Search effort launched

The hunt for a new president of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale got under way officially Oct. 4 when a 12-member campus committee charged with the search met for the first time, elected a chairperson and got down to work.

Picked to head the Presidential Search Committee was Jo Ann Boydston, director of SIUC's prestigious Center for Dewey Studies and a 24-year faculty veteran. The group has been given a June 1, 1980 deadline to submit the names of three top-rated aspirants to SIU Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw. He will make a final recommendation to the board of trustees.

"It's obviously a tremendous responsibility and we have an outstanding committee to assume it," said Ms. Boydston. "All of us are earnestly concerned with doing a conscientious job and representing our constituencies. No one's on this committee for ego purposes."

Representing SIUC alumni on the committee is Bill O'Brien Alumni Association president. Other constituencies represented are undergraduate and graduate students and faculty, administrative-professional staff, deans and civil service employees.

The search will be nationwide and final-round candidates are expected to be interviewed at their home locations as well as on the SIUC campus.

JO ANN BOYDSTON

Shaw has briefed the group on general guidelines for the search. The committee is drafting its working procedures, a prospectus for the job and set of qualifications for candidates. Those will be submitted to Shaw for his approval.

Speaking at an open forum on the campus, Shaw said he wouldn't spell out his own ideas about presidential qualifications before he'd talked them over with the search group. But he said the committee will be "looking for someone who can communicate with the publics of SIUC, someone who is a good leader in the classic sense, and someone who is effective as well as efficient."

Said Shaw: "Carbondale deserves more than someone who can manage. The president must be someone who can lead."

Acting President Hiram H. Lesar had announced plans to retire even before he was named to the interim position in June, following the resignation of then-president Warren W. Brandt. Lesar, who also is dean of the law school, expects to step out next August.

The search committee's leader has been associated with SIUC's Dewey Center since it was started as a co-operative research project in 1961. As part of that job, she is general editor of the SIU Press' massive, multi-volume "Collected Works of John Dewey."

Shaw himself has settled in as system chancellor by organizing work offices on both the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses. He has an efficiency unit at SIUC's old University Courts apartments for overnight use when he's in Carbondale. His family home base will continue to be in Edwardsville.

The new system governing structure took further shape in September when the trustees approved James M. Brown, former system general secretary, as vice-chancellor. Most of Brown's former board of trustees office staffers remain on the job to work with the new central team, but with different job titles. They're all based in Carbondale.

Closed meeting law set

Southern Illinois University's board of trustees had adopted a formal policy to assure that its executive sessions "pass muster" under the Illinois Open Meetings Act.

A five point "policy and procedures" paper went into the board's bylaws after approval by the trustees at their November meeting.

Under the policy, executive sessions aren't to be scheduled routinely and will not be ordinarily conducted before a regular meeting. Requests for closed meetings will go to the board chairman or system chancellor, and—after talking it over with legal counsel—they will decide whether the topic can be legally dealt with in private.

Board members or others present at closed session may raise points of order if they think the discussion has strayed from permissible topics. And at the first open meeting after a closed one, the board chairman will spell out all exceptions to the open meetings law under which the meeting was held.
Lacey associate VP; Moore book a flick

Jereomo (Jerry) Lacey, special assistant to George Maio, vice-president, has been named associate vice-president under Mace. Lacey, 40, has been a special assistant in the vice-president's office (financial aid and services) since 1973. Before that he was coordinator of University services to Carbondale and assistant to the president for affirmative action.

He is a native of Alton and has three degrees from SIUC. His wife, Ella, is a field health coordinator in the School of Medicine.

Negotiations are under way in England to make a movie based on "The Priest of Love," a biography of British novelist D. H. Lawrence written by Harry T. Moore, emeritus research professor of English at SIUC. According to the London Evening Standard, Christopher Miles would direct the picture. Miles, the brother of actress Sara Miles, is a leading British film talent. The Standard said Miles wants Tom Courtenay to play Lawrence in the film biography. His choice for the female lead—to play Lawrence's German-born wife, Frieda—is Liv Ullman, according to the newspaper.

Moore, 71, retired at SIUC in 1976 and continues to live in Carterville.

Alumni Recognition Game, SIUC-Shockers

The fifth annual Alumni Recognition Basketball Game is set for Saturday, Jan. 12, 1980, in the SIUC Arena. The Shockers will play Wichita State at 7:35 p.m. in a Missouri Valley Conference matchup.

Each basketball season the SIUC Alumni Association and the SIUC men's intercollegiate athletics department designate one "recognition" game as a way of expressing their appreciation to alumni for their support of the University and its athletic programs.

Tickets may be obtained by writing to the SIUC Alumni Office, Faner Hall, Room 2179, Carbondale, Ill. 62901, or you may come by the office and pick up tickets.

Alumni and members of their families may purchase tickets for $1 each. Children should be made payable to the SIUC men's intercollegiate athletics department and should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Orders will be returned to you after Dec. 1.

Tickets also will be available at a special window at the Arena on the night of the game.

Halloween downtown: "Not bad, police say"

Thousands of revelers, including costumed Southern Illinois University-Carbondale students, thronged downtown Carbondale the night of Oct. 27 to celebrate early Halloween in what has become a raucous Carbondale tradition.

Police estimated between 12,000 and 15,000 persons crowded the six-block stretch of Carbondale's South Illinois Avenue known as "the strip" for an evening of noisy, colorful and liquid celebration that stretched into the early hours of Sunday morning.

South Illinois Avenue between Walnut and College Streets was closed to traffic Saturday evening as bottles, cups and drinks cups. By that time, city cleanup crews had made some dents in the ankle-deep windows of bottles, cans and drink cups.

Carbondale police department spokesmen described the crowd as larger than last year, but said celebrants were more orderly than those of recent years. Police chief Ed Hogan said most of the noise-makers seemed more interested in having a good time than in causing trouble. About 18 arrests for minor offenses (disorderly conduct, underage alcohol, minor property damage, etc.) were reported Saturday night. Police estimated the entire weekend total of 40 arrests was less than half that of the stormy year before.

SIUC's Undergraduate Student Organization has planned to honor the annual Saturday night affair as "Campusville '79," with SIUC student groups providing entertainment along South Illinois Avenue and selling food and souvenirs. Paid student marshals also were to be on hand to keep the scene under control. But only a half-dozen of about 300 student organizations actually set up booths, and the marshals' duties were cut back because only a handful of students applied for the jobs.

Smokestack cleanup project gets go-ahead

A long-planned pollution control system for SIUC's central steam plant moved a step closer to reality early this semester when Gov. James Thompson signed a bill appropriating $4.5 million for the project.

When the electrostatic precipitator is installed and running—probably early in 1982—it should bring the plant into compliance with Illinois Environmental Protection Agency rules on emission of fly ash and other particulates.

John Meister, SIUC pollution control officer, said it could be late in February, 1982, before the system is finished and started up. Precipitators of the type planned for the steam plant are custom-made and deliveries run about a year from the time equipment is ordered. Bids were to be opened Nov. 7 by the Illinois Capital Development Board. The money planned for the steam plant is essentially a mammoth version of the electronic filters found in some home air-conditioning systems. It will be necessary to knock fly ash and other solid particles out of smoke from the University's coal-fired boilers.

Alumni Digest
Gola Waters
Great Teacher

Gola Waters, associate professor of finance, has been named winner of the 1978 SIUC Great Teacher Award presented by the Alumni Association.

His selection was announced Oct. 13 at the annual Alumni Recognition Luncheon held in conjunction with the SIUC Homecoming.

The Great Teacher Award is given annually to honor classroom teaching excellence. The winner is selected by the members of the SIUC Alumni Association.

Waters received a $1,000 cash award and an engraved plaque.

Waters joined the SIUC faculty in 1960. He was an industrial relations officer for Goodyear Atomic Corp., P. R. Mallory and Co. and for Pure Carbon Co. He is the author of several articles on employment matters.

Waters is a 1951 graduate of St. Ambrose (Iowa) College and received a Ph.D. degree from the University of Iowa in 1957. He has a master's degree (65) and a Ph.D. (70) degrees from SIUC.

A resident of Carbondale, he is married to the former Patricia Gannon of Delmar, Iowa. They have four children.

Three Newcomers join Alumni board

Two incumbents and three newcomers were approved at Homecoming by the SIUC Alumni Legislative Council to fill five vacant spots on the Alumni Association board of directors.

Re-elected were: W. Kent Brandon '61 of Carbondale, an attorney in the Carbondale law firm of Mitchell and Brandon, and Willis Coutney '55 of Normal, who is an associate with the education and development division of Farm Service Co. in Bloomington.

Newcomers are: Rodney Clutts '70 of Anna, Harold A. Kuehn '51 of Du Quoin, and W. Ray Mofield Ph.D. '64 of Hardin.

Clutts is a partner in the law firm of Rendleman, Meehan and Clutts of Anna. He served as assistant state attorney of Jackson County from 1973-75. He has been a member of the Alumni Association's insurance committee since 1976 and currently serves as treasurer of the Union County Alumni Club. He is married to Susan Steck Clutts M.S. '74. They have two children.

Kuehn is a farmer and agricultural leader of national and international repute. He is the past president of the American Soybean Association; founder and director of the Land of Lincoln Soybean Association and was a delegate of the United States' first mission to Russia to promote soybeans.

He was named the SIUC School of Agriculture Alumni of the Year in 1972 and Master Farmer of the Year in 1974 by "Prairie Farmer." In addition, he was a member of the organizing committee of the School of Agriculture Constituent Society; served as its first president and is currently on the board of directors.

Mofield, a professor of radio and television at Murray State University, served on the radio-television faculty at SIUC from 1959-64. He was Kentucky Communications Teacher of the Year in 1977 and received the International Radio-TV Society Teacher Award in 1977, 1978 and 1979. He has served as director and president of the Murray State University's Alumni Association.

He is married and has a daughter.

Three alumni board of director's terms expired at Homecoming. They were: Roger Gray '64 of Cobden, Fred Huff ex '62 of Du Quoin and Paul Schoen '67 of Carbondale.

Board elects O'Brien proxy

Soliciting more alumni input is a top-priority goal of the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Alumni Association's new president.

Assuming office at Homecoming, 56-year-old Bill O'Brien, chairman of the SIUC recreational sports board, said he hopes to funnel more suggestions from alumni into Association programming.

"While the position of president calls for leadership, I feel that I'm a servant of the SIUC alumni body," O'Brien said.

During his presidential term, O'Brien plans to seek new ideas about club activities, constituent societies, alumni events and job placement.

Primarily, he hopes to increase alumni activity by recruiting more Association members.

"If any SIUC alumni have felt that the Association did not listen to their viewpoints, then I want them now to step forward and speak up," O'Brien said.

In his new role, O'Brien said he'll act as spokesperson for the Alumni Association "based on input from the alumni themselves."

O'Brien priorities:

- increase alumni membership, which in turn will help the Association achieve self-sufficiency;
- continue the implementation of Phase II (the addition of alumni demographic data into the computer system) to help the Association define an alumni profile;
- continue the thrust and expansion of alumni constituent societies;
- continue the alumni profile system.

The list of SIUC Alumni Association life members continues to grow. Most recent additions (listed by class year in alphabetical order) are:

1940
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bushnano '40 (Hazel I. Businaro '73), Harrisburg, Ill.; and James Trammel ex '48, Murphysboro.

1960
Frederick J. Borgmiller '60, Murphysboro, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Deuff '61 (Grace Helen Miller '50, '53, '70), Tamms, Ill.; Mrs. Jacob King (Carol A. Goldsmith '61), Carbondale; Robert W. Graf '65, Denver, Colo.; Maj. Donald R. Grant Jr. '65 Minot, N.D.; Jeanette L. Kampen '65, Granite City Ill.; John A. Potokar '65, Bolingbrook, Ill.; Maj. Gunars Bumbulis '66, APO, New York; Roger S. Cleburne '66, Boulder, Colo.; Dale W. Daniels '66, Lafayette, Ind.; Dan Markey '66, Chicago; Timothy H. Smith '66, Lincoln, Ill.; Melvin D. Drew '67, Hanham, Mo.; Cecil J. Hall of Fame to cite 19

Two of Southern Illinois University's premiere trackmen and an all-around athlete who has become one of the nation's top coaches are head of a list of 19 former athletes named to the SIU Hall of Fame.

The inductees are E. Morrow, Sr., of St. Louis, a long-time SIU Athletics official, and Bill Carroll, who anchored Saluki teams which achieved national prominence between 1962 and 1969, and gymnastics-trackman Roger Council lead a group of third-year inductees who will be enshrined in the SIU Hall of Fame during ceremonies set for a dinner meeting at the Student Center, Friday, Feb. 1.

This year's crop of inductees will join 35 others who have been inducted over the last two years. The charter group of 19 Hall of Famers was inducted in 1978.

The nominees are from two groups of athletes and coaches: those whose contributions fell in the time period from 1924 to 1945 and those whose accomplishments came after 1945.

New inductees are:

Eugene Brick's track ex '31 of Columbia Mo., a football and track star in the late 1930s; A. Franklin (Frank) Bridges, '27-2 of Carbondale, a standout fullback on Southern Illinois Normal University (SINU) teams from 1925 to 1929; Harry (Blackie) Hayes of Carbonado, a three-sport performer during his football playing days in the early 1930s; Tom North, '35, MSED '61 of North Bergen (N.J.) an all-Canada football and track performer from 1925 to 1929; Harry (Blackie) Haynes (Blackie) from Norris City, Cal., known as William Morris from 1925 to 1929; James B. Gray ex '35 (deceased) of Collegeville, a basketball-football stand-out in the early 1930s; William E. Morrow '36 (deceased) of Richmond, Calif., known as William Morris; E. Morrow, Sr., of St. Louis, a long-time SIU Athletics official.

New inductees are:

Bad Breaks Cloud Basketball Outlook

Joe Gottfried's second Southern Illinois University-Carbondale basketball team has enough talent to be a fine one. But, injuries, the inexperience of star recruit Rod Camp and inexperience have clouded the picture considerably during the preseason.

One part of the prospectus seems perfectly clear, however. The Salukis can boast one of the top guards in the country in 6-6 veteran Wayne Abrams. Also back is two-year starter Barry Smith, 6-6, at the small forward position.

In addition to those standouts, SIUC also returns 6-7 forward Charles Nance (standout 6-6 freshman prospect) due to a broken right hand (out 6-8 weeks); Charles Nance (standout 6-6 freshman prospect) due to a broken right hand (out 6-8 weeks) and Jac Cliait (one of seven returning lettermen) due to a stress fracture in his left leg, we might be hurting. Bright spots are co-captains Wayne Abrams, a true All-America candidate, and Barry Smith. Both are proven players and will provide superb leadership for our basically young squad.

Charlie Moore is showing signs of regaining his confidence. Scott Russ is an excellent shooter and Lawrence Stubblefield is developing well. Nevertheless, rookies like Kent Payne (6-0), David Youngblood (6-8) and Karl Morris (6-6) are going to have to contribute. Even then it may be difficult for us to challenge for the Missouri Valley.
The last time the New Madrid fault woke up and stretched, the resulting earthquake rearranged the map of southeast Missouri, western Tennessee, and Southern Illinois.

Earthquake experts say a repeat performance of the massive 1811 tremor could be due any time, and SIUC alumna Sheila Steele thinks she'll be able to predict when the fault begins to stir.

Sheila Steele, SIUC swimming coach Bob Steele—she is a geologist who's spent four years perfecting a relatively easy, inexpensive and accurate way to predict when earthquakes will happen. It also gives a pretty accurate estimate of how severe the tremor will be.

She began testing her methods as part of a master's thesis in geology at SIUC. She completed her degrees in 1973, and has continued refining her estimates since with the help of a network of volunteers scattered over the most active parts of the New Madrid fault system in southeast Missouri.

QUAKE: She's got a system

It seems to work: she predicted accurately the earth tremor (it registered 3.8 on the open-ended Richter scale) that rattled dishes June 11 in the Missouri Bootheel. And she made the prediction a month before the tremor hit.

The instrument she's devised is simplicity itself. It's a plastic drink cup with a strip of radiation-sensitive film taped to the bottom. Steele places the cups inside drainage pipe she's buried at eight locations throughout southeast Missouri. The predictor works because of a relationship between gas and radon which is found in very small amounts in the soil. It's released from rocks that make up the earth's crust, and for reasons which geologists don't completely understand, more of it is released around a fault in the weeks before a tremor.

Some researchers have theorized that the gas is released from tiny so-called micro-fractures brought on by increased stress in the crust.

Steele develops the strips of film so the presence of radon can be seen in pinpoint-sized dates where the radioactive particles have exposed the film. She counts the number of tracks in a pea-sized area of film and graphs the results.

Normally, about 120 tracks a week will show up in her 14-square-millimeter test area. About six weeks before the June tremor, the number of tracks went up to about 1,200 and stayed there for about two weeks before starting to drop. About the time readings returned to normal, the tremor happened—centered right under one of her test stations.

"Having the magnitude and location so accurately just amazed me," she said.

She also predicted an earlier increase in the number of minor tremors, most of them so small they went unnoticed by everyone except seismic researchers. The mini-quakes went from a monthly average of nine to 21 during May.

"It's a very sensitive barometer of crustal change," Steele said. A similar method of predicting quakes is being used with similar results over some sections of the San Andreas fault in California.

Daughter directs communications unit

Charles H. Daugherty special assistant to Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Vice-President for University Relations George Mace, has been named acting director of the university's new communications service division.

The 39-year-old Daugherty, a 1966 1969 SIUC graduate, had been a coordinator and assistant director of SIUC's University Exhibits before becoming Mace's assistant.

Daugherty will oversee the operations of SIUC's University News and Photographic Services, University Graphics and University Exhibits. The new position is part of an internal reorganization of communications units in Mace's office.

Saluki flying team

Routes regional field

Southern Illinois University-Carbondale's crack student flying team won its fourth straight regional championship in runway fashion No. 3 at Terre Haute, Ind., racking up more points than runners-up Illinois and St. Louis University (Parks Air College) combined.

The Flying Salukis, national champions the past three years, won sweeps trophies in both flying and static events and finished second overall in air meet safety competition.

Dale Dietz of Rockford, a senior at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale's crack student flying team, was tapped as the meet's top pilot.

The team will go for an unprecedented third straight U.S. collegiate title in the National Intercollegiate Flying Association Championships scheduled next May at the University of North Dakota.

King and Queen

Plane and Fancy

Float crushed up by Alpha Eta Rho, student aviation fraternity, took off for first place parade award.

At bottom, SIUC quarterback Gerald Carr hunts for target while directing SIUC's 31-7 Homecoming win over Wichita State. His efforts earned him conference Player of the Week award.

Fun and Games

nition. They knew.
That's because Johnson, a 6'7" native of Trenton, Ill., played center for the 1966-67 SIUC basketball team that won the National Invitation Tournament and made the Saluki and Walt Frazier household words.

Now 12 years later, Johnson, 34, and minus his famous buzz-saw crew cut, has returned to the SIUC campus in a different role. He is a major and assistant professor in aerospace studies with the Air Force ROTC program.

"The campus is more beautiful than ever," he says. "I'm looking forward to contributing to the educational programs at my alma mater."

When he left SIUC with a degree in business management and an ROTC-earned Air Force commission, the tall, soft-spoken Johnson was dispatched to Fort Air Force Base in North Carolina. There he helped organize a relief mission for the embattled Republic of Zaire. Seven months later, he helped plan a massive mission that flew Air Force paratroopers in and out of Detroit and Washington, D.C., to handle racial riots.

For the next couple of years, he was stationed in Fayetteville, N.C. Then he drew a one-year duty tour in Vietnam.

Johnson's wife, the former Carol Holubek (a 1968 SIUC graduate) stayed in Carbondale when he went to Vietnam.

The year in Vietnam wasn't one he'd want to repeat, says Johnson, "but it was certainly one of the most maturing experiences I've ever had. I went there when I was 24 and by the time I left, I felt like I was 50."

Back stateside, Johnson packed off to Satellite Beach, Fla. for a three-year stint as a logistics plans officer. During that tour he received a master's degree in business administration from the Florida Institute of Technology.

From 1976 to 1979 and prior to returning to SIUC, Johnson, his wife and son, Tim—now 10—were stationed in England at the RAF Alconbury Air Force Base. Nathan Stuart Johnson, now 3, was born there.

Johnson, a supply officer, got back into basketball at Alconbury—coaching the base team. The experience reinforced his desire to get into coaching—probably at the high school level, when his Air Force career ends in 1988.

Johnson came to SIUC out of Trenton High School, where he'd been a productive basketball performer. SIUC and Memphis State recruited him and the Memphis campus tempted him. But his mother wanted him closer to home.

Johnson lettered three years at SIUC. At that time freshmen weren't allowed to play varsity ball.

Johnson says he was surprised to be assigned a tour of duty at his alma mater, but he is more than happy to be in Carbondale. And he's looking forward to the Saluki basketball season.

Cavaliers release
Walt Frazier

Walt Frazier, widely regarded as one of the finest National Basketball Association players for 10 seasons with the New York Knickerbockers, recently was placed on waivers and released by the Cleveland Cavaliers, a team he had been with for the past two seasons.

A Mattoon mother, widow is named Parent of the Day

A Mattoon mother of four was honored by Southern Illinois University-Carbondale on Parents Day Sept. 29.

Ruth A. Gritti was nominated by her son Nick, a junior in physiology at SIUC, for the Parents of the Day honor. In his nomination essay, Gritti said, "Although technically I only have one parent, she has done the job of both for seven years now. She has accomplished the jobs of two parents single-handedly."

Mrs. Gritti, a nursing home administrator, was widowed in 1972 at a time when her sons ranged in age from 8 to 15.

No one wondered what a Saluki was when Ralph Johnson was graduated in 1967 from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Ralph Johnson: 'The Garden,' the world, and back home

Johnson knows very well. The Wildcats' boss is Jack Hartman, Johnson's old mentor at SIUC and architect of the NIT championship team. It will be Hartman's first appearance in the Arena since he resigned in 1969.

"You can bet that I'm looking forward to that game," Johnson says.

In five games at Cleveland this season, the 34-year-old former Saluki averaged only 3.3 points a game compared to a career average of 18.9.

A native of Atlanta, Ga., Frazier, who helped the Salukis win the National Invitation Tournament and was named the tourney's MVP in 1967, came to be known as "Clyde" in New York. He was the Knicks' floor leader for the 1970 and 1973 championship teams.

Frazier is the Knicks' all-time leader in regular season games played, points and assists.

He went to Cleveland prior to the 1977 season in a trade. When they learned of it, they commented, "They got two championships, I got fame and fortune. Now it's time to move on."

He played in 51 games his first season with Cleveland, scoring 16.2 points a game. Last season, he played the first 12 games, averaging 10.8 points a game before hitting the sidelines for the rest of the year with a sprained arch.

He was criticized by then-Coach Bill Fitch, who said the injury wasn't serious enough to idle Frazier.

William E. (Bill) O'Brien has been named first occupant of the Glenn (Abe) Martin Chair in the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale College of Education.

The establishment of the chair and naming of O'Brien, chairman of SIUC's department of recreation and outdoor education, was approved recently by the SIU board of trustees.

Also approved was the establishment of a cash award of $1,000 which annually will go to an education student at SIUC. The first recipient is David L. Mees, a senior in mathematics education. He is the son of John D. Mees, a senior in mathematics education. He is the son of John D. Mees, former principal University High School who retired in 1974 from SIUC.

Funds for both the chair and the student award will come from a $100,000 pledge made in Martin's name to the SIU Foundation in February, 1978 by Martin's family.

During a long career at SIUC, Martin served as basketball coach, director of athletics and head basketball and football coach. He was inducted into the SIUC Hall of Fame in 1978.
Alumni dues hiked

An Alumni Association membership fee increase has been approved by the Alumni Legislative Council, a group made up of members from every Southern Illinois University-Carbondale graduating class.

The increase, the first since 1973, will take effect May 1, 1980, according to Robert Odanell, Alumni Association executive director.

"Because of inflation and the desire for the Association to achieve self-sufficiency, it was necessary to increase dues," Odanell said. "This is the minimum increase the Association could survive with.

Currently, an Alumni Association individual annual member pays eight dollars per year. This will be increased to $10 per year, while family memberships will go from $10 to $12 per year.

First-year SIUC graduates will pay $5 per year instead of $4, while first-year family members will pay $6 instead of $5 per year.

Single payment individual life memberships will increase from $125 to $150, while one payment family life memberships will rise from $150 to $175. In addition, five-year life installments for the same time period will increase from $125 to $175.

All persons now paying for life memberships will not be affected by the increases, Odanell said. Also, annual membership renewals for 1980 will be accepted at the old rate until May 1.

Persons desiring the three-year membership plan can still purchase this membership at the old rate of $24 until May 1st, Odanell said.

O'Brien lists priorities

—involve SIUC alumni in developing employment possibilities for job placement.

O'Brien was born in Oklahoma but considers Zeigler his hometown.

At SIU, he lettered in four sports, was an All Conference halfback in football and most valuable player on the baseball team. He played some professional baseball in the St. Louis Cardinals farm system.

In 1942 he entered the Marine Corps as a private and came out of World War II as a first lieutenant. After his discharge he came back to the campus and finished his degree.

He began his teaching career at Carbondale High School in 1947 as a physical education and history instructor and assistant coach in football, basketball and baseball.

The Korean War found him in Marine uniform once more. He left in 1950 for 18 months to serve as a state-side company commander.

He coached SIU's varsity football teams from 1952 until 1962 and later became an active prep and college field official. The National Football League tapped him in 1965 and for the past 14 years he's been working pro games from coast to coast as a field judge. He wears No. 9.

He was vice-president of the Alumni Association from 1976 to 1978 and has been active on many alumni committees.

While he has been accorded many honors (charter member of the SIUC Hall of Fame and recently named the first occupant of the Glenn "Abe" Martin Chair in the SIUC College of Education), O'Brien considers his greatest accolade to be named the Alumni Great Teacher in 1977.

Other Association officers elected at Homecoming include: Patrick Mudd '55, '59, superintendent of schools from Du Quoin; president-elect; E. Kent Bond '61, a Carbondale attorney, and Patricia C. Hunsaker '57, coordinator of English as a second language at Belleville Area College, vice-presidents; Jo Ann Jungers '52, an elementary vocal music teacher from Alton, secretary; and Harold I. Dycus '65, a Carbondale CPA, treasurer.

China site for study trip

Alumni can go all the way to China this summer—and learn, too. A monthlong travel-study tour currently is being planned by the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Alumni Association and the University's Division of Continuing Education.

Alumni participants can audit an upper-level political science course, "Government and Politics of China," taught by SIUC political science professor Ixu Chou, a native of China and specialist in Chinese affairs.

The itinerary includes stops in Peking, Kwangshow and Shangyang, with possible additional trips to Shanghai and Soochow, according to tour coordinator James Osberg.

The tour group will leave St. Louis July 5 and return to the United States Aug. 4. Cost of the tour will be $3,416 per person, which includes transportation, meals and lodging in China and hotel accommodations in Hong Kong and Taiwan.

As only 25 spaces are available, interested persons should immediately get in touch with James Osberg, Division of Continuing Education, SIU-Carbondale, Ill. 62901. Or call (618) 536-7751.

Lesar's Portrait of SIUC a 'rosy' one

In a "State of the University" address to some 300 SIUC alumni, Lesar ticked off examples of the University's "mature" development and said "overall, things are going well. The turmoil of the 70s is over."

Lesar cited expanded academic programs—including one new Ph.D. degree and two more in the works—as parts of a "rosy portrait" of SIUC at the age of 110 years.

Lesar, who is also dean of the SIUC School of Law, pointed to the start of construction on a new law school as another accomplishment in the past year. He said the school has been fulfilling the primary purpose for which it was created in 1973—meeting the need for lawyers in Southern Illinois. More than half of the law school's graduates have stayed in the region, according to Lesar.

SIUC has been able to provide some form of financial assistance to three-quarters of the student body, Lesar said. The $30 million a year grants and aid programs includes $7 million a year for student workers alone.

The University pulled in more than $14 million for research projects last year, more than triple the level of outside funding of five years ago.

Lesar acknowledged that some problems lie ahead. Inflation, ever-multiplying government regulations and aging campus buildings are among them, he said.

Lesar's 15-minute address was given during the annual Alumni Recognition Luncheon.

He elaborated on state-of-the-University themes two weeks later at the annual meeting of the SIUC Faculty Senate.

"I see this University over the next 10 years continuing to move forward with its high caliber staff and students," Lesar said. "The major reason for the maturity of this University is you, the faculty."

Renzaglia heads nature center

The man who founded the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Rehabilitation Institute and served as its director for some 23 years has been plucked out of retirement to direct the University's Touch of Nature Center.

Guy A. Renzaglia, professor emeritus at SIUC since July of 1978, was appointed director of the 6,500-acre outdoor campus near Little Grassy Lake by Robert Ratcliffe, dean of the SIUC Division of Continuing Education.

Touch of Nature is a research and educational center noted for programs in recreation, outdoor education, conservation and environmental education. It pioneered in recreation programming for the handicapped.

"That is a group Guy Renzaglia has worked with virtually his entire professional career, and that work has gained him a national reputation. In addition, Guy's administrative, teaching and research credentials have earned him respect across campus and throughout the United States. We think we have made an excellent choice," said Ratcliffe.

Parkinson Reborn

VIP visitors at mid-October re-dedication of Parkinson Hall check out $250,000 laboratory instrument that brings big league dimension to SIUC coal research. The computer-linked machine, one of only three or four in existence, does high magnification photos, imaging and chemical analyses of mineral samples. SIUC geologist Paul Robinson shows it off to scientists attending symposium held during re-dedication, which capped $2.1 million renovation project at Parkinson. Others, from left: Edward Rue and John Haun, presidents of national geologists associations; Russell Dutcher, chairman of the SIUC geology department, and (seated) William Fisher, SIU graduate who is director of the Texas Bureau of Economic Geology.

Frosh, transfers hike enrollment

SIUC's fall semester enrollment climbed to its highest level since 1971 and school officials say it's due mainly to three unexpected developments: more new freshmen, more transfer students and a fairly stable population of continuing students.

The fall head count of 22,695 is 145 above last year's figure and 1,150 below the all-time high SIUC enrollment of nine years ago. Officials had predicted a slight drop this fall.

B. Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, said some 20,700 students in the total are registered on the Carbondale campus. Most of the rest are at off-campus sites, including more than 30 U.S. military bases where SIUC offers degree programs.

Browning said 3,181 new freshmen showed up at SIUC this fall, 130 more than last year. The figure for continuing undergraduates stayed almost constant.

The breakdown indicates that "more students in the undergraduate age group are interested in college right now," Browning said. "And we are seeing more students staying in school."

Graduate school enrollment dropped overall, from 3,272 in '78 to 3,186 this fall.

Totals in the schools of law and medicine are virtually the same as last year: 256 and 218, respectively.

The top five academic programs, by enrollment, are: general academic programs (2,663), business and administration (2,499), communications and fine arts (2,233), education (2,005) and the associate degree in the School of Technical Careers (1,890).

SAIL AWAY

SIUC Caribbean Cruise

Last winter's Caribbean Cruise was such a popular success that the SIUC Alumni Association is offering another one. Pack away your cares and woes, kick the snow right off your toes . . . and treat yourself to a week of sun and bliss: the Alumni Caribbean Cruise, sponsored by the Alumni Association.

You'll dine regally: four sumptuous meals each day (including a midnight buffet) plus morning and afternoon snacks.

All shipboard activities and entertainments will be yours to indulge: Swimming, dancing, movies, library, duty-free shopping arcades, casino, nightly floor shows, a Captain's cocktail party and more.

Each SIUC passenger will be briefed on port highlights. Optional shore excursions are available at nominal prices. Gratuities and miscellaneous personal expenses aren't included.

Happily, our agent again this year is Alumni Travel Inc. Act now to be sure of space. Send us a reservation check for the entire amount. Join us. You'll love it!
