Tax hike passes; 'doomsday' averted

The Illinois legislature showed "courage and vision in making education a high priority" by passing a $1 billion tax hike late June 30, said Southern Illinois University Chancellor A. Shaw.

The tax increase package, approved only two hours before a midnight moratorium was to run out on the West General Assembly, will mean "stable tuition levels for at least a decade," said Shaw.

SalARY hikes at the 4.5 percent level will require "modest" faculty-staff salary increases averaging 4.5 percent," Shaw said.

As the SIU appropriation bill stood at Alumnum deadline, funding for the SIU system would total $165.3 million, an increase of $8.8 million over last year's budget base. Some $2.7 million of that is to come from a 10 percent tuition increase approved earlier this year.

Shaw said "it is apparent . . . the current appropriation will not meet all our needs (but) . . . it does evidence a continued commitment to quality higher education (and) . . . exceed the grievous possibilities envisioned without a tax increase."

Shaw and other higher education leaders had warned all spring that consequences of the so-called "doomsday" (no tax increase) budget would have included layoffs, steep tuition hikes and cuts in programs and services.

Under the appropriations measure reported out of conference committee July 1 and sent to the House and Senate, SIUC would receive $116.3 million, an increase of $8.7 million. SIU-Edwardsville would get $47.8 million (up $3.1 million) and the SIU System Office would receive a $46,000 increase to slightly more than $1 million.

Of the $160 million total appropriation for the system, $128.4 million would come from state revenue sources and $31.7 million from income generated by SIU itself.

New money for program and institutional support at SIUC includes $75,000 to beef up engineering programs to meet enrollment demands and prepare for a Ph.D. offering; $142,000 to expand computer science, another high-demand program; $300,000 for teaching and research equipment; and $175,000 to provide economic development assistance to area businesses and industries. Those activities would be funneled through SIUC's Office of Regional Research and Service.

Apparent casualties of compromise adjustments in the tax hike plan were SIUC's requests for $200,000 to keep the School of Law on its expansion timetable and $465,000 for School of Medicine satellite centers in Belleville, Quincy and Decatur.

The appropriation bill provides a 3 percent funding boost to cover general price increases—only a third of SIU's original request—and $750,000 to operate Davies Gymnasium and the campus steam plant pollution control system, new capital improvements SIUC has sought $1.2 million to operate and maintain new buildings.

"While the level of funding approved may not meet all our expectations and needs, it does represent a sincere effort on the part of the State to preserve and enhance our system of education and to secure the future of SIU as a part of that system," Shaw said.

"Our political leaders obviously believe, as I do, that the future economic well-being of our state and our nation depends in great measure on the continued health of our educational system."
McAndrew Stadium gets stress check-up

The University has hired a Springfield engineering firm to determine the structure's safety.

The study was authorized after concern was expressed that large, excited crowds at athletic events might cause excessive damaging load of the stands.

The study's first phase is expected to cost about $16,000 and is expected to finish by June 8, when football practice begins.

If stadium stands are built according to original plans and specifications, and, if they are properly loaded, their impact on the structures;

- The maximum static load that can be applied to the stands without resulting in buckling failure;
- The maximum allowable safe deflection of a horizontal span under static load;
- How many spectators can be safely seated on the east stands during athletic events in which there are periods of excitement producing a horizontal load that dynamically loads the stands;
- If there is any evidence, from inspection that shows the stand is unsafe, and if, to re-commend corrective measures;
- If there is any reason to think the stands are unsafe and, if so, to recommend corrective measures;

The survey is slated to be completed by Aug. 31.

Full House: SIU officials will have no trouble filling on-campus dormitories

Despite predictions of a nationwide decline in higher education enrollment that may have some effect on SIUC, the University apparently will have no difficulty in filling its on-campus housing units this fall.

 increased recruiting efforts, including setting up a registration service in Chicago, have helped bring in students.

By the middle of June, SIUC freshmen applications (8,778) were down 454 from last year at the same time, according to Jerre Pfaff, director of the Office of Admission and Records.

On the other hand, 4,300 transfer students had applied for fall admission, an increase of 116. Overall, the figures translate into a 388 decline or a 2.6 percent decrease in applications, Pfaff said.

"days at least when looking out of high school and the status of the financial recession, we have been anticipating a decline in the enrollment," Pfaff said. "It's not a surprise."

To deal with this situation, the Office of Admissions and Records has visited over 400 Illinois high schools to attract new students to campus. Five field representatives and other SIUC faculty members have journeyed to all of Illinois' two-year colleges at least once.

An off-campus advisement and registration service last spring in Chicago was a "smashing success," Pfaff said, resulting in more than 700 registrations over a two-day period.

Additional registration programs have been suggested for other larger cities in the state and there is a possibility of a large program for St. Louis, Pfaff said.

Meanwhile, despite the application decrease, University housing officials are predicting a full house.

Already, Thompson Point and Brush Towers are full for the fall, according to Joe Gasser, assistant director of housing.

Contracts recently were mailed out to University Park applicants and Gasser feels certain that housing will be filled shortly after the contracts' July 15 due date. All contracts for the 1976-77 academic year on-campus housing are due by the middle of August.

The married student housing at Southern Hills (272 capacity) is filled and has a waiting list. Gasser estimates that over 900 students living on campus—more than usual proportion of applications coming from male students living on campus—usually 55 percent men to 45 percent women—but this year seems the percentage is somewhat higher," Gasser said.

Ironically, his disability pay was greater than his regular pay.

The oldest, Thelma Graves Arnold (now deceased), went to Brown Business College in Marion. There she acquired secretarial skills to help support her father's dream—a college degree for his five children.

Fortunately for the family, Harold and Allen Graves were able to sing for their tuition (at the time choral students were given free tuition). Then it was on to the Southern Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Ky., where they both received divinity degrees.

Rachel signed an agreement to teach after graduation, which earned her free tuition.

James Jr. studied only one year before the military called. Eventually he received his M.D. degree from Northwestern.

All of them lived at home and commuted except for Allen, who roomed his last year with Noel M. Taylor, '35, at the home of Rev. W.O. Shields, pastor of the Walnut Street Baptist Church.

Taylor, now a Baptist minister and author of "Taylors at the Devil's Kitchen," was responsible for arranging the Graves' visit to the SIUC campus.

None of them had returned to Carbondale except in 1961 when Harold received the Alumni Achievement Award.

That homecoming was memorable, comparing the old to the new, seeing a small teacher's college grow into a major university.

"This university has had a dramatic effect on us all," Harold said. "It opened many avenues that many poor kids from Herrin might not have had."

Harold said the quartet was exposed to different ideas, to people from different states and for the first time went to school with blacks.

"It was an educational time," he said. "We gained so much and the experience opened many different doors, some very far from Herrin and SINU."

For instance, James attended Princeton and competed on the Princeton Review.
Charlotte West, SIUC director of women's athletics, has been elected to the executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics. It's the only second time in the organization's 90-year history that a woman has been elected to any committee spot other than an at-large position. Ten years ago West became the first woman member of NACDA.

West will represent the Midwest as the District 4 university division representative for a four-year term.

The group's membership consists of athletic directors and women administrators from all NCAA Division I, II and III schools and some junior colleges.

Former SIUC football coach Dick Towers, currently athletic director at Kansas State University, was elected to the executive committee.

West, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., brings over 25 years of experience as a coach and athletic director to her new position.

She joined SIUC in 1967 as a physical education instructor and has coached basketball, badminton, swimming, volleyball and golf at the University. She took two basketball teams to national competition. In 1969 the SIUC women golfers captured a national title under her direction.

This year became the women's athletic director (1974), Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (IAW) became a separate entity. Under her leadership, IAW has grown and currently has a budget over $1 million.
Hartzog takes 9th straight title

The Saluki tracksters won the Missouri Valley Conference title in May.

No big deal?

It is their ninth straight Valley track crown.

Spelled out clearly... the Salukis have lost no outdoor or indoor conference title in their 23 years of MVC competition.

This year's squad gallantly ran off as winners in eight events and finished with 186 points capturing the 75th MVC Championship.

Saluki Mike Franks and Mike Keane were double winners.

Franks, the defending champion in the outdoor 100 and 200, defended his titles successfully. He won the 100 by pulling away the last 30 meters to finish 11.0.

The junior from Orland Park said he wasn't tired going into the 5,000 after having won the 10,000 earlier in the day.

The squad had the unique experience of grounding on a sandbar in the middle of the Mississippi.

By Fred Huff

When Coach Ray Dempsey launches his eighth season at SIU, the Salukis will be returning back from a trip back 30 of 49 lettermen from last year's squad, which tied for second in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Seven of the 30 were offensive starters while eight started defensively.

Excited about the upcoming season, Johnson said recently, "Truthfully, I didn't feel I had an outstanding season last year, but I'm ready this year. I've worked a lot harder."

Exciting for the upcoming season, Johnson added, "I feel we can win all along, but only if everyone did their job," Hartzog said.

A transfer student from Triton Junior College in River Grove two years ago, Reboulet first became acquainted with the major league baseball amateur free agent draft June 7.

He had signed with Fred Huff, a 6, 243-pound southpaw from Jersey City, N.J., recently signed as a free agent. He reported immediately to Erie, in the New York-Penn Rookie League where Reboulet already had been playing.

While he may seem a little early to be thinking baseball, alumni can avoid the rush by purchasing their regular season ticket packages now.

The five home games are: Eastern Illinois (Sept. 10), S.E. Missouri State (Sept. 17), Drake (Oct. 8), New Mexico State (Oct. 29) and Illinois State (Nov. 5, Homecoming).

Single game ticket prices will be increased $1 per game this year to $7 per game for reserved seats. General public season tickets can be purchased for $85, SIUC alumni $82, and SIUC staff and faculty, $20 for season tickets.

For the first time, Men's Intercollge Athletics is offering high school students a season ticket package for $50.

Ticket requests should be sent to SIUC Men's Athletics, SIUC, Carbondale, Ill., 62901. Make checks payable to SIUC Men's Athletics and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Buy tickets

Tickets can be purchased at the stadium or by calling 536-1872.

When you purchase your tickets for the regular season games, you will receive a free program and a premium gift from the Salukis. These gifts include a Saluki baseball cap, a T-shirt and a tote bag.

Alumni club scholarships assist incoming students

Six SIUC alumni clubs will financially assist 22 incoming freshmen this fall with scholarships totaling $9,200.

Scholarship monies are raised annually through contributions in telefund drives. The individual scholarships range from $250 to $700 each.

The alumni clubs present scholarships to outstanding high school seniors in their area club, helping them to attend SIUC. The alumni clubs that participate are Franklin, Jackson, Saline, Williamson, and Union counties and the Springfield Area Alumni Club.

Franklin County presented six scholarships of $250 each. The recipients were: Beth Baker and Kevin De LATour, both of Benton; Larry Dawson of Murphysboro; Lynn Ellen Patton of Zeigler; Tim Uhls and Scott Russell, both of West Frankfort.

Jackson County Alumni Club presented three scholarships of $700 each to Bill Pham and Rachel Buddecky, both of Carbondale, and Kevin Bastin of Murphysboro. Pham received the first Robert W. Popp Scholarship. Popp, 91, a member of the Jackson County Alumni Board, was killed in a car accident April 4, 1981. His wife, Terry Ann Wiley, 83, made the presentation.

Saline County presented three scholarships of $500 each to Bryan Todor, of Chatham; Barbara Henk and Scott Lumbert, both of Harrisburg.

Union County club gave $300 scholarships to Kevin Greenwood of Golconda and Terri Samuel of Anna.

Williamson County club presented five high school seniors with a $500 scholarship. The recipients are: Pamela Renee Chery, Bradley B. Jowers and Paula Jo McNell, all of Marion; David Scott Hens of Carterville and Lorra L. Terneus of Herrin.

The Springfield Club will present three $300 scholarships in the latter part of July. Recipient names will be released at that time.

Alumni interested in donating money to the scholarship fund can do so by writing to SIU Foundation and specify scholarship area.

Alumni telefunds raise $15,384; top 1982 pledges

The seven locally-sponsored telefunds raised $15,384, topping 1982 pledges by over $3,700.

Almost all participating club areas increased their pledges except for the Washington, D.C. Area Club. The clubs and their pledges include Franklin County ($1,878); Jackson County ($1,843); Saline County ($863); Springfield ($2,022); Union County ($1,115); Washington, D.C. ($750) and Williamson County ($2,242).

The national telefund did not fare as well as was hoped. Approximately 275 volunteers (consisting of students, professors, and university administrators) made calls during March and April. Almost 10,000 calls yielded 2,122 pledges of $20,870.

A breakdown of the figures shows School of Education led all with $5,129 from 2,017 contacts. Agriculture was second, raising $3,347 from 1,183 persons, followed by Business ($5,076), Science ($2,810), School of Technical Careers ($1,940), Liberal Arts ($1,640), Engineering and Technology ($1,407), Accounting ($450), Human Resources ($470), Radio and Television ($452), and a group of students raised $270.

Two Boy Scouts from Centralia present James S. Brady, ex ’69, with the distinguished Eagle Scout Award at his White House office. The award is presented to former Boy Scouts who earned the Eagle Scout honor a minimum of 25 years previously and who have distinguished themselves in their careers or public life. Brady made Eagle Scout on April 12, 1955, with Troop 250, Centralia. Named press secretary to President Ronald Reagan in January 1981, he was critically injured during the assassination attempt on Reagan.

Carmen, Martin
Fund-raisers spearhead quest for private money

A three-year University of Missouri at Columbia graduate and a two-year SIUC graduate are the latest persons selected to help spearhead the SIU Foundation’s quest for additional private funds.

Anne Carman has been selected as the Director of Annual Giving, while H. Dan Martin has been hired as the Director of Special Gifts.

Carman, manager of the annual giving program at UMC since 1982, started his position July 1. He will be responsible for special gifts, corporate gifts and matching gifts at the Foundation.

Martin, who lives in Eldorado, was the director of the Office of Research and Services at the SIUC College of Business and Administration, worked as a child abuse case worker for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, was a counselor for the Youth Employment Training Program at SIUC, and worked for the Illinois Farm Union as a CETA program agent.

He has had considerable experience with development plans for special gifts and has helped prepare a number of successful grant applications.

A native of Alexandria, Va., Martin, 35, has a bachelor’s degree in rehabilitation programming (1975) and a master’s degree in special education (1978). Currently, he is working on a Ph.D. at SIUC in higher education.

He is married to an SIU graduate, the former Kathryn (Kitty) Morris, 71, and they have two sons.

Rounding out the fund-raising team is J.C. Garavalia of Herrin, who is the Director of Deferred Giving.

In another Foundation business, James R. Brigham of Carbondale was reelected chairman of the Foundation board June 10. The board elected the following officers for the coming year: Jerome Glassman of Mount Vernon, vice chairman; Garavalia, corporate secretary; Bradley R. Brown of Carlinville, treasurer; Elaine Evens of Carbondale, assistant secretary; and Vicki Bagley of Carbondale, assistant treasurer.

Where there’s a will, there’s...Will Power

"All the rest, residue and remainder of my real and personal property I give, devise and bequest to Southern Illinois University Foundation, a corporation, Carbondale, Illinois."

Just how powerful can these 26 words be?

—SO POWERFUL that should you include them in your will the Southern Illinois University Foundation could create an endowed fund that could annually provide the needed dollars for programs that are essential to maintain our quest for academic excellence.

—SO POWERFUL that these dollars could continue in perpetuity as a memorial to a wise alumnus.

—SO POWERFUL that a scholarship fund could be established to provide assistance to students with exceptional ability.

—That’s WILL POWER—and don’t have to be a millionaire to have it work for you.

Inquiries about bequests and other forms of planned giving are welcome. For more information, please clip the coupon below and mail it to: SIU Foundation, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Illinois 62901.

I would appreciate additional information about including SIUC in my will.

It’s never too late to graduate

In a way you could call them late bloomers... but that doesn’t tell the whole story.

It’s a tale of two women who have never met, but who shared realization of life-long dreams at separate SIUC graduation ceremonies this spring.

The women, Marion Hamilton Gillim and Mary Michaels Pohlmann, each with three degrees, have started new careers in fields of endeavor.

In 1980, at a time when both might have been enjoying the fruits of their labor, one set out to earn a law degree and the other to earn a medical degree.

Marion Hamilton Gillim

On May 14, Ms. Gillim, in her mid 70s, became the oldest person to be graduated from SIUC’s 10-year-old School of Law, since its 30-year-old alumni have earned their first degree at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass.

And on June 4, Dr. Pohlmann, at 38, was graduated from the SIUC School of Medicine in Springfield. She had wanted to be a doctor since she was 14 years old.

Ms. Gillim, a former economics professor, said she chose law as her new profession for humanitarian reasons. She felt with the many problems people face in this world, this was one way she could contribute.

The long hours of reading, writing and preparing for rigorous law exams were adjustments Ms. Gillim was confident she could make. With a Ph.D. degree in economics from Columbia University and more than 40 years teaching experience behind her, law school held no terrors for her.

“I’ve always been interested in law, and I figured it was never too late to learn,” Ms. Gillim said. “I just had to get used to being on the other side of the desk.”

She was the first full-time teaching student to graduate from the state’s new law school.

After earning her Ph.D., she returned to Mount Holyoke in 1941 to teach. Eleven years later, she volunteered for a Peace Corps assignment at Barnard College, where she rose to chairman of the economics department, a position she held for 10 years.

When New York’s mandatory retirement law forced her to leave Barnard in 1974, Ms. Gillim returned to Kentucky as Distinguished Professor of Economics at Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

Throughout her teaching career, Ms. Gillim was recognized for her research efforts in economics, public finance and Latin American economic development.

She was warned after her groundbreaking research professorship in 1969 and a Fulbright lecture in the College of Law at National University in San Diego, Uruguay.

From 1949 to 1962, she served as an international consultant on labor statistics in Latin America with special assignments in Guatemala, Costa Rica, Uruguay and Brazil. Later, she went to Guyana.

Now she’s back in Mount Holyoke to prepare for another hurdle: passing the Kentucky Bar exam at the age of 75.

Then her goal is to open a general law practice.

Daughter of an Owensboro physician, Ms. Gillim was encouraged to learn by her parents and her brother, Francis, an Indianapolis, Ind. ophthalmologist.

“Education is very important. It’s something that always has been the center of my life. And just because you reach a certain age doesn’t mean you stop pursuing educational goals.”

A love for education was what drove Dr. Pohlmann to pursue her M.D. degree at 35 years old.

A military brat, she was shuttled about the world before destiny placed her in San Antonio, Texas. There she met her husband-to-be, John Pohlmann, who was attached to a special force.

A move to the East Coast brought the two together again long enough for them to get married. In 1960, she earned a bachelor’s in biology at Fayetteville (N.C.) State Teachers College, where she was the only white student. Malvin Moore Jr., the 1982 Alumni Great Teacher and professor of French, was the only white student in her class at commencement.

Then, she entered the University of Louisville School of Medicine.

Besides rearing two daughters, Dr. Pohlmann worked as a high school biology teacher.

Mary Michaels Pohlmann (center) is congratulated by her husband, John, biology teacher in the St. Louis area and Centralia while her husband earned a master’s degree in SIU and Ph.D. from SIUC.

“At the same time, she received a master’s degree from Edwardsville and a Ph.D. from SIUC (1975) in science education.”

After a year of teaching at SIUC, Dr. Pohlmann landed a spot as a visiting assistant professor in the MEDEPHT program, teaching biology and review of science processes.

From 1970-1980 she helped students prepare for medical school. She taught so well that she convinced herself to pursue her own dream.

“When I taught, the more I knew I had to do it,” she said. “My husband was not pleased when I finally decided, but he was very understanding.”

To do it meant being separated from her loved ones for two years while she lived in Springfield. Her younger daughter, Teresa, spent the first year with her, while her older daughter, JoAnn, finished her studies in Indianapolis, Ind. ophthalmologist.

She always knew she wanted something should never underestimate their ability to do what they want something, they should go for it.”

That’s exactly what these two remarkable women did. Ms. Gillim confidently preparing for her bar exam in Owensboro, and Dr. Pohlmann, starting a family practice residency at Cardinal Health, both turned their dreams into reality.

Placement fees charged

Effective July 1, user fees will be charged for placement services at SIUC.

Both the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate and Professional Student Council gave their approval, during May 1984, to a proposal which would implement such fees.

Current students will be charged $15 three times, for registration and credentialing. Alumni and others, who have not enrolled at SIUC for at least one calendar year, will be charged $20 to update their credentials. The fee will be charged each time the credentials are updated, but not more than once annually.

Questions should be addressed to the Career Planning and Placement Office, SIUC, Carbondale, Ill. 62901, Or phone (618) 453-5991.

Fraud

The number of complaints for much information developed on the case.

Batemun and Masey are charged with defrauding SIUC of more than $1 million in connection with purchase of computer equipment from 1978 and 1981. The indictment charges the two co-conspirators to defraud the University by arranging for the purchase of computer equipment at inflated market prices through "dummy" corporations they set up in Missouri and Texas.

Additionaly, Hess believes, "these men could have continued to defraud other universities at state universities in two other states which I cannot identify at this time.

The T. J. D. S. District has placed a buyer in Illinois to set bond at $750,000. No sentencing date has been set.

Both men were released on bond.

Meanwhile, a civil suit filed by SIUC counsel seeks to recover $5.4 million in damages.

That suit is still in the preliminary pleading stages and could possibly go to court sometime in the fall, according to Shawn R. Rhode, associate legal counsel and the University’s chief trial attorney.

Anderssen, ’77, of Carbondale, will enter a transitional residency at Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, Ga., this summer. He is the son of Willie D. Anderssen, ’47, a retired Carbondale Community High School mathematics teacher.

Frick, ’80, of Walterville, enters a pediatrics residency at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque this summer.

Pohlmann, ’75 Ph.D., will enter a family practice residency at an SIU-affiliated hospital in Carbondale this summer. She is married to John T. Pohlmann, an associate professor of guidance and educational psychology at SIUC. They have two children.

Ellena, ’80, of Virden, will enter an internal medicine residency at Jewish Hospital in St. Louis, Mo., this summer. He will join the U.S. Air Force following the completion of his residency.
