Lesar is named Distinguished Service Professor

SIUC's new president called Oct. 28 for a re-examination of SIUC's public service efforts, of the way it rewards top faculty performance in all areas, and of its academic priorities in a time of rising costs, competition for state dollars and expected shrinking enrollments.

In his first "State of the University" speech to a general meeting of the faculty, Albert Somit said SIUC's research output has put the school near the "select company" of major research universities.

But, he said, "there are other aspects of our enterprise where the situation seems less satisfactory and where it may be desirable to re-examine our present policies."

Somit, who became president of SIUC Aug. 15, said he will appoint three special task force units to:

1. Examine the scope and adequacy of our present service effort and of the manner in which the University is organized to identify and respond to the region's needs." Elmer J. Clark, dean of the SIUC College of Education, will chair the study.

2. See what changes may be needed to "bring our preaching and our practice into equitable balance" with respect to the University's system of rewards. Said Somit: We stress our three-fold mission and the importance we attach to excellent research, excellent service and excellent teaching. I have been increasingly perturbed, though, by what appears to be a fairly widespread belief that there is a disparity between what the University says it wants and what it actually encourages. Many... maintain that while outstanding research is adequately rewarded, there is no commensurate recognition for either outstanding teaching or outstanding service... The University cannot have it both ways... if we want outstanding research, outstanding service and outstanding teaching, we must properly honor all three.

3. "Examine the scope and adequacy of our present service effort and of the manner in which the University is organized to identify and respond to the region's needs." Elmer J. Clark, dean of the SIUC College of Education, will chair the study.

He named Chemistry Professor James Bemiller, "a faculty member with an outstanding record in all three areas," to head the rewards task force.

"Academic priorities... no matter how vigorously and effectively we press our case," said Somit of resource problems coming up in the '80s, "it's unlikely the state will be able to provide the funds we will need to strengthen the programs we wish to strengthen, to enlarge those we wish to enlarge, to launch all the new programs which will be proposed, or conceivably, to maintain a solid level of quality all of these we are now offering."

He said John Gaynon, acting vice president for academic affairs and research, and Marvin Kleinau, speech communication faculty member and president of the Faculty Senate, will co-chair a task force assigned to work out the criteria for setting academic priorities.

Somit, in his three months as SIUC president, has repeatedly stressed a reformation of SIUC's longstanding commitment to regional and state service as one of his major goals.

In his State of the University address, he sounded that theme first.

"There seems to be a sense in Southern Illinois, shared by many of our legislators, and voiced even within the University itself, that we have somehow moved away from our earlier service commitment," Somit said. "Conceivably this sense is incorrect... this is too important a matter either to ignore or to attempt to resolve by argument alone."

"More than ever before, taxpayers, legislators and governors are likely to ask, 'what are you doing for the region and the state...' Service activities provide a satisfactory answer—and for some people, I suspect, even a better answer than the presence on campus of a Nobel laureate, or, if I may be permitted a heresy, even a winning football team."

Lesar named Distinguished Service Professor

The man who founded SIUC's School of Law, and who twice served as acting president of the University, has been accorded a title never before given at SIUC.

In action recognizing what it called "exceptionally valuable service to the institution," SIUC's board of trustees named 68-year-old Hiram H. Lesar Distinguished Service Professor at SIUC.

The formal resolution at the board's November meeting cited Lesar's guidance during two "crucial periods of transition" and said that as founding dean of the School of Law Lesar developed it to maturity and respect in only a few short years.

Lesar's most recent stint as acting president ran from June, 1979, to August of this year—between the resignation of Warren W. Brandt and the appointment of Albert Somit. In 1974, he held the interim post for nine months after the resignation of David R. Herges. Lesar is now teaching with the law faculty he began to build in 1972. He plans to retire in 1982.

In its salute, the board said Lesar "has served the University in an exemplary fashion and has won the respect and admiration of all who have worked for him."

Lesar received the Alumni Association Special Award at 1980 Homecoming festivities.

More than $200,000 in campus construction projects designed to be easier for handicapped persons to get around is in the works this fall at SIUC.

Access problems that have plagued past Halloween celebrations, the city council's refusal to allow unauthorized groups to congregate, and the University's refusal to allow students to use the building's upper-floor offices...and the works this fall at SIUC.

Alumni president sounds call for pitch-in

If Patrick (Pat) Mudd has his way, he'll use the personal approach. That's how the new president of the SIUC Alumni Association plans to tackle his job in the next 12 months. His way includes getting more and more alumni actively involved in SIUC Alumni Association activities.

How's he going to do that? He's just going to ask.

That approach is what brought Mudd into alumni activities 18 years ago. Warren Stookey, then the assistant director of the SIUC Alumni Association, who currently is the director of the SIUE Alumni Association, asked Mudd to help with the St. Clair County SIUC Alumni Club.

The 47-year-old Cahokia native headed the call well. In 1961, Mudd served as the St. Clair County Alumni Club vice-president, was president in 1965, and since 1966 has been a club director. Currently, Mudd is serving his second four-year term with the International Alumni Association board of directors. His term will expire in 1981.

A first generation college graduate, Mudd came to SIU when it was bursting with Homecoming. "I was really shocked after my first quarter here," Mudd said. "But then I met people with inspirational visions, people like Delyte Morris, Georgia Winn, my English teacher who always had time to chat, and Professor Caldwell, who taught history but also was able to relate to everyday life."

The exposure paid off. Mudd received his bachelor's degree in 1965 and added a master's in 1969. He taught English at Mascoutah High School in 1955, then began a 24-year career in the Dupo school system that included teaching social studies and American History for 12 years. In 1967, he became the administrative assistant to the superintendent of the Dupo school system. In 1968, he was named superintendent, a position he has held ever since. During his term as Alumni Association president, Mudd hopes to aid the new University administration in service-oriented projects.

"The alumni have obligations to the University, but this isn't to say that the alumni will always agree with everything the University administration does," he said.

In addition to getting more alumni actively involved in programming, Mudd hopes to help them express priority lists of needs that the Alumni Association can help meet.

"He'd also like to work out way of enticing more alumni back to Homecoming celebrations so "they can see the great progress the University has made since they graduated."
Saluki quarterback Richard Johnson (36) recovered. No, wait. Harrison then fumbled ... but fullback Vic Harrison fumbled ... and Tulsa picked it up. Six yards later, Tulsa scored. That's sort of how it went all Homecoming plays later, Tulsa scored. That's sort of how it went all Homecoming plays later, Tulsa scored. That's sort of how it went all Homecoming plays later, Tulsa scored. That's sort of how it went all Homecoming plays later, Tulsa scored.

The loss left the Salukis with a 3-7 overall record, and a 1-4 mark in the Missouri Valley Conference heading into their season finale at home Nov. 22 against league foe West Texas State.

The Salukis will finish the year with fewer wins than losses for the second time in Dempsey's five-year stint as head coach. SIUC's usually reliable ground game was stifled by Southwestern Louisiana in a 21-3 loss Nov. 1 at Lafayette, and Fresno State in a 31-14 loss to the Bulldogs Nov. 8 in McAndrew Stadium.

The Rajun Cajuns limited the Salukis' Missouri Valley Conference-leading rushing game to 105 yards (107 yards below average) and Fresno State held SIUC runners to a total of 31 yards. The Salukis missed the services of injured running back Walter Poole against the Bulldogs.

Poole's return was expected to aid the Salukis against Tulsa, but the Hurricane never let the SIUC offense get untracked. Tulsa placekicker Stu Crum booted a 58-yard field goal in the fourth period to break the existing McAndrew Stadium mark.

Neither the weather nor the Tulsa Hurricane cooperated with Homecoming at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Nov. 15. An all-day rain and chilly temperatures set the stage for a 41-7 Tulsa romp at McAndrew Stadium.

The Hurricane moved to within a win of a Missouri Valley Conference championship, and the Salukis settled even deeper into the conference cellar, a spot they've occupied since the first game of the season.

Everything went wrong against Tulsa, including three lost fumbles, several mental miscues and the failure of the offense to sustain anything. A crowd that started out at around 6,000 dwindled to several hundred shortly into the second half.

The Salukis' last win was a 42-0 victory over Illinois State Oct. 18. Their only hope of escaping the Valley cellar would be a win against West Texas in the Nov. 22 season windup.

Dempsey planned to give several sophomores, including quarterback Rick Johnson, who played the entire Tulsa game, starting roles against West Texas.

"We don't want to let our program slip. We have to make a comeback and put this thing back together," said Dempsey after the Homecoming loss.

The windup

A 19-yard field goal with 17 seconds to go in the game gave West Texas State University a 23-20 victory over the Salukis in the season-ender at McAndrew Stadium Nov. 22.

It came after the Salukis had overcome a 20-3 halftime embarrassment to tie the game on a 58-yard field goal by Paul Molla.

The losq nailed the conference cellar door on SIUC and gave the Salukis a 3-8 season record—the exact opposite of last year's. The Salukis' usualy reliable ground game had never let the SIUC offense get untracked.

Occasionally we forget what a wonderful life it is, overlook the many enjoyable hours every day brings ... even take for granted the pleasures and pride provided by our university—Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Fortunately, however, we meet someone special, read an interesting article, or receive a letter from a complete stranger which causes us to take inenue and realize again "how great it is.

Such was the case when today's mail produced a note from Tim Lienz, who explained he was a member of Coach Lew Hartog's track squad during the early 1970s.

His thoughts and comments are too well expressed to keep to myself. To our friends, new and old alike, and to all Salukis, always I feel a special pride in being a Saluki, always I feel a special pride in being a Saluki.

To honor the greatest president this University ever had, "I consider him to be one of the 10 most influential people in the world," said Becker. "And if the future is to be bright, we need to form a political union, Becker said. "I'm here to deliver a simple message: The United Nations needs to be strengthened, and the European Union needs to be expanded to include more members." Becker visited the campus in October after completing his first term as SIUC's president. He said he was "looking forward to devoting more time to teaching, research and service activities." His deanship has been a "renewed vision for the University," he said. "Every student, teacher and administrator should have the chance to contribute to the betterment of the world."
