are the five young men who plotted, planned and produced the picture story which begins on page nine.

Buckminster Fuller Aims for the Moon

House on the Moon
Interesting Problem
for Designer-Philosopher

Buckminster Fuller of Carbondale, Ill., dropped into the office the other day with an armful of books. He was on his way to a meeting of engineers to discuss the project of putting a building on the moon.

To an office wordwright this seemed to be the most improbable of the fantasies that have emanated from Fuller's dream-castle since about 1927. Out of his busy dome came the durable radomes that stand sentinel on the Distant Early Warning (D.E.W.) line in the Arctic and all sorts of other original devices—the dymaxion house (or dwelling machine), the dymaxion world map, the geodesic dome, the octet truss, the submarisle, the tensegrity tetrahedron or tricontrahedron. They all have names that sound like science fiction.

To Fuller (known as Bucky to his friends) a building on the moon presents interesting problems. Since the moon frugally makes do with relatively little gravity, the building will have to be anchored to the moon's surface with three spears on the base of the frame. It will have to be airtight. It will have to be furnished with equipment that will make life self-sustaining inside. And, of course, there will be transportation problems.

But Fuller regards himself as a comprehensive generalist who can intuit (a favorite word) anticipatory designs that adjust to universally variable factors. He is a research professor at Southern Illinois University. As a businessman he maintains offices in Cambridge, Mass., Forest Hills, N.Y., and Raleigh, N.C., as well as an office in Detroit, which he seldom uses.

To design a building for the moon, all that is necessary, he thinks, is for scientists, engineers, technicians, astronomers and other qualified people to define the problems and solve them.

Technology has proliferated so swiftly since World War I (weaponry, he points out, being the ignoble motive) that he thinks any problem can be solved easily. Other people worry. Fuller is as calm as Buddha.

At the age of 68 he is in a benign frame of mind. Everything seems to be going his way, not solely in business, although business does seem to be going his way, but in human, intellectual and spiritual affairs. In the final analysis he is a philosopher. Many people who have been closely associated with him also regard him as a genius.

He was born July 12, 1895, in Milton, Mass., to a family heavily staffed with Protestant ministers in previous generations. Margaret Fuller, the Boston feminist and transcendentalist, was his great aunt. She is famous for having formally declared that she "accepted the universe." "Gad, she had better," Carlyle sardonically retorted when he heard about her statement of allegiance.

Fuller regrets that Carlyle's smart crack has ridiculed the significance of her statement. He believes that what she said is important. His career has constituted a consistent acceptance of the universe. His intellectual life began with a series of defeats that baffled him. The tithe-men of Harvard College sprung him from the class of 1917, not only once but twice. He had been careless about attending classes. He had not realized that Harvard College was an educational institution.

Two other painful experiences resulted in a personal crisis in 1927 when he decided to think seriously about his "manifold ineptitudes." He emerged with a conviction that man has been given the capability of participating "objectively, directly and consciously in universal evolution."
Reasoning logically from what he knows as a mathematician, he has concluded that man can never do away with himself because man is an integral part of the universe—each man being a miniature universe. Fuller is confident of "the persistence of integrity."

His view of the future is bright. He shares Einstein’s cosmic religious sense. "You can’t suppress God," Fuller says with the serenity of Emerson. Fuller’s range of knowledge is too wide to be squeezed into a column. But the nature of his thinking can be identified. Bucky is a modern transcendentalist.

Busy Man, Energetic Globe-trotter

R. Buckminster Fuller, who first came to Southern in 1956 to conduct a seminar for the Department of Design and then returned each fall to lecture, joined the department in 1959 as a research professor. Although he had lectured at most of the major design and engineering schools in the country, this was the first time he had taken a permanent university assignment.

Under terms of his appointment, Professor Fuller pursues his own research while directing the graduate program of the design department. He is granted time to travel, which takes him all over the world in his various capacities as designer, architect, engineer, corporation executive, magazine publisher, author, and government consultant.

He returned to campus recently from a five-week tour of the U.S. and Europe which brought him awards and accolades and a royal welcome in Kensington Palace, where he was honor guest at a dinner given by Princess Margaret of England and her husband, Earl of Snowden.

Professor Fuller’s reception was no less “royal” by scholars, architects and scientists of Austria, Scotland and England, where he lectured at major universities and before distinguished scientific bodies. His honors started with Fuller Recognition Day April 10 at the University of Colorado’s 16th annual Conference on World Affairs and ended with the presentation to him May 8 of the 1963 Allied Professions Medal by the American Institute of Architects meeting in Miami.

In New York, before flying to Europe, he participated in a television program produced by the U.S. Army Research Office in which he was joined by Dr. Robert Oppenheimer, physicist and director of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University, Dr. Edward Teller, physicist, and Col. George Leist of the Army Material Command.

In Vienna he delivered the inaugural address at the first International Congress of Stereology, held at the Academy of Post-Graduate Medicine. An exhibition of his designs for modern construction, sponsored by the U.S. Information Service, Bonn, Germany, and the Oesterreichisches Bauzentrum of Vienna, presented just prior to his visit, drew more than 8,000 visitors, mostly architects, professionals in construction, and students.

Professor Fuller spent three days in Edinburgh, Scotland, giving a general university lecture for faculty and students at the University of Edinburgh, and also appeared on a seminar on world resources at which Sir Robert Mathew, head of the architecture department, president of the Royal Institute of Architecture and president of the International Union of Architects, served as moderator.

Two members of the audience at his University of London lecture were Princess Margaret and the Earl, who had also attended his lecture there a year ago. It was at this time that they entertained him at dinner.

Returning to the States, Professor Fuller lectured at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y. On May 22 he was back in New York to be inducted into the Department of Art of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, one of 12 eminent creative artists elected to membership in the nation’s highest honor society in the arts.

JULY, 1963
June 8 was a busy day, a hot day, an eventful day on the Carbondale Campus. It was Alumni Day 1963.

The Legislative Council held its annual session; 14 classes met for reunions; the British Union Jack was raised at high noon in honor of Queen Elizabeth's official birthday and SIU visitors Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Boorman, of Maidstone, England; William Bracy '49, Herrin, was installed as alumni president; five alumni received achievement awards at the Alumni Banquet, and Prof. Georgia Winn was named "Great Teacher of 1963."

Extensive revisions of the Alumni Association and bylaws were presented to the Legislative Council and approved by the association membership at the Alumni Banquet. Mr. Bracy and Bert Casper '25-27, Carbondale, were reelected to the board of directors; Hilda Stein '22-25, Carbondale, became a new member of the board.

Alumni Achievement Awards for professional achievement were presented to Richard T. Arnold, president of Mead Johnson Research Center, Evansville, Ind., and Ralph B. Thompson, manager of divisional research, Nalco Chemical Company, Chicago. Awards for service to SIU and the Alumni Association were given to Mrs. John S. Lewis (Elizabeth Harris), Carbondale, Alumni Association secretary, Dr. Guy W. Lambert, former alumni president, and L. Goebel Patton, public relations associate for Illinois Education Association, both of West Frankfort.

Great Teacher for 1963

First woman faculty member at SIU to be chosen Great Teacher received that honor at the Alumni Banquet. Prof. Georgia Gantt Winn, of the English Department and member of the faculty since 1947, was nominated by members of the Alumni Association, some of whom wrote—

Dr. Georgia Winn always showed an interest in each student and her ability to make the subject matter interesting to each one in her class displayed her great talent. Her friendliness and cheerful spirit made it a pleasure and honor to have known her.

Dr. Winn considers teaching important and, in turn, makes the literature she teaches important, too. She is sensitive, yet realistic. Her appreciation of truth is shared by an appreciation of beauty. These attitudes are reflected in her teaching. The courses I had under her still rank at the top in my memory. She demanded the most from her students and was rewarded with more than those who demanded less. She is a teacher.

Georgia Winn was as “tough as nails” in the classroom; but she took a personal interest in her students. She has a warm heart.

A native of Blossom, Tex. (in the Dallas area), Professor Winn said she always wanted to be a teacher and wouldn’t be anything else but a teacher. She has a bachelor’s degree from a Texas state college, master’s from George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., and doctorate from the University of Pittsburgh.

She served in the Navy three years during World War II, spent a year studying at the University of London in 1955, and has written textbooks on composition and literature for junior high and high schools. Her special field of teaching at Southern is dramatic literature. The theater is her hobby.

When presented the check for $1,000 as her reward for being the Great Teacher of 1963, Mrs. Winn accepted it in a delightful, gracious, and heartfelt manner, saying that in her fondest and most childish wish, she never dreamed of receiving such an honor.

School of Business Anniversary

The School of Business, which began with four faculty members, has a staff of 53 this year as it observes its 30th anniversary.

The year 1933 marked the formal beginning of the business and economics program at Southern when a Commercial Department and an Economics Department were recognized as separate entities. At that time the faculty of the Commercial Department consisted of T. L. Bryant, department head, Susie Ogden, and Edward V. Miles, Jr. There were 12 courses: five in accounting, three in commercial law, and one each in business administration, marketing, finance and penmanship.

Russell M. Nolan, with help from Mr. Miles, taught the eight courses offered by the Economics Department.

In 1945 the two departments were placed in a new College of Vocations and Professions, headed by Henry J. Rehn, the present dean of the School of Business. Also included in the college were the departments of Agriculture, Art, Home Economics, Industrial Education, Music, Speech, Nursing, and Journalism.

The 1945 school year started with Miss Ogden and Harves Rahe as the faculty of the Business Department, and William Pitkin of the history faculty and Louis Petroff of the sociology faculty giving part of their time to teaching courses in economics.

In 1957, to meet increasing enrollments in business and economics, the School of Business was established, with a degree program of professional training offered in accounting, economics, management, marketing, and secretarial and business education. A graduate program also was begun.

The SIU School of Business is a member of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, the accrediting agency in the field of education for business.

Lean Resigns Deanship

Arthur E. Lean, dean of the College of Education for the last three years, has resigned the deanship because of his health. He has agreed to continue in the post until a successor is appointed.

Member of the faculty since 1957, he had served as chairman of the Department of Educational Supervision and Administration before he was named dean. Before coming to Southern, Dean Lean taught at the University of Michigan, Indiana State Teachers College and the University of Arizona.

In 1958 he was one of 70 educators who participated in a five-week tour and study of Soviet schools. This summer he is one of 20 U.S. educators awarded scholarships by the Danish Institute to attend a month-long Scandinavian-American seminar.

University Under Study

Two outstanding educators visited the campus last spring to evaluate the University's qualifications for a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor society. Leonard Beach, dean of Vanderbilt University's Graduate School, and Howard Bowen, president of Grinnell College in Iowa, interviewed President D. W. Morris, Director of Libraries Ralph McCoy, Phi Beta Kappa members of the SIU teaching staff, and top seniors in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

A favorable report will result in a vote on the question of granting Southern a Phi Beta Kappa chapter when the society holds its convention in 1964.

Consultants from the North Central Association have been making periodic visits to the campus to aid University officials in presenting an official report next fall for consideration of accreditation of SIU's doctoral programs. To meet the rigid standards of the association, the University is attempting to strengthen the graduate faculty, improve facilities, and standardize doctoral admission requirements for all of its schools and colleges.

A committee of SIU graduate faculty for "self-study" of the graduate programs was named with C. Addison Hickman, Vandeveer professor of economics, as chairman. From the Carbondale campus members included George E. Axtelle, education; James G. Benziger, English; Herman M. Haag, agriculture; Frank L. Klingberg, government; and W. D. McDaniel, mathematics. From the Edwardsville campus—William C. Bennewitz, science and technology; Robert Wayne Duncan, humanities; and Patrick Riddleberger, social science.
From Every County

Every one of Illinois' 102 counties was represented at SIU during the 1962–63 academic year. It was the first time for Mercer and Putnam counties and the first time Cook County has had more students at Southern than Jackson County, in which the Carbondale Campus is located.

From a 1945 enrollment of 1,103, SIU has grown to this year's record of 16,243, making it the 28th largest institution of higher education in the country.

Grants and Awards

SIU has received a $15,600 grant from the National Science Foundation for purchase of undergraduate instructional equipment, with the University to provide matching funds.

J. W. Neckers, chairman of the Department of Chemistry, said revision of the chemistry curriculum and the addition of new staff members in recent years have brought about a much greater emphasis on instrumental teaching methods. Increasing enrollment and emphasis on the study of physical sciences here forced his department to spend a large part of its budget on expansion of physical facilities. In the last seven years more than $200,000 has been spent for conversion of available space to laboratories.

The new equipment will allow expansion of laboratory courses to give students experience in different applications of spectrophotometry, polarography, chromatography, and electrometric systems.

Since 1953 the chemistry department has granted 167 bachelor's degrees—13 graduates have gone on to receive Ph.D.'s and 29 more are still in graduate school.

The department faculty consists of 16 senior staff members (all but one has a Ph.D. in chemistry, with five major fields represented) and 21 halftime graduate teaching assistants.

Two chemical firms have provided gifts totaling $1,700 to the chemistry department for graduate fellowships. Mead Johnson Research Center, Evansville, Ind., gave $1,200 for two fellowships and Nalco Chemical Company, Chicago, gave $500. The fellowships will be awarded to three students finishing work on master's degrees or beginning work toward a doctorate in chemistry this summer, allowing them to devote full time to their research.

The American Philosophical Society has granted $1,500 to Annemarie Krause, associate professor of geography, for research on Mennonite colonies in the Chaco region of Paraguay, S. A. She will study some of the transportation, agricultural and industrial developments of the last 10 years. During 1950–51 Miss Krause spent half of a six-month leave in that region as part of her work for a doctoral degree from the University of Chicago. She has been on the Southern faculty since 1930.

Archaeological "Dating"

Radiocarbon "dating" is going to help the Museum's archaeologists pinpoint the range of dates of pre-historic cultures in two widely-spaced areas where SIU excavations have been conducted.

The Museum has shipped more than 30 radiocarbon specimens to Texas Bio-Nuclear, a new commercial laboratory at Austin, Tex., specializing in dating such specimens. These specimens have come from explorations museum field crews made in the American Bottoms project in the East St. Louis area and from a Meso-American project in the northern frontiers of Mexico.
Frequent group discussions are common in their outdoor classroom.

Classroom in the Woods
A Preview of Life as a Forester

Every spring quarter, a group of Southern's future foresters participate in a coordinated program of living, studying, and working in the heart of the Shawnee National Forest.

The students live in a barracks at Giant City State Park. From this base camp they make frequent trips to experimental planting sites, sawmills, and logging operations. Their evenings are devoted to lectures and individual study.

Camp Director Maxwell McCormack and other SIU Forestry Department staff members give their students intensive exposures to tree planting, logging, disease control, and fire control. U.S. Forest Service and forest industry personnel give demonstrations and set up situations which give the students a close look at the opportunities in forestry. Each student earns 16 hours credit for the six field courses taken during the quarter.
Students calculate the age of a tree by counting the annual rings in a test boring.

A forestry student measures tree height to estimate the volume of timber the tree will yield.

The class took an active part in thinning a pine forest area.

Silviculture, the art of producing and tending a forest, requires frequent tests such as this root sample inspection.
These future foresters evaluate and check the lumber yield of the logs they previously measured.

A sawmill becomes their classroom.

A short nap on the bus after a long day.

Back at Giant City base camp, the class takes a break before hitting the books.

The group observes how trees are cut into log lengths for best lumber yield.

Two students make a measurement on a log to estimate the quantity and quality of lumber it will yield.
The Class of 1963

Introducing the newest members of the Alumni Family, reporting where they are and what they are doing.

The Alumni Association entertained the 1963 graduating class at the Alumni Senior Class Banquet May 20 in the University Center Ballroom. Professor Thomas E. Cassidy, of the English Department and the 1962 Great Teacher, was the speaker.

Frank X. Heiligenstein, Freeburg graduate in government and history, was elected to represent his class on the Alumni Legislative Council for one year. Mr. Heiligenstein, who plans to study law at St. Louis University, won another election last spring. He was elected to the Freeburg Village Board, the youngest member on the board.

The three members of the Class of 1963 graduating with the highest scholastic record—all women—were awarded life memberships in the Alumni Association at the banquet. They are Mrs. Judy S. Jacober, Highland, elementary education, with a 4.905; Janet P. Larson, Morton, elementary education, 4.994; and Mrs. Nancy D. Morino ’60, Golconda, nursing, 4.902.

Miss Larson will teach fifth and sixth grade science in the Peoria schools next fall.

This summer he is at the Deutsche Sommer-schule at Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt., where he has a $150 scholarship, plus a $175 stipend as a German-speaking waiter. During 1963-64 he will receive a $90-per-week allowance on a National Defense Education Act fellowship for graduate work at the University of Colorado. Mr. Fischer has traveled extensively in Germany and is a native of Toledo, O.

Two years ago he won the $50 first prize in a commemorative medal design contest sponsored by Shawnee Hills Medalists. His entry commemorated the 125th anniversary of the Battle of the Alamo.

"Teacher of Year" in Greece

Three "firsts" were achieved by Persefoni (Pepi) Tzakou, M.S. '63, in her native Greece while she, in person, was 6,000 miles away here in Carbondale:

1. She was the first woman to receive the "Teacher of the Year" award given annually by the Greek government; 2. She was the first to receive the award in absentia—she was here on campus when chosen for the citation; and 3. She was the youngest recipient of the award, usually conferred on teachers approaching retirement.

Miss Tzakou completed her graduate studies in home economics in March, and after a visit to Washington, D.C., returned to her post as director of her country's only college of home economics teacher-training, the Harakopius School in Athens.

After spending a year here in 1959-60—first under the Teacher Development program of the U.S. State Department, then as a graduate student—she inaugurated a comprehensive American-style program for home economics in her home college.

Now she has received authorization from the Greek ministry of education to revamp and modernize the compulsory six-year home economics program for girls in Greece's 300 gymnasioums or state-operated high schools.
Sports at Southern

The 1962-63 school year, Southern's first as an athletic independent, was not the most productive in history as far as victories are concerned, but few could argue with the overall success Saluki sports teams enjoyed while competing against many top universities in the country.

With virtually every one of Southern's 10 teams facing stiffer schedules, the Salukis emerged with an overall 81-36-1 record, which compares favorably with top seasons of 1959-60 and 1960-61 when the same clubs collected 99 and 105 wins, respectively.

Coach Jack Hartman's cagers were the biggest contributors to Southern's current mark as they gained 20 wins in 30 outings, including seven of eight against major opponents. Coach Dick LeFevre's tennis team was next in line with 16 triumphs picked up while playing 18 matches against the finest the midwest has to offer.

Southern's young baseball team, coached by veteran Glenn (Abe) Martin, added 15 victories to the total, Coach Lynn Holder's golfers 13, Coach Bill Meade's gymnasts six, Coach Carmen Piccone's gridders four, Coach Ralph Casey's swimmers three, Coach Jim Wilkinson's wrestlers and Coach Lew Hartzog's runners two each.

To compile such a record against teams like Bowling Green, Texas A. & I., Drake and North Texas State in football, St. Bonaventure, Fordham, Oklahoma and Butler in basketball, Indiana, Cincinnati and Minnesota in swimming, Michigan State and Iowa in gymnastics, Iowa State and Bloomsburg State in wrestling, Northwestern, Notre Dame and Ohio State in tennis, St. Louis and Memphis State in baseball, Missouri and Wisconsin in golf, and Kansas and Western Michigan in track, many SIU athletes had to come up with superb performances.

Although certainly more are deserving of mention, the best—or "most valuable" as their appropriate awards are called—in each sport were as follows:

Football—Dennis Harmon (back) ; Jim Battle (line)
Cross Country—Brian Turner
Basketball—Dave Henson
Gymnastics—Russell Mitchell
Wrestling—Ken Houston
Swimming—Jack Schiltz
Baseball—Jerry Qualls
Track—Brian Turner
Golf—John Krueger
Tennis—Bob Sprengelmeyer

Despite the honors and thrills which were all a part of Southern's past school year, thoughts already are turned toward next fall when Saluki football fans will again have five opportunities to watch their favorites perform at home.

Keeping in accordance with the Athletic Department's philosophy of doing whatever is possible for the convenience of area fans, Southern will play four of its five home games at night with only the October 19 Homecoming game for the afternoon.

And, too, Coach Piccone appears to be following the trend as he has indicated next year's club will employ a more wide-open style offense which will resemble (he hopes) the popular pro-type game.

"We're changing offenses primarily because of our tougher schedule," Piccone said as he evaluated a 55-man varsity squad following spring drills.

"Our squad simply does not possess the necessary big linemen and hard-driving ball-carriers to rely solely on a power-rushing attack against teams such as Bowling Green, Louisville, Tulsa, Toledo, and North Texas State."

Three of the five opponents named by Piccone are newcomers on Southern's 1963 schedule while the other two—Bowling Green and North Texas State—were the only teams to score convincing wins over the Salukis last year.

"We definitely feel we'll have more speed in our line," Piccone said, "and with a number of halfbacks who can scoot fairly well, we believe we can be more effective by throwing the ball more than we have in the past."

Also partly responsible for the decision is the presence of several promising quarterbacks. Veteran Vern Pollock was one of 12 lettermen lost, but Dave Harris, along with newcomers Jim Hart, Doug Mougey, Norman Meyers and Mike McGinnis promise to give the Salukis their best crop of signal-callers in several years.

Here is the complete schedule—
