For Third Straight Year

Fall Freshman Enrollment Limited

While some universities are experiencing a decrease in applications for fall, SIU has decided to limit freshman enrollment.

For the third consecutive year, the University stopped accepting admission applications for freshmen July 17, Kirby Browning, director of admissions, said.

This application curtailment applies only to freshmen entering SIU for the first time. Continuing, re-entering, transferring students and graduate students will not be affected.

Applications received through the end of the business day July 17 were considered and processed, Browning said.

The cutoff date came earlier this year than last year's limit which was imposed Aug. 1. The 1976 deadline was July 1.

"We regret having to limit enrollment, but for the past three years no additional state funds have been made available for growth," SIU President Warren W. Brandt said.

Brandt, in announcing the enrollment limit for this year, said 530 more new freshmen than last year had been admitted to the University for fall semester by earlier this month.

As of July 1, SIU has received 8,762 applications from new freshmen compared to 7,949 applications at the same time last year.

Of these applications, the University has admitted 6,481 new freshmen compared to 5,961 new freshmen in 1977, Browning said.

Browning expects between 3,150 and 3,175 new freshmen to actually register this fall. This is compared to 3,061 new freshmen who did register in the fall of 1977. He estimated the total freshmen class to be around 5,000.

Last year, SIU enrolled 22,337 compared to 22,119 in 1976. Browning expects the total fall enrollment to be slightly under the 1977 fall enrollment.

Flying Salukis Take Second National Title

For the second consecutive year, the SIU Flying Salukis have won the National Intercollegiate Flying Association (NIFA) championship.

In an unprecedented repeat of last year's national championship, the Salukis logged first-place finishes in three of five team events and placed team members in two individual contests to beat out 24 other leading collegiate flying teams for top honors at the three-day air meet, held in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The event was hosted by Middle Tennessee State University.

First-place finishes in team competition for the coveted Loening Trophy, Bendix team flying championship and men's achievement competition spark SIU's overall win.

SIU's second straight national title is believed to be a first in the history of NIFA national competition observers, Tom Young, SIU flying coach, said. And the two-year win of the Loening Trophy also is believed to be a first.

This trophy was first presented in 1929 to the Harvard Flying Club by aviation pioneer Grover Leoning. It is presented each year to the country's outstanding flying team as measured by air meet performance, air safety and club activities. SIU also won the honor in 1974.

Individually, the Salukis top honors were won by SIU flyer Joe Frasch of Champaign, in the men's achievement competition. He was named NIFA's pilot of the year. He also placed fourth in the cross-country navigation event, which requires flyers to plan and fly an irregularly shaped cross-country course.

Christine Kuranowicz of Carbondale, came home third in the cross-country navigation event. She missed her estimated flight time by only five seconds and was within four-tenths of a gallon of her planned fuel consumption.

Susan Staples of Champaign also finished high in the power-off landing competition.

More than 200 collegiate flying teams across the country began competition for the title. Trailing SIU in second and third places were Auburn and the Univ. of North Dakota.

SIU's team is coached by Young and Jerry Kennedy, SIU pilots and flight instructors.
SIU To Train Nepalese Teachers

An SIU educator is packing his bags for a trip that will be the first step in a multi-million dollar program to provide a remote Asian country with solidly trained grade school teachers.

Donald D. Paige, professor of curriculum, instruction and media, said he expects to leave in early August for Nepal, a country in the Himalayan Mountains between India and Tibet.

There he will spend four years coordinating an SIU-C effort to create a program that will use short wave radios to train some 20,000 first, second and third grade teachers, most of whom are located in primitive, isolated mountain valleys. Many of them lack even a high school education.

The program is being funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), according to Charles B. Klasek, director of the SIU-C Office of International Education and home-base coordinator for the effort. Although a final project price tag has yet to be worked out, said he expects to leave in early August for Nepal. He spent 1969-72 in the country on another AID mission in which 10 SIU-C faculty members set up a network of temporary teacher training “campuses” throughout the country.

The program will be a massive one, Lalsek and Paige said. Paige will lead three other SIU specialists — as yet unchosen — who will each spend a year to 18 months in the small country. The team will be responsible for everything from buying 2,700 solar-powered radios (and training a staff of Nepalese to teach villagers how to use them) to coordinating broadcasts of the training course itself by Radio Nepal.

“We’ll mostly be teaching techniques — how to teach math, how to teach languages, arts, how to use a textbook, how to discipline kids,” Klasek said.

But the key — and the challenge for SIU-C personnel — will be adapting the course to the Nepalese culture. Paige is no stranger to Nepal. He spent 1969-72 in the country on another AID mission in which 10 SIU-C faculty members set up a network of temporary teacher training “campuses” throughout the country.

The problem, he said, was that travel in Nepal is so difficult many teachers were unable to attend the eight-week crash courses. Even the government used short wave radios for all important communication, he added, because it can take more than two weeks of travel to reach outlying regions.

Paige and Klasek agree the program will benefit SIU by continuing close ties with the Nepalese and by giving a number of faculty members the chance to join the project team on a temporary basis.

At last the long lines of traffic on Grand Avenue may be eased. Since the beginning of summer school, the avenue has been closed so that the road could be widened to four 12-foot lanes with a median at the intersection of Wall Street and Grand.

The rebuilding extends from Wall Street to Illinois Ave. Target completion is Oct. 23. Cost of the project is $320,153, paid partly by the City of Carbondale and partly by an Economic Development Association grant. (Photo by Herb Nelson)

Archaeologists Dig Away at History

SIU archaeologists have begun to dig away at Southern Illinois history on privately owned site near Carrier Mills, Ill.

Hopefully, the dig will unearth evidence detailing the daily lives of early Southern Illinois inhabitants and also contribute additional information about early black American history.

The dig, SIU’s first large excavation in Southern Illinois, is being conducted near Carrier Mills, on 140 acres owned by the Peabody Coal Co. The work is being financed by a four-year, $811,000 grant from Peabody. The company plans to begin mining the site by the end of 1979.

“It is very unusual for a company to put such a substantial amount into excavation projects in order to salvage whatever possible of an area’s archaeological record before mining operations begin,” George Gumerman, director of the SIU Center for Archaeological Investigations, said.

Evidence already gathered at the site’s surface could date back as far as 8000 B.C., Gumerman said.

“We really know very little about the early inhabitants of Southern Illinois,” he said. “Our excavations should tell us how the people of this area lived, things like what their food resources were and what kinds of housing they had.”

In addition, researchers will be gathering information on a group of freed slaves who moved to the Carrier Mills area in 1815. The site of that community is “right on top of the pre-historic site,” Gumerman said.

Descendants of the freed slaves who still live in Carrier Mills will be interviewed as part of the project. Researchers hope to reconstruct family trees from this data.

In addition to this project, SIU archaeologists this summer will:

- record all Indian sites in Giant City State Park with the aid of a $10,000 State Dept. of Conservation grant.
- conduct excavations at Black Mesa in northeastern Arizona with funds from Peabody.
- assist the Illinois Dept. of Transportation in the excavation of several highway right-of-way.
- conduct an archaeological field school and dig near Brookport, Ill.

The work is being financed by a four-year, $811,000 grant from Peabody. The company plans to begin mining the site by the end of 1979.
Funeral June 8 in Arena

Lambert Dies In Hotel Fire

"You gotta love the game." And love, live and coach basketball is just what Paul Lambert did in the SIU Arena for the past eight years.

It was appropriate then that over 1,000 of his friends, fans, former basketball players, colleagues and administrators paid their final respects to him June 8 in a memorial service at the Arena.

Two days earlier (June 6), his life was tragically ended in a hotel fire in Columbus, Ga.

Lambert was the only person killed in the early morning fire at the Airport Holiday Inn.

Former Saluki assistant basketball coach Herman Williams, now assistant coach at Auburn University, was in another section of the hotel and was not injured.

It was Lambert's affection for basketball that encouraged him to accept a new coaching position April 7 at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala.

It was a tough decision, but as he said at his press conference that day, "Auburn is a real personal challenge..."

And challenge was a word that Lambert never took lightly.

From April until June, he commuted to and from Carbondale, sizing up his new team; buying a new home for his family and making speaking engagements whenever possible so the Auburn fans and alumni could get a chance to know him.

Enthusiastically, Lambert worked hard to make the transition easy for everyone.

Sunday, June 4, he said his good-byes to over 120 friends who gathered at Carbondale Elks Club.

Monday, Lambert was back on the road again. This time he spoke to coaches at a basketball clinic in Columbus, Ga.

Tuesday, he died in the fire.

The news of Lambert's death quickly reached and saddened the SIU and Auburn campuses.

SIU President Warren W. Brandt called Lambert's death a "tragic loss." "There is not very much I can say at a time like this. I reach out to him and all his family."

"This came at a time when he just got a big break in his career. It's a type of thing you can't believe when you just hear it."

Brandt echoed the sentiments of campus and Southern Illinois, one of total disbelief.

Most touching was a eulogy at the memorial service by Mike Glenn, former All-American with the Salukis.

Glenn reminisced about Lambert's ability to bounce back.

Also, he talked about the many times Lambert had helped him when he was down and out.

"I remember that when I broke my neck last year and bounced back, even though the doctors said I might never play again, it was because of Lambert's help."

Glenn finished up by saying, "I loved Coach Lambert. And he will never die — not as long as Mike Glenn is alive."

At SIU, Lambert was able to accomplish something his predecessors never did — guide the Salukis into the NCAA Division I tournament.

It was the 1976-77 Saluki team who compiled a 22-6 record and earned the Missouri Valley Conference title that played in the NCAA tournament.

This year's team finished with a 17-10 slate, placed second in the MVC, but lost in the first round of the conference tourney to Drake.

During his eight years at SIU, Lambert compiled a 126-83 record, upping his career total to 227-159.

Lambert is survived by his wife, Carol; two daughters, Julie and Jill who now live in Auburn, Ala.; his parents; two brothers and a sister.

Former Saluki guard Mike Glenn spoke at the memorial services for former SIU basketball coach Paul Lambert June 6 at the SIU Arena. In a touching eulogy, Glenn told an estimated 1,000 persons paying their last respects to Lambert, "I loved Coach Lambert. And he will never die — not as long as Mike Glenn is alive."

Developer Donates Part of Greens Fees to SIU

The SIU Foundation has accepted a developer's offer to give the University one-quarter of the greens fees he will collect at a golf course to be built in Marion, Ill.

Foundation executive director Joseph Goodman estimated that the offer could bring the University between $25,000 and $40,000 yearly.

The developer, Richard J. Heath, plans to start building the Saluki National Golf Course this summer.

Originally, Heath, a co-owner of Oak Meadow Country Club in Evansville, Ind., had planned to build an 18-hole campus championship course on land leased from SIU.

However, the plans to do so were dropped in May after he and University officials were unable to resolve problems that cropped up from zoning, licensing and drainage requirements and difficulties in buying private land for a clubhouse.

Subsequently, Heath purchased a site just west of Interstate 57 near Marion, and now predicts the course will be ready in about one year. The move to Marion will not alter the Saluki National name or plans to give discounts to SIU students and personnel.

Use of the funds is unrestricted, Goodman said, meaning that Heath has not asked that the funds be used for any single project. The nonprofit Foundation uses the funds it raises for scholarships, student loans, research projects and special purchases not in the SIU budget.

Missouri Prof Named to New Chair

University of Missouri professor Lewis E. Davids has been named Illinois Bankers Professor of Bank Management at SIU.

Currently, Davids holds the first and only endowed banking professorship in Missouri, and is the chairman of the University's Dept. of Finance.

Since 1961, Davids has been the Hill Professor of Bank Management at Missouri. He will be the first person to hold the SIU position.

Within five years, the position is expected to become the state's first endowed banking chair at a public university, according to John R. Darling, dean of the SIU College of Business and Administration.

The appointment is effective Aug. 1.

BANKERS THOUGHOUT ILLINOIS ARE EXPECTED TO CONTRIBUTE SOME $1 MILLION TOWARD ENDOWMENT OF THE BANKING CHAIR, DARLING SAID. INCOME FROM THE ENDOWMENT IS EXPECTED TO BE USED TO PAY THE SALARY.

A native of New York City, Davids, 61, taught at Drake University, Texas A&M, the University of Georgia, Harvard Business School, the Southern Methodist University Graduate School, Louisiana State University and Northwestern Intermediate Banking School at Lewis and Clark College.

Davids was senior economist and chief of economic analysis for the federal office of price stabilization in 1961. Before that, he worked for several New York banks.

He holds three degrees from New York University, including a Ph.D. in finance and banking.

The new SIU banking chair will become the second endowed chair at SIU. The Vandeveer Chair of Economics was established in 1959.
Clifford Harper Resigns

Clifford D. Harper, 42-year-old dean of general academic programs at SIU, has resigned to accept the position of provost and dean of the university at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn.

Harper started at Fisk July 3. The private school enrolls some 1,300 students.

Harper, an East St. Louis native, was named first dean of SIU's general academic programs unit when it was set up in a 1976 reorganization. It includes a variety of academic support efforts ranging from general academic programs unit to the Center for Basic Skills.

Before coming to SIU in 1973 as head of the University's Black American Studies program, Harper had been an assistant professor of literature at Sangamon State University in Springfield and director of the collegiate assistance program at St. Louis University (1969-72).

Foundation Gets Gifts

The SIU Foundation recently accepted a gift of cash, bonds and Florida real estate that made up a foundation organized 21 years ago to send Union County (III.) students to the University.

SIU Foundation executive director Joseph N. Goodman said the new assets will continue to be earmarked for the same purpose.

Goodman accepted the bonds and legal documents from Union County native Melvin C. Lockard, board chairman of the First National Bank of Mattoon and the last president of the Russell Tuthill Foundation. Lockard was the secretary of the SIU Board of Trustees from 1953 to 1971.

According to Goodman, the land alone is worth $250,000 and should net the SIU Foundation some $750,000 over the life of a long-term lease now on the land. The property is located in Miami, Fla.

The old foundation was set up in 1957 by Russell Tuthill of Anna, a farmer and businessman who built the Holiday Inns in Carbondale, Marion and Benton. With him on the original board of trustees were Margaret F. Kirkpatrick of Anna, who died in 1976, and Stanford L. Hoye, who is now the principal owner of the Carbondale and Marion Holiday Inns. Tuthill died in 1967.

Hoye was instrumental in proposing the gift to the SIU Foundation, Lockard said.

Over the last 15 years, the Tuthill Foundation gave scholarships to 60 Union County high school graduates to come to Southern.

Goodman said any income beyond the cost of the scholarship program will be funneled into other scholarships or SIU Foundation programs.

Continued accreditation for the SIU School of law is still no certain thing, the school's dean said June 30.

But, Dean Hiram H. Lesar said, if Gov. James Thompson signs a bill approved by the legislature to fund construction of a new law school building, and if there are no unforeseen hitches, the American Bar Association is likely to at least continue the SIU law school's provisional accreditation.

The ABA's accreditation committee, acting on the findings of an April inspection, ruled that the law school fails short of ABA standards for physical plant and library space, Lesar said. In a June 7 letter, the committee demanded a report on progress toward the long-promised new building by July 5.

The letter also reminded University officials that the law school's five-year provisional accreditation expires in February.

Dougherty Named Vice-President

Clarence G. Dougherty, director of the SIU campus services, became a vice-president June 8 when the University's Board of Trustees changed the position title.

Dougherty becomes the University's fifth vice-president. Others head the areas of academic affairs and research, financial affairs, student affairs and University relations.

SIU President Warren W. Brandt said the title change was requested to more accurately reflect responsibilities of the position.

Dougherty, 55, was named director of campus services in 1975. Previously he was the director of the SIU Student Center.

Law School Accreditation Still Questionable

Lesar said.

Lesar, and University President Warren W. Brandt, wrote the ABA June 28, saying the legislature passed a bill appropriating $7,580,000 for the building, and that the governor is not expected to sign the bill until some time in July.

Lesar said he is "cautiously optimistic" that Thompson will sign the bill.

"He has never officially said he would sign it, but on the other hand he has said he would not let the law school lose its accreditation," Lesar said. "And if he doesn't sign it, that's going to be the effect — loss of accreditation.

ABA accreditation is necessary for a law school's graduates to be eligible for bar examinations. The law school, which accepted its first class in the fall of 1973, received a five-year provisional accreditation in February, 1974.

Summer Enrollment Down 122

Summer session enrollment at the University is 9,835 students, a drop of 122 from last year.

Totals are for the 10th day of classes, Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, said. Enrollment will be boosted by late-starting workshops and other credit programs, he said.

The summer tally shows 7,892 students attending classes on the main Carbondale campus and 1,943 registered at other SIU off-campus centers, including military bases throughout the country.

The on-campus total dropped more than 500 from last year while the off-campus figure is up nearly 400.

Browning said 6,655 undergraduates are enrolled for the summer, with 2,681 students in master's and Ph.D. degree programs. Another 299 are enrolled in the SIU schools of law and medicine.

Forestry Grant to Evaluate Potential Wilderness Areas

A $186,000 grant was recently awarded to the SIU Dept. of Forestry by the Illinois Governor's Office on Manpower to train 25 researchers to evaluate potential wilderness areas in the Southern Illinois region.

In addition, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) grant hopes to inform the public on the benefits of wilderness designation in Southern Illinois and increase public awareness of the wilderness issues.

Project director is James Fralish, associate professor of forestry. Project faculty advisors include George Weaver, John Burde, Dwight McCurdy and Paul Yambert, all of the SIU Dept. of Forestry. Phil Robertson, associate professor of botany, also is a project advisor.

James Sudanik, project supervisor, believes the 25 researchers will be better prepared to hold permanent positions in forestry, recreation and conservation when the project terminates Sept. 30.

SIU To Host Volleyball Exhibition

SIU has been selected as one of three state sites to host a volleyball exhibition Oct. 15, between the United States national team and the Japanese Olympic gold medal winning team.

The exhibition, sponsored nationally by the United States Volleyball Association (USVBA), will be held at the SIU Arena.

The matchup will pit an American team dominated largely by former West Coast collegians against a Japanese squad that defeated the U.S.S.R. in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal to cop a gold medal.

The Carbondale appearance is one of 30 stops the two national women's teams will make across the United States (including Alaska and Hawaii) this coming October.

Other Illinois stops the U.S. and Japanese teams will make are: Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., Oct. 13; Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., Oct. 14. Exhibitions will also be held in St. Louis, Mo., and Muncie, Ind.

For persons interested in obtaining tickets for the Japanese-American volleyball exhibition, please contact Mitch Parkinson at Women's Intercollegiate Athletics.

Roggy Wins NCAA Javelin Title

Saluki ace Bob Roggy capped a remarkable career in early June by winning the NCAA javelin championships in Eugene, Ore., with a throw of 283-9.

During the qualifying NCAA round, Roggy hurled the javelin 293 feet, missing the American record by seven feet. It was the top throw in the world thus far this year, a new NCAA championships meet record and the third longest throw ever by an American.

So impressed by Roggy, the 14,135 NCAA fans in Eugene, demanded he take a victory lap, unheard of for a javelin thrower. Roggy declined, but then agreed as seven feet. It was the top throw in the world thus far this year, a new NCAA and the winning the NCAA javelin champions.

Besides the 10 team points scored by Roggy, SIU got a fourth-place finish from Mike Kee in the 100-meter dash and a fifth-place finish from Andy Roberts in the 100-meter to finish with 16 points, good for a 14th place tie with Kansas and Providence in the final NCAA standings.

While the NCAA title was the crowning glory of a fantastic senior year, Roggy virtually won everything possible while setting several new school and NCAA records.

The Holmdel, N.J., native not only won the national title, but also was the winner in the Kansas and Drake Relays as well as winning the Illinois Intercollegiates and the Missouri Valley Conference javelin titles.

In addition, during the course of his four-year-SIU-career, Roggy set records for the Florida, Kansas, Drake and Arkansas Relays as well as the Idaho Intercollegiates and the MVC.

The NCAA victory for the 6-2, 255 pounder culminated a remarkable rise to prominence over his four years at Southern. Recruited right out of high school as a 235-foot thrower, Roggy showed yearly progressions of 235 as a freshman, 252-2 as a sophomore, 267-5 as a junior and then this year's 283-9.

So far in 1978, Roggy has the top four throws in America and will participate in the U.S.-USSR meet in July to be held in Berkeley, Cal. That appearance came about due to his second place finish in the national AAU championships, held one week after the NCAAs. The AAU meet was the only non-winning effort of Roggy this year, but he still managed a second place despite an injured back.

Baseballers Finish Second in Regional

SIU head baseball coach Itchy Jones led his Saluki baseball squad into the NCAA playoffs this year for the seventh time in his nine years.

Jones' Salukis were led by first team All-American Dave Stieb, who hit .394 with a school record 12 home runs. The junior centerfielder from San Jose, Cal., also led the team in RHU's with 48 as SIU racked up a 37-14 mark while finishing second to Oral Roberts in the NCAA Midwest Regional.

The Salukis had qualified for the regional by romping through the field at the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in four straight games to capture their second consecutive Valley title.

Glenn, Herrera, Brown Sign
Pro Contracts

Three former Saluki athletes recently signed professional contracts.

The three to sign are: Mike Glenn, basketball and Andre Herrera and Dan Brown, football.

One of the finest shooting guards in Saluki basketball history, Glenn, signed a three-year contract with the New York Knicks.

Glenn, 6-3, was selected by the Chicago Bulls in the second round of the 1977 NBA draft, and was the first person picked in that round. Because he suffered a fractured neck vertebra in an automobile accident near his home in Rome, Ga., Glenn never got to training camp.

Brown, the final Saluki to sign a pro contract, signed with the St. Louis Cardinals. A starter on the Saluki defensive unit for the past four seasons, the former Saluki lineman signed as a free agent. He reported to the Cardinal camp July 15.

Herrera, who virtually rewrote all SIU rushing records in 1976, reported to Oakland's free agent camp July 10.

The 6-0, 200-pound tailback from Bronx, N.Y., was drafted in the sixth round last year by the Kansas City Chiefs, but was waived by the club midway through the exhibition season.

At SIU, Herrera set an NCAA record in 1976 with 214 yards rushing in the first quarter against Northern Illinois to break a 19-year record of 182 yards set by Mercury Morris. He gained 319 yards that rainy Saturday to rank eighth on the NCAA all-time list.

Brown, 6-1, 225-pound native of Webster Groves, Mo., was an all-Missouri Valley Conference selection last season.

He led Saluki gridders in tackles for the second straight year last season with 141. The total includes 82 solo tackles.

Additionally, he led the team in fumble recoveries (4), had one pass deflection and one interception to his credit.
