No grounds for a hearing

Layer says Allen did not violate policy

By Steve Brown
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

ILI Chancellor Robert G. Layer said Wednesday that there were no grounds for a hearing into charges of misconduct filed against philosophy instructor Douglas M. Allen.

Layer said Allen did not violate the "Interim Code of Student Rights and Responsibilities." In a letter to Roger Beyler, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Layer said that there was no report of any violation of the policy. Layer added that Edward H. Hammond, assistant to the Chancellor for student relations, did not file a report on the alleged misconduct.

The charge was made by Leland G. Staubler, assistant professor of government. Staubler said that Allen made a public statement at a lecture given by Milton Sacks, visiting professor of government, on March 2 which, according to Staubler, was an open encouragement of disruptive behavior. Hammond, who is one of the four persons designated by Layer to determine when violations of the policy occur, attended the lecture.

The policy was implemented by Layer early last quarter. Layer said the letter to Beyler should be "viewed as a determination that there was no violation of the policy." Beyler said that he had no comment on the letter from Layer.

"I have no idea how this will affect the matter," Beyler said. He said that he had not seen a copy of the letter, but that it had been read to him.

Beyler had announced earlier that he planned to hold a meeting in his office with Allen, Staubler and a neutral faculty member and himself as soon as possible.

Calley gets life sentence for My Lai

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was sentenced to life imprisonment by a military jury Wednesday for the murder of at least 22 Vietnamese civilians, women and children during the My Lai massacre of three years ago. His lawyer called the penalty "the lesser of two evils."

Calley also was ordered disarmed from the service, where he had earned awards for gallantry in Vietnam and a Purple Heart for combat wounds. His military career was ordered forfeited.

The sentence carries the possibility of parole after 10 years.

An appeal of the sentence is automatic and is expected to take a year or more. U.S. Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., said "I'm willing to do everything I can to expedite Calley's appeal."

George Latimer, chief defense lawyer, said, "I'm confident the sentence will be altered."

President Nixon, as Calley's commander-in-chief, could stop it at any time to abate or erase the sentence, although there was no indication of any presidential action.

After the sentencing, Calley was taken to the rear guard at the Ft. Benning stockade where he has been held since his indictment Monday of premeditated murder at My Lai.

Calley could have been condemned to death. The jury, however, had stirred a nationwide furor and letters of encouragement by the armistice had arrived during the day addressed to the defendant.

"You'll find no case in military justice that has torn America apart like this case has torn Ameria apart," Latimer told the six-man military jury before it retired Tuesday afternoon to begin deliberating the penalty to be assessed against Calley.

Garbage plan gets support at hearing

By Dave Mahasman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Most Carbondale residents present at a public hearing Wednesday night supported mandatory city-wide garbage pickup by city employees. Only private trash haulers present opposing the proposal.

The city has proposed that its crews pick up garbage from all single family and duplex dwellings and from garages and sprawling houses with no more than 16 residents. Apartment buildings, dormitories and other commercial establishments are not included in this proposal. Also, trash containers must be stored behind the front line of the residence and may be placed at curb side only within twelve hours before and twelve hours after pick up.

The main opponent to the proposal came from Ed Burris, owner of the largest private trash hauling service in Carbondale. Burris told the 70 member audience that poor trash hauling in Carbondale has not been the fault of the private haulers but of the city's code enforcement department for not enforcing existing ordinances.

The city's argument for city pickup focused mainly on its economy. Carbondale residents would pay an extra $1.50 each month in property tax for this service.

An additional proposal that would ban all open burning in the city received overwhelming support from those viewing an opinion on the proposal.

120 term appointees will not be rehired

By Rich Davin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Approximately 120 first-year term appointees have been rehired and that they will not be rehired by SUI for 1971-72.

The action is part of an overall University attempt to cut back personnel, equipment, travel, commodities and other programs, which will eliminate the University.

According to Vice Chancellor Wilma Malone, many of the cutbacks will be in areas such as the Liberal Arts College, the College of Education and VTI, but that is only because of the greater number of appointees in those units. She said the cutback in term appointees is affecting all units.

Malone said that the University has been reviewing its budget situation and will continue to through September.

SUI had its 1971-72 budget request cut by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, which in turn had, its own recommendations for Illinois universities cut from $16.8 million to $16.74 million by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie.

Appropriations bills in Illinois universities are expected to be introduced in the General Assembly in the next few weeks.

University officials believe SUI will submit a bill along the lines of the original ISHE recommendation for SUI which was $16.8 million.

Malone said however, even with the ISHE recommendation the University will still have to follow an austerity budget and work with about a 10 percent cutback throughout SUI to live within its expected budget.

Several staff members affected by the cutbacks are also members of service employees. According to Eugene Peckels, assistant to Chancellor Robert G. Layer, approximately 157 non-academic civil service positions have been eliminated at the 1971-72 budgets.

About 70 of these are non-status civil service positions which include extra help, temporary and irregular appointments. Another 32 positions to be eliminated are funded through state appropriations and $8 through 10 per unit operations which generate an income.

States alerted to poisonous waters

WASHINGTON (AP) - State health departments are being altered to an Interior Department report showing unacceptable levels of poisonous metals in more than 50 public water sources, Illinois included.
Interior released results of a nationwide spot check showing dangerously high levels of arsenic or chromium in 12 waterways used to supply public water systems.
Those substances are not removed by ordinary water treatment.
The department's Geological Survey, which performed the water sampling last fall, reported undesirable arsenic concentrations in more than 40 other public water sources.
Equally high levels of these and other toxic metals lead, mercury and zinc were found in more than a hundred water samples taken in downstream from municipal-industrial complexes, and even in a few sample from areas remote from human activity.

The survey said high levels of these metals were widespread although the data "indicate potential problems in a few areas."

Public water sources were reported to contain unsafe levels of arsenic or chromium at 12 locations in North Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

And more than 46 public water sources were at or above PHSrecommended limits for arsenic in 19 states.

Geological Survey's study was prompted by last year's discovery that poisonous mercury was finding its way into man's food supply through the waterways.
The survey reported concentrations of cobalt in water but there is no health standard with which to compare them.
The survey took 714 samples of water last October and November, including 154 from public water sources, 42 below municipal-industrial complexes, and 48 from remote "benchmark" sites.

Some 4 per cent of all samples contained toxic metals above health limits for drinking water and another 22 per cent at undesirable levels. This relationship held generally true in all three categories of sample.

No fall entry cutoff seen

Jerry Pfaff, SIU director of admissions, said Thursday that choosing admission for freshmen and transfer students planning to attend SIU fall quarter.

"Although several Illinois schools have closed fall term admissions for beginning freshmen and sophomores," Pfaff said, "it does not seem likely that SIU's. Carbondale's admissions will be affected similarly."

Pfaff said the Carbondale campus does not set an enrollment quota of 11,449 for freshmen and sophomores this fall, but he said it is unlikely this limit will be reached.

According to Pfaff, SIU at Edwardsville fixed its total enrollment at 13,700 for registration purposes last fall, but no similar action has yet been taken for fall, 1971.

Pfaff advised students planning to transfer to SIU-Carbondale this fall from two-year schools to submit admissions forms now.

Students who have attended a junior college on the semester system will be considered for admission if they have an overall "C" average. IFC takes 'easy out'

SIU's Interfraternity Council (IFC) copped out at the end of last semester by voting to admit itself.

The purposes of the IFC, the governing body for 13 of SIU's social fraternities, center around benefiting its member groups. Besides handling activities such as Rush, intramurals and service projects, the council handles many problems concerning Greek matters, Greek Row co-ops, legal counsel and judicial problems.

Since the local IFC didn't delve into many of these services, the reasons cited by IFC members advocating the hanging were valid. Poor planning and lack of participation on the part of IFC members threw the council into a monotonous rut not uncommon to many student groups.

The poor participation has been evident for the past year. Weekly IFC meetings rarely had adequate attendance from its 13 member groups. With members passively letting the problem go unchecked, the council definitely was not doing its job.

Other IFC representatives called the group dull and uninteresting; some said "it never does anything." This is more true than not. Outside of organizing inter-Greek intramurals and a few service projects, IFC activities have been few and are still plagued by low participation.

IFC members faced with the thought of more boring meetings and more quarterly dues, took the fastest out by self-elimination. No provision was made for handling interfraternity activities or representing the individual fraternities on an inter-Greek basis.

What is more amazing is that the council was abolished while a small group of interested members were working on a restructuring of the council. These members, recognizing the IFC's hang-ups, opted for a more realistic solution to the problem rather than covering it up.

Fraternities claim their basis for existence is cooperation rather than a common goal. The IFC did a poor public relations job and a great disservice to itself by approving a copout rather than attempting to work for change, realistic goals and a viable organization that benefits its members.

Letters to the editor

Letter writer asks opponent for debate

To the Daily Egyptian

Through editorial commentary, Eric Gower and I (letters of Feb. 12, 23, March 10) have been exchanging arguments pertaining to Vietnam and related issues. A perusal of his letters and my response, when combined with the nature of his editorializing, as especially witnessed in his commentary of March 10 on my letter of Feb. 23, lead to four ineluctable conclusions, all or any one of which render further exchange of argument futile and misleading.

These four conclusions, better stated as indictments, serve as a background against which I shall propose a solution to the problem.

Indictment 1: American freedom is inextricably challenged in Vietnam as was everything just and virtuous when Hitler, in short an extended domino theory. Such, Mr. Gower's is an historical judgment, but certainly inconsistent with the facts of Germany and Vietnam. Europe and Asia History and Accuracy.

Indictment 2: Mr. Gower's refutation of my sincerity arguments and his answers to others haughtily ignored or distorted my entire polemic. Arguments on patriotism and hypocrisy were manufactured and removed from context. Editorial accuracy.

Indictment 3: Mr. Gower is now a student. But freedom is being so seriously challenged by the invading Vietnamese, why has he not taken up the cause—again—Personal hypocrisy? Any year of our

Journalist says war is well reported

By W.G. Callejohn

General Manager, Associated Press

Are we getting the truth from Vietnam? One answer is yes—though we are getting the truth slowly, grudgingly, and difficulties are mounting.

As usual in Indochina, the cost is high. Five aviators were killed in the first two weeks of the Laos campaign. They included an Associated Press staff photographer, the fourth to lose his life in Indochina. In all, 26 U.S. pilots have been killed in Indochina since 1965 and 17 are missing.

The real news is that normal hazard to correspondents was raised in the early days of the Laos Operation. The U.S. Command had refused to let news media on American-piloted helicopters. The absence of the small group of South Vietnamese pilots in the Laos campaign has limited first-hand reports killed in Laos when a pilot became lost and flew over some of the most heavily primed North Vietnamese anti-aircraft battery. The helicopter was shot down on the second pass over the area.

White House supplies copters

Protests by The Associated Press and others to H. Kinkade, White House press attaché, revealed the assignment of a U.S. helicopter to the press with two gunships ordered to fly escort.

When this met with the problem, it was very different from past operations when correspondents flew in U.S. or Vietnamese helicopters. The absence of the small group of South Vietnamese pilots in the Laos campaign has limited first-hand reports.

News coverage has been further restricted by problems of U.S. military pilots who have been flying over Laos from talking to correspondents. In one of the more curious ironies in the field, one of the pilots' area was fenced off with barbed wire and a gate guarded by a military policeman.

Like most such restrictions imposed by military commands, it didn't work. The pilots talked anyway, as did their correspondents correspondents because as many reported, commanding officers had ordered them to "keep our mouths shut." The result has been a substantial censorship in Vietnam, though various efforts to restrict correspondents and the movement of correspondents.

Even in the presence of information officers accompanying correspondents in the field, has been repeatedly turned out in Vietnam. The idea dates back to the time of orange-trail and as unworkable in the early days of World War II, and was tried again in Korea and Vietnam.

In fact none of the plans by commanding generals to get the war reported as they reported it has ever really worked. It may slow up reporting and at times, may even succeed in temporarily misleading—but only temporarily.

Men want to talk

These schemes fail because of one basic fact. Men who are fighting and dying in battle want to talk about what they have seen and done, how it all ended, and how it made them die or live. It's a part of the human and control the movements of correspondents.

Even in the presence of information officers accompanying correspondents in the field, has been repeatedly turned out in Vietnam. The idea dates back to the time of orange-trail and as unworkable in the early days of World War II, and was tried again in Korea and Vietnam.

In fact none of the plans by commanding generals to get the war reported as they reported it has ever really worked. It may slow up reporting and at times, may even succeed in temporarily misleading—but only temporarily.

School lunch meeting scheduled Saturday

By University News Service

Seventy-five school lunchroom staff members from 11 Southern Illinois counties have pre-registered for a one-half-hour School Lunch Conference at Southern Illinois University Saturday (April 31), from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sponsored by the School of Home Economics and the Division of Technical and Adult Education, the conference has the support and cooperation of the various county superintendents, according to Henrietta Becker, lecturer in food and nutrition and director of the southwest area of the Illinois School Food Service Association.

Sessions will be held at Trueblood Hall, where luncheon will be served using the rapid scramble self-serve type of food service.

Speakers will include Vincent A Berriel, Chester school superintendent, and Ginnie Wells, assistant dean of Technical and Adult Education.

A demonstration of a new protein product will be presented by W.F. Cappel, sales representative of General Mills, Inc.

Small group "buzz sessions" will be led by Donna Gormley, Alton High School, past president of the Illinois School Food Service Association; Patsy Garver, Edwardsville High School, association president-elect; Isa Bello, food service manager, Trueblood Hall; Karolyn Kratz, Jan Harper and Miss Becker, all members of the SIU food and nutrition faculty.

The southwest area of the Illinois School Food Service Association, according to Miss Becker, includes Alexander, Franklin, Johnson, Union, Jackson, Randolph, Perry, Monroe, Washington, Jefferson and Clinton counties.

This is the first such conference held in Southern Illinois. Miss Becker said at the conclusion of the conference plans are to hold a brief organization meeting and elect officers for this district.

Work program proposed to counter budget cuts

By University News Service

A state supported work study program to aid needy students at all Illinois' State Colleges, colleges and universities, both public and private, has been proposed by Frank C. Adams, director of financial assistance at SIU.

Adams said that during the current year almost 4,000 needy students are receiving state grants and scholarships which pay tuition and fees up to $1,200 but do not cover the cost of such items as room and board. To cover these expenses many students must have part-time jobs or borrows.

Because outlays are expected in operating budgets of state institutions, Adams said funds for work programs will not be sufficient to meet existing needs, but it is anticipated that the number of grant-scholarship recipients may increase 35 per cent next year, thus placing an even heavier burden on present work programs.

Adams quoted figures on SIU's work study program during the fall of 1970 to project the funds which will be needed for a work-study program on a statewide basis. He said that in the fall of 1970, SIU had 2,864 grant-scholarship recipients, of which about 36 per cent worked and had average earnings of $200 and a total of $576,000 for the quarter. During the entire school year about 2,000 recipients worked in SIU's work-study program.

With the new minimum wage of $1.65 per hour, the new figures would be $300,000 for the fall of 1971, or 1.255,000 for the academic year. Adams recommended a figure of $300,000 per grant-scholarship recipient. Multiplying by 3,000, the total needed statewide for 1971-72 would be a minimum of $9 million.

Including private institutions in the proposal is necessary, Adams pointed out, because many grant-scholarship students do not attend state supported schools. Copies of the proposal have been forwarded to the StateSenate subcommittee on education and the Illinois State Scholarship Commission.

Washington's new plan

Garbage to fill strip mine

OLYMPIA, Wash. - A new approach to solid waste management that would permit the disposal of garbage generated by the metropolitan areas of Seattle and Portland as an additional strain on the Columbia River Basin has been developed by Washington State Department of Ecology.

The plan calls for shipping solid wastes by rail from the metropolitan areas to Centralla, Wash., making a detour between the two cities, and then running into the cavity of a strip coal mining field.

The field, covering 20,000 acres, is to be mined beginning this fall, to feed a giant coal-fired electric generating plant scheduled to go into operation in September at one end of the coal field.

John Bugg, director of ecology, says it's the first time a sensible use has been gone of the waste and reprocessed and the coal has been extracted.

Don Evans sees other benefits.

"It has the potential for making Lewis County the center of a major complex of new industries that would be involved in reclaiming and recycling valuable solid waste materials," said Bugg. "All in disposal sites." Evans said.

"This plan has the potential for permanently and economically handling the solid waste problems of the major metropolitan areas of both Washington and Oregon, and at the same time largely eliminating both the major capital expenditure municipalities are now required to invest in disposal sites," Evans said.

Evans has asked Washington Water Power Co. and Pacific Power and Light principal stockholders in the new steam plant and strip mine to comment on a legislative bill to create a solid waste management authority and to approve the disposal of the Centralla strip mine.

The mine is strategically located - about midway between the two cities which have a combined population of about 2.5 million. A 45 mile route from Centralla to Puget Sound, south of Portland.

To collect the garbage, transfer stations would be established at the railroad sidings outside the cities along the route and the garbage hauled to the mine area such as by special trains. The steam plant will consume some 3,000 tons of solid waste daily and eventually, if the program is not in motion, these 3,000 tons would be dumped into that earth cavity.

"In the initial 3,000 tons of waste would be collected and hauled," said Bugg, "and this figure could increase to 5,000 tons.

Transporting solid wastes out of the cities by railroad was the subject of a recently completed study by the U.S. Department of Health. The study concluded that a system similar to one so serviceable in major metropolitan areas is the nation's.

"If it could not be clearly demonstrated that such an operation could be conducted under the stringent sanitary conditions, the idea is dead," Bugg said. "The program could go into operation by the middle of next year.

Key to the entire program, the ecology director said, is the mine owners. "With a great potential for public service but, at the same time, a radical departure from any business they have been in before," Bugg said a feasibility study likely will be taken by the power companies and that such a study would require as long as six months. "This department would aid in the study."

A key element of such a study revolves around the potential water pollution that might be generated by such a large sanitary landfill. Disposal coal per ton would work about 50%, comparable to proven coal.

Wariness in lull at student revolt center

Berkeley's future uncertain

By Neil Morgan
Capay News Service

BERKELEY, Calif. — Wariness is in the air, even hostility. The stranger probing this University of California campus is certain to sense it in his contacts with students and younger academics.

It seems often to be an unsurmounting emotional wall. It has not been built up all at once by one side or the other. It is the currency of disenchantment between generations, the end product of seven years of campus turmoil that now challenges the financial and academic future of this nine-campus university.

If such a usage was to be, it had to be at Berkeley, which still is the most distinguished of America's tax-supported universities and thus a testing ground for good and bad. The present era of campus revolt began at Berkeley in 1968 when Mario Savio's Free Speech Movement stood off Police Chief Kerr. Kerr went. Savio is in Berkeley still and talking of running for mayor. But neither side senses any victory.

"These students feel they've been ripped off," says Prof. Michael Nagler. He is in the classics, a teacher of comparative literature. He is among the very few to meet with crew-cut alumni and talk about the university.

Nagler concedes he has some radical views but regards himself as a Gandhian, opposed to violence. He speaks with liking of the peripatetic students.

"They don't know if things are getting better or worse in the world," he goes on.

"Doesn't surprise any thanks from them for any improvements in society even at times bringing them about. The students are mad.

The issue that concerns them are mutable. Their current is the phenomenon."

Like most of his fellow professors, most students and administrators, Nagler confesses a lull or possibly a temporary suspension of violence. The times remain. Wieder Auditorium, boarded up in a student demonstration, is an empty shell with no plans for its restoration. Shops along Telegraph Avenue are no longer boarded up, but the solid brick face of the Bank of America here is elegant.

During this lull it is budget time, with the University of California pleading its case for a funding increase and Gov. Ronald Reagan grudgingly committed to holding the line. Administrators at Berkeley are bringing Californians on campus to meet students, professors and administrators. There is talk of improving the Berkeley image.

It does not always work out that way. Manky campus visitors—especially old grads—are openly dismissive at what they find, Hardly Surprised.

Such a visiting group recently passed to study a sign at an undergraduate library which warned: "For security purposes, the microfilm stacks are operating a theft ring in this library which is highly efficient. Be careful!"

Tory Dula, a pretty junior who belongs to Alpha Delta, a student business group interested in improving the university image, said why Berkeley is a great campus.

But then she described the surprising rate of thievery, tells how a member of her sorority was attacked inside the sorority house and describes Berkeley as a "very lonely campus."

Youth beg visitors for money as they walk through the barracks student center. Pamphlets aimed at peripherals urge them instead to seek out free facilities.

Nagler concedes that the faculty has lost face, but what he is talking about is not always what visiting alumni are talking about. Nagler believes academics buckled under to student demands for curriculum changes and to administrative insistence on the quarter system with increased faculty work load. Alumni more often feel faculty members have lost face by siding with militant students to create a campus image of pernicious behavior.

Such issues come to the heart of the university system and to any rehashing of it that may now be taking place. "There is a traditional three-way balance of power among the regents, the president and the academic senate," the Berkeley patriarchs and author, George Stewart, once said. "Do the students today constitute a fourth power? I don't think so."

But Savio and most student leaders know he disagrees. They have carried pressures until faculty and administration seem often on the defensive.

Even professors like Nagler have bristled at such pressures. "Students can change our minds overnight about what they want to study," he told me, "but we can't change ours overnight about what we can teach."

Yet Nagler agrees with students who say they are unable to give full attention to their studies in a world that they feel is falling apart. He supports their activities while deploiting their violence.

One effect of such attitudes is that the university degree is becoming almost meaningless in Nagler's opinion. Students come and go, and the diploma impresses fewer of them. Nagler believes that within a few years the business and professional worlds will also put less emphasis on credentials.

"These students don't stay so of ten for four years," he says. "They will soon be in business and society. We just try to get them to learn before they go."

Nagler himself is not so ready to abandon academics for activism. He has received a grant to pursue his study of Sanskrit and looks forward eagerly to a year at every lower school.

Asian scholars vaguely criticize Viet Center

By Sue Ralls
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SU’s Center for Vietnamese Studies program has received national criticism of the Association of Asian Studies (AAS) and the program’s director at a national conference held March 23-26 in New York.

A motion was introduced at the business meeting of the association’s executive council on Sunday which R. H. Jacobson, director of the program at SU, said was "designed to imply, but did not specifically criticize, the center." After considerable discussion, Jacobson said a modified statement was adopted stating that "professional guidelines should be formulated" to aid any university in maintaining academic integrity while accepting government funds for the advancement of developed Asian Studies.

The motion was not adopted, but those guidelines the source and full details of sponsorship of the program and of the program’s research and other activities should be open to public disclosure.

Information concerning the original resolution concerning the center was unavailable. C. Harvey Garnder, research professor of history at Harvard University said he was not present at the time the resolution was presented but thinks the resolution was a weak but indirect criticism of the center by AAS.

He said that, without the center, there wouldn’t have been the original proposal or the necessity for guidelines. "The AAS sees the center as SU as a problem in academic integrity and so the need for guidelines..."

Also attending the convention was Douglas Allen, instructor of philosophy and critic of the center. Participating in a CCAS panel concerned with Gardner and Allen were Tony D. Lam of the State University of New York at Stony Brook and Naps Vank of Harvard.

Gardner said in a speech during this panel that he challenged Jacobson’s credentials as a Vietnamese scholar and director of the center. He said he had been present at an April 1974 papers, a conference of the AAS Vietnamese affairs. According to Gardner, site person in the audience offered courses for the center but did not respond.

In other action, the AAS voted to pull its members from the contents of the "People’s Peace Treaty." drawn up by leaders of the National Student Association which proposed the United States should pull out of Vietnam immediately and cut all ties to the Thieu-Ky government.

Gardner said the treaty was a "people’s effort to promote the reconciliation of the governments of the United States and North and South Vietnam by observing the people’s opinions of the conflict which, if agreed upon, could bring pressure on the governments involved to make peace treaties.

Liquor board approves license reclassification

By David Mahan
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Mayors’ Liquor Advisory Board Wednesday approved a proposal for licenses to be sold in the Carbondale City Council for final approval.

The proposed ordinance reclassifies the city’s liquor licenses, sets up a five schedule and provides for special liquor licenses.

The Board has wanted a new ordinance because of questions under the present ordinance that restaurants applying for a licenses to sell liquor in the premises could go out of business as a restaurant, but remain in business as a tavern.

Where there are seven classifications of liquor licenses in the present ordinance, the proposed ordinance would only provide for six classifications. In the classification by the new ordinance, there is a provision for restaurants to sell alcoholic beverages by the drink with meals only. The present ordinance allows only beer and wine to be sold in restaurants. Also added to the classification for hotels and motels is a provision for the sale of liquor to patrons in the provision for liquor by the drink also to be sold.

Deletion from the proposed ordinance are classifications for the retail sale of both package liquor and liquor by the drink or the same premises and for the retail sale of beer and wine for off-premises, to be consumed on the premises.

To resolve the possibility of a restaurant with a cocktail lounge holding a license to sell liquor by the drink and going out of business, only to reopen as a tavern, the Council has decided to make sure that each license would be sold with meals and the other would permit to the cocktail lounge. Only one fee, the higher of the two, would be charged for both licenses. If the restaurant would go out of business, then, the Board would review both licenses.

A proposed fee scale that would raise fees for some classes of liquor licenses as much as 800 per cent was unanimously defended by the Board. The Board voted to return a five percent fee with fees for the new classes common

Manson lawyer body identified

VENTURA, Calif. AP A body found in a rugged wilderness area was positively identified Monday as that of Sharon Tate murder trial defense attorney Ronald Hughes who vanished mysteriously four months ago.

The Ventura County Coroner’s office said the body, found in a creek at the Jennie H. Springs area, was identified through comparison of Hughes’s fingerprints and dental data charts.

Deputy Coroner Merle Peters said findings of the autopsy were not complete, and that cause of death had not been established.

No policy violation by Allen-Chancellor

Layser said that Stashek did not follow the procedures for reporting a suspected violation.

The policy statement advises that if anyone at any time feels that a demonstration is about to violate the provisions of the Interim Policy on Demonstrations, he should communicate to the chancellor in the Campus Security Office.

The statement adds that a person may attempt to contact one of the four designated non-police persons to report a suspected violation.

Allen said that he had no comment on the matter.

Layser expressed displeasure with the manner that the charges against Allen were made pubic.
Individual correction sought

Meeting's aim to prevent delinquency

By Ed Chandolia and Larry Hall
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

"We aim to help keep kids with two strikes against them from striking out," said Peter Bemninger, director of the Illinois Department of Corrections, in speaking at the opening day of Governor's Conference on Youth for the Carbondale campus held in the University Center.

"The importance of the conference," he said, "is to discuss delinquency in Illinois as a problem which needs regional or community action."

Bemninger explained that the "institutionalized traditional corrections is needed in the state needs to be reversed because of the lack of concern for individuals."

He said that there will be a trend toward a more individual method of correction for juveniles.

The hope of the conference, the first of its kind to be held in Illinois this spring, was "Binding in the Earned in Generation." Myrt E. Alexander, chairman of the IL Center for the Study of Crime, De terrence and Rehabilitation was the general chairman.

Bemninger said there is a need for good regional juvenile detention homes throughout the state to replace inadequate county jails.

Local facilities should provide professional services, specialized treatment for youth and expert diagnosis for juvenile problems, he said.

"We must also get some revenue into the local community if they are able to sustain juvenile delinquency," Bemninger said. He indicated $1 million in federal funds recently granted to the Department of Corrections could help alleviate the financial problem.

Another movement toward more individualized juvenile correction, according to Bemninger, is the "group home" plan in which juveniles are permitted to attend school or vocational training while in a corrections institution.

Bemninger said there are nine group homes in the state.

Alexandria opened the Governor's Conference on Youth a success because of the excellent interaction between students, faculty and law enforcement officials during the conference.

Roy Gerad, director of the Robert F. Kennedy Youth Center delivered the keynote address.

Correction of juvenile delinquents must get away from the long-held feeling that "people who get into trouble all look alike," said Gerad.

Gerad explained a system used at the Kennedy Center, which deals primarily with young men convicted of federal car theft, classification offense into four categories and treats each category separately.

The first category Gerad described as "incomplete delinquents."

The offender simply has not grown up and gets into trouble by following others.

Treatment for this revolves around the maturity of the delinquents' super visor Gerad said. Gerad goes through a program of "growing up" designed to make him independent to the extent that he will not be swayed into wrongdoing by others, he said.

The second category is "possibly delinquent." These are people who study to relieve stress.

Gerad said that people usually feel inferior or he said, and must be helped by developing interpersonal relationships.

Supervision with these people are often done in a "support group." This has successfully resolved similar problems of their own.

"Unsuccessful psychopaths," the third category, require the strict, traditional, hardline approach toward correction. Gerad said these offenders are hostile, often cruel persons who think they can outsmart the world. He said he taught a program is taken because these delinquents will not trust or respect men they think they can con. Gerad said, however, that these cases can be corrected if non conformist attitudes can be con trolled and directed toward socially accepted pursuits.

The fourth category includes those going problems and others who are loyal to peer groups una tabled to "multiple case" status.

Gerad said.

"He is well adjusted toward deviant culture," he said.

Treatment of people belonging to such groups must minimize the dependency on the group. Super visors must have clear rules and adhere to them, Gerad said.

"This is not something that can be done," he said.

Gerad concluded that, although categorizing delinquents was a necessary first step, it was not the final answer. "I do think it's a promising beginning."

18 year-old vote

nears reality

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - The Ill

ois General Assembly came a step closer to ratification of the 18-year-old vote Wednesday as identical re solutions over acceptability hur les in both houses.

Democratic leaders said it was likely the Senate version would come up for a vote on the House Thursday and that it will pass with help from a scattering of Republicans.

Rep. Bernard R. Walsh, D-Chicago, sponsor of the House resolution, said the Executive Committee that unless such a measure is enacted the state have to pay $1 million to establish separate polling facilities for 18-year-olds legally allowed to vote in federal elections and persons over 21.

The Student Government Ac

For Darrell Albert

The Student Government Ac

tivities office is planning to hire employees for activities office.

A letter to William N. Mouton, dean of students, SGAC requested that students be involved in the recent hiring of SGAC employees for activities office personnel.

The letter also said that students have not been consulted about candidates during the past year.

According to Franklin "Buzz" Spencer, SGAC chairman, no students, including SGAC members were involved in the recent hiring of two activities consultants, the Volunteer Resource Officer, and the past of assistant dean of students for student activities.

Spencer said students were not consulted about the search of a coordinator of student activities.

The letter also listed three guidelines to be used in the future consultation process:

1) SGAC is involved in the interviewing process of person to be an SGAC employee.

2) SGAC is aware of the selection of candidate SGAC employee.

3) SGAC is consulted about hiring the candidate.

Mouton said he is responsible for selecting assistant deans and the assistant deans usually select the staff appointments.

Mouton said he was "very much concerned about student input," in selecting processes, but each position often has a different set of circumstances which must be worked out as best as possible for each situation.

He said the guidelines stated in the SGAC letter were "inconceivable."

Bevrit: garbage creating a rat problem

By Chuck Radelka

Dairy Queen Chef

With or without rats, Carbondale seems to be constantly trashy. This continual trashiness stems from the city's constant struggles to keep the area clean. The biggest offenders are University students.

These are the views of Tom Bevrit, technical consultant to the city's waste control program.

This lack of foresight has created a health problem which affects even the "clean neighbors." Bevrit says, for the time being at least, trash has made Carbondale a prime habitat for rats.

Bevrit, Democratic candidate for Carbondale township supervisor, and Chester C. Nebbett, pest control technician, say that as long as littering continues, Carbondale will have the rat problem.

Bevrit points to heavy littering along the Illinois Central Railroad tracks from Grand Avenue north to College Street as an example. Nebbett along the railroad right-of-way show that the rodents have moved in, Bevrit says.

In this area, a storm sewer running east and west across Carbondale Bevrit says that rats which nest there have spread along the sewer to other parts of town. He says that trash accumulation around other open sewers causes the same thing.

The trash, he says, is around the sewer line. As is washed onto the sewer and the rats naturally follow it in their food supplies.

Bevrit says the simplest solution to this problem for people not to throw trash away haphazardly. They should take the responsibility for their own garbage he says.

Oddly enough, Bevrit says University students are the largest source of the littering problem.

When warm weather arrives, probably sometime in April, he plans to arrange another pick-up drive similar to the one held last fall. But, he says, these do little to solve the problem.

After last fall's drive—fact, in a manner of minutes—trash was again being thrown along the streets and yards, he said.

He would like for the city to have more trash cans but they cost too much he says.

"We're going to have a difficult time getting aid to conduct programs," he said. "The city will not give money for such programs as the control unless the trash problem is adequately controlled."

That the trash problem is not adequately controlled in not the fault of the city government, he said. "It's doing its best," he said. "We have to have the cooperation of the city—the people."

"It's going to cost us a fortune to reduce the rat population to an insignificant level if we don't get help from the people."

Bevrit said his main concern is educating people. Nebbett, himself, given lectures on how to maintain garbage and eliminate rats.

"It would do us no good to go out and use rat chemicals," he said. "The town would just keep going broke. We don't have chemicals to spray every house."

The purpose of educating the people is to tell them what we're happen if the rats are allowed to exist, he said.

They have sympathy for some one's baby who has been bitten, by a rat. But they don't do anything until they're personally concerned. Nebbett said.

There is the potential for too many babies to be bitten to be happy with just a clean house. Everybody has to do their part.

Bevrit said he has proposed, since University students are the primary interest, that garbage education be a part of freshman orientation.

But, Bevrit said, the only was the problem can be truly solved is if the people to take it upon themselves to keep the litter garbage free.

"I just don't understand how people can be so messy." he said. "I never have seen the use of just throwing something down on the place."

Rat haven

Bevrit says rats have followed the trash that has accumulated and been washed into the drainage sewer that runs under the Illinois Central Railroad tracks and east and west across Carbondale. Because of instances such as this, he says, rats are able to infect even the clean areas of town. (Photo by John Lopresti)

Senate battle seen over draft question

By L. Edgar Price, Military Affairs Editor
Canby News Service

WASHINGTON—As Congress heads toward its annual Easter recess, the stage is being set for a highly charged battle over one of the most controversial issues of the year—whether to extend for two more years the President's authority to draft young men into military service.

President Nixon has asked for an extension of the Selective Service to June 30, 1972. By that time he hopes to end the wounding of the war in Vietnam, and the world situation generally will permit zero draft calls and an all-volunteer armed force.

To advance the prospects for a vote in both houses, he has recommended that the extension in the Senate be held in two phases. The President is also seeking from Congress a change in the law that gives him the authority to extend draft deferments.

By Carta K. Turner, national director of Selective Service, and his top aides, if a vote is taken, both houses will be sure to lose their powers to extend draft deferments.

But in the upper chamber, where a dozen Democratic senators are already maneuvering for their party's 1972 presidential nomination, the initiative is less certain.

The anti-draft movement is far better organized in the Senate and is by no means limited to Democrats or to liberals.

For example, on the right, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is leading opposition to the draft. On the left, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., believes an all-volunteer army would be better for America, a force of blacks and underprivileged whites and to favor continuing the draft.

The Senate almost always treats for draft the House in both major legislation and the draft issue. Earlier this year, the Senate broke the tie by the action of the liberal minority, led by Sen. David Rice, D-Wyo., who sponsored the bill to extend draft deferments.

"There's bound to be many long hours of debate on the Senate floor, and the draft measure is likely to come up," one official said, "All kinds of questions will be asked about it, I suppose, but I hope there's no filibustering. It's a fast-moving issue."

Black firms turn to King play fund

Six Chicago-area, black-owned business firms have joined hands to support SIU $5,000 international playwriting competition for a new play about the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The six responded to an invitation to participate from Roland W. Burris, Chicago bank official and member of the SIU Foundation estate planning committee.

Tennis team prepares for Illini

The SIU tennis team is poised for the beginning of its 1971 season which gets under way against the University of Illinois at 2 p.m. Saturday on the SIU tennis courts. During a spring trip through the South, Southern posted a 2-4 record.

The Salukis' victories came against Florida 3-0, and Alabama, 6-3, while the losses were at the hands of Miami (Ohio), Princeton and Florida State.

The 7-2 loss to Miami, which finished second in last year's NCAA championships, featured SIU's No. 1 doubles team of Jorge Ramirez and Graham Snook upending Luis Garcia and Rare Bled 7-4, 6-4, and 6-4. It was the first losing doubles match Garcia had played since 1969. Garcia and his partner also won the NCAA doubles crown last year.

That match alone, said coach Dick Lefever, should indicate how strong we should be in that area.

The Saluki coach expressed surprise with his squad's victory over Florida saying, "The problem in playing Florida was that it was our first day outside as a team and it was unusual that we beat them."

Throughout the trip, Lefever changed his No. 1 singles player but the Saluki coach said he has settled on Ramirez with Snook at the second position and Chris Greenhale in the third slot. Ray Brewer, Mike Clayton and Clay Toder will make up the fourth through sixth respectively.

According to Lefever, the No. 1 doubles slot is a battle between the teams of Snook and Ramirez against Greenhale and Brewer.

It is possible that other boys can upset them and move up for all they're worth.

Looking at the entire season, Lefever said, "Our entire purpose was to get the team in the best possible shape for the season and I think it has served its purpose.

Richard 'Dick' Jones brought his 1971 Salukis to Carbondale for their first home game Wednesday. The results were fruitful. Southern stopped Montmouth College 9-4 and 17-4 in an afternoon doubleheader.

At the top of the page, Jim Dwyer slides into second base where the ball is waiting for him. Saluki second baseman Darrel Kasper comes down to make the tag on a Montmouth runner at first and Jones offers some advice above.

The two wins stretched Southern's record to 6-3.

Big crowds expected
SIU gymnasts set for NCAA's

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer
ANN ARBOR, Mich. — "It’s going to be a very rewarding experience," coach Paul Mabry said.

The crowds are gone of Newt. Loom. University of Michigan gymnastics fans who expected to see the defending champion of the meet when the host NCAA team took the arena Thursday through Saturday. He doesn’t see an easy path for a repeat performance.

So he’s going to be a very difficult meet to win," said Loom. "There are at least six very strong teams here in us. Iowa State. Southern Illinois, California, New Mexico and Air Force. We’re not going to have an easy time of it."

Reports from Michigan’s ticket office indicate this meet as the biggest money game in the history of the NCAA gymnastics meet. We have the potential of selling 13,000 tickets for the Saturday sessions," said a ticket office spokesman.

For all the talk and hoopla, those who are most directly concerned — the gymnasts — are almost casual about their warmups with few problems Wednesday and are looking towards the first competition session which starts at 12:30 p.m. Thurses.

The equipment is really great," said Charles Boggoapp, SIU rings specialist. "Everything is in new and works just right.

Loek. said all his 1970 champions are healthy and SIU coach Bill Meade probably wishes he could say the same. A number of SIU gymnasts are still working with great pain.

Their compulsions are looking real good. said Meade as his gymnasts wound up around him in bright, new red and white tee shirts.

Salukis sweep doubleheader from error-prone Monmouth

By Ken Stewart
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The baseball season returned to SIU on a happy note as the Salukis swept a doubleheader from Monmouth College Wednesday.

With a tied 6-4 game in the opener, pinch hitting Ken Kral brought in Jim Dwyer and Dan Radison with a home run over the center field fence with two outs.

This gave the Salukis a 9-6 lead going into the top half of the seventh inning. Relief pitcher Steve Randall held the visitors hitless in the final inning of a game delayed twice because of wind-blown dust in the playing area.

Monmouth had jumped to a 2-0 lead in the top half of the first with Bob Eversman and Bruce Stotlar scoring the visitors.

Dwyer scored SIU's only first inning run with a base hit by outfielder Jack Liggett.

Starting pitcher James Bokelmann held Monmouth scoreless the next two innings while Southern racked up three more runs in the second when Dwyer hit a triple in the eight field corner bringing in base runners Bob Sedlik and Mike Eden plus breaking.

Randall relieved Bokelmann as SIU's pitcher in fifth and Stotlar tied the game for Monmouth with a homerun, the final scoring for the visitors.

Southern quickly put the second game out of reach by racking up six runs in the first inning.

The Salukis rallied to a 17-4 victory despite only eight hits with the help of eight Monmouth errors— including four in the first inning—and 11 walks.

Monmouth went through an entire pitching crew with the exception of first game hurler Rich Holle, but the Salukis scored in every inning including four runs in the final two.

Dan Horn took over SIU's pitching duties from Scott Wahlenmeier in the sixth as the visitors remained hitless the final four innings.

The lone hit in the second game came when outfielder Ron Downs sent a ball over the center field fence.

"The pitchers we lost didn't have much experience," said SIU baseball coach Richard "Toby" Jones, "but they did pretty good on their first outing."

Jones praised Dwyer, an outfielder from Chicago for his ability to hit the ball hard.

"His extra bases have been numerous all season," the coach commented.

"Monmouth made numerous mistakes. Jones said, but you got to remember that in a school like theirs there are no athletic scholarships. Their head coach (Jim Wasmun) is also their basketball coach."

Monmouth entered the doubleheader with a 4-1 record in small college circles.

The Salukis will take an 8-3 record to Memphis State for a single game Friday and a doubleheader the following day.

A doubleheader against MacMurray beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday will kick off a two-weekend home stand.

Tulsa, Mississippi, Wisconsin State and Morehead State will face the Salukis on the SIU diamond before the final home games of the month against Illinois in a doubleheader April 17.

White Sox finish Tiger crew, 17-1

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) - The Chicago White Sox blistered five Detroit pitchers for 14 hits and exploded a nine-run seventh while Tommy John pitched eight shutout innings toward a 17-1 victory over the Tigers Wednesday. Arg Chicago outfielder Rick Richards drove in four runs with two home runs.

Tom Kek, Sox catcher who had a better as well, contributed a double and a triple in the biggest Sox attack of the spring.

Second Thoughts

If Greg signs... You can't knock a young man for wanting to make a little money. Everybody wants more. The more you have, the more you get. It creates two classes: the "haves" and the "have-nots." Greg Stitcarr has the opportunity to become a "have." Southern's leading scorer with 55 points this season, he has been drafted by the NBA Portland Trailblazers and the Miami Floridians.

Not a bad risk fourth by Miami and tenth by Portland. I think Nevertheless could take advantage of the mushrooming dollar war engulfling the two leagues.

For example, the ABA Kentucky Colonels recently offered Jackson ville's Artis Gilmore a $2 million contract. When Southern's Walt Frazier basketball's premier guard went to New York in 1967, it cost the NBA $700,000. And he was a first round pick. The talent war is a bitter one. If Stitcarr becomes one of the "haves" and signs with Portland or Miami, Paul Lambert will need to take a closer look at next year's team, especially the other big offensive loss.

He would lose a one-two scoring punch of Stitcarr and L. C. Bradley graduate in August. He was not drafted by either league.

Their total, 475 by Brashfield, represents nearly half of the 1,000 points Southern scored in 23 games.

It's questionable whether Lambert will have the personnel to operate a fast-break offense next year...even with Stitcarr.

Returning from the top six, minus Stitcarr, will be All-Midwestern Conference Stan Powlies, Marvin Brooks, Nate Hawthorne and John "Mouse" Garrett. Major addition will be Billy Perkins who will push Powlies and Brooks out of the post spot. Perkins protrudes about 6 inches into the earth's atmosphere and weighs 250 pounds.

He's the really big, mobile man Southern's program has never had, not even during the 1967 National Invitational Tournament championship year.

Perkins handles the ball well, has a good outside shot from about 15 feet and moves to the basket like a rampaging elephant. He's virtually unstoppable. He'll be fun to watch.

Would fast-break go?

But whether Lambert can use a fast-break offense with 6-10 Perkins, 6-9 Brooks and, 6-9 Powlies is unlikely. Big men must rest occasionally and there won't be much depth on the bench. The answer could be a more conservative, paced offense.

Another's absence could be a break for Hawthorne who would be an early candidate to team with "Mouse " Garrett at the post spots.

Hawthorne has aspirations of playing pro ball at 6-4, won't play forward. His future is up to him.

A lineup without Stitcarr will also have a depth problem when Lilburn or guard, barring entrance of a junior college transfer.

Sophomore John Marker will return but seems destined for a reserve role. He doesn't have the ball handling skills of Stitcarr or Garrett. The other reserve, Martyt Bradford, completed his eligibility.

Some help could come from standout freshman Eddie James, his team's leading scorer.

So next year Lambert could easily field himself with a much slower of frame—by necessity—and a depth problem at guard.

All because a young man has the chance to make some money.
