Dear Alumnus,

Congratulations on obtaining your recent degree and welcome into the ranks of Southern Illinois University alumni. With the 1975 graduates totaled in, SIU alumni now number over 65,000. The numbers are impressive but it’s the individuals who count with us.

A popular advertisement presently being used on television emphasizes, “You are the one.” That’s how we feel. So much so that on the day of spring commencement, which coincided with Alumni Day this year, the Legislative Council, the Association’s basic governing body, voted to give all 1975 graduates a 50 per cent discount on their first year membership. That means you can belong for $4. You have 12 months after graduation to “take them up on the offer.”

We do hope you will consider the merits of joining the Association which is the only official organization of alumni for SIU. Our purpose is to serve SIU and YOU. It’s that simple. Membership supports the Alumnus magazine, six issues per year with news of the campus and alumni; information and ticket reservations for Homecoming; promotes and coordinates class reunions and professional alumni groups within schools, colleges, and departments of the University; assists the University Placement Service in locating jobs for alumni and relays information regarding job openings through alumni employers to the proper channels so that more alumni can find the “right” job.

Membership also offers class voting privileges for representation to the Legislative Council and the annual Great Teacher Award; the opportunity to participate in alumni group travel tours at reduced rates; purchase of books at reduced rates announced in the Alumnus; reduced rates on Saluki football and basketball season tickets; Morris Library book checkout privileges; use of Campus Beach, tennis and handball courts; Student Center bowling and billiard privileges at reduced rates. In addition, you will receive an attractive membership card and decal for your automobile. That isn’t all—there are others and we are continuing to explore additional services.

This issue of the Alumnus is being sent with our best wishes for your success. If you have already become a member, you will continue to receive the magazine and other services. If you’re not, but are interested in joining the Association, fill out and clip the “Something’s Changed” blank enclosed in this issue. Mail it along with a check for $4 payable to the SIU Alumni Association, SIU, Carbondale, Ill., 62901.

Again, welcome and we will be hoping to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

Robert Odaniell
Executive Director
SIU Alumni Association

P.S. If you join for three years, we can make a special membership bonus offer. For $20 you will be a member for 36 consecutive months and will receive a beautiful marble SIU paperweight. Think about it!
SIU's residence halls filled up faster this year than they have in a long time. The University's prosperity however, adds up to big troubles for the couple of hundred on-campus housing seekers who were turned away more than a month prior to the beginning of fall semester. For the story on why, see page 2.

Two faculty members retired recently and left tracks that will forever mark the University. They separately worked for the same cause, the growth and prosperity of Southern. See page 4 for photos and the story on what made these men so memorable.

One per cent of the student body population is being interviewed this semester. The project comes under the heading of Bio Research. It is being conducted by Emil Spees. Studying student life-styles and stresses is its general purpose. For the specifics, turn to page 6.

On the cover: Alumni of Southern Illinois University are geographically distributed throughout the United States as well as in 91 foreign countries from Afghanistan to Zambia. Some of the more highly represented, in terms of SIU Alumni, are Hong Kong, with 42; Canada with 131; India has 36; Iran, 33; Japan, 22; the Philippines, 21; Taiwan, 34 and Thailand has 49. For the Illinois county breakdown, see page 5.

Room for one more? Not lately, if you're inquiring about residence hall rooms at Southern Illinois University.

"Last year we couldn't find room for the 'walk-in' requests who sought on-campus housing the first day of school. But this year we had turned over 200 people away by letter one month prior to the beginning of fall semester," Joseph Gasser, assistant housing director for operations, said. This was a big year for returning students, Gasser explained.

It used to be that one of the biggest luxuries of being an upper class person was the opportunity to move off campus. Now more and more junior and seniors are staying on campus or attempting to move back. "Students who lived in residence halls the year before have priority," Gasser explained. This year they're cashing in on it.

"An educated guess as to why, is the money. With the rising utility and food costs and the shortages of money due to increasing unemployment, students are returning to residence hall living. Gasser also cited the transportation problems that living off campus creates as a benefit to on campus residence. Undoubtedly, the "new rights" being granted to residence hall dwellers has something to do with dorm popularity.

Through the years, according to Gasser, housing authorities have become "more responsive" to students' needs. Part of that responsiveness is in liberalization of policies, which includes 24-hour visitation, co-ed residence halls and the possession of alcohol in student rooms.

Admitting to being a member of the older generation, Gasser expressed his initial concern about co-ed dorms. Eager to clarify "co-ed," Gasser explained, "Co-ed is alternate suites of men and women—not male/female roommates. And it's really working like a gem. We have found from experience that there is less destruction and breakage in the co-ed areas. These students also usually carry a better grade point average than those residing in 'all-male' or 'all-female' areas, which are also available."

The visitation hours are voted on by the students at the beginning of the school semester. "Surprisingly enough, only 7 to 10 students out of the residence hall population of over 4,000, will vote for other than 24-hour visitation. If, however, any student believes that his or her roommate is 'over using' the visitation hours, an objection should be registered with housing personnel. The situation will be corrected," Gasser emphasized.

Another side of that "responsiveness" to students that Gasser referred to includes programming. "A student needs more than a room in which to exist after going to classes," he said. "All learning does not take place in the classroom. We're making a growing effort in the number of programs to make residence halls more desirable places to live." This can be done, Gasser said, through stimulating student participation through visiting speakers, dances and parties.

Sharon Justice, assistant dean of housing for programming will be scheduling programming in the residence halls. "I'll be working closely with the Executive Council to try to see what kinds of programs the students want. Whether they want a casino night, an auto clinic, workshops, dances, roller skating, an art show or all of these, we'll be cutting across all the different areas trying to give the students what they would enjoy," Justice said.

"Through these types of programs," Gasser continued, "on-campus housing will become a desirable place to live for reasons other than money."

If on-campus housing is indeed destined to become increasingly desirable, the "no vacancy" situation will be a common one during the coming years. Gasser has two words for prospective students, "Apply early." If your friend or son or daughter will be applying to the University for admission, he or she will receive a housing contract. "It should be returned immediately with advance payment. Two people can even get each other for roommates if they each have requested the other and both have secured their room by returning their contract and the money by June 1. As Gus Bode might say, "It looks like, at SIU anyway, that the 'early bird gets the room'"
Men of the Hour
Malone and McCoy Retire

Surrounded by friends with whom he worked, Willis Malone appropriately joined by his wife Dorothy celebrate his retirement which was held at the University House.

After 36 years at SIU Willis Malone, the teacher and administrator, retired. Malone has experienced a variety of posts during his career at Southern, one of which was acting chancellor in the difficult time following the closing of the University, during the anti-war protests of 1970.

An oracle of optimism, Malone emphasized, "I've never lost faith in the University, and I'm very optimistic about the future. I think the tremendous changes both architecturally and academically that have taken place speak well for the vitality of the University.

"Something I sensed early about SIU was the spirit, the willingness to be different, to experiment," he said.

"I still see that kind of spirit here."

With all of his years of service, Malone said a number of years ago, people here dreamed about the future of this institution and they took steps to try to implement those dreams. Now I think it's very important for people in higher education to continue to dream—to continue to be somewhat unorthodox."

An alumnus of SIU, he has been associated with the University since the 1930's, when he attended what was then Southern Illinois Normal University part-time for ten years before receiving his bachelor's degree in education.

He joined the SIU faculty in 1939 as a supervisor of academic and social functions. They have become symbols of the University for students and parents.

He has made many tough decisions along the way. His personality and attitude have made them easier for people to accept. And he has made a lot of friends.

Retirement plans include traveling to New England and Canada with his wife, Dorothy, yet he's sure that there will be plenty of "fun" for remaining faculty and staff. "I see the time ahead as a very exciting one to be associated with higher education," he said. "But I think it's going to take real dedication, real vision and leadership."

McCoy Retire

In Ralph McCoy, Southern Illinois University has a man who is considered among the leading library administrators in the country—as an innovator, as a library consultant and as a contributor to the library profession.

McCoy, dean of library affairs at SIU, retired in late summer after 21 years service as librarian and as professor of journalism.

He also sparked the growth of a regional library system that is considered a prototype for the country. SIU and the Illinois State Library cooperated in making a joint collection of books available, via a Bookmobile, to area public libraries.

Today regional libraries blanket the state, and through SIU and three other research and reference libraries, all linked by teletype, any Illinois citizen has access to virtually unlimited library resources.

Among other innovations of McCoy's regime, the Morris Library has developed the first computer-based circulation system, now copied by more than 30 other libraries. It has also developed a full-scale learning resources service and has become one of the few large universities to install an automated security system which has greatly reduced the losses of books by theft.

But McCoy's contributions to the University have not been restricted to the Library. He served as chairman of a task force to develop a 10-year plan for the University, spent a year as special assistant to the vice president for planning, helped plan Lovejoy Library at SIU-Edwardsville and has been a member of the Graduate Council and the Council of Deans.

Ralph McCoy, with his wife at his side, says his goodbyes to President Brandt and the rest of the SIU staff and faculty at the reception held for the McCoes.
The International Conference in Geneva, Switzerland was held almost two years ago for the purpose of introducing all present to a vast research project dealing with student lifestyles.
“We are striving to establish a rapport between subjects of the study and the researchers, so we can get more than just hard, cold data,” Spees said.

“Do you find your course load too heavy?” “Do you have a job?” “Do you get enough sleep?” “Do you have sexual relations?” “Do you take drugs, drink alcohol or smoke?” “Do you feel at ease in college?” “What opportunities do you expect from your field of study?” These are some of the questions Southern Illinois University BIOS researchers are asking a random sampling of one per cent of the current student body.

SIU’s study is part of an international research project called BIOS (a Greek word for life). The international study began, on paper anyway, at a seminar in Geneva, Switzerland in December of 1973. Emil and Edith Spees of the SIU faculty were invited to the International Conference to represent SIU and became the United States’ coordinators of the pilot project. The U.S. is one of 50 countries participating in the study.

“BIOS is attempting to correlate biomedical factors of student life and the factors of restlessness characteristics of university students throughout the world,” Emil Spees explained.

“This study, which includes questionnaires, interviews and medical information gathering, will aim to answer, ‘Do the lifestyles of university students fulfill their needs?’ We want to find out what kind of stresses students find themselves under, regardless of where they go to school,” Spees said. “Some institutionally-created stresses may be necessary and some may not. We need to know which are which and what can be done about it.”

BIOS researchers, according to Spees, are at work on approximately 50 campuses throughout the United States and interest in their work reflects a growing concern about personalizing education and recognizing that each student is an individual.

The questionnaire being used will give students an opportunity to communicate very directly with the University about what it’s like to be a student. “We are striving to establish a rapport between subjects of the study and the researchers, so we can get more than just hard, cold data,” Spees said.

Each institution participating will receive an institutional profile based on results of research on students attending the institution. “Whether the individual institutions change in relation to the information they receive will be up to the institutions.

“We want to look at the sacred cows in education,” Spees said, “and collect information that will result in others taking a new look at some of them.”
Alumni Activities

SATURDAY, October 11
Bloomington Area Alumni Club is planning a reception following the SIU-ISU football game. Contact Chuck Baue at (309) 452-8717.

SATURDAY, October 25
Homecoming Day, game at 1:30 P.M. against Wichita State. Further information will be forthcoming. Watch for the mailer!

OCTOBER 30,31, NOVEMBER 1
"Recruiting Fair" 2 P.M. to 8:30 P.M. on Thursday, 10:30 A.M. to 8:30 P.M. on Friday and 10 A.M. to 3 P.M. on Saturday at Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel. An event to provide prospective graduate students in Management with an opportunity to meet with the deans and directors of admissions of some 60 graduate schools of business in the U.S. Assistant Chairman Clifton Andersen and Gola Waters, assistant dean, will be present to represent SIU's School of Business.

A Membership Rebate?

An alumni membership has always been a great buy. As we've said before, "It's your passport back to SIU." A membership offers you discounts on many campus activities, the bimonthly alumni magazine, SIU Press books at reduced rates, special deals on alumni group trips and much, much more.

As of today, anyone who buys a three-year-membership to the Alumni Association, new or renewed, or purchases a life membership in one payment, will be presented a beautiful SIU paperweight, free. The paperweight is made of white polished Italian marble, with a pure cork protective backing. It has the University logo on a brass disc which has been finished in maroon and white. It's yours when you purchase a three-year-membership . . . So join now!

Got a Job, Need One?

Pearl Bailey once said, “The difference between recession and depression is in who’s out of work. If you are out of work,” she explained, “it’s a recession but if I am, then it’s a depression!” Regardless of the classification you would give the economy, you could make a small change in it.

If you are presently employed, how about checking with the employment department where you work? See if they have any positions open and if they might consider an SIU graduate for the job. Then write us in the Alumni Office, SIU, Carbondale, Ill., 62901 or send the information to Placement Center, SIU, Carbondale, Ill., 62901 and we’ll take it from there. Who knows, you might soon see a couple of SIU grads as new employees at your place of business.

If you’re currently out of work or wishing to change positions, contact the Placement Center. Tell them you want to be considered for job openings in your area and, if it’s been a while since you last contacted them, you will need to update your file.

We’ve all known for a long time that SIU people are the “right people” for the job. Helping a fellow graduate find employment is a positive way of proving your convictions.

'72 Grads Employed

SIU liberal arts graduates appear to be holding their own in a tightening job market.

A recently-completed study of 1972 graduates of the SIU College of Liberal Arts indicates that some of the criticism leveled at a general education—especially with regards to employability—might be a bit hasty.

Michael Walsh, main investigator for the study launched last November, indicated that he expected to find a much higher rate of unemployment than the seven and one-half percent the nationwide rate.

He added that the national unemployment rate last fall was slightly more than seven percent and has risen above 10 percent.

“We expected to find a high unemployment rate,” Walsh said of the liberal arts graduates sampled. “Instead we found that they are doing pretty well, compared to national figures.”

Further, the study shows liberal arts graduates hold a wide variety of jobs which appear to be rewarding, financially and otherwise.

News of the Campus

A total of 375 graduates out of the 1972 class of 735 graduates responded to Walsh’s questionnaire. The 60 percent response rate is considered good for survey purposes. The sample indicates that more than half the employed graduates are earning more than $10,000 annually and three-fourths of them say their jobs have definite career potential.

The SIU survey turned up one English major who is earning in excess of $15,000 a year as an airline stewardess and another English major who is managing a hotel.

Two truck drivers responded who were political science and sociology majors.

Walsh’s study does indicate that most graduates are not completely satisfied with their college education. About 75 percent of the respondents wished they had had more career preparation. About half of those surveyed said this should include more “marketable skills.”

What the liberal arts do is “try to achieve a delicate balance between nine-to-five needs and five-to-nine needs,” according to Lon Shelby, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

“We include some skills necessary to obtaining a job, but the liberal arts essentially provide an educated intelligence which enables people to take a job and develop it into something more satisfying,” Shelby said.

Walsh pointed to the reply of one liberal arts grad as fairly typical.

“My humanities major did not prepare me for a job field, since I chose not to teach in the present school system,” the graduate said. “However, the enjoyment it gives me in my everyday life is more important to me than marketable skills.”

Recent Retirees

Seventeen SIU faculty members retired in 1974–1975. They are: Melvin O. Alston, secondary education, five years of service; Van A. Buboltz, vocational education studies, 38 years; D. Lincoln Canfield, foreign languages and literatures, six years; Jim Allee Hart, journalism, ten years; Harry E. Jacobson, business, 11 years and Lorena D. Jean, University News Service, 21 years.

Other retired faculty include: Daryle Keefer, secondary education, 10 years; Lauwerens Kuipers, mathematics, nine years; Arthur E. Lean, educational administration and foundations, 18 years; Dorothy A. Lingle, staff assistant in general studies, 11 years; Archibald McLeod, theater, 28 years and Willis E. Malone, elementary education, 36 years.

Ward M. Morton, political science, 26 years; Frances K. Phillips, health education, 31 years; Richard Poston, community development services, 21 years; Harold J. Rath, Morris Library, 12 years and Lucian D. Willey, school of technical careers, 22 years, have also retired recently from Southern.
Welch Appointed

Harvey Welch, Jr. has taken over his duties as SIU dean of student life, succeeding Loretta Ott who served as acting dean during the search.

Welch received his bachelor of education degree in 1955 and the master's in education in 1958 from SIU and has done post-graduate work at Indiana University.

The first black to letter in basketball at SIU, Welch won three varsity letters in the sport at SIU and was twice unanimously selected to the old IIAC all-conference team.

He hopes that with time the escalating racial tensions in Carbondale will be eased as the growing number of black students attending SIU see blacks in administration as well as on the faculty.

A U.S. Air Force veteran who has served in Turkey and Korea, Welch said he needs contact with students to acclimate himself with life at SIU. His administrative position here is his first civilian post since leaving the military. Since 1964 he has served on human relations and equal opportunity programs connected with his work in the Air Force.

Welch has reportedly had little or no problem adjusting to his duties, despite his years of military discipline. He does not see himself as having been one of those "connotated officers" that make people snap to attention on sight.

“I’ve lived with young people before and I’ve tried to learn from them. Relating to the people isn’t a problem at all.”

Thanks, Paul

Paul Harvey of mid-west radio fame covered a story on some “unorthodox” experimentation to be conducted at Southern Illinois University.

Paid male volunteers at SIU will view erotic films while under the influence of marijuana to determine if the drug affects their sexual response. This experiment is part of a two-year, federally funded research project being started by Harris B. Rubin, an associate professor of physiology in the SIU School of Medicine.

Under Rubin’s plans, volunteers will be administered carefully controlled dosages of marijuana, then will be placed in a room where the films will be shown on a television screen. Through the use of scientific measuring devices, researchers in a separate room will record the sexual arousal of the volunteer while he views the films.

Volunteers will also view the films while not under the influence of marijuana and while under differing doses of the drug, to compare how their response is affected.

“We are screening the volunteers very carefully because we do want subjects who are serious about the experiment. We also want people who are psychologically and mentally well, so they will undergo physical and psychological examinations before being accepted for the research. The subjects,” Rubin stressed, “must be males over 21 and be experienced marijuana smokers, before even being considered.”

Sugar—How Sweet It Is

Archibald McLeod, recently retired chairman of the theater department, gave “Sugar,” the final show of Summer Playhouse ’75, his all. In his farewell production, McLeod portrayed an eccentric Miami millionaire, Sir Osgood Fielding. “Sugar,” an adaption from the classic comedy movie “Some Like It Hot,” was McLeod’s way of saying good-bye after 28 years on the SIU theater department’s faculty, 19 of which he served as chairman. He may have found parting a melancholy affair but Fielding seems to have found some “sweet” to lessen the “bitter.”
No females will be accepted as volunteers, he said, because “it’s so much simpler to measure the arousal of the male.”

The marijuana, according to Rubin, will be administered only in the presence of a physician. Volunteers will not be able to leave the laboratory area while still under the influence of the drug. “We can determine whether or not an individual is under the affect of marijuana by the heart rate which can very readily be measured.”

“Our research is being conducted to determine the affects of marijuana on sexual responses of the human male.” A great deal has been written on this but the supportive data was less than objective. “There has been no controlled research. It has in some of the reports stated that marijuana enhances sexual behavior. In fact some students have given sexual enhancement as a reason for using the drug. If it is true that it does enhance sexual behavior, it could be beneficial as a therapeutic tool. If it’s not, the kids should know about it,” Rubin concluded.

V. P. Post Filled

Frank E. Horton, 35, assumed duties as vice president for academic affairs and research on Sept. 1, replacing J. K. Leasure in the top academic post.

Formerly dean for advanced studies in the Graduate College at the University of Iowa at Iowa City, Horton directed the Institute of Urban and Regional Research at Iowa from 1968 to 1972. In that period the institute acquired $1 million in research and contract money.

A native of Chicago, he received a B.S. in business administration from Western Illinois University and both his M.S. and his Ph.D. in geography from Northwestern University.

SIU was “very fortunate to obtain Dr. Horton for this key position,” President Warren Brandt said.

MSU Honors Brandt

Michigan State University honored SIU President Warren W. Brandt as a Distinguished Alumnus at its commencement ceremonies. Brandt, a 1944 B.S. in chemistry graduate who went on to receive his Ph.D. in analytical chemistry from the University of Illinois in 1949, has in his 26-year-old professional career held positions of esteem at Purdue University, Kansas State University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. In addition, he had the distinction of becoming the first president of Virginia Commonwealth University, the largest state-supported institution in that state.

Book Rental Ends

A remnant of Great Depression days at SIU disappeared from the Carbondale campus at the start of fall semester. The campus textbook rental service was discontinued.

A resolution approved by SIU’s board of trustees in its July meeting ended the book rental service after more than three and one-half decades of existence. Ironically, it was ended mainly for the same reason it was begun: Money.

When it was initiated in 1937 as perhaps the first service of its type in the nation, it was for the purpose of keeping college costs down for depression-era students.

Now, the service is costing taxpayers and students more than it returns because the yearly turnover of rental books has been reduced since SIU went to a semester system last fall, the board said. The board also said financial aid to students—a rarity in the depression years—includes budgeted amounts for the purchase of books.

The textbook service started out with a $2.50 per quarter charge for full-time students to rent necessary texts. In 1954 the rental fee was raised to $5 per quarter, and to $8 in 1966.

A resolution approved by the board in 1972 discontinued rental services for all except General Studies courses.

Musulin Memorial

The professional library of the late Boris Musulin, SIU biochemist, has been presented to the SIU Foundation by Mrs. Shelba Musulin, the professor’s widow.

Shelba Jean Choate Musulin, 63, M.S. ’66, designated the collection of more than 400 books and files of a dozen journals—most covering a period of 25 years—as the nucleus for establishment of a reading room for the departments of chemistry/biochemistry and physics/astronomy.

She also established a Boris Musulin Memorial Endowment Fund through the Foundation, proceeds to be used for improvement and development of the departments, particularly in support of the reading room and in activities dealing with quantum theory.

WITH OPENING GAME three weeks away, Southern Illinois athletic director and head football coach, Doug Weaver is pleased with the progress his team is making.

"Our enthusiasm is good, and we have worked hard," Weaver said as the Salukis ready for their September 13 test at Southwestern Louisiana.

"But it is important to realize we are capable of working even harder," Weaver said.

Of particular importance to the coach is the play of his fullbacks. In fact, Weaver has the luxury of several good players at such a crucial position in the wishbone offense.

Returning at fullback are Lawrence Boyd, the rugged 203-pounder from Memphis, Tenn., who started most of the games a year ago at the fullback spot, and sophomore Hugh Fletcher of Webster Groves, Mo., who has seen starting duty.

Also on hand are heralded freshman Wash Henry, a prep all-American selection last year at New Orleans, La., St. Augustine High, and fine-running sophomores Joe Holtgrewe of Belleville (West) and Mike O'Connell of Decatur (St. Teresa).

"We probably have our most depth in offensive backfield, especially at fullback," Weaver said. "On the other hand, tight end has been an area of concern for us because there is no returning player at that position.

"So we are going to take a look at Boyd at tight end," Weaver said. "He has excellent quickness and good hands and will help us to get more quality players among our top two teams."

Elsewhere on offense, Weaver notes progress the Salukis are making in getting their wishbone offense ready for the season. Hopefully, the defense, which has several question marks, can make similar strides.

"Our defensive down linemen looked good in our first scrimmage," Weaver said. "And we are having some young players come to the front in the secondary."

"The Saluki offensive backfield practices its basic play in the wishbone offense. Quarterback Leonard Hopkins hands-off to fullback Lawrence Boyd in the first phase of the triple option. Halfbacks Andre Herrera (left) and Vic Major start to sprint out for the second and third phases.

Working their way to the front are a pair of freshmen, Gordon Willis of Quincy (Senior) and Kevin Woods, who led Southwest High to the St. Louis Public League championship last fall.

Up front, defensive tackles Steve Weathersby, Chicago (Lane Tech), and Rodney Sherrill, Liberal, Ks., are standouts with a battle going on for the top spot at nose guard between junior Tom Ippolito of Massapequa, N.Y., and three-year letterman Primus Jones from Cahokia.

"Tommy really worked hard this summer," Weaver said. "He came back in outstanding shape and weighs about 15 pounds more than he did a year ago. It is an interesting rivalry at nose guard."

Ippolito, now at 220 pounds, actually started the season at linebacker last fall, but moved into the trenches when injuries decimated the tackle ranks midway through the year.

And behind the front line, the linebackers have begun to make some noise. Heading the way are sophomore Dan Brown of Webster Groves, Mo., who started ten games a year ago, and junior Carlton Spain of Scotlandville, La. "Carlton won the 'big hit' award for his hitting in the first scrimmage which caused one fumble," Weaver said. "And on the second unit, Billy Hadfield (soph., Carterville) had the best practice since he has been at SIU and led the scrimmage in tackles."

"We need to continue our concentration," Weaver said, "we have a long way to go. Fortunately, we haven't had any serious injuries.

"We will probably scrimmage once, maybe twice more before the first game," Weaver said, "and try to get much of our contact work done in the group sessions."

Following the Southwestern Louisiana trip, the Salukis open a three-game homestand in renovated McAndrew Stadium. Indiana State is the first opponent for Rededication Day, September 20.

A position-by-position analysis of the '75 Salukis: Quarterback is questionable, Soph Gary Mann was doing an excellent offensive job before suffering a broken ankle. Leonard Hopkins is assigned the tough job of filling in until Mann is available.

Halfbacks: Good and deep. Fullbacks: Sound, with Lawrence Boyd and Hugh Fletcher as names to watch. "Wide Receiver: A potential star here in Ivy Moore. Tight end: Maybe the single biggest problem due to the loss of returning letterman Mike Bruegge who entered the family business. Tackles: The names to look for are Chuck Blume, Anthony Fabrizio and Ray Melick. Guards at left tackle: Mike Thompson and Jimmie Walker will be strong in this position. Center: John Doherty and Jay Fields are challenging Matt Bowman. Offense has the potential to carry this team. Several newcomers have a chance to fill key roles such as 300-pound juco transfer Willie Vance in the line and several freshmen linemen with size.

Defensively speaking, improvement is needed on defense if the Salukis are to be a better team. Injuries could be a real problem in the line with freshmen expected to help in the secondary. If the offense can control the pace in the early games, it would help the defense gain confidence.

Place-kicks and kickoffs are excellent. Talented Ken Seaman had an off season last fall but the soccer-style specialist has ability to be a great one. Punts: Adequate. John Rende kicks high but not far. Returns: Good. Vic Major would have ranked in top three nationally in kickoff returns had he recorded enough attempts and Ivy Moore is deadly on kickoff returns. Gutty John Flowers handled punt returns last year and ranked third in the Missouri Valley.

VALLEY CROSS COUNTRY at Carbondale will get underway Nov. 1, when SIU hosts its first Missouri Valley Conference championship meet at Midland Hills Country Club. This championship highlights an 11-meet 1975 Saluki schedule which finds coach Lew Hartzog's crew hosting Indiana, Illinois State, St. Louis and Long Beach State in five-mile tests.

The Salukis return four lettermen off last fall's 2-3 campaign, John St. John, a senior from Des Plaines, reigns as the Valley's six-mile champion.

Meets include: Sept. 13 at Illinois; 19, Indiana; 27, Illinois State and St. Louis; 30, at Murray State.

1899 STUART BRAINERD, '2, of Denver, Colo., and his wife, ETHEL CRUSE, ex '99, celebrated their 73rd anniversary. Brainerd is 98. Mrs. Brainerd is 94. Three of their five children are retired teachers.

1900 MRS. MATTIE JANE ROBINSON AFFOLTER, '2, a resident at a home for the elderly in Colorado Springs, Colo., participated in a talent showcase for the singing and dancing senior citizen residents of the home. Ninety-nine and still going strong, Mattie Affolter was the star of the choir. She performed for an audience of 250 people—friends, family and other residents of the nursing home. The show was four weeks in rehearsal but the efforts were reported so well-received that an encore production is sure to be staged.

1914 DAVID FRANK DELAP, '2, sends the Alumnus, from his home in Bozeman, Mont. where he has lived since 1949, reminiscences of "college days" and rival pranks. He recalls when he was a freshman, taking down the senior-sophomore colors from the top of the weather vane on Old Main at 2 A.M. one morning and putting up his junior-freshman colors. "When I was a junior, HERBERT MERRYMON and I stole the senior colors from the island on the campus (which was located south of Wheeler Hall), swam back to the bank and ran from one end of the campus to the other with a dozen seniors trying to tackle us, but unsuccessfully."

1925 MRS. GEORGE E. DODD (GERTRUDE ALICE ROWLEY, '22-2) is widowed and living in Phoenix, Ariz., where she is a member of the Phoenix Women's Club. She has had some

'Man of Many Pipes' is Honored

By his own admission, he's a farmboy. Seminoles gave him the name, "Man of Many Pipes," because of his passion for long-stem briars. He's a self-taught archaeologist, possessing no college degree. At summer commencement exercises, this 70-year-old retired SIU staffer was given Southern Illinois University's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Award.

Through a lifetime of digging in his search for prehistoric artifacts, Irvin Peithmann has discovered a widely recognized professional reputation in archaeology and the history of early Indians and of Illinois.

Peithmann retired from the SIU staff two years ago after 42 years of service but he was retained as a researcher to maintain contacts with a far-ranging archaeological restoration project at Ft. De Chartres in Randolph County. Discoveries triggered by Peithmann since 1967 at the historic Kaskaskia outpost have led to explorations which may completely redefine the history of the fort and patterns of late 17th and 18th century settlement, when the crown of France claimed that part of North America.

For a man who possesses no college degree, Peithmann has earned some solid testaments to his dedication. The Illinois General Assembly, the Illinois Archaeological Society, Southern Illinois Inc. and the National Hall of Fame for Famous American Indians have recognized his accomplishments. Peithmann is an honorary member of the Seminole Indians and the Chicasaw Nation.

If there's to be a monument to Peithmann, his closest colleagues say, it most likely will be whatever form historical development takes in the Ft. De Chartres-Kaskaskia area. That region is a cradle of French colonial occupancy in the Illinois territory and Peithmann's discoveries there have added whole chapters to the raw documents of history.
poetry published in the Illinois section of the North American Book of Verse. Mrs. Dodd has two sons, Halbert and Everett.

1933 Mr. and Mrs. Marc Green (Helen Bricker ex '37) plan to stay in Western Springs, following Mr. Green's retirement after 39 years with the Milwaukee Road News Bureau, most of which were with the railroad's public relations department. 1955 Mary Jane Phillips, M.S. '66, has returned from Manaus, Brazil after two years with the Amazon English Language Association where she was teaching in a private English speaking school started by the missionaries. She had been teaching in Pana, Ill., prior to accepting the foreign teaching position. "I had taught a couple of years in Guatemala before going to Brazil," Miss Phillips explained. "It's an inexpensive way to travel, but after two years, I decided I wanted to see all the seasons again. It's July all the time over there. Miss Phillips says she hopes to remain in the southern Illinois area for a while "until I take a notion to go somewhere else, that is."

David W. Shaw is eastern district manager of Fine Paper Sales, including New England, the Mid-Atlantic States, and Washington, D.C. He and his wife, Mary, and their two daughters live in Suffolk, Va.

1957 Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whiteside (Jo Ann McIntire, '57) are residing in Merritt Island, Fla., with their two sons, Tommy, 14, and Michael, 8. Those listed above completed life memberships in the SIU Alumni Association during the past two months before deadline time. If you are a member of the Association or qualify for membership, perhaps now is the time for you to consider joining the more than 2300 alumni who already have life memberships or are working toward them. Cost is $125 (minimum annual installment payment $25 over five years) or $150 (minimum annual installment payment $15 over ten years) for a single life membership. Family life memberships (if both husband and wife are alumni) are $150 (minimum annual installment $30 over five years) or $175 (minimum annual installment $17.50 over ten years). Benefits begin immediately. Life membership payments go into a permanent endowment, the interest supporting alumni activities in perpetuity.
